WILL BRITISH ENVOY GO TO LHASSA

Suggestion Has Called Forth Protest From the Spectator.

CHAMBERLAIN CAMPAIGN

Received New Impetus From Birthday Dinner to Its Leader Last Night.

Special Cable From a Montreal Star Correspondent.

London, July 9.—It is generally believed that Lord Curzon's presence in England will cause the project of planting a British Embassy at Lhassa, to be pressed, especially now when Russia has lost the power of effectual protest. The presence of an envoy is indispensable in order that Great Britain may always know what is occurring in Thibet and may therefore be able to anticipate any forward movement from St. Petersburg, Pekin or Paris.

THE SPECTATOR OBJECTS.

Of course, vigorous protests are made. The Spectator declares that the project is exactly as unwise as the prospect of a protectorate. An ambassador in Lhassa involves the protection of him with a powerful guard, whose presence the theocracy will be unable to bear with patience. If he be insulted by the secret intrigues of the Lamas or the excited fanaticism of citizens, the Government of India once again will march to Lhassa to avenge the envoy. The final result will be the very protectorate so earnestly deprecated. The presence of a British envoy, moreover, will be at least a plausible excuse for Russia to demand permission to send a similar agent in order to protect the millions of Lamaists already included among the subjects of the Czar.

"Indeed," says the Spectator, "indefinite risks, indefinite complications, and indefinite sources of trouble for our diplomacy will be the least dangerous results of Lhassa." Yet, for all that, an embassy probably will be planted there.

NEW CHAMBERLAIN CAMPAIGN.

Chamberlainism has taken its new start. At last night's banquet in honour of his sixty-eighth birthday, Mr. Chamberlain was surrounded by 177 Unionist members of the House of Commons, all of whom he claimed as supporters of his fiscal policy. Twenty-two others support him, but for various reasons were unable to attend. No ministers were invited. This is the first step of his new campaign, namely to prime these 200 members and let them loose to educate the constituencies. That they need education is proved by the fact that at one by-election this week the Liberal majority was greatly increased while the Unionist majority in another was but one-fourth of what it was in 1900.

Next week Mr. Chamberlain will complete his second step, namely his capture of the Liberal-Unionist organization in defiance of the Duke of Devonshire. His third step will be his exposition at Albert Hall, on July 14, of his full Imperial reciprocity policy.

His birthday speech, last night, took Empire as the theme. "Empire first, bread and butter second," is the derisive heading the Radical papers give to the speech. Nevertheless it is significant that Mr. Chamberlain has realized that he must put his case before the electorate in this way.

FIND CANCER IN ANIMALS AND FISHES

Special to The Montreal Star.

London, July 9.—The annual report of the Cancer Research Fund submitted at the third annual meeting yesterday, stated that the investigation of the year had resulted in important discoveries. Cancer, it has been found, pervades the whole civilized and uncivilized world, affecting animals as well as human beings, and also fishes. It attacks all subjects at relatively the same age. It is not infectious, is not transmissable from one species to another, and is not attributable to a parasite. It is not increasing.

Experiments have not shown that radium exercises a curative effect.

SATURDAY REVIEW

STAMPS APPROVAL.

Canadian Associated Press.

London, July 9.—Mr. Willoughby Cummings, speaking at the National Union of Women Workers, in London, said that there was a great opening for women immigrants in Toronto, if they were properly trained for domestic work. Many wealthy farmers in Canada were anxious to adopt child immigrants. Mrs. Carus Wilson said that only women immigrants of the genteel class would find disappointment in Canada.

IT APPROVED LORD DUNDONALD.

The Saturday Review, referring to the Rideau Club entertaining Lord Dundonald says that the club is an institution representative as is no other of the best in Ottawa politics and society.

AT THE STATE BALL.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH NEGOTIATIONS.

Special to The Montreal Star.

London, July 9.—Lord Lansdowne is stated to have impressed on the French Government that he cannot tie the hands of the Newfoundland Government though he recognizes the legitimacy of their desire that the treaty be applied in a spirit agreeable to Paris and London.

