The Air Heater is portable and can be carried around to wherever warmth is desired.

James R. Corey of Spencer, Mass., was in the Three Villages Tuesday for the first time in thirty-two years. Naturally he noticed many changes in them. Mr. Corey was born at Ayer's Cliff, and was called to his native country last week by the death of a brother, Samuel Corey, which occurred Thursday. The burial was on Saturday. Another brother, Mr. John Corey of Rockland, Mass., was also called to the old home on the same sad mission. More now than in war time are the agricultural departments of these two countries urging the need of a garden for every householder. To this extent at least they would have all become actual producers. Practical and helpful bulletins are being sent out with such headings as "Make your own garden," "Be sure the seed you use is the best," "Care for your garden yourself." The greater pleasure and benefit come through doing all the work yourself.

Dr. Trueman's retirement from the principalship of Stanstead College will cause general regret. In Canada and Newfoundland there are fourteen Methodist colleges, over which Principal Trueman will in future exercise a sort of general supervision for the purpose of keeping them up to a high standard of educational efficiency. His work will be that of an expert educationist, and for that position he is eminently fitted. Principal Trueman graduated from Mt. Allison University, Sackville, N.B., and after some years' teaching experience in his native province, came to Stanstead. His success shows what may be accomplished by a man who works. Principal Trueman spent most of his vacations at work. If he was not running a mowing machine or pitching hay, he was digging away at books down at Columbia University in New York. There, a few years ago, he was excused from writing on the exams because of his brilliant work, and there, last year he received the degree of Ph. D. But back of the universities, Mr. Trueman is the product of a New Brunswick farm, where he was brought up amidst wholesome surroundings and where he learned to work. Then, too, the outlook from the old homestead over the broad marshlands and green fields, leading up to the distant tree-crowned hills, naturally gave him a wider vision than that of the town-dweller whose limit may be a brick wall across the street. The choice of Principal Trueman's successor has wisely been left to himself.

The first of May has become the date of the unusual. We look forward wondering what new or radical freak of mind may be exploited. The spirit is upon the minister to do something unusual. This address has some ideas that you do not usually hear from the pulpit. It may give you good reasons for staying at home until May day comes again. It is unusual. Come.

PLAN INCREASED EGG PRODUCTION

Marked Attention Should Be Paid to Feeding, Housing, Culling and Breeding.

BREEDING FLOCK ESSENTIAL

Free Range Gives Ideal Conditions for Fowls—Close Confinement Reduces Vitality of Stock—Mash Hoppers Favored.

Poultry keepers interested in increasing the egg production of their flocks will pay marked attention to the methods of feeding, housing, culling and breeding. Probably the least progress on most farms has been made in the art of breeding poultry, says T. S. Townsley of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture, in Extension Circular 72.

To produce high layers only the best individual producers should be used as breeders. This suggests the necessity for having a special breeding flock. On farms where eggs for setting are saved from the entire flock, selection is usually based only on the size and shape of the eggs. With this system the breeder stands a good chance of setting many eggs from the very lowest producers. Even the poorest hens lay fairly well during the hatching season and their eggs are usually large and smooth. This method of mass selection of setting eggs is in the same class as the crib selection of seed corn and will bring just as poor results. The first step in improving the egg production is the establishment of a special breeding flock.

Free Range is Ideal.

No special fencing is necessary to handle the flock. Free range gives ideal conditions for breeding fowls. A pen is a great detriment to the efficiency of the breeding flock and is not at all needed on the farm. Close confinement reduces the vitality of the flock and results in poor hatches and weak chicks.

Where separate houses are available for the breeding flock and the commercial flock, free range can be given the birds in each group. If feed is kept constantly available in the mash hoppers in each house the birds will return to the proper house to lay so that the eggs can be kept separate without any attention to yards. Of course, males should be supplied only for the breeding flock, and by keeping these birds in the house until eight or nine o'clock in the morning, satisfactory mating will be insured. Some mating may occur on the range between the hens in the commercial flock and the males from the breeding flock, but this does no special harm. On farms where there is only one poultry house, a partition can be put in to keep the two flocks separate. If it seems undesirable to allow both flocks to range at the same time, alternate the range by letting the breeders run at large one day, and the commercial layers the next. During the cool weather of the breeding season this system works satisfactorily.

Number of Breeders.

The number of birds to include in the breeding flock should be determined by the number of high-class individuals available and by the number of eggs needed for hatching. If incubators are used, enough breeders should be kept to fill the machines without holding any eggs longer than two to twelve days. Usually a production of at least 50 per cent can be expected during the hatching season. Forty breeders should furnish enough eggs to fill a 200-egg machine within ten days. However, only hens of high producing ability should be used as breeders even if it is necessary to buy some eggs for hatching.

LARGER YIELDS OF ALFALFA

Practically Double the Amount of Clover Hay Obtained in Tests at Wisconsin Station.

Trials conducted on the Wisconsin experiment station farm at Madison show that alfalfa gives yields practically double that of clover hay and three times as much as timothy. An acre of alfalfa produced in a single season three times as much protein as an acre of clover and nine times as much as an acre of timothy.

WAY'S MILLS

LATE HENRY FRANCIS CLIFFORD

There passed from our midst on April 12th, 1920, a familiar figure in the person of Mr. Henry Francis Clifford. Born in Hatley, May 5, 1853, his age was therefore 66 years, 11 months and 5 days. He came with his parents Francis Clifford and Delia Way, to Barnston to live. He always followed his trade of carpenter and carriage maker. Many evidences of his work remain. Among the rest is the beautiful work on the inside of the Anglican Church of this place. It can be well said that all he ever did was well done, and his ambition was greater than many a younger man.

In 1872 he married Elvira Towle, adopted daughter of Rodney Towle, Boynton. Four children were born of this union, Bertha Gertrude, who died 17 years ago, Frank A., who now resides in Claremont, N.H., Nettie M. (Mrs. H. J. Adams) of Roxbury, Mass., and Eugene D. of Newport, Vt.

In 1880 H. F. Clifford married Rhoda Peters, and one child, Frederick J. was born of this marriage. In 1883 he married Martha Jane Carr, and three children were born to them, Bell (Mrs. F. C. Daniels) Way's Mills, Flossie (Mrs. N. G. Wheeler) of Newport, and Leona Clifford of Barton, Vt. In 1905 Mr. Clifford had the misfortune to lose his left arm in a planer in his shop. Nothing daunted, he kept on with his work, and in 1912 lost two fingers off his right hand in the shingle saw. This would have taken the courage of most men and tempted them to give up the fight, but on recovery he continued his work until another accident, when he fell and broke his wrist. He, however, stuck to his work, and with his wife's help, he stayed in the old place (which was a dear home to him) and went on with his work until the end. Four years ago he had a very severe illness and it was thought he would not survive, but he did, although his health was never good after that time. This fall his health began to fail, but he kept to his work until four weeks before his death. Everything was done for him that could be done; care and advice were not spared, but all in vain, for he was to go. He was tenderly cared for by all especially his wife, who has been a constant companion and has never failed him in any hour of need and who will greatly miss the husband who had been such a care on account of his many accidents.

The family had all been at home to be with him except Frank, who did not arrive until after he had passed away. The funeral was held in the Anglican Church, April 16, his pastor, Rev. I. N. Kerr, officiating and speaking comforting words from the 15th chapter of Cor. 35th verse. The hymns sung were "Lead Kindly Light," "Abide with Me," and "I Long to Be There," a favorite hymn of Mr. Clifford's. The floral tributes were very beautiful, and included a cross from Mrs. Clifford, a pillow with the word "Daddy," from the children, a broken circle from friends and neighbors, and a spray from Mr. and Mrs. B. Bowley of Newport.

The bearers were Mr. A. H. Dyson, Mr. W. A. Cramer and Mr. Claude Hovey, intimate friends and neighbors of a lifetime, also Mr. Fred Chesley, who has been a friend the past five years. The interment took place in the Burbank Cemetery where lay his first two wives, his father, mother and sister Isadore.

