Arab protests stall Israel embassy move

OTTAWA (CP) — While Arab pressure grew, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald indicated Thursday that the government has pushed to the back burner its plan to move the Canadian embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

Before meeting Arab ambassadors, she said in an interview "there are a lot of other things that, because of their immediacy, are of higher priority" on the government agenda than transferring the embassy to Jerusalem.

Later, representatives of nine Arab states had little more to say following a meeting with Miss MacDonald than was contained in a joint statement issued Wednesday condemning the proposal and calling for its reversal.

However, Moroccan Ambassador

Noureddine Hasnaoui said the Arab countries will obviously not sever diplomatic links with Canada before Ottawa actually moves the embassy to Jerusalem.

"We hope that everything will be okay," said Saudi Arabian Ambassador Sheikh Mohammed Abdul Kadir Muhtasib. He indicated there will be other meetings with the new Progressive Conservative government on the matter.

Earlier, the Council of Muslim Communities of Canada said 200 to 300 people will demonstrate Saturday outside the Parliament Buildings and Prime Minister Joe Clark's residence to protest the government plan.

TRUDEAU OPPOSED

"While former prime minister Pierre Trudeau has criticized the Conservative plan, Liberal MP Herb Gray, a Jew, said the government should not "give in to threats of reprisal."

Arab states and the Palestine Liberation Organization have attacked the proposal. Some Arab spokesmen have said there will be retaliation, perhaps of an economic nature.

A group of exporting companies are so concerned about the proposed move, they have sought an urgent meeting with Clark to ask him to reconsider it.

External affairs officials said embassies are empowered to take additional security measures when they wish. But there were no immediate plans to step up security at Middle East embassies, except perhaps in war-torn Lebanon.

The U.S. is also opposed to the Canadian plan though American and Canadian officials say Washington has not formally approached Ottawa on the issue since Clark became prime minister this week.

Abdullah Abdullah, an Arab League Information Office spokesman here, said Thursday the Arabs want more than a promise to delay the embassy transfer. They want Canada to reverse the decision, he said.

SAY CONTROL ILLEGAL

The Arabs say Israeli control of Jerusalem is illegal. They contend a Canadian step to shift the embassy to Jerusalem would recognize Israeli occupation of the city, a holy place for Moslems and Christians as well as Jews.

Canada urged to use wheatmail

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and the United States could bring the Kremlin to its knees by using their wheat resources as a big stick to force human rights concessions from the Soviet Union, says Ukrainian dissident Valentyn Moroz.

The 43-year-old nationalist, who has spent 14 years in Soviet prison camps and psychiatric institutions, told a news conference Thursday that wheat should be used the same way the Arabs use oil.

Canada and the U.S. produce about 70 per cent of the world's wheat and the Soviet Union is one of their largest grain customers.

Moroz said Western exports to the Soviet Union never reach the people because the leadership siphons them off for use in its own foreign aid programs in the Third World.

Moroz met with Prime Minister Joe Clark, who offered him landed immigrant status and promised to try to have his family released from the Soviet Union.

Although he has a research contract with Harvard University, Moroz said he would seriously consider the offer because of Canada's potential as leader of the international human rights cause and because of the size and cohesiveness of the Ukrainian community here.

Moroz also met with former prime minister John Diefenbaker, whom he has long admired for his stand on human rights.

REMEMBER DIEFENBAKER

He said the Ukrainian nationalist underground still remembers a speech the MP from Prince Albert, Sask., gave at the United Nations 15 years ago in defence of Ukrainian rights.

Moroz was arrested in September, 1965, and sentenced to four years of hard labor for circulating anti-Soviet propaganda and agitating against Soviet power. During his imprisonment he wrote the essay Report from the Beria Preserve, named after the head of the KGB.

He was released in late 1969 but was arrested again on the same charges in June, 1970, and sentenced to 14 years in prison camps and internal exile. The Canadian Freedom for Moroz campaign began at that time.

On July 1, 1974, he began a 145-day hunger strike which almost killed him.

THAT'S SOME EXCUSE...

DRUMMONDVILLE, Que. (CP) — You could bet your wife wouldn't nag if you had Roger Blanchette's explanation for coming home late with a broken jaw.

It seems wild horses did keep this motorist from getting home, as well as seven others.

Two ponies are dead and eight people injured as a result of a spectacular accident on a dark road in the Eastern Townships Wednesday night.

The ordeal began at about 11 p.m. when the ponies strayed onto the road in front of an oncoming car. Blanchette managed to miss the first pony, but was unable to avoid the second, hitting it and virtually tearing the horse in two with the impact.

A second car approaching from the opposite direction then collided with the damaged car. Six were injured in the two vehicles.

And minutes later, a motorcycle ran into the first pony, killing it. The two bikers were thrown into a nearby field.

Blanchette was the only person to suffer serious injury. Police now are looking for the owner of the ponies.

ALOUETTE GLEN WEIR: IT'S A JOB

By CLAUDIA BOWERS

SHERBROOKE — So you're a football fan. You follow the team's accomplishments with the fervor of a young priest about to be ordained, and you can rhyme off statistics and records of performance of the players from A to Z.

But what about someone like me who enjoys the game in general but really doesn't know the difference between a defensive tackle and a linebacker? There's only one thing I'm certain of — that the aim of the game is for one's favorite team — in my case the

...it's just a job

Alouettes — to 'finagle' the ball down the field, into the opposing team's end-zone or to kick it between the goal posts and accumulate either six or three points as a result.

To paint a proper picture of this rough and tumble sport, let's start by explaining the function of the defensive tackle, as seen through the eyes of one of that position's masters, Glen Weir.

First, one must realize there are 24 men on the field, equally divided between two teams. The team with the ball is on the offensive, and the burly vikings attempting to stop the offence is the section of a team called the defence.

Each team is allowed to carry 33 men, and is, in fact, like two teams. Consequently, the defensive players are the stoppers and the offence are the goers.

Now, imagine that each game is like a small war. The defensive line takes its place facing the opponent's offence. The centre places the ball almost under his body and crouches over it like a hen about to hatch the most important egg of her life. At a signal given by the quarterback, who stands directly behind the centre man with his hands outstretched to receive this precious egg, the quarterback is handed the ball and the war is on.

Depending on the play-pattern which has been previously agreed upon while the opposing team is in the huddle, the ball may be passed hand to hand, passed in the air or kicked and it's up to the defence to stop that ball no matter what.

It seems a ridiculous exercise in futility when one thinks of the logic of the game. A group of men, none of whom weigh much under two hundred pounds dash about a large playing field, knocking down, trampling and generally putting out of the picture anyone who threatens to carry that ball. And speaking of the ball, these supposedly grown men are training, exercising and learning to use their feet like swordsmen to either stop an innocuous piece of pigskin known as a football, or to protect their own men as they take possession of it and attempt to infiltrate enemy lines and score a goal.

The defensive tackle is the very large person you see crouching, ready

PARIZEAU: NO DELAY ON ASBESTOS

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau was coy Thursday when asked details of his timetable for the takeover of Asbestos Corp. Ltd., saying only "we won't delay it for more than a couple of months."

Negotiations between the Quebec government and General Dynamics Corp., of St. Louis, Mo., for the purchase of Asbestos Corp. are deadlocked and the government is moving toward expropriation of the company's assets.

General Dynamics owns a 54.6-per cent interest in Asbestos Corp. and is asking $99.75 a share, or $154.5 million. Quebec has offered $42 a share, or $62 million.

After the Quebec government decided to go ahead with an expropriation law last month, Premier Rene Levesque drew a parallel with the takeover by Saskatchewan of potash mines in that province.

Saskatchewan passed an expropriation law and then proceeded to negotiate purchase agreements with potash companies, without resorting to expropriation.

French program lauded

LDSB begins training

By JASPER MEYERS

SHERBROOKE — The Lennoxville District School Board's new intensive French program, set to become part of the curriculum at its nine schools next September, is an exciting and innovative development in French second-language education in the province and the country, says Dr. Gary Anderson, the Harvard-trained director of McGill's Office of Research on Educational Policy.

The program will involve full-day kindergarten attendance with instruction alternating daily between French and English and 60-minute periods of instruction in the first six grades built around a revamped thematic approach to presenting subject matter at the LDSB's schools in Sherbrooke, Lennoxville, Magog, Rock Island, Ayer's Cliff, North Hatley, Bury, Sawyerville and Cookshire.

On May 28, 12 LDSB French teachers began taking the first of a series of five intensive three-week courses taught by professors from the McGill faculty of education which will prepare them to teach the new program next fall. The teachers will gather 30 course credits in the next two or three years, with the McGill faculty coming to the Townships each time so that the teachers will not have to interrupt their teaching work.

Anderson met yesterday with LDSB Director-General Hugh Auger, French Consultant Alice Boulos, who developed the program, and Director of Educational Services Tom Matthews to discuss the evaluation program Anderson has prepared in order to test the progress of children under the new method of instruction.

Anderson said a number of people from McGill are doing initial testing at the kindergarten and Grade One levels at a couple of LDSB schools in order to gather data which will provide a base for judging the impact of the program when it goes into effect in the fall.

He stressed the importance of the fact the evaluation plan has been built into the program before it is implemented, permitting a far more effective monitoring of children's progress and allowing for rapid adjustments, should any prove necessary.

Children will be tested at the beginning and the end of each school year starting next September.

Evaluation will be aimed at collecting two different groups of data — French-language development and general conceptual development in the use of English.

At the kindergarten level, evaluation will take place through informal group quizzes in which the recognition of objects, game playing and the nature of responses to questions requiring action will be observed, and through individual testing. More emphasis will be placed on discursive ability as the children progress.

The tests have been adapted from existing tests developed by the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, the provincial ministry of Education and the CECM.

Anderson said he is confident that the new LDSB program will be as successful a method of teaching French as a full-immersion program but will cost a great deal less because it won't require an increase in the number of teachers employed by the school board. The extra costs involved in setting up an immersion program would be prohibitive for the LDSB.

St. Barnabas marks patronal festival

NORTH HATLEY (BVS) - St. Barnabas Anglican Church will celebrate its patronal festival this Sunday with a special service to be followed by a wine and cheese party.

A recently published book on the history of the North Hatley church will be available for sale. It is entitled, "St. Barnabas, North Hatley - Our Story 1894-1979".

The regular 11 a.m. Sunday service will also be held, followed at 7 p.m. by the special Eucharist Service. The evening preacher will be Rev. Robert McCulloch, rector of Danville and rural dean of Richmond. The wine and cheese party will begin at 8 p.m. in the church hall.

Barnabas, the patron saint of the North Hatley church, was an apostle who founded the Christian church on the island of Cyprus. It is fitting that the North Hatley church history be made available as part of the patronal celebration.

Written by Mrs. E. Detton, Mrs. G. LeBaron and Mrs. T. Matthews, the book is an excellent chronicle of St. Barnabas. Not only does it chronicle its history in detail, but the book includes humorous and colorful anecdotes, enlivening the text.

The story begins in 1894 when construction was completed on the church, following efforts by local and summer people to raise funds. The graceful building was designed by Bertram Goodhue, an architect who became a member of the firm which designed the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City.

The book points out the obvious interest American summer residents took in participating in funeral observances for Queen Victoria and in a later Coronation.

Music has always been central to the church and through the efforts of one minister a Casavant pipe organ was obtained. Mrs. R.G. Spriggs has served as organist for a total of 42 years. During that time she has missed only seven Sundays.

The history of the various church organizations is included: Little Helpers, Ladies Guild, Women's Auxiliary. The annual Sunday School picnic, which included a trip on the steamboat, Pocahontas, is described.

Contributions by the various ministers, lay readers and wardens is also included. The purchase of two different parsonages and changes to the church building are detailed. Historical and present-day photographs illustrate the text.

MRS. JACK ALLAN of Leeds Village

The community of Maple Hill received a severe shock on Sunday morning, May 6, 1979, when it became known that Mrs. Jack Allan had passed away suddenly at her home.

Mrs. Allan was born January 16, 1899, on the fifth range of Leeds, County of Megantic, the third child of the late Robert Montgomery and the late Sadie Jane Bailey. She attended the little country school at Maple Hill and on finishing her education gave a helping hand to many neighbouring homes when it was needed.

On Sept. 28, 1927, she was united in marriage to John Melville Allan and took up residence on the Allan homestead. Two children were born to this union: William Lawrence and Margaret Elizabeth.

Mrs. Allan took a very active part in life and over the years rendered many services to her church and in the community. She was a member of Candlish United Church, a U.C.W. member and chaplain of the L.O.B.A. at the time of her death.