The Paris correspondent of the Chronicle says the Anglo-French agreement is likely to be ratified before the summer recess in spite of the opposition of the new Parliamentary group.

The Paris correspondent of the Times is sure there is no serious hitch in the Anglo-French negotiations.

ALDERMEN AND EXPROPRIATIONS

Discussion on Recent Judgment of Supreme Court.

COSTS FOR FALSE ARREST

Finance Committee Pays Legal Expenses of Constable Who Hired His Own Counsel.

At the meeting of the Finance Committee yesterday afternoon the judgment of the Supreme Court in regard to the approaches to Wellington Bridge was discussed.

It appears that the city commissioners awarded the proprietors $24,000 for property which had to be taken. Two proprietors were dissatisfied with the awards and took an appeal in the courts.

The city, when asking authority of the Legislature to proceed with the expropriations, estimated the cost in this particular instance to be $15,000. The commissioners, however, after careful consideration, awarded nearly ten thousand more, as it was found the property had to be purchased, not at the city's valuation, but according to its market value. This explains the difference between the estimate and the revised valuation.

The court, however, decided that the city had no right to exceed the estimate approved at Quebec, and refused to sanction what had been done.

At the meeting yesterday the city attorney said he thought judgment might affect other cases of expropriation. The judgment, however, would not affect the widening of St. Lambert Hill seeing the work was being done under an old law. The whole matter was referred to a sub-committee for consideration.

FALSE ARREST CHARGED.

The committee turned its attention to a case where a policeman was charged with making a false arrest. The constable making the arrest engaged a private lawyer to defend him, and a bill for $36 was submitted to the committee. The officer was ordered by the Chief of Police to engage the private lawyer. It seems the custom is to appeal to the city attorney when such cases are fought for civic employes.

The committee felt that the city should not pay the amount. It was feared a bad precedent would be formed. After some discussion, however, it was decided the corporation should pay the $36, seeing the constable had acted in good faith.

MEDALS FOR BRAVERY.

A letter from Mr. Recorder Weir was read, asking that the committee vote a small sum of money with which to purchase medals to be presented to policemen and firemen who should distinguish themselves for deeds of bravery. The Canadian Humane Association, it was remarked, made no provision for the policemen and firemen, and, therefore, it seemed advisable for the city to do something for them.

Enclosed with the letter was a pretty specimen of a silver medal that would cost two dollars each.

The suggestion will probably be approved by the committee.

AMBULANCE SERVICE.

The committee decided to grant the sum of $300 to the Hotel Dieu for an ambulance service. It was also decided, at the request of Ald. Sadler, to do something for the Western Hospital in this connection.

A long time was spent on the question of the city paying out large sums to civic employes for drawing up notarial contracts.

Mr. Normandin, secretary of the Board of Assessors, informed the committee last year he had prepared sixty-five of these contracts at his home after hours. As he was a notary by profession, he expected a fee of $5 for each contract, but so far the city had declined to pay him. He preferred to be relieved of the work, as it was more than he could look after.

Mr. Ethier gave his opinion in the matter, and said a competent man like Mr. Normandin should be entrusted with this work. It was then decided to have Mr. Ethier and City Clerk David prepare a report on the question.

WOMEN NOT EXCLUDED FROM NEW YORK CHOIRS.

Archbishop Farley So Interprets the Letter of His Holiness.

Special to the Montreal Star.

New York, July 9.—On the authority of the diocesan officials, it is stated that women are not to be excluded hereafter from the choirs of Catholic churches under Archbishop Farley's jurisdiction, but all non-Catholics will be. Both these decisions follow from interpretations of recent letters on the subject of church music, which Pope Pius X. sent to Catholics all over the world, under date of November 22, 1903.

CHAIRMANSHIP OF G. T. P. COMMISSION.

It is said to have leaked out in Ottawa, that Mr. F. B. Wade, M.P. for Annapolis, N. S., is to be chairman of the commission to build the Eastern section of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Mr. Fielding's conference with Mr. Charles M. Hays and two or three of Sir Wilfrid's Montreal advisers, on Sunday last, is understood to have cleared the way for the appointment of Mr. Wade.