Why was our darling taken
Away from the cozy nest,
Why was that tree storm-shaken,
God knows best.
Our hearts are torn with sorrow,
A sadness that knows no rest,
And we dare not think of the morrow,
But God knows best.

Oh, why does the sunshine bright and glad
Crown all with its golden crest?
It seems to mock our hearts so sad,
But God knows best.
The purpose we can never learn
Until in the land of rest
We meet our darling for whom we yearn,
But God knows best.

WHAT SHALL WE

CALL OURSELVES?
All the English-speaking world is asking for help. It wants a name. The name is for the greatest thing in the world, and that thing is the English-speaking world—this race of ours itself. What name can we give ourselves?

We have no name for our race at present. Great Britain is part of it. The United States is a part. The British Dominions are part. What is wanted is a single word that everyone will feel is the very thing for expressing all English-speaking peoples as a great unity.

Some suggestions try to join Brit for Britannia with Am for America, as Brit-Am, but that is jerky; Ambria and Ambrithica put the daughter before the mother; and Anglia, suggesting Anglo-Saxons, is unsatisfactory because it is incomplete. The most popular word yet suggested is Unitania—a combination of United States and Britannia.—Selected.

Newport City voted $500 for band concerts this season, and $500 for a district nurse.

By the present census St. Albans shows an increase of 1201, the total population now being 7582.

The Bancroft Inn at Plainfield, one of the best small town hotels in the state, has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Libby of Barre.

A new bridge is to be built across the Connecticut river at Brattleboro, to take the place of the bridge recently carried away by high water.

Newport City now has a branch of the United Cigar Stores Co., the premises of Gasper Police's having been acquired for the purpose.

Whiskey is being shipped about in maple syrup cans, purporting to be syrup. They are properly labeled and the camouflage is very complete.

Sherman Nicholl of Dorset died the past week, being in his 101st year. Mr. Nicholl had been a very active and influential man in his town and county.

By the will of the late T. N. Vail, president of the Bell Telephone Co., all of his property at Lyndon goes to the Lyndon Institute for educational purposes.

A company of ten Mormons are working in the state to secure converts to their scheme. Evidently they are meeting with success in their efforts to secure recruits.

The Newport armory will be built on the C. N. Brady lot, and the city will pay all in excess of the $35,000 appropriated by the state. The city offices will be housed in the building.

Charles T. Stowell of Albany, N.Y., the bridge expert, is examining the steel bridges abandoned by the railroads in the state, to see if they can be used by the highway department in state work.

Springfield has secured the services of John B. Wright of Keene, N.H., as town manager at a salary of $3,600. Mr. Wright is a civil engineer by profession and will conduct the entire business of the town.

A campaign is now on in the state to enforce the law against the sale of cigarettes to minors. Several convictions have resulted. With the liquor traffic practically ended, there is still work for the reformers.

In the community church financial drive the churches in the village of West Charleston were first to go over the top in the county of Orleans. The allotment in this case was, $2,352, the amount raised, $3,550.80.

At the annual meeting of the retail shoe dealers association in Burlington recently the following officers were elected: President, George N. Fildes of Barre; vice-presidents, W. W. Hartwell of Northfield and J. H. Amey of St. Johnsbury; secretary, Lester Clough of Barre; treasurer, Frank J. Shea of Barre.

The annual census of the Congregational churches of the state, just completed by John M. Comstock of Chelsea, gives the total membership at 23,083 in 215 churches, showing a loss of 155 during 1919. The Sunday school membership totals, 17,819. Benevolent contributions have increased $10,896. Expenses for 1919 increased $30,180. The invested funds or endowment of all the churches in the state amounts to $668,378.

Candidate Babbitt appeared in a purported interview by a Burlington Free Press man, stating his position on the Valstead act. Mr. Babbitt takes the same position as all others who are inconvenienced by the act. The bona fide temperance, law-abiding citizen finds no fault with the act; the critics who harp on "personal liberty" and the "rights of citizenship" are as a rule the fellows who like a "nipper" now and then, and while they may not go to bed with their boots on, they may meet the open door on the edge trying to get in and at the same time stay out. Evidently this candidate for governor is sorry for the element who feel they are sorely oppressed by being deprived of—well, doing as they please about the liquor evil, regardless of the rights of the large majority. Often the humbly born of good stock, if he happens to strike a "pay streak," develop a "yellow streak" too; they seem to travel in pairs. A good bank balance should be an opportunity for good not a license to confuse right and a clean life. It is to be regretted that any man should come before the electorate of the state and insult the large majority of patriotic, law-abiding citizens by casting a sop to the small element who stand for the open saloon. There is no middle ground on this question.

MORE AND BETTER PASTURES

Problem in Coastal Plain Section of South Has Become Increasingly Important.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The pasture problem in the coastal plain section of the South must be solved to bring about agricultural utilization of these lands. The problem has become increasingly important since the high prices of feeds are more and more forcing attention to the only cheap feed—pasture. The bureau of plant industry has recently done a great deal of work along this line. The investigators have confirmed the bluegrass experiments, in which it was shown that heavy pasturing was much the best method both agronomically and economically. Unfortunately, say the specialists, facilities for experiments and demonstrations are wholly inadequate in attempting to work out a system of better handling of northern pastures. On the coastal plains of the South, unless the soils are much affected by drought, continue the experts, carpet grass supplemented with lespedeza makes excellent pasture. Golden crown grass is also excellent. Efforts are being made, with the aid of a new stripping machine, to place carpet grass seed on the market in adequate quantity. Several newly introduced grasses are promising as pasture possibilities.

A Fine Southern Pasture.

SAFEGUARDING SHEEP FLOCK

Large Number of Animals Lost Each Year From Some Preventable Disorder.

Thousands upon thousands of sheep die each year from a great variety of preventable causes. The killer dog is not the chief cause of loss. He may cause perhaps 1 per cent of the deaths due to accidental causes, but the most serious losses are attributable to ignorance and carelessness upon the part of the owner or his shepherd. Among the chief causes of loss may be mentioned lack of shelter for lambing ewes and their newborn lambs. A sudden snow or rain storm coming at lambing time often finds ewes and lambs exposed, and many deaths result.

PASTURAGE CUTS FEED BILLS

Cost of Pork Production Can Be Reduced by Providing Suitable Pasture for Hogs.

Farmers can reduce the cost of pork production next year by providing a suitable pasture for their hogs, says W. H. Peters of the animal husbandry division, University farm. Most pasture grasses are rich in protein. The call for high grain rations is therefore less urgent a matter to be taken into consideration in these days of falling prices for hogs and pigs. Alfalfa and brome grass are best for growing pigs, but no matter how good a pasture is some grain must be fed if the hogs are to thrive and make profitable gains.

BULL OF CHANGEABLE MOODS

Wise Plan to Play Safe at All Times by Keeping Animal Completely Under Control.

The bull is of very changeable moods, and one never can tell when that mood is going to change. The only wise plan is to take no chances with his moods—play safe at all times by keeping him wholly under control, or where he cannot reach you.

PASTURE FOR GROWING PIGS

Clover, Rye, Rape, Sorghum or Anything Green Is Good—Something Else Is Needed.

Plenty of good pasture is very important in growing pigs. Clover, grass, rye, rape, sorghum—in fact almost anything green that pigs will eat is good for them while growing, but pasture alone will not make big-boned, stocky pigs.

ASSERT POWER OVER DEATH

Two East Indians Make Extraordinary Claims, Naturally Somewhat Hard to Prove.

The dead can be brought to life. This remarkable claim has just been made by a woman doctor of Rangoon (Burma).

She claims to have prepared certain remedies, which are to be taken internally and applied externally for a week, at the end of which any dead person will revive! As may be expected, she keeps her remedies a secret and she will not disclose their ingredients to anybody, writes S. B. Banerjee of Calcutta.

