So mix'd the rose and lily's white,
That nature seem'd uncertain quite,
To deck her cheek, what flower she'd chose,
The lily, or the blushing rose!
I wish, I ne'er had seen her eye,
Ne'er seen her cheek of doubtful dye —
And never, never, dared to sip,
The sweets that hung upon the lip
Of faithless Emma!

For tho' from rosy dawn of day
I rove along, and anxious stray,
Till night with curtain dark descend,
And day no more its gleamings lend:
Yet still like her's no cheek I find,
Like her's no eye — save in my mind,
Where still I fancy that I sip
The sweets that hung upon the lip
Of faithless Emma!
