We never know for what God is preparing us in His schools — for what work on earth, for what work in the hereafter. Our business is to do our work well in the present place, whatever that be.

Guest Speakers Feature Of Ninth Anniversary Services United Church

Speakers From Montreal and Ottawa Delight Large Audience At Sunday And Monday Night Services

The ninth anniversary of the Huntingdon United Church was celebrated on Sunday and Monday. Sunday morning and evening the Rev. C. H. Dickinson, Erskine-American, Montreal was the special preacher.

Mr. Dickinson's morning address was spirit lifting and his utterances were invigorating. "There is no space between you and the one you love," "Christ is far above us, but ever with us." Such was the theme and Mr. Dickinson spoke in a very clear and distinctive manner. Contrasts were pictured sensing the reasoning and superiority of moral levels in living an upward life. How to choose between the good, better and best of life. Following such reasoning one will be better able to appreciate what culture is and how development aids in determining the better course to follow and how to cherish the beauties of life.

In place of combatting obstacles in religion, we often succumb to our weakness by giving in. How pagan we are in place of being Christian and then not touch the unclean things in life. Badness, for excitement is easy to fall into. Poor literature thereby often corrupts our tastes. Folks too often choose the "worldly" way in place of the "Christian Way." Some people feel that the "Christian Ways" are for the dull people, but not so and our missionaries have proved that to us time and again. It is a pity that more Christians do not radiate the endless life.

Tastes may be developed and raised to a higher level. Train your mind and eyes open to discern between the higher and ordinary levels. If you are obedient to the voice within, you will be able to make the choice between that which is good, and that which is better. The men who have guided the destinies of the world have spoken and lived out of love for their fellowmen. We should grow to the understanding of God. Put off bad and take on goodness and your life will be better and more advanced, said Mr Dickinson.

"The Church and the World" was the subject on which Rev. C. H. Dickinson spoke at the evening service. In his opening remarks he referred to the church as it is to be found in Germany, in Russia and in America. "The Church in America is found in a declining social political order," said Mr. Dickinson.

The task of the people to-day is to liberate the church from corruption. Only as we give ourselves for the redemption of the world shall we progress and live in Christ. The early Christian church was spiritually supreme. Built upon the faith and spiritual declaration of such men as Peter. Their ministry was performed in the spirit of Christian fellowship. There was indeed an independent spiritual fellowship in the early church, and that fellowship was most intimate. The world was to be brought into redemption and not a pagan place.

Spiritual authority of the church started to decline in the fourth century when the Christian Church was officially declared the Church by Constantine. The autonomy of the church was not given away but its integrity was placed in a state of decline.

The modern church has surrendered and sold its soul to the world spiritual. Supremacy has been sacrificed. Let us now face that fact, for we as a Christian people must not compromise, but assert the authority of Him whom we adore. Serve fellowship in redeeming the life of the world. Preach to the world and assist the poor and needy. Such is the work for the followers of Christ. The soul of the Church must never try to convert the world with its own method but with the spiritual realm as of above. We must practice the presence of God. Cleanse, unspot and enter into unqualified communion with Christ and discern the unseen.

The Church need not be subservient to any nation but remain true to Christ. The Kingdom will come to your life and mine, according to the purity of your life and mine.

Sholto Rogers Killed Daytona Beach Crash

SHOLTO D. Rogers, a winter visitor at Rockburn, was fatally injured shortly before 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, April 29th, when the automobile in which he was riding was struck broadside by a truck at the entrance to De-Leon Springs, Daytona Beach. Mr. Rogers, who lived at 316 North Grandview Street, died in the Allen ambulance on the way to the hospital, presumably from concussion of the brain. He was born in Franklin Centre, where his father, the late Col. R. Rogers, who for a number of years was Customs Collector at that place, resided. He was a resident of Milwaukee, and for a number of years has spent his winters at Daytona Beach.

Two years ago he made one of his occasional visits to his old home town, Franklin Centre, where he was the guest of Mrs. W. A. Sharpe, and called on many old acquaintances who will learn with sincere regret of his tragic death. Mr. Rogers was a bachelor, and is survived by one brother, several nieces and nephews.

Youth Dies Result From Car Accident

Young Son Former Resident Of Boyd's Settlement Died Wednesday

Operation Failed

An accident which proved fatal to Melvin Dowe, eight-year-old son of Mrs. Allan Dowe (nee Lizzie McCracken of Boyd's Settlement) occurred in Point St. Charles, Montreal, on Monday. Young Dowe was crossing the street near his home when he was struck by a car, driven by Mr. Weaver of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and suffered a broken ankle and a fractured skull. He was rushed first to the Western Hospital and removed later to the General Hospital where he underwent an operation on Saturday. The operation proved unsuccessful and the boy passed away Wednesday morning.

He leaves to mourn his loss his parents, sister Myrtle and brother Cecil. His mother was the daughter of the late George McCracken and Mrs. McCracken, Boyd's Settlement.

The funeral service was held in the Collin's Undertaking Rooms, Saturday, May 2nd, and was conducted by their minister, Rev. Mr. Simions.

The large attendance present and the many floral tributes testified to the esteem in which he was held.

There are many to sympathize with the sorely afflicted parents and widely scattered kinfolks, in the great sorrow that has come to them.

Interment took place on Saturday, May 2nd, in the Mount Royal Cemetery.

Those who attended the funeral from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Crook and son George, Mrs. Levi Robson of Valleyfield, Mrs. George McCracken, Boyd's Settlement, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Maither, Miss Muriel Graham, Lyell Graham of Rockburn, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Herdman and daughter Eileen, and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Whaley and daughter Greta of the Gore.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered in the United Church on Sunday afternoon to a good showing of communicants, preparatory service was conducted on Friday evening by the pastor, Rev. T. F. Duncan at which seven new members joined.

The Gore W. M. S. was entertained at the home of Mrs. E. Mason on Thursday, April 30th, with nine members and 13 visitors present. The afternoon was spent in quilting and other sewing. The meeting was opened by singing and closed with Bible reading and prayer by the President, Mrs. Sam Herdman. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. At the close of the meeting lunch was served by the hostess.

Mrs. Lottie Graham is spending a few weeks with her son Walter, of Montreal.

Maternal Love

(To my Mother — the star of stars!)

No vandal years shall rob thee of thy grace,
Marauding Age enhances charm like thine;
Forth from thy faded eyes fair virtues shine,
Glossing Time's imprint on thy furrowed face.
Embossed with gracious deeds, the nacreous lace
Of thy life's brocade glows in rich design
Of beauty, eloquent with love benign
Which motivated all thy cosmic race.

As purged in crucible of smiles and tears
Within thy soul, oft bent beneath the rod.
Affliction, alchemized, as gold appears
In sterling character whose worth we laud.
Thine epitaph, inviolate through the years—
"Crown of Creation! Masterpiece of God!"

Big Increase Ormstown Show Exhibits Assured This Year

According to information secured from Manager-Secretary McGerrigle, the Ormstown Show this year promises to surpass all previous events in quantity and quality of exhibits.

On account of the prospect of a very large horse entry at the coming show, the directors are seriously considering building new stabling accomodations. A proposed plan was laid before the directors on Saturday but due to the unavoidable absence of two of the directors the matter was left over to this Saturday when the plan will be more fully discussed.

Ormstown High School has taken space in the Industrial Building for an exhibit of Handicraft work, history and geography projects. The work of six different classes will be shown for which D. E. Black, M.P., has kindly consented to offer special prizes amounting to fifteen dollars.

The Director of the Sainte-Martine Agricultural College, P. N. April, has also reserved space in the same building for exhibition of work from students at the college. These exhibits will include furniture, farm implements, and cast iron tools.

In a recent issue of the Ottawa Farm Journal much favorable publicity was given the Ormstown Show, the newspaper writer stating that the interest of their readers this year towards the annual spring show is greater than any other year. This same fact is well borne out in the large number of prize lists requested from the manager's office by prospective exhibitors. The Oshawa Chamber of Commerce has also manifested considerable interest in the forthcoming show.

Customs Changes Are Effected In District

DURING the past week a number of Customs changes have been effected in this district, with officers being replaced, and offices closed. The closing of Frontier and St. Agnes outports will mean a considerable saving but somewhat of an inconvenience.

The Frontier customs office will definitely close June first when travelers will have to go either to Covey Hill or Hemmingford. The officer in charge, W. M. Horne, had been superannuated three years ago, but retained in office until facilities had been completed for handling the business at other outports. Mr. Horne was regarded by Customs Collector C. M. Oney as the outstanding officer in the district Customs service.

J. A. Parent, of Huntingdon, is temporarily replacing D. J. Beattie, at Hemmingford, until the return of C. I. Jackson.

The office at St. Agnes was closed out on May first, and transferred to Dundee. J. W. McGill is in charge at Dundee, with Adrian O'Reilly as assistant.

Brotherhood Banquet

The Canadian National 5,339 ton freighter, Canadian Planter, bound for Boston with a cargo of hides and coffee was sunk on Sunday when it was struck by the Auckland whose prow smashed into its side in Nantucket Sound.

Among the men on board was Ronnie S. Meldrum, second mate, who, his friends in Ormstown, will be pleased to know was rescued along with 38 other members of the crew by the Coastguard cutter Mojave.

The Brotherhood of St. Paul's United Church recently held a Father's and Son's Banquet in McDougall Hall at which 100 sat down to the good things provided. Mr. D. J. McEwen, President of the Brotherhood, presided in his affable manner, several toasts were proposed, that to the sons being responded to by Mr. Lyman Roberts, after which Mr. McEwen introduced the special speaker of the evening, Prof. J. A. Coote of McGill University, who gave a very interesting address in which he advised the young men present to have an aim in life, and to strive to make this aim come true.

May first brought many changes of residences in Ormstown, Mr. C. H. Pick and family of Montreal, moved into the house formerly occupied by Mrs. Fred Boyd, Mr. Hugh McAdam's family are occupying the Patenaude house, while the house he vacated on the Ormsby Grange estate was sold to Mr. Hardestay of Montreal, who will move in shortly. Mr. T. S. Osmond and family are settling in the Marshall house, lately occupied by Mr. J. R. McOuat. Mrs. Wm. McDougall vacated the Mills house which will be taken by Mr. and Mrs. Archie McCormick, the H. L. Bradley family moved into the J. H. Tomson house.

Mrs. Jas. A. Tait and daughter Shirley of Montreal, were guests over the week-end at the McLaren home.

Week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Lang were Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Gilby and daughter May, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pearson and daughter Ann of Lennoxville, Que.

Messrs. Clifford Barrington, Albert Parent, and Gaston Cartier, left last week for Timmins, Ont., where they have secured positions.

Mrs. I. B. McQueston, who has spent the last few weeks in Ormstown, owing to illness and death of her brother, has returned to her home in Montreal.

Miss O. McQueston was a recent guest at the home of her uncle, Mr. Geo. English.

Following a moment of silence in memory of our late King, the Ode was sung, and the Club Woman's Creed was repeated. Miss Barbara Morris welcomed the delegates while Mrs. C. R. Grant of Dundee replied to this address of welcome.

The minutes of the last Convention, and of the last sub-executive meeting were read and approved. The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $130.57. It was decided to hold a picnic on Wednesday, Aug. 12th at Dundee. Mrs. Jos. Platt kindly invited the Institutes to gather on that day at her home. If it should rain the picnic will be held in the Community Hall.

Mrs. F. D. Stevenson, of Franklin, then gave a report on the contest in beautifying school grounds in the two Counties. Of twenty-five rural schools which were approached, ten teachers have already signified their desire to compete.

Mrs. Bruce then gave a splendid address. This was followed by Mrs. Jas. McKell, the first secretary of Howick Branch, reading the minutes of the first and second meetings. Twenty-five years ago the first Institute was formed in Quebec. Howick was the second one formed. Five charter members were present at this Convention, namely: Mrs. Robert Younie, Mrs. J. Constables Seize Smugglers' Car At Hemmingford Monday

District Police Increasing Viligance As Seasonal Activities of Alcohol Smugglers Begin

Cooperation Needed

Six School Teachers Have Been Engaged For Next Year Term

On Monday evening last while working with Constables Spalding and Gerard, of this section, Constable Gubard, of Lacolle, made a seizure of a 1936 Ford V-8 coach. The seizure took place on the Fort road near the butter factory. The alcohol car travelling at a great speed did not stop when flagged, ran over a set of spikes, turning it completely over. The driver escaped uninjured.

Since trade has become rather brisk from one country to the other in horses as well as in cattle the border police have more to occupy their time than contraband alcohol. Of late a large number of horses and cattle have been exported but there are reports that considerable smuggling and some rustling have been done. While the smuggling of horses and cattle to the other side does not directly concern district police it often happens that they are called upon by troopers to co-operate in tracing tips.

The two forces, Quebec Provincial Liquor Police and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, are working in closer co-operation to nab the bootleggers whose activities of late have been considerably checked by the ever-watchful border patrols. With the advent of the new Customs regulations allowing Canadians to bring over $100 worth of goods every four months petty smuggling may be abolished but the danger lurks of bootleggers being employed in this racket also.

Following teachers have been engaged for term 1936-37: Mrs. Aitchison, B.A., principal; Miss Erwin, B.A., Intermediate; Miss Keddy, Primary; Miss Myer, Marlin's school; Miss Holbrooke, Shield's school; Miss Semple, Frontier school.

Among those who attended the Jackson-Scott nuptials at St. Thomas Church, Montreal, Wednesday noon, April 29th, were the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Jackson, Miss Jessie Jackson, Mr. Ted Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Johnson, Miss Ruth Johnson and Mr. Kenneth Johnson and Mr. Kenneth Lamberton, of Mooer's, N. Y.

Recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dryden were, Mrs. Sherren and Mrs. Hazel Spearman, Miss Collings, of Plattsburg, N. Y., Mr. Frank Benson and Mrs. Flora Benson, Dewittville, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Blair of Franklin.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Perry of Montreal, spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Sophia Brown. Mrs. Perry will spend the week with her mother.

Although Clean-Up Week Over Idea Should Be Kept

Although the Clean-up Campaign for Huntingdon officially closed last Thursday it is hoped that the idea will not have been wasted. Too many people after making a real effort to tidy up their properties during the official clean-up week, then allow rubbish and garbage to collect until the next year. There is nothing that gives a visitor a more unfavourable impression than dirty streets, and properties cluttered up with all sorts of rubbish. The Town Council has started a very worthy project in their attempt to beautify the town and townspeople can very materially assist them if they will look after their own grounds and keep them looking neat and trim. Lately refuse and garbage has been thrown on several lots around the town which greatly detracts from the appearance of these spots. This practice is prohibited by law and if it doesn't cease the law will be enforced.

Successful Junior Amateur Contest Howick Church Hall

A junior amateur contest was held in Howick United Church Hall Wednesday night last by the Aubrey-Riverfield members and it proved to be a most enjoyable night's entertainment. There were six competitors in the under eight class and fourteen from eight to fifteen. The prize winners were chosen by ballot with the following results:

Under eight years—1, Bernice Kerr, Highland Fling; 2, Raeburn Orr, Step Dancing.

Between eight and fifteen—1, Violet Lamdon, vocal solo; 2, Oakley McRae, violin solo.

While the ballots were being counted, Rev. Mr. Moore, who presided, called on Mr. Kenneth McRae and Miss Lydia McRae for violin and piano selections, Joyce and Sylvia McKell, piano duet, Miss Ruby Gilmore, piano solo, Mr. Wm. Rorison, humorous reading. The proceeds amounted to nearly thirty dollars, this included a food sale held at the close of the concert.