She further claims that the dead person, when revived, will have a new mind and better features. The treatment to be completely successful must be continued for a month or two.

The Burmese doctor has created a sensation in the country. Some are scoffing at her, while others are urging the authorities to test her claims.

In this connection, I may state that some time ago a Hindu doctor made a similar claim and requested me to secure a dead body for him. Now, no Hindu or Mussulman will allow any experiment to be made on the dead body of a near and dear relative. Their religion forbids such experimenting. Soon after the doctor had asked my help, a distinguished Hindu knight, whom I knew, died. I was urged to sound his relatives. I did sound them, but my request was rejected. I approached certain doctors, but they all laughed at me and refused to help me.

The Hindu doctor, I regret to say, will not disclose his mode of treatment. He will not charge anything. He wants to be judged by his results. But who will care to help him?

NOT ALWAYS PACIFIC PEOPLE

Chinese Have Had Great Military Past, But Have Not Fostered the Fighting Spirit.

Writing of the romance of military insignia, Col. Robert E. Wylie doubtless surprised some of his readers in the National Geographic Magazine when he informed them that the first military medal was probably awarded by a Chinese emperor, some 1,900 years ago. The statement falls pat with an article by Mr. T. L. Leo, a Chinese student of the history of his own country, published in Asia magazine, in which Mr. Leo looks back to Chinese military practice, in the early centuries of the Christian era, and shows how the treatise on the "Art of War," written by the ancient Chinese military leader, Sun Wu, corresponded to the maxims of Frederick the Great, which were in turn expressed by von Hindenburg. The military past of China is nowadays very generally overlooked, and the explanation advanced by Mr. Leo is interesting at this period. The Chinese, he says, have never admitted the fighting spirit, but "on the contrary, have ever been condemning it, curbing it, and forcing it to lie dormant."

Sound and Light as Power.

Starting, steering and stopping a model auto by blowing an ordinary police whistle, an English scientist recently gave a striking demonstration of the possibilities of distant control of machinery. The performance is the subject of an illustrated article in the Popular Mechanics Magazine. The little electrically driven car, with its manikin passengers, started forward at the first blast of sound. Another note from the whistle turned it around and a third stopped it at its starting place. By blowing whistles of varying tones, a series of small electric lamps were selectively lighted. Control by light rays was illustrated by the ringing of a gong connected to light sensitive cells, when the illuminator of a hand lamp was thrown upon them, thereby reducing their electrical resistance.

J. P. Paid No Attention.

Jack Rowan is "some" boy. The neighbors all admit that. His original sayings and slang, repeated after hearing it from incautious neighbors, are well known in his part of Thirty-seventh street.

"Jack," said his mother one day, "go across the street and get J. P." —J. P. being his baby brother. Jack has reached the mature age of three and three-quarters, while J. P. has just got around the corner of two.

Presently Jack came back without J. P., and to his mother's questions as to why he did not bring his brother, said: "I talked with my mouth, and J. P. wouldn't pay any attention to me."—Indianapolis News.

Pass the Word On.

"Read this to the man who cannot read English," is the request of the Tappan Zee high school, Piermont, N. Y., at the beginning and close of the handbills calling attention to the night schools. The bill calls the attention of the alien adult to the proper place where he can learn what is meant by liberty; his rights, privileges and duties; about his government and how to secure his citizen papers. The school is open to both men and women.

New Use for Old Tires.

A Hutchinson motor tire dealer has half-soled his shoes with strips from a highly guaranteed tire in which he deals, figuring that if the tires are guaranteed good for 8,000 miles under a car weighing a ton the mileage under his own 140 pounds ought to be practically unlimited.—Kansas City Star.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RUSSIA'S TRIAL OF SOCIALISM

Ultimate Good to the World Looked for From the Practical Test Now Being Made in That Country.

Article XIV.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

The "red flag" remedy has been demanding a trial, a test. The demand has been growing. Before its advocates can be silenced they must be shown. Out of the test of socialism in Russia is bound to come good. Whether the theory is a practical one or not, putting it to the test will answer a question, satisfy a demand, and tend to quiet unrest.

The fair-minded investigator cannot deny that there was justification and reason back of the effort to try the remedy. That the world has been suffering from poverty cannot be denied. I have found few men, even among the conservative, responsible leaders of business and governments in Europe, who did not admit that conditions in the world before the war were not right; that some change in the order of things was inevitable; that the dissatisfied elements in society were coming together and that unless men were given better lives, they were determined to fight. The working man was deteriorating physically under the strain of brutal working conditions which exacted too many units of physical energy for the number of calories of food he was getting. The haemoglobin count, the red corpuscles, were disappearing from the blood of the working people. It was not a theory; one could see it in the faces and movements of the people. Medical men recognized the fact. A walk through the poorer district of any industrial city in Europe furnished plenty of evidence of this alarming condition. Men, women and children were resorting to false stimulants to keep up. Tea, coffee and alcohol were being used in increasing amounts.

Always on Verge of Want.

Men were stretching their arms and yawning. Squalor and filth furnished the homes. Many lived in abject poverty, many more lived on the border line of the garbage alley. Few were able to accumulate even the smallest surplus. They could not by scraping and denial get a week ahead of the game. It had become a hand-to-mouth existence, a weekly, monthly fight to meet the grocery bills, buy stockings, shoes, and the scant amount of clothes to cover their bodies. It was bread and coffee for breakfast, bread with jam and tea for dinner, tea and cheese for supper. Sausage sometimes took turns with cheese. Once a week, the Sunday repast, a great stew, a few vegetables and a bone. In the Latin countries it was the same, except that diluted cheap wine was substituted for tea. The great majority of men found themselves poorer and older at the end of the week than they were at its beginning. Over the workman's head was suspended night and day by a thin, weak thread, the dreaded sword of poverty. Men feared that the thread might break any minute. It was the thread by which they held the thing called a "job." What did they care about the rights of private property? They didn't have any private property. The socialists had willing listeners when they ranted about communism. It promised to give these people property, to give them a common ownership of everything. It wasn't hard to convince them that this was better than ownership of nothing.

The bolsheviks of Russia are entitled to the presumption of good faith in selecting the Marxian formula. It is only fair to them, and to the remedy, to examine the experiment with a mind free from prejudice. In admitting the good intentions of the bolsheviks I am not conceding that bolshevism is practicable, workable; that it has succeeded or can succeed. For the present I am trying to fairly give the whole story of the effort. It is as foolish to try to answer the bolshevik propaganda by calling the bolsheviks ugly names, as it would be stupid to accept bolshevism because its advocates are sincere.

Need for Calm Consideration.

Russia is the patient. If we are to intelligently judge the treatment called bolshevism, it is necessary to get a complete history of the patient and examine the conditions under which the experiment was tried. Any doctor who is a scientist would follow such a procedure in handling a medical case. If a doctor announced to the scientific world that he had a remedy for cancer, which at the present time is an incurable physical disease, just as poverty is a social one, the scientists would give a hearing to his theory, seek a fair test for it, keep their minds open, and judge the efficacy of the remedy by the results it produced. Communism, as a treatment, a cure for poverty, has never been put to the test on a scale and in circumstances which justify any positive judgment as to whether or not the plan is a practical one. As I have written, the Russian bolsheviks insist that if every one owns everything in common there can be no poverty. They base this statement on their faith that communism will increase production. They claim that competition shackles production. They say that the competitive system takes from the individual the inducement to work—that communism would give him an incentive to work; that it would be a stimulant; that under it men would work better and produce more. They add that the present system is bound to provoke an increasing number of strikes and that strikes stop production, cause waste, increase poverty. There is no doubt about the fact that there could be no poverty in the socialistic state if communism succeeded in stimulating men to work harder, thus greatly increasing production, because there would be more to eat, more to wear, more to use, and as the distribution would be controlled by the state, all of the people would receive an equal share of the great abundance, all would have enough. For the sake of fairness to them, I am conceding that the distribution program would be honestly and justly carried out, but a better distribution, a more equal and just division would mean nothing if the first, the fundamental promise of bolshevism—greater production—is not fulfilled. Any plan which decreases production causes a shortage of the things necessary to life. If the bolsheviks are wrong in their belief that communism will increase production, then bolshevism would make poverty general, universal, and instead of bolshevism curing the cancer on the body of civilization, it would make the entire body of civilization a cancer. If the claims of bolshevism are well founded, sound in common sense, capable of fulfillment, communism would be the greatest blessing ever conferred upon humanity. On the other hand, if the bolsheviks are wrong, and communism took from them the inducement to work, then notwithstanding the good intentions of the bolsheviks, their communism would be the greatest scourge the world has known. This is the simple issue in the case. If bolshevism is the good thing its advocates say it is, it will bring the millennium, and every human being should be in favor of it; but if it is not practical, and will not work out, then it is a danger, the red flag is its proper signal, and the world should avoid the danger signal as an engineer charged with the safety of human life would avoid running by a red light on the track ahead.