Over the past years she was leader of the Mission Band, Sunday School teacher for a number of years, a Life member of the W.M.S. (now U.C.W.) and the W.A. Group and held many offices in these groups during her life span.

The funeral service was held from J.A. Savoie's Funeral Home, Thetford Mines, where prayers were held at 10:15 a.m. May 9, thence to Candlish United Church for Service at 11:00 a.m. conducted by the pastor, Mr. David Scott, the choir, with the organist, Mrs. Murray Nugent, led in the singing of "O God of Bethel" and "The Old Rugged Cross" with the choir rendering "Amazing Grace," all favorites of the deceased.

The bearers were Garth and Dalton Montgomery and Leslie Bailey (cousins), Keith Allan (nephew), Murray Nugent and Allan Davidson (neighbours).

The many floral pieces and memorials in her name were tokens of esteem in which she was held and given in respect of a good friend and in sympathy to her family.

She was predeceased by her mother in 1935, her father, 1946, her husband, 1956, a brother Charlie, 1963, a son-in-law, Russell Little, 1975, and a sister Helen, in Sept. 1978.

Mrs. Allan spent her entire married life on the Allan farm at Maple Hill. Her friendly smile, cheerful disposition and kind hospitality will be missed by many.

She leaves to mourn her loss her only son Lawrence and an only daughter, Margaret Little, a daughter-in-law Audrey and three grandsons, Kenneth, Charles and James, a brother Leonard of Thetford Mines, and a sister Dorothy of Bury, two sisters-in-law, Mrs. R.L. Allan and Mrs. Myrtle Watkins, a brother-in-law, R.L. Allan, and an only aunt, Mrs. Ada Blair of N.Y., also a number of nieces, nephews, cousins and a host of friends.

Those attending from a distance were from Brantford and Ottawa, Ont., Cabot, Vt., Montreal, Quebec City, the Townships and the surrounding areas.

She was laid to rest beside her husband at Riverside Memorial Cemetery, Kinross Mills.

MRS. JACK ALLAN of Leeds Village

The community of Maple Hill received a severe shock on Sunday morning, May 6, 1979, when it became known that Mrs. Jack Allan had passed away suddenly at her home.

Mrs. Allan was born January 16, 1899, on the fifth range of Leeds, County of Megantic, the third child of the late Robert Montgomery and the late Sadie Jane Bailey. She attended the little country school at Maple Hill and on finishing her education gave a helping hand to many neighbouring homes when it was needed.

On Sept. 28, 1927, she was united in marriage to John Melville Allan and took up residence on the Allan homestead. Two children were born to this union: William Lawrence and Margaret Elizabeth.

Mrs. Allan took a very active part in life and over the years rendered many services to her church and in the community. She was a member of Candlish United Church, a U.C.W. member and chaplain of the L.O.B.A. at the time of her death.

Over the past years she was leader of the Mission Band, Sunday School teacher for a number of years, a Life member of the W.M.S. (now U.C.W.) and the W.A. Group and held many offices in these groups during her life span.

The funeral service was held from J.A. Savoie's Funeral Home, Thetford Mines, where prayers were held at 10:15 a.m. May 9, thence to Candlish United Church for Service at 11:00 a.m. conducted by the pastor, Mr. David Scott, the choir, with the organist, Mrs. Murray Nugent, led in the singing of "O God of Bethel" and "The Old Rugged Cross" with the choir rendering "Amazing Grace," all favorites of the deceased.

Townships talk

Montreal studies Wellington Street

SHERBROOKE - About 90 Montreal merchants were in town recently to look over the revitalization of the centre of town in the Wellington Street area. Here to study the results of increased investment and the participation of their Sherbrooke colleagues in the project, the Montreal group, led by MUC Executive Committee Chairman Yvon Lamarre, remarked on the spirit shown in the collaboration of the merchants and the city in realizing the goal.

Among the questions raised by the group concerned the effects of the Wellington Street mall and the length of time that it took to organize the project. The trip to Sherbrooke is one of many the group is undertaking to study the pros and cons of various commercial centres.

Library to open in Cookshire

COOKSHIRE (FJM) - A lending library will open its doors in Cookshire in a couple of weeks with an initial collection of 1,100 books of its own and with access to a "central book bank." Alain Gouault, responsible for the development of a network of libraries in the Eastern Townships, says he expects the Cookshire library to have 2,000 books on its shelves by the end of the year.

A Canada Works grant will pay for one permanent library employee until September. Maintenance of the library will be provided by volunteers after the grant expires.

The library will be situated in an old convent on Cookshire's main street. Its funding has come entirely from the Cultural Affairs ministry, which provided a budget of $25,000. The Cookshire City Council is required to contribute a sum of $800 annually to the library, a figure equivalent to 50 cents per inhabitant.

The Cookshire Library will be the eighth library of its kind opened in the Townships; the others are in East Angus, Stoke, Chester, Lambton, Nantes, Waterville and Saint-Simon.

Construction work on Galt

SHERBROOKE (FJM) - The City of Sherbrooke has announced that it will start construction work on Galt Street West between Kitchener and Fairmount on June 3 which will continue through to the end of June. The interruption of traffic on this stretch of road will enable the replacement of drainage and sewer pipes, the laying of a new foundation for Galt Street, the paving of the street and the building of new sidewalks.

U de S names Yachon

SHERBROOKE (NW) - The Universite de Sherbrooke announced recently that Lucien Yachon has been named interim director of the Faculty of Science and Education. Yachon, 52, whose appointment expires on May 31, 1980, was born in East Broughton and became dean of the theology and faculty between 1965 and 1977. He was also the director of the Region Department and the Institute of Religious Culture.

Lennoxville Council meets

LENNOXVILLE (FJM) - At the Lennoxville Town Council meeting of May 7 it was decided to accept a three year capital expenditure program divided as follows: $960,000 in 1979, $1,015,000 in 1980 and $910,000 in 1981. The program is described in a report that will be sent to the Ministry of Municipal Affairs for statutory approval.

A letter was received from Armand Laflamme of 10 James Street in Lennoxville concerning the large number of loose dogs in his section of town.

Alderman Passmore moved that the City support any project undertaken by Committee for the cleaning of the St. Francis River and that this group be given support by the provincial government.

LOBA Lodge

SAWYERVILLE - The L.O.B.A. held their meeting on May 29, with the W.M. Sister M. Pinchin presiding and opened in ritual form. The minutes were read and treasurer's report given.

Several letters were read, one containing tickets for the picnic at the Children's Home in Rosemere on June 23, which several members plan to attend.

Plans were made for the annual Afternoon Tea with sales table on June 15, in the Hall, from 2 to 5 p.m.

A good report was given on the Provincial Grand Lodge Sessions held in Shawville. Sisters Pinchin and Theda Lowry were appointed to work with others on a committee for the Provincial Grand Sessions to be held in Sherbrooke County in May 1980.

Smith Memorial members of Lennoxville are being invited to attend our June meeting.

Two cards were signed to go to sick members of the order.

Lodge closed in regular form and lunch was enjoyed.

LDSB gears for pioneering French program

Anderson also argues that immersion programs lead to the fragmentation of school systems, especially if they are small. Parents are forced to choose between sending their children to a school with an immersion program and perhaps forcing them to spend even more time on a bus each day or sending them to a school without immersion where French may not get sufficient emphasis.

The system which the LDSB has decided to use will not stream pupils according to ability and will be mandatory for all children in its schools. The wholesale approach will enable the LDSB to concentrate its implementation of the program far more effectively than if it introduced choice into the curriculum, Anderson said. Anderson and the McGill Office heads were approached by Auger last year and asked to submit a proposal for an evaluation project. The LDSB accepted the proposal and submitted it to the ministry of Education with the purpose of receiving a grant to fund the project. A verbal agreement promising funding has been made between the ministry and the LDSB, says Auger, but no sum has been decided upon. Mrs. Boulos hopes that when a child finishes Grade Six after being submitted to the new curriculum he will be able to understand spoken French, to express himself easily in a fluent French, to read and understand French easily and to write simple French sentences. The 60 minute periods which will form the basis of daily instruction in the first six grades will be divided into three equal sections devoted to vocabulary and structure, language observation, and phonics, the study of word and syllable sounds. The three sections will be divided by rhymes, songs and games in order to make a clear distinction between them. She says it is crucial for a child to be able to establish a relation between the teaching he is given and real-life situations; thus the emphasis in the classroom will always be on the immediate experience of language as a means of communication.

About 80 per cent of the time in class during the first six years will be devoted to oral instruction, the rest of the time being spent on reinforcing conversational ability through writing. Eight major themes will be covered each year, with the same major themes recurring in different contexts during the first three years. At the same time there will be a constant progression from the level of simple vocabulary to structure and phrasing to grammar.

Small but deadly

Area criminals had better beware of this new police cruiser purchased by the Town of Cowansville force. Equipped with a 360 V-eight pursuit engine, this Plymouth Volare boasts the gamut of police equipment including an emergency flasher roof bar, communications system and heavy duty suspension and tires. Purchased for about $6,000 from Bessette Auto, the Cowansville Volare cruiser is reputed to be more economical on gas and is reputed to be a better handling urban squad car than the full-size sedans in use for many years by police forces. Though police cars are going through a downsizing along with the rest of the cars on the market, use of compacts in this line of work is uncommon and the Cowansville Police are the first department in the area to purchase a car of this type.

Judge to rule on negligence

By JOHN McCAGHEY
GRANBY — Judge Guy Janin is expected to rule July 13 whether John McGrath, 27, of Montreal, is guilty of criminal negligence in the deaths of three Montreal-area residents in Knowlton March 26, 1978. Joan Cunningham, Marlene Allen and Christopher Danyliw, all in their twenties, lost their lives in a fire which gutted a two-storey frame house on Lakeside Road early Easter Sunday morning. Quebec Fire Commissioner Cyrille Delage held McGrath criminally responsible following an inquest held at the Knowlton firehall on April 28 of last year. Crown attorney Yves Lagace, with the consent of Defence lawyer Jerry Zigman, produced a coroner's report as the sole evidence for the trial in Sessions Court here yesterday. Lagace argued there was patent evidence of criminal negligence when McGrath used an accelerant to kindle a fire smouldering in a stone fireplace in the living room of the structure. Mr. Zigman rebutted it was an isolated and unpremeditated act in which his client had acted in an impulsive manner. Evidence produced during the inquest revealed Miss Allen and Mr. Danyliw perished in an upstairs bedroom, while Miss Cunningham died in the living room. McGrath, John Banford and Denis Lalanette managed to make their way to safety through a window at the rear of the building which led to a porch roof from which they jumped. John Banford was the only survivor who suffered injuries in the blaze, sustaining third-degree burns to his right hand and arm.

Lessard announces 116 revamp

SHERBROOKE (FJM) — The provincial government plans to spend $17,800,000 during the next few years on repairing Route 116 between Richmond and Plessisville. Transport Minister Lucien Lessard said at a public assembly in Victoriaville last night. Lessard said the government had decided to renovate Route 116 rather than continue construction work on Route 55 which runs parallel to Route 51 for a distance. "Route 116 is in effect the backbone of the Bois-Franc region at the level of industry commerce and services," said Lessard. "The rebuilding of Route 116 will also help solve traffic problems on the local level."

Thetford hosts mini-summit

THETFORD MINES (FJM) — A regional economic conference concerned with the development of the asbestos industry in Quebec will be held in Thetford Mines on June 8, 9 and 10. The conference was organized on the local level and will be attended by several provincial cabinet ministers at the invitation of the organizational committee. Among the issues to be discussed will be a report on the region's expectations concerning future government policymaking on the asbestos industry. Dossiers on the issues of transport and tourism will also be presented, with the latter centering on the development of the area's new provincial park, Parc Frontenac. A final report will discuss the condition of government service in the Thetford Mines region. Natural Resources Minister Yves Berube, Minister of Economic Development Bernard Landry and Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau will attend the conference.

Granby mayor speaks out

QUEBEC (CP) — Federation of Municipalities President Paul O. Trepanier said recently that municipalities should be granted legal status under any new Canadian constitution proposed at the constitutional conference planned for the fall. The Granby mayor said the federation backed a revamped constitution and not just a revised BNA Act. He added that it was important that some guarantees for the cities and towns be included in the constitution. Trepanier took a similar line as that of Vancouver Mayor Jack Volrich who emphasized the idea that municipalities have a vital role to play in Canada's future but are hampered by inadequate financial resources. Both Volrich and Trepanier were speaking at the 42nd Annual Conference of the Federation of Canadian Municipalities. Volrich, who chairs the Federation's Task Force on Constitutional reform said that city representatives should be at the constitutional talks because municipalities are a level of government and some have a greater population than some Canadian provinces. The British North America (BNA) Act gives provinces complete control over municipalities and in fact gives the cities virtually no independence of their own. This problem, along with financing problems for an increasing array of municipal services, came up Monday in a workshop on constitutional reform where technical research papers by experts were presented by experts on the matter. Today about 600 delegates to the three-day meeting will study resolutions on what changes in the constitution could benefit municipalities. The Federation of Municipalities has about 250 members including most of Canada's major cities. The most notable exception is Montreal.

