Art comes to Knowlton Theatre

Discretion is the better part of valour certainly," muses Donald Wilson, who plays Serge in Sunshine Theatre's upcoming production of Art. But as the conversation progresses between the three actors, who play three close friends in Art, it seems obvious no such definite answers to the conundrum of how to conduct ourselves in a friendship have presented themselves.

If discretion is laudable, then surely honesty is also a necessary part of any meaningful friendship. In truth, the best line to follow is probably somewhere down the middle, somewhere between honesty and discretion. Because, in truth, how we conduct ourselves in a friendship depends on any number of different factors.

Back and forth conversations of this sort have been going on for weeks between the actors in Art and director Sunil Mahtani.

"The rehearsals have been pretty intense," says Mahtani, who most recently directed Sunshine Theatre's production of Guys and Dolls. Mahtani says having a cast of only three for Art has allowed a lot more time during rehearsals for the actors to examine the personalities of their characters.

"I've been asking the actors to draw a lot on their own lives and experiences," he further explains.

In Art, three close friends find themselves on the brink of breaking up over a painting. Serge buys the painting for a ridiculous amount of money, Marc - played by Doug Hooper - can't stand the painting and tells Serge how he feels, and Yvan - played by Bob Hennessey - tries to reconcile the two warring friends but finds his neutral stance only adds to the general ill-will.

When Marc berates his friend Serge for his foolish purchase, he crosses the line known as discretion, but will forthright honesty prove to have been a better choice?

"One thing I find fascinating," explains Wilson, "is the extent to which in a really close relationship how honest we are to a friend who does something that upsets us. Do we tell them? Do we threaten the relationship?"

Though Wilson's character Serge is less introspective, Marc asks himself these sorts of questions during the play.

Hooper admires the strength of his character Marc, his ability to state his opinion and then answer only to himself.

Knowlton dairy farmer supplies simple recipes

By Mike King
SOUTHAM NEWS

Barb Smith and Diana Frizzle don't consider themselves gourmet chefs, but that hasn't stopped them from becoming 'field editors' of a popular American cooking magazine.

Smith, a Dorval home-educator, and Frizzle, a Knowlton dairy farmer, are the only Quebecers among 47 Canadian staffers of Taste of Home. "The magazine edited by a thousand country cooks!" as its cover says.

"Our field editors are a group of good home cooks who keep in touch and share their favourite recipes," managing editor Ann Kaiser said in a telephone interview from the magazine's offices in Greendale, Wis.

Taste of Home has 5 million North American subscribers, including 150,000 in Canada. The magazine features simple, inexpensive recipes – you're more likely to find tuna casserole than seared tuna on its pages. A recent issue included Meatballs With Cream Sauce, Super Sloppy Joes and Mom's Hearty Spaghetti.

"We want old family recipes, some adapted or modified, and practical home cooking with something you can make with what is already in your fridge or pantry," Kaiser explained.

"I have nine children, so I do a lot of cooking," Smith said. "I'm used to always feeding a crowd."

As if her family isn't enough, Smith also cooks for legions of others.

While her husband, David, nourishes souls as pastor of Fairview Alliance Church in Dollard des Ormeaux, she treats the parishioners with a barbecue at their home every summer.

As she wrote in a recent edition of Taste of Home: "To show appreciation for all the congregation does for us, we host a yearly hot dog party, barbecuing 20 dozen wieners for over 100 people."

"The buffet table is set up with buns, ketchup, mustard, relish and an item unique to Montrealers – coleslaw to put on the hot dogs," Smith added. "It's a simple condiment I make from 20 cups of shredded cabbage, three-quarters cup sugar, one tablespoon salt and a half-teaspoon of pepper."

For her part, Frizzle said being involved with such a widely read publication "is kind of fun."

The mother of three said she would be in the kitchen more, "but there's not much time because of the farm."

"The thing I really like are (the recipes that use) ordinary, everyday ingredients that you don't have to go somewhere special to find," Frizzle said.

She also appreciates the Clip and Keep section of the magazine with its file-size recipes, complete with photos.