Examine Before Condemning.

Going back to the case of our friend, the doctor who honestly and sincerely believes he has a cure for cancer, let us consider what the scientific world would demand before offering a judgment as to the value of his proposed cure. First, they would free their minds of all prejudice. They would be reasonable and patient as they would be thorough in examining the proposed remedy from every possible angle. They would analyze the formula, examine it in the light of experience. Why shouldn't we follow the same sensible plan in considering bolshevism? Won't we get farther if we do? Hasn't such a course an advantage over quarreling about it? Why should some of us accept it without knowing what it is? Why should others condemn it without understanding? And why should both these groups get excited and irritated, call each other names, learn to hate, and add to the world's unrest?

I propose to follow the method of the scientist as nearly as I can in examining the patient, Russia, the world cancer, poverty, and the remedy—bolshevism.

1. A complete family history, so that we may know and understand the constitution of the patient.

2. The physical and mental condition of the patient at the time treatment was begun.

3. The formula—the remedy.

4. The theory of the cure.

5. The methods used in applying the remedy.

6. The history sheets showing the effect of the treatment upon the patient.

7. The condition of the patient after more than two years of bolshevism.

Monarchs Tire of Switzerland.

Former Emperor Charles of Austria and Empress Zita are tired of remaining in Switzerland, according to a telegram from Prague, and have applied to the Czechoslovak government for permission to reside in Prague. The request was refused for political reasons.

One reason given for the request is that owing to the low rate of exchange in Switzerland the former royal couple are receiving only one-tenth of their income from Vienna. Empress Zita is reported to have been forced to sell more of her jewels.

An American newspaper is understood to have offered the former emperor $500,000 for his reminiscences, but although financially embarrassed, he refused.

Child Victim of the War.

In Jugoslavia there are 500,000 fatherless children of whom 150,000 are absolutely destitute. Among them tuberculosis, eye and skin diseases are rife. Of these children, up to July, fewer than 2,000 had been provided for, largely because of the tremendous difficulties attending the work in an utterly disorganized community. The government at Belgrade and the great American and English relief organizations are now working in thorough harmony in their efforts to carry these children safely through the winter. They can only succeed if there is no slackening of effort on the part of the American and British publics.

Brandram's BB WHITE GENUINE LEAD

THEY used it for the stage-coach of olden days in England—we use it in Canada today. Compare it with any other white lead or white paint, and you will decide that your house—or anything you wish to have truly white and remain white—must be painted with this brand which has survived as the leading white lead for nearly two centuries.

Thinned with linseed oil and turpentine, it makes a perfect white paint. Combined with coloring matter, it makes the satisfactory tinted paint of any shade. It is the basis for that finest of ready-mixed paint, B-H "English" Paint.

Made in a modern Canadian factory, and by the same process as was employed for its manufacture by its inventor in England, it is today the only survivor of all the patented white lead processes of that earlier generation. It has survived because it results in a white lead of exceptional fineness, whiteness and durability.

ANOTHER OLD RESIDENT GONE

Benjamin Seguin, an old and well-known resident of Rock Island, died Friday morning. He had been in feeble health for a long time, still nothing occurred to indicate that the end was so near until a very short time before his death. Mr. Seguin was born in the parish of Ste. Madeleine de Riegaud, Nov. 8, 1834, and was therefore in his eighty-seventh year. Coming to Rock Island at the age of sixteen, he entered the employ of the late Erastus Lee and for thirty-eight years was a faithful and trusted employee at Lee Farm.

Mr. Seguin was twice married, first in 1850 to Therese Joyal, who died in 1852 and again in 1854 to Thersile Belouin. Mr. Seguin is survived by five sons and three daughters, Amédée, Joseph, George, Moise and Alphonse, Marceline (Mrs. A. F. Girard), Agnes and Mina (Mrs. Leo Gignac), also several grandchildren and other relatives. One grandson, Ralph, went to live with his grandfather upon the death of his mother, years ago, and was as much attached to the old home as any of the brothers and sisters.

The funeral took place at the R. C. Church Monday, the service being conducted by Rev. Father Rheame, assisted by Father Brouillette and Father Beaudry.

Mr. Seguin was a charter member of St. Joseph's Benevolent Society and the members of that order attended the funeral in a body.

The choir leader was Mr. George Boisvert, and the organist, Mrs. Antoinette Ricard, bearers, Messrs. Israel Belisle, John Seguin, L. D. Fregeau, John Bushnell, H. T. Ball and J. A. Suprenant.

BUNGALOW MAKES ECONOMICAL HOME

IS NOT EXPENSIVE TO BUILD

Five-Room Bungalow of Frame Cottage Type Makes Comfortable Home for the Family of Average Size.

By WM. A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Steadily increasing rentals are being demanded by the owners of houses of all kinds, and the person who has not a large income is finding it more difficult to find a comfortable home for himself and his family. While these families, perhaps, cannot afford to build an elaborate house, there are many designs that will provide a home that will suit their needs and their pocketbooks.

Such a home is shown in the accompanying illustration. Here is a house that is attractive in exterior appearance, contains five good-sized rooms, conveniently arranged, and can be built for a moderate sum. It is a one-story cottage, of the bungalow type, although not, strictly speaking, a bungalow. The lines of the exterior are good. The gables at either end and in the porch roof; the series of four windows in the living room; the fireplace chimney; the terrace with the brick floor and the porch, with its brick column supports, and the shingled walls all are features that combine to make this design attractive.

The dimensions of the house are 40 by 26 feet, with an 8-foot projection for the front porch. The house is of standard frame construction set on a brick foundation wall. The basement is fully excavated—that is, extends under the whole house, and provides ample room for the furnace, fuel storage and for rooms that can be devoted to storing food and the many other articles that usually find their way to the basement.

While the interior arrangement is somewhat out of the ordinary, a study of the floor plans will demonstrate that the rooms are placed so that the work can be done easily and that the occupants will find living in the house a comfort. The five rooms consist of living and dining rooms, kitchen and two bedrooms, besides the bathroom. The entrance is into a narrow hall that divides the living and dining contractor or the local building material dealer. These men are professional builders, with the knowledge gained by experience to guide them in advising the prospective home owner. With few exceptions, these men are perfectly willing to help the prospective home owner with the plans, and often are able to point out means of saving considerable in the cost of the home.

Home building this year will tax the capacity of the members of the building industry, and the manufacturers of building materials. The home builders who make their plans ahead of the time when actual operations in the colder sections of the country can begin, will be certain that their new homes will be erected during the year; those who wait, or many of them at least, will be disappointed, if the judgment of those familiar with building conditions is correct.