Dr. and Mrs. Whillans of Montreal, have been recent guests at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Watson and other friends here.

Mr. John Fraser of Dundee, Que., and Mr. Alex. Younie were guests last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Younie.

A number of people from this vicinity motored to Montreal on Friday evening to hear the famous Dr. Kagawa of Japan speak of his work there.

Knox Church Auxiliary met at the home of Miss Mary Glen on Tuesday, April 28 at the usual hour. Mrs. Anderson presided, there were five visitors present besides the members. The opening hymn was 374 followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll call was responded to with the text-word, "Hope." Mrs. Jas. Miller read the Bible lesson and Mrs. Anderson led in prayer. The study topic was "Across the Pacific to Japan." Mrs. Carmichael read the chapter on Japan as given in the Seven Seas of Service. Hymn 494 was sung and Mrs. Cullen gave the benediction.

John Wilson Graham, of 2287 Harvard avenue, Notre Dame de Grace, died at his residence Saturday after a long illness. He was connected with the bakery firm of Graham Brothers until the firm went out of business 12 years ago. He is survived by one sister, Miss Margaret Graham, of Montreal. Interment took place at Howick on Tuesday.

Mrs. Wm. Brown has been on the sick list for the past week but latest reports are that she is greatly improved.

Mrs. Robt. Thompson has returned home from Montreal accompanied by her daughter Miss Hazel Thompson, where she has been receiving medical treatment.

The Week at Ottawa

Duty On Cars, Farm Machinery, Gasoline Textiles, Lowered In New Budget Brought Down Friday

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Robbing the Government of one important excuse for not dealing drastically with the railway problem, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, near the conclusion of his Budget speech in the House Tuesday, proffered his wholehearted support to the administration in any far-reaching scheme it might devise to check the devastating drain upon the Treasury by the publicly owned road. No amendment was moved by the Conservative leader.

Highlights of the budget presented last Friday by Hon. Charles A. Dunning were as follows:

The corporation income tax was increased from 13½ to 15 per cent. Where "consolidated returns" are made the increase was from 15 to 17 per cent. A stimulus to mining development was provided by exempting for the first three years of production, all metal mines which come into production between now and 1940, from the corporation income tax. Reduction in the penalties on late payments of income tax. The rate of the sales tax was increased from six per cent to eight per cent. The excise tax on automobiles, now five and ten per cent, was reduced and simplified. In future it will be five per cent on all value exceeding $650. Tires and tubes when imported as equipment on cars can be imported free if the manufacturers comply with British content regulations. The excise tax on cigarette tubes has been cut from three cents to two cents per hundred.

Of especial interest to farmers is the effective cut in the duty on gasoline from 2½ cents per gallon to one cent, and a reduction in the duty on farm implements to 7½ per cent. Excise duty on Canadian brandy is reduced from $4 to $3 a gallon.

Canadians returning from abroad may now import free of customs duties goods to a value of $100 provided these are for their personal use. The tourist must have been away at least 48 hours; and the privilege is limited to once every four months.

The reductions in the duties on goods from Britain and other British preference countries, from the United States and about 25 other countries enjoying "treaty" rates, and on the general tariff also, are numerous and quite important in their sum effect. Duties are reduced on 104 items of the tariff schedules, and increased on 12, but the increases are of minor importance, while some of the cuts are quite substantial.

Textile duties, especially from Britain, but also from the United States, are substantially cut. The specific (so much per pound) duties are completely removed on all yarns or fabrics wholly made of cotton, and also from all yarns and fabrics made from artificial silk, when these are imported from Britain or Empire countries. There are substantial cuts also in cotton clothing and in artificial silk clothing, not only from Britain but also from the United States. Since these specific duties bear most heavily on the cheaper line of goods, the benefit of these reductions should be felt by the consumer in substantial reductions in clothing prices, especially the cheaper lines.

Free listing of all iron and steel machinery of a class or kind not made in Canada is also included in the reductions from Britain; as is chemical stoneware and earthenware, fire engines, forgings for surgical instruments, powdered kelp, tea waste, sesame seed oil. There are British Empire reductions of a substantial nature on iron or steel machinery of a class or kind made in Canada, manufactured items of iron or steel.

Reductions in British and United States tariffs are given on heat-resistant glassware, nickel-plated or electro-plated ware, certain types of glassware, polished seamless steel tubing, veneer-making machinery, oil extractors, cotton lace and embroideries, cotton clothing, hops, porcelain and on forms.

Reductions in all tariffs are made in materials used in the production of periodicals, safety equipment for use in mines, printing machinery and equipment, highway scrapers, precision tools, draughtsmen's and surveyor's tools and instruments; various requirements of public hospitals; some soya bean products, chilled steel and forged steel rolls, feeds for fur-bearing animals, photographic supplies, educational silent or sound films; all articles imported for use of the blind.

The old automobile duties of 17½, 22½ and 30 per cent, depending on value, as applied to the intermediate schedules, have been simplified to 17½ per cent right through. No changes were made in the rates on personal incomes.

The financial picture presented by Hon. Charles Dunning was not particularly bright, except in respect to the slow improvement which was noted. The deficit recorded for the fiscal year recently ended was $162,191,000. Of this over $22,000,000 arose out of the government's experiment,

Two Youths Face Charges As Result Dewittville Accident

On Tuesday night, April 28th, during Mr. and Mrs. Mac Ruddock's absence, Mr. Arnold Milne left his car in Mr. Ruddock's yard. A little later George Laberge, Linus and Willie Tessier and Victor Hainault decided they would go for a ride in Arnold's car. The necessary gas was purchased at Mr. Holiday's store and our brave lads started out on what has turned out to be quite an experience for them.

Report states they were driving without lights and about half way to Huntingdon they crashed into another car driven by Mr. Laurence McClintock of Ormstown, when Miss Florence McDonald, Boyd Settlement school teacher, was injured. Our boys immediately abandoned the car and took to their heels across fields and continued to Dewittville, where they concealed themselves in the basement of Mr. Ruddock's house.

Mr. Frank Tessier and Mr. Frank Benson brought the car back to Tessier's garage. When Mr. and Mrs. Ruddock arrived home the boys were still hidden in the basement, but quickly made a rush for home. On Friday the police arrested George Laberge and Linus Tessier and took them to Valleyfield jail, where they remained until Saturday, when they were released on bail. Their trial comes off on Thursday in Valleyfield. Both cars were badly damaged in the crash.

The April meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held in the Church on Thursday afternoon, April 30th. Owing to other attractions there was an unusually small number of members present, so no business was done. The Scripture lesson was taken by the President and the minutes were read, also several letters of thanks from sick members who had received boxes of fruit.

Mrs. Kenneth Pearce, on Thursday afternoon entertained a number of her friends to a delightful "bridge and tea." Bridge was played at two tables, after which a very delicious tea was served. The prizes were awarded to Miss Vera Ferns and Mrs. George Cassidy.

"The Beemers of Layton Village," was not presented by the Dewittville Dramatic Club, as stated in last week's Gleaner, but by members of the W. C. T. U. and friends.

Appreciation of Mothers

WHEN Mother's Day was first established a number of years ago, many people thought it would be just a temporary kind of observance, an expression of feeling that would soon be succeeded by something else, as happens so often in our rapidly changing life. But it has proved not so. The custom has become apparently a permanent one, and each year is observed in countless churches, and noted in innumerable homes. Local significance is added to the observance by the flower campaign conducted by the Boy Scouts.

Power is given to the feeling by the general recognition on the part of the people, that they have never appreciated their mothers as they should have. Children rarely realize what their mothers have done for them, or the extent of the sacrifices they have made. They accept the sacrifices, the labours, and the affection as a matter of course, something to be expected and not wonderful in any way. In many young minds the feeling towards mother is one of resentment. She is regarded as strict, too prudent, not sympathetic with young people, constantly holding them from the things that they want to do.

As years go on, however, people see how utterly selfish and wrong that point of view is. They realize that the love and devotion which their mothers gave them was something marvelous and beyond the power of words to express. As the years go on they desire to express this sentiment in some tangible way and so this custom has come about of observing the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day. May it long continue, and may it inspire all children, young and old, to testify to an affection so deep that every mother will feel rewarded for all the devotion she has lavished upon her offspring. If possible give Mother a gift, or flowers, but the greatest gift you can give any mother, remember, is your love.

Catering to Tourists

ADVERTISEMENTS appearing in many of the current issues of American as well as Canadian magazines bring to our attention the fact that the vacation season is about to begin once again and the tourist will be in our midst. Many of these tourists are in search of relaxation; but at the same time their reception should be such that they will look upon the Dominion as a home away from home and sing its praises to their neighbours and friends.

It is a proven fact that the tourist business is the greatest single industry in Canada during the summer season. Millions of dollars are left in the country by travellers from the United States. This trade should be fostered to the greatest possible extent by residents of the Dominion and tourists should be extended every possible courtesy and service and made to feel they are among friends.

While it may not be possible to place luxuries at their disposal, their comfort should be the first consideration. More than any other factor the tourist gains his impressions of a country from those with whom he comes in contact. What his feeling toward the Dominion and its residents may be, depends in no small measure upon the treatment he receives. Operators of booths and camps should be careful that tourists are not overcharged. The dealings with all visitors will tend to leave a lasting impression and do much to further the interests of the friendly relations between the two countries.

The Quebec Budget

THE Province of Quebec has participated in full measure in all the activities in which its citizens engage and in which advances have been noted throughout Canada. That statement was the general optimistic tone adopted in the budget speech speech presented in the Quebec Legislature by the Provincial Treasurer, Hon. Ralph Stockwell, on Thursday, who cited figures and facts to stress his contention that as the Dominion moves forward toward betterment, even though slowly, this province moves forward at at least an equal pace.

One of the features of the Budget speech was the statement that Quebec had the lowest per capita debt of any province in Canada. The member for Westmount challenged that statement but Mr. Stockwell explained that prior to 1935 Prince Edward Island claimed that honor but due to considerable borrowing of late, Quebec had taken the lead in this respect. As to the strictly financial position of the province itself, the Provincial Treasurer showed, with the aid of his estimates for the year to end June 30, 1937, that while the province had increased its debt some 20 millions last year, it had also adopted a policy of not leaving the obligations of this generation to those to come. The funded debt of the province is some 134 millions, which will mean for next fiscal year interest charges of $6,812,499, and—this is notable—there will also be put away $4,190,142 for sinking fund purposes, and this on a budget of $37,073,488.

The public accounts for last fiscal year, which ended June 30, 1935, show a sinking fund of $20,445,-16. On a system of averages and according to budget estimates, the sinking fund at the end of the next fiscal year should approximate twenty-eight million dollars. A better appreciation of the situation can be grasped when it is realized that a one per cent sinking fund will retire a 40-year loan. The provincial loans are not of 40 years, for the most part, but, on the basis of $4,190,142 out of a revenue of $37,073,488 going to sinking fund purposes, or 11 per cent of all provincial revenue shoved aside to pay for capital expenditures, it will be readily seen that the province is doing extremely well.

Tax Up, Tariff Down

WITH both Provincial and Federal budgets presented to the public in the same week people are somewhat at their wit's end to grasp the significance of either, and not to mix one with the other. However, there seems to be general satisfaction with the Quebec budget for one main reason, that there will be no new taxes. And we will complain with the Ottawa budget because taxes are increased. Very few of us, though, will have but good to say because the corporation income tax has been increased to 15 per cent. to help bring the added revenue of $29,000,000. Noteworthy is the fact that the estimated deficit for the current year is $100,000,000 as compared with $160,000,000 last year.

The agricultural classes have been given great consideration in the new budget. The rearrangement of excise and customs taxes on automobiles has been designed to lower prices of small cars to consumers. The duty on gasoline has been dropped from 2¼ cents per gallon to 1 cent. Already some oil company officials have stated that they will not be able to pass along any of the benefit to the consumer, but little credence is given that statement, and there undoubtedly will be a lowering in price. The tariff on agricultural implements from intermediate tariff countries has been reduced to 7½ per cent. It may be true that the Western farmer will get the most benefit from this reduction, and we Easterners will complain. But when we consider the plight of the Western farmer during the past few years we should, as loyal Canadians, be very glad that he will be able to replace his worn-out implements by new ones at a much lower price. And the result to the Easterner will also be of considerable merit.

Heavy reductions are noted in the tariff rates on British cotton and silk fabrics, and manufactured cotton and artificial goods from intermediate tariff countries, including the United States. Just how that ruling will affect our district industries is not yet known, but it is hoped that it will not be adversely to any great degree.

A very sympathetic note is added to the budget with the provision for free entry from all countries of goods or articles imported for personal use of the blind, and this provision will undoubtedly meet with general approval from all classes of whatever political faith they might be.

General satisfaction on the part of the ordinary citizen will be expressed in the duty exemption up to $100 on goods for personal use brought in by tourists traveling abroad providing they are absent 48 hours, and that exemption is granted only once every four months. The difference here will likely prove to be that the man or family who smuggled before will now go about bringing across goods honestly. The timid ones were in the small class, and they now will be conscience-free. The merchant will naturally be worrying how this will affect his business. Possibly a greater reciprocation will result, and district merchants will do a larger business than before with the U. S. tourist. We hope that will be the case. Our merchants deserve no such fate as decreased business due to any legislation, and we trust this will not prove the case.

The increased sales tax will affect everybody. We cannot complain that one section or class will feel the pinch more than another. About the only thing we can do is pay and live in the hope that by next year the Finance Minister will be able to announce decreased taxes.

Dean Corbett on War

BELIEF that Great Britain was "extraordinarily likely" to become involved in a major war with certain elements in the European situation today even more threatening than in 1914, was voiced by Dean P. E. Corbett, of McGill University when he addressed the Alumnae Society of McGill. Dean Corbett felt, that in the event of another war involving Great Britain, Canada could only remain neutral by giving up membership in the British Commonwealth of Nations, and he added that it was unlikely that the majority of people in the Dominion would consent to the breaking of ties. It would be impossible for Canada to ask Great Britain to isolate herself from European politics, he said, for the Channel which divided England from the rest of Europe was, from the point of view of isolation, "no more effective than a ditch."

Dean Corbett felt strongly that the majority of Canadians would not be willing to sacrifice membership in the British Commonwealth for the sake of avoiding the entanglement of war. Even if the majority were in favor of this sacrifice, he doubted if, even then, Canada would be secure through neutrality. Certainly Canada would be no more secure than the United States, and the speaker believed that North American isolation would always be a gamble.

Dealing directly with the European situation today, Dean Corbett thought that the prestige of Great Britain had been involved in the Italian venture in Ethiopia. It had undertaken to stop the invasion through the League of Nations, and it had succeeded in doing nothing but "perhaps to lend zest to the Italian campaign." Everywhere in Europe, today, men were marching over territory littered with foreign treaties. The inability to prevent such breaking of treaties might be found, Dean Corbett suggested, in the fundamental weakness in the article of the Covenant of the League dealing with the imposing of sanctions. The article was weak in itself, he said, and weak in interpretation. The Covenant of the League was already loaded with shackles of the past. He classified it, as "an example of attempting to eat one's cake and have it." It might have been better had it not been abandoned by each power in turn, when it had "pinched" them.

Unless built on a strong foundation, a building would crumble when the wind blew, and the winds of nationalism were blowing violently in Europe at the present time. The speaker declared that political leaders—statesmen were extremely rare—were "miles behind" public in the countries they represented. It might be that the political leaders of the world were old, bred in certain habits, or possessors of vested interests.

