The Misses Carmen and Estelle Lefebvre entertained to a miscellaneous shower on Thursday evening in honor of their cousin, Miss Marie Faubert. The rooms were tastefully decorated with white bells, white and yellow streamers, and a profusion of summer flowers.

New Oil Theory Held

Another myth about oil has been exploded by scientists, who now believe that heat and time, rather than pressure, are responsible for the natural formation of petroleum in the earth, according to the results of laboratory experiments announced by the American Petroleum Institute.

The old pressure theory thus takes its place as a myth alongside the antiquated notion that the quality of a lubricating oil depends upon the source of the crude. A recent survey by a leading eastern university among professors of organic chemistry indicated that stress is no longer laid by scientists on the origin of the oil from which a lubricant is made, but rather on the refining processes to which it is subjected.

GARDEN PARTY AT MRS. SELLAR'S

Women's Institute Members Took Own Life

Perfect weather and an ideal setting featured the garden party held on Tuesday by the Huntingdon Women's Institute, on the beautiful lot at the home of Mrs. Robert Sellar.

Seats were most conveniently arranged under the canopy of historic elms. In the year 1888 these trees were planted for Mr. Robert Sellar by Mr. Dan McFarlane, grandfather of Mr. Clarence McFarlane. Mr. McFarlane remarked to Mr. Sellar when planting them "when you and I are dead and gone people will enjoy the shade of these trees." Occasional shouts of happy batters drew attention to the flowing Chateaugay River in the background. The President, Mrs. Wallace Merson opened the meeting with the Ode to a Creed.

On motion it was decided to sponsor the Baby Clinic again this year on September 8th at the Huntingdon Fair. Mrs. T. S. Gardner, Mrs. W. L. Carr and Miss

Municipal Finances Checked

The Quebec Municipal Commission Act now in force will check extravagances and carelessness in money matters by Municipal Corporations and School Commissions. The Gleaner has repeatedly advocated the advisability of having modern bookkeeping methods adopted by the towns in our midst and along with that to have the books audited yearly by a chartered accountant. Changes were unofficially promised by members of our town council but we have never heard who the accountant was to set up the books. If the books have not been set up, it will be a difficult matter for an accountant to give a report to the town, other than the checking system of auditing done for generations past, and that is not at all satisfactory or just to taxpayers.

The Gleaner does not wish to insinuate that the finances have not been honestly handled, or that our councils have spent money injudiciously, but the taxpayers deserve what the Quebec Municipal Commission Act now demands. Henceforth it is illegal for a Municipality or School Commission to engage a reputable citizen to come in and audit the books for perhaps a $5. or $10. fee. It now demands that a chartered accountant do the work or by one who has received authorization in writing from the Commission. If the corporation goes ahead and has an audit made by a private unauthorized individual, he shall not be entitled to collect his fees before a court, and should a Council or Commission pay fees to him contrary to law, the amounts thus paid may be recovered from him.

Another feature of the Act is that unless the Municipality or Commission adheres to this law, it cannot borrow one cent unless approved by the Commission. If the law is ignored, and a loan is contracted without approval of the Commission, the loan does not hold the Municipality; the lender cannot claim the amount from the Council, and his only recourse is against the individual members of the Council. These facts are indeed plain and truthful, therefore every Council and School Commission should be guided and act accordingly.

It is not up to the Gleaner to be waging these demands for the people, but if our Councils persist in ignoring this important matter, we will accept this moral obligation of our readers and organize a number of property holders in each municipality to make the necessary demands upon the Councils and School Boards. Some School Boards and Municipal Councils will perhaps think we would be overstepping, but such laws are not made without cause. All our councils are offenders, for they do not have their accounts audited annually according to the demands of the Quebec Municipal Commission Act.

The Debt Cancellation Conspiracy

In last week's Sunday paper which we purchased from the local newspaper dealer, we came across a two-column front page spread entitled "The Debt Cancellation Conspiracy." That article appeared in the Canadian edition of the Boston Sunday Advertiser, and it is supposed that 90% of the U. S. Sunday papers that week-end carried the same article. It was the copy of a radio address delivered by William Randolph Hearst over a nation-wide network of the National Broadcasting Company and affiliated stations. It is therefore safe to say that its contents are known by half of the North American continent.

In his opening remarks Mr. Hearst mentioned of the appeal made by the Allies, of their entrance into the Great War, and of how "they won it." Continuing, he spoke of the thousands of millions of dollars loaned for the prosecution of the war and for the Allies to rehabilitate themselves after the war.

Hearst has the opinion that the world is trying to make the U. S. A. shoulder all the war debts in cancelling reparations. We quote:

"My friends, let us be altruistic, and even pacifistic if you please. Let us be patriotic, as we always are, but let us not be sentimentally idiotic, as we sometimes are. Let us consider this whole question of debt cancellation and subsequent taxation calmly and conscientiously, logically and also loyally. Let us say that the first point of view in this matter of honestly paying debts or dishonestly cancelling them is the altruistic consideration of WHAT IS BEST FOR THE WORLD. Is it not best for friendship among nations that such friendship should be based on the solid foundation of honorable dealing and mutual good faith? How can friendship among nations, how can mutual confidence or mutual respect be built on any other basis? Who trusts a people that repudiate their debts. The worst thing for the welfare of any nation is the worthlessness of that nation's word and the worst thing for the stability and tranquility of the world would be the knowledge that the solid promises of England, France and Italy to pay honorable obligations were merely unrecognized scraps of repudiated papers."

