Liberal promise still stands, but will take time

Marx: There's more to bilingual sign issue than Bill 101

MONTREAL (CP)—The Liberal government has not changed its mind about a 1985 election promise to permit bilingual signs, Justice Minister Herbert Marx said Sunday.

But he told a brunch meeting at a Jewish synagogue that solving the sign issue is not as simple as legislating changes to Quebec's Bill 101 language law.

"This is a very delicate, sensitive issue and we are looking for a way to deal with it," he said.

Marx said the government had already delivered on language promises made before the election, including legalizing the status of about 1,000 students illegally enrolled in English schools, and guaranteeing health and social services in English.

Since taking office, Marx said the government has had to contend with a barrage of opinion from business and individuals urging that the law be maintained. He said the opinions of all Quebecers must be taken into account before changes are made to provisions that require French only on commercial signs.

Premier Robert Bourassa said in a recent interview that he might have to back away from the promise to allow bilingual signs because he senses resistance to change and does not want to embitter the language climate.

Some of the 80 people at the meeting said they weren't satisfied with Marx's explanation.

"I want to know how much longer I'm going to be treated like a second-class citizen," said Marcel Austren.

Marx said later in an interview the government's strategy does not depend on a ruling by the Supreme Court of Canada on the legality of unilingual French signs. He did not elaborate.

The Supreme Court is slated to hear an appeal in November of an earlier ruling by the Quebec Court of Appeal which said limitations on the use of languages other than French are unconstitutional.

'We have not signed this agreement'

Free trade deal not binding, Turner says

By Tim Naumetz

MONTREAL (CP) — A Liberal government will not feel bound to honor the free-trade pact Prime Minister Brian Mulroney negotiated with Washington, Opposition Leader John Turner said on Sunday.

"If Canadians give us their confidence and make us their government, never will I feel politically bound by this agreement signed by Mr. Mulroney," Turner said at a brunch gathering of about 1,000 party faithful.

The statement, though not specific about how Turner would treat the pact in a legal sense, was the most elaborate yet about his intentions for the deal under a Liberal government.

The Liberal leader has repeatedly refused to spell out whether a Liberal government would honor the agreement since the tentative deal was signed earlier this month.

The pact must still be approved by the U.S. Congress and, in some minor aspects by the provinces. However, the premiers have said they probably don't have the legal power to kill the deal.

"We have not signed this agreement, we will not live with it," Turner said.

Turner refused to elaborate later when questioned by reporters, but his press secretary, Daniel Despins, said Turner's remarks meant that he "reserved the option" to kill the pact and would do so unless it is changed.

Turner said the deal will be disastrous for Quebec farmers. As he has already said in British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario in his campaign against the agreement, Turner told Quebecers that their province too will be flooded by cheaper farm products from south of the border.

WILL FLOOD MARKET
 "The American multinationals will flood our markets with their fruits, vegetables, dairy products, even their TV dinners," Turner said.

"If we sell out our farmers and fishermen, at the end we will even be dependent on the Americans to feed ourselves."

The Liberal leader has already set out his opposition to other sections of the agreement, arguing that it does not guarantee Canadians access to U.S. markets and gives up too much to the Americans.

He also says the pact sells out Canadian energy to the U.S. and will hurt the Canadian auto industry, the fishing industry, textiles and other areas.

"What's their's is their's and what's our's is their's," Turner said Sunday.

The Liberal leader said government legislation to protect drug patents — now stalled in the Liberal-dominated Senate — is linked to the trade deal because of American pressure for the new law.

MPs to vote on Meech Lake accord

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs will vote today on the Meech Lake constitutional accord, an issue which has split the Liberal party and caused protests from natives, women and residents of the two northern territories.

The accord, which returns Quebec to the constitutional fold, was worked out last spring by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and the 10 provincial premiers.

The deal has the support of both Liberal Leader John Turner and New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent and, with the massive Tory majority in the Commons, is sure to pass.

The only tension in the vote will be the number of Liberals and MPs from the two other parties who will break ranks and oppose the deal.

At least 10 Liberals, one-quarter of the caucus, have indicated they will defy Turner's wishes. Turner says he too has problems with the deal but supports it because the accord reconciles Quebec's constitutional demands.

Opposition to the constitutional changes contained in the accord include criticism that the rights of women and ethnic minorities will be undermined and that the Yukon and Northwest Territories will have difficulty winning provincial status.

Stocks continue tumble in eastern markets

Prices dropped sharply in hectic trading on the Tokyo, Hong Kong and London stock markets today, as the turmoil that shook the world's exchanges last week continued.

Investors had looked to the Far East markets for an early indication of how North American markets might fare after a turbulent week that saw record falls at exchanges in New York, Tokyo and Toronto.

On the Tokyo Stock Exchange today, the 225-share Nikkei stock average closed down 1,096.22 points at 22,202.56 after having been down nearly 1,680 points. It represented the third-worst loss ever on the exchange.

Analysts tied the plunge to concerns over the effect that changes in foreign exchange rates could have on the stock market and to worries that U.S. inflation will soar.

In Sydney, the Australian stock market continued its drop today after last week's 30-per-cent slide. The market's main indicator, the all-ordinaries index, fell 99 points to close at 1,414. The index closed Friday at 1,515.6.

But investors were also worried the Hong Kong Stock Exchange would open with sharp losses.

It did.
 Prices in Hong Kong plunged in the first session after a four-day suspension that officials hoped would calm anxieties over market crashes overseas.

The Hang Seng index, the market's prime gauge of blue chip stocks, was down 1,120.70 points at 2,241.69, for a one-day record fall. The loss, representing a 33-per-cent drop, by far surpassed the record plunge of 420.81 points set last Monday.

Bell to discuss rate readjustment with CRTC

By Marlene Orton

HULL, Que. (CP) — Six million telephone customers in Ontario and Quebec could see some big changes on their telephone bills if Bell Canada has its way.

But first Bell must persuade the federal regulator, in public hearings beginning this week, that telephone rates need major readjusting. Essentially, Bell wants to lower long-distance rates and raise basic rates in a move called rate rebalancing.

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, which agreed with the idea in principle in an unrelated 1985 decision, will hear seven weeks of arguments about Bell's financial plans before making a decision.

The hearings will also involve Bell's revenue requirements for this year and next, along with a request by the British Columbia Telephone Co. to reduce its long-distance rates. Bell and B.C. Tel operate monopoly services and so are subject to regulation and supervision by the commission.

Bell, for example, has to tell the commission how much money it needs to collect from telephone customers next year to pay for the services and satisfy company shareholders.

Last year, the commission ordered Bell to return $206 million to customers because the company made too much money. Bell and the commission are still fighting that decision in court.

Rate rebalancing is seen as the more important battle in the coming weeks and Bell has plenty of opponents.

Janet Yale, legal counsel for the Consumers Association of Canada, says the commission's 1985 ruling favoring the change is outdated now.

Bell was forced to drop long-distance rates by 20 per cent last January and ordered again by the commission to chop the rates by two per cent beginning in July because the company made too much money.

"Any need (to lower long-distance rates) has been met through the reductions that have already occurred and the case for anything else doesn't exist any more," says Yale.

B.C. Tel's request poses other problems, she adds. "How can they lower rates without having to increase any rates to offset that. To us, it suggests that maybe B.C. Tel is making too much money too."

Bell argues the basic service is much more expensive to provide than long distance but that phone bills don't reflect that disparity.

Gary Bray, Bell's vice-president of government and regulatory affairs, says the disparity will amount to about $2.5 billion by 1991. And that has to be changed by increasing the cost of the expensive service and reducing the cost of the cheaper service.

Chuck and Di heading for split?

LONDON (CP) — Diana, Princess of Wales, drove away from Prince Charles on Sunday 20 hours after a much-publicized reunion, fuelling new speculation that their six-year-old marriage was in trouble.

Reporters outside the couple's country home at Highgrove, western England, said the 26-year-old princess was grim-faced as she drove off in her Jaguar.

She was accompanied by a private detective. There was no sign of Charles or their children, Prince William, 5, or Prince Harry, 3.

Several hours later, Diana's destination was still not publicly known. The Press Association news agency reported it was normal practice for Diana to return to Kensington Palace in London on Sunday to take her sons to school Monday morning.

The couple have lived separately for about six weeks. Charles has spent most of the time at Balmoral. Diana, known to dislike the Scottish royal retreat, stayed in London.

They appeared together on an official visit to flood victims in Wales last week but the prince flew back to Scotland the same evening.

The 38-year-old heir to the throne returned to Highgrove on Saturday, preceded by a huge bouquet of flowers.

Reporters said he looked sullen and unhappy as he arrived home, loaded with presents for his children whom he also had not seen for weeks.

Charles returned home just before his mother, the Queen, arrived back from the Commonwealth conference in Vancouver and visiting Western Canada and Quebec.

HELP FROM QUEEN
 British newspapers say the Queen would step in and try to reconcile the couple.

"It is said Her Majesty will impress upon them that whatever the state of their marriage, Charles and Diana must avoid lengthy periods out of each other's company," the Sunday Times said.

As tabloid newspapers reported more friction between Charles and Diana, critics of the reports say the two are victims of a boorish newspaper battle for readers.

Townshippers thrilled by royal visit

Dozens of Eastern Townships residents got a good close look at Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip when the royals dropped in on Holy Trinity Cathedral in Quebec City Friday.

And the visit ended on a positive note as Her Majesty gave her approval to the Meech Lake Constitutional accord.

E.T. Anglicans thrilled with royal visit to historic Holy Trinity Cathedral

QUEBEC CITY — When the Queen and Prince Philip visited the oldest Anglican cathedral outside the United Kingdom Friday, the choir of 50 clergy was short one prominent participant.

But neither worshippers of god nor followers of royalty in the crowded church seemed to miss him — including a man who once got a military ambulance ride from Elizabeth when she was a princess.

While a young Lennoxville cleric boycotted the royal ceremony at Holy Trinity Anglican Cathedral, other Eastern Townships residents present said the chance to get close to Queen Elizabeth II was worth the cold and rainy trip.

'PRETTY GOOD VIEW'
Two busloads of faithful from Sherbrooke area Anglican parishes braved the weather, the crowds and the security arrangements to get a good look at Her Majesty.

"Most of us got a pretty good view of her," said Fay Coleman of Bury.

Coleman said the royal couple hadn't changed much since she saw them in Fredericton in 1972. "I couldn't see that she'd aged much," Coleman said, adding that the Queen is "much nicer-looking in person than in photos."

Clifford Anderson, also of Bury, said the service was "all right, very good. She was very nice."

Anderson said he hadn't seen the current royal couple before but "I saw her mother in Sherbrooke in '39."

"We could have touched her. I saw her very close," said Nellie Springings of North Hatley. "It was my first time. It was so very beautiful."

'VERY GOOD READER'
Prince Philip read from the scriptures during the service.

"It was so enjoyable to hear him read the lesson. He's a very good reader," Springings said. "It was a wonderful service, more so even than I expected."

Ida Reinhardt of Drummondville was chosen to represent church women's groups at the service. "It was just a wonderful experience," Reinhardt said afterwards.

"It was a real privilege to represent the ladies of the Anglican Church Women's groups of the diocese," she said. "I was introduced to the Queen and Prince Philip and had a few words with them."

"Oh, yes, it was my first time, and I was quite excited."