"When we started Taste of Home in 1993, we wanted every state and Canadian province represented," Kaiser said.

The editors already had good contacts across Canada through sister publications, "but there was a gap in Quebec," she said.

Then Kaiser remembered doing an article on Frizzle's dairy farm in the late 1980s while editor of Farm Woman (now Country Woman) magazine.

"I asked her if she'd like to be on staff and she agreed."

Smith got involved when her sister-in-law, "who just loved my cooking, heard about this new magazine and submitted my name and they contacted me."

Popular dessert relished for its many varieties

By Eric Akis
SOUTHAM NEWS

Dessert lovers, please take a moment to thank the person who first decided to separate egg whites from their yolks and then beat them with sugar to a cloud-like dream.

The creation whipped to life was, of course, meringue. This versatile mixture over time has worked its way into some of the world's favourite desserts.

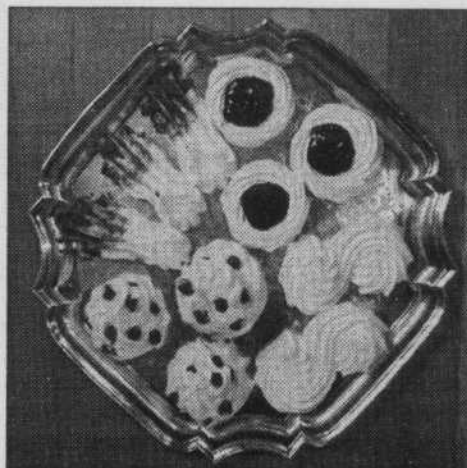

In a complementary role, meringue can be blended into other ingredients to help souffles rise, create chocolate mousse lighter than air, and make cake flexible enough to bend for jellyrolls.

But in a lead role, meringue seems to shine brightest. No matter what dish you favour most, many of the rules given for making meringue remain the same.

Here are some key points to consider:

- According to Regan Daly, author of the award-winning book In the Sweet Kitchen, for best results egg whites should be taken from eggs that are at least 3 to 4 days old. The coils of protein found in these older eggs will have relaxed slightly and will expand more easily when beaten, but still be strong and elastic. She notes that if you shop in a supermarket, the eggs you buy are likely at least a week old. But if you buy farm fresh eggs, try to use eggs of less than a week, but more than a few days old.

- It's of the utmost importance that you keep the whites away from any fat. Unfortunately, the yolks are full of fat and even a speck of them in the whites can significantly lower the beaten whites volume, or even prevent them from whipping up at all. To ensure yolk-free egg whites, I've seen many bakers crack their eggs into a bowl first, and then use their hands to gently lift out the yolks, allowing the whites to slip between their fingers. They believe the sharp edges found in the eggshell to eggshell method can more easily pierce the yolk.

- Be sure the bowl in which you place the egg whites and all the whisks, beaters and spatulas are spotlessly clean and grease-free. Any oil left on a utensil can prevent your egg whites from reaching the desired volume.

- Copper bowls are the preferred vessel to beat egg whites in their natural acidity strengthens the proteins in the whites, allowing them to reach greater volume. But stainless steel or glass bowls are cheaper and give acceptable results.

The Hero's Walk is a path in the right direction

Badami exposes inner lives of her characters

By Catherine Dean
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
LENNOXVILLE

It is hard to believe that The Hero's Walk is only Anita Rau Badami's second novel, but the same is true of Badami's enormously popular, finely crafted first book 'Tamarind Mem'.

This is the story of Sripathi Rao and his wife Nirmala who live in Toturpuram on the Bay of Bengal. Rao lives in the once-opulent family home with his extended family which includes his bitter mother Ammayya and his sister Putti.

Rao is the son of generations of successful men who has taken on a lowly job in an advertising firm going on 35 years. He underappreciates his own son, Arun, a principled activist. Sripathi has cut off his brilliant, beloved daughter Maya, who has studied and settled in Canada, for ending an arranged engagement and instead marrying a Canadian.

For nine years, Maya has continued to write and phone her mother Nirmala. When Maya and her husband Alan are killed in a car accident, their daughter Nandala is left an orphan with her only family in India.

