Evening Bell's Weekly Messenger of June 24.

THE PRINCE REGENT'S FETE.

The history of our amusements presents no specie of spectacle such as we are now about to describe: it was a chef-d'œuvre which, in splendour and variety, never, we believe, was equalled in any age or country.

Carlton House has been considered as the acme of perfection; in interior decoration it certainly has long excelled. An acknowledged judge has represented its acquisitions as follows:—"Every article of furniture is uniform in its appearance, and correct in its execution; the embellishments of the apartments are classically chaste, novel, and splendid; the ornamental decorations of the walls spirited and lively; the colours of the Grecian, Etruscan, Roman, and Chinese draperies, brilliant and beautiful."

Without that pompous pageantry which distinguished the entertainments given by British and other Princes in ancient times, it contained all the elements of the completest and grandest fête which the ingenuity of such imitable artists, as were employed in it, could devise.

The industry of the town, which always forms the vanguard in the army of pleasure, long since gave note of preparation. For six weeks past, the whole host of weavers, tailors, mantua makers, and milliners, have been in a state of requisition. Architects, upholsters, painters, carpenters, cooks, and confectioners, were levied en masse, and other supplies raised, to an unexampled amount, for this splendid occasion.

Band-street, St. James's-street, Piccadilly, and the Park, were totally deserted on Wednesday, except by a few females, hurrying in their carriages, from shop to shop, to purchase essences and ribbons.

Between nine and ten o'clock all the Fashionables in the world were in motion. The effect of such a mass of coaches and chariots, collecting from all quarters, and pouring upon the spot, may be easily conceived. The first had scarcely reached Carlton House, before the neighbouring streets, St. James's-street, Bond-street, and Piccadilly, presented a long and uninterrupted cavalcade. The line that descended St. James's-street extended from the top the whole length of Piccadilly three lines deep. Instructions were given the coachmen to set down and take up with the horses heads towards the Haymarket. By this arrangement, all crossing and jostling were avoided; but, from the necessary slowness of the procession, numbers abandoned their carriages, and made their way through the immense multitude on foot. Jermyn-street, Duke-street, Bury-street, King-street, (all leading to one point, namely, St. James's-square), were free of access to chafers only; they were admitted at the private eastern door in Pall-mall.

THE INTERIOR OF CARLTON HOUSE.

Having effected the first wish (an entrée sans and sound into the court-yard) the company, big with expectation, and seeing what surpassed the most romantic ideas they could form, had the supreme felicity of finding every thing excel all possibility of conception. Passing underneath the portico, which bears so distinguished a feature in the architecture of the front, the visitors entered the hall of entrance, the grand hall, the octagon hall (leading to the basement of the great stairs), and great staircase.—These are considered as chefs d'œuvre of the late Mr. Holland; the appropriate ornaments are bronzed, and on a pale green ground.—The marble and stone floors were covered with a mixed-coloured carpet; the colours in the border were scarlet and black. In the large hall were placed tables, with refreshments. The octagon communicated, in three directions, through magnificent arched door-ways; they were decorated with scarlet draperies, each having silk gold-coloured lace, fringe, and tassels. The centre arched door communicated with

THE FIRST ANTI-ROOM.

This apartment closed the parallel line: that is to say, the extent of the central part of the house, from the north to south, straight from the entrance door. The first object which presented itself was a most magnificent plate of English glass, 15 feet high, and broad in proportion; it was placed in the pier, and reflected the Outer-hall, &c. The draperies were of apricot broad-cloth, tastefully decorated with blue and black velvet ornaments; they were continued over the glass. The seats were Ottomans, covered and ornamented to correspond with the curtains. In this apartment hung several portraits of public characters, particularly the late Duke of Bedford and Earl Moira; and over the chimney-glass, in an oval frame of exquisite carving, brought from

Paris, the portrait of Madame Pompadour.—Turning to the right led into

THE BOW ANTI-ROOM.

