The Executive Council of the Province of Quebec is understood to be convened for Tuesday, the 12th instant.

MINISTERS.

The Honorable Mr. Chauveau, Premier, and Hon. Mr. Beaubien, Commissioner of Crown Lands, are expected to arrive in town on Friday from Montreal. The Hon. Mr. Archambault, Commissioner of Public Works, arrived in town this morning, and took possession of his office in the Parliament Buildings. All the Ministers may be looked for by Monday next.

It is rumored that the Quebec Parliament will be convened for the 10th December next, for despatch of business. The subject will no doubt come up for consideration by the Quebec Executive Council at its next meeting on Tuesday.

With every disposition to tolerate the almost Spartan simplicity and frugality affected in the sacred and mysterious enclosure of Spencer Wood, we cannot entirely repress our sympathy with those who sigh as they recall the sparkling and joyous festivities of a bygone period. In Mr. DeGaspé's clever and witty book, "Les Anciens Canadiens," our youthful readers will find pictures of our life which contrast sadly, and not wisely, with modern Canadian manners and customs; and even men of the stirring times that preceded and followed the Sydenham Act, can look back with pleasure upon days when the Castle of St. Lewis was the focus of wit, beauty, and high placed hospitality. Are those days forever fled? Have we so degenerated from royal traditions and courtly courtesies, that we are to bid an everlasting farewell to those happy reunions which brought the governed and governor into kindly relations and pleasant intercourse? These remarks are suggested by the perusal of an article in the Montreal Gazette, which we transfer to our columns.

In the Official Gazette of Saturday last, a letter from the Colonial Secretary to Lord Monck is published, respecting the wearing of foreign decorations by British subjects. A series of regulations for the obtaining of Her Majesty's consent to be allowed to wear foreign decorations and medals are also published. Permission to wear a foreign medal cannot be granted to a British subject unless such medal is bestowed for military or naval services performed by the command or with the sanction of her Majesty, but no permission is necessary for accepting a foreign medal if such medal is not to be worn.

His Grace the Archbishop of Quebec, accompanied by His Lordship the Bishop of Kingston, and attended by the Very Rev. Grand Vicar Casaux, and the Rev. Mr. Bonneau, military chaplain, left yesterday afternoon to assist at the 50th anniversary of the ordination of the Reverend Messire J. F. Gagnon, curé of Berthier. Montreal papers announce the death, in that city, of Charles De Cazes, Esq., late M.P., for the counties of Richmond and Wolfe. The deceased gentleman was a native of France, and was descended from an ancient and honorable family of Brittany. He emigrated to Canada in 1854, and acquired landed property in the neighborhood of Danville, Eastern Townships, where he resided until his last illness. He was a gentleman of courteous manners and blameless life, and was much beloved by those among whom he lived. He leaves two sons, settled in Canada, and two daughters, married in his native country.

The colony of Victoria, away down at the antipodes, has just indulged in a costly luxury, for the only purpose, that we can discern, of spending its spare cash. A year ago it had a large surplus, and hit on the ingenious idea of investing it in a line-of-battle ship, intended to protect the Victorian coast, but against whom we fail to discern—perhaps the "Juncos." The Nelson, the vessel purchased, is now on its passage to the colony, and takes out a large quantity of surplus stores and ammunition, in order that the happy Victorians may indulge in the further luxury of blazing away to their hearts' content. Their Government Securities were recently quoted in the London market at 112 1/2 to 113 1/2. We hope that they will keep up, despite the Nelson and the ammunition.

The British Admiralty is famous for its blunders and the extravagance of its shipyards, but the work they turn out cannot be surpassed, and once in a while they build ships of enormous strength and great speed,—witness the Warrior, the Black Prince, and the Minotaur. A later and still more noticeable instance is the efficiency of the despatch vessel Helicon. She was constructed for speed, and it is certainly a high flyer. A few days ago she left the Channel squadron 60 miles west of Cape Clear, and steamed with extraordinary rapidity to Queenstown for the purpose of catching the night mail to Holyhead, running throughout at the rate of 21 knots an hour. Our American friends often boast of the speed of their vessels, but we question if they ever turned out a vessel, for war or commercial purposes, equal to the Helicon.

American and English influences, says the Tribune, violently dispute to each other the ascendancy in the Sandwich Islands. As with the death of the present childless King the royal line becomes extinct, it is a common belief that the Islands in that case will become either an English dependency, or be annexed to the United States. The latest news from the Islands indicates that the Legislature being convened to ratify a reciprocity with the United States, a great excitement was got up by the circulation of a report that the Americans intended to seize the Government of the Islands. Public opinion, however, was in favor of ratifying the treaty.