Evelyn Jackson of Magog said Friday was the third time she had seen the royal couple. "We saw them in Suva, Fiji, and in London, and now here today," she said.

"It's beautiful each time. I'm a fan, oh yes, oh yes," Jackson added. "We've got oodles of pictures of the whole family."

Elaine Holt of Magog said the experience was "wonderful, just great."

"It was well worth the trip, and then some," she added.

REGAL RIDE
Holt's husband Theodore was also present. "Ted' Holt has a special memory of the Queen."

"It was during World War II, and I was in hospital in England," (with tonsillitis), he said. "They wanted to transport me to a Canadian hospital, but the Canadian Medical Corps weren't there yet, so the Royal British Medical Corps were looking after it."

"Elizabeth was my driver. She and another girl. I think she was a lieutenant then."

EXPRESSED AN INTEREST

Rt. Rev. Allen Goodings is the Anglican Bishop of the Diocese of Quebec, which serves a huge area ranging from Magog to Ungava Bay. Goodings said the Queen and Prince Philip visited the Quebec City cathedral, which was built in 1804, "because they expressed an interest in visiting us and we extended an invitation."

Friday's service was ecumenical, with Goodings sharing clerical duties with Quebec City Roman Catholic Archbishop Louis-Albert Cardinal Vachon, United Church minister Rev. Donald Rabson, Presbyterian Rev. Lyle Sams, and

Salvation Army Major Stuart Booth.

The couple visited the cathedral during their first visit to Canada in 1951 before she ascended to the throne, he said.

LOCAL STONE
Friday's 30-minute visit marked the first time a reigning British monarch had visited the cathedral, which was styled after the Church of St. Martin in the Fields in Trafalgar Square, London, and was completed from local stone based on a design by two Royal Artillery officers serving in the British garrison in Quebec City.

The church was frequently full in the last century, when about a third of the population of Quebec City were English-speaking. Now, however, the city is 98 per cent French and the parish has an active membership of only 50 families.

"It was wonderful to see the cathedral absolutely full again," Goodings said.

The bishop said he "gets so involved during things like this" that he wasn't sure how well the ceremony had gone.

"But I can certainly tell you that most of the people here are riding on a high."

STAYED AT HOME

One Anglican who wasn't on that high was Rev. Bradley Hicks, who decided to stay home for the day.

"I don't want to throw a wet blanket on their day," Hicks, 31, said in a telephone interview before the royal couple toured the historic church.

"But I'm pigheaded. I'd rather not go than go and be steaming."

Hicks, Anglican chaplain of Bishop's University in Lennoxville, admitted that his friends thought him a nut for refusing to participate.

$500,000 AND A CARD?
But he criticized the $500,000 cost to Canadian taxpayers of the four-day royal swing through Quebec, saying, "It would have been nice for her to send $500,000 (to the church) and a nice Christmas card."

He said the visit detracts from the church's mission to the poor and confuses the public. "When Quebecers come and ask me if I'm going to see the head of my church, I say 'Sorry, the head of my church is Jesus Christ,'" said Hicks.

Clifford Anderson... 'She was very nice.'

Ted Holt... Remembered WWII ambulance ride with Elizabeth.

He said he was boycotting the ceremony since too many Quebec Anglicans make a fuss over the Queen because they erroneously believe she is head of the Anglican Church of Canada.

Ida Reinhardt... 'Had a few words with them.'

The British monarch is titular head of the Church of England but has no formal role in its associated Canadian church, which is headed by the Most Rev. Michael Peers, Primate of Canada.

Police prompt surprise meeting with nationalist protesters

Tiny counter-demonstration puts Eastern Townships monarchists on camera

By Charles Bury

With Canadian Press files

QUEBEC CITY — Two fearless Eastern Townships monarchists got caught in a police squeeze play Friday and suddenly found themselves in the middle of a small band of chanting Quebec nationalists protesting the Queen's visit.

And while the protesters were raising the ire of other onlookers, the cameras and microphones were aimed at Peter Kandalaf of Sherbrooke and Graham Moodie of Lennoxville, who countered with shouts of "Bravo" and "Long live the Queen."

The Queen didn't appear ruffled by the cluster of 30 protesters as she entered city hall for a brief noon ceremony. But it certainly got under the skins of Kandalaf and Moodie.

STEEL BARRIER

While Elizabeth and Philip were inside, city police decided the protesters should move from a sidewalk opposite into the middle of the street. The cheerful indépendantistes co-operated with the equally cheerful, clubless police, and pushed forward to a steel barrier placed there by security workers.

Kandalaf and Moodie got caught in the squeeze — between the picketers and a hard place.

As the media microphones were thrust over the barriers towards them, protesters chanted "Le Québec au Québécois," "Vive le Québec Libre" and other traditional nationalist slogans.

From within their ranks Kandalaf replied with "Long Live the Queen!" and Moodie with "Bravo! Bravo!"

The protest under chill, grey skies was the only one to greet the Queen and Prince Philip on their 15-day Canadian tour.

'TENSENESS' GONE

As Moodie recalled afterwards, their last visit to this walled city 23 years ago was marred by a far larger separatist demonstration, which turned violent when riot police charged the crowd, clubbing many of the protesters.

"I was here in 1964; I was in Grade 11 and the class came down," said Moodie, a humanities instructor at Champlain College in Lennoxville.

"The contrast is what's so striking about this," he said. "On both sides, it was good-humored, relaxed, today compared to the feeling of tenseness in the crowd."

"That wasn't here at all today."

"There were only 10 or 20 of them (nationalist demonstrators) here this time," Moodie added. "But they were very much in the majority in '64. And it was very tense."

The Queen smiled broadly and barely glanced at the protesters, who waved placards in English reading, "God, keep the Queen" and "Elizabeth who?"

Although they walked within six or eight feet of the shouting demonstrators, the royal couple seemed completely unfazed by the rare protest against them.

'TAKES GUTS'

Kandalaf said afterwards his admiration for the Queen continues to grow. "She was amazing, so cool," he said. "Something like this takes guts, and she's got guts."

As for his and Moodie's predicament during the noisy scene, Kandalaf was philosophical. "Some things," he said, "are just worth fighting for."

Gilles Rhéaume, head of the fringe Parti Indépendantiste and leader of Friday's demonstration, condemned the Queen for expressing approval Thursday of the Meech Lake constitutional accord, a gesture he labelled "intolerable interference."

The agreement will ghettoize Quebecers, said Rhéaume, who was carrying a T-shirt he said he planned to send to the monarch. It commemorates the 150th anniversary of the unsuccessful Patriotes' rebellion in Lower Canada in 1837.

FEW IN NUMBER
The mainly youthful protesters were vastly outnumbered by the crowd of about 1000 curious onlookers and fans — both French- and English-speaking — waving Union Jacks.

"I am not a separatist and I don't like this," said Claire Faucher, 41, a housewife. "It makes me feel kind of ashamed.

But organizers cancelled a planned walkabout out of apparent fears for the Queen's security.

Later Friday, about 1500 onlookers cheered and applauded the Queen when she arrived at city hall in suburban Sillery, giving her the most enthusiastic reception of her four-day visit to Quebec.

A local veterinarian brought along five Welsh corgis and the Queen's face lit up when she saw the dogs, known to be her favorite breed.

Architect honored at fall convocation

Lambert: Bishop's 'oasis' lucky to survive without urban mish-mash

By Jack Branswell

LENNOXVILLE — The founding president of the Heritage Montreal Foundation gave fall graduates one last lesson on history and architectural tradition in a convocation address at Bishop's University Saturday.

Phyllis Lambert, an outspoken supporter of urban conservation, told graduates their campus was an architectural "oasis". In the face of "the wanton destruction of our cities and the consequent loss of urban form," the university is "a refuge for architectural heritage," she said.

Lambert and Michael Shields, managing director of Associated Newspapers, were conferred honorary degrees of Doctor of Civil Law. Shields' degree was presented in absentia as he was unable to attend due to illness.

NEW CHANCELLOR

The same ceremony saw William Turner, president and chief executive officer of Consolidated-Bathurst, installed as Bishop's new chancellor.

After the chancellor-elect took his oath and was dressed in a 'robing ceremony', he praised his predecessor, Robert Bandeen, for his work during five years as chancellor.

"I should do well to emulate my predecessor in leaving the university a better place than I found it," Turner said.

Turner said universities are society's way of regenerating itself.

Bishop's Orator Robin Burns provided a few moments of humor in the one-hour ceremony.

In presenting Shields' degree, Burns turned to the audience and said, "I am now about to fracture the Latin language... it is not Queen's Gaelic."

'SO TELL ME...'

Even Lambert did not escape Burns' wit: "I have been asked to introduce Phyllis Lambert. That is like being at a cocktail party as an historian, and someone saying, 'so tell me about the past'."

Lambert chronicled the architectural history of Bishop's and its buildings. "We shape our buildings and they shape us," she said.

The architect told the more than 300 graduates and guests that buildings "tell us much about ourselves, about where we come from, and how we view ourselves."

Citing the buildings that enclose the university's quadrangle, Lambert pointed to the site's architectural continuity. "It is remarkable that this quadrangle, which took over 100 years to build, maintained the original impetus and inspirations of the intentionality of the founders."

A SCALE TO MEASURE

Lambert called the campus an "academic village which will provide you with a scale to measure by, wherever you may live in the future."

Making a plug for awareness of heritage, Lambert predicted that because of their years on campus,

Bishop's graduates "will understand that architecture, as an art and because of its social, symbolic, and political manifestations, is a subject of public concern."

As the graduates filed out of Centennial Theatre, they were met head on by several purple-face-painted people heading over to the Bishop's/Queen's football game. While academic pursuits may have been the order of the day, even the new chancellor was later at the big game, clad in purple sweatpants and sweatshirt, but no war paint.

Turner was a member of the aging team which performed the ceremonial opening kick-off of the game, at the same time launching the university's financial capital campaign.

Bourassa ready to read lengthy treaty text

Provincial Liberals prepare for keeping power in the post-free-trade 1990s

Robert Bourassa... 'Lots of time to study the issues.'

By Melanie Gruer

SHERBROOKE — Premier Robert Bourassa says even though the U.S.-Canada free trade treaty will be several hundred pages long, he is confident there will be lots of time to examine the issue carefully.

The premier was at the University of Sherbrooke Sunday to attend the Liberal party's Forum '87 where some 275 provincial party members got together to discuss issues that would be of priority should they still be in power in the 1990s.

Bourassa spoke to reporters about the free trade issue at the end of the day's meetings. He repeated the message that "Canada is not for sale" and said he has a "good idea of what the (free trade) texts will contain" but added that he hasn't seen a "definite text" yet.

"I am confident we will have one or one-and-a-half months to examine it. It's one of the most important issues for all Canadian governments," he said.

"There are several hundred pages of text and I'm confident we'll have lots of time to study the issues before a decision is made," Bourassa said.

FOUR TOPICS

Liberal party supporters from seven different ridings discussed four different topics: the aging population, the economy, the environment and democratic institutions.

Participants had several recommendations to make concerning government policy on aging and the declining birth rate. Among their recommendations was to favor housing for the elderly in their natural environment.

Party members also suggested immigration was a partial solution to the declining provincial population and it would be necessary to assure immigrants of their integration in Quebec society.