(which communicated with the Throne Room) This room was hung with bright crimson English damask, with rich gold mouldings. The draperies around the room were of blue satin, tastefully thrown over gold ornaments. The bow windows were decorated with rich draperies to correspond with the hangings, supported by elegant gold Roman military standards, eagles, and other ornaments, richly decorated with gold fringes. In the piers were placed noble glass, with rich marble tops, and or-molu, in beautiful carved and gilt frames; and in the centre window, an immensely large china vase, on a golden tripod. The chairs and sofas richly carved, were covered with damask silk. The general style of the whole of the room may be considered as a judicious improvement upon the old English style of furnishing. In this room hung several beautiful specimens of cabinet pictures, by the old Masters, among them the celebrated Hay-field, by Wouvermans, lately purchased. The chimney-piece, which is of antique red marble, decorated with Chinese figures, and other ornaments, finely executed in or-molu, had a striking effect. There were two tables decorated in the same manner, having placed upon them the most costly or-molu branches.

THE THRONE-ROOM.

This splendid apartment was hung with rich crimson velvet with embroidered ornaments in pure gold, and most massive gold fringes and laces. The canopy, superbly carved and gilt, was surmounted by four helmets composed of real gold, having plumes of the finest white ostrich feathers, many of them 17 inches in height. On each side the canopy were magnificent antique draperies, decorated to correspond with it, and forming back grounds to two superb gold candelabras, after the antique, executed in the finest manner with fleurs couchants, and other appropriate ornaments. Under the canopy stood a grand state chair and foot-stool. The compartments of the room were decorated with the richest gold ornaments on a crimson velvet ground, with draperies enriched with gold fringes, en suite. There were two superb glass about twelve feet high, with oriental alabaster tables, on frames carved and gilt in the most superb style. On a chimney decorated with or-molu foliage of the richest sculpture, was placed a large glass in a superb frame; and on the chimney-piece and tables, were five French figure girandoles of or-molu. In this room were no other seats than stools, gilt and covered with crimson velvet. Here were whole-length portraits in grand gold frames of their Majesties, the Prince Regent, and the Duke of York. Through a door at one end of this room, a temporary stair-case presented itself to view, which communicated with the Conservatory; this erection was intended as a private passage for the Prince Regent and his particular friends to the head of the tables, when supper was announced. Opposite to the above door, a door leading to the Throne-room being removed, and a large glass being placed in the opposite door, on the further side beyond the Throne, the whole range of candelabras, and the Throne itself, were reflected in it; and a striking coup-d'œil was thereby produced. Keeping still to the right carried us into

THE BALL-ROOM.

This apartment was decorated with arabesque ornaments, and figures, painted in the finest style imaginable, on gold grounds, in panels, between pilasters richly carved and gilt. The ceiling, decorated in compartments, had a very fine effect. The windows and recesses have circular tops, and they were decorated with rich blue velvet draperies, with massive gold fringes, lace, tassels, and ropes; the latter were likewise of gold. In the recesses were magnificent French plates of looking glass, in gold frames, having sofas under them, richly carved, and covered with blue velvet, the chairs to suit. Before each pilaster was placed a rich gilt pedestal, in which was seen a superb French girandole, carrying light and flame, executed in or-molu in the most unique manner. The two chimney-pieces of statuary marble, were ornamented with foliage and figures in bronze and or-molu, and over them were glasses in gold frames, and French candelabras, worthy of the tout ensemble. The last room forms the south-western angle of the Palace; here we turned to the north and then entered by a fine and classically ornamented door.

Dancing commenced about twelve o'clock, in the Grand Council Chamber, in two sets, which were divided by a crimson cordou. The first couple were Earl

Percy, and Lady Jane Montague, the daughter of the Duchess of Manchester; they led off with the dance called "Miss Johnstone," next followed—

Lord Maitland,	Duchess of Bedford,
Earl of Tyrconnel,	Lady Catherine Herries,
Earl of Digby,	Countess of Jersey,
Marquis of Worcester,	Lady Charles Somerset,
Lord Palmerston,	Lady Frances Pratt,
Lord Ed. Somerset,	Lady Charles Fitzroy,
Lord Ch. Somerset,	Miss Metcalfe,
Earl of Kinoulli,	Lady Mary Edgcombe,
Lord Lake,	Hon. Miss Ouslow,
Lord Mark Kerr,	Lady Elizabeth Clive,
Earl Gower,	Miss Glynn,
Colonel Macmahon,	Miss Methuen,
Lord Milsington,	Miss Fawkner,
Earl of Rothe,	Miss Thomson,
Mr. Lloyd,	Lady C. Cholmondeley,