The ten thousand men, armed and equipped in Maryland by Governor Swan as a State militia, is said to be composed for the most part of men who were seasoned for service in Lee's army.

THE MEDICAL CONFERENCE.—The grand hall of the University has been occupied from ten to half past five with the session of the Medical Convention. Nearly two hundred delegates were in attendance. Dr. Sewell was called to the chair, Dr. Belleau acting secretary. The chairman opened the proceedings in an eloquent oration on the objects of the assembly. The formation of a Canadian Medical Association for the advancement of the medical sciences was unanimously adopted, and the officers were elected. The Hon. Dr. Tupper, C. B., was elected President by acclamation, and acknowledged the compliment in a brilliant speech.

The Buffalo Express has discovered a startling fact. It says: "About $50,000,000 will be added this year to the debt of the young Dominion north of us. A bad beginning in business." The Express does not tell the source of its information, but it is probably exclusive. These American papers know all about us—more indeed than we know ourselves.

The New York Herald, with wonderful candour, says the spectacle of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, "threatening in a public speech to hang the Chief Magistrate of the United States like a common malefactor, is one of the most disgraceful exhibitions of partisanship even rampant radicalism has yet made."

The Pall Mall Gazette says it is rumored that the Queen will confer the honor of knighthood on some of the leading colonists in connection with the visit of the Duke of Edinburgh to Australia.

Hereafter, two firms are to be detailed in New York to each of the theatres and other places of amusement, to be ready for any emergency. An admirable idea, which might be carried out with advantage in other places.

The Leader says that Toronto wants an Opera House, and must have one. Our contemporary says that Detroit, not much larger than Toronto, is now engaged in getting into shape an opera house company with a capital of $150,000, and that it believes $35,000 would erect and neatly furnish such a building as is required in Toronto. If the capital of the sister Province possess the talent for music that journal claims for it, the money should be forthcoming.

We have never witnessed finer eloquence than that exhibited at Messrs. Dupres and Benedict's Minstrel entertainment, at the Music Hall, last night. It is the perfection of methodized motion, and was loudly eulogized by the unusually large audience.

The grand prize of £1,200 offered by the Russian Government for the best plans for the improvement of the harbor of Odessa has been awarded to Sir Charles Hartley, engineer-in-chief of the European Danubian Commission, and brother of the late William Hartley, Esq., chamberlain to the Earl of Mansfield. There were upwards of twenty competitors.

As an illustration of how they do business in the United States Government offices, a Washington despatch says Gen. Grant positively refused to have anything to do with the unsettled claims before the War Department, and gives as a reason that these claims were pending when he came into the department; and as they were contracted under his predecessor, he cannot be supposed to know their merits. Besides he has not time to examine them. There are claims to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars upon the War Department, some of which have been standing since Mr. Cameron was Secretary of War.

THE HIMALAYA.—H. M. Steam troopship Himalaya arrived up to-day from Quarantine with a second clean Bill of Health from the Medical Superintendent at Gross Isle, which on the inspection of the Inspecting Physician of the Harbour of Quebec, Dr. Rowan, was this day duly confirmed. The Himalaya did not bring up the 60th, but will shortly embark the 23rd R. W. Fusiliers.

SIR GEORGE DUNCAN GIBB, BART.

We are following from the Dundee Daily Advertiser. Dr. Gibb was a student of the McGill University, Montreal, where he practised several years. Many of his old friends will be glad to read what follows: Sir Duncan Gibb, a well known physician in London, has been an active member of the British Association since 1859, in which year he contributed an elaborate communication before the Geological Section at Aberdeen, upon a Canadian cavern, since published as a distinct work. At the Oxford meeting in 1860, he brought forward the subject of saccharine fermentation of the milk within the breast, for the first time; and at the subsequent meetings at Manchester, Cambridge, Newcastle, Bath, Birmingham and Nottingham, he contributed various other papers on subjects chiefly connected with the physiology and structure of the larynx. He made a special report to the Association on the physiological effects of the bromide of ammonium, and introduced that substance as a remedial agent in the treatment of disease, which has now found its place in the British Pharmacopoeia.