Dean Corbett believed that Canada, because of racial division, had no unified national character, and made no collective impact upon the world. Canadians held different views in regard to the participation of the Dominion in a European war involving Great Britain. Some favored isolation; others held the view that Canada should enter if Great Britain were involved;, and still others favored an isolation from the League, as it operated at the present time.

One element—the breaking down of artificial trade barriers between nations—in which hope lay for the future of world conditions, was already under way, Dean Corbett concluded. There should be also a redistribution of the raw materials in the world; and there should be a body to have authority over nations, with the power to express that authority. In other words, a police power of some description.

HE GOES HOME TO BOAST

They tell strange stories down at the South-Western Court, London, to Claud Mullins, "mender of marriages." But surely one of the strangest ever told was that of Mrs. Jones, a tall, good-looking woman of thirty-eight. She explained she and her husband have been married for 16 years, and they have a daughter of 14. But although they have been married all this time, her husband—a dealer in automatic fun tables in a big way—has never provided a home for her, and has lived with her only "on and off" in a single furnished room. Until recently the wife supported herself and the girl by going out to work, but she now finds it difficult to get a post, "because unfortunately my hair has turned grey." Questioned about her husband, she said he only went to her to boast of his success with money and other women. Last summer, he told her, he spent three months at one of the best hotels in Brighton, and during the winter he flew to Berlin and Paris. He took her and the daughter to show them his fine offices near St. Paul's, but first he made the child promise she would not call him "Daddy" while there. One of the managers asked her: "Are you the Mrs. Jones?" Before she could reply her husband had answered: "Oh, no, she's just a Mrs. Jones." For eight weeks she had been getting unemployment benefit. Her husband was ordered to pay her maintenance.

MISS BUTTERFLY WEDS

A beautiful bride with a beautiful name was the central figure of Shanghai's most beautiful wedding. She was Miss Butterfly Wu, Chinese film star, who is regarded not only as the loveliest girl in China, but as the best-dressed Chinese girl in Shanghai. She now is the wife of Eugene Penn, Chinese business magnate. The couple are both Christians, and more than 2,000 guests attended the banquet which followed the ceremoney. The crowd around the cathedral was so vast a cordon of hundreds of police was sorely taxed maintaining order. The entire traffic over a large area surrounding the cathedrad was disorganized and had to be re-routed around the scene. The reception necessitated the reserving of the whole of two large hotels. The "Joy and Harmony Picture company," for which Miss Wu works, made a talkie of the entire ceremony and reception. The bride does not intend to allow marriage to interfere with her film work. With her husband's consent she will resume making picture on her return from their honeymoon at Fukien, where Mr. Penn was born.

PARROT WORLD TALK

The world championship for talking is now claimed for "Jim McConchy," the Australian parrot, which talked all competitors to a standstill at Geelong. Last year he won the Melbourne centenary blue ribbon by defeating 152 other talking parrots. He is a pink and grey galah. At Geelong Jim reeled off more than 100 different phrases. He verbally harnessed Tommy, the horse and backed him into the car, told Dell the dog to stand away or he would get kicked, and took the horse and trap on to the road, giving a remarkable imitation of the clatter of Tommy's hoofs. Then he turned his attention to the maid of all work. "Mary, get up and light the fire! Mary, where's the bucket! Mary, hurry up." Then he imitated Mary as she hustled to get breakfast.

LIBERALITY

Last week, 500 employees in a soap factory at Philadelphia headed by Samuel S. Fels, 76, received a bonus for their services in 1935, the lowest of which was 22½ per cent of their year's wages. This company has been making such bonus payments to its employees for 35 years. In 10 years the labor turnover has averaged less than one-half of one per cent, which is not to be wondered at. In 1932, when the pinch of the depression caused many workers in other industries to be laid off, Fels raised the wages for his employees because as he said they would need this extra income to help support their relatives and friends out of work. Troubles between labor and capital would soon fade away if the two could maintain such relations in all industry.

REUNITED BY PLANE

Twenty-two years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Anderson, now living at Bristow, Neb., adopted a three-year-old-girl, now Mrs. Lyle Webster, of Butte, Neb. In recent years, the Andersons and Mrs. Webster have searched for her relatives without success. While Mrs. Webster was a patient in an Omaha hospital last month, she looked through the local telephone directory and noticed the name of Frank Olds. She remembered Olds was the name of her grandparents and called up Mr. Olds. He was her grandfather. Through him she got in touch with her mother, now Mrs. Engels, who had remarried and is living at Gary, Ind., with whom she is now enjoying a month's visit. Nothing is known of her father, Ern Burdick.

EXPENSIVE RELIEF

At Pittsburgh, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Toole have been sentenced to three years in prison for asking and accepting government relief for more than three years while they owned their $4,000 home and had $11,780 in the bank. Since November, 1932, the family has received $706 in emergency relief, also free food, free medicine, and the children have been kept at a summer camp at public expense.

MICE POISON BABE

Poisoning by mice which had eaten contaminated food was stated, at a Liverpool inquest, to have caused the death of the eight-month-old son of John James Jones, dock laborer. After the baby's death a post mortem was held and a number of mice caught in the house were analyzed. The same food-poisoning bacilli were found in the child's body and in the mice. A verdict of "misadventure" was recorded.

ONE BOY IN MILLION

Ivan King, seven-year-old New York boy, is described by scientists as the world's most amazing child. Reports on phenomenal development and brain power state: At 18 months he talked fluently. At 20 months he recited the alphabet backwards and forwards. At a year he could walk. At a year and a half he had his teeth. At four he could read. At seven he reads a book a day. Now, his parents are bewildered when he starts political debates with them. Recently he presented a logical argument why income tax is scientifically more sound than a sales tax. The child's wonderful powers were discovered and have been investigated by Dr. Samuel B. Heckman, of the educational clinic of the College of New York. It is he who describes him as a boy in a million.

FREE MEALS WITH RELIGION

Newest phenomena among religious lines in the United States is the activity of a negro evangelist called "Father Divine" in Harlem, negro section of New York city. A few years ago this negro, then known as Joe Baker, came to New York from Alabama and organized a church. He now has many thousands of followers divided into "kingdoms" in New York city alone. The meeting house in each of these parishes is crowded every noon, and no wonder, for meals are served, often free, and never costing more than 10 cents even for the best chicken dinner. Other than these dimes received for meals, this dusky evangelist never takes up a collection and no one seems to know where the money comes from to pay the bills. The evangelist merely answers questions by saying, "The Lord will provide." His followers declare he is God himself. Last month he sent a delegation to Washington to urge congress to enact his "platform" into law. This platform includes substitution of the word "Peace" for "Hello" over the telephone, a requirement that doctors must guarantee cures in all cases they accept, and no more buying on the instalment plan.

HUSSIES SHOCK HIM

Eighty-year- old Dafydd Jacob, lonely Welsh mountain shepherd, has a lot of shocks when he paid his first visit to a town for sixty years. But the biggest shock of all was when he saw women bathers at Swansea. "I'd like to smack them," he said in Welsh—he cannot speak English—and then his indignation turned to wonderment that people, especially women, dared to venture into such a mass of water. When he arrived in Swansea from the lonely mountain of Van, in Breconshire, he was almost afraid to step out of the bus which had brought him down from the hill. When he saw his first ship, Dafydd wanted to go to Canada in it, but after he had been conducted over the vessel its gentle swaying, as it rode at anchor, was too much for him. Then his guides took Dafydd to the pictures for the first time. The gorgeous dresses of Hollywood "good lookers" amazed him and when he saw Laurel and Hardy in one of their comedies his hearty laughter could be heard throughout the building. Dafydd thinks nothing of carrying a heavy lamb five miles on a broiling day. He will have much to recall when he goes back to his beloved sheep on the Van.

TRACKED BY FINGERPRINTS

Fingerprint records of the department of justice at Washington show that among 8,799 recent applicants for jobs in the war department, city and county police offices, 621 are former criminals. One applicant for a job as a policeman, it was shown, has four different prison records, two in this country and two in Canada. Hotels in Miami, Fla., and Amarillo, Tex., keeping fingerprint records of all applicants for jobs at these two hotels, showed that 50 out of 689 had criminal records. Of 197 applicants for licenses as chauffeurs or taxicab drivers in five of the larger cities, 48 had criminal records. Universal finger-printing some day will prove to be a long step toward solving the crime problem.

TRAIN LENGTH KISS

Celebrating their sixtieth wedding anniversary in Cleveland, O., William W. Britton, 78, told guests how he courted his wife Sarah, before they were married. Being a railroader, Britton was too busy to call on Sarah very often during their courtship days. She lived beside the railroad track and that helped him out. He always waved to her as his train went by. His special joy as the member of a freight train crew was to get on the front end of the train, which in those days did not travel very fast, jump off at Sarah's door, giving him time for just a few words and a kiss before he had to swing onto the caboose as it came along.

CORNCRIB SAVING BANK

When Floyd Reibsamen, living on a farm near Titonka, Iowa, tore down a corncrib on his place recently, he found a hollow clay building block in it that aroused his curiosity. Examining the block, he found $2,500 in bills secreted in it, some dating back as far as 1890. The farm used to belong to his father who built the corncrib. It is Reibsamen's story that his father put the money in the building block for safe keeping and never let anyone know about it before his death. Anyway, a windfall of $2,-500 would be more or less welcome on any farm these days.

ART LENDING LIBRARY LATEST

Following the success of the "pictures-by-instalments" system, a London dealer is now inaugurating a plan for a circulating art library. For an annual fee of $10, the subscriber may have a constant supply of painting for his home, changing them as often as he likes. For $25, he is offered similar rights in canvases by painters of greater renown. And, if he grows particularly fond of one subject, there is always the "option to purchase."

The Week at Ottawa

which began in 1930, in the stabilization of wheat.

In spite of the new taxes, estimated to bring in from 25 to 30 million dollars, the minister expected that the deficit a year from now would not fall far short of 100 million dollars. Canadian trade with the world rose 11.3 per cent in the calender year 1935, whereas trade of 24 leading countries rose only 4.1 per cent. The government is proceeding with its loan council scheme for the assistance of the provinces, with, however, some amendments. It was announced that both British Columbia and Saskatchewan were able to take care of their maturing loan issues in May. The latter has agreed to enter the loan council when the machinery is complete, and meanwhile it will make arrangements with the Central Bank of Canada.

If a province enters the loan council and subsequently is refused a loan by the council, it can seek the money in the domestic market. But this does not apply to the foreign money market, nor to provinces which have previously obtained federal guarantee for the whole of their outstanding loan issues by a refunding process.

Trade relations with the Mother Country, said the Minister, are receiving the attention of the government, and discussions on the matter will shortly take place. Some improvement in the rates between Canada and Belgium has been effected, and negotiations with several other countries will begin soon. Though ordinary expenditure for the year was $14,287,000 higher than the previous year, and was a couple of millions above ordinary expenditure, it was cut $16,000,000 below what had been authorized by vote and statute. The cost of the election was one of the special items which helped to swell the total cost.

Canada's total external trade rose by $152,000,000 above the previous year, and the Dominion as a result rose from eighth to sixth place among world countries. Though it reported such a grave deficit, the temper of the budget speech was mildly optimistic, and called attention to real progress being made. The Minister also called attention to the low cost of money which had been established. In March the government's borrowings were at the lowest figure since records began to be charted in 1919. It was believed to be a record since Confederation.

Mr. Dunning stated that 62 per cent of the present budget consisted of uncontrollable expenditure, whereas back in 1914 only 19 per cent of expenditures were in that category. Aside from the budget the major items of the week were the wheat committee disclosures, the announcement that Canada's merchant marine (aside from the West Indies ships) had been sold, the Radio committee and the committee dealing with the Canadian National Railways. The House itself was relatively dull, a great deal of the time being spent on passing supplementary estimates and regular votes. Jean Francois Pouliot, fiery member for Temiscouata, caused a mild sensation by rushing from the Chamber announcing his intention of looking something up "in the book" before withdrawing at the Speaker's request a remark he made about Mr. Bennett. For this he was duly reprimanded by the Chair.

In the Wheat committee a sensation was sprung when it was shown that John I. McFarland, apparently acting for the Wheat Producers Ltd., had purchased over ten million bushels in wheat futures between August 31st and October 10th last year, and that these added to the burden of the board when it began to function. Mr. Bennett hotly protested the insinuation that Mr. McFarland had done anything irregular and asked that he be called to testify.

Mr. Murray, present chairman of the board, looking to the future, urged a royal commission so that we could have "a new approach and a new start" for the wheat problem in the coming years. His recommendation is likely to be acted upon.

Guest Speakers Feature Of Ninth Anniversary Service United Church

On Monday evening the United Church congregation held the final festivity in connection with the 9th anniversary services. After the delicious and bountiful supper an entertainment was provided when a bountiful amount of laughter was interspersed with a few moments of serious thought.

The attendance on Monday evening was wonderful, not only was the supper well patronized but the Lecture Room was taxed to capacity to see the Rev. J. H. Miller, D.D., receive the vestments of gown and hood at the hands of the Chairman of the Board of Stewards, A. A. Lunan, in behalf of the congregation. In a glowing and eloquent manner Mr. Lunan made the formal presentation and at the same time had the members of the official board come to the front and offer their personal congratulation to Dr. Miller. It was a pleasant and pleasing ceremony and was a distinct pleasure for the congregation to make the gift as well as for the pastor to receive it.

Dr. Miller expressed his sincere thanks to the congregation. In making his remarks he recalled how it was that when he was 16 years of age he headed out into the world for himself. In his teen age period he was away from home and the influence of home. "It was in my later teens that I found Christ was my life and my Saviour," said Dr. Miller. When Dr. Miller received the Doctor of Divinity degree it was noted that he had spent 40 years in the ministry on rural charges. Dr. Miller said that he appreciated the honour the congregation bestowed on him by their presentation of a gown and hood and said he had always laboured amongst the rural charges and had enjoyed his work. In conclusion Dr. Miller paid a high tribute to his esteemed wife who has always been his helpmate, and a great worker on the various charges which he served.

The Rev. W. S. Hatcher of St. John's Church of England, brought greetings from his congregation. "For five years I have been in this parish and during that time have enjoyed the closest co-operation with Dr. Miller and Dr. Maclean," he said. "For 40 years Dr. Miller has been a preacher, and it is pleasing to note that his Alma Mater has seen fit to recognize his 40 years of service with the Doctor of Divinity of degree. Now his congregation presents him with a gown and hood. A beautiful tribute to you, Dr. Miller, and may I add my congratulations.

"To-night this congregation is celebrating the 9th anniversary of this church, not long as years ago, for a church, but many things have toppled in these years but the church stands and always will stand and be the strong influence to mankind. May Dr. Miller long be your incumbent. Time is merely a space whereby an opportunity is provided in which to do useful work. I wish this church many more anniversaries in order that it may be able to carry on its good work."

Rev. J. H. Woodside, pastor of Kensington-Athelstan-Powerscourt charges, brought greetings and at the same time remarked upon the harmony that existed in Huntingdon amongst the clergy and their congregations. This harmonious feeling had a spreading effect and was indeed very noticeable in the charges around Huntingdon. In conclusion Mr. Woodside told a short story of a little girl who was writing a letter to the angels.

"Dear Angels," she wrote, "We are sending Grandma to you. Please give her a violin or a harp, she is too short of wind to blow a trumpet."

And so, Mr. Woodside brought his brief remarks to a conclusion.