If re-elected for another term, the Liberals said, they might restructure Quebec's system of family allowances, old age pensions and favoring families with more than three children. Young couples would be urged to have families and a ministry to deal with children might be set up.

Free trade with the United States was the central discussion of the meeting on the Quebec economy. Putting the accent on learning a second language would be one of Liberals' priorities in the 1990s. Two main conclusions drawn at the meeting on economy were that Quebec has a better and better qualified workforce and that bold and modern Quebec entrepreneurs make the free trade issue more stimulating.

ENVIRONMENT MOST POPULAR

According to organizers, the discussion on the environment was the most popular of the four. Organizers said the Liberals seemed to be more conscious of environmental protection. Some of the recommendations made were to help research into environmental issues, that economic development projects should incorporate an environmental aspect that could go as far as helping their profitability and to implant recuperation systems of secondary resources.

Recommendations made during the discussion on government and democratic institutions were to involve more members of the national assembly (MNAs) in parliamentary commissions, and to let youths play a more important role in setting up the society of the year 2000.

The party members noted that the public seemed to be more closely involved with the provincial government and that MNAs should put more of their energy into matters that affect the entire province rather than "secondary activities."

The Liberals also discussed plans for an upcoming election but Bourassa would not say whether a date had been set.

MRC formula soon to be revised — Bourbeau

Minister and mayors share concerns at municipal affairs meeting in Richmond

by Claudia Villemaire

DANVILLE — A weekend 'mini-summit' of municipal affairs organized in collaboration with the town of Danville and the municipalities of Richmond county was a resounding success.

Municipal Affairs Minister André Bourbeau, Richmond Liberal MP Alain Tardif and MNA Yvon Vallières met with mayors and councillors from each of 30 municipalities.

Bourbeau said the occasion was an unprecedented chance for elected officials to lay their cards on the table and bring their beefs right to the top.

Four workshops covering the relationship between municipalities, the regional municipality (MRC), the relationship of government, especially Mr. Bourbeau's ministry, to the actual day-to-day challenges of a municipality, and the particular role of elected members of municipal government, stirred some heated responses and brought both positive suggestions and complaints to the closing session.

ROUTE 116

Two subjects emerged from all four workshops — the state of Route 116 between Danville and Richmond and the almost total ignorance of the work expected from the MRC as well as the methods of selection which places any individual on that council.

Other suggestions emphasized the need for municipalities to keep closer contact with their neighbors, and encouraged co-operation between municipalities in such areas as garbage collection and real-estate evaluation firms. Individual municipalities were encouraged to take a more positive approach to neighboring municipipalities' problems and develop a broader base of communication and co-operation.

The mayors and councillors agreed there is a lack of information and contact between elected officials and government. They said communication was extremely slow between the ministry and the municipalities in spite of reassurance from Bourbeau that all forms are handled as quickly as possible.

Bourbeau, a native of the area, son of a former mayor of Asbestos and himself a graduate of Danville Primary School, took great pains to explain some of the workings of the municipal affairs ministry.

1511 MUNICIPALITIES

"I have 1511 municipalities to look after," he explained. "Part of our challenge has been to help the municipalities across Quebec become more and more independent. We are trying to leave most of the decision-making up to them. Financing each one's budget is now also up to each municipal council and I might add, we are the only province where government funding of municipal budgets has been reduced to 4 per cent."

Bourbeau also explained the main function of the MRCs. "They are made up of designated people, usually municipal mayors or councillors. Their role is somewhat like a watchdog for urban and rural development."

"This involves requiring that each municipality draws up a building code, urban development programs, pollution control standards, etc.," Bourbeau said, "which the MRC is equipped to help with and ultimately approve."

'A VERMONT VILLAGE'

"We can see the result of this type of program simply by taking a trip across the border," he said. "A glance at a Vermont village is a perfect example of carefully thought out urban and rural planning. The trim houses, surrounded by green space, streets displaying a continuity of style and character — all these things don't just happen. They are planned many years before and the result is what you now enjoy."

Bourbeau also pointed out that each municipality will receive a grant of $70,000 each year to help in the preparation of these plans and codes which require specialized help to prepare. "But everything must be finished in two years," he added. The voting structure presently used by MRCs is due for some major changes, he said, and new legislation is expected soon. "The voting structure of the MRC has come under a lot of fire lately. If mayors have one vote, then it stands to reason the mayor of a city representing perhaps thousands has no more power than the mayor of a tiny municipality of 60 residents."

"New legislation will allow each MRC to set up their own procedure and present their plan to the minist-the Narrows. And where would finances come from when the area was already depressed with high unemployment and dwindling industries?

PERSISTED
Lupien persisted. Local merchants were slowly drawn into the scheme. But progress was slow and doubts almost drowned any schemes that would finally control the river.

Time passed, the usual flooding of basements occurred and as each spring rolled around interest waxed temporarily until warm weather and dry times made people forget again. Business suffered as the local economy went about as low as it could go.

Then disaster struck once too often, in 1982. This time, businesses had water on the first floor, stock was ruined and damages soared. People began to take a new look at their old problem and Lupien's ideas.

Mother Nature once again staged the final incident that brought everyone to attention. Just twelve months after the first disaster, the river again jumped its banks and dumped even more river water down Main St., this time rising well above any previous marks, causing more damage and despair.

CORPORATION
A corporation was formed called Renovi-Centre. Hardcore individuals spent days and months with all kinds of specialists, engineers and government officials studying methods of containing the river and repairing Main St.

Saturday fomer mayor Lupien once again faced his people. "You supported me for twelve years. Today we turn the final page and can say with pride, the project is completed. We not only have the dikes and pumping stations which keep the river where it belongs, but a new sewage system including a filtration plant which, ironically, is putting clean water back into the St. Francis."

RENOVATIONS

"We have finally seen completion of renovations to many storefronts and business places," Lupien stified. "One of my election promises was more direct communication between municipal government and the ministry," Vallières said.

"The Union of Municipalities gathers delegates from across the province. It is hardly the place where local county problems can be settled. The type of event we have had here today seems to have opened new lines of communications between municipalities themselves as well as with their ministry. I call it a great success and one which we hope to repeat on a regular basis."

Levellé told the accused he had read the letter Garand had written him and said it indicated a possible start towards his rehabilitation. Then he added he had read the declaration the victim made to the QPF.

Levellé told Garand the crime had been committed in cold blood and said he had to deter others when he handed him the four years. The judge recommended Garand be given psychiatric assistance and that he be placed in a detoxication program as soon as possible.

had no prior record, and had made arrangements with the ministry to try and reduce the debt. Crown attorney Henry Keyslerling wondered if the accused could ever manage to acquit it and suggested such blatant frauds should be punished by a period of imprisonment, "an exemplary term to deter others."

Levellé reflected and said society would have to pay again if Painchaud was sent to jail. He handed down the community work and ordered Painchaud to continue settling with the ministry.

Paul André Ducharme, 38, of Cowansville, pleaded guilty to having defrauded the same ministry of $1,700 in 1984 and 1985. His claims were paid while he held a steady job. Ducharme was placed on a three year probation and ordered to perform 180 hours of community work. He had reached a final settlement with the government.

Candidate for Sutton Township pulls out

SUTTON TOWNSHIP — Mayoralty candidate Daniel Santerre has withdrawn from the electoral race for health reasons.

This allows current mayor Winston Breese to win by acclamation. Other details of the Sutton Township municipal election remain the same: Incumbent Deane Blackwood faces Chris Shearwood in seat 3; incumbent Erik Burnham faces Louis McCaffrey and Meles Bachand in seat 4; and in seat 5 incumbent Germain Larouche's seat is being contested by Jean Morissette and Pierre-Paul Rioux.

Fred Lahue and Lisa Merovitz are vying for the mayor's seat. In seat 1, Fred Eichenberger, John Rhicard and Leo McLaren are running. In seat 2 Arthur Meissner and Donald Badger face each other and in seat 3 Rene Hebert was elected by acclamation. The advance poll will be held Sunday, Oct. 25 from 2 to 10 p.m. Election day is Monday, Nov. 2 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the town hall.

Aggressor pleads guilty to Dunham attack

COWANSVILLE (JM) — Conrad Garand waived his rights to a preliminary hearing and pleaded guilty to a charge of sexual aggression on a 20-year-old female in Dunham during September 1987. He was sentenced to four years additional to all terms he is presently serving by Judge Claude Levellé.

Garand, 32, was serving a term for armed robbery which expires in 1990 and was on a pass with a friend. His friend met a girl he knew in Cowansville, she brought along a friend and they went for a drive in the country. The other couple left the car and Garand made his proposals which were refused by the young woman. Under threats she finally complied with his demands. The other couple returned, they drove back to Cowansville when the victim was dropped off at her door. She alerted the po-

Pouncing on the royal nod

If the Queen gives her 'nod' to a Canadian constitutional matter, does that tacit royal approval make the cause more legitimate? Words from the premier would suggest it does.

Bourassa said Saturday the Queen's approval of the Meech Lake accord should send a signal to the provinces to support the constitutional agreement.

In a speech on Thursday, the Queen spoke approvingly of the accord, saying it contributed to harmony and diversity by recognizing Quebec as a distinct society.

The speech, it turns out, was prepared with help from federal and Quebec speech writers.

The Queen was barely on the plane back to Britain when Bourassa began using her speech to further his own political cause, provincial support of the Meech Lake accord.

It seems that the Queen's opinion matters only when it vaguely supports Bourassa's own aims.

In his haste to use the Queen in his favor, the premier has forgotten a few political realities, including the fact that we no longer need a royal signature on constitution changes.

You can bet that if the Queen had said anything Bourassa didn't agree with, he'd be the first one to tear her apart, saying she had no business meddling in internal affairs.

And meddling it is. Well-intentioned or not, the Queen's platitudes about the accord are inappropriate given that the final vote on the agreement is only scheduled for today. The Queen was commenting on a deal which must still be ratified by eight provinces and the House of Commons. The harmony and diversity she spoke of may still be a long way off.

Bourassa forgets Canada is a democracy, not a bottle of Worcestershire sauce suitable for royal endorsement.

World dignitaries like the Queen — and in past weeks, the Pope — have no business waltzing into Canada with their uninformed advice and opinions. When hypocrites use such comments for short term gain they only add to the nation's already painful identity complex.

Bishop will argue for female priests

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians who want to see women Catholic priests are encouraged that a Quebec bishop is arguing their case at a worldwide meeting of bishops in Rome this month.

Bishop Jean-Guy Hamelin is urging the synod of bishops to support his plea for "women's full participation in all aspects of the church."

He told the 220 assembled bishops this month that the church should officially allow women to become altar servers, lecturers and deacons and to serve in other church positions now barred to them.

On the thorny question of allowing women to become priests, Hamelin said churches interested in the issue should form committees to discuss women's ordination.

While forming committees may seem a way of avoiding the issue, it's really a disobedient step for a Catholic since the church has never formally discussed women's ordination before, said Anita Birt, a member of Canadian Catholics for Women's Ordination.

"That's radical," Birt said in an interview. "It's intelligent, adult thinking."

FEEL HOPEFUL

She and Joyce Kennedy, spokesman for the group, said they are hopeful the synod will send Hamelin's message on to Pope John Paul. Such a message from the synod would build pressure on the Pope, pressure he has been receiving from Catholics all over North America to change his mind on the ordination of women.