The commissioner from the West it is alleged, will be either Hon. Thomas Greenway or Mr. Fred Young, brother of Senator Finlay Young, the chances being in favour of the latter.

The Government is reported to have reached no decision as to the commissioners from Ontario and Quebec.

SS. HIBERNIAN WILL GO TO NEW YORK FOR REPAIRS.

The following telegram was received this morning by Messrs. H. and A. Allan from Codroy:

"Steamer Hibernian safely floated and anchored at Codroy, where she will receive temporary repairs before proceeding to New York to receive permanent repairs."

The Hibernian grounded May 17th on Stormy Point, and it was thought that she could not be floated. The Merritt Derrick and Wrecking Company, of New York, accomplished the operation.

Books of the Week Reviewed; "The Magnetic North"; Some Other New Books.

By George Murray, B. A., Oxon., F. R. S. C.

The Magnetic North. By Elizabeth Robins. (New York: Stokes & Co.)

This tale of the Alaskan gold-fields—for it is hardly necessary to say that "The Magnetic North" is the Klondyke—leaves upon the mind an impression that will not soon pass away. In conception and execution it is essentially masculine, and as has been aptly said, the fact that a woman, who certainly cannot be supposed to have made the hazardous journey of her heroes under like circumstances, should preserve throughout a long story such admirable appearance of familiarity with her subject, is at least evidence of unusual powers of assimilation. The author, who is the widow of Mr. George R. Parks, achieved in earlier days considerable success in important parts on the stages of both Boston and London, and about eight years ago began writing under the name of C. E. Raimond. Her first book was "The Fatal Gift of Beauty," followed by the more popular volume "The Open Question," which is now succeeded by "The Magnetic North." There is nothing sensational in the book—nothing but a plain, simple narrative of striking incidents—but these are related with a certain vivid realistic power that holds the reader's undivided attention until the last chapter. Such, at any rate, is the verdict of all who have carefully read the volume, and Mrs. Parks is to be sincerely congratulated on her well-earned success. In July, 1897, the year of the great rush to the Klondike, five men, a Denver bank clerk, a Nova Scotian ex-school-master, an Irish-American lawyer of San Francisco, a Kentucky "Colonel," and "The Boy," as the youngest member (aged twenty-two) of the party had been dubbed, left San Francisco on their search for gold. When, however, they landed at St. Michael Island, near the mouth of the Yukon, they learnt that they could not reach Dawson that year. Nevertheless, they started only to be dashed against the shore by the ice floes in an early September winter's storm. The story relates their experiences in building their cabins, and the life there, most trying in its demands upon poor humanity in their bitter struggle against cold and loneliness. At last hunger itself had to be faced, and "The Boy" setting out alone with his little hand-sled, is joined by his "pardner" Colonel George Warren. The finest part of the story tells of the wonderful journey of these two true heroes from Big Chimney Camp to Minook, a distance of hundreds of miles covered amid hardships to which only a pen like the author's can do justice, when, as the Colonel said of life on the Water Trail, "Food, warmth, sleep—we've about got down to the wolf basis." Numerous as are the adventures of "The Boy" and the Colonel, it is the "lessoning" of the Trail, the study in character under stress almost impossible to bear, when starvation and intense cold and thwarted ambition had aroused all that is worst and most selfish in these two men, that showed "how near a tolerable, decent man is to bein' a villain," and "how a man can't be quite a brute so long as he sticks to another man." This is the note, essentially human, that is the key to the story—success in apparent failure. From Minook to Dawson the journey is by boat, and we have a graphic description of the kaleidoscopic life at the big mining camp. The main interest of the tale is centred in the big Kentucky Colonel, as true a knight as those who lived in the days of chivalry, and in his intrepid young comrade; but among the minor characters were two Jesuits of the Holy Mission, Father Richmond and Brother Paul, men of so attractive a personality that we would gladly know more of them. Fine dramatic action, unostentatious pathos, and numerous passages of wonderful descriptive power are the chief characteristics of the author's work; and her success has, moreover, been gained without the introduction of any love story upon which fiction almost always relies for its principal interest. It will be difficult for any reader to forget the picture of the breaking up of the ice, and the description of the restless mob at the mining camp. There is a good map of the Klondike district.