Rev. J. B. Maclean, D.D., brough greetings from St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Dr. Maclean recalled the recent honor bestowed upon the United Church pastor, and thought it was a beautiful testimonial of the congregation to make the presentation of gown and hood. He congratulated the congregation as well as Dr. Miller. In conclusion, emphasis was laid upon the friendships of the local churches and how for five years back they have had union services each year in January and also during the Lenten season.

Mr. H. L. Trueman, of Ottawa, who is an old friend of Dr. Miller, rendered a number of delightful solos. Mr. Trueman is often heard singing over the radio on Sunday mornings from Ottawa. Before singing his first number he paid tribute to Dr. Miller, and stated that he felt laymen too often never realized the hardships some ministers have to endure. For his first number he sang a very appropriate song entitled, "It's a mighty good world after all," by Robert W. Service.

The Rev. Norman Rawson of Ottawa, who was the guest speaker of the evening held the floor for one hour and thirty-five minutes. It is questionable if ever a speaker spoke at such length in Huntingdon, unless it was a politician. But the minutes and quarter hours passed by quickly, for the Rev. Mr. Rawson gave the audience just that many minutes of enjoyment and laughter.

He felt that the college in honoring Dr. Miller had in reality honored itself more.

"How I won the War" was the humorous topic for the hour and a half. "The Canadians claim they won the war," he said, "and the U. S. claim they won it, but in reality they paid for it, and they can keep it as nobody intends to pay them back."

Rev. Mr. Rawson's story told of his personal enlistment in the army and his activities in the army for five years. He started as a private and ended as a captain acting as a major. These achievements he attributed to being polite and of good character.

"War is nothing but a calamity and look at the price it costs—it only brings sorrow and finishes nothing."

Other musical numbers of the evening programme were provided by Mrs. Wood who rendered a number of vocal solos while Miss Dorothy Davis and Miss E. Sellar played a piano duet. It was a delightful social evening.

The receipts from the supper amounted to $75.

Mr. Allan Goodfellow of Campbellton, N.B., was a recent visitor at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Goodfellow.

For the anniversary services in the United Church the choir was materially assisted by Mrs. Elvin Wood and Mrs. N. W. Reese of Athelstan, Messrs. J. B. MacMillan and F. J. Montle, all members of choirs in neighbouring churches. The choir under the direction of Miss Elsie M. Sellar provided a great number of anthems. The service of song throughout the anniversary services was very delightful and congratulations are due to choir.

A great number of people from neighbouring congregations joined with the United Church on Sunday and Monday for its anniversary services. The Rev. J. B. Maclean, D.D. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church had the regular Sunday evening service withdrawn to enable the members of the congregation and himself to join with the local United Church for its evening service. This was indeed a worthy gesture of goodwill and friendly feeling between our local clergy and the congregations.

Four tables of "500" were played at the Rebekah card party in the I.O.O.F. Hall Thursday evening. Winners were Ladies' first, Mrs. C. Hyde; second, Mrs. Arch. Cameron. Gentlemen, first, Mr. David Ross; second, Mr. Charles Hyde. Refreshments were served.

Bible Societies Hear Lecture By Field Secretary

The officers were re-elected with the exception of Mrs. Henry Sayers, Mrs. Oswald Mannagh being appointed to succeed her, while Mr. Adams paid a graceful tribute to Mrs. Sayers' work as a collector, and voiced the general regret at her departure and good wishes for her future in her new home.

Mr. Adams' lecture and lantern slides dealing with the life of Livingstone, missionary explorer of Africa, were both interesting. Amongst the highlights of his career were his work as a weaver in a factory where, as a boy, he labored from 6.30 a.m. till 7 p.m. for a very low wage, his purchase of a Latin grammar over which he pored at night till his mother sent him to bed, his conversion and departure for Africa, his rescue from a lion, his travels over darkest Africa through trackless forests, his visit to Queen Victoria, his discovery by Stanley, his death in the posture of prayer, followed by the journey of his faithful black friends who, having buried his heart in Africa, undertook a long and perilous journey to carry his embalmed body to a steamer which conveyed it to England where it was interred in Westminster Abbey.

The heroic rescue carried out at Moose River, N. S., found an echo in the memory of some who had heard the late James Barr relate a harrowing experience of his own. With another prospector he went one spring to look up a claim which the former had staked out some time before, when the streams were frozen over. Now these were often impassable and detours were necessary. They lost their way and would have died of starvation if they had not happened to find some flour left behind by a party of campers. After several days spent in fruitless tramping Mr. Barr's companion, less cool-headed than himself, went mad, and when the two were about to be rescued by another camping party he conceived the idea that they were hostile Indians and fled, but was finally overcome and forced into camp.

The annual meeting of the Russelltown and Covey Hill branches of the Bible Society was held last Wednesday evening in the Town Hall, and was presided over by the district secretary, Rev. Jas. Adams. Mr. Belvin assisting in devotions.

The Presbyterian W.M.S. met on Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Mary Brisbane. Piecing quilt blocks was the work for the day. A discussion of means and ways of augmenting them and plans for future work came up for attention. The delicious tea provided by the hostess was much enjoyed.

The United Church Ladies' Aid were entertained on Thursday afternoon by Miss Etheline Moore, 12 ladies being present. A quilt was quilted during the afternoon. An enjoyable lunch was served by the hostess.

SNOOPER'S COMMENTS

By Staff Reporter

Huntingdon seems to have been bitten hard by the golfing bug this summer because mashies, niblicks, putters, birdies and hole-in-one have gained a place in local conversation that they never held before. To prove the truth of what I have just said I'll let you in on a little secret conversation I heard last week. The place: Huntingdon main street; the time: 7.30 p.m. Monday night; the characters: two young men, one tall, the other short.

The tall man: You know, I think I'll play golf this summer. How about you?

Short man: Nope, not for me!

Tall man: Why?

Short man: Think I want to get out in the hot sun and chase a little ball all day through the fields.

Tall man: It's good exercise.

Shot man: I played a foursome with a Scotch friend of mine once and that finished me.

Tall man: You say you played a foursome with just one friend. You mean a twosome, don't you?

Short man: No! This was a foursome.

Tall man: But, ...

Short man: You see we had a bet on the game and on the last hole my Caledonian friend was two strokes up. Well, he thought he had me beat, and I thought so too, but he got into the rough and took thirteen strokes to sink the ball. I breezed home in ten, and beat him by one stroke.

Tall man: Yes! What then?

Short man: Well, then I had to force him to pay me.

Tall man: Oh!

Congratulations are now pouring in upon the first swimmer to brave the cold waters of the Chateauguay river. The time was Saturday, the place, the dam. This beats last year's "opening" date by nearly a week.

And here's a reader who goes poetic on us:

Huntingdon, Que.

Dear Snooper:

Can you tell me the reason, sir,
For the great commotion and noisy stir
In a local restaurant the other night
That almost developed into a fight?
The answer, sir, drives, me to distraction,
Was it because of a counter attraction?

Yours truly,
CURIOUS

We've been waiting over a year now for an item concerning some ducks to turn up, so we would drag in an old duck joke that has been laying around here for even longer than that, and this week we thought our wish had been granted. But, no, this is about geese. On Saturday when the Montreal-Huntingdon bus was making its trip here a large flock of geese blocked its way and the driver had to get out and scare them off the road. As the bus started to pull away again the whole flock joined together to give a perfect rendition of the well-known "raspberry," or maybe it was the gooseberry.

Brooder House Is Destroyed By Fire

Thursday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock a fire alarm was given in Elgin. The fire was at Clarence Macfarlane's farm. Mrs. Macfarlane had been to the brooder house, where a brooder with 200 little chicks was kept, at three o'clock, and everything was satisfactory and she then left for Huntingdon. When the fire was noticed the neighbours rushed to the scene and managed to extinguish the fire before it spread to the barns. The brooder house was a new 20x20 building and the loss will represent close to $300. Mr. and Mrs. Macfarlane feel much indebted to their neighbours for rendering them so much assistance at that precious moment of possible disaster to their farm buildings.

School Notes

By Staff Reporter

Grades X and XI had their final examination in Oral French last Friday under the supervision of Miss L. Tanner of the Quebec Department of Education.

Miss J. Snaden, Grade X teacher, has been absent during the past few days on account of the death of her aunt.

Mr. Leamon of Montreal, a father of two boys attending the school and staying at the Presbyterian Residence, has been giving the Junior and Senior marksmen of the cadet corps some good advice on target practice. Mr. Leamon is a champion marksman of the Royal Montreal Regiment. The shooting in both divisions of the corps has improved immeasurably during the last few weeks and the battle for medals is going to be a very keen affair.

The annual tennis tournament will be held on May 25th. The court is now in good condition. Salt and oil have been put on the grass around the edges and the posts put in.

Final cadet inspection for boys and physical drill inspection for the girls will be held on May 13th.

The threatened grippe and measles epidemic has subsided and attendance at school has increased accordingly.

Sightseeing Trip is Enjoyed

Twenty-eight pupils under the guidance of class teacher, Mrs. Lindsay, enjoyed a sightseeing trip to Montreal on Saturday. A Provincial Transport bus was chartered for the day.

Through the kindness of W. H Henry steamship Co. permission was given to visit the "Manchester Citizen" at Dock 16. The pupils enjoyed a good view of the harbour grain elevators en route.

On arrival at the boat the party was met by Mr. Le Mesieur and the chief officer who presented each pupil with a photo of the boat. A tour to all parts of the vessel was made. Much interest was shown in "Marconi Room" and Engine Room. The rope ladders were lowered and "the fidales" placed on the cookery utensils on the stove to show conditions during the gale.

The Chateau de Ramezay was next visited. The Historical Museum and Historical Portrait Gallery was of much interest to students of Canadian History. The Chateau was built in 1705 and has the original furnishings, it was the headquarters for the Continental Army under Montgomery in 1775-76.

After lunch the party next sojourned to the McGill Campus and visited the Museum. The stores of shells, minerals, prehistoric animals and birds was a wealth of knowledge to the students.

James McOuat, of Lachute, a former pupil, joined the party in Montreal. The pupils returned home having had a thoroughly enjoyable day and a vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Lindsay for her interest and kindness in conducting the party.

"Don't mind me, boys. My wife has left me and I'm about half nuts!"

"Yeah, that's probably why she left you."

Chain Stores Scored In Quebec Legislature

Last week the chain store business ran into a hurricane of trouble in the Legislative Assembly at Quebec when the Magog Bill was being discussed.

The clause under discussion provided that the Council could impose "on every person not residing in the city, or in the case of a corporation not having its main office in the city, a special tax not exceeding $500 for every shop, commercial or business stand kept by such person or corporation within the limits of the city."

Most of the members took a stand against the chain store system.

What's In The Wind?

By Paula Dicks

High and low units in the local religious field received an injection of powerful oratory at high voltage on Monday night. After an hour and thirty-five minutes, many were left wondering whether the speaker was suffering from a Sunday hangover or a Bosch reaction ignited with a backfire from the flight of Haile Selassie from Addis Ababa.

The comedy burlesque entitled "How I won The War" by Rev. Norman Rawson rolled them in the aisles at the Anniversary Supper of the Huntingdon United Church. Admittedly, it was low comedy of a sparkling type, even to the point of danger. Hence, the hysterical audience! No one was spared fom ridicule. If the overly sensitive and snobbish felt injury they hadn't time to dwell on the matter before another quip swept away the sting. The highly effective use of the first person singular—used only too seldom by the clergyman, coupled with character imitations in dialect, gave a realistic atmosphere to the dramatic monologue.

And the public is being educated to this type of entertainment by the radio. Tens of millions listen to Eddie Cantor and Jack Benny on Sunday nights. Rousing the lowest emotions —catering to the crowd—say the elegant critics. The so-called low emotions and still lower instincts are, however, even used by the Creator to perpetuate the race! But the elected, or specially called group of spiritual doctors who claim to have the formula for removing the curse constantly quarrel among themselves as to the strength of the dose needed.

"Phooey to you, from me!" shout the multitude, as they tune in on Cantor.

185 Students Enter School Seed Contest

Plan to Beautify School Grounds With Trees Is Discussed

The May meeting of the Hinchinbrook Horticultural Society was held on Monday night at the home of A. W. Perkins. The School Fair Committee reported having visited all the schools in the district. 126 pupils had entered the garden plot contest, and 59 others chose individual seed packets, making a total of 185 interested children. The seeds have been sent for and it is hoped they will soon arrive.

A request from the teacher of the Athelstan School that the Society do something in the way of beautifying the school grounds by planting trees was considered and planned to grant this request.

As a number even among the members had missed seeing the very worthwhile picture shown a year ago, "Beautifying the Home Surroundings," it was decided to repeat the lecture and show picture, providing necessary arrangements can be made. Two of the juvenile members contributed to the programme, John Foers with an article on Lilacs and Leslie Perkins with one on Mother's Day, both most interesting. Mr. Perkins read an article on "Home Made Green Houses," and Mrs. Perkins one on "What a Garden Club means to a village." The meeting closed with an interesting guessing contest on varieties of appies.

The Easter Thank Offering meeting of the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Auxiliary was held in the church basement on Monday night. The address was given by the pastor, Rev. A. Nimmo, in which he gave a brief account of all the different mission fields, and workers under the supervision of the W.M.S. He also stressed the great need for missions whether foreign or home, or contributing to our colleges. An interesting item, delayed since the first of the year was presenting Life Membership Certificates to Mrs. E. E. Wells and Mrs. A. W. Perkins. These have been ready, but for various reasons the interested parties were unavoidably absent from all regular monthly meetings, until the present time. Mrs. Tully read a poem, "Patiently Bear Thy Cross," and Mrs. Walter Arthur and Mrs. D. F. Grant contributed a duet to the programme. The offering amounted to $18.50.

Recent guests at The Manse include Mr. Wm. A. Rowat of Winchester, Ont., son of Rev. A. Rowat, former pastor; Rev. T. J. Watson, of North Georgetown, and Rev. Walter Ross of Ormstown.

Miss Vera Macfarlane of Montreal spent the week-end at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Muir of Westmount were week-end guests of his sister, Mrs. E. E. Wells.

Rev. A. Nimmo, Mrs. Nimmo and children, Margaret and Stewart, with Mrs. Nimmo, Sr., spent Monday in Montreal.

Mrs. E. E. Wells visited her parents in Westmount on Monday.

Rev. Walter Ross of Ormstown was the special speaker at the preparatory service in the Presbyterian Church on Friday morning. Two new members were added to Communion Roll by profession of faith.

Quebec Deficit Estimated At $991,345 For This Year

Stockwell Says Province Kept On Solid Financial Plane With Lowest Per Capita Debt in Dominion

Revenue $36,082,142

The most important occurrence of the week in the Legislative Assembly was the bringing down of the budget on Thursday by Honourable R. F. Stockwell. In delivering his budget speech, the Provincial Treasurer took a generally optimistic view of the Canadian picture, and said that in "all these activities in which the citizens of the Province of Quebec engage and in which advances have been noted throughout Canada, the Province of Quebec has participated in full measure."

The Provincial Treasurer cited figures and facts to stress his contention that as the Dominion moves forward toward betterment, even though slowly, this province also moves forward at at least an equal pace. The deficit is estimated at $991,345 for the year 1936-37 and the revenue is set at $36,082,142. The Province has been set on a solid financial plane, although the debt is up $20,915,495.

In the address which Mr. Stockwell delivered in moving the House into committee of supply, he dealt with the activities of all the spending departments in a more thorough manner than is usually the case, and his speech outlined the activities of the Government during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1935.