As the speaker continued his address he continued to wax warmer and spoke of the European nations which had entered into

"what they call a 'gentleman's agreement'—to force their dishonest debt cancellation policy upon the United States. But how can there be a 'gentleman's agreement' between welters? How can there be gentlemen whose word is worthless? How can there be gentlemen whose HONOR is worthless?"

Great Britain's war debts to the United States are placed at four billions of dollars, and Britain has been repaying its war debts to the United States at the rate of approximately $180,000,000 per year.

Now, Mr. Hearst, in answer to your radio broadcast, repudiation of debts, and for the information of the general U. S. public.

Eight of the Southern States of U. S. A. raised loans in Great Britain in the last century and then defaulted in the payment of interest, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, and North and South Carolina are the defaulting States. Calculating compound interest, it is well over $1,000,000,000. Mississippi defaulted in 1841 and repudiated liability in 1852, so that the debt is no new one.

Successive British Governments since 1841 have considered the question, but the difficulty lies in the fact that the U. S. Federal Government is not concerned with the financial responsibilities of individual States. President Roosevelt declared the action of the defaulting States to be a "painful and shameful page" in American history.

When it was first repudiated, hundreds of humble homes in Great Britain suffered severe loss, as a result of which the defaulting States ATTAINED IMMENSE PROSPERITY.

We hope to hear again from Mr. Hearst on solid foundations of honorable dealings, unrecognized scraps of repudiated papers, and WELTERS. We might also ask, "How can there be gentlemen whose word and honor is worthless?"

Chautauqua Opening Next Week

Chautauqua Committees have been formed and so far ticket sales are reported well in advance of last year. Chautauqua comes to Huntingdon this year with as good if not better programmes than previous years. There are two outstanding lectures to be heard, one on "The Challenge of a New Day," and the other "Government by Gangland." Two plays, "New Brooms," and "Merely Mary Ann" will undoubtedly attract large audiences. Children will rejoice to hear of the return of the Marionettes in an altogether different programme. Lovers of music will be amply satisfied with the appearance of Sorenstino and his Venetian Strollers, the Scottish Musical Comedy Company, and the Artist trio including Hugo Brandt, famous pianist and composer, Leola Aikman, coloratura soprano, and Vladimir Lenak, master violinist. For those who like something different there is John B. Ratto, the impersonator and humorist. All in all, a good programme, and worthy of the support of the entire community.

Noiseless Milk Wagons

Those ninety-five per cent of Vancouver citizens who prize above all treasures those last two or three hours of precious sleep between five and seven or eight o'clock in the morning will rise up and bless that inspired dairy company which has installed small pneumatic tires on its milk wagons. For nothing murders sleep so bloodily as the steel-rimmed wheels of milk wagons grinding and squeaking to and fro in the early hours of the day. These rubber-tired milk wagons are new things. They are cheap now. And the noiseless milkman would be the popular milkman in residential districts. Cannot some of the other dairies do something about it?

Fish Raised by Lightning

Fishing by electricity is the latest fad in the Adirondacks. During a local thunder storm which prevailed over the Upper Saranac lake sector, a terrific lightning bolt struck the water near "Grey Rocks" camp on Doctors Island. So fierce was the impact that water spouted for many feet into the air, carrying with it great numbers of fish of the fresh water smelt species. Mrs. Charles Marvin of Grey Rocks camp, witnessing the phenomenon, put out in a row boat and picked up 26 good sized smelt. Other nearby campers followed suit and nearly 100 fish were captured before they recovered from the stunning effects of the lightning bolt. Old guides and fishermen stated that the lightning had the same effect as explosions of dynamite under water, which is illegal. The fish are stunned and helpless for a time, but later regain their swimming powers.

A Bold Swindle

Bold swindle was worked by an authoritative-looking man who visited a Berlin baker just before closing time and asked to see all the banknotes in the baker's possession, as he was strongly suspected of circulating false ones. The indignant baker immediately emptied his till and placed notes to the value of 600 marks on the counter to prove his innocence. The self-styled police-inspector—who had armed himself with papers to substantiate his claim—examined the notes against the light with leisurely care and finally informed the baker that he must confiscate them for an official examination by experts. After writing a receipt he disappeared into the night and has not been heard of again.

Legs of Girl Chained

A 12-year-old girl testified in Camden, N. J., police court that her father had chained her legs over a period of two years to keep her from running away. The child, Lena Persiana, said she "got the chains off once in a while and then would run away again." Her father, Anthony Persiana, who has six other children, admitted he had chained her, but said he "had to do it because the cruelty society would not let me whip her, and I had to keep her home."

Old Statute Saved Lawyer

Lawyers, it seems, can do no wrong when they're on their way to or from court. Attorney S. L. August, of Chicago, had, on the face of it, cracked the speed laws badly when he motored through Lincoln Park at 51 miles an hour, but in Speeders' Court he pulled a mellow old statute out of his hat. Back in 1833, he testified, lawyers were vested with immunity from arrest while going to or from court. Judges, councillors, lawyers, clerks and officers of the court all share the privilege. He won the argument.

Farmer Well Repaid

C. E. Aldred, farmer, of Raymond, Alta., cared for a partridge injured by a moving machine and reaped a rich reward. He gave first aid to the bird and placed it back on its nest of 20 eggs. The eggs were hatched and other partridges came to the farm. Recently the farmer saw an army of webworms marching on his beet field. He turned his turkeys out for the worm feast, and was astonished when a large flock of partridges, including the one he had befriended, reinforced the domestic fowl to check the invasion. "They saved my crop and no hunters will be permitted on my property," he remarked.