During the first ten days of the Oct. 1-30 meeting, bishops made short speeches on a variety of topics and then broke into small groups to discuss the major issues raised — one of which is women's role in the church.

Thirty-eight bishops spoke on the role of women but only two said women should be allowed to become deacons, Janet Somerville, a Canadian assisting the bishops, said in a telephone interview from Rome.

Hamelin received quite a mixed reaction from the bishops, Somerville said. Many wrote him supportive letters thanking him for raising the subject.

"And other people just expressed the feeling that he was greatly exaggerating a tiny body of opinion," she said.

PLAN STATEMENT

Starting Monday, the bishops will examine the resolutions arising from the workshops and prepare a statement of recommendations for the Pope.

"I don't know if anything is going to happen next week but it's going to happen eventually," Kennedy said. "It's just a matter of time."

Hamelin's views represent those of the conference, not the Catholic Church in Canada. However, the conference based its stance on a survey of church-goers last year which found a great many members are preoccupied with the question of ordaining women.

"A striking contrast is evident between the status of women in our society and in the church," Hamelin, bishop for Rouyn-Noranda in Quebec, said in his speech.

"This contrast between the church and society is more and more apparent and more and more contested. It is particularly difficult to explain this situation to young people."

The issue received some public scrutiny last summer when Sandra Bernier, a 12-year-old altar girl from Toronto, was barred from serving mass at a downtown church because the visiting guest, Emmett Cardinal Carter, wouldn't allow girls to participate at the altar.

Hamelin, one of five Canadian bishops at the synod, said the church must face the fact that the women's movement is as massive a development in society as the industrial revolution was in the 19th century.

"It is not merely a passing fad," he said.

Trade deal has not helped Mulroney's credibility

OTTAWA (CP) — Like the boy who cried wolf once too often, Brian Mulroney has a problem. Who believes him any more?

A new poll suggests that more than half of Canadians do not — at least when it comes to free trade.

But almost as many don't believe Liberal Leader John Turner either, suggesting that the tough new image that has impressed so many in Ottawa hasn't yet cut the mustard across in the country.

The only political leaders a plurality of voters believe on the issue are the premiers and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent.

Which means that the prime minister can boast as much as he wants that free trade will create thousands of new jobs and lower prices, but he needs to keep his allies in the provinces and business to convince Canadians and, in the process, restore the government's battered popularity.

"Brian Mulroney desperately is going to need the support of the provincial premiers — not all of them, but key guys like (Quebec Premier Robert) Bourassa can help him a lot," pollster Angus Reid said from Winnipeg.

CP News Analysis

By Edison Stewart

"If he just tries to go it alone he's going to be dead meat."

Both opposition parties have zeroed in on the credibility factor since the trade deal was announced Oct. 3, often to the point of ignoring the contents of the deal itself.

FEW BELIEVE

Reid's survey for Southam News — considered accurate to within 2.5 percentage points — demonstrates just how vulnerable Mulroney is on the matter, which has dogged his political career from the outset.

Of the 1,516 adults surveyed from Oct. 7-14, only 32 per cent said they believe what Mulroney has to say about free trade, compared with 51 per cent who don't believe him and 17 per cent who were unsure.

At the same time, 40 per cent of respondents said their opinion of Mulroney has worsened in the last month or so, while only 13 per cent said it had improved.

But the news is not all bad for the prime minister. Liberal Leader John Turner isn't doing much better.

"A lot of the journalists I talk to say, 'Hey, John's looking a lot better'," Reid said.

"You know what? The people don't see it."

Only 28 per cent believe what Turner has to say on the issue, compared with 45 per cent who don't believe him.

Forty-one per cent believe Broadbent, while 31 per cent don't believe him. The premiers collectively do the best. Forty-six per cent of Canadians believe their premier, compared with 29 per cent who do not believe them.

With the support of most premiers and business, Reid's survey found support for free trade up seven points from August to 49 per cent, compared with 40 per cent who are opposed and 10 per cent who are unsure.

Support for the Conservative party is also up. Among decided respondents, the Liberals and NDP are tied for first at 35 per cent, down slightly, while the Tories have moved up five points from September to 28.

MOVE UP

It is the first time in over a year that the Conservatives have been within seven points of first place.

The renewed battle over credibility is an attempt by the opposition to ensure they get no closer.

The main controversy centres on new legislation to increase patent protection on new prescription drugs.

Opposition critics have charged for months that the bill — now through the Commons but stalled by the Liberal-dominated Senate — was in response to American pressure and tied to the trade talks. The government has denied it.

But a copy of the trade deal, released by the Canadian embassy in Washington and then quickly withdrawn, said the contrary.

Finance Minister Michael Wilson has said the copy was an earlier draft and was released in error. The official version, he says, contains no mention of the legislation because Canada insisted it be dropped.

But a leaked memo for U.S. officials says the Canadians promised the bill would be passed.

Letter Thanks for publishing my poem

Dear Mrs. Evans.

Thanks for publishing my poem "Summer of the Great Blue Heron." What a memorable sight it was to see this majestic bird! I have just finished reading an article in Nature Canada, Summer 1986 (I am behind in my reading) about the great blue: "The order Ciconiiformes, to which Herons belong in company with other long-legged, long-necked wading bird like storks, ibises and flamingoes, stretches back some 40 or 50 million years. And there remains something ancient and primitive about great blues, something that harkens back to earlier ages of the earth."

I also read with much interest Mr. Bury's article concerning the blue heron in the Record a few weeks ago.

Please find enclosed my poem for Remembrance Day.

Thanks again for everything and regards to everyone.

Too many quotations make story-reading tedious

When reporter Mary Italic hotfoots back to the newsroom from interviewing European film star Stella Polaris, her notebook is stuffed with notes and she has 30 minutes of lovely tape on her portable machine.

Now to write a 500-word personality piece about the actress.

She begins by culling her notes for anecdotes, quotations and descriptive touches — details that will help bring Polaris to life for the reader.

Anecdotes — the actress's stories about famous movie directors — give a sharp insight into her world, and make highly entertaining reading.

Mary also collects Polaris's best quotations — the meatiest and the most colorful. They reveal the actress vividly because they convey the inflection of her voice, the way she words her sentences, her use of movie jargon.

Mary uses quotations judiciously. Too many make reading tedious because spoken language tends to be wordy. But too much of Mary muffles Polaris's voice. Experience filtered through a reporter loses its freshness.

The final ingredient Mary needs to round out her portrait is the everyday detail. Somewhere in her notes are references to the way Polaris raises her eyebrows, tamps her cigarette on her

Take my word

ONLY THE BEST

Having piled up all her colored fragments, Mary is ready to jigsaw them into a pleasing mosaic, using only the choicest.

The more she examines the anecdotes, the more convinced she is they best reveal Polaris's personality. So she decides to build her story on them.

Mary sets to work writing her lead (pronounced lede), or introduction to her story. Getting it right is hard work. It must seize readers' attention and tempt them to continue reading.

So she writes this:

"Stella Polaris grins when she recalls the day she grabbed a rapier and chased Alfred Hitchcock across a movie lot for playing a trick on her.

"The rapier point was shielded with a button, but 'I got him with two or three juicy stabs before he escaped into a sewer.'"

Having hooked the reader, Mary now quickly slips in a few words of background:

"The Ruritania actress, looking as fragile as the gothic heroines she plays, sighed happily as she reminisced Wednesday about her many battles with Hitchcock and other movie directors."

Here Mary inserts a taster — a paragraph giving samples of the appetizing morsels awaiting the reader later in the story:

"On one occasion, she pushed Ingmar Bergman into a duck pond; on another, she slapped Federico Fellini across the face with a squid."

MADMAN AT HEELS

Now Mary returns to the original anecdote and develops it:

"But the Hitchcock episode is obviously the one she savors most. It happened during the shooting of After Dark, she recalled as she chatted in her penthouse suite at the Hotel Splendide.

"I was supposed to be fleeing through a rat-infested sewer in Vienna, slipping and falling, pursued by a masked madman waving a torch in one hand and a rapier in the other."

"I lost myself in the part, and ran and ran, screaming and almost fainting with terror. I could hear the madman gaining on me."

"A perfect scene. Hitchcock called 'Cut!'"

"But then he ambled over to the actress. '7/8ER, I have something terrible to confess. I forgot to take the wretched cover off the camera lens.'"

"For a moment I stood stunned," Polaris recalled. "Then Hitch grinned, the devil. He was joking. So I grabbed the rapier — fortunately the point was protected with a button — and went after him. I got in two or three juicy jabs before he escaped into the sewer."

"Polaris smoothed her green silk dress complacently. 'It's the Irish in me,' she explained during an interview after the first day of shooting of The Santa Claus Murders. 'My temper's always landing me in trouble.'"

Then on to revelations about Bergman, Fellini and others.

Tax reform to eliminate popular deductions

By Mario Possamai
CP Business Editor

Two old favorites will be missing when you file an income tax return in the spring of 1989.

The employment expense deduction and the interest income deduction are being eliminated—casualties of the federal government's tax reforms set to come into effect next year.

Millions of taxpayers will be affected by the changes.

Preliminary figures from Revenue Canada show that in the 1985 tax year, 11.4 million Canadians used the employment expense deduction, while 7.1 million took advantage of the interest income deduction. Some 15.5 million tax returns were filed that year.

The loss of these two deductions is the flip side of what is widely seen as the most positive result of tax reform—lower personal income tax rates. To help pay for the lower rates, the taxman will have to cut back on some commonly used "breaks."

The employment expense deduction reduces employment income by 20 per cent—up to a maximum of $500—before tax is calculated. Financial experts say there's not much you can do to cushion yourself against the loss of this deduction.

REDUCE STING

But they say much can be done to reduce the sting of losing the $1,000 interest income deduction.

It will be eliminated in January—and with it goes the provision that allows any unused portion of the deduction to be transferred to a spouse.

If you haven't already taken advantage of the full $1,000 deduction, you should try to use as much of it as possible in the last few months of 1987, say tax experts.

"One thing people could do," says accountant Mary Turner, "is try to trigger investment income in 1987."

A simple technique involves Canada Savings Bonds, says Turner, author of Your Guide to Canadian Personal Tax Reform.

REPORT INTEREST

Most people report the interest earned on savings bonds during the year when the bonds are cashed.

But to prepare for the tax reform changes, it would make more sense to report the interest income as it's earned—what accountants call the accrual method—even though you won't actually get the interest until the bonds are cashed.

If you buy Canada Savings Bonds on the instalment plan, there are some other things to keep in mind.

Since there's an interest charge for buying bonds in this manner, people should remember to deduct that expense when reporting interest income from those bonds in the future, says Paul Hickey, a tax partner at Thorne Ernst and Whinney.

In the past, people may not have thought about doing this because their interest income was well under the $1,000 limit of the deduction.

But without the deduction, it will be important to separate actual interest income from the cost of earning that money.

MATURE SOON

Another tip for people who haven't fully used this deduction is to buy investment instruments—like term deposits—that mature before the end of 1987.

If you've used up the full $1,000 deduction, the opposite would apply. "Purchase the (instrument) so it matures in 1988 because in most cases people will realize tax rate reductions," says Hickey.

"If the interest would be fully taxed, you'd be better off to have it taxed in 1988."

A similar situation applies if you're a parent who puts aside the family allowance cheque for your child's education.