Driving course planned

GEORGEVILLE — A driving course given by the Sherbrooke Driving School is being considered. A minimum of 12 persons is required to hold the course. For information please call 843-1932.

No injuries in accidents

LENNOXVILLE (BP) — No injuries were reported from separate accidents Thursday in which small vehicles took on larger opponents on town thoroughfares. At 4:30 p.m. yesterday, a small foreign auto was heavily damaged when it struck a bus belonging to the Eastern Townships Regional School Board on Belvidere St. The car was travelling along Park Ave. and apparently failed to stop at the road intersection, first hitting the west-bound bus behind the front wheel, then spinning around to strike the half-full vehicle near the rear wheels. The bus received minor exterior damages. Shortly after 1 a.m. Thursday, a 1978 Ford van and its driver from Fleurimont received a sudden jolt when it collided with a CP Rail locomotive at the College St. level crossing. The railroad signal lights were reported functional at the time of the incident and the train's engineer stated he had blown the whistle when approaching. The truck's driver, who had just left his place of work to go home, was badly shaken up by the accident, but was unhurt. Only about $400 damage was incurred to the front driver's side of the van, a figure which would have been greatly increased if the driver hadn't been able to stop his truck when he did and if the train had not been travelling at a slow speed for the purpose of shunting cars to a local factory.

Labour contract for bank

SHERBROOKE (NW) — A new page in the history of Townships labor relations was written recently when the first labor contract was signed between the employees of the Canadian Nationale Bank, located at 602 Galt West. A two year contract, it is concerned with social security benefits and promotions. At the present time another bank labor contract is under negotiation with the employees of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in East Angus.

Weir, a natural athlete, is unique in

Conflicting opinions cloud U.S. gasoline supply situation

WASHINGTON (CP)—No one can explain why the United States, almost alone among the major industrial countries, is suffering from a gasoline shortage.

There are many conflicting opinions, depending whether a consumer, a producer or government official is speaking, and a lot of suspicion.

Asked about the cause for long queues at gasoline stations, U.S. energy department officials will run off a now-familiar account, citing shortages caused by the Iranian oil shutoff, a surge in consumer demand and President Carter's order to reduce gasoline production and build up fuel oil stocks for winter.

BLAME GOVERNMENT
 But John Bookout, Shell Oil Co. chief executive, says the whole mess can be blamed on the government's request two months ago that U.S. companies avoid competing for high-priced crude oil then going for as much as $22 a barrel.

Instead of forcing prices down, that simply left companies with depleted crude oil inventories.

Ask a frustrated motorist waiting for his turn at the gasoline pumps, and a majority will call the scarcity part of a contrived scheme by oil companies to push up prices. It is a popular view but seemingly impossible to prove.

This week, the Federal Trade Commission announced "the current gasoline shortage may be contrived" but also admitted it cannot prove this. Carter ordered the energy and justice departments to monitor companies' refining and distribution operations for signs of illegal activity but said it cannot be determined if gasoline is being withheld from buyers.

Oil analysts say the shortfall in gasoline across the United States is only about three per cent to four per cent. But lacking solid figures on gasoline consumption, and even on overall supplies, the energy department is unable to do more than estimate companies' inventories.

So far, the worst of the lineups have been confined to California and Washington, and some analyst now say motorists' responses to the unexpected scarcity is magnifying the seriousness of the problem. Lining up to "top off" tanks already almost full, fights at stations and other panic reactions may make the situation appear worse than is actually the case.

But even if that is true, it will be no simple solution to resolve the supply and allocation difficulties. Scarce fuel supplies will be a chronic problem for Americans for a long time.

Unlike 1973-74, there is no single cause such as the Arab countries boycott of oil exports to explain today's problems. Nor is it a matter of meeting conditions set by the Arabs in order to convince them to turn the oil tap back on again and end the crisis.

Because of Islamic fervor, crude oil output in Iran is being held around one-half to two-thirds its previous level. Other Arab states, notably Saudi Arabia, are no longer willing to increase their output to ease the pressure on the United States.

Blackmail

Canadian businessmen and Arab-world representatives in Canada are saying that if Prime Minister Joe Clark goes through with a plan to move the Canadian embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, it could go hard with Canadian business interests.

A Soviet dissenter tells North Americans their wheat sales to the Soviet bloc is potentially one of the most effective guarantees of human rights observance in those nations.

The only property shared by these two incidents is blackmail. Depending on which side of the fence you're on, you'll agree or disagree with one or the other, but how many of us will challenge the underlying premise, that blackmail is a valid form of international diplomatic expression?

Of course we don't call it blackmail. Sanctimonious hypocrites that most of us are, we'll label it 'trade sanctions' or some other hogwash and feel righteous and justified in its observance. But it's a filthy game all the same, and any Canadian government which would knuckle under to that form of persuasion is no better than a terrorist who feels justified in killing women and children in passing.

Stigma

We were driving through one of our local communities last night, taking in the peace and sunset, when a young lad bounced a pebble off our car.

We don't let situations like that go by without a word with the parents, so a couple of minutes later found us talking with the man and woman of the household. They weren't too surprised. "Oh, he isn't one of ours," the lady said. "He's a social welfare case. We're his foster parents. Those kids are always problems."

They brought the boy down. He was about 10, a cute little fellow who didn't look like a hardened criminal any more than anyone else his age. The foster parents began scolding him, and he burst into tears and took off into the house.

The couple, surrounded by what we must presume were their own children, defended themselves at the cost of the little fellow. To make a long story short, we backed out of there, agreeing there was no hope for social welfare cases and that most foster parents were only doing their best.

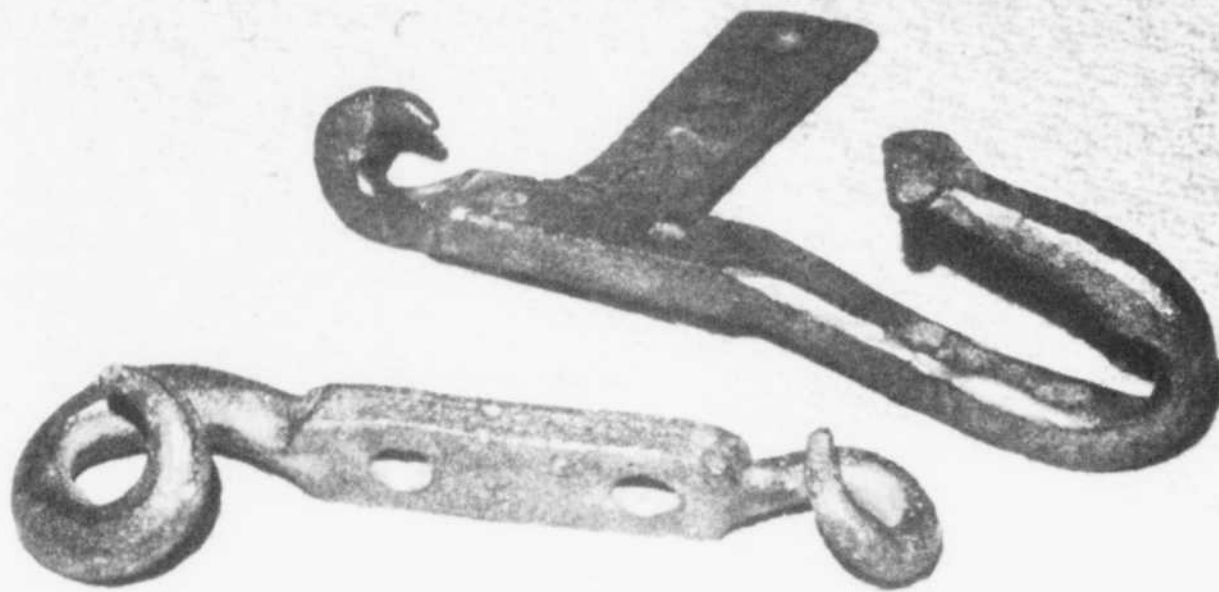

But we don't believe that. To believe that is to say that a 10-year-old's sense of right and wrong is already made up, that he or she is marked for life just by the fact that he or she is a foster child.

To be sure, it's a big stigma on a young person. Through no fault of his or hers, life is all too often a dreary succession of foster homes, run by parents who need the extra bucks the responsibility brings. Either they grow tired of the added burden imposed by the growing child, his or her own parents decide they'd like to have the child back for a while, or the overworked caseworker is otherwise forced to intervene.

Small wonder these children are marked. We're not saying all foster parents are bad. They're not. We've known parents who have raised large families of children without regard to whether they were their own or not, and that love has been reciprocated.

But it is our firm conviction that the least-examined and most blatant cases of social injustice in Quebec society today are to be found in the foster-parent system. When we hear parents saying they'd rather their children didn't play with so-and-so "because he's a foster child," we go cold. How can anyone judge a child that way?

Some ideas for summer

By MARJORIE GOODFELLOW

There are several topics we want to touch on over the summer months. As usual, we are depending on the contributions of readers to make the coverage interesting. If you respond, we will write about summer vacation spots of yesteryear in the Townships, surely a fertile ground for memories. And speaking of fertile ground, who will write to tell us about ways of gardening in the days before rototillers and garden tractors?

Starting in August, we plan to devote several columns to accounts of school days in years gone by - tales of the one-room school house, the multi-classroom school in large centres such as Sawyerville, the consolidated school trend, and so on. To prepare for this series, we need your help. Don your rose-coloured glasses and share with us the happy times of your academic childhood. Perhaps you have a collection of old school photographs. If you will lend them to us, together with as much information as possible about the people and places portrayed in them, we will reproduce them for printing and return them to you as quickly as we can.

Tell us about some of the disadvantages of getting an education in the good old days. In earlier times, before the state took over the responsibility, parents had to overcome many difficulties in order to provide their children with an education. Individual and community initiative were all-important. Sometimes a local family provided space and problems. Where are the records of the host of schools which are no longer operating as such? The lists of students? The minutes of board meetings? If you live in a former school and possess old records which may have been left behind or if you know where such records are, please tell us.

We need to hear from the teachers who taught in these schools. What teaching aids did you have at your disposal? If none, how did you use your imagination to fill the gap? How did you cope with discipline problems and what were they? What remuneration did you receive? Please help compile a vivid picture of bygone school days in the Townships. Reply as soon as possible, preferably before the end of July, so as to leave time for follow-up and the arranging of material.

On May 18, we published an appeal for information about Canadian horses which had been received from Gladys Mackey Beattie of North Hatley. She wrote to tell us of the response: "As a direct result of your printing my letter in the Record, a gentleman from North Hatley stopped by the other day and left me two booklets on Canadian horses printed by the federal government, one in 1943 and the other in 1946. The 1943 one contained a much-sought photo of Albert de Cap Rouge (May 31, 1913), the champion stallion that was used for nineteen years at the Experimental Farm. Until now, I had been unable to find a photograph of him. But here one is, along with several other notable horses of the era. My thanks to you and your column."

And now for this week's puzzle. What are the objects which are pictured here? Send your answers to: Heritage, c/o The Sherbrooke Record, 2520 Roy Street, Sherbrooke, P.Q. J1H 5L6.

Both fine towns

Editor: I must object to your reporters' error in wrongly reporting events at North Hatley as Hatley.

The great financier may live at 'Hatley Acres' but that doesn't mean the whole town's name has been changed.

The Public Archives advise that the Post Office at Hatley was established in 1817 and has always borne the name of Hatley, which it holds by right of precedent, it being the first village in the Township of Hatley.

At one time some called it East Hatley (I have been guilty of that myself) to distinguish it from North Hatley and West Hatley, but that is not correct. It has always legally been just Hatley.

Since the year 1912 the village of Hatley has been set off from the Township of Hatley to form a Municipality of its own.

Reporters too often get sloppy in their designations and this isn't the first time that North Hatley has been referred to as Hatley.

They are both fine towns and I like them both but each has a right to its own identity.

He objects to critics

Editor: I would like to comment about the upcoming school board election in Sutton.

There seems to be a great deal of unjust and confused criticism by persons who do not understand or refuse to understand the problems facing our board and education today in Quebec. Petty comments and veiled accusations are thrown at a group of parents who devote a great deal of time and energy by sitting on our board.