Green Hose Landed Him

His penchant for noisy green socks had much to do with the arrest of Robert M. Sanderson, alias R. M. Hanson, at San Francisco, Calif., on a charge of passing bad cheques. For some weeks past a man has been passing bad cheques in Marin, Sonoma and Alameda counties. All descriptions of him tallied in one respect—that he wore bright green socks. At Grant ave. and Sutter street, Lieut. Joseph Powers and Inspector Charles Maher of the bad cheque detail saw a man answering Sanderson's description. And, sure enough, there were the green socks. They arrested him.

Glacier Priest in B. C.

After conquering Aniakchak, largest active crater in the world with a circumference of 21 miles and a drop of 3,000 feet from the rim to floor, by air and foot, Rev. Father Bernard R. Hubbard, glacier priest of Santa Clara University, has returned from the north and is resting at Victoria, B. C., after five months of scientific exploration packed with thrills and incidents. With him he has brought an official record of the highest crater bed temperatures known to man. With Father Hubbard are Professor Rod Chisholm, of San Francisco University, and "Marge" and "Katmai," malamute dogs who shared their adventures.

Cement Garden of Eden

When Samuel P. Dinsmoor completed his cement Garden of Eden, at Lucas, Kan., after a score of years work he said: "When Gabriel calls, I'll take the responsibility for it all." Gabriel called Thursday and took Dinsmoor at the age of 89. Starting in 1907 at his home on the outskirts of this little town, Dinsmoor, unexperienced in sculpture, began reproducing Biblical characters in cement. There are figures of Cain, Abel, Gabriel, the devil and others; birds, animals and trees. In one corner of the yard is a mausoleum guarded by a cement angel. Dinsmoor's first wife, who died in 1917, is buried here and in a crypt above her, his body will be placed in a cement coffin he constructed. Thousands of tourists visited the unique creation in the last quarter century.

Mice Eat $3,000

There's one man in Nashville, Tennessee, who is convinced hoarding is all wrong. A grocer, distrustful of banks, had more than $5000 in $50 and $100 bills hidden away "in a safe place" in his store. Mice proceeded to invade the "safe place" and build nests. Their nests were so complete bankers were able to salvage only about $2000 from the torn and chewed bits of bills.

Dream Comes True

A Philadelphia lawyer bought a railroad the other day running from Denton, Mo., to Lewis, Del. It is 41 miles long and has four box cars and a locomotive. The lawyer bought it at a receiver's sale for $26,000. The only explanation he gave for buying it was that he yielded to a desire deep in his breast ever since early boyhood to own a real, sure enough railroad with puffing engines and cars rolling on shiny rails. He could not have them when he was a boy. Now he is getting even with fate late in life.

Train Whistle Scares Indians

The marvels of modern civilization were presented for the first time to two families of Chipewyan Indians from far north of Lake du Brochet in northern Saskatchewan upon their arrival at The Pas, Manitoba, after a 500 mile trip by canoe from their northern home. The two families were seated by the side of the railway tracks when the Canadian National Railway train prepared to pull out towards Churchill. The Indians gazed with amusement as all the people piled into the coaches of the train, unable to comprehend the purpose. When the engineer blew the first warning blast of his whistle and the train started to pull out, the families rushed helter skelter away from the iron monster, the squaws quieting screaming children. The families are those of Magloie Benanni and Francois Jose. They came down on the long canoe trip to bring Magloie's wife to hospital at The Pas. The Indians paddled day and night in shifts to bring the sick woman for medical attention.

Snowballing Whales

The Northland's newest sport is throwing snowballs at white whales, says a report to the Canadian National Railway. The boys who hunt for game and gold along the shores of Hudson Bay say it is great fun. Schools of the Arctic mammals feed close to shore in the early summer and northlanders grew tired of merely watching the big fellows. So they started to throw snowballs. Strike a whale and he thrashes wildly in the water for a second or so and then dives. The more suspicious giants attribute the blow to a frolicsome neighbor and can be counted on to retaliate. Then the snowballer gets a close-up of a rough-and-tumble whale fight undersea.

Child Fools Mind Reader

When four-year-old Graziella Houle, of Three Rivers, disappeared from her backwoods home, her parents consulted a mind reader who told them the child was drowned and a fortune teller who informed them she had been kidnapped. Both these solutions of the mystery were disproved four days later, however, by the reappearance of the child on the edge of the forest. She was weak from fright and undernourishment and badly bitten by mosquitoes, but quickly recovered. Grass and leaves formed her diet while wandering in the bush.

Flood of Gold Coins

Past and present ownership of a flood of gold coins uncovered by the picks of workmen engaged in demolishing the home of a man who disappeared nearly ten years ago, has engaged the attention of authorities at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. A cordon of state police still guarded the remains of the home of Harry Pettie, former president of the Central Carbonic Gas Company of New York, who was indicted for grand larceny nearly ten years ago for embezzlement of $300,000 in company funds. More than 300 "prospectors" rushed to the Pettie homestead to comb the wreckage within a short time after a worker's pick had broken a hidden preserve jar and released a miniature flood of silver and gold coinage. More jars, tin cans and various other containers yielded their hoarded wealth to the frenzied search before state troopers drove the searchers from the scene. Estimates of the amount found ran as high as $3,000. Pettie disappeared a month before he was indicted, leaving a suicide note. He was a former mayor of the city. His former home was being razed to make way for a state building. With Attorney General Bennett rested the decision as to the ownership of the money.