This is a story of how life continues inch by inch even with the hard realizations that death brings. Only by looking at himself in his slow deliberate way and his relationships with his family does the head of this household come to terms with the sad waste that his own stubbornness has brought.

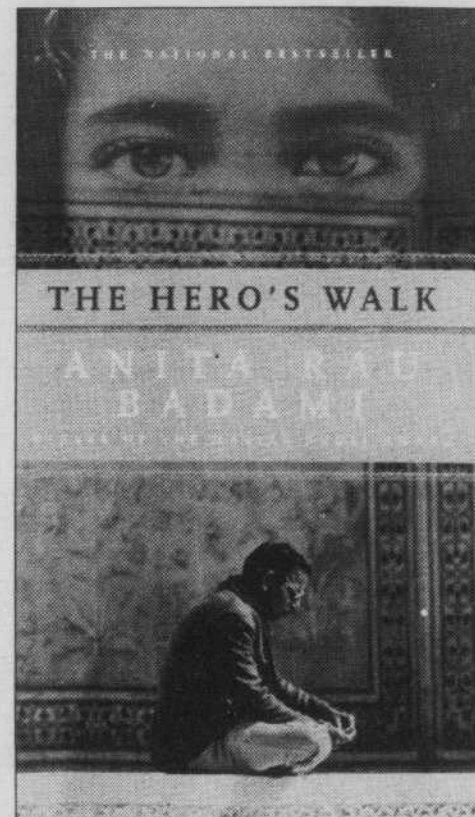

His mother Ammayya, perfectly drawn in her anger over the unfaithfulness of her dead husband, the failings of her son and her suspicions of those around her, stands as the reminder of the choking death-in-life that grudges and hate bring. Rao must learn to understand and love his own son and to care for his new granddaughter, a reminder of his daughter.

Badami does a wonderful job of exposing the inner lives of her characters. Ammayya is never over the top in her cruelty or anger, but she is not soft-pedalled. She never comes around and responds to the love around her, but one appreciates in some measure her cynical humour and her resilience.

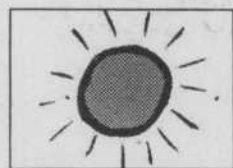

Rao has always been aware of his inability to show emotion and of his temper. Self-knowledge is a long way from action, and Sripathi's slow progress to becoming a better person is enormously satisfying.

Nirmala is well-drawn in her understanding and her anger with her husband and mother-in-law.

She takes on looking after her new granddaughter with pleasure. The prose is simple and direct, though each character is full of complexity. The story moves effortlessly as we try to understand this different country and the heartaches and triumphs of the Rao family. The story conveys the message that despite loss and tragedy, the living honour the dead by the very effort of their living.

'The Hero's Walk' is only Anita Rau Badami's second novel.

Sunshine production assesses true value of Art

ART:

Bob Hennessey plays Yvan in 'Art'.

In his own life, however, Hooper admits he's learned that it's sometimes better to keep a handle on things. Still, he agrees with Marc when it comes to assessing the value of modern art.

"I have a hard time relating to conceptual art... It seems pretentious," Hooper says.

The painting Serge buys is all white with white stripes on it, and Marc thinks his friend has bought it for all the wrong reasons—a relatively time-effective way of buying his way into a certain social circle so to speak.

Though Serge doesn't really explain why he bought the painting, he's quick to point out its merits: it's magnetism! It's resonance!

But the painting is of secondary importance in the play really. This work by French playwright Yazmina Raza is more an examination of the strength of relationships. As the conversations grow more heated, as the three characters move further and further away from a congenial centre, we are left wondering why they were ever friends in the first place.

But then all of us, when we bicker, wonder that exact same thing. And then five minutes later we turn around and call that exact same worthless friend and invite them over for tea?

Admittedly our friends often confuse and annoy us, but such is the stuff of life, and such is the stuff of good plays as well.

Art, though heavy at times, is mostly just funny.

"For Sunshine Theatre it's the most realistic play we've ever done. It's not light, but it's not heavy either. It's intense, there's some strong language, but it's a comedy," says Mahtani, adding that when he first saw the play in London the crowd was laughing the whole way through.