Love Among the Ruins. By Warwick Deeping. (New York: The Macmillian Co. Toronto: Morang & Co.)

Mr. Deeping's previous story of "Uther and Igraine," brought him into prominent notice, and gave promise of a successful future. Whether the present work will attract as many readers as "Uther" is rather doubtful. The author, as one of his admirers has said, is "a romanticist of the most unadulterated order." The spirit of love and chivalry monopolizes his whole intellectual being, and colours every page that he writes. His style is too poetical for ordinary tastes, and his sentences frequently fall into blank verse. It would be well to cure this mannerism before it becomes an inveterate habit, which he will be powerless to shake off. In many passages of this book he reminds us of Maurice Hewlett, and his literary merit is undoubtedly considerable. But it has been objected to him with apparent reason that the so-called history that he pictures counts for little or nothing, and is introduced only as a background for the gracious women and the fierce warriors that he delights to describe. He for that reason will never be what is called a "popular writer," but his disciples will be faithful though few.

The Conqueror. By Gertrude F Atherton. (New York: The Macmillian Co. Toronto: Morang & Co.)

We reviewed this "true and romantic story of Alexander Hamilton"—the great man who helped Washington to conduct his country through the Revolution — more than two years ago. Since then it has rapidly passed through numerous editions, until the publishers are able to offer the public Mrs. Atherton's absorbing novel at a sixth of the price that it originally cost. Romance was never more successfully wedded with history than in this striking volume, and a more extensive sale of it than ever is now ensured by its cheapness. In preference to repeating a word of what we wrote in 1902, we will give our readers some authentic information about the author. Gertrude Franklin Atherton was born on Rincon Hill, San Francisco, in a quarter which has since fallen from its former eminence. She was the great-grand niece of Benjamin Franklin, and was reared by her grandfather, Stephen Franklin, one of the pioneers of California, editor of the first paper "The Golden Era," and a man of strong literary tastes. From him the young girl's inventive faculties received their early direction, and she made up and told stories before she could pen them. She was educated at St. Mary's Hall, Benicia, California, and at Sayre Institute, Lexington, Kentucky. Soon after her school life had ended, she married into a leading California family. She early became a widow, and subsequently spent some time in travelling, but in 1890 returned to her native state to study the primitive, or, as it might be called, the prehistoric period, of its career. Among her best known works are "The Dooma-Woman," 1892; "A Whirl Asunder," 1893; "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times," 1897; "A Daughter of the Vine," 1899; "Senator North," 1900; "The Californians;" "American Wives and English Husbands;" "The Splendid Idle Forties," and several other successful novels. Mrs. Atherton has for many years occupied a very high rank in American literature, and a new volume from her pen is always looked forward to with eager curiosity.

Pamela Congreve. By Frances A. Mathews. (New York: Dodd, Mead & Co.)

Miss Mathews is said to be better known as a playwright than as a novelist, though we remember that her former story, "My Lady Peggy Goes to Town," had a considerable run. Her knowledge of the stage has helped her to invent striking situations in the present romance though on the whole it is written in a light vein; and she has made a thorough study of the dissolute fashionable period of London life with which the story for a time deals, so that when Pamela becomes a successful actress, owing to her innate ability, Miss Mathews is perfectly at home in depicting her theatrical career. Pam Congreve, though she herself knew nothing of her origin, becomes the idol of aristocratic society, and her adventures are almost too surprising to be true. Though at one time she had fallen deply in love with Pelham, Earl of Charteris, a dissipated scamp, she is able to shake off his addresses, and defy his threats, by having accidentally, when only a girl, been an eyewitness of a crime that he had committed, and in the end we welcome her marriage with his Grace of Harlowe, "her truest, noblest, dearest friend." Miss Mathews has learnt the difficult art how and smiles and tears are skilfully blended in the successive scenes of the exciting little drama of varied life. We forgive some improbabilities in the plot of the play, on account of the vivid interest that we are compelled to take in almost all its scenes. There is not a dull page in the whole book, which has six artistic illustrations from the penoil of Mr. A. D. Rahn.