New Bride Seeks Annulment

Record for short-duration marriage may go to Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Whybrow. They were married in Edmonton, June 25, and, Monday morning following Mrs. Whybrow, the former Miss Jessie Gunn, of Onaway, commenced proceedings to have the marriage annulled. In a statement of claim the former Miss Gunn claims that her marriage resulted from coercion and should be declared void. The woman claims that she was induced to go through the ceremony, through fear and terror of the bridegroom, whose address is in Victoria, and for her parents, John and Jessie Gunn. She adds that at one time she was engaged to Whybrow and that he declined to allow her to withdraw her promise of marriage, threatening to shoot himself if she did not marry him. Her parents, the bride charges, insisted upon the marriage. Through fear of threatened breach of promise proceedings and of disgrace to herself and parents, the woman alleges, she pretended willingness, was married and left the bridegroom immediately after the ceremony, since when she has not seen him.

Her Record Scared Audience

For the first time in her career, Galli Curci's singing of "Lucia" frightened an audience away, a letter received from Melbourne, Australia, disclosed. William Lingford and Bernard C. Ryder, members of an expedition exploring the Australian coast, informed the singer in a letter she forwarded to friends at New York, that her recording of the aria played on a gramophone before a group of aborigines on the northwestern Australian coast, sent them away in frenzied haste. Madame Galli Curci is on a singing tour of Australia.

Recommended Recipes For Canning Vegetables

Beans (Green and Wax)

Wash, remove ends and strings. Leave whole or cut into inch lengths as desired. Blanch 5 minutes, cold-dip and pack in sterilized jars, adding 1 teaspoonful salt to each quart jar. Completely fill jar with boiling water. Sterilize 3 hours on one day, or 1 hour on three successive days.

Peas

It is of the greatest importance that peas for canning be young and canned within five hours after picking. Blanch 5 minutes, cold-dip, pack in sterilized jars, add 1 teaspoonful salt to each quart jar and fill completely with boiling water. Avoid too close a pack, as some of the peas may break, thereby giving undesirable cloudy appearance to the liquid. Sterilize 3 hours on one day, or 1 hour on three successive days.

Corn

Great care in the selection of corn is essential for success. It is preferable to can it within one-half hour after gathering, as spoilage is much more liable to occur if it is allowed to stand. Select corn at the proper stage of development, for, if too ripe, it becomes dry and discoloured during the processing, whereas under-ripe corn is lacking in both flavour and food value.

Sweet corn on the cob. Select small cobs of uniform size at maturity. Cut off tips of ears if necessary, get them into the jar. Avoid leaving any broken kernels as they give a cloudy appearance to the liquid in the jar. Blanch 10 minutes and cold-dip. Pack cobs in wide-mouthed sterilized quart jars, alternating the butts and tips. Add 1 teaspoonful of salt to each jar. Fill completely with boiling water. Sterilize 1 hour on three successive days.

Beets

Select only young and tender beets and put uniform sizes together. Wash thoroughly, and cut off the tops, leaving at least 2 inches of stem; also leave the long tap-root to prevent loss of colour. Blanch 15 minutes, cold-dip and scrape off skins and stems. Pack closely fitting the second layer into the first layer in sterilized jars. Add 1 teaspoonful of salt to each quart jar. Fill completely with boiling water. Sterilize 1 hour.

Carrots

Wash and scrub carrots. Blanch 5 minutes. Cold-dip and pack whole or in uniform slices in sterilized jars. Add 1 teaspoonful salt to each quart jar and completely fill it with boiling water. Sterilize 2 hours.

Tomatoes

Choose medium-sized tomatoes of uniform ripeness and colour, wash and blanch until skins are loose; cold-dip; and remove the skins and cores. Pack whole in sterilized jars, filling the spaces with boiling strained tomato juice, made by cooking large and broken tomatoes until well cooked, and then straining, adding 1 teaspoonful salt to each quart of juice. Sterilize 22 minutes. Tomatoes may be cut in pieces, packed closely in jars, and sterilized 25 minutes. If this is done add no liquid. Tomatoes may also be packed in jars, 1 teaspoon salt added to each quart jar, and jar filled to overflowing with boiling water. Sterilize 22 minutes.

Cauliflower

Wash and divide head into uniform pieces for packing. Soak in salted water one hour to remove any insects which may be present. Blanch 5 minutes; cold-dip. Pack closely in sterilized jars. Add 1 teaspoonful salt to each quart jar. Completely fill with boiling water. Sterilize 1½ hours.

Canned Pumpkin and Squash (For Pie-Filling)

Cut into convenient sections. Remove soft pulp containing the seeds, also the skins. Cook for 30 minutes to reduce pulp. Add ¾ cup sugar and 1 teaspoonful salt to each quart of pulp. Pack into sterilized jars. Adjust rubber and top and sterilize 1 hour.

Entertainment As Big Factor in the Ottawa Exhibition

Of the hundred and one features which combine to make the Ottawa Exhibition the big annual event of the Capital, the entertainment factors appeal to rural and urban residents, young and old. The educational part of the exhibition is always to the fore and prominence is given live stock, agriculture, industries, child welfare, handicrafts and arts. At the same time it is recognized by the directors of the Central Canada Exhibition Association that the patrons of the exhibition look for amusement and entertainment. For this year their demands will be met as never before.

Outstanding will be the United States Marine Band, the first time in Canada. This famed organization of 75 musicians will give two concerts each day. Those who hear them on the opening day, Monday, August 22nd, doubtless will miss few if any of the programs on the succeeding five days.

Ottawa also is favored in that it will be the only city this year to have formation flying by the Siskin planes from the Royal Canadian Air Force. This concession has been made to the very latest in shows and novel rides will be assembled. In front of the grandstand there will be horse races, vaudeville, sports and fireworks.