IN CHILD'S NAME

In the past, parents could have placed that family allowance money into their own account and not worried about the interest it earned because they were protected by the $1,000 deduction.

Now, however, it makes sense to put the money into a special bank account for the children since "all interest will be taxed," Hickey says.

"The parent who is claiming the child as a dependent will still have to pay tax on the family allowance payment," he says.

"However, the income that is earned on the family allowance will be taxable in the children's hands, not in the parent's, if it's put in a special bank account for the child."

Ducks and prairie farmers doing battle these days

By Don Macdonald

WINNIPEG (CP) — Huge combines crossing golden Prairie fields on a crisp fall afternoon are as familiar a sight as a flight of ducks high in the sky heading south for the winter, but these two staples of the rural life in Western Canada are at odds.

Tough times on the farm are forcing increasing numbers of producers to drain potholes and sloughs or plow right up to their edge, which expands the amount of land but destroys essential nesting grounds for North America's ducks.

More than half of the continent's ducks are born on the Prairies and, besides modern agricultural methods, the birds are threatened by industrial and residential expansion, pollution, forestry and recreation.

So far this decade, Winnipeg-based Ducks Unlimited Canada has been fighting a losing battle to increase the numbers of ducks flying south each year.

The organization's army of biologists and engineers, which fans out across the country from 38 offices, has been unable to stem the encroaching forces of man.

The numbers of the most important species of duck that breed on the Prairies—the mallard and pintail—continue to decline as do the major species in the East, the black duck.

"For people in the duck business, that's very serious," Jack Giles, a spokesman for the organization, said in a recent interview.

SIGNS FACT

Last year, the governments of Canada and the United States signed the North America Waterfowl Management Plan aimed at reversing the trend and stabilizing the birds' populations by the year 2000.

The plan concentrates on preserving and improving the habitat of migratory waterfowl across the continent.

Part of the task will involve educating farmers and giving them financial incentives to keep machinery away from sloughs and switching to alternative methods of production that preserve cover for the birds.

"We have to restore enough crop land or vegetative cover so at least the ducks can nest," Giles said. "Working with government involves taking a hard look at whether you can enhance agriculture and, at the same time, not destroy the waterfowl or wildlife habitat completely."

Ducks Unlimited Canada, with a $40-million budget that comes mostly from donations from Canadian and American sportsmen, will play an important role along with other conservation groups in persuading farmers to leave wetlands intact.

COMBINES EFFORTS

The management plan envisages a joint effort by government and private organizations like Ducks Unlimited spending $1.5 billion to change land-use practices on 1.5 million hectares on the Canadian Prairies.

It will also attempt to improve 25,000 hectares of breeding and migration habitat for mallards and black ducks in Eastern Canada.

Some of the money will go to a similar effort planned for important migration and breeding areas in the U.S. and Mexico.

Ducks Unlimited Inc. was set up in the United States 50 years ago by sportsmen concerned that drought conditions across the continent in the 1930s were devastating duck populations.

The American organization has concentrated on raising money which is funnelled to Canada, where it's primarily a technical organization.

Ducks Unlimited Canada has spent about $290 million over its 49-year history to preserve and protect 804,690 hectares and 26,317 shoreline kilometres of waterfowl habitat.

So far this year, the organization has completed 226 projects to improve 19,000 hectares of wetland habitat.

Ducks Unlimited stays out of the business of lobbying government on conservation issues and sticks to practical measures aimed at increasing the number of birds.

Series big business for restaurateur

MONTREAL (CP) — Georges Durst has an especially avid interest in baseball's current World Series.

But he's not rooting for the Minnesota Twins or the St. Louis Cardinals. It's strictly business.

Durst owns La Cage aux Sports restaurants — offbeat Montreal eateries laden with sports memorabilia and plenty of large TV screens.

Every game in the series draws more fans to watch the action, drink and munch chicken and ribs.

Durst is president of Sportscene Inc., a publicly listed Montreal company that owns the Cage chain and other Montreal restaurants and clubs.

Durst owns 30 per cent of the 2.3 million outstanding shares, a stake worth some $4.8 million.

The company's chairman and vice-president together own 15 per cent; the remaining 55 per cent is in the hands of the public, including Sportscene employees.

Since the company went public in December, 1985, revenues have increased from $2 million to an estimated $6.3 million for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 1987. Profits for this year are expected to reach $650,000.

Besides seven restaurants, and two more to open by the end of this year, Sportscene nine months ago gobbled up the Cafe Christophe Van Houtte chain of coffee and croissant shops and La Croisanteerie chain of bistros, and two months ago acquired a fast-food franchiser called Frits.

The Sportscene share issue was the top performer among all the companies to go public in 1985 under the Quebec Stock Savings Plan, a tax-deductible scheme.

The critics were out in force when they heard that Durst, a bearded, portly figure who years ago was nicknamed Mr. Discotheque for the nightclubs he once owned, planned to list his company.

Durst was known as a man known about town for his flashy clothes and 4 a.m. walks up Mount Royal with a pet cheetah. Other pets included three cougars, a lion and a tiger, inspired by trips to Africa.

With assets of $1.4 million, Durst's company was so small the Quebec Securities Commission initially refused to approve its prospectus.

DEFENDS INDUSTRY

"The bar-restaurant industry business is considered a borderline industry, it conjures up images of the underworld," Durst admitted in his Old Montreal office, richly decorated with carved antiques, Persian rugs and a zebra-skin rug.

Durst hopes he's proven the naysayers wrong.

"Two years ago people didn't think I'd make it," he said. "I'll get rid of that barman image sooner or later."

Born in France's Alsace region near the German border 52 years ago, Durst — which in German means thirst — left the country to avoid fighting in the Algerian war.

Durst arrived in Canada with a forestry degree to work in New Brunswick forests. He then got a job as a bellboy in a Quebec hotel and gradually moved up the ranks.

In 1965 he opened the city's first anglophone disco, Cave Don Juan.

Durst plans to take La Cage aux Sports to other centres in Canada and to set up franchises in Chicago.

As for tonight's game, he's not interested in who wins.

"All I care about is whether they go into overtime. It means more business."

Business briefs

SAO PAULO (AP) — A strike by over 30,000 auto workers demanding higher pay has shut down assembly lines at the Brazilian subsidiaries of Ford and Volkswagen, management and union spokesmen said Wednesday.

Autolatina, the holding company that oversees both subsidiaries, said the walkout, which started Tuesday, had "paralysed the production of 1,540 passenger cars a day."

It said the strike was causing daily losses of $14 million US.

Volkswagen and Ford, Brazil's No.1 and No.3 auto producers, have accounted for almost 60 per cent of the more than 680,000 vehicles sold on the domestic market so far this year.

BRUSSELS (AP) — Crude steel output in the non-communist world rose 6.8 per cent in September to 36.1 million metric tons from 33.8 million tonnes in September 1986, the International Iron and Steel Institute reported Wednesday.

The United States reported a 35-per-cent gain in production. European Economic Community production dropped and moderate gains were posted by Japan, Brazil and Korea.

For the first nine months of 1987, international steel production was running 0.5 per cent ahead of 1986, at 315.82 million tonnes.

NEW YORK (AP) — Morgan Stanley Group Inc. said Wednesday its third-quarter net income shot up 84 per cent.

Two other major investment firms, E.F. Hutton Group Inc. and Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., reported flat or lower quarterly profits.

Morgan Stanley said its profit in the quarter ended Sept. 30 was $72.9 million US, or $2.82 a share, on revenue of $851.9 million, up from $554.3 million in third-quarter 1986.

Hutton said its third-quarter net income was $8.7 million, or 26 cents a share, compared with $8.2 million a year earlier. Revenue rose to $988.9 million from $674.5 million.

Shearson reported its third-quarter profit fell to $51 million, or 51 cents per share, from $65 million a year earlier. Shearson's third-quarter revenue was $1.3 billion, up from $1.1 billion a year ago.

NEW YORK (AP) — ITT Corp. said Wednesday its third-quarter profit jumped nearly 67 per cent, boosted by increased earnings on insurance, consumer finance, its Sheraton hotels and communications.

Profit for the period was $210 million or $1.39 a share, compared with $126 million a year earlier. Revenue was $4.8 billion, up 11 per cent.

GLENVIEW, Ill. (AP) — Kraft Inc. has reported a sixfold increase in third-quarter earnings, mainly because of a strong performance by international food products and increased battery sales.

Kraft said its third-quarter net income jumped to $124 million, or 91 cents a share, from $21.2 million a year earlier.

The company said year-ago earnings had been depressed by a $50.3-million loss on discontinued operations and an after-tax charge of $26 million to restructure production for the Duracell battery line.

Sales for third-quarter 1987 totalled $2.8 billion, up nearly 28 per cent from a year earlier.

VANCOUVER (CP) — West Fraser Timber Co. Ltd. of Vancouver had earnings of $36.2 million or $2.71 a share for the nine months ended Sept. 30, up 36 per cent from the previous year when it earned $26.6 million or $1.90 a share.

Sales were $309.5 million, up nine per cent from last year.

Douglas and Norma MacKinnon feted on wedding anniversary

AYER'S CLIFF (IH) — Douglas and Norma MacKinnon, both members of Beulah United Church choir were asked to come to this church hall on Friday evening, October 16 for a group picture of the choir.

Upon arriving they were taken y complete surprise to find not only the choir but a large number of relatives and friends gathered to honor them on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary.

They were met at the door by his sister Margaret and her husband Alvin Ross and daughter Helen MacKinnon. Margaret pinned on her sister-in-law a corsage of a gardenia and red rose corsage while Alvin pinned a gardenia boutonniere on the lapel of his brother-in-law Douglas.

The couple's son Angus escorted them amid salutations to the head table. Seated with them were three of their four children, Angus, Helen and Peter and their friends Mary Ellen MacKay and Warren Loomis.

Garlands of blue and white extended from a blue and silver anniversary symbol draped to the corners of the hall and a background of a silver anniversary banner created a festive look.

The head table was centered with the anniversary cake, made and decorated by Jean Cass in white with blue and silver flowers, this was flanked by white candles in silver holders. White and blue flowers adorned the guest tables.

Angus acted as M.C., and his remarks were spiced with humour which caused many chuckles. After welcoming everyone he invited Stanley Beerworth to give the blessing.

Members of the Anglican Church Women served a delicious roast beef dinner with all the trimmings. The couple of the silver years made the initial cut of their cake which was served with ice cream. Douglas and Norma circulated to serve this and have a word with each one.

Angus gave a version of the courtship of his parents "as it was told to me, for I was not here then" he said.

Norma, an Irish colleen and her sister came to Canada and Montreal from Ireland, Norma to teach music, and after her introduction to Douglas, it all led up to the date of October 13, 1962 and their marriage at a church in Montreal.

Angus and Peter showed a video of the wedding, Norma a radiant bride all in white, and Douglas, dressed in his best, both smiling happily.

The pictures showed life on the family farm in Barnston where they still reside, the children as they arrived and as they grew up as a happy family on the farm.

Kathleen, their daughter, is a student at Mount Allison, New Brunswick and because of the distance and time element she was unable to attend the party, but she was here in thoughts and her parents received her phone call.

Marion (Perry) Mayhew spoke of the MacKinnon family and the friendship of her father and Mr. MacKinnon, Sr., mentioning the home-coming of Douglas with his bride, the arrival of Angus, the elder son and the happy years together as friends of the MacKinnons.