The Prince Regent, and the Royal Dukes of York, Clarence, Kent, Cumberland, Cambridge, and Sussex, were present at this period (half past eleven), and appeared highly gratified to see so end vening a scene. "Strike up, Musicians, my old and favourite Scottish tune," exclaimed the Prince. Mr. Gow took the hint, and "I'll gang nae mair to yon Town," was admirably played, and equally well danced by the above.

THE CIRCULAR DINING-ROOM.

The ceiling of this room forms a dome, supported by large Sciolia porphyry columns, with an entablature silvered, and decorated with imitative bronze ornaments. The compartments and doors have figures and ornaments painted in the most masterly style by Mr. Jones, in imitation of bronze, on real silver grounds; the fronts of the recesses, &c. had light blue silk draperies of an aerial tint, with silver balls; and around the room, immediately under the entablature, was a valance in pelmet of blue pulled silk, on each of which a superb cut glass stand and silver balls, appeared suspended in the intermediate spaces. In the recess, below the large window, a superb side-board was placed, supported by bronzed griffins, and vine leaves. There were three tier of shelves, with plate-glass backs, intended and used as a depot for a part of the Prince Regent's magnificent service of gold plate. In the recess opposite stood another sideboard to correspond, on bronzed chimera, richly chased; the other ornaments were gilt rails, and branches for lights. Underneath was placed an uncommonly fine antique car, of inestimable value, standing upon bronze and brass wheels; this magnificent appendage served all the purposes of a wine-cooler. The two fire-places and two compartments, to correspond, are decorated with real verde antique marble slabs, in silver frames, with bronze ornaments, and chimera supporters. On each was placed two stands for lights, supported by groups of boys, finely done in bronze. There were four candelabras (ten wool racks), with chimera at the angles, covered with blue silk, decorated with solid silver fringe. The lightness of colour and style of this apartment, produced, by contrast with the splendour of the adjoining apartments, a very striking effect. The centre window being taken out, a temporary orchestra elegantly fanciful, suddenly appeared, as if by enchantment, by the drawing of a curtain, when the clock struck eleven. Here, by the able superintendence of Mr. Gow, a concord of sweet sounds, produced by 22 musicians, were diffused far and near. Immediately opposite the band, was a door communicating with the Anti-room; likewise appropriated for dancing, and thus answering the purpose of both rooms.

THE DRAWING-ROOM.

At present used as a Council-room. This magnificent structure was hung with a rich bright crimson English damask, with draperies for the windows; the circular termination of the room, and the sides of the doors, and chimney-pieces, were richly decorated with deep massive fringes of real gold, and crimson silk, with gold ornaments. Around the room, under the cornice, were placed ornaments of a fan shape, composed of fluted of bright crimson silk, terminating with deep gold fringe, and gold ribbons, in the intermediate spaces; and in the centre of each was an Apollo's head, with golden rays, finely carved; under this range were suspended rich draperies with the same rich fringe as the others. The two chimney-pieces in this room excel in beauty the others; they are composed of the purest white marble, with figures of Satyrs with infants in their arms, which they seem to be worshipping. These are executed by the incomparable artist Mr. Vulliamy. French plate pier chimney-glasses and candelabras. The ceiling is covered above a rich white and gold Corinthian cerasse; and is finely decorated with trophies and other well-designed ornaments, executed in the best style. All the rooms we have already described had each a cut-glass lustre. Here were suspended five chandeliers of unrivalled beauty, the largest was by Perry and Parker; the others by Hancock, Shepherd, and Rixon. The chairs and sofas were massive and finely executed, having black and gold grounds, covered with damask, decorated with black velvet, and rich silk fringes, golden tripods with canes, and other ornaments, after the antique; French figure girandoles and or-molu branches. The last apartment terminates the range from south to north, and turning eastwards the company entered

THE WEST ANTI-ROOM.