The Treasurer said the province made the best bargains in its financial arrangement, and that the debt of the province was the lowest per capita of any province in Canada.

As to the strictly financial position of the Province of Quebec itself, the Provincial Treasurer showed, with the aid of his estimates for the year to end June 30, 1937, that while the province had increased its debt some 20 millions last year, it had also adopted a policy of not leaving the obligations of this generation to those to come. The funded debt of the province is some 134 millions, which will mean for next fiscal year interest charges of $6,812,499, and—this is notable—there will also be put away $4,190,142 for sinking fund purposes, and this on a budget of $37,073,488.

A better appreciation of this situation can be grasped when it is realized that a one per cent. sinking fund will retire a 40-year loan. The provincial loans are not of 40 years, for the most part, but, on a basis of $4,190,142 out of a revenue of $37,073,488 going to sinking fund purposes, or 11 per cent. of all revenue shoved aside to pay for capital expenditures, it will be seen the province is doing well.

This was the most satisfactory feature of the situation laid out by Mr. Stockwell, in the opinion of those who watch the annual budget debates.

Huntingdon Member Moves Adjournment

Martin B. Fisher, Opposition, Huntingdon, moved the adjournment of the debate.

Estimates for the fiscal year to end June 30, 1937, tabled by Mr. Stockwell, show that an expenditure of $37,073,488 is contemplated, as against appropriations of $35,877,394 for the fiscal year ending June 30 next. This means an increase of $1,195,094.

First trial of strength between the Taschereau Government and the united groups forming the Opposition in the Legislative Assembly came Wednesday when the Government was sustained by a vote of 47 to 41, the vote coming on the amendment to the motion to adopt the Speech from the Throne.

C. E. Gault, Cons., St. George-Montreal, voted against the amendment, and consequently with the Government forces. Laurent Barre, Opposition, Rouville, voted for the amendment, but explained prior to voting that he did not consider the amendment to constitute a vote of non-confidence, nor did he see that the amendment cast any reflection or blame upon the Government.

When the Legislative Assembly resumes work Tuesday there is a varied menu for the members to select from, and if it be found there is a touch of piquancy needed there is the bill of Maurice Duplessis, Opposition leader, to repeal the Dillon Law which can be flung into the fray. This promises to be the cause of a hard battle, and to furnish the occasion for some additional references to the last electoral campaign.

There is the old age pension law to be disposed of during the present week, and, of course, the Budget debate, following the presentation of the financial accounts of the province last week by Hon. R. F. Stockwell, Provincial Treasurer.

Martin B. Fisher, Opposition, Huntingdon, is leading the attack for the Opposition. It is expected that most of the English-speaking members of the Assembly, not very many it happens, will join in, and become diversified, since in the speech-making so far the minority has played the part of listeners rather than talkers, the only English speech being that delivered by Frank L. Connors, Liberal St. Ann, Montreal, who seconded the mation to adopt the Speech from the Throne.

Institute Members Urged To Greater ....

Printing of this year's programme has been arranged for by the Aubrey Branch and should be in the members' hands by the next meeting.

The Resolutions Committee through Mrs. Chas. Smallman, then presented its findings:

Resolved—

That we express to the officers and conveners who are retiring from our County Board our regrets that they are severing their connection with the executive and our sincere appreciation of the services they have rendered during their terms of office.

That we tender our thanks to any who have in any way aided in our program, especially our guest speakers, Miss LeBlanc and Mrs. Melling.

That we express to the officers and members of this congregation our gratitude for the use of their church hall for our Convention.

That we also offer our heartiest thanks to the Aubrey-Riverfield Branch for their hospitality and entertainment to-day which made possible this our twelfth Convention.

The Provincial President, Mrs. Chas. Petch, spoke a few words on our work as Institute members.

Mrs. D. M. Houghton, President of Huntingdon Branch, kindly invited the Institutes to meet there next year for the Convention.

This enjoyable and profitable day was brought to a close with the singing of "A long, long Trail," and the National anthem. The delegates were entertained at dinner and supper by the Aubrey-Riverfield Branch and spent a very pleasant time in renewing acquaintances. Articles made o. wool were displayed and admired. Following supper the delegates departed for their homes in the hope of soon meeting each other again at the picnic in August.

Upon returning home, the secretary found a letter explaining the absence of Miss Hazel McCain from the Convention. Miss McCain is ill and unable to attend any of the Spring County Conventions.

President's Address

"Another year has passed since last we met in Convention and I would like to thank all officers and conveners for the interest and co-operation they have shown during the past year in our Institute work.

"This year we celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the foundation of Women's Institutes in the Province of Quebec. The first founded was Dunham, in Missisquoi County; the second Howick, in our own County of Chateauguay-Huntingdon, and to these we extend our congratulations.

"Twenty-five years—a quarter of a century is quite a space of time for a group of women to remain faithful to a society and determined to carry on the work in the face of numerous difficulties and discouragements.

"The success of Institute work, as a whole is a credit to those who wrote our first Charter and laid down the principles and regulations which govern it. They had a clear understanding of the needs of rural women and a thorough knowledge of the pitfalls the new society might meet, hence their rule—no class—no creed—no politics!—and the branches which have kept these rules are the ones which have survived.

"May I stress what our Provincial President said in her message to the Quebec Women's Institute. That we realize that the success of our organization rests, not only upon the officers, but upon each individual member.'

"That the work accomplished in each department, depends in a large measure, upon its branch convener. She should give her particular department earnest study, act as a leader and keep its needs and opportunities before the other members. That each County have at least one county project if not feasible to have one for each department. That we endeavour to extend our W. I. by new branches and enlarged membership."

"What work," some one might ask, "has been accomplished by Women's Institutes during the past twenty-five years?" Well, if you listen to the Conveners' reports today, you will hear what has been done in each department during the past year. An aggregate of little things, you may say, yes, but it is the little things that make life, the small duties accomplished day by day.

"When our forefathers came here to make homes for themselves, the forests were cut down—a tree at a time—the land levelled a little at a time—the houses built beam upon beam—and yet to-day—as we look over our fair country, none fairer in the world would we say little things are not worth while!

"Let us be loyal to yesterday, but respond to the challenge of to-day—the new duties to be done—the new work undertaken. It matters profoundly how we live, if we would improve the morals of our country, for upon women depend the moral tone of a nation.

More Service Is Needed

"To be an Institute member means service, and more service, to put into it all we have of energy and helpfulness for our neighbours, for our community and for the country we live in. That service should make us more broad-minded women, able to see beyond the present time and the limited boundaries of our homes and to realize that we have some permanent influence even in our limited sphere of action. "For what are men better than sheep or goats, that nourish a blind life within the brain if knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer, both for themselves and those who call them friend. For so the whole round earth is every way bound by chains of gold about the feet of God."

"Therefore, if the regular meeting together has helped one of our members to make a new start in bearing some unavoidable burden, we should be thankful we have done our part in keeping our Institute alive. In future let us resolve, that we will be more business like, we will help our officers to carry on the meeting, by strict attention to the matters in hand, by taking our part in the discussions, by stating our opinions whether favourable to an undertaking or not, and by loyal adherence when the majority may have decided against these opinions.

"Service, and the "charity that thinketh no evil," but is resolute in finding the good qualities of our fellowmen, will carry our organization to heights we have not thought possible. To face difficulties bravely, not to be afraid of criticism, to carry any work attempted to a successful conclusion, in short, courage, single-mindedness and determination can make our Institute a stronger force for good in the community than it has been during the past year.

"We have not wings, we cannot soar,
But we have feet to scale and climb
By slow degrees—by more and more
The cloudy summits of our time.

The heights by great men reached and kept,
Were not attained by sudden flight
But they—while their companions slept
Were toiling upward in the night.

Nor deem the irrevocable past
As wholly wasted, wholly vain
If rising on the wrecks at last
To something nobler we attain."

Kindred to the Great

Curing Offers Variety

At this season in most farm homes a supply of meat is obtained by curing pork and beef. The following standard recipes will be found suitable:

Sugar-cured Hams and Bacon

Seven pounds of salt, 2 lbs. brown sugar, 4 oz. saltpeter, 100 lbs. meat. Put the salt, sugar and saltpeter in water enough to cover or nearly cover meat, let come to a good boil. Allow to get entirely cold. Pack meat in large meat jar as tightly as possible, skin side of meat up. Pour the cold brine over, adding a little more water to brine if necessary to cover meat, being sure to allow the full amount of salt, sugar, etc., for each 100 lbs. of meat or fraction thereof, in each crock. Put a heavy weight on meat to keep under brine, and leave in brine for six or eight weeks, then take out, drain and smoke, and store in dry place.

Pork Sausages

Ten pounds of ground meat, 10 level teaspoons of pepper, 8 level teaspoons powdered sage, 15 level teaspoons salt. Mix in these proportions, mixing the seasoning well through the meat.

Liver Puddings

Make of well-cleaned and cooked hogs' heads, tongues, hearts and livers. Cook the livers separately, do not use the juice from cooking liver, save the liquid in which the heads were cooked to moisten the meat as much as necessary to make of right consistency. Grind the cooked meat and liver, allowing one-third liver to two-thirds meat, and to each 10 lbs. allow 10 level teaspoons of pepper and 15 teaspoons salt (level). After adding liquor to right consistency (make quite moist), mix thoroughly, reheat and pack in crocks, run melted lard over the top and it will keep for some time.

Dried Beef

Cut pieces from lower round of beef. Mix in this proportion: To each two cups of salt, allow one cup of brown sugar and one-half teaspoon of saltpeter. Mix thoroughly. Have a kettle of water boiling hard; dip the pieces of meat in and out of the boiling water as quickly as possible, roll well in sugar and salt preparation until well coated all over and no more will stick on. Pack in crock or large granite pan, one with no broken or rusted surface, and leave for eight or ten days. Drain, dry and smoke. Do not hang where too hot to dry. Dry until the pieces are dry on outside, but yield to pressure. Smoke before dry or it may become too dry.

Corned Beef

Use 1 gallon water, 1½ lbs. salt, ½ lb. brown sugar, ½ oz. saltpetre, 1/3 oz. potash; use same proportions for any quantity, boil all together in an iron kettle, skim and strain, put into the pickle container, and when cold put in the meat, having the pickle cover it, and weighing it down with clean stones. For 100 lbs. beef, use 8 lbs. fine salt, 4 lbs. brown sugar, 4 oz. saleratus, 3 oz. saltpetre, and mix well; put a layer of this in the bottom of the barrel and between each layer of meat, removing the large bones. Put a weight on the top layer of meat to hold it down, and the juices of the meat furnish all the brine necessary. This process will make the meat ready for drying in six weeks.

Tudor Sisters & Avery

At Ormstown Exhibition

There is nothing unusual in the presentation of an ordinary acrobatic act, but when the Management of your Fair tells you that they have engaged for your entertainment, the services of TUDOR SISTERS & AVERY, the peer of acrobatic contortionists, then you know that you are going to see something entirely new and unusual, and an act that is worth walking miles to see.

Three attractive young ladies, present a most artistic performance in their exhibition of ground acrobatics, hand-balancing and tumbling, aided by an agile and athletic young man.

However, the climax of the act is when one of the young ladies in the troupe, wraps her body around the waist of the male member of the troupe, after which he bends his body directly to the floor, and goes through a series of contortions with the young girl still wrapped around his waist. They then go into a series of tumbling exhibitions that is nothing short of amazing.

For their second offering, TUDOR SISTERS & AVERY, present an absurdly grotesque comedy. Dressed in typical Hoosier costumes, from whence, incidently, these artists originate, that is the Wabask country, they offer clever slapstick comedy, using tables and chairs in such manner that will evoke hearty laughter and the approbation of the audience.

TUDOR SISTERS & AVERY appeared before Fair audience for the first time last season, and met with instantaneous success. Many of the Fairs have requested return engagements, and those who have not seen them before will indeed be pleased with the selection of the management of ORMSTOWN FAIR, June 9-10-11-12th.

MYSTERY HOUSE

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

Chapter 18

"Oh, I'd like that! Could I go with you, Page?" Lynn's lean, brown young hands grasped hers eagerly, his voice rose on a sort of cry. "I've no money and no clothes, you see," he said pitifully. "I've wanted to go, but I have no money and no clothes! If I could buy clothes in Halfmoon Bay, couldn't I? And then we could go to the city together!"

"Why not? I'll talk to Rand about it. I didn't think of deserting you, Lynn, when I said I'd go, but it does seem rather like that."

She ran up the terrace steps. This was the solution after all. She and Lynn would be safe in the city when the mischief-making Ked Anna went back to its rightful owner; that would end all speculation and mystery there!

Rand was alone in the dining room when she entered it.

"Rand, I've been saying good-bye to Lynn, and he reminds me that it was part of the arrangement—his giving me the diamond, I mean—that I should stay around until everything was settled about him!"

"What was his object in that?" Rand asked drily.

"He seems to feel that something might happen to him if he stayed here. So he's going into town with me."

"Oh, but that's nonsense!" Rand said, in concern. "You can't saddle yourself with any such responsibility as that. He doesn't know what he's doing half the time; he might embarrass you terribly."

"He won't. I'm not in the least afraid. It's only something like amnesia—something that doesn't change him, just changes his memory!" the girl argued.

"But you can't take him with you, my dear. She—the Duchess—would not stand for it! The worst of it all is," Rand said thoughtfully, "I may not be able to make it until tomorrow. I'm expecting a telephone call some time this afternoon. If it comes before four we can get started, but if it doesn't I really oughtn't to go away."

"Tomorrow's as good for me as today!"

"I'll find out about it," he said. "I'll go up and see what the Duchess thinks."

When he returned he merely said briefly, "She says she would rather have you go tomorrow," and nothing more was said.

Lynn accepted this verdict without comment, slipping away at once after luncheon. Page was in her room packing her bags at about three o'clock, when Flora tapped at the door.

"Rand's call came through," Flora said, "so he's starting about four; he said to tell you."

"He's taking Lynn?" the girl asked.

"I believe he talked to Lynn about it," Flora said in her conscientious way. "But Lynn said he'd rather go in tomorrow."

"That gives me only an hour," Page murmured, with a glance at the clock. But her thoughts were not as docile as her words; as she put folded garments, books, wrapped small articles into the two big suitcases that were her only luggage, she was mentally escaping from this casually introduced plan. She could not go away and desert Lynn, that was plain. Flora should not talk her into it, nor Rand laugh off her apprehensions; the situation was certainly more serious than he supposed it to be. If the old woman really were able to wander about at night, and if Flora were sure of getting possession of the diamond without any help from Lynn, then matters might grow dangerous at any minute.

"Flora presently left her, with a final pleasant "Don't forget to come in and say good-bye to the Duchess." The instant the woman was gone Page snatched up a coat and ran down through the infinite convolutions of halls and stairs, galleries and passages, and out upon the terrace.

It was not yet four o'clock, but the bright day had gone under a cloud, and a restless wind, heavy with rain, was blowing fitfully from the south. The sea was rough and troubled, and dotted with racing whitecaps. A storm was on the way. Page called "Lynn! Lynn!" and the wind snatched at the words and bore them straight up into the air.

He lived in a little one-room shack that stood out on the cliff beyond the kitchen garden. Page ran along in the shelter of the high evergreen hedge that shut the kitchen windows away from the sea, and knocked on his door.

There was no answer. The girl pushed the door open and looked inside. The plain room was empty.

Below the cliff was the pier, jutting out into the tumbling steel-cold water. Lynn's boat was there, tied to the wharf. He had not gone out in his boat; he certainly would not have started for a walk at this hour.