Douglas is a graduate of Macdonald College in Agriculture, he and Ross Carson were students together and since have remained friends. Ross and his wife were at the party and Ross had a few words to say about college days, and later when Norma joined the MacKinnon family.

Angus thanked the ACW group for making the party the success it was by catering for the dinner, and also thanked Lorraine Harrison who assisted in the organizing of the event.

There were several prettily wrapped and ribboned gifts which the couple opened to reveal the lovely items for their home. Their children presented them with a silver engraved tray. The gifts were circulated for all to admire and there were also many congratulatory cards and currency.

Douglas voiced their appreciation for the grand surprise and spoke of "being turned off when questions came up" such as being invited to have their choir pictures taken that evening. He thanked everyone for coming and to those who had helped with the planning. Norma added her thanks and mentioned the gifts, saying how great it is to have friends.

As the guests were leaving they offered congratulations and best wishes to Douglas and Norma for blessings of health to share many more years together with their family and friends. Both are actively involved in agriculture, Norma in teaching, as she has taught music and English in the schools. Angus and Peter, following in the steps of their dad have both graduated from Macdonald College diploma class in Agriculture, Helen is taking her final year at Ottawa University and Kathy is first year at Mount Allison University.

Reading: Belongs to another time, world

Little House

By Katharine Snow

Rainy days and cool evenings are as wonderful at Spider Lake as are the long days of sunshine. We light a fire in the great stone fireplace and settle down with our books.

My husband reads of fish and birds and plants. My son plies his way through fantasy and science fiction but I make for the old bookshelves on either side of the fireplace to find joy in reading.

First this year I found a book entitled, "Is Sex Necessary?" by E.B. White and James Thurber published in New York and London by Harper Brothers in 1929.

The title was timely and the forward intriguing — "During the past year, two factors in our civilization have been greatly overemphasized. One is aviation, the other is sex."

There is a preface by a Lt.-Colonel H.R.L. Le Boutellier. "The trouble with marriage is that it cannot be successfully applied to the present day (1929) emotional relationships of men and women. It could much more easily be applied to something else — possibly professional tennis."

There are wonderful chapters on such things as Pedestalism (American worship of the female), Frigidity in Men, How To Tell Love From Passion and What Should Children Tell Their Parents? Throughout the book are scattered the droll, inimitable sketches of James Thurber.

It concludes with "Answers to Hard Questions" and a glossary of terms. "Bogomism is a tendency of the male to raise small potted plants and not go out" and "Fuller's Retort" is a remark made by a Patterson, N.J. girl one night in Patterson, N.J."

I next took out a musty looking novel, "The Vanity Box" by Alice Stuyvesant (1910). This unfolds as a tale of suspected murder, intrigue and love and demonstrates that a story may be exciting and interesting without the use of either obscenity or explicit sex.

At the height of their passion when the heroine declares her undying love, the hero of the piece "bent down and kissed the hem of her gown."

My last selection was less happy. It was a slender volume, "Tom Tiddler's Ground" by Florence Marryat, published in London in 1886 by Swan, Sonnenschein, Lowry & Co.

Miss Marryat apparently was an elocutionist, singer and actress. This book is her account of a trip to America for a three month tour with her musical and dramatic monologue, "Love Letters."

She arrived in New York on October 25, 1884, at the time of a presidential election. How little things change! Of this time she writes, "What seems incomprehensible is, that a great nation like America should put up two men (Cleveland and Blaine, in this case) for election as its president — men picked and chosen as the worthiest and ablest among them for such a position — and then go to work to ferret out every fault they have ever committed and hold them up to execration in the newspapers."

She found American men courteous enough but, "they spit incessantly... They must spit themselves into consumption." And she didn't go to a single ball game!

The women, she found, "had fine eyes, good heads of hair but seldom any figure." She adds, "American women are not well-bred. They have none of the easy grace in society which marks a woman of fashion."

Canada fares no better in her fastidious, English hands. She tells of overhearing two steerage passengers on her voyage over discussing the meaning of the word "epicure," one tells the other, "an hepicure is the sort of a chap as can heat anything."

Miss Marryat feels that to travel in Canada, one must be such "an hepicure." With the exception of The Windsor at Montreal and the Rossin House at Toronto she writes that she did not find a hotel worthy of the name.

In general she described Canada as "flat, barren and unprofitable looking."

I ended up not caring too much for Florence Marryat or her book.

Reading, like everything else we do up here, seems to belong to another time, another world. There is always a period of adjustment before we successfully settle down again in the real, real world.

Beware of airport religious frauds

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I recently returned from a vacation that gave us an opportunity to walk through three airports — Atlanta, O'Hare in Chicago and Los Angeles International. In all three places we encountered clergymen begging for money.

My wife, who is a soft touch, dropped a dollar bill into every box she saw.

When I told her I thought it was a racket, she snapped, "It can't be. The airports wouldn't allow it."

In the Los Angeles airport, a kindly looking gentleman wearing a neat black suit and a clerical collar seemed friendly, so I asked him who benefited from the contributions. He said, "the homeless." I then asked how they helped the homeless. He replied, "We help people make their house payments." My wife picked up on the implausibility of that response and asked, "How can they be making payments on a house if they are homeless?" I didn't want any trouble so I quickly pulled her away.

What can you tell us about these airport solicitors, Ann Landers? Your readers depend on you to get behind the scenes and let us know what's going on. — Suspicious in Orange County

Dear Sus: I did a little digging and the best information came from a recent piece in The New York Times by Robert Lindsey. Here are some facts:

On a good day in the L.A. airport, a man who is dressed like a priest collects about $150. He wears a small badge identifying him as a minister of the Universal Life Church, a mail-order organization in Modesto, Calif.

Ann Landers

Security officials say that at a growing number of airports, new groups asking for money have appeared. Maurice McDonald, manager of Lindbergh Airport in San Diego, said, "We have ladies that look like nurses but they aren't, men who look like priests but they aren't, and kids in training to be Hare Krishnas. They pounce on servicemen and dazzle them with sweetness. If you're 17 or 18 years old and haven't seen anybody but a drill sergeant for 14 weeks and someone smiles at you and says, 'Hi, where ya' from?' you might donate, too."

James Kapel, an assistant city attorney for Los Angeles, said, "The problem is that it is very difficult to take action against a religion."

I would like to suggest, Dear Readers, that if you want to donate money to a religious organization, don't drop money in a box at an airport or mail it anywhere. Give it to your local church. Most churches are struggling these days and they deserve your help.

Dear Ann Landers: From time to time you mention support groups for readers who have a variety of problems and illnesses. I am sure that these groups do a great deal of good.

A number of us have rare diseases. There are no telethons for us nor do we get public support. There is, however, a place to write that will put people with rare diseases in touch with one another or help them start a self-help group. Please tell your readers about it. It has been wonderful for me and my family. The address is: National Organization for Rare Disorders, P.O. Box 8923, New Fairfield, Conn. 06812. Please enclose a long self-addressed stamped envelope with 39 cents return postage. Sign me — Happier Now

Dear Happier: So am I. Almost every day a plea from someone with a rare disease crosses my desk. I'm delighted to know help is available for them. Thanks for writing.

Mrs. Lynne (Bennett) Whitehead of Magog is a patient in La Providence Hospital. She has undergone surgery and is feeling much better now. Relatives and friends extend best wishes for a continued and lasting recovery.

Thoughts are with Claudette Marcoux of Sutton with many good wishes that she will soon be just fine again. Get well soon!

She was born in Eaton, Quebec, and brought up by her parents in Lost Nation. After marriage she lived with her husband's parents, Tom Gray and Laura Morse, until their house burned down. Then she and Percy moved to a farm in Eaton where they lived until 1956, when they moved to Sawyerville, Quebec upon retirement. Pearl had been keeping house there until her illness this summer. Since July 12, she had been living at the Sawyerville Senior Residence, where she received excellent care and continued to enjoy visits from her friends and relatives.

Pearl is survived by her two children Lynn Orin of Moose Jaw, Sask., and Donna Gayle (Mrs. T. Ahmedali) of Brossard, Quebec, her grandchildren Cheryl Ann Gray, Kelly Lynn and wife Pamela, Michelle and Pamela Gray, Kevin Scott McBurney, Omer and Trevor Ahmedali, and two great-grandchildren, Richard and Heather.

She will also be sadly missed by her sisters Ellen Lightfoot of Waterloo, Quebec and Ruth Call of Calgary, Alberta, and their children Elwood and Everett, and Janice, respectively, and their families.

Sincere thanks are extended by the family to the friends and neighbours and to the Residence for their kind expressions of sympathy, for beautiful flowers, and for donations to various organizations.

Interment was in Eaton Cemetery, Rev. James Lawson officiating, on September 17.

With us or apart, this dear, cheerful lady will remain fondly in the thoughts of her family and friends. Peacefully sleeping, free from pain. In God's own time we will meet again.

CARE IN ACTION.

Many in the Third World have yet to have a drop of safe drinking water.
CARE is helping change that. With self-help projects that enable communities to build their own water systems themselves. And clinics. And schools. With their own hands.
With safer water and improved sanitation, people enjoy better health and nutrition. With irrigation, they can have better crops, forage and fuel.
Won't you give a hand?

This week I invite you to watch two fictional declarers at work, Willy Nilly and Careful Charlie. Their counterparts can be found the world over. Which of these players do you most resemble?

Willy Nilly watched his opponents take the first three heart tricks and then switch to a club. He rose with the ace and made what for him could be considered an advanced play. He played his diamond queen, and a low diamond to the ace, and then ruffed a diamond with the spade 10. If diamonds were 4-2 (the most likely division), he could then draw trumps ending in dummy and cash two more diamond tricks for his contract. Alas, although diamonds were 3-3, trumps divided 4-1, so Willy was out of luck.

When Careful Charlie played the same deal, he too realized there was a way of protecting against the likely 4-2 diamond split, but he was careful enough to first find out how the trumps were divided. After the defenders took their heart tricks and then played a club, Charlie won the ace and played a spade to the nine. Then he cashed dummy's jack of spades. When East showed out on the second spade, Charlie knew that his only chance to make the contract rested with the less likely 3-3 diamond division. So he drew trumps and played three rounds of diamonds. When all followed on the diamonds, he discarded his losing clubs to make 10 tricks. Of course, if both defenders had followed to the second round of spades, Charlie would then have played the diamonds just as Willy Nilly had.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Frank Viola's pitching is the difference

Minnesota turns upside down after Twins take World Series

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The party was on in Minnesota, home to the biggest home-bodies in baseball.

Champions of the World Series for the first time in their history, the Twins returned to the Metrodome field for the last time in 1987 Sunday night to take a bow before their fans after beating the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 in Game 7 of the World Series.

There couldn't have been a more fitting tribute. Home, after all, was where it all happened for the Twins.

"Go party!" Gary Gaetti told what was left of a crowd of 55,376 as he and his teammates took their turn at the microphone. "And have a good time. You deserve it."

Never had a team won a World Series by winning all its home games without winning on the road. How could it have been otherwise?

The Twins built the best home record of any team in baseball this season, 56-25, but had the worst road record of any team to ever win a pennant, 29-52.

The Cardinals, who have been to three World Series in the '80s, came here hoping to avenge a 1985 loss to the Kansas City Royals.