Mahtani says the one challenge of staging a play with a cast of three is the pressure put on the actors to carry the play.

"There's nothing else, no song and dance. The actors have a tremendous amount of lines and responsibility," he explains. To ensure they could cope, Mahtani handpicked the local actors instead of having auditions. "I knew exactly who I wanted," he laughed.

Wilson, the co-founder of Sunshine Theatre and an experienced actor, seemed the obvious choice as Serge. Hooper brings a wealth of experience to the role of Marc, but the opposite is true of Hennessey whose experience is in more musical, less dramatic roles. Mahtani picked Hennessey on the strength of his performances during previous Sunshine Theatre musicals and so far says he is adapting well to the role of Yvan.

"We have the same idiosyncrasies," Hooper says of his character. "I'm always losing things (the first scene with Yvan has him looking under the couch for a pen top) and my professional life has always been a failure," he adds laughing.

And Hooper's not the only one of us who will see something of himself in one or more of the characters of Art, according to Mahtani.

"When I saw the play in London, I thought it was an honest play. The dialogue seemed real," the director says. "If people are honest with themselves, they'll see a lot of themselves in this play."

Art opens June 7 at the Knowlton Pub Playhouse and runs until June 10. A preview performance will be held at 2 p.m. on the Thursday and the opening is at 8 p.m. The Friday and Saturday performances are at 8 p.m.

During the play, paintings and sculpture by artists studying under Louise Jamet at the Bishop's University Knowlton Centre will be on exhibition in the theatre and the lobby.

Tickets for the opening include an invitation to a reception following the performance at the Rose Window Gallery on Lakeside. The reception will serve as a chance to meet with artists and discuss the themes of the play.

Tickets are $12 (Groups of ten or more: $10). Thursday's preview performance is $5. For information, call: (450) 539-3604.

Sounds to soothe the savage beast

Canadian singer shines in Magdalene's Garden

COLETTE BARON-REID
Magdalene's Garden
(EMI Music Canada)

It was not long ago that Canadian-born signer Colette Baron-Reid found her salvation in the bottle instead of her music. Still, 15 years later, and on the heels of her debut album Magdalene's Garden, the singer/songwriter has found a successful medium to convey her passion for love, mercy and certainly, recovery. The Torontarian grew up surrounded by a Serbian folk music tradition that reveals itself in spectacular singles like 'Look Around' and 'Old Man'. Yet, with hints of Celtic and western pop in 'Fortunate Ones' and 'Fine Line', Baron-Reid's album adds a special type of garden pop/rock that fans of Canadian comrades, Sarah McLachlan and Alanis Morissette, will likely enjoy. With the demanding and powerful lyrics within this album's singles, Magdalene's Garden conveys a commanding message that Baron-Reid is here to stay.

TYRESE
2000 Watts
(BMG Music Canada)

Tyrese's debut album 2000 Watts is as necessary to today's rap industry as a Crocodile Dundee sequel is essential to the future of motion pictures. Missing the mark entirely, the interactive CD is made up solely of uninspiring, self-involved singles that are living proof of the depths to which an industry can sink. Anchored by the singles 'I Like Them Girls' and 'Off the Heezy', the album tries too hard to imitate the brash style of Dr. Dre and softer sounds of Joe. The only shining point is the experience that Snoop Dogg brings in 'Just a Baby Boy', a fat rollin' trance-induced rap single reminiscent of the music that helped lay the foundation of a popular rap market that Tyrese never reaches. Overall, 2000 Watts is an unelectrifying, shockless album that is better left unplugged.

—J.Z.

DAVID GRAY
Lost Songs '95-98
(RCA/BMG)

If you like well-crafted, calm songs with thoughtful lyrical content then you've likely heard 'Please Forgive Me' by David Gray performed on The Tonight Show and spotlighted on Musique Plus. However, don't expect to hear it on Gray's latest album Lost Song: '95-98, as the album features a multitude of the UK artist's other works. A couple of problems arise with Gray's CD: it is 36 minutes 58 seconds long, and there is not one astounding song, though this can be positive. With no filler material therein, the songs are all appealing if you fancy his traditional soft sounds of folk, pop and rock.