This District of Bedford School Board has administered an educational institution that has produced two Rhodes scholars in the past three years, has seen the team from Massey-Vanier win the national championships on "Reach for the Top", as well as our winning tech-vocational students winning the Canadian Chrysler Trouble Shooting award two years in a row. This record is an enviable one; one that I don't think can be matched by any board in the country. It speaks highly of our teachers, our administrators, our Board, and especially our students. This shows that our educational system gives all those in our community who want to take advantage of the programs the opportunity to excel in whatever their field of endeavour.

These people need the support of our community. Once again there is an election, this time in Sutton. I urge everyone to vote, so that our commissioner from Sutton, Norman de St. Croix, can continue his work with the team that has given us the educational opportunities our children have enjoyed.

Black ministers paid after endorsing Carter

WASHINGTON — At Jimmy Carter's Baptist church in Washington, the collection plate isn't passed until after the sermon is delivered. Our born-again president followed the same procedure during his 1976 campaign when he was seeking endorsement from black ministers in the San Francisco Bay Area.

According to documents obtained by our associate Dale Van Atta, Carter's campaign staff decided that $1,000 payments to five black "ministerial alliances" might encourage the clerics to endorse Carter from the pulpit. But the clerical groups weren't paid until they had publicly given their endorsements.

The surprising story was confirmed in a statement signed by Robert J. Lipshutz, Carter's campaign treasurer and now White House counsel.

According to the documents, Carter staff aides met with several San Francisco area black ministers in the spring of 1976 to discuss possible support for the former Georgia governor. Some of the ministers said they wanted to support Carter. Rev. Andy Young visited a number of church groups on May 8 to line up the hoped-for support.

While traveling with Young four days later to open up Carter's Sacramento headquarters, campaign staffers discussed "the most effective way of setting up a campaign organization in the black community." Knowing that California Gov. Jerry Brown had locked up most of the state's black elected officials, the Carter people "tentatively decided to attempt to maximize the support recently voted by the ministers."

After a week's debate, the staff decided to "disburse $1,000 to each of five ministerial alliances," which would "spend the money on political organization in their areas." But the "quid" was to come only after the "quo" of endorsement.

As Lipshutz's statement reported: "On May 21 Gov. Carter was campaigning in Northern California and attended a press conference, one segment of which was devoted to a public endorsement by the ministers... On the same day, five checks were written on the campaign's Northern California account," payable to the alliances.

The five were the Richmond Interdenominational Alliance, the Hunters Point Baptist Ministers Conference, the Mount Zion District Association and the Baptists Ministers Unions of San Francisco and Oakland.

Lipshutz's statement said the intention was that the money be used by the ministers to "organize meetings in churches... arrange gatherings... distribute literature... and encourage clergy to use their pulpits to support Gov. Carter."

And he said he did not think the request "un-toward" — though he didn't want his identity known.

To the credit of the clergymen involved, four of the five alliances returned the Carter "offerings."

The one group that did accept the $1,000 check, the Richmond Interdenominational Alliance, was the subject of a perfunctory investigation by the Federal Election Commission. Though they claimed to have expended their "best efforts," the FEC was unable to reach the organization to get an accounting of the $1,000 contribution.

Despite the possibility of an election rule violation, the commission voted in mid-1978 to drop the matter. An FEC source suggested that the amount was too inconsequential to "cause trouble."

Curiously, in the general audit of Carter's campaign finances, a random sampling of expenditures picked out one of the $1,000 checks for further investigation. But the contribution remains undocumented because, according to the audit files, the only explanation was that the purpose of the payment was a "ministers' conference."

In campaign investigations, as in churches, an essential ingredient is faith. Chiles Vs. Califano: The Senate's relations with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare are getting progressively worse, largely because of what some senators feel is the department's cavalier attitude toward Congress.

The Senate Subcommittee on Aging is particularly incensed at the attitude of HEW Secretary Joe Califano and his minions. Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., recently blew his stack at an assistant HEW secretary, who had been called to explain why a report on medical care for the elderly was not only unresponsive but seven months late.

Chiles asked the official if he had worked on the tardy report, and the answer was no. Outraged, Chiles refused to let the assistant secretary read the prepared testimony he had brought with him. The senator told him curtly to come back when he could produce someone who had actually worked on the report.

Another member of the Senate Subcommittee on Aging, Sen. William Cohen, R-Me., is about to introduce a resolution rejecting the report on alternatives to institutionalized nursing care for the elderly. It's the first time in history that such an embarrassing resolution will have been introduced — a measure of the Senate's displeasure with "Broadway Joe" Califano and his bureaucrats.

Washington Whirl: The President's Commission on Three Mile Island has been complaining that it needs subpoena power to do a proper job investigating the nuclear plant accident there, but that they can't get anyone to sponsor the necessary legislation. A check disclosed that the White House had neglected to ask members of the Pennsylvania delegation — the obvious choices.

News Briefs

Pollution high at Noranda Mines

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Emissions of sulphur dioxide from the smokestacks of Noranda Mines Ltd. are seven to eight times greater than those from Montreal refineries, says a report prepared for Quebec's Environmental Protection Service.

The report, released Thursday, says levels of contamination are a major problem, presenting a real risk for children within the industrial area.

FIRA criticized

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal Foreign Investment Review Act is a sitting duck for opportunists because it has so little obligation or opportunity to make public reports, says a report on United States ownership of firms in Canada.

Released today by the Montreal-based C.D. Howe Research Institute, the report says that FIRA "is susceptible to being used to foster political objectives or special interests rather than being employed strictly for improving the terms of exchange for sales of domestic assets in Canada."

Hydro sale brings no fare cuts

QUEBEC (CP) — Recent sales of electricity by Hydro-Quebec to New York State won't mean lower rates for Quebec consumers, Energy Minister Guy Joron told the national assembly Thursday. He said revenues from the power sale, about 800 megawatts a year for 20 years, were expected when rates were calculated last January.

Quebec helps Panama

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's intergovernmental affairs ministry has granted $110,000 to help a Latin American savings and credit federation establish a financial co-operative centre in Panama. Quebec's Caisses Populaires Desjardins and International Regional Development Co. will act as project consultants.

James Bay negotiations adjourned

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiations between management and the union for 650 striking support workers at the massive James Bay hydroelectric project adjourned Thursday after meeting three days.

The union, local 6833 of the United Steelworkers of America, said in a statement it has presented counter-proposals to a new set of offers presented by negotiators for the Quebec-owned James Bay Energy Corp.

Burns wavers on decision

RIMOUSKI, Que. (CP) — Parliamentary Reform Minister Robert Burns, who last month announced he plans to quit politics, indicated Thursday the question of his resignation may still be up in the air.

"I can't comment on whether I will resign or whether I will go back on my decision before talking about it with my boss, the Premier (Rene Levesque)," Burns told reporters during a visit here.

Controversial CEGEP bill passed

QUEBEC (CP) — The national assembly passed second reading Thursday to a controversial bill establishing a provincial Colleges Council, despite opposition claims that the council would only centralize control of junior colleges in the hands of the education department.

Liberal members decided not attempt a repeat of a lengthy filibuster Wednesday, and intend instead to criticize the proposed legislation during following legislative committee hearings.

Rams lock up keepers

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) — Three rams at Slater Park Zoo briefly exchanged places with their keepers on Thursday.

While the men were giving the rams a pedicure, one of the animals bolted and ran through the gate to their enclosure, which had been left open. The loose ram was followed by two others, one of which somehow knocked the gate shut behind it, locking in the three keepers and three other rams.

Gas found near Sable Island

TORONTO (CP) — A second gas find near Sable Island announced Thursday might make a pipeline from the reserves commercially possible.

The key to the pipeline has been reserves of at least three trillion cubic feet, but "we may already be at the threshold," said Dennis Hopper.

Huge tumour removed from woman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 30-year-old California woman who once thought she was hopelessly obese is starting a new and much thinner life after doctors removed a gigantic tumour that had bloated her abdomen with 200 pounds of tissue and fluid.

Although the tumour must have been growing at least 15 years, doctors said the woman never suspected it was there.

When diagnosed, "she was very excited and pleased at the idea that 'I'm not just fat,'" said Dr. Russell Laros of the University of California medical school in San Francisco.

Laros headed the surgical team which last month removed the ovarian tumour. He said Thursday that the tumour was benign — it contained no cancer — and caused no permanent health problems.

US to develop new missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has decided to move into full-scale development of a huge new mobile missile designed to foil any Soviet surprise attack on the U.S. land-based striking force in the 1980s and beyond, administration officials said Thursday night.

The plan calls for mounting 200 missiles, each with 10 powerful nuclear warheads, on some form of rail system that would shuttle them among from about 8,000 to 9,000 "hardened" launch shelters so they would be not be knocked out in a first strike, sources said.

Sixth body found on freighter

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — A city coroner said Thursday he has located a sixth body on board the burned-out stern section of the lake freighter the Cartiercliffe Hall.

Earlier, Dr. E.D. Rathbone said five bodies had been found and he believed the sixth man had drowned after climbing from a porthole to escape the heat in his cabin.

Brascan delays annual meeting

TORONTO (CP) — Brascan Ltd. has further delayed its annual shareholders meeting to June 29 from the rescheduled June 26 date.

The company gave no reason for the delay in a brief news release Thursday.

Brascan postponed its annual meeting from May 23 because it was making an unsuccessful bid to buy control of F. W. Woolworth Co. of New York.

Clark's embassy switch criticized

CALGARY (CP) — Several Alberta businessmen reacted angrily Thursday to Prime Minister Clark's proposal to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv.

They said such a move could cost Canada billions of dollars in lost trade with the Arabs.

Jay Scott, president of Atco International of Calgary, said he plans to fly to Ottawa next week to lodge a personal protest.

Light voter turnout in Europe

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Only a light voter turnout was reported in four European countries for the first direct elections to the European Economic Community's parliament, and they will have to wait three days for the election results.

Voters in the other five EEC countries do not vote until Sunday and the ballots cannot be counted anywhere until the last polling station closes in Italy that night. So the results of Thursday's voting in Britain, Denmark, Ireland and the Netherlands will remain a tightly-guarded secret until Monday.

DC-10 investigation continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the world's fleet of DC-10s grounded indefinitely, investigators are studying the plane's design in hopes of learning why an engine fell off one in Chicago last month and why cracks keep appearing in the engine mounting pylons of others.

Inspectors for the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration concentrated their efforts at the McDonnell Douglas Corp. plant in Long Beach, Calif., where the DC-10 is manufactured. They are studying closely the documents used in the process that led to certification of the DC-10 as airworthy in 1971.

Jamieson campaigns for June 18

WESLEYVILLE, Nfld. (CP) — Liberal Leader Don Jamieson counter-punched hard Thursday against the incumbent Progressive Conservatives and press critics, pledging to plot a new course for Newfoundland if he wins power in the June 18 election.

Jamieson indicated he was tired after a harrowing day of dicey flying conditions from Labrador to the Great Northern Peninsula then on to this Bonavista community, where PC Premier Brian Peckford helicopter-hopped earlier in the day during an equally grueling campaign swing.

Carter keeps trade sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators opposed to U.S. trade sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia vow a "bitter, bloody fight" to end the 14-year embargo despite President Carter's decision to retain it.

Carter said Thursday that he believes the sanctions should be retained as a matter of principle because recent elections in Zimbabwe Rhodesia were neither free nor fair and that Rhodesia has not made sufficient progress "toward legitimate majority rule."

Diefenbaker enters 13th term

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker formally became an MP for the 13th time Thursday, then had a few friends up to the new Parliament Hill office he has been given now that Progressive Conservatives are back in power.

It was like old times. "I never was a member of the Rideau Club," the 83-year-old former Conservative prime minister offered as he looked out of the window of his new office across the lawn of Parliament Hill to the exclusive club that has been the refuge of the Ottawa in-crowd for years. "Now I look down on it."

Asbestos shares worth $46.80

QUEBEC (CP) — Natural Resources Minister Yves Berube said Thursday he has kept secret a ministry study that estimates the worth of Asbestos Corp. at $46.80 a share.

Berube told a legislative committee studying the Quebec government's bill to expropriate the assets of Asbestos Corp. that he has not decided whether he will make the study public.

The internal study was based on fiscal data which he had access to as minister and it would be contrary to his oath of office to reveal the information, he said. The report is the third evaluation to be prepared on the value of Asbestos Corp., Quebec's second-largest producer of the fire-resistant fibre.

The first, by New York consultants Lazard et Freres, estimated the worth of the company at $99.75 a share.

Another evaluation by the New York consulting firm Kidder Peabody valued the shares at $42. Earlier this week, Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau asked General Dynamics, which holds a 54.6-per-cent interest in Asbestos Corp., for permission to make the Lazard et Freres report public.