Topping the program for the evening will be the Winter Garden Revue, the most elaborate outdoor spectacle ever presented at the exhibition. There will be a big cast of Broadway stars, mostly girls, the costume and staging will be on a gorgeous scale. It is to be a meritorious event, a work of art, replete with up-to-date song numbers, excellent dances, splendid lighting effects, beautiful, shapely girls, all selected with the greatest of care, entrancing scenes and thrilling episodes, without a doubt to be

Ignorance and Intelligence

Intelligence is the faculty of understanding, the capacity for knowing or apprehending. One is ignorant who is without knowledge, who is un-informed or un-instructed. A person with a fair capacity for knowing might (and often does), by force of circumstances, lack so much in knowledge of the commonplaces of civilized life as to be called ignorant, though ignorance is very much a relative term. All persons are born ignorant, but may expect that experience will dissipate this condition to some extent; there is not so much hope for one born unintelligent.

ADVERTISING for the MERCHANT of TO-DAY

Conducted by HAROLD S. EDGAR

A series of weekly articles on advertising and merchandising prepared for the merchants of the Chateaugay Valley with the co-operation of the Huntingdon Gleaner.

The Catalogue Window

Three things a window must do: make people stop, interest them—and create desire for possession. The merchandise itself will accomplish the first and last, but the second needs the support of show cards telling something about the quality of the goods and the price.

The catalogue window gets its name from its similarity to the page of a mail order catalogue, which is jammed full of illustrations. The wording is short, concise, descriptive and the price occupies little white space. There are no frills and every inch is made to tell the story.

A catalogue window is jammed full of products of similar character stacked up so that each hold its own corner in the picture—tells its own story with the goods themselves, and the tags or cards carry the price.

This type of window was first used by the Popular Priced Drug Stores, who broke away from the old time Pharmacy Window, with its huge bottles filled with coloured water, using first a window dressed for a national product usually with materials supplied by the national advertiser. These stores have since dropped this individual product display and instead fill the window with two dozen to a hundred different articles, stacked in a carefully thought out arrangement, with price tags and suggestions for use.

This type of window commands the attention of more people, holds that attention longer, and a very high percentage of those who stop to look walk into the store and buy.

Grocers are making use of this idea and developing fine windows, as the strong colours used for food product cartons give many vivid spots of colour, and while difficult to believe, it is a fact that the colours do not clash with each other.

Carrying on the catalogue window—it works out advantageously for shoe stores, only in this case it is not policy to mix men's and women's shoes, children's and adults'. That is, a window should be for men's alone, lines and styles that appeal to men; for women, the same story; for boys, boys alone; girls, for girls alone. You can however take a centre section of a corner down near the front, for a grouping of baby shoes in any window, but the one devoted to men.

If your window space is limited you can divide it with a low panel and in that way separate your display for men and women.

Hardware again works out well with the catalogue window, though you cannot always show the variety of articles, owing to their size and form taking up too much space.

The items in a catalogue window, or in any window should be related. That is a window on spring housecleaning should contain ammonia, blueing, washing powders, scrub brushes, brooms, mops, cleaners, soaps, etc. Clothespins, clotheslines, washboards, insecticides, starch and pails might also be used in this type of window. The prices should be on the articles, or near them. The window advertising can be carried into the store by placing quantities of merchandise shown in the window up front in counter and floor displays.

Dry goods and men's furnishings do not lend themselves to a catalogue window except in a limited way with a few related articles.

In nearly all lines it should be a policy to show a price tag with every article in the window. Few people buy anything without asking, "How much is it?" They may ask this question to themselves while standing in front of the window, and if the answer is not forthcoming, their interest drops because they may feel that its cost may be beyond their reach.

Do not tackle the catalogue type of window unless you will do the window dressing properly as it requires care and frequent trips to the sidewalk in front of the window to see how it is shaping up. However it is a window that will pay well for the time spent on it.

Next Week—SOME CUSTOMER TYPES.

Mr. Edgar will be glad to answer questions in this column, if readers will address their communications in care of this paper. Confidential replies can be arranged through the editor.—(Copyright)

Old Story Disapproved

There is an often repeated story credited to the historian, Harvey Rice, that Moses Cleveland's exploring and surveying party started up the Chagrin river, mistaking it for the Cuyahoga, and that upon discovering the error Cleveland gave it this name as representative of the state of his feelings.

It appears, however, that this story has little foundation, for on maps made before the Revolution the river was called the Chagrin. The name is no doubt from an Indian word given as "Shagrin" or "Shagrin" and said to mean "clear." One map issued in 1750 calls it the Elk river—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Apples

Wash, pare and quarter, or slice and drop into weak salt water to prevent discoloration. Blanch (immerse in boiling water to loosen the skins, reduce the bulk and drive out objectionable acids) 1½ minutes. Cold-dip, emakes products easier to handle, separates the skin and firms the texture. Pack in sterilized jars and cover with water or thin syrup. 1 cup sugar, 4 cups water to overflowing. Half-seal. Sterilize 60 minutes.

Apple Sauce

Pare, core and cook until soft with a small quantity of water. Press through a colander or strainer and measure. ½ cup sugar to 2 cups apple. Put into hot, sterilized jars, half-seal, and sterilize for 12 minutes. Canned apple sauce should be served as cold as possible.

Raw Canning of Raspberries

Place jars in a wash-tub, or similar vessel, and fill it with enough boiling water to come three inches over the top of the jars. Place a blanket over the tub and leave until cold, or overnight. Invert to test for leaks.

Strawberries

Wash and stem carefully. Pack in sterilized jars and fill with boiling syrup, using 2 cups sugar to 1 cup water. Partly seal and sterilize 16 minutes.