Sir Duncan was born in Canada, was educated in the chief University at Montreal, as well as in London, Dublin, and Paris, from each of which places he holds academic degrees and honors. He is a Master of Arts and Doctor of Medicine. In consideration of his services in the cause of science, and as an illustrious Canadian, the Laval University of Quebec conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws in 1864. He is a member of many Academies and Societies in different parts of Europe and North America, as well as of most of the leading professional and scientific societies of the day. He succeeded to the ancient family baronetcy of Falkland, in Fifeshire, recently. The early history of the Gibb family is much associated with the latter Stuarts, we find "Gib of that ilk" an official at the Court of James IV., and at Flodden in 1513, where he was severely wounded. His son, Robert Gib of "Barribar," was the "familiar servant" of James V., and for his fidelity and services to the King received the grant of the title and lands of Carrisburgh, south-west of the town of Lighthgow. At 17 several sons, one of whom, John, was groom of the Bed-chamber to the long period of 40 years to James VI. (I. of England), and was knighted in 1624, receiving a grant of the lands of Kook in Fifeshire, near Dundee, for his services, and also of Brading, Isle of Wight. His son Henry was a groom of the Bedchamber to Henry, Prince of Wales, and on his death, in 1612, to James I.; he was created a baronet of Nova Scotia by Charles I. in 1634. He died without male issue, when the title went to John, a grandson of Patrick Gib, who was a younger brother of Sir George Duncan Gibb, the present baronet of Falkland. The title has been in abeyance for some years, and Sir Duncan recently established his claim to it. It was a curious circumstance in the history of this ancient family that all had residence in the immediate vicinity of the Royal Palace; and in the dining-hall of the Palace of Lighthgow is a recess in the wall which to this day is called "Rob Gib's chair."

Sir Duncan is in large practice in London; he is Physician to Westminster Hospital, and Lecturer on Forensic Medicine in the Medical School. He has been a large contributor to the medical journals and to the "Lancet," and in the latter work, he edited the medical department of the "Lancet," which he conducted with acknowledged ability and impartiality. He is an author of repute of a considerable number of essays, papers, and works on medical and scientific subjects, and is chiefly known for his researches on the throat and larynx and mechanism of the human voice, upon all of which he has thrown much light through the aid of the laryngoscope, which now form standard works that have passed through several editions, and which have given to their author a world-wide reputation.

Of other subjects that have engaged his attention, we may mention the oyster conglomeration bed at Bromley, in Kent; the generation of sounds by Canadian insects; a fossil lightning bolt; the origin of the sugar maple tree; and the discovery of the characteristic crystal of diabetic sugar.

As Sir Duncan Gibb is in the prime of life, we look forward to much further good work at his hands.

Peat in large quantities and of a superior description, has been found on the farm of Mr. John Scott, near Woodstock.

Over one hundred mechanics were discharged from the car shops of the Michigan Central Railroad on Friday last.

Thursday next, the 10th of October, has been named by the Lord Bishop of Toronto, to be observed as a day of thanksgiving for the abundant harvest.

Snow fell in St. John, King's, Westmoreland, Albert, Kent and other counties in New Brunswick on Tuesday, in some places to the depth of two inches, but disappeared quite rapidly.

LORD MONCK'S REMOVAL TO OTTAWA.

(From yesterday's Montreal Gazette.) It is understood that His Excellency the Governor General will during the present week, take up his official residence at Rideau Hall, for the remainder of his stay in this country. This is an event of interest, not only to a few Ottawa shop-keepers, but to the country generally, which has not yet learned to look with indifference, on the personal movements of the representative of our sovereign. We sincerely hope that the new Government House has been so enlarged, as to render it possible for His Excellency to discharge with pleasure to himself, those hospitable duties which are not to be despised as instruments of government. In all countries, the personal receptions of the Sovereign, or the Sovereign's immediate representative, are considered affairs of State, not secondary to any in importance; and while human nature in Canada is akin to human nature everywhere, the Queen's after ego cannot abdicate with impunity those duties which even the sacredness of her great name, is considered insufficient to dispense Her Majesty from discharging.