This room communicated with the hall of entrance; it was decorated with superlative scarlet cloth, with draperies and black velvet ornaments, fringes, and gold corners. Ottoman seats, sofas, and chairs, covered with scarlet, and supported by golden paws of griffins. Under a large pier glass was a mosaic table. The walls were covered with flock paper of a drab ground, with rich gold mouldings, forming a very judicious ground for the pictures. Over the chimney was a whole-length portrait of Louis XV. in a superb French frame; on one side was a whole-length of the late Duke of Cumberland; and on the other, of the Duke of Clarence. At one end of the room was a portrait of the great Duke of Cumberland. On the other side, that of the late Duke of Rutland. Over the doors were oval portraits of George II. and Queen Caroline. The floor of this room, as well as that of the large drawing-room adjoining, was most tastefully decorated with painted ornaments for the dancing.

THE EAST ANTI-ROOM.

This apartment was fitted up in a style similar to the last; but it being understood to be Colonel M'Mahon's room, it was not intruded on.

In returning to the First Anti-room, the company had again to pass through the Hall of Entrance, the Great and the Octagon Halls. From that room a door on the left conveyed us into the following suite:—

1st—THE BLUE VELVET ROOM.

This apartment has an enriched gold cornice of singular perfection; in the cave, by Sir Luke, are very beautiful paintings, in compartments, with rich gold ornaments; and from the skied ceiling is suspended a superb Grecian lustre enriched with or-molu. On the walls were panels, hung with dark blue velvet and gold mouldings. Here were first-rate paintings, by old masters, and, among others, the invaluable Rembrandt, lately purchased for five thousand guineas; these pictures were suspended by rich silk gold-coloured lines, and gold tassels. On a chimney-piece highly enriched, was placed a large glass, reflecting candelabras or-molu and china ornaments placed on the mantle shelf. At each end of the room were book cabinets. The chairs and sofas were covered with blue satin and gold. In addition to other cabinets, were two Encyclopedes, placed on grand figure girandoles; tripod stands bearing lights, added to the brilliancy, they being equally costly and handsome. Over the windows and piers were grand draperies suspended by swans and other richly-carved ornaments, with golden fleurs-de-lis. The fringes and lace were of gold colour silk, underneath which were suspended white silk curtains, decorated with gold and tassels.

2d—THE SMALL BLUE VELVET ROOM.

In every respect the same as the preceding. The two next which conclude the whole story, were:—

THE TWO TEMPORARY ROOMS

At the South-eastern end.—These were solely for refreshments or tea, coffee, &c. for the accommodation exclusively of the Ladies.

THE BASEMENT STORY.

The whole range of the Basement Story, and the Gothic Conservatory, were appropriated to supper-rooms, into which the company descended by the lower division of the Grand Staircases into an octagon Sub-hall, most tastefully arranged as an arbour, with oak and laurel leaves in the back ground; added to the foliage, were a vast variety of beautiful natural flowers and plants, the whole judiciously illuminated. This passage led to

of the lower apartments. In one was a large side-board, furnished with a Baron of English Roast Beef, and other substantial proofs of genuine hospitality. Behind was placed a large glass, which reflecting the arbour, produced an enchanting effect. Turning to the left from this Anti-room, we entered a spacious Gothic Library, adorned with handsome book-cases, filled with choice and tastefully bound books. In this room was placed a large table laid with 60 covers, and a splendid glass plateau in the centre decorated with French biscuit ornaments, and costly articles of plate. Beyond this room, are two spacious rooms; they were handsomely fitted up for the occasion, and adorned with valuable paintings, having tables, with covers, for the accommodation of one hundred persons, most elegantly arranged. At the end of the farthest of these rooms, a mirror, reflecting the whole range, terminating with the Gothic Conservatory, illuminated, produced a wonderful spectacle of splendour and brilliancy. On returning from these rooms through the first Anti-Room, we entered the Bow-Room, from the windows of which the communications to the Temporary Rooms were made. The apartment had a large plate of looking-glass over the chimney (opposite the Bow-Room), in a rich frame of gold, reflecting the grand vista of the temporary rooms; and, at the end of the alcove, another glass (which we have before described) reflected every object in infinitum. In the Bow Room, large engravings, executed by that distinguished artist, Mr. Bone, after celebrated paintings, in beautiful frames, presented such a proof of magnificence and judiciously splendid taste, as does honor to the arts. From this apartment we entered the Lower Drawing Room, which was tastefully fitted up, and adorned by two glasses placed opposite to each other. In this apartment were hung several well-chosen cabinet pictures; and, among others, a curious view of Greenwich Park, in which are introduced portraits of Charles I. his Queen, and Courtiers, by Vandyke. The next room, the Lower Dining-Room, being long in proportion, has, at proper distances, two screens of porphyry columns, with enriched capitals in gold. The cornice of the room was highly ornamented with gold. The glasses here reached from the ceiling to the floor, & handsome golden tripods carried vase lights. The end of this apartment communicated with the