Lizards Feast Royally on Eggs of Crocodile

I have sometimes watched monitors, or African water lizards, at their work of robbing crocodile nests of the eggs. C. R. S. P. writes, in Asia Magazine. The antics of these prehistoric looking creatures which are usually about four feet long, are most entertaining.

On more than one occasion when I have been lying in concealment, observing the behavior of the guardian females on the breeding grounds, I have seen a monitor deliberately provoke a crocodile until it rushes off in pursuit into the water. In the meantime the monitor's mate arrives on the scene, excavates the nest with great haste and begins gobbling up the eggs.

Soon it is joined by No. 1, which had only taken to the water as a ruse. They usually succeed in disposing of the greater portion of the eggs before the return of the rightful owner. Even when forced to withdraw, they will decamp each with an egg in its mouth.

To Enamel An Old Bath

First of all rub down the inside of the bath with No. 2 glass paper, paying particular attention to the bare patches. Make certain that no rust lingers where the enamel has become chipped. This completed, rinse out the bath and dry thoroughly. Procure special bath undercoating from any paint shop and apply three coats, allowing each two days to harden. Next apply a coat of enamel thinly and evenly, and leave it for a week. During that time be careful that no water, steam or moisture is allowed to interfere with the hardening process. At the end of the week put on a second coat, giving that a week to harden. The bath should by this time approximate to what you desire, but another coat of enamel will do no harm. After six or seven days fill the bath with cold water, and as the cold water runs away turn on the hot. This gradually changes the temperature of the water, and is less liable to spoil your efforts.

BLOOD PRESSURE

The number of questions concerning blood pressure which come to the Health Service is evidence that a large number of people are worried about high or low blood pressure.

For a number of years, in making an examination, doctors have taken the blood pressure of their patients. The doctor is interested in the blood pressure because it is by putting together all his findings that he is able to determine the nature of any abnormal condition which may be present in his patient.

The blood is always under pressure; otherwise it would not circulate. In the same person blood pressure varies as the result of such things as worry, excitement, position of the body and the use of stimulants. It also varies with age, sex, weight and general health.

High blood pressure is not a disease. It is the result of some cause which may be emotional, such as worry or excitement, but may be associated with some abnormal condition of other parts, such as the heart or kidney. There is no use in guessing as to the cause; that is for the doctor to find out. Worry about blood pressure may be the one thing which is keeping it above the average.

It is a mistake to try to interpret your own symptoms or the results of some examination. If, for some reason, you have an X-ray examination, very likely you have no idea that you can do so, and you are quite right, for it requires experience to enable the doctor to know the meaning of the lights and shadows which the picture shows.

Blood pressure readings appear so simple—much like reading a thermometer—that many people seem to believe that they should be able to know the meaning of a blood pressure of 150 or some other figure. It is not with any kind of suggesting that there is something mysterious about the subject that we say quite frankly that the interpretation of blood pressure readings is not simple. It is not simple because the significance of the blood pressure is not found in the blood pressure itself. It is obvious that, if the average blood pressure for a man of 50 years of age is 130, a man of 50 who has a pressure of 160 is above normal. Such a condition should receive attention, but need not cause alarm. The condition itself means nothing; it may be only temporary, but, in any case, until the cause is known the significance of the condition is obscure.

A few years ago people worried about uric acid; now it is blood pressure. Secure the advice of your doctor, follow his instructions, and leave blood pressure to take care of itself.

Keeping Faith

During the Spanish-American War, four comrades, three of whom were married, made a solemn vow the eve before battle. Should any of them "fail to come back," the others would see their wives were protected and cared for.

The three husbands were killed and when John came back to the States, he hunted up his comrades' wives, gathered them together on his large ranch, each in a little cottage of her own, and has helped the three widows to raise their children. There were six of the children, three girls and three boys, and he has been a real father to them all. He lived alone, but as he laughingly says, "No one would ever have known it," for those youngsters scampered through his rooms or perched on the arms of his chair all hours of the day. He is proud of "his children." One is a minister, one a lawyer and the others have married and settled down on farms near his own. He says, "I have been paid in a thousand ways and I am glad I have been able to fulfill my vow."

It was then moved by Ald. J. W. Laberge, and seconded by Ald. Arthur Barrette, "considering that by a letter addressed to the Municipal Commission of Quebec, dated July 13th, 1932, and of which a copy was transmitted to the council by Mr. Emile Morin, officer of the said commission, Ald. Gontran Hébert, alderman of the City of Salaberry of Valleyfield, accused the council of defaulting on funds in giving as reason that on the occasion of the contract passed in the court last June for furnishing electricity the city was induced to pay for its electricity from June 1st, for a period of ten years, also that it would receive free 125 power in virtue of an understanding with the Montreal Cottons Co. Ltd., intervening January 1st, 1931;

The council resolved that Ald. Gontran Hébert be requested to publicly retract his statement, mentioning that he made an error on this subject, and that the accusation against the council was without foundation.

Ald. Gontran Hébert declared that he had made an error in stating that he did not know of the contract passed with the Beauharnois Electric and made several excuses to the council.

Moved by Ald. Michel Chate, seconded by Ald. Napoleon Laplante, "that Ald. Charles Paré be named acting-Mayor for the following quarter."

SHE LENT A BOOK

I've just got back a book I lent to a friend. What an admirable (?) condition it was in. Can't people be careful with other people's property? It's so easy, too. When a friend lends you a book, she lends it to you not to your family and other friends.

Books aren't the only things lent to suffer so. I lent a friend an umbrella and received it all dusty and spotted three weeks later. All sorts of articles are lent in a spirit of friendliness. When someone lends you something they are really honoring you. They trust you to take good care of the object borrowed. It's very rude to return that object in a deplorable condition. You certainly wouldn't be very pleased if anything you lent someone was returned in a sorry state, then, follow the rule: "Do unto others."