Page tried to think where he might be; up in Mrs. Prendergast's sitting room perhaps, reading. She went back into the house, through the kitchen, and finally peeped into the upstairs sitting room.

Lynn was nowhere in sight. Mrs. Prendergast was sitting enthroned by the fire; Rand was standing near her. Flora was deep in a chair, watching, listening. Suddenly rain was thundering down outside, and Page heard the wind howling about the eaves of the house.

"Ah, there she is!" Rand exclaimed. "Not much of a day to get anywhere, is it? But if you're ready, we'll go."

Page walked toward them. Quite without warning she was frightened, terribly frightened. She fought it down—everything was as usual—Rand, Flora, the old woman in her big chair, the sea pounding and rushing far down on the shore. But she was frightened just the same. She wanted to get away from this place now, this instant! Lynn or no Lynn, she could not stay here another hour; these two women, with their strange sly glances, frightened her.

She had meant to speak of Lynn, ask them where he might be on this dreadful afternoon. But instead she merely said to Rand that she was ready. She was beginning her goodbyes to Flora and Mrs. Prendergast when the telephone rang.

By this time Page was so nervous that the tingling little bell made her jump in terror. But Flora answered it quietly enough. It was one of the Japanese talking from the farm. The bridge was out; it had gone down under one of the farm cars in the first onslaught of the rain. There would be no travelling on that road tonight; Mystery House was shut off from the world.

Page saw Flora and Mrs. Prendergast look full at each other, completely without expression. Rand spoke normally, cheerfully:

"They can fix it in the morning? That's all right then. We'll go right after breakfast. How about the jigsaw, Page?"

"Oh, yes; let's get it out." She tried to speak naturally; she tried not to be afraid. But the room was horrible to her now; the storm outside was like roaring dragons holding her here in prison.

"I hope Lynn hasn't taken to one of his wandering fits," Flora said presently. Page did not look up from the bit of red kerchief that she was fitting carefully against the neck of the Neapolitan girl in the puzzle beneath her hands, but she felt her soul sick within her. Lynn had said that; Lynn had warned her! He had predicted that the women would say he had wandered away . . .

He did not come upstairs as usual before dinner. The clock struck six. The storm raged and shouted in the dark.

Just before dinner time the telephone rang again. This time it was for Page. She looked bewilderment at Rand and at the stealthily watching Flora as she took it. In all her months at Mystery House no one had ever telephoned her before; it was strange to have a message come now, on this dark stormy night when she felt so cut away from everything that was safe and usual and right.

"It might be Lynn," she said, taking the instrument from Flora. "He might have walked in to the farm."

It was not Lynn. It was a high falsetto voice that asked if this were Miss Hazeltyne. For a second Page was more puzzled than ever. Then she remembered young Barnes Bishop and his mysteries, and gathered her forces together to carry out their little prearranged plan of disguise.

"Page, this is Elinor!" Barnes said.

"Oh, hello, Elinor!" Page said, painfully, agitatedly conscious of the nearness of Mrs. Prendergast and Flora. Was what they could hear of his ridiculously pitched voice deceiving them, or were they already suspicious?

"My dear, Betty's engagement shower is off!" he was saying gaily. "We went to her house, and can you imagine that she wasn't there! Absolutely wasn't there. She's gone away. So we'll have to wait, and when do I see you?"

"Oh,—oh," Page stammered vaguely, expressionlessly. "I'm coming—I'd forgotten that. I'm coming into town with Doctor Harwood tomorrow, and we may start east on Saturday. But I'll surely see you before that."

"But what do you know about Betty?"

"Oh, that's—queer, isn't it?" Page floundered. She had long ago destroyed the little slip of paper that contained the key to these names—their little code—feeling sure at that time that she would remember them. But they seemed to make no sense now.

"We went to her house, you know."

"Oh, did you?" Page exclaimed feebly. What does that mean? she thought.

"And she was gone! How about the recipe for the gingerbread?" Barnes asked. That had meant—that had meant—what on earth did that mean?

"Oh, that's all right, I can get it from you tomorrow," Page managed to say. Immediately afterward Barnes said, "Well, good-bye then," and Page replied dazedly, "Good-bye," and returned the receiver to its hook.

"We were going to have a shower for an engaged girl somewhere about now," she explained, returning to her place at the table upon which the jigsaw was scattered, and searching for a piece with what naturalness she could assume. "But she's gone, so we'll have to postpone it."

Rand began to talk idly of Russia and of Russians that he had known in China.

The sudden unexpected contact with the oustide world had somehow reassured and quieted Page. She was willing now to accept firelight and the puzzle, Flora's odd abruptness and Mrs. Prendergast's queerness as she had accepted them yesterday—last week—from the beginning—as just the conditions that governed her new job.

PACK YOUR WOOLLENS IN AN AIR TIGHT BAG

THERE is no royal road to combat moths in the household. The basis of control rests in extreme care and cleanliness. Certainly, naphthalene and its cousin with the formidable name, paradichlorobenzene—pronounced para-di-kloro-ben-zeen are very helpful because moths do not like them, but at the same time, unless they are properly used after due precautions have been taken, these chemical substances are as useless as many other popular remedies which include tobacco extracts, dried lavender leaves, cayenne pepper, black pepper, allspice, salt, borax, eucalyptus leaves, and red cedar leaves. The mere sprinkling of evil-smelling substances means little in the gay life of a moth. In the knowledge of how and when to sprinkle lies the justification for extraneous aids.

A moth bag does not kill moths but it does stop the entrance of moths from the outside if it is absolutely hole-proof and air tight. Winter clothing will soon be put away for the summer, and, unless woollens, furs, and other garments are not thoroughly cleaned before being stored, it is only asking for trouble. With a forgotten garment and a nice quiet dark place, the small caterpillars of the moth will work incredible havoc. All woollen clothes should be washed, dried, carefully brushed, and aired, preferably in the sun, and furs should be aired and thoroughly brushed before being put away in bags or other air-tight containers. If clothes are to be stored in drawers, they should be wrapped in heavy unbroken paper—newspaper of several thicknesses will do—and the edges of the paper sealed with gummed-paper strips. Where there is an opening a moth will find it. With regard to carpets and furniture covering, brushing or the constant use of the vacuum cleaner is an effective preventive.

Two species of moths—the webbing clothes moth and the case-making clothes moth—occur in Canada, the webbing species being the more common. They are seen in largest numbers in spring and summer, but the winged moths do not feed. During their brief life which varies from a few days to a month, they deposit tiny, oval, pearly-white eggs, sometimes as many as 150, among the hairs or meshes of the material on which the larvae feed later on. The eggs hatch in about a week to ten days, and the young larvae which are very sensitive to light seek protected situations in the folds of fur and woollen garments, or in the interior of upholstered furniture, and commence feeding at once. They may be found in all stages of development throughout the year, their larvae life varying from a few weeks to as long as nearly two years prior to pupation and final emergence as winged moths.

Often moths will be found issuing from neglected trunks or forgotten pieces of clothing in attics, basements, and closets and in the collections of lint in floor cracks and behind baseboards. Infestations also occur in the woollen lint and debris that collects in the horizontal portions of cold air shafts connected with hot air furnaces in houses.

SCIENCE has come to the aid of the housewife with kettles that whistle, coffee percolators that ring bells, and toasters that chime at the psychological moment, but so far no substitute has been found for father's "elbow grease" in whitewashing a fence, barn or cellar. Certainly he might use a spray gun for a time, but experience has proved that applying the right kind of whitewash with a brush is still an effective method. Even in the suburban districts of towns there is more than the fence to be attended to; there are the poultry house and other buildings that look better for a spring touch-up, as to the farms, the number of buildings to be whitewashed inside and out is many.

Make Use of Whitewash

Inquiries have often been made as to the possibility of a waterproof whitewash for outside work that will not present a picture of drab desolation after a shower of rain. There is such a whitewash recommended which is made in the following proportions: slake 62 pounds of quicklime in 12 gallons of hot water, and add two pounds of salt and one pound of sulphate of zinc dissolved in two gallons of water. To this add two gallons of skim-milk. An ounce of alum, though not essential, would improve the wash. Salt should be omitted if the whitewash is required for metal surfaces which rust.

A disinfectant whitewash is often desired for farm buildings. Here is a recommended recipe. First, 50 pounds of lime is dissolved in eight gallons of boiling water. To this is added six gallons of hot water which has ten pounds of salt and one pound of alum dissolved in it. A can of lye is added to every 25 gallons of the mixture. A pound of cement to every three gallons is gradually added and thoroughly stirred. The object of using the alum is to prevent the lime rubbing off. Cement makes a more creamy mixture, so that it is easier to apply and more surface is covered. Lye is added for disinfecting purposes, but a quart of creosol disinfectant to every eight gallons would serve the same purpose. Lye is preferred when the colour is to be kept white.

LET WRINGER DO YOUR WORK

Do you know that the rubbing of woollen fibres against each other is the main reason for blankets shrinking and the nap felting? But how can we get the dust from soiled blankets without some washing machine agitation and friction from the action of the machine?

Method Used

This is the explanation. Don't wash blankets clean as you would other clothes, just suds them and wring them clean. Make a double action suds, using twice as much soap as you use in washing, and use the water luke warm. Have the wringer loosened, and after getting the blanket thoroughly wet in this heavy suds wring it at once through the wringer. Keep sudsing and wringing until the blanket is completely cleaned. Three suds and three wrings will nearly always clean a blanket, but keep on until you have done six sudsings and six wringings, if the blanket requires that much cleaning. Now put the blanket through a light suds, wring and then put it through two lukewarm rinses and the covering is ready for the line. In hanging to dry be sure you hang the blanket so the colored stripes in the ends are vertical in order that no color runs into the main color, and pull the blankets into shape on the line. You will find your blankets soft and fluffy and clean.

It insures less washing to use protectors on the upper edge of the blankets to keep the body from touching the edges of the covering. Do not depend wholly on the overturned sheet to do the entire protecting of the upper edge of the blankets, and do not find yourself in the position of having to wash a whole blanket just to get the upper edge clean because of not using protectors.

WASHING REFRIGERATOR

Warm water and baking soda is the best washing compound for the refrigerator. After the soda scrubbing, clean the porcelain with clean water and wipe dry.

NEW TASTE THRILL

For a brand-new taste thrill, try spreading the tops of cup cakes with your favorite jam and sprinkling with cocoanut or nuts.

The bank kept on lending for harvesting and feeding, because I carried out my contracts and kept my credit good. You remember, son, we sold out in 1919 for—cash, and were able to retire. Are Text Books Changed Too Frequently In Quebec?

W. P. PERCIVAL, M.A., Ph.D.
Director of Protestant Education for the Province of Quebec.

Many citizens of Quebec are convinced that, in the Protestant schools, text books are changed too frequently. The former practice of the Protestant Committee was to make changes once every four years when necessary in the interest of educational efficiency. This practice has been altered during the past few years, partly because of the prevailing depression, as it was not considered advisable to effect changes that would bring undue financial hardship upon people during a period of crisis. Consequently, though the course of study has been altered materially to suit modern needs, the text books have been affected as little as possible.

The greatest recent change in the text books used in the Protestant schools has been in English where the treatment of the subject has been vivified and advantage taken of the numerous new texts that are specially suitable for children. This change has not been forced upon School Boards. History likewise has been vitalized, the dull chronicles of wars and dynasties and endless lists of dates being replaced in the junior grades by stories written specially from the children's point of view that make people and movements live for them.

The large print, the quality and colour of the paper of modern books in themselves demand that consideration be given to a revision as a means of saving the pupils' eyes. The attractive make-up appeals to the children. The illustrations are splendid and the modern three and four colour process charms them. The simplicity of the language enables pupils to read without difficulty and the attention given to method of writing and child psychology commends itself alike to those who recommend the recent publications and to the pupils who profit by them.

In some of the quadrennial revisions, the alterations in text books have effected only a small percentage of those on the authorized list. In some cases not more than five or six percent of substitutions has been made. That rate of quadrennial revision would be just about sufficient to prevent one generation from studying any of the books its grandfathers used. Such a statement reveals the conservatism rather than the radicalism of the Province in this respect. Fortunately, however, all the changes have not been made at this slow pace. With such reluctance are text books dropped, however, that readers may be surprised to learn that sons and daughters are now studying from a number of text books from which the parents learned thirty or more years ago.

Old Books Still Used

Such a statement immediately reveals the other side of the problem. Changes may not be frequent enough, and criticism on this score is much more valid than on that of the frequency of the alterations. The only justification for the retention of a book is its kind or its excellence. Caesars "De Bello Gallico" has been written for almost two thousand years and still serves a purpose. Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" will probably be read two thousand years hence. Not all the books retained for a long time, however, can be justified so easily. Modern editions even of these texts have advantages over the old.

It is not reasonable to keep books on the course of study after they have lost their usefulness. As new ones are published that prove their worth and as the old ones become out-moded, substitution becomes inevitable if the school system is to be kept up-to-date. That changes have not been too drastic may be seen by the fact that over forty books on the present list have been used by teachers and children for the past twelve years or longer.

Money spent for text books is a small part of the cost of education. The annual expenditure upon education in the Protestant schools generally ranges between $40 and $100 per pupil, depending upon the grade and the locality. The cost of the authorized text books varies with the Grades and the options selected. The use of some of the books extends over two years so that each year should be considered as bearing its share of the expense.

These tools with which children work are just as important as those with which adults labour. How extravagant it would be to waste time and effort by using tools that would be less effective than others which are available! And how much money could be saved in a year for any child by such folly? Fifty cents? Two dollars? Would the saving be worth while? How much would children lose by such penuriousness? By whom would the saving be made? It would certainly not be by the parent who wishes to provide his child with new books. If the family automobile should be changed every year or two, as some people contend; if the tools with which men work and household utensils are often exchanged in the interests of efficiency, it it hardly reasonable to expect that the instruments that the child works with for a year should be retained merely that they may be handed down from parent to child or from an older to a younger member of the family. The appearance, even, of such second hand articles, may not conduce to the pupil's respect either for the subject or the battered book.

School Fees In Quebec

Children cannot be kept from the elementary schools in this Province because of the inability of parents to pay school feels, though School Boards must satisfy themselves of the justice of claims for exemption before granting them. In the same way, School Boards may also provide text books free to indigent pupils. These are wise provisions of the school law in order that children may obtain their educational birthright.

The cost of text books is as favourite a topic of censure as the frequent change. As in another Province of the Dominion the cost to parents is not at great as it is here, there is little wonder that the prices of school books in Quebec is not understood. "Why the difference?" is frequently asked. The answer is that in Quebec the full cost must be met by each purchaser. This is not always so in the Province with which the comparison is made. There the government, in some cases, pays the cost of authorship, composition, photographs and the "cuts" from which they are printed. The parent then is called upon merely to pay the cost of printing and distribution. But the cost must be met in both instances. In Quebec it is a personal charge for value received and ceases when not required as such. In the other case, it is charged partly upon the public revenue.

Relief Work Carried Out By Society

St. Vincent de Paul Group Of Valleyfield Aids Needy Families

At the regular meeting of Valleyfield Council on Wednesday evening several reports from the St. Vincent de Paul Society were brought up and discussed. In February, 112 families, making up a total of 566 persons, were given assistance by the Society; heating fuel was supplied to 52 families; a total of $2,519.29 was expended, of which amount $115 was paid out as rent. In March, 106 families, making a total of 538 persons, were given relief. Heating fuel was furnished to 47 families; a total of $2,126.27 was spent, of which $1,178.95 went towards provisions, $841.32 for heating, and $106 for rent. The reports were referred to the Finance Department.