GRAND GOTHIC CONSERVATORY.

By removing the spacious windows, a range of tables, extending the whole length of the conservatory, and lower Dining-room appeared with 140 covers for the reception of the Prince Regent, and his particular party. The centre of this table was decorated by a rivulet of running water, in which were live gold and silver fish, meandering over banks of broken ground, with appropriate ornaments arranged in the happiest manner, and having Chinese bridges, pagodas, and other objects connected with the scenery. At the upper end of this table, forming a circle of a larger diameter than the long table, presided the Prince Regent, assisted by his Royal Brothers; and from thence his Royal Highness, commanded a range of rooms, not less than 610 feet, occupied by supper-tables. At the upper end of the Conservatory, a side-board was constructed, covered with scarlet cloth, with muslin antique draperies, fringed, for the reception of the most splendid service of gilt plate, perhaps in Europe. These beautiful and costly objects, being tastefully arranged, and a large glass being placed behind the Prince, reflecting every object in the whole extent, the effect may more easily be conceived than described; it was magnificent beyond all conception. The Conservatory is a unique building of the richest specimen of the florid Gothic, correctly executed in imitative stone, and admitting the sun to shine through the glass interstices. The exquisite symmetry and lightness of this beautiful building, at once surprised and delighted the eye. The whole range communicating with this Conservatory were decorated with scarlet cloth draperies, enriched with black velvet ornaments, and gold coloured silk fringes; the walls were covered with plain scarlet flock paper, with gold mouldings. The whole of the supper-tables were furnished with complete sets of silver plated dishes, and plateaux.

The supper and refreshments were of the most exquisite description.

The bells rung merry peals throughout the day, and at night the houses of several of the nobility were illuminated.

The first grand ceremonial of the evening was the introduction of the several branches of the illustrious House of Bourbon to the Prince Regent. Her Royal Highness the Duchess d'Angouleme was, on this occasion, presented by her Royal Highness the Duchess of York.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