But, with their home-run leader, Jack Clark, lost entirely and Terry Pendleton limited by injuries, there was to be no satisfaction for the Cardinals in Minnesota.

"We lost, that's the bottom line," Cardinals centre fielder Willie McGee said. "We had a heck of a year, heck of a year, but they are the world champions. There is nothing to comment on."

Frank Viola pitched eight innings, retiring 11 in a row after he allowed the second of two RBI singles in the second inning and was named the Series most valuable player. Viola won Game 1 in Minnesota and lost Game 4 in St. Louis.

The Twins lost 91 games in 1986, two years after nearly leaving Minneapolis. The franchise had moved once, from Washington to Minnesota in 1961.

The turnaround did not come without change.

The Twins got Jeff Reardon from the Montreal Expos in February, and he had 31 saves. Dan Gladden, the only player on either team to hit in all seven games of the World Series, came in a trade from the San Francisco Giants last March. Don Baylor came over from the Boston Red Sox on Aug. 31, the cutoff date for post-season eligibility, and hit a game-tying home run in the sixth game.

The Twins won the first two games of the Series, 10-1 and 8-4 at the Metrodome. They lost the next three — 3-1, 7-1 and 4-2 — at Busch Stadium, an imposing ballpark that provided a stark contrast to the cozy, sometimes crazy little park that once was called a circus tent in downtown Minneapolis.

In the final two games at Minnesota, the Twins came from behind twice. They trailed John Tudor 4-1 in Game 5 before winning 11-5 on Saturday. Baylor hit a two-run homer that tied the score 4-4, and Kent Hrbek hit a grand slam the next inning to put the game away.

In the seventh game, St. Louis led 2-1 against Viola until Minnesota tied it in the fifth and went ahead in the sixth.

Danny Cox, who replaced starting pitcher Joe Magrane in the fifth inning, walked the first two batters in the six and Todd Worrell came on in relief. Cox pitched 71-3 innings in Thursday night's Game 5.

After Tim Lardner popped out, Worrell walked Lombardo to load the bases. Gladden struck out, but Gagne hit a hard one-hopper down the third-base line. Tom Lawless made a diving stop of the ball, but his one-hop throw was too late to get Gagne, and Brunansky scored from third.

The Twins scored another run in the eighth. Lardner singled with one out, and after Al Newman popped out, Gladden doubled to right field.

Viola allowed consecutive singles to Jim Lindeman, McGee and Tony Pena for one run in the second, and after there were two away, Steve Lake singled home another run. After Lake's single, Viola did not allow another base-runner until Herr singled with one out in the sixth.

That's when the Cardinals got robbed by umpire Lee Weyer of the National League. Viola had Herr picked off first base. Herr broke for second, and Twins first baseman Kent Hrbek threw to Lombardo at second. Hrbek stepped back, and Herr retreated. First, Herr ran into Hrbek, then he stepped back into first base, clearly under the tag of Viola, who came over to help out in the rundown.

Viola came out to end the eighth inning, and Reardon came on to get the final three outs.

Jensen tough in Sherbrooke's loss to New Haven Nighthawks

By Craig Pearson

SHERBROOKE — Shooting against a goalie who could otherwise be an octopus with lightning-quick reflexes just isn't fun.

The Sherbrooke Canadiens discovered that Sunday afternoon at the Sports Palace when netminder Al Jensen stopped, blocked, and kicked out 35 of the 38 shots he faced to give the New Haven Nighthawks a 4-3 American Hockey League victory.

"We had good chances, we just weren't sharp," Canadiens coach Pat Burns said. "Jensen just closed the door on us."

He said left winger Steven Fletcher missed chances as did captain Perry Ganchar — who rarely does — though he did contribute a goal. Why, even high scoring Gilles "Thibaudeau" had his chances, but didn't always capitalize, Burns said.

"We weren't sharp but it is not because we didn't try," Burns said of his team's hard-skating performance. "New Haven is a lot like our team. They're not big up front and they skate well so when you have two teams like that..." well, you'd better be set to watch a lot of end-to-end play that can even tire out the fans.

Scoring started when Wayne Gagne faked a slap shot on a power play before quickly passing to teammate Guy Rouleau who redirected it past Jensen to put the Canadiens ahead at 2:03 of the first period.

Paul Kelly's wrist shot at 2:13 of the second period was good enough to beat Sherbrooke netminder Vincent Riendeau at 2:13 of the second period.

New Haven's Hubie McDonough then scored with a crowd in front of the Sherbrooke net to give the Nighthawks the lead at 6:49. Midway in the same period, Jim Leavins caught a pass from behind the net and snapped it by Riendeau on a power play to increase New Haven's lead.

The Canadiens added one of their own when Thibaudeau stole the puck from behind a Nighthawks defender, promptly spun around, and stuffed it passed Jensen unassisted.

GOT WINNER

But Ken Hammond notched the winner while his team was short one player at 6:48 of the third period. Perry Ganchar contributed a last one for the Canadiens with 22 seconds remaining in the game.

New Haven, second in the AHL's Northern Division, raised its win-loss-tied record to 5-4-1 with the win. Sherbrooke, right behind New Haven in team standings, had its record lowered to 4-4-1.

Viola played a heck of a series

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)— Frank Viola, the one called "Sweet Music," was in perfect pitch for Game 7 of the World Series.

Viola allowed six hits in eight innings and pitched the Minnesota Twins to a 4-2 victory Sunday over the St. Louis Cardinals and was named the most valuable player of the 1987 Series.

"This is the happiest moment of my life," Viola said. "I'm thinking of all my teammates, my friends and my family."

Viola won the first game of the Series 10-1, allowing five hits.

But he struggled in Game 4 at St. Louis, allowing six hits and five runs in 31-3 innings. The Twins, who finished sixth in the American League West last season, left St. Louis trailing 3-2 and Viola was hoping to get one more chance under the friendly Teflon ceiling at the Metrodome.

"I was happy to have another chance," Viola said. "I ended the season on a much better note than if I had ended it on Game 4. I would have had a bitter taste in my mouth for a long time."

Instead, Viola lived up to his nickname and threw sweet pitches in the seventh game.

Viola's nickname comes from a banner that hangs in the right-field stands and reads: Frankie "Sweet Music" Viola. Viola is 17-0 at the dome in games in which fan Mark Dornfeld has unfurled the banner.

SOME CONCERN

There was some concern over Viola pitching on three days' rest.

Viola was 2-2 in his previous five starts on three days rest, and his earned-run average on those starts was 5.64.

Viola was 2-1 in the Series with a 3.72 ERA. He is the 15th pitcher to win the World Series MVP, but just the third in the last 19 seasons. Pitchers won the award 12 times in the first 14 years after the award was started in 1955.

"It's great just to win the World Series but to win the MVP makes it just that much more special,"

Viola said.

It also was special for the left-hander because he did it at the Metrodome.

Viola finished the regular season 17-10, but was 12-3 at home plus the two World Series victories.

Dornfeld has been hanging a banner that reads: Frankie "Sweet Music" Viola since the 1984 season.

Viola left the game in the eighth inning. He allowed two runs in the second inning when the Cardinals got four singles.

But he got his fastball down and retired the next 11 batters, striking out five of them.

Jeff Reardon got the final three outs to preserve the victory for Viola and give the Twins their first World Series title since moving to Minnesota from Washington in 1961.

Minnesota is the first team in World Series history to win the Series by winning all four games at home.

Leafs' Terrion helps farm team win

By The Canadian Press

Greg Terrion didn't waste any time to make an impression in a Newmarket Saints' uniform.

Terrion, who was demoted to Newmarket of the AHL from the NHL parent Toronto Maple Leafs last week, scored the winning goal with 18 seconds left in the game Sunday night to help the Saints to their first victory of the season.

His goal came 16 seconds after Marty Dallman tied it for the Saints.

In Sunday's other games, it was: Rochester Americans 5, Springfield Indians 2; and New Haven Nighthawks 4, Sherbrooke Canadiens 3.

AHL roundup

On Saturday, it was: Fredericton 6, Hershey 3; Adirondack 2, New Haven 1; Nova Scotia 4, Maine 3; Utica 6, Newmarket 3; Binghamton 10, Baltimore 1.

Americans 5 Indians 2
It was the lesser-known players' night to show their stuff for Rochester, the defending AHL champions, as three Americans scored their first goals of the season.

The win moved Rochester into first place in the Southern Division with 11 points, one more than Adirondack.

Jimmy Jackson broke a 2-2 tie with his first of the campaign. Jackson was on his back when he shovelled the puck into the net at 12:55 of the second period. Jeff Parker followed with his first of the season three minutes later and Ken Priestley fired his first goal into an empty net with 34 seconds left in the third period.

Rochester, 5-2-1, leads Adirondack by one point, although the Wings, 5-1-0, hold two games in hand.

Springfield, 3-2-1, remained in sixth place in the tight Northern Division.

Minnesota shaky, but still champ

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The biggest losers in World Series history weren't losers at all.

The Minnesota Twins lost 77 games, more than any other Series winner ever. They were outscored by their opponents in the regular season, they had a 4.63 ERA, they never won a road World Series game.

No other baseball champion has had so many negatives.

How will history remember the Minnesota Twins?

"As world champions," said Don Baylor, who was within one strike of a championship with the Boston Red Sox last year and who finally realized his dream this season with the Twins.

"The only thing that matters is having the championship ring and being in the record books," Roy Smalley said from a champagne-soaked dressing room Sunday night after the Twins defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 in the Series' seventh game. "Nothing else matters."

Gary Gaetti, who was most valuable player in the Twins' American League playoff victory and who went on to have a fine World Series, had said early in the Series that the Twins were "on a mission."

"It is accomplished," he said, clutching a bottle of bubbly in one hand, a cigarette in the other. "You go on a mission from spring training every year. It just intensifies when you get to the post-season."

WERE LONGSHOTS

It seemed like Mission Impossible all season for the Twins, who were 71-91 last year and who started 1987 as 150-1 longshots to win the World Series.

When the Twins captured the AL West with an 85-77 record — and with the worst road record ever for a first-place team, 29-52 — "people expected us to get swept by Detroit in the playoffs," Baylor said.

The Twins didn't get swept. Instead they even won a couple of games on the road to take the playoffs in five and then blew the Cardinals away in the first two Series games in the Metrodome.

Three losses at Busch Stadium followed, but Baylor was stunned at the looseness of his teammates — most of them younger, most of them in pressure situations for the first time in their careers.

"It was like we were getting dressed to go to the beach," Baylor said as he shared a glass of wine with Smalley, who was celebrating his 35th birthday. "None of the guys were in their lockers, gnawing at the bit. Guys were real loose."

"I've played with some great teams, some great offensive teams with great pitching, too... and never won it all. But the character of this club is something different."

Bucks defeat Soviets in basketball

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks knew the world was watching Sunday.

They believed the reputation of the National Basketball Association hinged on their performance in the league's first encounter with the Soviet Union.

"Today, our boys see what professional basketball is really like," Soviet coach Aleksandr Gomelsky said after the Bucks defeated the Soviet national team, 127-100.

"This is the best basketball in the world," Gomelsky said. "They have very good players and coach. Maybe I study five or six years, my boys could win here."

The Bucks were too quick and too strong defensively for the Soviet team, breaking the game open at the end of the second quarter with a 25-5 run that allowed them to lead 67-36 at halftime.