To those who have decided to build a home this year and to those who have just been "thinking" about it, the study of home building plans will be a pleasure. Books of plans, containing homes of all sizes and descriptions to be built of the many different kinds of materials, are available and can be secured from architects, contractors and building material dealers. These, prospective home builders will find, make mighty interesting reading during the long winter evenings, and will go far toward helping in the selection of a home building design.

TRULY TIMES HAVE CHANGED

Modern Traveler Can Hardly "Do" Europe on Bayard Taylor's Modest Expenditure.

In his "Views Afoot," published seventy-three years ago, Bayard Taylor tells of being sick with a fever in Goettingen. He asked the landlord of the inn to send for a physician, and the latter sent for a professor of the university. Taylor writes:

"He made a second call the next day, when, as he was retiring, I inquired the amount of his fee. He begged to be excused, and politely bowed himself out. I asked the meaning of this of Herr Wilhelm, who said it was customary for travelers to leave what they chose for the physician, as there was no regular fee. He added, moreover, that twenty groschen, or

REBUILD OLD LAND

British Are Injecting Life Into Ancient Egypt.

Occupation Has Resulted in Substantial Improvement in the General Welfare of the Country—Standards of Living Raised.

The British have been in actual occupation of Egypt for thirty-seven years (although Egypt was nominally a province of Turkey up to the war) and most certainly have effected substantial improvements for the general welfare of the country. A measure of self-government for towns and cities has been realized, which is really constructive. Town awakening is contagious. When in some hoary, blinking, bleached and odoriferous old town a few individuals, aroused more or less, succeed in shaking each other up sufficiently to start a town council, and impose a tax of perhaps $20,000 a year, spending it at first on street cleaning and a few lamps, then on some gaffers (policemen) and perhaps a water tower, the adjacent towns begin casting envious eyes in the direction of the ambitious one.

Irrigation has been a special concern of the British and they have constructed the great dam at Assuan, costing over $21,000,000. Railways also have been considerably extended. Manufacturing has made small headway, but the country is essentially agricultural in character. Cotton industries may some day develop on the foundation of the excellent quality of the Egyptian cotton. Industries are showing a much greater degree of growth than in the past, such as sugar refining, paper-making, boot-making, stone work, ceramic manufacture, glass-making and chemical fertilizers. With the increasing prosperity of the country at large the towns and cities must expand and be largely rebuilt. This will lead to a development of the artisan class, as well as of the commercial and professional classes, so that the consequent demand for labor must enlist the fellahs for city pursuits. This means the higher cost of agricultural labor and a consequent raising of the standards of the fellah, both as to his methods of work and his living standards. Before the war farm labor commanded about 15 cents a day, but during the war it rose somewhat, due largely to the formation of the Egyptian labor corps for military service in Sinai and Palestine. The labor corps has been kept at a strength of about 120,000 men. Altogether something like 1,500,000 men have been relayed to this service, which is still operating most effectively.—Jackson Fleming in Asia Magazine.

On Changing One's Mind.

If you brag that, after you have made up your mind you never change it, you boast that you are standing still. Things are happening with a rush in the world these days. Forces long invisible are becoming visible. Institutions are being shaken. We have seen, for example, the fall of the monarchistic idea after centuries of unchallenged power.

If you judge people by first impressions, and hang with bulldog stubbornness to your judgments, you are certain to make mistakes. They thought Lincoln wasn't brilliant enough to be president because he was ungainly of figure and unpolished of manner.

If you judge ideas by first impressions, you convict yourself of having an idea-proof brain.

Welcome the new idea, whoever presents it to you. Check it up with your old ideas and with your experience and knowledge.

Royal Visitors to America.

A future king of England was the first royal visitor from Europe to land in the United States. He was Prince William Henry, afterward King William IV, who arrived in New York in 1782, a few months before the British troops left that city, the Detroit News recalls. The country, while it did not show much enthusiasm in welcoming the heir to the throne, did endeavor to prolong his stay here. In fact, tradition asserts that soldiers of the American army secretly entered New York, but were unable to find the proper opportunity to kidnap the prince.

Sixteen years after the visit of Prince William Henry, another Englishman, the duke of Kent, fourth son of George III, and father of Queen Victoria, came to the United States on a naval trip, but there is no record of an official reception.

Short and Simple Will.

By the will of Mrs. Annie Davidson of Newburgh, N. Y., recently admitted to probate at Goshen, she bequeaths 5 cents to each of her several grandchildren and the remainder of her small estate to her children. The will is written on a sheet of notepaper, the reverse side of which contains this warning: "If any one makes any trouble they will get nothing."

Soldiers' Heads Growing.

Some cynical stay-at-homes have complained that the returned soldiers have "got the big head," but the London hatters did it literally true. The sizes most in demand before the war were 6½ and 6¾, but now they sell more hats of 7 and 7¼.—Vocal Summary.

LADEN WITH SPOILS OF WAR

Chinaman Who Worked With Allied Forces in France a Wonderful Sight When He Returns.

Pick and spade heroes of the Chinese republic, who soldiered so hard in France for an allied victory, are returning to the homeland with the choice pickings of the salvage piles of Europe on their backs. The Home Sector gives this picture of the returning coolie sports: "There are two obvious signs which make it plain that great things are stirring in these hitherto unstirred parts. One of them literally smites the eye as soon as the returned warrior steps down the gangplank of the coolie transport at Tsingtau or Shanghai. Dizzily arrayed in the sartorial pickings of all the earth, they are a fearsome wonder to behold. American overseas caps and Scottish kilts, French shoes, swagger sticks, a chasseur hat set rakishly on the ear and a bird cage in hand in the manner of the native teahouse, sometimes even a Sam Brown belt—it is a wild cubist mélange of the costumery and appurtenances of all the world and all times.

"The little children run before them in terror, the aged resign themselves to the coming of the long-forboded evil spirits wreaking vengeance for the joss stick left to go out before the village god."

WHY SIGN BEFORE YOU READ?

Too Many Seem Pleased to Affix Their Signatures to Anything Put Before Them.

Judge Albion T. Wright said at a lawyers' banquet in Cincinnati: "Sign here, please." Gentlemen, it's astonishing how these three simple words hypnotize thousands of people, causing them to affix their signatures to contracts and agreements that they will repent all their lives.

"I signed the paper without reading it," a witness said to me one day. "Mr. Blank told me what its contents were and I, naturally, thought that I could trust him."

"Yes," said I, "but you should have remembered that when a person asks you to sign something he, for his part, doesn't trust your word—he insists on having it in black and white. Well, then, why should you take his word when he won't take yours?"

What the Sun Gives Us.

The cost of light per ounce has recently been worked out by Dr. Charles Davidson of Greenwich observatory, says London Tit-Bits. It takes an appalling amount of light to weigh an ounce, he says, and the cost, as supplied by gas and electric light companies, works out at something like $10,000,000.

The sun showers down on us 160 tons of this valuable stuff every day, says the doctor, yet we often neglect this free gift and prefer to pay $10,000,000 an ounce for a very much inferior quality.

If the sun charged us for his magnificent light at the same rate as the gas and electric light companies, we should have to pay $37,344,000,000,000 a day, or about 21,000 million pounds a year; but the sun does not charge—he gives it to us all without money and without price.

Making Study of Genetics.

In order to learn more about inheritance in cattle and other animals, information is wanted by L. J. Cole, of the genetics department of the Wisconsin college of agriculture, about the similarity of the duplicate parts of double monsters, such as double-headed calves, or calves with one head and two bodies. This will help in a study of twinning and other related phenomena.

This information can best be obtained, says Mr. Cole, from specimens with white markings, where a comparison can be made of the extent and shape of the two parts. These freaks are often mounted or preserved and the genetics department would appreciate information as to where photographs or sketches can be obtained. This material will help toward an understanding of some problems in inheritance in cattle and other animals.

Put Them in Trenches.