This splendid entertainment originated with his Royal Highness, from a desire to shew every possible respect and filial affection to his Royal Father's Birth-day, it not being convenient for the Queen to hold a Drawing-Room at St. James's Palace on the 4th of June, His Royal Highness, to prevent its passing without being observed as a national festival, determined on giving a grand Fete, which should not only be observed as a day of rejoicing by the higher orders, but that with it should be combined the encouragement of the arts and manufactures of the country, many of them having experienced great depression, who principally depend upon Court dresses, and all the et ceteras, in consequence of her Majesty not having held any Courts this season. His Royal Highness, with that consideration, and a due regard to the welfare of his country, in his cards of invitation had expressed a strong desire that every person should come dressed in articles of British manufacture only. This operated as a double advantage to trade; as had some of the ladies been inclined to go in dresses they had worn before, this request of his Royal Highness would have entirely prevented it, as it is very rare that ladies are full-dressed without having articles of various sorts on; the result has been, the whole of the Court-dress-makers have been busily employed from the time the Fete had been first determined on. Nearly the whole of the state-rooms and lower apartments in Carlton-House have been diverted from any use to the Prince Regent for several weeks past, to the necessary temporary arrangements. A guard of soldiers was stationed, for several days past, at the temporary buildings, to protect them, as well as the valuable property there. Among those invited, great alarm had been excited lest they should not be able to gain admittance till a very late hour, when numbers would be retiring, the hour announced for the company beginning to assemble being nine o'clock, fearing lest their carriages would not be able to get up—These fears, however, were dispelled in a great measure, by a hint being given them for as many to come in a carriage as could conveniently, which was complied with, and four, five, and six, were in the carriages generally that came. The company began to assemble at nine o'clock, and continued without intermission sitting down till eleven. The elegant carriages, new liveries, beautiful and elegant females, all in new dresses of English manufacture, principally white satins, silks, lace, crape, and muslins ornamented with silver, together with the gentlemen in Court-dresses, military and naval uniforms, heightened by the illumination of the walls of the Court-yard, together with the trees in the gardens, and the full Bands of the three Regiments of Foot Guards, and the Prince Regent's Band, in their full state uniforms, playing alternately the most delightful marches and martial pieces, and the company actually marched into the princely mansion to the music in grand procession, his Royal Highness's Equeries taking their cards of invitation as they entered to prevent the admission of improper persons. They all appeared struck with surprise and astonishment as they entered the grand Grecian Hall, which, in addition to its usual splendid appearance, was ornamented with a variety of arabes, of patent lamps, and elegant lanterns of vast dimensions. The grand effect of a line of the Yeomen of the Guards, together with a large assemblage of the Prince Regent's, the King's, the Queen's and all the Royal Dukes' servants, in their state liveries, rendered the appearance beyond description, but by those who are acquainted with the rich dresses and liveries, it is easier conceived than described. Two of the Yeomen of the Guards were also stationed at each of the entrances to the Octagon Saloon, the fitting up of which, for this occasion, was particularly splendid; the drapery was scarlet cloth trimmed with gold-coloured silk, lace cords and fringe.

In the Grecian Hall were also assembled to receive the company, Colonel M'Mahon, General Keppel and Turner, Colonels Bloomfield, Thomas, and Tyrwhit, together with Earl Moira, Lords Dundas, Henthfield, Mount Edgemare, and Yarmouth. The latter has been indefatigable in his exertions to assist his Royal Highness in his arrangements for this splendid entertainment in honour of His Royal Father's birth-day, and continued his exertions to Wednesday night in acting as a regulator of the business.

The Prince Regent entered his state apartments about a quarter past nine, dressed in a scarlet coat, most richly and elegantly ornamented, in a very novel style with gold lace, and a brilliant star of the Order of the Garter. The Duke of York wore similar coat, the pattern and ornamental part was said to be like one worn by that great warrior, the Duke of Cumberland. His Royal Highness the Prince Regent came into his state apartments just at the time the French King and Princes arrived; he received them most graciously. His Royal Highness afterwards, during the night, passed from one room to the other without any attendants or ceremony, conversing in the most affable manner, for which he is so highly distinguished, with his numerous guests. The company found an abundance of amusement in perambulating this celebrated mansion.

HOUSE OF LORDS, JULY 24.

After determining several Appeals and postponing others, the Lords Commissioners appointed by the Regent to prorogue Parliament (among whom were the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Marquis Wellesley, Lord Camden, &c.) went forth to robe. On their return, a Message was sent to the House of Commons requiring their presence. The speaker and a number of Members accordingly attended.

The Royal Assent was then given by Commission, to the Gold Coin, and the Militia Interchange Amendment Bill.

After which the Lord Chancellor read

THE SPEECH

Of the Lords Commissioners to both Houses of Parliament, on Wednesday, July 24, 1811.

My Lords, and Gentlemen:

His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, acting in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, has commanded us to signify to you the satisfaction with which he finds himself enabled to relieve you from your attendance in Parliament, after the long and laborious duties of the session. We are particularly directed to express his approbation of the wisdom and firmness which you have manifested in enabling His Royal Highness to continue the exertions of this country in the cause of our allies, and to prosecute the war with increased activity and vigor.

Your determined perseverance in a system of liberal aid to the brave and loyal nations of the Peninsula has progressively augmented their means and spirit of resistance, while the humane attention which you have paid to the sufferings of the inhabitants of Portugal, under the unexampled cruelty of the enemy, has confirmed the alliance by new ties of affection, and cannot fail to inspire additional zeal and animation in the maintenance of the common cause.