Ans—Quite true. People who borrow books and then lend them to someone else without permission are really dishonest.

Cows Travel by Subway

Cows in a California dairy get to and from their work by subway. A traffic-crowded highway lay between the dairy buildings and the pastures, constantly endangering the cattle when they crossed it. In order to safeguard the animals a cement-lined tunnel was built under the road for the exclusive use of the cows, says Popular Science Monthly.

A Refreshing Drink

A refreshing, homely drink for warm days is one of the sour milk beverages, and since they have a definite food value, they are satisfying at times when solid food doesn't tempt one much.

Frequently fermented milks are recommended for persons on a diet, and indeed many who don't care particularly about sweet fresh milk find the sour beverages enjoyable. Remember that all the fermented milk concoctions must be served very cold. Otherwise they are unpalatable, to put it mildly.

Buttermilk is cheap and easy to get anywhere, but must be kept ice cold. With proper refrigeration buttermilk or sour milk will keep in good condition for several days. After that a slight bitterness is likely to develop.

Milk and Buttermilk
Milk that has turned thick and sour may be whipped into a first-rate imitation of buttermilk with an eggbeater. If buttermilk or sour milk is not sufficiently sour, add a few drops of lemon juice. It won't do any harm, and will pep up the flavor delightfully.

Kumis
One quart milk, 1 yeast cake, 1 tablespoon lukewarm water, dash of salt, 1 tablespoon sugar. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water, then add to lukewarm milk. Mix with sugar and a few grains of salt and pour into small bottles with tops fastened so firmly as to make the bottles airtight. Place bottles on their sides in a warm room for 24 hours, shaking them up every once in a while, then place in refrigerator. If kept cold this drink will be good for four or five days.

Try These With Blackberries Pickling Time

Blackberries, together with raspberries, blueberries, and gooseberries, are remarkable for the amount of free acid they contain. This causes their juices to be of immense value in refreshing the system and keeping the blood cool and free from toxins. Drinks, cordials, and preserves are therefore valuable.

Blackberry Cordial is easy to prepare. Pick the fruit on a dry day and wash it, after removing all stalks. Then put it in a large stone jar, placing the jar in turn in a saucepan of boiling water. Leave until the fruit inside the jar is easily mashed. Then strain the contents through a sieve. To every pint of juice add one pound of loaf sugar, six cloves, the juice of two lemons and one orange. Let the whole summer for half an hour, then strain and bottle for winter use. The cordial can be taken hot or cold, water being added as required.

A Blackberry Fool is a delightful sweet. Place half a pound of picked and cleaned blackberries in a saucepan with a tablespoonful of water and enough sugar to sweeten, letting them cook until they are tender enough to pass through a sieve. Then make a cream by beating up three eggs with a little sugar and adding half a pint of milk, letting the whole gradually thicken by standing in a basin in a saucepan of boiling water. When thick, beat in the blackberry pulp. Pour into glasses and allow to set, when it can be decorated with whipped cream and blanched almonds.

Blackberry Mince-meat offers a novel filling for tarts. Put two pounds of blackberries into a saucepan with the juice of two lemons and half a teaspoonful of water. Simmer until tender, then pass through a sieve. Peel, core, and cut up two large cooking apples and add the grated rind of one lemon, four ounces of stone raisins, two ounces of washed currants, the same of sultanas, candied peel, and blanched almonds; add one pound of Demerara sugar and half a teaspoonful of ground ginger, ground cloves, and ground cinnamon. Chop all well together, then add the blackberry pulp, half a pound of chopped suet, and a gill of brandy. Put in a jar and tie down. This is used in exactly the same way as mince-meat.

Smeared left on tiles by builders can be removed by rubbing with pumice stone, but a quicker method is to apply a weak solution of spirit of salt (hydrochloric acid). After diluting about a quarter of a pint of acid with three-quarters of a pint of water, apply sparingly to the tiles either with a stiff brush or cotton cloth. When the cement smears have gone, rinse thoroughly with warm water.

Child of Earlier Days Shielded From the Sun

George Washington no doubt would look with great astonishment at the system of raising children of this generation of Americans. He took a keen interest in the health and health-training of his stepchildren and step-grandchildren, and the sunbaths which are part of the daily regime of a well brought-up child of today, whether of the family of the laborer or the millionaire, would have caused the Father of His Country to blink his eyes, no doubt.

George Washington, who took a great interest in his little stepdaughter, ordered for "Miss Custis," six years old, from abroad, a supply of children's masks in order to preserve her complexion from the rays of the sun. Dolly Madison, wife of President Madison, as the little Quaker girl, Dolly Payne, had a faithful mother with enough of the world's vanity in her Quaker mind to sew a sunbonnet on the tiny girl's head every morning, put long gloves on her arms and hands and make her wear a mask to keep every ray of sunlight from her face. How the mothers of today, with their suntan ideas would be horrified, if asked to perform this daily beauty rite for their young ones.—(Washington Post.)

HANDS AS GERM CARRIERS

It is evident to any casual observer that few people have any real appreciation of the fact that their hands should be kept away from their faces. The hands, time and again each day, come into contact with many persons or articles, and as a result, become repeatedly contaminated with bacteria which, if introduced into the body through the nose or mouth, or into the broken skin, may cause some disease or infection.

For many years it has been taught that hands, before they are thoroughly washed before their owner eats, says the "Farm and Ranch Review." This teaching is based upon the dangers of carrying into the mouth, in food or drink, disease germs present on soiled hands. A person should no more think of touching his lips or his nose with unwashed hands than he would think of touching food before he had washed.