"The trouble encountered in holding the big British dirigible at her moorings," said Forest Hillers at the office, "gave me an idea which I think I will pass on to the war department. If a trench had been dug at Mineola, say 1,000 feet long and as wide and deep as the balloon, she could have been anchored in it, shielded from the wind, and perfectly safe." "But," somebody asked, "how would they have gone about it to get the R-34 down in the hole?" "Oh," replied Hillers, "that would have been up to the officers of the flying field."—Newark News.

Seeing Life in the Army.

An English soldier who had enlisted in London for two years' service mournfully described his duty as being "to ride a funeral par." Further explanations showed that his time was spent in driving the gun carriage horses at military funerals in London—soldiers, ex-soldiers, veterans, hospital cases, and so on. And he sadly added that the advertisements said, "Join the army and see the world. It's a man's life!"

rooms, which are both front rooms and corner rooms. The living room is 18 by 12 feet 6 inches. At the end, in the outer wall is the fireplace. The dining room is of the same depth, but 16 instead of 18 feet wide. Double windows, one set looking onto the porch and the other in the end wall make this a cheerful, sunny room. Back of the dining room is the kitchen, 8 feet 9 inches, by 10 feet, with a good-sized pantry built into the outer wall and extending parallel with the back porch.

The two bedrooms are of equal size, 10 feet 6 inches by 12 feet, and are at either end of a short hall, which is entered through the living room. Between the bedrooms is the bathroom, which, it will be noted, is convenient to both sleeping rooms and the living room as well. Closet space is provided in connection with both bedrooms and in the entrance hall.

Taken from both the standpoint of exterior convenience and comfort, this design is an unusually good one for the home builder of limited means, who must provide for a family of average size—three or four persons.

Building a home to suit one's own needs and to conform to individual ideas of what a home should be in appearance and arrangement is the most satisfactory way of acquiring a more or less permanent place to live. By building, the owner can select the design, and decide on what materials shall be used. When a house is purchased already built, there usually is a feature or two that do not quite fit in with the purchaser's ideas of room arrangement, and often the remodeling brings the cost of the house up to the amount it would have required to build the house.

But, it should be remembered, not all the ideas of the inexperienced home builder are practical. That is why it always is expedient to consult an architect, or an experienced Bear Won the Honey.

James Cunningham and Bruin ran a race the other day for a tree of honey, says a Johnsonburg (Pa.) dispatch.

Monsieur Bruin won. Cunningham found the honey tree and was gathering in the harvest when Captain Bruin sidled up to him. Cunningham noted the wicked eye of the bear and beat it.

He returned with a party of hunters to find Major Bruin gone. Cunningham then gathered in his honey and left the precincts of the sacred tree.

Toward evening he made a bed of leaves and lay down to sleep. At midnight he heard a snort that sounded strangely like the one of Colonel Bruin. He awakened to see two fiery eyes staring at him.

He went away from there. Next day he returned to find that his honey had disappeared. So had General Bruin.

Paying Toll for Neglect

Needless exposure to damp and cold frequently result in a derangement of the Kidneys and Bladder.

When these important organs fail to do their duty, various evils arise, such as rheumatism, swollen hands and ankles, stiff joints, lumbago, sciatic neuralgia, stone in the bladder or gravel, excruciating pains in the back and sides, constant headaches, dizziness, specks floating before the eyes, uneasiness of mind without reason, and general debility.

These are signs of serious kidney and bladder trouble, which require immediate attention. The most dependable remedy is found in Gin Pills. They often prevent the operations which constant neglect may render necessary. They quickly and safely relieve congested kidneys, passing stone and gravel, healing and soothing inflamed organs and restoring them to normal. Thousands of letters from people who have been relieved are continually coming to us. Their writers often beg us to spread the good news to other sufferers that Gin Pills certainly and surely will bring the help they need. Send for free sample, or go direct to your druggist or dealer, 50c a box. Money refunded if relief not given.

ROAD BUILDING

RAILROADS AND GOOD ROADS
Solution of Future Transportation Problems Seen in Hard-Surfaced Highways of Country.

Any student of the railroad situation must reach the conclusion that railroad operation in America has reached the height of its efficiency and hereafter it will remain stationary or decrease.

It is always possible that some revolutionary process will be discovered, but the long years without marked improvement of process indicate that railroad mechanics have about reached their maximum while bureaucratic and political control now assured will be as deadening to all mechanical improvement as they will be to effective management.

Progress in transportation, therefore, must be in other lines. Navigation has been heralded for some years as a solution, but in spite of heavy government assistance, water traffic, even on the Great Lakes, has steadily declined. The remedy does not appear to rest there, at least for the present.

There remain the highroads. In their salvation lies, says Chicago Tribune. The war, which proved the utter incapacity of the French government-owned railways to rise to the emergency, established the motor truck in its full majesty. What the French railroads could not do the motor trucks on fine French highways did. What the highroads are in France they must be made in America.

Fortunately, we have an excellent little beginning in the middle West. The principle of hard roads has been accepted and timid beginnings have been made in a number of states, chief among them Illinois. Let us understand, and immediately, that what has been done and what has been legislated for is merely the thin entering wedge of our highroad program. The narrow ribbons of concrete roads laid out by legislation will no more carry the forthcoming auto truck traffic than the old narrow gauge single track railroads were able to carry the railroad traffic which they caused to develop.

It is fortunate that we have many agencies building roads. The nation will do something for the most backward. The states, however, should treble or quadruple all national allowances. In the beginning, and until the principles of highroad traffic are generally understood, it will probably be necessary for counties and even cities to provide the wide thoroughfares necessary at the points where traffic centers.

To illustrate, the 18-foot roads which are perhaps adequate a hundred miles in the country are even now more congested ten miles out from the city limits than are our most crowded city streets.

BILLION DOLLARS FOR ROADS

Immense Amount to Be Spent in 1920 for Construction and Proper Maintenance.

More than $1,000,000,000 will be spent this year in construction and maintenance of roads and streets throughout the United States, F. L. Powers, secretary of the American Road Builders' association, estimated.

HINDER SOCIAL INTERCOURSE

Suspension of Travel Caused by Poor Condition of Highways in Rural Communities.

"Bad roads are often a handicap to social intercourse. Under the worst road conditions all travel may be completely suspended. It is not difficult to see such conditions, but what is more difficult is to comprehend the general improved social atmosphere which adequately improved road conditions cause in rural communities.

DIDN'T FEAZE THE PROFESSOR

Snake Expert Got Out of Rather Tight Fix in a Somewhat Clever Manner.

There is a certain professor of natural history who delights in propounding catch questions to his class, and one young fellow, who had been caught by one, determined to get even. At the next class, therefore, he said gravely:

"Professor, you have made a special study of snakes, have you not?"

"Yes, I think I am fairly well informed as to that branch," the professor responded.

"Then, professor, you can undoubtedly inform me on a point which, while doubtless simple, puzzles me. May I ask you a question?"

The professor began to feel uneasy, but there was nothing to reply but "yes."

"Then, sir, what I desire to know is, where does a snake's tail begin?" the young fellow asked gravely.

The professor was silent for a moment, and a titter began to run over the room, which increased to a roar as the professor replied calmly:

"That is quite simple; it begins at the end of the snake which is not the head."

WILL TUNNEL UNDER STRAIT

Japanese Authorities Said to Have Decided Upon Engineering Feat of Magnitude.

Several months ago announcement was made that the imperial government railways of Japan intended to build a tunnel under the Shimonoseki strait. This strait separates the main island of the Japanese group, Honshu, from the smaller island of Kiushu to the south. It is now crossed by a car ferry, which is rapidly becoming insufficient to meet the demands that are made upon it. Two years are to be spent in studying the geological formation of the sea bed in the strait and in drafting of the general plan of work in preparation for the actual undertaking of tunneling, so that the real work will not commence until 1921. Engineers and workmen will be sent to America and Europe to make a study of what has been achieved in these countries in the way of tunnel engineering. The line is to be seven miles long, one mile of which will be entirely under the sea. The approximate cost of the undertaking will be about $10,000,000 and the work is expected to be completed in 1928.—Scientific American.