ESTIMATES COST
It says the Quebec government would have to spend $280 million to purchase all 2.8 million shares of Asbestos Corp., while the Kidder Peabody study estimates the price would be $112 million and the third report indicates it would be $131 million.

Berube asked the Liberals to explain how they gained access to the Lazard et Freres report. He said Asbestos Corp. only released the report to the government after six months of hard bargaining and only after it introduced a bill to expropriate the company. He added the government had to agree to keep the report confidential.

Decentralization to be delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Several thousand public servants slated for transfers away from the national capital should not rush to call in the moving vans.

Sinclair Stevens, new treasury board president, indicated Thursday the Progressive Conservative government may decide to keep some of these jobs within the shadow of the Parliament Buildings.

Stevens, who is also the minister in charge of finding ways to cut the costs of government, was asked whether all plans by the old

Liberal government to move 5,000 full-time and 5,600 part-time jobs to other communities will be honored.

"I wouldn't say that," Stevens told a reporter following a cabinet meeting. Asked to comment specifically on the proposed move of the entire veterans affairs department to Charlottetown, Stevens said: "There has been no thought to confirm or change that kind of move."

MOVE COSTLY
Moving the veterans affairs department to Prince Edward Island will cost the taxpayers about $36 million — $16 million for the land and new building on the island and $20 million associated with the move of employees and records.

The Progressive Conservatives campaigned for the May 22 election on a platform of decreasing government expenditures, including reducing the public service by 60,000 jobs within three years.

The Liberal plans to decentralize the public service touched almost every department.

Nursing walkouts continue

QUEBEC (CP) — Walkouts by nurses continued to disrupt hospital services here and in western Quebec Thursday but Social Affairs Minister Denis Lazure again ruled out any government intervention in the near future.

Lazure told the national assembly that there were walkouts in 34 hospitals, but as far as he knew essential services were being maintained, as required by law.

The minister noted that under an amendment to the labor code, the cabinet could invoke legislation curbing the right to strike of nurses for 30 days if a strike endangers public safety.

Earlier, Lazure met with about 100 chronically ill and handicapped people who had rolled their wheelchairs up to the assembly to call on the government and striking nurses to come to a quick settlement.

The demonstrators, who came from across the province, said the sick and handicapped are particularly vulnerable to disruptions in hospital services because they depend completely on others for the most basic functions.

Women's Canadian Club shows Dom Tex fashions

The Women's Canadian Club of the Eastern Townships and Dominion Textile co-sponsored a highly successful fashion show Wednesday for an estimated 300 club members and guests at Bishop's University. Michael Bricker, Dominion Textile Advertising and Sales Promotions Manager, explained the reason the 55-minute show was put on for the local club, when usually only buyers for manufacturing companies are so privileged, is that the Eastern Townships is an important part of their operations and the firm likes to give area people a look at what the finished product might look like as garments of sorts.

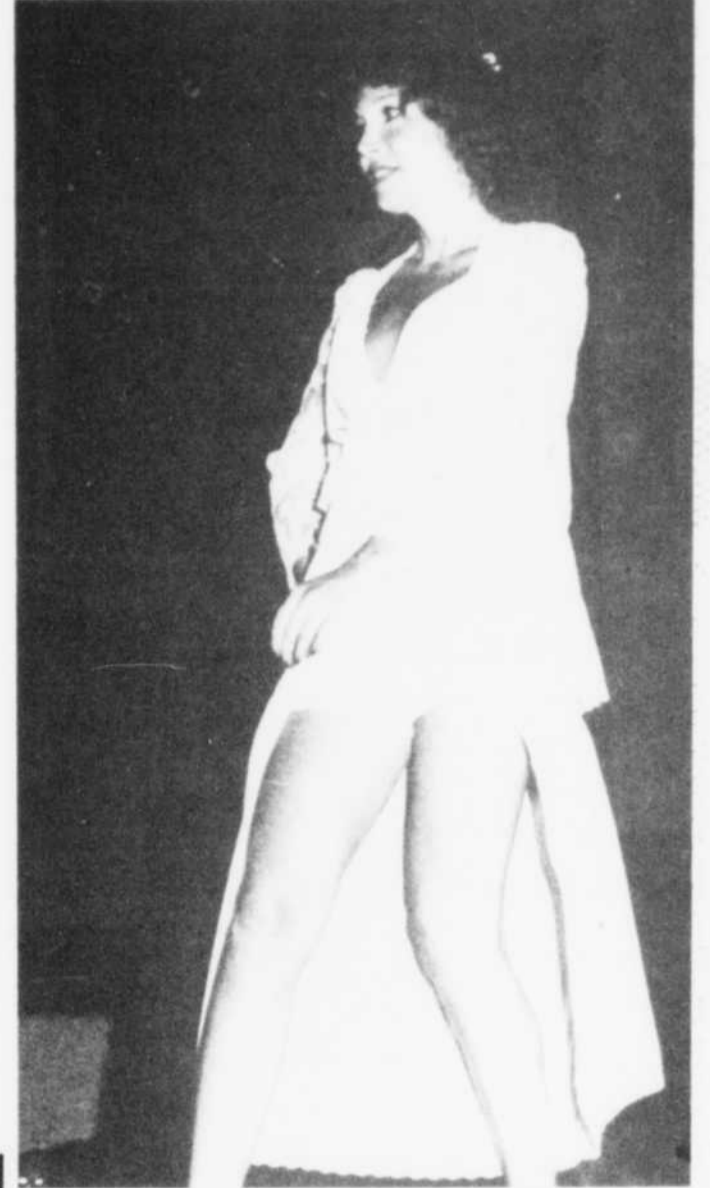

The show featured lines made up for Spring and Fall, 1979, but, unlike most fashion parades, the spectators can't run out to their favorite store and get a copy. The garments show were made especially to demonstrate to prospective buyers the versatility and stylish clothing which can come from any one of their numerous types of fabric manufactured.

Coordinators for the show from the Club: Marjorie Watson, Marion Gordon and Barbara Martin, as well as president Sylvia Loomis. They should be commended for the smooth operation of the professional production.

Domination Textile announced May 31 an additional $6.5 million capital expenditure for denim production at its Drummondville, Magog and Richelieu, Quebec, plants. This brings the total capital expenditure on the company's denim project to close to $16 million, of which 75 percent has been allocated to Drummondville and the balance to Magog and Richelieu.

The latest phase of the total project will substantially increase the production of denim which continues to be the most significant fabric in the growing jeans market. $4.3 million will be devoted to high technology process machinery. In addition, $1.2 million will be spent specifically on dust extraction and ventilation systems for employee environmental purposes.

With the completion of this phase, some 135 new employees will have joined the Drummondville work force. Initiated during the summer of 1977, the multi-phase modernization project will be completed before the end of December 1979.

A DIAMOND SIMULANT:
THE "CUBIC ZIRCONIA"

Some time ago, a gentleman walked into our store and asked me to appraise a diamond ring that he had bought elsewhere recently. The stone was beautiful, brilliant cut and around one carat in size. Upon closer examination, and after testing it with instruments, I had to tell him that it was not a diamond, but rather the look-alike diamond substitute, "Cubic Zirconia". You can imagine his disappointment, the stone had been sold to him as a "Russian diamond".

As I previously explained in a column last year, the "Cubic Zirconia" (zirconium oxide, ZrO₂) was originally created at the Moscow Academy of Science. It is now being made in several other countries, and is the best man-made imitation of a diamond, but it is not a diamond.

"Cubic Zirconia" has hit the retail market with a vengeance. Just recently, a gemologist appraiser told me that he is seeing from 60 to 70 "Cubic Zirconia" each month and that many of the owners apparently believe them to be diamonds.

The optical properties of "Cubic Zirconia" are so close to diamond that rapid identification of well-cut stones is especially difficult. The trained gemologist, who is familiar with this new simulant, can identify it - but not without some difficulty. For part of the deception of "Cubic Zirconia" is that it is not perfect, even though it is man-made. Indeed, it can now be made with diamond-like inclusions and even black carbon-like imperfections, just like diamonds found in nature.

My next column will be about a new instrument that we have just added to our gem laboratory, which accurately separates the real diamond from its look-alike substitutes.

Ann Landers says

Don't apologize for messy house

Dear Ann Landers: Recently in your column there was a letter about people who keep saying they are going to do things and never get around to it. I seem to have this problem.

I feel like I'm always a day late and an hour behind. My house is a mess. I never get everything done. I have three children, ages seven, four and one, and a husband who thinks all things to do with caring for children, house and yard should be the total responsibility of the wife.

I work a full-time job and try to participate some in church and school activities because I feel everyone should contribute something. Consequently, there aren't enough hours in a day to get everything done. I feel disorganized and can't get it all together.

If you have any suggestions I'd like to have them. I envy people who seem to get so much done while I go around in circles. — Good Intentions

Dear Good: A woman who has three children under eight years of age, takes care of the house and yard, tries to participate in church and school activities and holds down a full-time job shouldn't apologize for the looks of her house, nor should she be envying anybody for performing better. Your husband, it seems to me, should give you a hand — plus a lot of praise and emotional support.

Hunting, Fishing and Conservation

by Real Hebert

For a long time fly-fishing had the reputation of being a rather exclusive side of angling appropriate only to the "bourgeoisie", but during the present century fly-fishing has been swept along in the tendency towards democratization and today it is enjoyed by people of all walks of life.

I don't want to argue that fly-fishing is an infallible way of catching trout because there simply is no miraculous and infallible method when it comes to sport fishing. However, I don't mind saying that it's the most fascinating type of fishing I know and that which, without a doubt, offers the greatest challenge and the most satisfaction.

It is not a way of fishing which will appeal to those who lack patience because in order to become good at using a fly rod you must spend several hours learning how to cast a fly so that you can judge distances and place a line exactly where you want it.

But once you become capable of using a fly rod satisfactorily you will be rewarded by the pleasure you receive from the sport. Ask a fly fisherman and he'll swear that he would prefer to catch one trout with a fly than to catch three any other way.

If you ask me whether fly-fishing allows you to land more fish, I'll tell you this: the answer depends on where you fish, on the season and on the time of day. It's clear that if you fish in a lake on a sunny day during the month of July you'll have more luck fishing with a weighted line because the fish will be near the bottom looking for cool water.

But when the sky is cloudy fly-fishing becomes far more productive, because it's during such weather conditions that insects hatch and the trout come closer to the surface in order to feed on them during the day. That's why you'll see fly-fishermen saving their energy for the early evenings when the sunlight is less direct and the shadows longer.

Many people are under the impression that fly-fishing is an extremely expensive activity and I will admit that the equipment is somewhat more costly than standard light casting equipment. For example, a light casting rod costs about $50 while a fly rod will cost about $65. Of course, you can find offers which will allow you to pay less in both cases, but I would not trust the quality if you were to pay much less.

It is true that some fly-fishing rods sell for $400 and sometimes more, but I would certainly not recommend such equipment for a beginner. The ideal ensemble for a beginner would be an eight foot fiber glass rod weighing between 3.5 and 4 ounces for which the specifications are a number 6 or 7 line. Such a rod of reasonable quality would cost between $35 and $40, with a floating number 6 or 7 line costing between $15 and $18, and a reel with detachable spindles costing between $12 and $15. You will also need 7.5 to 9-inch leaders with a resistance of 2.5 or 3 pounds, and of course an assortment of wet and dry flies. You will also need a landing net.

If you really want to enjoy sport fishing to the limit, then nothing equals the satisfaction of fly-fishing. The time and the money you invest in it will enable you to enjoy unforgettable fishing experiences.

Hints about stamps

M.M. Woodman

Just a week from today, June 15, you will have the pleasure of being able to own one of the two souvenir sheets Canada has issued in her long history of issuing stamps. Pictured here, I am pleased to show you in black and white just what it will look like — very attractive from the pictures I have seen of this in color. I suggest you get a few sheets and those you don't want to keep, use the single stamps on your mail to me and others. From my point of view, not enough of these will be used for postage and thus the used stamp will shortly cost more than the average commemorative stamp. We who are collectors always like to receive commemoratives on our mail.

Are you one of those collectors who have a hard time finding a nice used stamp for your collection? One that has the head stamp of the Post Office rather than the ones that have the lines running through them? Well, just maybe you could help the situation if you would only place your stamp at the top middle of your envelope and thus the Post Office would not be able to cancel same on the automatic machine and you would have one cancelled by hand. Don't worry, it won't take much longer to reach its destination that way — as you well know, it takes time for our Post Office to move the mails.