His Royal Highness especially commands us to declare his cordial concurrence in the measures which you have adopted for improving the internal security and military resources of the United Kingdom.

For these important purposes you have wisely provided, by establishing a system for the annual supply of the regular army, and for the interchange of the Militias of Great Britain and Ireland; and His Royal Highness has the satisfaction of informing you, that the voluntary zeal which has already been manifested upon this occasion has enabled him to give immediate operation to an arrangement by which the Union and mutual interests of Great Britain and Ireland may be more effectually cemented and improved.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

His Royal Highness commands us to thank you in the name and on behalf of His Majesty, for the liberal supplies which you have furnished for every branch of the public service.

His Royal Highness has seen with pleasure the readiness with which you have applied the separate means of Great Britain to the financial relief of Ireland at the present moment; and derives much satisfaction from perceiving that you have been able to accomplish this object with so little additional burden upon the resources of this part of the United Kingdom. The manner in which you have taken into consideration the condition of the Irish revenue has met with His Royal Highness's approbation; and His Royal Highness commands us to add, that he looks with confidence to the advantage which may be derived from the attention of Parliament having been given to this important subject.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

His Royal Highness commands us to congratulate you upon the reduction of the island of Mauritius. This last and most important victory of France has been obtained with inconsiderable loss, and its acquisition must materially contribute to the security of the British commerce and possessions in that quarter of the world.

The successes which have crowned His Majesty's arms during the campaign, under the distinguished command of Lieut.-General Lord Viscount Wellington, are most important to the interests and glories to the character of the country. His Royal Highness warmly participates in all the sentiments which have been excited by those successes, and concurs in the just applause which you have bestowed upon the skill, prudence, and intrepidity so conspicuously displayed in obtaining them.

It affords the greatest satisfaction to His Royal Highness to reflect that, should it please Divine Providence to restore His Majesty to the ardent prayers and wishes of His Royal Highness and of His Majesty's people, His Royal Highness will be enabled to lay before His Majesty, in the history of these great achievements of the British arms throughout a series of systematic operations, so satisfactory a proof that the national interests and the glory of the British name have been successfully maintained while His Royal Highness has conducted the Government of the United Kingdom.

Parliament was then prorogued to the 22d of August.

QUEBEC, SEPTEMBER 23, 1811.

By the late arrivals we have been favored with Glasgow papers to the 27th July, containing the Regent's speech on the prorogation of Parliament, which will be found in our columns.

Nothing had been done lately in Spain by the great contending armies, not even a skirmish. Lord Wellington was hutting his troops, and the French throwing up intrenchments for their defence. The reinforcements lately sent and sending to Lord W. amount to 13,000. The whole of his cavalry would be between 5 and 6000.

Blake is said to have met with some check in the Canadas de Nablá, which prevented his pushing to Seville, and made it necessary for him to proceed to Ayamonte, to embark for Cadiz. By later accounts through the States, it appears that he had arrived at Cadiz; and sailed again, on an expedition to the Southward. The latest accounts from Lisbon, by American papers, are to the 7th August.

By the last London date, it appears that the King was better than he had been for ten days before.

In the Ann Packet, arrived in England a British seaman, who acted as quartermaster on board the President, when she attacked the Little Belt. He made affidavit at Halifax before Ad. Sawyer, fully confirming the statement given by Capt. Bingham. This man, with two others, jumped over board from the President, and got on board the packet, the two others were drowned. He says the President has on board 550 seamen, of which about 300 are English, Irish and Scotch. Every thing was prepared for action when the President left N. York, in expectation of meeting the Guerriere.

GREENOCK, July 27.—Arrived on Thursday the schooner Dart, she spoke the day before off Rathlin island, he Mero, of this port, Porter, from Quebec for Dublin.

On the renewed talk of invasion.