What's in a Number?

An aero squadron, preparatory to the start for the front, was being initiated again into the mysteries of close-order drill. While most of the men knew every nut, bolt and square inch of canvas on the planes, they were more than hazy about the forgotten details of their apprenticeship days in the army.

"Squads right!" bellowed the commanding officer.

The majority of the squadron managed to get there somehow or other, but No. 3, rear rank, fourth squad, was totally lost. He maneuvered aimlessly about the field for a time, trying to find his place, and finally walked into the arms of the captain.

"Here, you, where do you belong? What's your number?"

The buck snapped out of his trance. "No. 284526, sir," he announced.—The Home Sector.

Small Girl's Criticism.

Little five-year-old Lois had been told not to be in such a hurry when she put away her playthings, to take a little more care and pack them straight. One evening her grandma was taking her home after dark. As they were walking along the street lights were turned on. She looked up and asked: "Grandma, who turned all of those lights on at once?" On being told a man at the electric light plant turned them on, she said: "Well, then, who turns on all the lights in the sky?" Grandma told her God did that. Noticing that the new moon was tilted at a different angle from what she had noticed before, she said rather disgustedly: "Well, I wish God would take just a little more time when he turns on the lights and turn that moon on straight while he is about it."

This Half-Dollar Rare.

Ever since the news that a silver half-dollar of 1853 brought $2,500 was published throughout the country a few years ago, there has been a greater misconception as to this coin than any other ever struck by the United States mints. This arises from the fact that there are two kinds of half-dollars of 1853. The rare variety has no arrows at the dates and there is no sunburst on its reverse.

Only two specimens of this coin are known to be in existence. Half dollars of 1853 with arrows at date and sunbursts on the reverses are very numerous, however, and they have frequently dashed the hopes of holders who were unfamiliar with the distinction between the two varieties of the coin.

A Pessimist's Observation.

"We have no army of the unemployed," "I don't know," rejoined Mr. Growcher. "After watching a few of the helpers who have come along in connection with various kinds of work, I have concluded that we have a large number in a state of unemployment. The difference is that they get paid for it."

PARIS TURNS TO OLD-TIME IDEAS

Flounces and Flares Are Featured in Spring and Summer Models.

TAFETTA STILL HOLDS SWAY

Material Has Been Softened Until It Has Become Almost Like Satin—Suits Have Hems of Lace.

French dressmakers are turning their attention to old-fashioned materials as well as to old-time designs. This is evinced, notes a Paris fashion writer, in the showing of spring and summer models in Paris. Never before has taffeta, a very old-fashioned material, enjoyed such a long and pronounced vogue.

Fabric makers are improving taffeta. The only real objection to it in times gone by was that its stiffness made difficult the task of evolving graceful models. Now taffeta is being made thin and soft like satin, some of it having a highly glazed surface. Then it is being embroidered in various ways. Especially interesting among the new taffetas is one that has a coin dot embroidered in bright colors.

Paris is adopting these new taffetas, and a great many mid-season models are being made of this fabric. A frock developed from a quality known as diamantine in a soft gray is embroidered in raffia strands that are not dyed but treated by a process of glycerin finish which makes them as pliable as silk.

Fur Is Used at Random.

To make these taffeta dresses more becoming the Paris dressmakers often line the collar and cuffs with a soft fur, such as petit gris. The fact that fur is becoming more expensive every day does not deter the French couturier from making what might seem to the casual observer unnecessary and unseasonable use of this precious trimming.

Madeleine et Madeleine have made a taffeta dress that takes somewhat the form of a draped polonaise, though frankly cut in two pieces. The waistline is low and loose-fitting and the draped skirt is joined to it under a group of minute tucks which extend across the center of the back and front only. A similar group of tucks gives fullness across the bust line; these tucks stop short of the armhole and lose themselves in a sort of drooping blouse fullness.

The bodice is finished without sleeves, the armhole being surrounded by tiny points, or dents, embroidered in copper color silk. There is, however, an accompanying guimpe which carries short balloon sleeves, also tucked. The skirt of the polonaise has the disappearing tucks and the scalloped embroidered edge. It forms a jabot drapery at the sides and is hung over an extremely narrow underskirt. The bodice finishes with a straight, round neck, but there is an extra collar ruff which stands very stiff and is centered by a band of copper colored embroidery which falls at the back in two "follow-me-lads" ends.

Dress Marks Back to the Thirties. Another polonaise dress developed in cashmere serge of fine quality and trimmed with cerise satin cire is embroidered in gold and copper threads and dyed raffia strands. The waistline is low, the front fastening decidedly at one side. The embroidered revers form a round yoke at the back, which, descending over the tops of the shoulders, gives a sort of 1830 back. This model is very well thought of by mid-season buyers.

Every Frenchwoman who makes any pretense at all to a smart wardrobe includes among her dresses one of black satin regardless of what other materials may be in the limelight of fashion. Mme. Jenny has made some especially beautiful frocks of black satin for her customers to wear at the resorts, such as Nice and Monte Carlo. For these models she favors the flounced skirt. In fact, this may be said to be the most pronounced feature of her satin dresses.

These deep flounces make the entire skirt. Instead of having a hem on the bottom of the flounce, a facing of black velvet to about the depth of a hem is used. The idea of the flounced skirt comes from the French stage. Many of these stage frocks, which are having so pronounced an influence on all fashions, were designed by this great dressmaker. Gray, too, is a favorite color for satin frocks.

Three-Piece Suit, Hem of Lace.

Mme. Jenny is not the only designer who does unusual things to hems. Bulloz has introduced the lace hem. He used it with good effect on a black suit, which is accompanied by a long accordion plaited cape. Both the cape and skirt have this remarkable hem, which is formed by inserting scalloped lace, the irregular side of the lace going toward the top of the garment. It is a three-piece suit, the third piece being a blouse of white broadcloth silk. It is, of course, a typical formal afternoon costume.

It is interesting to note that these three-piece costumes are even more pronounced for spring than they were for autumn. Women delight in three-piece affairs as offering a great advantage over the old-time suit consisting of a skirt and coat only, which had to be completed by a blouse picked up at random and which did not always make a good-looking dress when the coat was removed. Among the practical suits carrying out this idea are those consisting of a simple dress and a somewhat long coat rather on the order of a redingote. These are not always made of cloth; silk features prominently in these new costumes for spring.

Evening dresses are not quite as prominent in the new showings of clothes as they were in those of last season. While the elaborate evening dress is not in such general use as the short skirted dancing frock, the Paris dressmaker feels the necessity of including in her collection very dressy and extreme models developed in handsome brocades.

Hats From Paris.

Paris is experiencing a veritable craze for embroidered hats, which may be made of almost any fabric, with the embroidery of raffia, artificial silk or metal threads. It is very smart to have an embroidered purse exactly matching the hat. The raffia embroidery is effectively used on the underbrim of hats as a means of introducing a becoming bit of color as well as an idea that is entirely new.

The latest novelty is to use cellophane as the foundation for the embroidery. This highly glazed composition has taken Paris by storm. As a background for embroidery, the plain tissue is interesting, but without ornamentation it is too much like patent leather or oilcloth to be becoming.

TO WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

This Woman's Letter Tells You How To Pass The Crisis Safely.

Lascelles, P.Q.—"During the Change of Life I felt so weak and run down I could hardly do my work. The perspiration would pour over my face so that I couldn't see what I was doing. We live on a farm, so there is lots to do, but many who felt as I did would have been in bed. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did me a world of good. I tried other remedies but I put Vegetable Compound ahead of them all, and I tell every one I know how much good it has done me."—Mrs. DUNCAN BROWN, Lascelles, Prov. Quebec.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ear, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness should be heeded by middle-aged women, and let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carry them safely through this crisis as it did Mrs. Brown.