A new shipment of the Bilecki Plate Block Albums came in this week, so now once more you will not have to wait for one if you have been thinking about one but not making the purchase. The sheets are up to 40 cents now but the binder and dust case remain the same for the present time, or as long as Mr. Bilecki has any in stock. This same applies to more of the odd size pages, they are still at the old price of 35 cents. If you want one for Fall and not at the moment, just let me know and put a deposit down on same and I will put it away with your name on it until the day you say you want it.

News has reached me this week that Hatley Village is planning a Flea Market for the 30 June in the Town Hall. Hatley this year will be celebrating the holiday on Saturday, June 30 instead of Sunday July 1. As is usual, many plans are in the making to help you enjoy this time and I am sure they will come up with something good. If you think you would like to have a table at the Flea Market, get in touch with George Jobel of Hatley or you can contact me and I will pass the word along and you will be sure of a spot.

Another thing I was told is that they are 98 per cent sure that the Flea Markets started last summer will continue after the one in the Village Hall, for the balance of the summer. They hope to hold these every other Saturday in the Church Hall on the Common where they were last year. If this is correct, they will be held July 14 and every other Saturday till the end of the season. The hall has a lunch counter and is very clean and a very nice place to hold Flea Markets. Trust we will see you there.

A new set of stamps from Guernsey came in this week and once again I have had to write and ask for additional supplies as they were completely sold out the day I received them. You should really get in on the collecting of Guernsey, Jersey, Isle of Man and Great Britain. These are beautiful stamps and are very easy to dispose of should you decide later to stop your collecting.

My order for the stamps from the United Nations have as yet to arrive, but maybe that is my fault, as I was away when I should have placed my order. I did however place it May 1 and I am still waiting.

I mentioned last week that the first Canadian souvenir sheet had leveled off and I thought that all in this area anyway had what they needed, not so, this week brought orders for these anywhere from one to 10 and in fact at this time of writing I have but one here in stock. I do have a few in the bank and must get a few out when next I am in the area. We never know what a person wants and therefore have to try to have these items available at all times.

This past weekend I was away, so my offer of the Stanley Gibbons Album for $5 was not taken up till I reached home on Monday afternoon. I had no less than 11 phone calls for it before the day was over but one of my collectors from Sherbrooke was the first one to contact me and he will pick it up when he comes up for some stamps. With a price of $5, instead of the current price of about $18.00, it was a real bargain — I am pleased to have the space instead of the album. I have another Album sitting here that you can have at the old price of $19.50 plus tax, including the 1978 supplement. That is a Harris Canada Album, which is always popular and they bring out the additional pages every year to keep you up to date. Just phone and I will put it away for you or mail it if you can't get here. Mailing charges of course will be extra.

This is being written a little ahead of time as my son, Tony, daughter, Ketha, and my wife and I are taking off for Burlington, Ont. to the wedding of my niece. We will be back before you read this, but I have to do some things when I get a moment.

We are not the only ones with problems with our Mails. Great Britain is having some. Even the head post office have got the stamps out, but increase has not as yet taken effect. Had a note to say that my credit was okay for some time to come, so that was handy to know.

Trust I will be with you next week. I don't dare give you a joke this week, or they will cut my column out. Maybe I'll hear one at the wedding. I asked my niece if she wanted some jokes from her uncle and she said yes, but remember I am being married in white.

Jacoby's bridge

West's ace.

If West is looking at all the cards he can proceed to set South two tricks, but West sees only his own hand and dummy.

Also, West is sure that his partner holds the heart queen. It won't occur to him that South has tried a swindle. West leads a low heart to put his partner in. Now swindler South scores his queen of hearts, cashes the jack of clubs, enters dummy with a trump, chucks two diamonds on the good clubs and winds up with game, rubber and an overtrick.

Tierce is an almost obsolete term used to describe any three-card sequence.

South's four-spade contract is not only an ambitious one, it is also almost impossible to make, but South is lucky. West opens the fourth-best heart and South can win with the queen over East's jack.

Suppose he then draws trumps with two leads. Next he leads a club from dummy and plays his king after East follows with the deuce.

An alert West takes the club trick with his ace and shifts to a diamond, whereupon the defense will add three diamond tricks to its one club and set declarer.

Now let's go back to trick one. South can make a really fancy play and win that heart with his ace. Then draw trumps and lead that same club to his king and short notes...

Little League season kicks off

SHERBROOKE (BP) — The sixth annual official opening of the Sherbrooke-Lennoxville-Fleurimont Little League will be held Saturday morning at the Parade Grounds with a new format.

This year, the traditional drawn-out parade through city streets has been limited to the teams marching around the Parade Grounds 15 minutes prior to the 10 a.m. opening. The official ceremony to kick off the 1979 season will follow its traditional role, however, with teams, their executives and sponsors, and league executive being presented on the field. Following the reading of the Little League Creed, the teams will disperse to cheer for their favorite clubs as Richelieu takes on the Red Sox in Sher-Mont play while the Expos battle the Senators on the Sher-Lenn side of the slate.

About 12:30 or whenever the games finish, a huge picnic involving the players and families will be held at the Grounds, followed by an afternoon of recreational sports with teams opposing each other in such events as wheelbarrow or three-legged races.

Ski coach quits

OTTAWA (CP) — Bruce Henry of Banff, Alta, has resigned as national ski team coach, program director Andrzej Kozbial announced Thursday. Henry, 32, was a slalom and giant slalom specialist who joined the national team in 1975. Kozbial said Henry cited personal reasons for his departure and a replacement will be named before the end of the month.

Sonics win paid off

SEATTLE (AP) — It pays to win the National Basketball Association championship.

Seattle SuperSonics will divide $317,500 they picked up from the playoff pool. By a vote of the players, a full share is close to $26,000.

A full share was doled out to each of 10 Sonics who spent a full season on the roster — Fred Brown, Joe Hassett, Dennis Johnson, John Johnson, Lonnie Shelton, Jack Sikma, Paul Silas, Dick Snyder, Wally Walker and Gus Williams.

Lye takes Atlanta lead

ATLANTA (AP) — Mark Lye's golf game has turned around, and he thinks he knows why.

"I broke up with my girl friend six months ago and that's probably been the turning point of my game," Lye said Thursday after firing the best round of his pro career, a nine-under-par 63 that staked him to a four-shot lead in the opening round of the $300,000 Atlanta golf tournament.

"I'm spending a lot more time on the golf course now," said the 6-foot-1, 165-pound Californian who is seeking his first victory in the United States since joining the Professional Golfers' Association tour in 1976.

Goulet's lawyer fights draft

QUEBEC (CP) — Lawyer Guy Bertrand said Thursday he will seek a court injunction if necessary to prevent the incision of Michel Goulet, 19, a left winger with the disbanded Birmingham Bulls of the former World Hockey Association, in the National Hockey League amateur draft scheduled for August.

Bertrand told a news conference that a two-year contract signed last year with the Bulls contained clauses that would give Quebec Nordiques the first opportunity to obtain Goulet's services should a merger or NHL expansion include Birmingham.

Evert takes French Open

PARIS (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd defeated defeated Dianne Fromholtz of Australia 6-1, 6-3 Thursday to gain the women's final of the French Open tennis championships.

In Saturday's final, the outstanding clay court specialist from the United States will meet another Australian, Wendy Turnbull, who defeated Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-3.

Flyers acquire Myre in nets

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers, hurt by the forced retirement of goalie Bernie Parent, have found a replacement they hope will keep the team competitive in the National Hockey League.

The new goaltender is Phil Myre, acquired in a three-player deal Thursday with St. Louis Blues. In return for Myre, Philadelphia is sending defenceman Rick Lapointe and centre Blake Dunlop to the Blues.

TiCats cut Roy Henry

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats announced that quarterback Roy Henry was among three players cut by the Canadian Football League club Thursday.

At the same time, general manager Bob Shaw said veteran defensive tackle Clifton Alapa, 24, had apparently packed up his equipment in a surprise move and returned to his new bride in Phoenix, Ariz.

Valentine sparks Caps win

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Carl Valentine scored one goal and assisted on another in the first three minutes of play Thursday night, carrying Vancouver Whitecaps to a 2-1 North American Soccer League victory over Tulsa Roughnecks.

The game was a makeup of a contest postponed Wednesday night by rain.

Staniowski awarded Conacher

TORONTO (CP) — Goaltender Ed Staniowski received good news and more good news Thursday.

First, he learned he had become St. Louis's first-string netminder — by default — after the Blues traded Phil Myre to Philadelphia Flyers. Then came word he had been awarded the Charlie Conacher Memorial Trophy — an award presented annually in recognition of humanitarian work done by National Hockey League players.

Lopez bad in LPGA

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Jerilyn Britz stood in the 17th fairway Thursday and looked at the Nicklaus Golf Centre scoreboard for the first time.

The red figures showed she was seven under par. The 36-year-old former school teacher wiped out one LPGA record and shattered a tournament record with her 64, eight under par.

Nancy Lopez, the old LPGA championship record holder with 65, stumbled to a one-overpar 73, nine shots off the pace.

"I'm not thinking about the nine shots," Lopez said. "I'm mad at myself. I was not concentrating at all."

Stewart pitches Orioles to 3-1 win

Sammy Stewart knows his limitations and readily admits that, come tonight, he'll "probably be carrying the towels out to the bullpen again."

After allowing only two hits in pitching Baltimore Orioles to a 3-1 victory Thursday night over Kansas City Royals, the strapping rookie had no visions of breaking into starting rotation.

"I've always been a starter, but I'll probably be back in the bullpen tomorrow," said the 24-year-old right-hander who was given a starting chance when Jim Palmer left for California to have his ailing elbow examined.

Making only his fourth majorleague start, Stewart issued three walks in the opening inning before settling down to hurl his first complete game.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston Red Sox drubbed Chicago White Sox 9-2, Minnesota Twins downed New York Yankees 4-1 and Texas Rangers whipped Milwaukee Brewers 7-1.

In National League play, San Francisco Giants outlasted St. Louis Cardinals 12-10, while Chicago Cubs edged San Diego Padres 4-3.

Al Cowens had both Kansas City hits — a fifth-inning home run high off the left-field foul pole and a seventh-inning infield single.

Baltimore scored a fifth-inning run off Steve Busby on a sacrifice fly by Doug DeCinces and Gary Roenicke delivered a two-run bases loaded single in the eighth off Renie Martin.

Martin, who pitched out of a sixth-inning jam after a recurring stiff neck forced Busby to retire, walked Al Bumbry and Rich Dauer to open the eighth.

SCANELLA: SMALL CAMPS PAY OFF

By ANDY KING
SHERBROOKE — Small training camps pay off, and Alouettes Head Coach Joe Scanella says his team's record is all the proof he needs.

"Evaluation of team members is much more complete," Scanella said during yesterday's session at the Universite de Sherbrooke field where the team's veterans are working alongside the few score rookie hopefuls.

The Toronto Argonauts, known for their large camps as much as for their lack of recent success on the scoreboard, "must have a helluva time sorting out who's fit to play and who isn't," Scanella says.

"A player must be run through drills repeatedly in order to show his true character. This is not possible when camps get too large. We give our ball players ample time to let us know the potential they have."

In addition small camps build confidence in the coaching staff. When game time rolls around the best players are dressed and not back home, wondering what went wrong.

This could apply to all positions but imagine these two examples in the Als' camp: Suppose there were a lot of personnel trying out for the position of defensive end, where Junior "Phantom" Ah You should be. After roughly two weeks of camp the coaches feel some new blood is needed at this position.

So Fred Ford shows up after stints with San Francisco and New Orleans of the NFL. Ford, 6' 4", 240 lbs., and quick for his size, seems like a good catch. This sort of decision might have taken a lot longer in a large camp, but not with Scanella's system.

Terry Peters who pulled a hamstring earlier this week, might have felt the axe at a bigger camp with considerably more candidates, here he is a promising defensive back.

"I'll give him a fair chance. He's not out of it yet," Scanella reported at yesterday's press conference.

This sort of individual attention and foresight is emphasized when camps are held to a reasonable number of players.

The players themselves express this by having sharper practises.

Playoffs don't faze MacNeil - yet

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Flames' new coach, Al MacNeil, isn't worried about the National Hockey League playoffs, even though it was the playoffs that got his predecessor fired.

"If we get there (to the playoffs), we will win some hockey games," MacNeil said Thursday after Flames general manager Cliff Fletcher announced his appointment.

It was Atlanta's inability to get past the first round in the NHL's Stanley Cup playoffs that opened up the coaching job for MacNeil.

The Flames made the playoffs in five of seven years, only to be eliminated in the opening round, compiling a dismal 1-13 post-season record. After the Flames were eliminated in two games by Toronto Maple Leafs last season, the team fired coach Fred Creighton.