However painful it may be to make the observation, it is no longer the land which would be the Governor General which would be the Representatives of the people, in Canada, has not been strengthened the last few years. The wearing-off process has, we believe, already proceeded so far, that during the whole of last session very few members of either House ever sat at Lord Monck's table, or even performed the ordinary courtesies of making their calls, before leaving town or on arrival at the seat of Government. That the fault is not inherent in the people's representatives; that the charge of boresness or ill-breeding cannot be alleged against them, these we remember the days of Lord Elgin and Lord Metcalfe, know well. Even Sir Edmund Head, though sorely afflicted in body and severely tried in temper during his term of office, proved himself capable of inspiring warm personal attachments, both among ministers and members. Lord Monck's lot fell on much more fortunate days, for his personal comfort as an administrator. The external dangers which menaced the country since his installation made the organs of all parties anxious to strengthen His Excellency's hand, to magnify his office, and exalt his prestige. That the permanent impression has been adequate to the efforts made for this object, is much to be regretted; for though ours may not be a ceremonial people, they certainly look, and not without warrant, for an additional éclat being conferred on the country, by the personal prominence, in all works of courtesy and progress, on the head of the State.

Entering on the first administrative year of the New Dominion, it may not be amiss to ask ourselves what are the uses and functions of the Viceroys of British America. In answering that question, it is not too much to assume that the present salary attached to that high office, in addition to the residences provided, namely, £210,000 sterling a-year, ought to be sufficient for the dignified and even brilliant discharge of the social duties appertaining to its possessor. A philosophical radical might easily undertake to show that the people of this young and, comparatively speaking, poor country, might make a much better investment of ten thousand a year; but the country does not begrudge the amount to the man the Queen delights to honour by the appointment. Nor is it assuming too much to say, that after Ireland and India, the Viceroys of these United Provinces is the third external office, in rank, in trust, and in importance, in the gift of the Crown. In some aspects it is even more important than either India or Ireland; so much depends, for us, on our intercourse with our next neighbours, which officially must be largely sustained by our Governor-General; he has also an initiative in legislation which is not wielded anywhere else to the same extent, except by the Sovereign, or her first Minister. In time of crisis, he is master of the situation; at all times, he may be the moderator between parties; the efficient patron of merit, regardless of party; the fountain of social honour, and the best friend of public morality.

To place hereafter any second-rate man, however distinguished in private life, in such a position as this, would be most unwise in itself, and most unfair towards the Dominion. It was the conclusion of the late Duke of Newcastle, after personally travelling over this country, that no man, not eligible to the Queen's Cabinet at home, ought to be entrusted with so responsible an office. To this conclusion we hope His Grace of Buckingham may be also led, when he is required to name the successor of Lord Monck. It may be premature to discuss who that successor is to be, since we have nothing for it yet but mere rumour; it cannot, however, be premature to say, that we shall look for a man already known and distinguished, whose rank and whose personal character would be calculated to supplement the defective powers of the Executive chief, under our largely democratic system.

The choice of the Imperial Ambassador to reside at Washington, always a matter of the utmost consequence to the British Government, has of late years, if possible, become even more so; but not even that Ambassador can do more to preserve the good relations of the two great English-speaking powers than an able Viceroy could, residing at Ottawa. The title of the American people, whether as to affairs, the army and navy, the pulp, journalism or commerce, visit Canada at one time or other. So, if possible, be the highest, and whose personal character would be calculated to supplement the defective powers of the Executive chief, under our largely democratic system.

George Augustus Sala's name recently appeared among the list of unfortunates who are seeking relief from the Insolvency Court. For several years past he has been obliged to reside on the Continent in order to avoid the importunities of his equally unfortunated creditors, and many a commission from the leading journals has consequently fallen into other and less worthy hands. Now that the important expedition to Abyssinia has come upon the tapis, we will confess ourselves mistaken if it does not provide remunerative employment for his pencil. It is understood that the War Department will see to the wants of the Xenophons selected by the principal London papers to accompany the expedition.

An Atlantic street horse car in Brooklyn, while going on the down grade to South ferry on Friday, became unmanageable through the giving way of the brakes, and ran with lightning velocity down the track, jumping off at the corner of Furman street, where the track turns, and being smashed to pieces against a lamp-post. There were thirty-seven passengers in the car, one of whom, a lady, was killed, and several others were seriously injured. The grade there is much steeper than any of the line in Quebec, and might be compared to that of Fabrique street.

The War Department is to be further reduced by the dismissal of sixty clerks, making in all four hundred last month. The War Department seemed to be chief, and if the subordinate follow his example they will have difficulty in finding other situations.

LATER.—The Volunteers of Garibaldi are marching upon Rome in every direction. The Florence press urge the Government to anticipate them and occupy the city with the national troops.

A report gained currency that American Minister, Hon. G. P. Marsh, demanded the release of Garibaldi on the ground that he was a citizen of the United States. This is denied, but it is true that Mr. Marsh has asked the Government to show evidence to the distinguished prisoner.