STANSTEAD COLLEGE NOTES

Probably 100 of the students walked the 2½ miles to Mr. Moore's sugar orchard on Wednesday afternoon last to enjoy the luxury of sugar on snow. It was a pleasant day for walking and a very happy time was spent. Dr. Trueman, Mr. MacFadyen and other members of the staff accompanied the party.

At song service Thursday evening Dr. Trueman, in a few earnest words, expressed the strong desire that the students on leaving the College to enter a wider sphere of service would uphold the ideals so constantly placed before them in the College days. A ten-minute frolic was allowed on the campus before the study period bell called to sterner duties.

Miss Ruth Porter sang the contralto solo in the anthem "Thy Will O God," by Goodwin, Sunday morning at the Methodist church.

At the Y. W. C. A. meeting, Tuesday evening, Professor Irvine gave a talk on that "peerless bit of poetry" from Ecclesiastes 12, beginning "Remember now thy Creator." The meeting was presided over by Beth Sornberger, V. P.

The Y. M. S. C. A. has found a very capable president in Mr. L. Goodwin. The interest in the meetings is well kept up. Mr. A. H. Martin gave the address this week. He presented the capital and labor situation in such a manner as to set everyone thinking and wondering what is being done and what could be done to counteract successfully the evil influence of the vicious propaganda allowed to circulate on both sides of the border.

DEFERRED

Irving Duff sang the tenor solo in the anthem "Rest of the Weary" in the Methodist Church Sunday morning.

The baseball "bug" has struck the boy students and the rear campus presents a lively scene in the out of school hours. The four tennis courts will soon be in readiness for the lovers of that sport.

At the Y.M.C.A. meeting Tuesday evening, presided over by Beth Sornberger, vice-president, with Helen Gordon, pianist, Miss Louise Trueman gave an interesting sketch of the life of Countess Franciska Krasinska.

At the Y.M.S.C.A. meeting this week Mr. MacFadyen read a letter from McGill Y.M.C.A. acknowledging the receipt of $200 toward the Murray Brooks fund. A committee was appointed to report on the possibility and advisability of sending delegates to the students convention to be held in Coburg the last week in May.

Principal Smyth of the Wesleyan College, Montreal, and Prof. Robertson of Toronto University visited Stanstead College on Thursday and Friday, April 15 and 16. A year ago, at the request of Mr. Vincent Massey of Toronto, the General Board of Education of the Methodist Church authorized the appointment of a commission to study the conditions and problems of the fourteen Methodist Colleges in Canada and Newfoundland. The commission as constituted at present is made up of Mr. Vincent Massey, Principal Smyth and Prof. Robertson. The commission came from Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B., to Stanstead, and after a few days in Montreal and Toronto will visit the institutions in western Canada.

DERBY ACADEMY NOTES

"Remember the gift to France" has been our slogan for the week.

Three cheers for the Green and White! D. A. boys, just as a sample of baseball playing, defeated the town team; score 4 to 2.

Elizabeth Cofran '11 spent a few days at her home in Derby last week.

A fair number attended the C. E. meeting last Thursday evening. Rev. Mr. Davison gave a very interesting and helpful talk on Opportunity.

The baseball game which was scheduled for last Saturday with Stanstead College was cancelled.

Edna Woodard '21, who has been absent the past two weeks, returned to D. A. Monday morning.

Miss Bliss has given her pupils in French I a chance to exercise their imaginations as well as their dictionaries. Small pictures, stamped with the likeness of students of a certain school, have been passed out with directions to write character sketches. How surprised those students would be to find out what they are really like!

Grass seed has been planted along the borders of the sidewalk. Soon we'll have a flourishing blade of grass. How encouraging that will be!

The Camp Fire Girls will give a poverty social, Friday evening, April 30. Everybody come, dressed in his worst. Remember that pride goeth before a fine.

One division of home-making 1 and 2 served supper to three of the teachers Monday of last week. The other teachers were similarly entertained the next day by the second division of the class. The girls prepared all the food, received the guests and served delicious meals at a well arranged table. Cooks, waitress, hostess, all were there, and all filled their places admirably. Those girls know at least one of the secrets of home-making.

The parts for the commencement exercises were assigned last Friday as follows: Olive Eddy, Valedictory; Elsie Calkins, Salutatory; Helen Gray, Oration; Claudia Hamilton, History; Russell Stuart, Prophecy; Ruth Hudson, Presentation of Gifts; Grace Brown, Essay.

Centenary Methodist Church

The Rev. Major Graham preached a heart-searching sermon Sunday morning from Matthew 5:41, "Whosoever compelleth thee to go a mile go with him twain." The anthem by the large choir was "Thy Will, O God," by F. E. Goodwin. Miss Ruth Porter took the contralto solo. Mrs. Hovey, organist, played for offertory, Andante (violin concerto) Mendelssohn.

In the evening Major Graham's text was Acts 17:23, "Whom therefore ye worship in ignorance Him declare I unto you." For offertory Mrs. Hovey played "The River of Life," by Louis Adolphe Coerne. There was a good attendance. Mr. Graham announced his subject for next Sunday evening would be some of his experiences at the front.

Advancing Subscription Rates.

Ontario weekly newspapers which advanced their subscription rates from $1.00 to $1.50 during the early stages of the war are now advancing to $2.00. In some sections of the United States, weeklies which advanced their rates from $1.50 to $2.00 are now finding it necessary to make a further advance to $2.50 on account of further increase in the cost of materials and labor. The few weeklies still retaining the $1.00 rate have not much longer to hold out at that figure.

Might Try Again.

Miss Euphemia Johnson was attended by a confidential colored friend of her own sex when the railway company called her in to effect a cash settlement for the death of her husband, killed on his honeymoon. Mrs. Johnson had clouded her features with a heavy veil up to the time the corporation attorney had mentioned the sum, but when he produced the bills she threw back her badge of mourning and gazed eagerly on the bundle that flashed green and yellow in thick streaks. The lawyer withdrew after the signing of the release, and the two were left alone. "Euphemia," said the companion, "I suppose you'll be getting married again, now that you're so rich?" Euphemia paused, with a thick thumb half-way to her mouth for moisture and reflection. "Ef Ah do," she observed before resuming the counting the roll, "it'll be some pusson working on de same railway."

New Process in Sculpture.

A process for producing bas-reliefs by photography is the fruit of the invention of an Italian scientist. The basis of the invention is the property possessed by a film of chromium gelatin of swelling in proportion to the intensity of the light falling upon it. The swelling is greater with a low than with a high intensity, so that the light passing through a photographic negative produces upon a chromium gelatin plate a positive in distinct relief. The transparency of an ordinary negative, however, is not truly proportional to the relief of the original model, but by an ingenious automatic device involving double exposure this difficulty is avoided and a negative is obtained having its lights and shades correctly graded to produce the effect in bas-relief.

Cooked and Uncooked Food.

Some one with an analytical turn of mind long ago differentiated man from other animals as "the cooking animal," and if we may believe the Greek legend, it was Prometheus who stole fire from heaven with which man might cook. Yet so far as man's diet is concerned, if we may believe many writers on dietetics, Prometheus made a mistake and shortened the lives of men by making the kitchen range possible. They held to the theory that man should, like the other animals, eat his food raw and uncooked, and then the span of his years would lengthen far beyond the threescore and ten assigned to him by the psalmist, and centenarians would be as plentiful almost as blackberries in summer time.

Traveling in Turkey.

When one gets beyond the cities, traveling in Turkey becomes a matter of endurance. The village houses are generally of rough-hewn stone, one-storied, low and windowless, with earthen roofs having a hole in the center to serve for both light, and exit for smoke. There are no inns, but each village has its guest-house—an earthen platform at the end of a stable. The traveler sleeps with his horse and carries with him a folding cot, bedding, candles and provisions. Hospitality is considered by the villagers as a religious duty.