In 1971, as an interim coach, MacNeil did what Creighton failed to accomplish in four full seasons. He took Montreal Canadiens to the Stanley Cup title.

Fletcher, who announced MacNeil's selection at a news conference Thursday, said: "We had a list of candidates, but Al was No. 1 all the time and we never discussed the job with anyone else."

GOOD NEGOTIATOR

He declined to discuss the terms of the multi-year contract, but conceded that the 43-year-old MacNeil, who resigned earlier in the day as director of player personnel for the Canadiens, was a "pretty good negotiator."

"He's got a fine contract for lots of years and plenty of security," said Fletcher.

MacNeil becomes the third

Three types of recreational water crafts were demonstrated on Sargent's Bay last weekend as part of a Concordia University program.

Boating clinic kicks off summer season

Story and photos by Matthew Elder

KNOWLTON LANDING — We're pretty well into summer now, and, to many of us, that means water sports. At Woodacres Hotel on Sargent's Bay, Lake Memphremagog, last weekend, two groups of Concordia University Outdoor Education students were given the opportunity to try out three types of water craft: sailboats, kayaks and canoes.

Club (all about eight to 10 years younger than the college students!) in four Lasers. The students got a chance to sail by themselves in a fleet of Optimists, a small training craft. Methods of righting capsized boats were demonstrated. In many cases, a "dry dump" is possible - the occupants need not get wet when the sailboat goes over.

dock, places one end of the twin-bladed paddle across the kayak (behind the cockpit) and the other end of the shore or dock, and braces himself on the paddle while he clammers into the cockpit. Sound confusing? Try it and you'll see how much easier it is.

Four canoes were available and instruction of their use offered. There were no mishaps reported - the students adapted to the unstable craft rather easily.

Under the direction of Concordia student Ann Davidson, a resident of Austin, approximately 40 men and women - most of whom were unfamiliar with the water - had three hours each on Saturday and Sunday to learn about and use the boats.

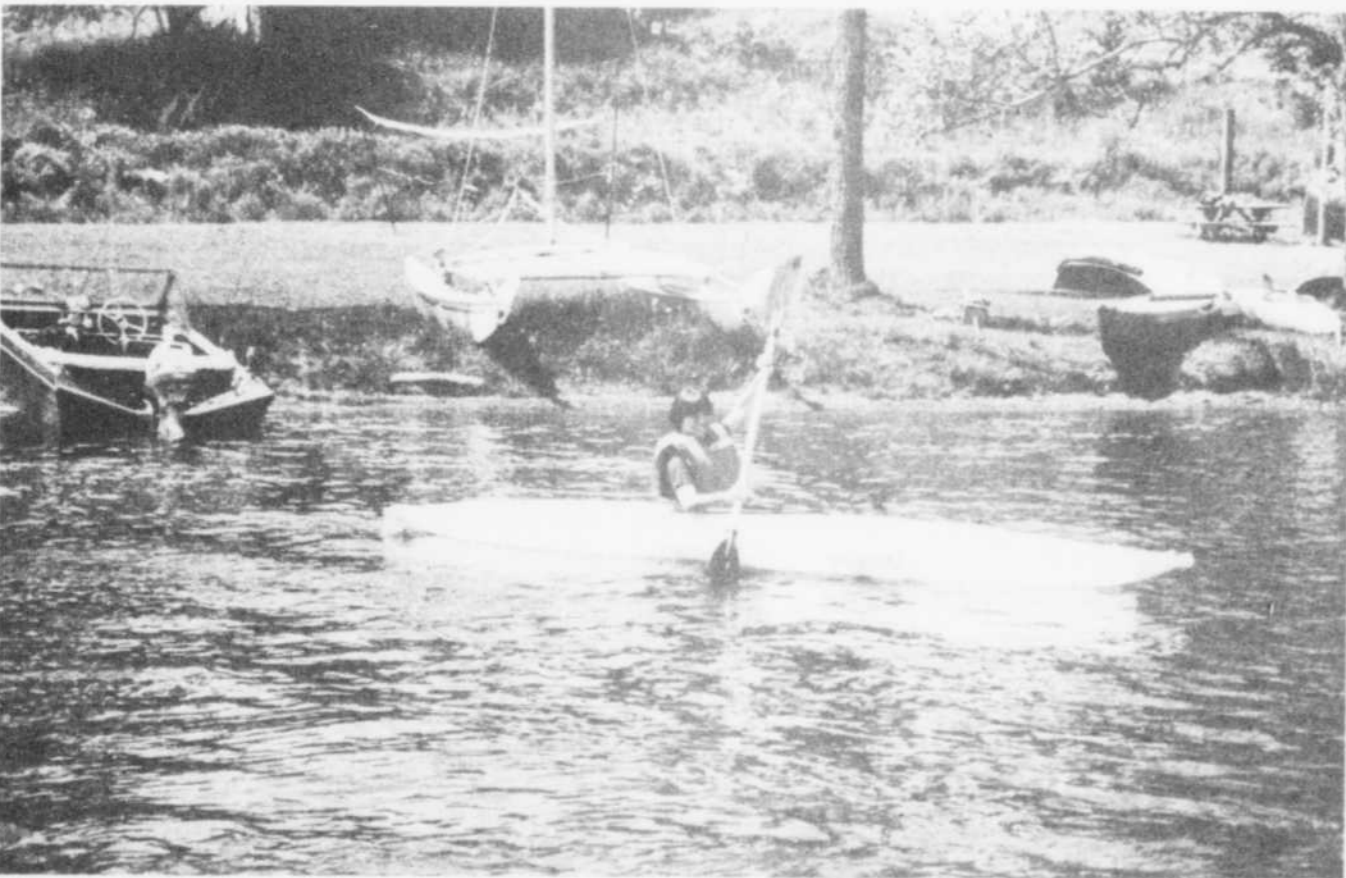

Hardly anyone had ever been in a kayak before, including some of the organizers. But the sleek, light craft proved to be a big hit and before long six kayakers could be seen scooting about the bay in front of Woodacres Marina.

The weekend's activity brought to everyone's attention the enjoyment and variety of boating, while at the same time stressed the necessity of water safety. Many people drown every year while boating on our lakes and rivers - these statistics could be drastically reduced if only more of us realized the dangers involved and educated ourselves accordingly.

The most difficult part of kayaking for the novices was getting in and out of the small cockpit. A good learning procedure was demonstrated - one lines the kayak up parallel to the beach or

This pretty co-ed enjoys her first sail in an Optimist.

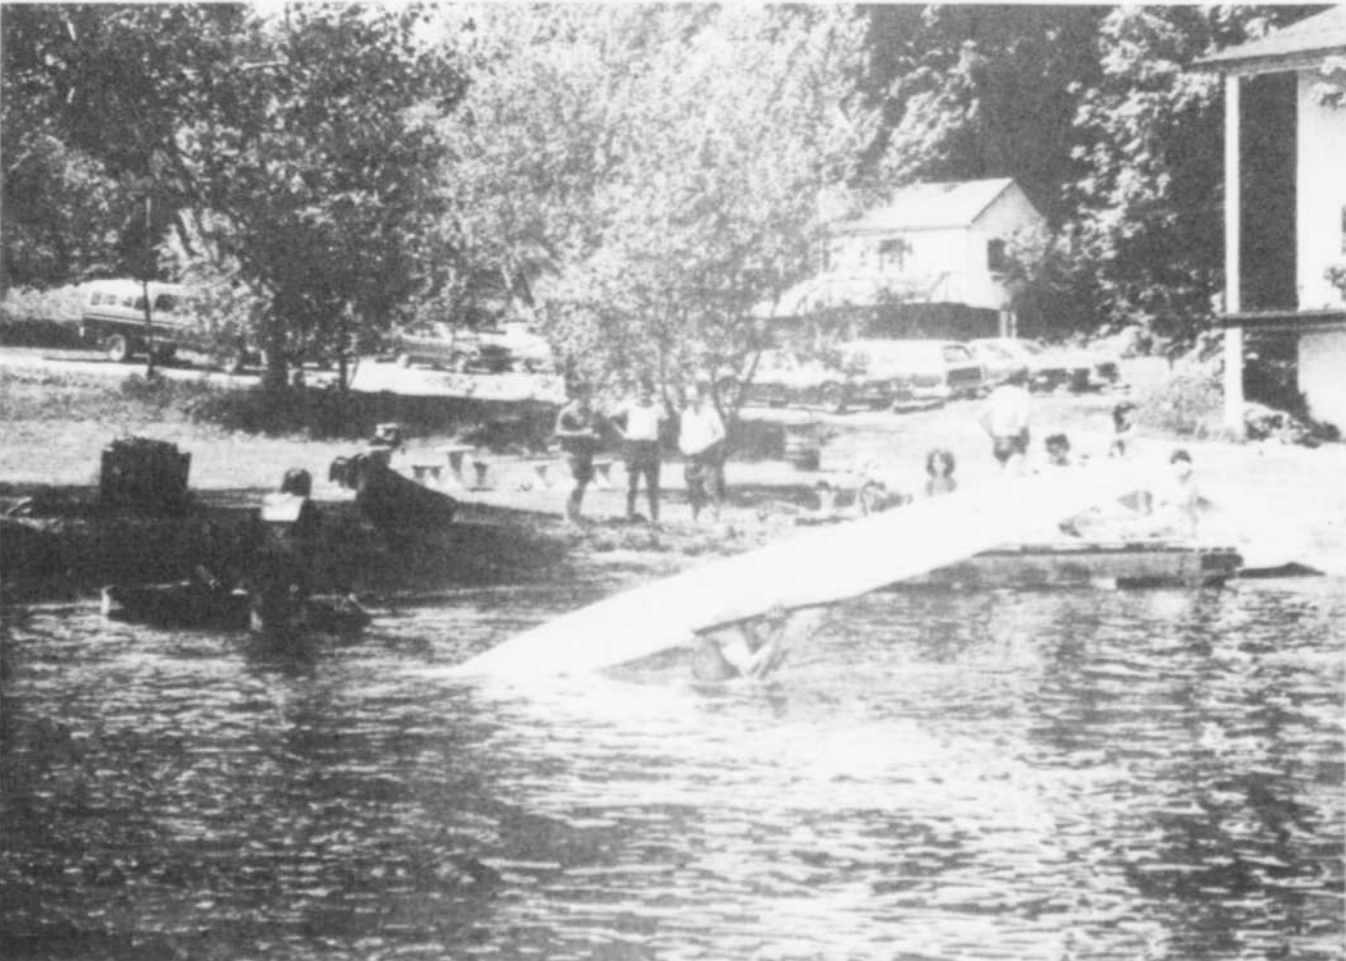

Kayaking is an increasingly-popular sport. More commonly practised on fast-flowing rivers (white-water), the calm waters of a lake are a good place to be introduced to the unstable craft.

Sargent's Bay Yacht Club junior sailors demonstrated sailing technique — including dumping and righting procedures — in Lasers.

The kayakers were loaned to Concordia by L.P.A. Plastics of Mansonville, a firm which specializes in the manufacture of lightweight kayaks.

Two great quarterbacks move to sidelines for 1979 season

When the 1979 football season begins, defensive linemen won't have Ron Lancaster and Fran Tarkenton to chase around any more.

They won't be far away — Lancaster on the sidelines as head coach of Saskatchewan Roughriders and Tarkenton in the broadcasting booth for half a dozen Monday night National Football League games. But both quarterbacks have thrown their last competitive pass. Lancaster tossed No. 6, 233, a Canadian Football League record, for the Riders last October before calling it a career and Tarkenton got away his 6,467th in December as Minnesota Vikings completed their NFL schedule.

Show had stayed on the road for one more year, the flinging 40-year-olds would undoubtedly have passed the 100,000-yard mark in combined passing yardage. As it is, they stopped at 97,538, a few wind sprints short of 55 miles.

Apart from their age — Ron is the elder by less than four months — there are other similarities between the two. Both hold a monopoly on career passing records in their respective leagues. Both were scramblers in their youth, gradually shifting to a more sedate drop-back style in keeping with their advancing years. Each wore two uniforms, although Tarkenton ended up with the team that originally drafted him.

Rams' Rosenbloom was NFL's real leader

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — When Carroll Rosenbloom became the owner of a pro football franchise in 1953, the National Football League was a chummy little corporation of involved sportsmen without any great pretensions for their game.

To men like Tim Mara (New York Giants), Art Rooney (Pittsburgh Steelers), George Halas (Chicago Bears), their teams were their families.