The unwashed hands should never be used to squeeze or pick some skin abrasion or blackhead. It is true that this is done hundreds of times with no ill results, but, occasionally, as a result of such carelessness, a serious infection, such as facial erysipelas, results. Any break in the skin issues, an invitation for lurking bacteria to enter. The skin should never be broken excepting under aseptic conditions, with clean hands and boiled instruments. In any case, the pinching or squeezing is almost always undesirable. Cleanliness of the soap-and-water variety for the face is the sound practical way to keep the skin healthy.

Our fingers and hands are so useful that we bring them into contact with innumerable things. We emphasize this because the danger that our hands may be to us depends upon this very point. To put our unwashed fingers to our faces, particularly to the mouth and nose, is practically to put these undesirable elements into our mouths. Fortunately, disease germs die quickly outside the human body, but, as the hands are generally moist and warm—two requisites for the life of disease germs—they may persist alive on the hands for some time. The bacteria which cause pimples, boils and other pus infections are more resistant than those which cause the ordinary communicable disease, and as they are widespread, there is a practical danger of the occurrence of such infections, because there are frequently minute abrasions on the skin or lips which allow the entrance of bacteria when these parts are touched by unwashed hands.

The Lost Art of Penmanship

Penmanship is a lost art. How often we hear this fact bemoaned in school and college. Our own children's note books make us cringe and we proudly tell them that at their age our writing was at least legible.

What is the reason? For one thing children do not have to write as much to-day as they did a generation ago. Thirty and forty years ago the school child was compelled to make long laborious copies and this gave him constant practice. Children used their hands and finally knowledge reached their heads. Now they use their heads and finally it reaches their hands. Today children are taught by the direct method. After the principle has been absorbed it is put down on paper to test his grasp of the idea. This lack of constant practice in writing may be the greatest factor in the general low standard of penmanship. What the result will be when radio and movie colleges come into vogue we fail to imagine.

Letter-writing used to be an art in itself. The educated class of the 18th and 19th centuries was the governing class. They were proud of their erudition and the art of fine letter-writing was a necessary social grace. Compare our clumsy attempts with the beautiful letters, now in book form, of a host of celebrities of the 19th century. Nowadays it is a real task to write a letter and only duty drives us to it. It is so much easier to telephone, telegraph, or dictate to a stenographer. Our modern means of communication eliminate the individual more and more. We sign our name from time to time and make rude notes of business transactions and only then does our pen leave the pocket.

It is a pity. The beautiful, regular well-formed writing of our fathers makes us envious. There is no zeal, however, for reform because we know how obsolete, in comparison, writing has become. We gnash our teeth but do nothing. Posterity will not collect our epistles, copper plate them, and cherish them to eventually become a financial asset at $500 per even. The context would not make it worth while.

Chateaugay Bowlers Won:
On Friday evening, July 29th, the Chateaugay Bowling Club entertained the Valleyfield Bowling Club who played for the O'Connor trophy. The score shows the closeness of the play and it proved to be one of the hardest games, both teams have indulged in for sometime, all the players being on their toes until the last bowl had been rolled.

Los Angeles Founded by Spaniards Back in 1781

It was into the hands of Don Felipe De Neve, who ruled as the Spanish governor of the province of California in 1781, that Carlos III, king of Spain, entrusted the duty of founding Los Angeles.

In order to establishing in California of the south a new settlement, it is related that Don Felipe came from the capital at Monterey with a military escort to the mission of San Gabriel in 1781.

The mission of San Gabriel was already prosperous and well established, having had its beginning ten years before.

Don Felipe and his escort spent several days at the mission and then, on the morning of September 4, set out upon a march which took them three leagues westward to that spot which is still the plaza of Los Angeles. Nothing was there that morning but the brown grass of the little valley and the browner hills. The plaza was laid out, a Te Deum was sung, a volley of musketry was fired, the spot was blessed by the padres, and the 12 emigrant families from Old Mexico, which were to constitute the original population and therefore the first families of the city, were established in what was to be their home. The new pueblo was called in euphonious Castilian Ciudad de Nuestra Señora la Reina de los Angeles—the City of Our Lady the Queen of the Angels.—John Steven McGroarty, in the Los Angeles Times.

Birthplace of Telephone

Among the many things for which Boston is famous is that it was the birthplace of the telephone. It was on the afternoon of June 2, 1875, that Prof. Alexander Graham Bell and his associate, Thomas A. Watson, working in two garret rooms over the electrical shop of Charles Williams, at 109 Court street, Boston, and there discovered the principle of the telephone. More than nine months later Prof. Bell received from the United States on March 7, 1876, a patent No. 174,465, and thus established the existence of the Bell telephone. This has often been called the most valuable patent to mankind ever issued.

Every Variety of Song in the Lives of Russians
In Russia music has always been closely connected with the lives of the people. From the time of birth through all the events of life until death claims them, they move to a musical accompaniment. The return of spring is celebrated by a sort of choral dance, termed the khorovod; marriage, being a most important time, brings forth many songs, such as "The Birchwood Spinner" ("Lootchins"), "Glorification," "The Matchmaker" ("Svat oushka"). There are boating songs, laboring songs, lullabies and dance songs. Most of the dance tunes are in the major mode, the slow tunes, and these are best liked in the minor. Cesar Cui, in his book "La Musique en Russie," divided the Russian composers into three groups: First, the old lyric school, Klinka Dargomizsky and Seroff; second, the New-Russians, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Mussorgsky, Borodin, and lastly Rubinstein and Tchaikowski in a class by themselves as being less distinctively national.—Washington Star.