Applications from Lepage & Frère and Edmond Langevin for renewal of pool room licences were read and referred to the Chief of Police for report. If the reports prove favorable then the licences will be granted. Quite a discussion resulted when Ald. Miron and Ald. Larin started on the "slot machine" question. The latter alderman asked whether the city council had the power to cancel a hotel licence when gambling apparatus was found on the premises. Ald. Miron replied that the question of hotel licences rests with the Liquor Commission, but in the event such apparatus was found, the Chief of Police had the power to seize it. Ald. Laroche stated that if the council was unable to take measures against the hotels, then the restaurants should likewise remain undisturbed by intervention of the aldermen. The Chief of Police is required to investigate the premises of restaurants before reporting to the council, and, of course, if gambling apparatus is found, a permit is not granted.

A request from different merchants having places of business along St. Laurent St. was read and discussed. Protesting against the by-law prohibiting parking along St. Laurent St., they asked that a parking limit of 20 to 30 minutes be set. During the discussion Mayor Billette suggested that parking be permitted on the north side of the street, for a distance running from about 25 feet up the street as far as the corner of Chaussée St. It was decided that the latter suggestion should be followed.

Request from J. O. Clermont Ltd., asking that Napoleon St. be repaired, also that a hydrant be placed on that street, was read and referred to the engineer for report, on request of Ald. Lebeuf.

Request from Anthime Campagna, for a building permit to construct a store on the corner of Danis and Dion Sts. was read. Ald. Lebeuf and Touchette gave some information on the matter. Ald. Cholette was opposed to granting the request, and Ald. Laroche agreed with the discussion put forward by Ald. Cholette. The matter was tabled for further consideration.

Request from Hercule Remi, Boulevard du Hâvre, for permit to construct an outside staircase, was granted.

Request from Pierre Rochefort for a construction permit for a yacht house on Boulevard du Hâvre, was granted. The yacht house was built over a year ago.

Water examination report for the previous week showed the water condition to be favorable, except for one day.

Restaurant licence requested by Alex. Proulx was ordered set aside, as the report sent in by the Chief of Police proved to be unfavorable. Restaurant licenses were granted Messrs. Josaphat Amyot, Télesphore Rochefort and Geo. Leduc, and F. Xavier.

Report by the clerk stating that Wilfrid Daignault had been elected by acclamation in Champlain Ward, replacing Ald. Ladéroute, who had resigned, was read and filed.

Report by the engineer on the cost of installation of water and sewerage system in the Agricultural Building on the Exhibition Grounds, was read and referred to the Finance Department. The cost of laying the pipes through the lane would be $1,400 for sewerage and $650 for water; for laying the pipes through the lots, $400 for sewerage and $70 for water.

The treasurer was authorized to make the following changes on the valuation roll: from Dame Vve. Aldéric Gendron to Z. Perron; from Dame Vve. Aldéric Gendron to Paul Gendron.

Report on the claim sent in by Wilfrid Lebeuf for reinmbursement by the city was discussed. It was decided that he could not lay the responsibility for damages to his property on the city. It was moved by Ald. Touchette, seconded by Ald. Lebeuf, that Mr. Lebeuf be reimbursed his expenses. Those voting in favor of the motion were: Ald. Monette, Lebeuf, Touchette and Larin; against, Ald. Mallette, Laroche, Cholette and Miron. Mayor Billette cast his vote contrary to the motion, and thus the motion was rejected.

A letter from the Fire Commissioner of the Province regarding improvement of fire-fighting apparatus, was tabled, pending report on the grant the government may allow toward the $1,500 necessary to make the changes.

Ald. Touchette remarked that recently the young Ethier boy had called upon him soliciting donations for the softball club. Some time ago the council refused a request that this person be allowed to solicit donations. It was decided that the matter should be placed in the hands of the Chief of Police, in order to bring the young man before the Recorder.

It was decided that the tender for a Chevrolet used car at $550 should be accepted. The tender was submitted by Garage Z. Perron.

Grants were made to the Ste. Cécile Workshop, $50; Sacré-Coeur Workshop, $25; Bellerive Workshop, $25.

Immortality

What a grand incentive to growth, development, and service is the thought that life is to go on for ever—that we are not acquiring knowledge for this state of existence only, but, that every truth of God which we learn, every experience through which, in the Divine leading, we are called to pass, has its part in the building up of a character which shall never die.—Francis Thompson.

SCIENCE ADVISES AGAINST MEALS LOW IN NEEDED "BULK"

Reports ALL-BRAN Supplies This Dietary Adjunct

Scientific tests have shown that meals which miss the proper "bulk" tend to cause common constipation. This condition causes discomfort, and may lead to headaches, loss of appetite, even serious disease.

Avoid these faulty meals by adding Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to your menus. It supplies generous "bulk" in convenient form. This absorbs moisture, and gently exercises and cleanses the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and contains iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is often more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables as it does not break down within the body. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN may be served as a cereal with milk or cream. Sprinkle over soups, salads or other cereals. Or cook into appetizing muffins, breads, waffles, etc. It adds a delicious nut-sweet flavor to your recipes.

How much better than taking patent medicines—sometimes harmful! ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Sleep For Pep

I asked one of the most vivacious women I ever knew what she attributed her pep to. She took an interest in the church. She did a lot of reading. She was always willing and ready to help in the preparation of any social activity and if an emergency arises she can always be depended upon. I was quite surprised but I readily understand when she replied "sleep". When she was a young girl she told me her parents insisted that she have plenty of sleep. It became a habit with her which has stuck with her to this day. She goes out a lot, it is true, but she makes it a point if at all possible to avoid two late nights in a row.

It is easy to see why sleep and plenty of it is so important. Throughout the human body there is a network of fibres. They are nerve fibres and each one is connected directly or indirectly with the brain. Whenever a part of the body is touched the brain gets the message immediately. It is dispatched along the nerve fibre system. When a noise is made the brain gets the message again. The drum of the ear vibrates and another message is sent along. The louder or sharper the noise the more impact is given the message and the brain receives a shock.

When there is an impulse to lift the arm, up goes a message and back comes an order to the muscles concerned to do the work. One can imagine how many thousands of messages are transmitted in a day and how tired this whole system is by the time night arrives. If one does not stop and give this human telegraph machine a rest the fibres or wires soon wear out and a breakdown occurs. On the other hand the more rest they get the more sensitive and alert they become. The messages go up and down faster and you are quick to "catch-on" to things. It is sleep that gives the nervous system the rest it needs . . . deep undisturbed sleep. Try it for a week and see the effect it has on you. As the lady referred to above said, sleep becomes a matter of habit. You enjoy getting lots of it and you will soon find it means a lot to you.

Made Religious Rite of The Brushing of Teeth

The ancient Indo-Europeans of 1700 B.C. made a religious rite of the brushing of teeth, according to Dr. George V. Bobrinsky, assistant professor of Sanskrit at the University of Chicago.

These early Indians had no tooth pastes, but they brushed the teeth thoroughly, he said.

For a tooth brush, they used a twig taken from a living tree, a species of fig tree being recommended for the purpose, he continued. It was imperative that the bark remains on the twig. The "tooth brush" could be used but once.

There was a long list of days when the rite must either be omitted or performed in a different manner, he said, and on such days the cleansing of the mouth by rinsing with twelve mouthfuls of water was substituted.

A prayer to be delivered before and after the brushing of the teeth was translated as "O Lord of the Forest, grant us long life, strength, glory, progeny, cattle, riches and knowledge."

Stamps

Dancers on Stamps

On the stamps of Indo-China is shown a picture of a Cambodian ballerina executing the movements of a dance to the goddess Siva.

Congo in 1931 and 1932 issued a series of stamps on which were shown not only the dancers but also the natives who supplied the weird music and eerie chants to which the dervishes stepped. Two natives are shown playing flutes on one stamp; two others producing music on stringed instruments are seen on a second, while the third stamp depicts two drummers thumping on tom-toms.

Belgian East Africa used dancers for the vignettes of several postage stamps.

On a stamp issued in Brazil in 1933 to commemorate the visit of the Argentine President was pictured a figure executing an allegorical dance to represent feeling of goodwill between the two South American republics.

When Czechoslovakia celebrated the centenary of the composition of the national anthem two stamps were printed showing a pastoral scene in which a group of peasants can be seen dancing to the accompaniment of native musicians. The first words of the national song are printed directly above and complete the unique setting.

The province of Morocco in northern Africa contributed to the collection of stamps featuring dancers with two issues in 1928. The first stamp of the series shows a part of a ceremony in which Bedouins pay respect to their sheikh or over-lord. On another stamp of this set is a scene delineating a Moorish fete.

On the adhesives that commemorated the four hundredth anniversary of the Spanish conquest of Peru three separate phases of the dances of the now extinct Parakas, Chimu and Inca tribes were depicted.

Other countries that illustrate their postal issues with scenes of dances and dancers are Jaipur, Macao and Papua.

THE YOUNG CANADIAN'S CLUB

NEWS from AROUND the WORLD

So far as Canadians are concerned, the most important event of the week has been Mr. Dunning's budget.

A budget is eagerly and anxiously awaited because in his speech the Minister of Finance reviews the financial state of the Dominion, expresses his ideas of the future, and tells the people what taxes they will have to pay during the next year.

So far as the state of the Dominion is concerned, it may be described as presenting slow but consistent improvement. In the year just closed the Dominion had a deficit of more than one hundred and sixty-two million dollars, and the national debt has been increased.

Mr. Dunning was quite frank, and did not attempt to paint the picture in rosy colours. Agriculture was the dark spot, but he had hopes of improvement. For the next year Mr. Dunning has no hope of balancing his budget. He thinks, however, that the deficit will not amount to more than one hundred million dollars.

The new taxes are so spread that almost every one will be affected, even if only indirectly. Manufacturing firms and other big businesses have already expressed unqualified disapproval of the budget, believing that business will be further hampered by its provisions.

An attempt has been made to help the farmer by reducing the duty on agricultural implements and arranging matters that small cars will be a little cheaper. The trade treaty with the United States has already had an appreciable effect upon farmers' produce, and Mr. Dunning said that the Empire treaties would be revised in the Fall.

Naval Building

Great Britain and the United States are busily increasing their navies. The British Admiralty has announced that thirty-eight new warships of various sizes are to built this year, and Parliament has been asked to sanction heavy expenditures upon the Navy.

Congress in Washington has been asked to vote more than five hundred million dollars for the construction of two new battleships and other items.

The outlook all over the world is so very grave that one official who returned recently from a tour of Europe said that Britain would almost certainly be involved in a major war.

Italian Victories

Cables from Ethiopia report continued Italian advances, the march to Addis Ababa being almost entirely unopposed.

Acting on the advice of British advisers Haile Selassie has moved his capital to Gore, situated in the mountainous and unoccupied territory. These British advisers, of course, were not sent by the British government, but appear to be soldiers of ability upon whom the Emperor reposes some confidence.

It was reported from Rome that the Emperor of Ethiopia had sued for peace, but the Emperor officially denied that he had made any overtures to Italy.

Ethiopia, he said, would fight to the bitter end, and he pointed out that he was fighting the battle of collective security, for if he was finally defeated, and the League did not come to his aid, it would mean the end of the League of Nations.

Britain has realized this ever since the war began, and for that reason has been the driving force behind the League in the adoption of sanctions against Italy.

War Not Won

Despite the numerous despatches of victories and the capture of important cities and towns, the war in Ethiopia is by no means over and the Italians are still very far from victory if the Emperor definitely decides to defend his country to the bitter end.

The Italians have made spectacular progress, but the Ethiopian armies can take to the mountains and from there conduct a campaign that would prove extremely harrassing and expensive to the Italian armies.

It is understood that the Emperor is pinning his trust in the rainy season and the resulting effect upon the Italian machines and men. The rains would make the country almost impassable for tanks and heavy lorries and other army machines, while the climate is such that Europeans are seriously affected by it.

The Emperor realizes, and probably his advisers have kept him aware, that the longer the war continues the more difficult will be Mussolini's position at Rome. It is reported that Italian commerce has felt the pinch of economic sanctions and the people are wondering how long the war will last.

French Elections

The League adjourned until the result of the French elections became known and the new Government, supposing there is a change, was able to instruct its delegates to the League councils.

Owing to the peculiar manner in which French elections are held, no definite result is known as yet, but it has become evident that the swing has been toward the Left, and that the Socialist, if not Community, party will hold the balance in the new Chamber.

In Europe the extreme Conservatives form the extreme Right wing and the Communists form the extreme Left; between these two are moderates of all kinds, who are classed as Centrists, Left or Right Centrists, and so on. For example, Mr. Bennett probably would be Right, Mr. Stevens would be left Centrist, Mr. King might be Centrist, Mr. Woodsworth be Left., and Mr. Douglas might be still further Left. These are only approximations of course, but they serve to show how complex are party politics.

In France the situation is still further complicated by the fact that every person of leadership abilities has his own particular following, and there are groups that exist for various reasons.

The net result is a multiplicity of candidates and when the election results are known it becomes a work of finesse and careful manoeuvring to select a Prime Minister who can command the confidence of the Chamber. Moreover, a man may be selected as Premier, only to find that a group of disgruntled members have succeeded in adding enough votes to their numbers to defeat him.

Party politics in France and most European countries is a very different matter to party politics in Canada.

It is unfortunate that the bravery and resource shown by Hon. Michael Dwyer, Nova Scotia's Minister of Mines, did not prevent him from being the object of an attack in the Provincial Legislature.

The Leader of the Opposition made some rather bitter remarks when he was asking how it came about that the mine at Moose River had not been properly inspected.

Reggie McNamara

Taking A Little To Eat Between Races

Iron Man Reggie McNamara sits down to a little refreshment between the sprints and jams of one of New York's big six day bicycle races at Madison Square Gardens.

By AL. PARSLEY

These guys are tough. To be a six day bike rider you have to possess more nerve and stamina to the pound than in perhaps any other sport where men compete to win, whether it is team sports or lone handed work.

Whirling around the plank saucer at anywhere from thirty to forty miles per hour, all manner of hazards creep in. And every rider has his turn. Bad spills come the way of every bike jockey sooner or later. Only some are worse than others.

You have to be tough enough to stand the gaff in the bicycle riding game. The ones than can't stand it just quit. The others keep on taking their bumps and spills. Broken collar bones, fractured wrists and forearms, cracked shoulders and ribs, face lacerations, gashes about the elbows, hips and knees—it's all in the game.

Looking about for some first-hand information on the subject of injuries to six day bicycle riders the writer sought out Reggie McNamara, world champion.

It was during a lull in the racing. One set of riders were grooming up for the heavy night's sprinting and jamming which was to come while their partners carried on for a while, coasting around the big oval.

A Coat of Brown

Reggie McNamara was lying stripper on one of the work benches while Fred Bullivant, the head-trainer was rubbing him from head to foot with a sticky brown fluid.

"What's that, Fred?" your curious reporter asked.

"Peterion of Iodine," explained Fred. "You see it takes the soreness out of their legs. The second day of the race is always the toughest. Some of these fellows have legs which are so sore you cannot even lay a finger on them. They fairly ache. But by Tuesday night, with careful handling it'll be all gone. They will begin to roll their legs. They'll be airy on their feet, just like a fully conditioned race-horse.

And Peterion of iodine does all that. We're not even quite sure of the spelling, but it is just another inside secret of six day bike racing.