STABBING WESTWARD
Self-titled
(Koch Records)

In 1985, Christopher Hall and Walter Flakus co-founded Stabbing Westward, and although the group has frequently changed musicians, Jim Sellars continues to light it up as their bass player on their latest self-titled album. Their first track, 'So Far Away', is reminiscent of the style that has made Filter a household name. Yet after listening to other tracks, there is a distinct sound of their own. Although Stabbing Westward has a small fan base, the decisive sound of this band, combined with the number of Web sites available on the Internet and the potential in this CD, will no doubt attract the attention of the younger generation given time.

TOM WILSON
Planet Love

(Sony Music Entertainment)

I've just finished listening to Tom Wilson's first solo album for the second time and am still trying to figure out what planet he's on and where the love is on his latest CD. A release issued by the label tells you that this album is "charged with an emotion and energy that is more commonly found in live recordings and studio offerings." The truth, however, is that this CD is a bland, dull, monotone 42 minutes of boredom with nothing exciting enough to warrant even a moment's notice. Wilson is Canadian and it is tough to come down on one of your own, but the fact is that the three-year break Wilson recently took from the music scene has hurt him. Not even the three key songs on Planet Love — 'Satellite', 'Shine Your Star' or 'Planet Love' — are worth a listen.

—A.M.

PIGEON-HOLE
Versus Gravity

I wouldn't want to pigeonhole this new Montreal band, but it sounds to me like roots rock. There's absolutely no doubt the four young Montrealers in Pigeon-Hole can play and sing with the best of them — they recently won CHOM's best new band award — but they haven't forgotten their early days of playing small coffee shops. This band's on the way up, but last weekend, between playing two big shows in Toronto and the U.S., they managed a detour through Lennoxville, where they played at the Java joint for a few friends. Now, roots rock (or folk rock, or acoustic funk, or nice sounding music, or whatever you want to call it) hasn't ever really been my thing. I long ago gave it up for more complicated, testosterone-driven, darker urban bleakness. But after hearing Pigeon-Hole, I rue the day I became jaded, the day I gave up on voices that actually harmonize and sounds presented in all their resonant purity. I rue the day, I tell you!

Jamie baffled by apprehension to nudity

SOUTHAM

Jamie Lee Curtis doesn't believe on-screen nudity should be thought of as such a big deal by actresses and the media.

Fate of two-year old Thornton movie up in the air

By Jamie Portman
SOUTHAM NEWS

Jamie Lee Curtis can't understand why some actresses get uptight about on-screen nudity and sex scenes. To her it's no big deal.

She also can't understand why members of the media are so preoccupied with such scenes during interviews. For example, reporters have been lately asking her about a brief scene in The Tailor Of Panama in which she lies nude on the bed awaiting the arrival of husband Geoffrey Rush. Was she embarrassed? Was she uncomfortable? Was the scene an ordeal. Her response to journalists: get real!

"It was such a tiny, little inconsequential moment in the movie!" the 42-year-old actress protests.

"It's a moment of domestic intimacy which is written in the script: she beckons him to bed by pulling back the sheets. It's cool."

So why bother asking her if it embarrassed her?

"I'm a big girl," Curtis laughs.

"After all, I'm in bed in the dark, and we're going to have sex after he joins me in the bed. What was I going to be wearing? A truss? A nun's habit?"

Sure, she could have been in a negligee but then "we would have had the whole thing of getting out of it - and quite frankly nudity seemed a more natural way of doing it."

Director Billy Bob Thornton's western saga, All The Pretty Horses, didn't make much of a splash with critics or audiences when it was released before Christmas, and now it's being rushed with surprising speed into video.

But the big question these days has to do with the fate of another Thornton movie, Daddy And Them, which he shot nearly two years ago before he started work on All The Pretty Horses and hasn't been heard of since. Thornton was working from his own screenplay about a "dysfunctional southern family" and there's still no word as to when it will arrive in theatres.