Time was that the shop-keeping nation
Might startle at the word invasion;
At least it serv'd as a bugbear,
Old women and young girls to scare;
But now 'tis quite a harmless thing,
For 'tween drew its teeth and sting.
Quebec, 23 September, 1811.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR has been pleased to appoint E. B. BRANTON, Esq. as his Civil Secretary, during the absence of H. W. KYLAND, Esq.—Sept. 18.

On Saturday arrived in Town, from a tour to the Upper Province, His Grace the Duke of Manchester.

Letters of the 20th July are received in Town acknowledging the receipt of letters by H. M. frigate Amelia.

This being the anniversary of his Majesty's Coronation, the two King's Ships in the harbour fired a royal salute on the occasion.

Early this morning Mr. Cardinal, mason, unfortunately fell from the chimney of a house in the Lower Town, and fractured one of his thighs, in so dreadful a manner, that it was necessary to amputate it. He underwent the operation with great fortitude. His head is also cut.

MARRIED.

On Thursday, Mr. L. B. LANCOWORTH, Watch-maker, to Miss HANNAH MCNEAL, both of this city.

Feritas is unavoidably postponed to our next.

WRITING SCHOOL.

MR JOHN TOWNE respectfully informs the ladies and gentlemen of the city of Quebec, that he proposes opening a School for the instruction in Writing upon a new, improved, elementary and systematic plan, as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers can be obtained. Persons of a proper age and attention, can in most cases acquire the Art of Writing with elegance by the use of fifteen exercises.

The ladies and gentlemen who wish to be, or to have their children instructed in the elegant and important art of Penmanship, are requested to make immediate application to him, at his lodgings at the Union Tavern in St. John street, where the conditions of the school may be made known, and information given where the school will be kept. Ladies and gentlemen who wish for private lessons by collecting in parties at their own dwellings and applying to Mr. T. will be immediately waited upon with thanks and gratitude. Specimens of entire change of hand and style by the use of fifteen exercises are to be seen at the Union Tavern, where gentlemen are invited to call and satisfy their curiosity at least, if not gratify.

If any additional evidence of the advantages of his peculiar system and mode of teaching can be wanting, recommendations from gentlemen of the first consideration may be seen as above mentioned.

Quebec, 23d Sept. 1811.

SCHOOL OF TERREBONNE.

MR. GILL begs leave to inform the friends of science that he has been encouraged to open a school in the village of Terrebonne, where he intends to teach Reading, Writing, and Arithmetic; the English, the Latin and the Greek languages; Mathematics, Astronomy, and Geography; with other useful branches of literature. As Mr. G. has made the education of youth his principal study, he feels easy under his present engagements; and has reason to hope his co-laborers will give satisfaction.

Parents at a distance who may be inclined to favour him with their confidence, will find accommodation for their children in the vicinity of the school. For whose information he will further observe, that Terrebonne is an extensive village, beautifully situated within a short distance of Montreal, extremely healthy, and plentifully supplied with all necessities.

Terrebonne, August 12, 1811.

Quebec, 28 June, 1811.

Mr. CARY,

I noticed in your last paper a truly ridiculous advertisement, announcing a dissolution of Copartnership which never existed, signed by two obscure persons, named Horan and Gibson, I disclaim ever having any concern with such sort of Gentry—Pray insert this in your next Mercury, and you will oblige your humble servant,

FRANCIS MULLANY.

PARTNERSHIP DISSOLVED.

THE Subscribers having enter'd into Copartnership generally with Mr. FRANCIS MULLANY, of the city of Quebec, Grocer, on or about the fifteenth day of April, 1809, the business to be carried on in his name, upon their joint account and the said Francis Mullany (availing himself of the want of written articles of Copartnership having lately refused to account with or otherwise satisfy or even acknowledge the said subscribers either of them as his Copartners. They feel themselves necessitated to notify the public, that the said Copartnership will cease from and after the date of this Advertisement, and that the said Subscribers will no longer consider themselves liable for any share of the debts that may be contracted by the said Francis Mullany.

All demands upon the said Francis Mullany, or Account of their said business, it is requested, may be immediately made known to the subscribers that steps may be forthwith taken for the payment thereof the subscribers having every reason to believe that the profits of the said concern are very considerable, and infinitely more than adequate to the discharge of all demands thereon.