George Harvey gave us a knock down to Reggie McNamara as the champ lay contentedly fanning himself with a towel.

His Worst Accident

"Been told that you've had a lot of bad spills and accidents in bike riding," the reporter commenced, "won't you tell us something about it?" And then Reggie McNamara after many searching questions gave us plenty.

"Yes, I've had many bad accidents, the worst of all was back in 1917. It was in November that year I was training for the Boston Six Day. Sprinting high on the end bank my handle bar broke loose, just like Lew Elder, only I didn't go over the top. I crashed into a six by four upright beam. The beam didn't break, but my jaw did, in three places. Besides that I had a very bad skull fracture and a broken nose."

Reggie did not tell it all in sequence like that but that's what he said when it was pieced together. On further questioning we learned a lot of interesting things about Reggie McNamara and about Six Day bike racing.

Came Back to Win

Following his injury at Boston in November he was out of riding for six months. His jaws were wired up for two months straight, but he was back in action in December '18 and won the New York race at the Old Madison Square Garden partnered with Jack Magin.

McNamara is not an American by birth. He was born in Sydney, New South Wales, in 1888 which makes him around 43 years old right now. Reggie does not care to boast about it too much but as far as he knows, and Willie Spencer knows, and George Harbey knows, he's the oldest living bike rider still competing in six day races.

He is considered by many sport authorities who study these things, as the most durable and courageous athlete competing in any branch of sport at the present time.

Ridden Over 100 Day Races

Altogether he has ridden in 100 Six Day races. He rode his first race in 1906 when he was eighteen years old. He had ridden in all the bike racing centres of Europe including Paris, Berlin, Brussels, and Dartmuth, Sydney and Melbourne in Australia, New York, Chicago, Boston, Detroit, San Francisco, Buffalo and Kansas City in the United States. Besides this he has competed in outdoor racing in England and many other countries where there is no organized Six Day racing.

He is married and has two children and makes his home in Newark, N.J. The two children are girls attending High School. So there is no hope of another Six Day Bike Rider there to keep up the family tradition.

Won With Broken Ribs

Ging back to injuries McNamara has broken his collar bone four times altogether. In the Chicago race in 1928, he finished the race with a fractured collar bone riding two days with his shoulder strapped in tight and his arm practically useless. Partnered with Charles Winters he rode second in the race.

He rode in the New York Six Day Race in 1925, finishing the last two days with two broken ribs, and won the race.—His partner was Pete Linari.

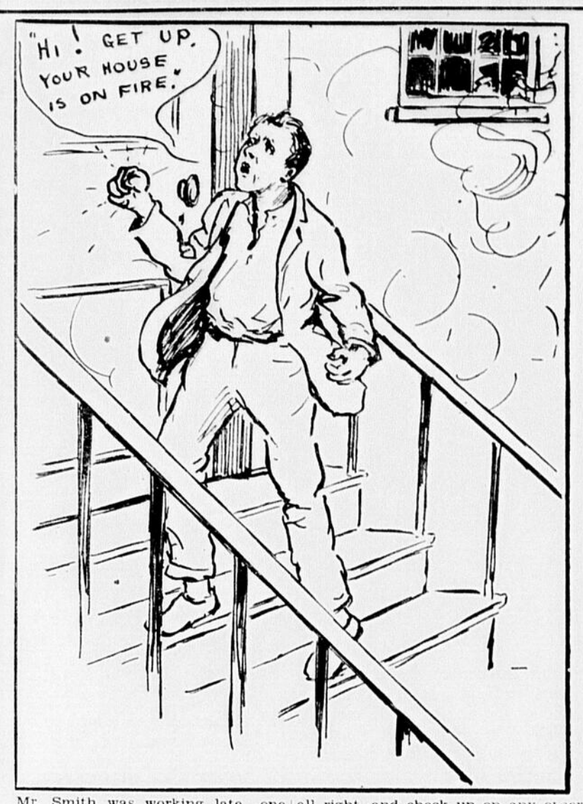
Bicycle riders seldom break their legs, McNamara told us. It seems that because they have their feet strapped to their pedals in the stirrups which serve as toe grips, the accidents always happen to the ribs, collar bones, arms and face.

Board Burns Painful

The most regular thing in falls is for riders to suffer bad burns as they slide down the boards. They wear such light clothing, extremely short trunks and jerseys that these offer no protection whatever. Accidents can hardly be avoided and are seldom the cause of careless or foul riding. The riders whirl around the boards at such a break-neck speed and are so gingerly balanced on their two wheeled buggies, that nothing can save them once they touch another's wheel. A blow-out is absolutely fatal.

Sometimes when not going too fast a slow leak will not cause a mishap as the rider can coast down to the flat.

Yes, it's a tough game, this bicycle riding racket. But the boys seem to stay with it. McNamara has no idea of quitting, not for a while anyway.



Mr. Smith was working late one night at his office. When he was leaving the night watchman came to him and said,

"Mr. Smith, I'm worried about your house. Last night I dreamed it was on fire and had it not been for a man passing who woke you and your family up you would all have been burnt. When you go home tonight please be sure that your furnace is all right, and check up on any other possible source of danger."

Next morning when Mr. Smith came to work he gave word to fire the night watchman. Why?

Charlie Chipmunk's ADVENTURES

By MARGARET DOUGLAS

The Topsy Turvey Party

Miss Buffles never said a word when Mrs. Bunny brushed out her curls and washed her dear little face for she was going to tea to the Chipmunks and she was so happy she just kept on laughing even when a tiny piece of soap got into her lovely blue eyes.

"And here's your clean hankies, darling," said kind Mrs. Bunny.

"The plain one is to wipe your dear little nose and the pretty one just to show off."

"I'm going to tea to Charlie's—I'm going to tea to Charlie's," sang Miss Buffles while Mrs. Bunny got up on a chair to pin the using hankie to the little girl's best frock, while the showing off hankie went into the sweet little pocket where all its four corners with tiny silk roses could be seen.

"There, now, you're all ready," said Mrs. Bunny.

"Come here till I tie your sash, Bella—now, you must take great care of Miss Buffles and remember your manners, my dear."

"Yes, ma-ma," said Bella, jumping up and down. "Thank you very much for the nice tea party, Mrs. Chipmunk. If you please, can we go now, ma-ma?"

"Yes, now be good, polite children and don't eat too much, and stick out your littlest finger when you're holding your tea cup and don't break anything, and don't quarrel and don't forget you're little ladies and don't—"

Mrs. Bunny stopped for breath and then began again—but there was no one to hear her for Miss Buffles and Bella were walking primly away down the road, trying hard not to skip and jump and feeling very proud in their new muslin frocks.

"There's Willie Wolf and Sally Squirrel, all dressed up," said Bella waving to her friends. "We'd better hurry, Miss Buffles."

They started to run, and poor Miss Buffles fell into a puddle of water and spoiled her nice new dress and began to cry. Up went up all the windows and out popped all the heads.

"Dear me!" said Mr. Squirrel crossly, putting on big spectacles upside down.

"Stop crying, little girl!"

"It's easy to say that," shouted Mr. Fox, making a face at Mrs. Squirrel.

Somebody shouted, "Hang up the little dear on the clothes line for a little bittie."

"No!" roared Mr. Sheep. "You're all wrong! The sweet child should be rolled up and down the hill where the grass is nice and warm."

"No!" screamed all the mothers shaking all their fists at all the daddies, and everyone began to speak at once and nobody noticed that Miss Buffles was all right again and walking primly up Nibblenuts Avenue with all the other children, for a kind little breeze had dried the nice frock and a baby sunbeam had ironed out the flounces and the pretty sash and kissed Miss Buffles' tears away.

When the little guests went into Charlie's house, they stared and stared and wondered what was the matter.

For the tea was set out under the table and all the chairs were upside down and Charlie's suit was outside on and everything was so queer the children all laughed out loud.

"It's a tousp turvey tea party," cried Charlie, standing on his head and what fun they all had, getting under the table, back to back, all their mouths open, while mother and father Chipmunk fed them with lovely chocolate eggs and sponge cake.

Then they had all kinds of games and when at last it was time to go home all the children said the topsy turvey party was the best one they had ever been at.

STARS, STAMPS AND BIRDS

Mercury

As the twilight deepens Mercury will become visible about 20 degrees above the western horizon. Mercury is the smallest of all the planets. It occupies an orbit which is closest to the sun and its orbital period or year is equal to about eighty-eight of our days. Its diameter is only about three thousand miles compared to the earth's eight thousand, roughly speaking. The mass of Mercury is but one-twentieth that of the earth. Its light-reflecting power is very low, which indicates that it has little or no atmosphere. Because of its proximity to the sun Mercury receives sunlight and heat at an intensity between six and seven times that received by the earth.

In South Bavaria is a clock made entirely of matches—26875 of them. It took 2 years to make it but that is nothing to the time it keeps. It is one of the most accurate in the town.

The Strange Affair of the Blacksmith's Dog.

By Leslie G. Barnard

Often I have pictured to myself old Jonathan Ladwell sitting upright in bed, his hands outstretched as if to feel and apprehend the menace of the night, and trembling a little in the pale wash of moonlight.

True, the house was old and big, and given to creakings and groanings—but not on a windless night such as this! There, again! Some heavy body crossing the floor downstairs.

Someone was in the house besides himself!

For a moment helpless tears mounted to his eyes, the moisture of senile self-pity. He was old, and the scrapings and savings of a lifetime were not fair spoil for the young and vigorous, against whom he was defenceless. He was a fool to let young Martin take the dogs, and go hunting. He wondered if he had not been too lenient with young Martin, the favourite nephew who lived with him, and who as recompense, would in the end inherit from him. Well, well, young men must have their diversions.

Listen! There it was again—creaking—on the stairs! No, down on the lower floor still. Perhaps, perhaps this marauder would be content to remain below, where there was small plunder.

He must not come up! That ran through his brain, inducing action. Here, upstairs, in the next room, which was his office, and so near old Jonathan as he slept, was the only bank he believed in. The marauder must not come up. Once up, of what avail the scanty, if desperate, strength of age? Age must have at least the advantage of the stairs. Old Jonathan Ladwell pivotted on the bed, letting his old shanks down over the side, until his feet padded noiselessly on the floor. He shook as with an ague. Mosgrin's words rang in his ears: "You're an old fool to keep your money in the house. Some day we'll hear Jonathan Ladwell has been found in bed with his throat cut!" Mosgrin, the blacksmith, said that. It was Mosgrin who had made the lower floor secure with bars.

Desperation urged Ladwell on. From a drawer, stealthily, he took a revolver. He held it as one afraid of weapons. He crossed a pale pool of moonlight, his hand tightening about the revolver. He wondered whether Martin had left it loaded. He almost hoped the ammunition had all been expended on the crows. A timorous old fellow was Jonathan Ladwell, and as much afraid of the menace in his hand as of that below stairs.

The wall of the staircase was fortunately dark; the hallway below held a gleam of moonlight. Ladwell, peering cautiously over, saw a shadow waver, obscuring the gleam, resolving itself into a man's figure, stairward bound!

His fright found tongue.

"Go 'way!" he shrilled. "Go away. I can see you! I can see you, and I'll fire!" His unaccustomed hand nervously finger the trigger. There was a flash, the sound of fleeing footsteps, of a banging door, of a runner on gravel outside. Old Ladwell was alone in the house, a shaking, paralyzed figure, too fearful to appraise the extent of his victory.

For a long while he stood clutching at the rail. Then courage began to return; he even managed a light, and cautiously examined the revolver. He had fired the last shot! Well, the scoundrel would not return to-night. And to-morrow he would get it reloaded. He did not know where Martin kept the ammunition, nor was he sure how one went about reloading the thing. He would take it to Mosgrin in the morning. He started suddenly, trembling.

From far in the distance, down at The Corners, came the sound of a dog howling. That was Mosgrin's dog! He knew it, and shuddered. Once the dog had been his, a much-feared creature of huge proportions and slavering jaws. He had given it to Mosgrin. "I'll be glad to have it," Mosgrin said. "All the tramps in the district come by The Corners!"

Mosgrin was the only man who could safely handle the beast. The fear of it was great in all our countryside, and to hear him break silence in the night, was sufficient to set more than us village children shivering in our beds.

Sister Susie Says

Make Pretty and Useful Things With Cellophane

There is so much cellophane coming into the home these days that it was almost to be expected that some curious-minded and one might say inventive persons would seek ways to put it to some artistic uses. It is such appealing looking material with its clear, clean transparency and now that it comes in colour too, it is even more intriguing. Not long ago I saw a belt made from it and I saw too, that it is not so very hard to make one, nor are napkin rings, bracelets and many other things of your choosing.

The material necessary for the belt is some thin white paper, not tissue paper, colourless cellophane and either red or green cellophane, which ever you prefer and a little adhesive tape. The thin white paper is necessary as a belt takes rather a lot of cellophane if made entirely of that material. The paper is overlaid with cellophane and it gives it a most attractive sheen. For smaller articles such as napkin rings and bracelets you can use cellophane entirely and it has the advantage of being elastic enough to slip on or off the napkin or wrist without fastening.

The coloured cellophane can be obtained at most stationers and if you wish to economize you can save and ask your friends to save for you the cellophane that comes wrapped around the various parcels they receive. If any of your pieces are much creased, smooth them out by ironing them with a rather cool iron, under a dry cloth. Do not let the iron touch the cellophane.

In the making of the belt the first step is to cut out a number of oblongs or slips, both of white paper and of cellophane in each colour. The paper slips must measure 3¾ inches long by 1¾ inches wide and the cellophane slips 2½ inches long by 1⅜ inches wide. The best way to do this is to cut a pattern from some stiff cardboard for both the cellophane and paper as the slips should not vary in size.

Take a piece of paper and a piece of cellophane. Centre the cellophane on the paper so that the margins on both sides are equal as are the ends. Then with the paper uppermost fold them lengthwise. This is to find the lengthwise centre. After creasing it open out. Then fold in each long edge to the crease just made. Then refold the centre crease so that the two folded edges lie together and the slip has four thicknesses each of cellophane and paper.

Keeping the slip thus folded, do exactly the same thing across it. Find the centre crease as you did before and fold the edges in. Now you have a thick and quite small oblong. All the outside edges of the cellophane are hidden away inside and the outside is completely covered.

Locking the Slips Together

After preparing a number of these oblongs you can start putting them together. You should have an equal number of white ones and coloured ones (green or red whichever the colour of your cellophane). In your left hand hold a prepared white slip by its centre fold with the two halves of the open end slightly apart. Now insert each half or prong into the centre opening of a prong in the white slip. Push the coloured slip through the white one as far as it will go. The two together will form a right angle or L shape.

In the same way insert another white slip through the coloured from the inside of the right angle. This looks wrong when doing it but it is the right way. Then put another coloured into the second white slip and so on alternating white and coloured. But remember—when locking in a slip always put it through the centre space. If you put it into a side one, it goes in easily but a fold prevents it from coming through the other side. Each slip as it is inserted locks the previous one.

To finish the belt of course there must be a buckle. Choose a pretty one. It is attached by wrapping it round with adhesive tape.

Complete Text Of Fisher Speech In Gleaner Next Week

The Gleaner had hoped to print the complete speech given in the Legislature on Tuesday by Martin B. Fisher, M.L.A., in this issue of the Gleaner. Rather than print a resumé of the address today, which was all we would be able to do, we have chosen to hold it over until next week and give our readers the advantage of reading the complete address as delivered in the Legislature by Mr. Fisher.