He claimed more than a year ago to be pleased with Daddy And Them, which stars Andy Griffith as a grizzled southern patriarch.

"It's a very small movie, but I'm really proud of it," said Thornton.

"I think we did exactly what we set out to do. Now, we'll see if people like it. It's about people who don't know how to communicate, who don't know how to take care of each other."

Thornton has the reputation of being a gifted but eccentric filmmaker. Last year, he conceded that working for mainstream studios can be a real problem because they're suspicious of his methods. That was why he was happy to be making both these recent movies for Miramax "because they know how I do things. They're used to me whereas the big studios don't get it. They don't understand how I do it."

Nevertheless Miramax, which was badly burned by All The Pretty Horses, which it co-produced with Sony, seems nervous about Daddy And Them. Meanwhile, Thornton is happy to explain why his methods do make some Hollywood bigwigs nervous.

"It's very simple, he said.

"I do it without planning. I think that planning is probably the Number One enemy of making a movie, so we just go out there. We don't even have storyboards. I don't talk to the actors until they start doing the scene. In fact, I don't talk to them until we've done a few takes."

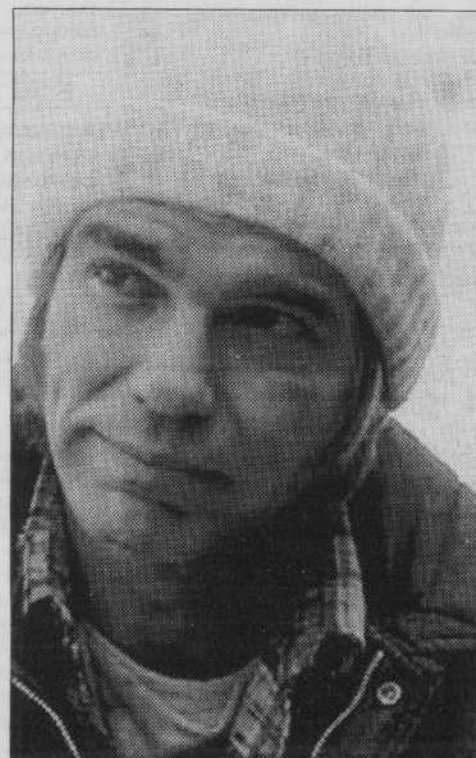

He also relies on an intensely loyal crew to help him man the barricades against studio interference when necessary. One of the things he likes about his crew members is that they function like a "dysfunctional family" as well. He first assembled his team for his award-winning Sling Blade, and it stayed with him both for Daddy And Them and All The Pretty Horses. "Basically my crew are the people nobody else will hire. Other people think they can't do it but actually they do it better."

Canada's Kiefer Sutherland's career has been sagging of late, but it may get a major boost with the release next year of the Second World War drama, To End All Wars.

Scottish actor Robert Carlyle costars in the film, which is based on the true story of a Scottish soldier captured by the Japanese and forced to build Southeast Asia's notorious "railway of death."

COURTESY 'A SIMPLE PLAN'

Billy Bob Thornton's movie 'Daddy and Them', shot two years ago, is still in limbo.

Impressive Impressionist series

TVDATA

Pierre Auguste Renoir and other giants of the Impressionist movement are remembered in a special two-part, four-hour edition of Biography, airing Sunday and Monday, June 3 and 4, on the A&E Network. The program traces the evolution of a school of painting considered scandalous for its day. Artists at its center gave priority to painting what they saw - their impressions - over creating lifelike reproductions. Among the other artists profiled are Edgar Degas, Claude Monet and Camille Pissarro.

Don Quixote Remake

TVDATA

The dancing of Rudolf Nureyev and Lucette Aldous is brought back to life in a newly restored version of Rudolf Nureyev's Don Quixote, airing Wednesday, June 6, on PBS' Great Performances (check local listings). Nureyev, who died in 1993, choreographed and co-directed this ambitious film adaptation of the classic Spanish novel in the 1970s. It received rave reviews, but most of the prints were lost over the years. This presentation is the result of five years of reassembling and remastering.