With its big halftime lead, Milwaukee outscored the Soviets 14-5 four minutes into the second half to build its first 40-point lead.

Jerry Reynolds scored 24 points and Terry Cummings had 23 to lead the Bucks, who were ahead by as many as 48 points in the third quarter.

The Bucks won the opener of the landmark tournament Friday night, beating Tracer Milan of Italy, the European Cup champions, 123-111. The Soviets defeated Tracer 135-108 Saturday.

BIG RELIEF

"We were the favorites and we knew we had to win," Milwaukee coach Buc Harris said. "I certainly didn't think we'd be in a position to be 40 points ahead."

The Bucks, one of the NBA's top teams for the last decade, forced the Soviet team into 17 first-half turnovers with pressure defence led by guards Paul Pressey and Reynolds.

The Soviets shot only 31 per cent from the field in the first half, making 14 of 45 shots. They were 35 of 104 for the game (34 per cent).

A 12-2 scoring run sparked by fast-break dunks from Reynolds and Jack Sikma gave Milwaukee a 38-26 first-quarter lead, and the Bucks rolled from there.

The inside play of Sikma, Cummings and John Stroeder in the second quarter helped Milwaukee close with the 25-5 run that put the Soviets in the 31-point hole at halftime.

Sikma, Stroeder and Randy Breuer added 14 points apiece for Milwaukee, playing before a sell-out crowd of 11,052 in its home arena. The game was nationally televised to more than 30 countries.

Forward Valeri Gorbunov scored 20 points, guard Sharunas Marchulis added 19 and forward Aleksandr Volkov 17 for the Soviets, who played without injured starting center Aleksandr Belostenin.

Reserve center Victor Pankrashkin fouled out in the third quarter when the Bucks enjoyed a 23-9 rebound advantage.

Milwaukee was without four of its top guards — Sidney Moncrief, who is injured; Ricky Pierce, who is a contract holdout, and Craig Hodges and John Lucas, who are unsigned.

Yugoslavia set a world record in the individual air pistol competition with a round of 489.0 (387, 102.0), barely beating the record of 488.3 set by the Soviet Union's Svetlana Smirnova.

VIENNA (AP) — Jonas Svensson of Sweden rallied to beat Israel's Amos Mansdorf 1-6, 1-6, 6-2, 6-3, 7-5 and win a $155,000 US Grand Prix tennis tournament Sunday.

He was the second Swede to win the tournament. Jan Gunnarsson was the first, in 1985.

FAISALABAD, Pakistan (Reuter) — Salim Malik's first career one-day international century helped Pakistan to an easy victory over Sri Lanka Sunday that clinched first place in Group B of the cricket World Cup.

Pakistan, unbeaten in five games, was already assured of a berth in the semifinals going into the meaningless match with a Sri Lankan side with no chance of qualifying for further play.

Captain Imran Khan's team made sure of finishing at the top of Group B and will play the first semifinal November 4 in Lahore against the second placed team in group A. The final will be Nov. 8 in Calcutta, India.

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Bulgaria set a world record Sunday in the women's air rifle team competition in the final events of fifth Airgun World Championship and Junior World Cup.

Freddie Sims 32, Calgary Stamps 12

By The Canadian Press

Nomadic tailback Freddie Sims gave the Calgary fans something to remember, although the outcome of his efforts was something they'd probably rather forget.

Sims carried the ball 25 times for 135 yards, caught six passes for another 78 yards and scored two third-quarter touchdowns as the B.C. Lions beat the Calgary Stampeders 32-12 in CFL action Sunday.

It was quite a performance for Sims, who was making his first start for the Lions since the 1985 Grey Cup. Since then, he has travelled from B.C. to the Montreal Alouettes to Calgary — he rushed for all of two yards in his only appearance with the Stamps last year — to Indianapolis of the NFL and back to B.C.

"I've just bounced around from team to team," Sims said. "I gave the NFL a shot and that didn't work."

"Here I am back again with the Lions. I'm back here now and I hope to stay."

Calgary led by a point at the half, but the Lions roared in the second half, scoring 27 points. Sims caught a 25-yard scoring pass from quarterback Roy Dewalt and added an eight-yard touchdown along the ground.

In Sunday's other game, the Edmonton Eskimos thumped the Winnipeg Blue Bombers 49-24. On Saturday, the Hamilton Tiger-Cats snapped a six-game losing streak with a 28-2 victory over Ottawa for the Rough Riders' 13th consecutive defeat.

CFL roundup

On Friday, Toronto eliminated Saskatchewan from the playoffs with a 25-3 victory.

With two games left in the regular season and all playoff berths clinched, first place in both the Eastern and Western Divisions have yet to be decided.

Winnipeg, with 22 points, will play host to Toronto next Sunday in an Eastern Division skirmish. The Argos have 21 points and Hamilton is third with 14. Ottawa is the doormat with four points.

In the West, Edmonton and B.C. are tied with 20 points and the Eskimos will play host to the Lions on Sunday. Calgary is four back and Saskatchewan is nine.

Eskimos 49 Blue Bombers 24

In Edmonton, the Eskimos struck for a pair of touchdowns 25 seconds apart early in the third quarter to avenge an earlier 38-20 loss to Winnipeg.

Milson Jones scored his second touchdown of the game on a two-yard plunge and Dan Bass followed with a 31-yard touchdown interception of a Tom Clements' pass as the Eskimos broke a two-game losing streak.

Bass' major gave Edmonton breathing room after the Bombers had cut the lead to 22-17 at the half.

"I saw him (Clements) look to the weak side," said Bass, his shoulder wrapped in ice and his forehead cut. "Tom saw our guy fall and figured the area was open."

Another key play for the Eskimos was a 111-yard touchdown run by Henry Williams on a missed field goal. Brian Kelly also had a good game, catching three passes for 119 yards to tie teammate Tom Scott for most 100-yard games, 40.

Ticats 28 Rough Riders 2

Ottawa, 2-14, moved closer to setting a CFL record — however dubious the achievement — for the most points scored against in one season. Ottawa has allowed 550 points, 17 short of the total Saskatchewan allowed in 1959 when they won one game and lost 15.

"They beat us off the ball on the line and we just got our cans kicked," said Ottawa head coach Fred Glick.

Ottawa's only points were singles by punter Ken Clark and place kicker Dean Dorsey.

Ken Stapler, Tony Champion and Howard Field scored touchdowns for Hamilton. Roy Kurtz converted the majors and he booted a single and twofield goals.

End season undefeated as they topple Queen's 39-10

Gaiters show national television audience what they're made of

By Craig Pearson

LENNOXVILLE — Everything turns to slow motion when Gaiters' quarterback Tony Harris winds up and aims out a long toss to swift wide receiver Wally Zatylny, who might just as easily have been either a track star or game show host.

The crowd quiets, except for the ubiquitous stadium John Maddens who blurt out analyses like, 'Wally! It's for Wally!' When the ball finally catches Zatylny, always in full trot, and the suction cups he calls hands snag the ball, the fans dutifully cheer in unison.

At the end of the third quarter of Saturday's sunny match against Queen's, watched by some 4,000 loony Gaiterdome fans and televised live across Canada by The Sports Network, Zatylny returned a punt 95 yards for a touchdown that was called back because of a Bishop's penalty. But so what? We're talking about Wallyworld here.

Zatylny just turned around two plays later in the fourth quarter, caught a Harris missile beside two colliding Golden Gaels defensive backs playing Abbott and Costello, and ran untouched for the major on a 90 yard pass-and-run play.

"Of course Wally's a hot dog. But I love it and the fans love it. That's part of the reason for the amount of publicity we get. If I was a fan and not a coach, I'd pay five bucks to see him play," said Bishop's coach Bruce Coulter.

For what it's worth, the score was Bishop's 39, Queen's 10. But the game didn't really matter for the Gaiters who clinched first place in the Ontario-Quebec Interuniversity Football Conference by beating Concordia the week before, except that they wanted to end their season unblemished. They did too, with a sparkling 7-0 won-loss record.

And though the Harris-Zatylny Pitch-and-catch Show was as fun as watching Tim Raines steal third, it's not what won the game for the Gaiters. The Lennoxville squad's performance defined the phrase 'team effort.'

Critics would be hard pressed to find much wrong with the club, other than starting slow at the beginning of the game and again at the start of the second half. The defensive down linemen, for instance, swung the Queen's offensive line around like four blow up dolls.

Notable performances came from defensive backs Paul McHenry and Vic Gilmour who shut down Queen's speedy wide receiver Sheridan Baptiste and from safety Al Matheson who led the team with eight tackles. Golden Gaels tough guy Dave Burleigh registered nine unassisted tackles.

Coulter said his team's effort was well rounded, and though statistically had nothing to gain from the game, didn't treat it like an afternoon scrimmage.

"I think there was a fair pressure on us today to have an undefeated season and because of the national television," said Coulter.

QB Harris was pleased with the win of course, and of the 300 yards he collected by going to the air, but he said, "I was worried I wasn't going to have a chance to perform at all. We had the ball twice in the first quarter." But "I'm happy the way things worked out."

Part of Bishop's advantage, said Harris, was the time he had to throw, build a log cabin, or do just about anything he wanted behind his offensive line. "I think their secondary was a little slower than we've faced. I had all day today."

Queen's opened the scoring with three points at the end of its first drive with a 42-yard field goal by kicker Connie Mandala.

It wasn't until the end of the first quarter that Bishop's started to strut its strength, when airborne linebacker Ron Lussier did his Superman imitation by flying from out of nowhere to intercept a toss from Queen's quarterback Paul Senyshyn before running 30 yards uncontested for the touchdown.

Running back Keith Kelly darted through the middle standing up behind burly tackle Poly Georganos from one yard out to increase Bishop's lead to 14-3 at 8:58 of the second quarter. The Gaiters picked up another point after Simon Restall's kick into the end zone forced the Gaels to concede a point.

A pass to wide receiver Steve Zatylny, Wally's brother, at the far left of the Queen's end zone with less than three minutes remaining in the half upped the score for Bishop's to 22-3.

Halftime was turned into something more than just a chance to refill a beer and get a warm hot dog. The 110-plus members of the Queen's University marching bands, including a hoard of bagpipers, combined with the school's sharp cheerleading squad to entertain with music and stunts like female cheerleaders standing on their male counterparts' shoulders.

In the third quarter, with Trevor Haines into throw for the Golden Gaels, Queen's finally connected for a touchdown with a fantastic 38-yard pass and run play to Vince Panetta who broke several tackles before legging out the rest of his performance.

Restall added three points for Bishop's on a 15-yard field goal with just under three minutes remaining in the half. Zatylny then made his 90-yard touchdown performance at the beginning of the fourth quarter before teammate and running back Dennis Walker who caught a short pass from Harris and trotted in for a touchdown from seven yards out to make the final score 39-10.

The Gaiters will face the Carleton Ravens, who they already beat once this year, next weekend in Lennoxville in the semi-final match in the O-QIFC.

Luc Bisailon was awarded the Jim Etcheverry Award for outstanding athletic and classroom achievement.

St. Paul's Church news

KNOWLTON (KT) — At St. Paul's Church - Sunday October 3 and October 11. On both Sundays Holy Communion was celebrated at the 8 and 10 a.m. services.

On October 3 the Reverend Christopher Carr, Assistant Director of Chaplaincy (Training) was welcomed to both services.

Believe in newspapers. They can work marketing magic.