Carroll Rosenbloom was one of a nouveau breed of sports entrepreneurs — a rich guy who saw a way to feed his ego, maybe make a little money, but who essentially treated his team as a toy.

dilettantish, too. He didn't even want to buy the Baltimore Colts. He was only coaxed into it because his seaside neighbor in Margate, N.J., was Bert Bell, who was the commissioner of the NFL and happened to have been backfield coach when Carroll played at the University of Pennsylvania.

Bert invited him over to breakfast one Sunday morning and said, "Carroll, you're going to buy a pro football franchise." He knew Rosenbloom was a native of Baltimore. And had money. A previous franchise in Baltimore had been dissolved in 1950.

Carroll already had made his millions by buying a denim factory just before the outbreak of World War II. He was a confidant of the Kennedys in Palm Beach. To appease his old friend, Bert Bell, he put up $25,000 cash to buy the Colts (actual purchase price, $250,000).

In five years, Baltimore had its first NFL champion. Later, the Colts won Super Bowl V. They had 16 straight winning seasons. Then Rosenbloom in July of 1972 pulled his sensational coup of switching franchises with Los Angeles, settled in Smogville as a Bel Air millionaire, and the Rams have now won six straight division titles.

But the record doesn't tell the whole story of Carroll Rosenbloom's late-life liaison with professional football.

When a heavy wave in the Florida surf tragically pulled under the 72-year-old owner of the Los Angeles Rams, professional football lost its most powerful figure of the last quarter century — 25 years in which the game has become the most dominant of all in American sports.

"He was the strongest force in professional football," said Al Davis, the top man of the Oakland Raiders, a close friend of Rosenbloom and influential himself in the inner circles of the game. "To me, he was the strongest guy."

Some might want to argue the case for Commissioner Pete Rozelle or for Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys. But Pete's power has been legislated by NFL by-laws. And Schramm, an imaginative executive, only runs the Cowboys; he doesn't own them.

Rosenbloom exerted his sway over the destiny of professional football by personal flair, tremendous business acumen and the hard-nosed determination of a man used to leading (and to making millions).

He was the first owner to recognize the right of players to organize when the NFL Players Association was formed in 1955. The Colts, voting unanimously to join, were wary about going against the wishes of their benevolent owner.

Lancaster broke in a year earlier than Tarkenton when Ottawa Rough Riders plucked him from the campus of unfashionable Wittenberg University in Springfield, Ohio, in 1960 to share the signal-calling with Canadian-born Russ Jackson.

The two rookies led Ottawa to the Grey Cup that season but Jackson eventually won the first-string job and the unhappy Lancaster was rescued from backup duty when he was traded to Saskatchewan in 1963.

In the Western Conference that year, trailing Calgary by 26 points after the first game of a total point semifinal, Lancaster scampered all over snowy Taylor Field in Regina as the Riders defeated the favored Stampede 29-12, eliminating them by a single point.

Three years later, Saskatchewan won its first Grey Cup as Lancaster masterminded a 29-14 victory over Ottawa. Jackson was the losing quarterback.

Unlike Lancaster, Tarkenton quickly became a No. 1 quarterback when Minnesota drafted him from the University of Georgia.

In the expansion club's first regular-season game he came off the bench to throw four touchdown passes in a 37-13 victory over Chicago Bears and the job was his until the Vikings traded him to New York Giants in 1967.

For the Giants, who had won only once in 14 starts the year before, Tarkenton compiled a 35-37 win-loss record in five seasons before being traded back to Minnesota, where he played in three losing Super Bowl games.

Besides his part-time broadcasting, Tarkenton is putting his quarterbacking experience to work by founding a company that sells motivational programs to managerial employees of large companies.

Football violence

Steelers' Wagner not ashamed

VAIL, Colo. (NEA) — Months later, Mike Wagner still can't avoid the subject of violence in pro football, just as he couldn't avoid hurtling into Mike Barber on that nasty wet field in Pittsburgh the first week in January.

It was early in the championship game of the American Football Conference, and Barber, a husky young tight end for the Houston Oilers, had slanted over the middle and was stretching for a pass from Dan Pastorini.

The ball, and Wagner, arrived simultaneously.

Wagner, coming up from his free safety position for the Pittsburgh Steelers, threw his body at the Oiler tight end, expecting to jar the ball loose or, at the very least, make the tackle. The ball was overthrown, Barber was walloped across the knees and injured severely enough to miss the rest of the game. A tough blow for the Oilers, who lost 34-5.

In the bitterness of defeat, Barber accused Wagner of unnecessary violence and vowed to "get" him.

"I felt badly he was hurt on the play," says Wagner, reflecting back on the collision. "If he hadn't, there would have been nothing made of it."

win their third Super Bowl, a historic first for one team, but for Mike the association of the Barber incident lingers.

"It was something blown out of proportion," he asserts. "At the time he was angry and rightfully so. He has every right during the game, but I question the big uproar he created afterwards. It was something blown up out of proportion. I haven't seen Barber since. I'm curious about what the next contact between us is. We play them twice a year."

"He was vindictive and outspoken at the time. I'm sure it's going to have some carry-over. There'll be pressure on him from the press to back up his statements."

"He has every right to say what he wants to, but I don't play football the way he says."

Wagner, in fact, made it a special point to check the films of the play and to get the opinions of his coaches on the validity of his maneuver in chopping the Oiler receiver down. He claims a passing grade on all counts.

"My intent wasn't there," he adds, "and that's what gives me piece of mind."

duced several rules changes designed to reduce the specter of injury.

"I'm an aggressive safety," says Wagner, "and like to mix it up. I like to tackle. I have confidence in myself. I'm proud of myself. I missed two games last season and was still second on the team in tackles to (middle linebacker) Jack Lambert."

If you like brew, you'll like Broue...

BROUE, dripping down the walls at the Theatre de l'Atelier, the waiter shuts up a pugnacious pyromaniac and prepares to change the pants of a drunk. Pointu, the fireman burps in the background.

Robert Ludlum "The Matarese Circle" (Longman): $17.25, 601 pp.

Robert Ludlum's "The Matarese Circle" currently heads the best-seller lists of the New York Times, Macleans, and Time magazine, and not many pages of this espionage thriller are turned before the reasons for this phenomenal publishing success are boldly apparent.

Ludlum's eighth thriller is a cleverly written, riveting trip through "the realms of upper echelon spy action, involving the crack agent of the U.S.'s Consular Operations, Brandon Scofield, and his counterpart, the former director of Russian KGB operations in East Berlin, Vasilii Taleniev.

One clever deviation from the standard Ian Fleming John Le Carre brand of spy-thrillers, is that in Ludlum's novel, Scofield and Taleniev are not pointed at each other like ICBM missiles with the objective of obliterating the other from the face of the earth. Indeed, the U.S. and Russian agents have each sworn deadly revenge against one another for reasons of a personalized nature which far exceed their political opposition. They are therefore highly unlikely allies who have to bury personal animosity for each other in order that they can withstand the devastating force that is revealed as the mysterious "Matarese".

personal animosity for each other in order that they can withstand the devastating force that is revealed as the mysterious "Matarese".

High ranking government officials on both the American and Soviet side have been savagely struck down — one in a bizarre brothel, the other on a remote dacha outside Moscow — with evidence left which points to Taleniev and Scofield as the respective killers.

Ludlum's simple but effective prose style races along as the events draw Scofield and Taleniev together for a suspenseful confrontation in which the Soviet agent convinces the wary American of the evil that seems to be traceable to the island of Corsica, and the existence of a cult known as the Matarese. Enmity must be swallowed, and the hatred for the other forgotten, so they can withstand the evil machinations of this frightening Matarese business.

Working as a team, cut off by the espionage arms of their own governments, Scofield and Taleniev have to dodge the CIA and KGB snares to have them killed, while they pursue the baffling conspiracy of the Matarese. This Corsican sect has incredible powers in the present political configuration, and its tentacles seem about to close around the Presidency of the United States.

After about 500 pages of non-stop action, dramatic confrontations, and near-misses in Essen (Germany), Leningrad, Corsica, Rome and London, the investigation by the unlikely Soviet-U.S. team leads them to Boston, Massachusetts.

A senator who strongly resembles Teddy Kennedy, named Joshua Appleton IV, is about to win the presidency, when Scofield and Taleniev become aware of some devious doings which appear linked to the Matarese Circle (a small blue tattoo is found on the chest of the fanatical followers of the Matarese, and hence the book's title).

Characters are portrayed with an economy of style, and the range of this globe-spanning novel is of epic proportions, as far as the spy genre is concerned. The two heroes are admirable fellows, within the scope of their cruel labours which have hardened them to the realities of international power struggles.

Ludlum's plotting moves along with incredible swiftness and he paces his story with a seemingly endless succession of moments of heightened suspense. After each climactic scene, the reader is never lulled back into a series of meaningless events, extraneous to the book's plot. It all holds together, and the reader is treated to several hours of first-rate entertainment, caught up in the spell of Robert Ludlum's storytelling.

OFF THE RECORD

James Taylor "Flag" (CBS)

By NELLY YOUNG
"Broue" is the foam, the head of beer, the gas — a fact which the play's vignettes reflect. All have a slightly bilious feel to them, or, at least, give you a slightly bilious feeling. Which may, in fact, be the intention, if seven writers can write as one mind.

Montreal's Voyagements, a group of young actors, has been in existence for four years now. Each year they have produced a play by "playwright-in-residence", Michel Garneau. His popular "Adidou, Adidou" played at the Theatre de l'Atelier two seasons ago. But Garneau's sudden illness this year left Voyagements no alternative but to look elsewhere for their script. Michel Cote, Marcel Gauthier and Marc Messier (the three actors involved in the current production) approached eight different playwrights with a request for a ten-minute skit from each.

The theme linking the skits would be "a day at the tavern". The eight authors (Jean Barbeau, Germain Beauchamp, Gaston Caron, Robert Gurik, Claude Meunier, Jean-Pierre Plante, Francine Ruel and Louis Saia — Beauchamp's sketch was later dropped) had a deadline of 10 days to complete their task. It is therefore hardly surprising that the quality varies.

Almost two months of performances have had their effect on the stage presentation. It's hard to believe that there are only three actors portraying the 18 roles. Many of the characters share an attitude about the effect of opening tavern doors to women ("pour nous empêcher d'aller au fond des choses"). But in reality, most of their time is spent escaping from their sordid existence.

There is the fireman who drinks enough between calls to put out a fire when he urinates. Pointu, played by Michel Cote, pesters everyone to join the Automobile Club of which he is president — a glamorous contrast to the lives he sees destroyed daily in the fire-traps that litter the neighborhood in which he works. But, of course, no one takes him seriously.

The two waiters at Chez Willy Tavern see themselves as "artistes du cabaret", indispensable, psychiatrists in all but the pay-check. If hockey players can unionize, why can't they? They have their dreams too.

The speedy shoe salesman (Marcel Gauthier) punctuates every line with the all-encompassing exclamation "Tabernac" and exudes a frustration with his lot despite all appearances to the contrary.

Michel Cote and Marc Messier portray Ti-Mile, an alcoholic plumber, and his sixteen-year-old nunny of a son in a hilarious skit that climaxes the evening — Leo, the novice, is initiated into the dregs of tavern life by Ti-mile who believes beer and sex will make a man of him.

Michel Cote, in particular, does an admirable job, bringing each of his characters to life as unique individuals, each with a history and visage of his own. When Cote finally appears to take his bows, it is as if we are seeing him for the first time.

Wednesday night's performance was so tightly packed, extra chairs had to be brought in. We sat just below the control room and it was a pleasure to hear the frequent spontaneous outbursts of laughter from the technician who must have seen the production many times. No doubt the characters and the jokes have developed over these many weeks of playing to such receptive audiences.

The stage set is the inspirational work of Denis Rousseau. In contrast to David Fennario's "Nothing to Lose" (a Centaur Theatre production that made its way to Bishop's Centennial Theatre two winters ago, also set in a tavern), Rousseau's set is not realistic. It is a tavern, but it is also a glass of sweaty, sticky, cheap draft. This is very much in keeping with the revue's title — gaseous — and its content — light.

"Broue" is great if you like laughing at drunks.

For a study of the death of one of French Canada's most important institutions, it's a pretty sorry effort. Serious things happen in taverns. People's lives are destroyed by them, friendships are made in them, people drown the sorrows of the world in them. They are an escape for some and a school for others and, most important, men relate in them — and that's no laughing matter. Sad but true, too many men have to get drunk in order to relate to one another. How else can they show any emotion in this rational, macho world?

"Broue" is not really for thinking theatre goers, but if you like a good laugh, go and guffaw. Did you hear the one about the two drunks sitting in a tavern? The pay phone rings and rings and rings, then stops. One of the drunks lifts his head and says, "Why didn't you answer the phone?" The other, swaying back and forth, burps, "Because I didn't know the question."