> "Happily to steer
> From grave to gay, from lively to severe,"

Violina. By Mary I. Todd. Illustrated. (Broadway Publishing Co., New York.)

The subtitle of this romance is "The Passing of the Old Adam and Eve," and the book is mostly concerned with all phases of art in Florence, where the heroine (the daughter of a Polish refugee, named Isartorysld), who has been brought up in New England, becomes a great musician. The story, which contains much that is very interesting, tells of her studies abroad, and her experiences there. She marries a man with whom she has fallen in love at the "pensione," where her parents and herself were boarding, and he turns out to be a gay deceiver, as she discovers too late after her marriage to him. Finally he repents, when Violina has discovered the treachery that he had perpetrated on her, nd the romance ends happily for the heroine, whose conduct throughout is beyond all praise. The book is illustrated by four good photographs in connection with Florence.

Do Animals Think? By H. Recordon. (New York: Broadway Publishing Co.)

This book which, of course does not refer to human beings, but to the lower animals, is now in its second edition, and has been favourably received by the public. As the author explains it is not a work on natural history, or on other sciences. It does not treat of the origin or pedigree of the animals under discussion, but deals with their powers of observation, etc. It tends to show that the lower animals do think, more or less, according to their capabilities, and it tries to prove that much of what the writer calls their "prowess" is due not so much to mere instinct as to genuine intelligence, which entitles them to the respect and sympathy of mankind. Mr. Recordon does not consider the question which forms the title of his book, a very simple one to answer, and as, in his opinion, the large majority of mankind answer it in the negative, he has endeavoured to sift the matter thoroughly.

We have no space to follow in detail his reasoning, but we feel sure that most readers will find much in his little volume to attract their attention, and stimulate their thought. The book is written in a clear unpretentious style, and intelligent boys and girls may study it to their advantage.

The Warriors. By Anna R. B. Lindsay. (Thomas Y. Crowell, New York.)

This more pretentious work abundantly fulfills the promise of the author's little book, "What is Worth While?" two hundred thousand copies of which have been sold.

It is not a volume filled with religious theories, but its sole purpose is to inspire and uplift every Christian to greater efforts in the perpetual warfare against sin. Dr. Anna Lindsay's aim is to show the intimate relation of the Church to every field of charity. She recognizes as the most notable shortcoming of the organized Church, its failure to keep pace with, and to share in the growing life of the world. In sharp contrast with the lack of new ideas, new growth, and new outlook in the religious world, she proves by ample illustration the abundant resources, vigorous development, and tremendous vitality that mark the business world of our day. The natural conclusion drawn is that to the work of the Church insufficient forces are brought and that even these forces are not wielded with adequate skill and courage. In the chapter that deals with proposed reconstruction, a strong appeal is urged to enlist in the Ministry "not only intellectual men," so-called, but men whose varied abilities and acquirements will enable them to do effective work in almost every field of labor. A strong plea is urged to cast aside the ordinary traditions that govern the organization of Church workers, and to re-adjust the work by bringing to bear "upon the problems and opportunities of the Church gifts of training and experience of men and women who are talented in a special way." Suggestions that are fully worthy of the earnest consideration of all those who have such work at heart form an important element of this timely volume.

The White Chief of the Ottawa. By Bertha W. Carr-Harris. (Toronto: W. Briggs.)

This interesting sketch of the lives and labours of the pioneer settlers in the district of Ottawa is founded upon data gleaned from the diary and letters of Philemon Wright, which range from 1806 to 1816. It is a well-told story of the self-sacrifice, energy, and enterprise of those early settlers to whom Canada largely owes her present prosperity, and whose loyalty to the British Crown, as the author fittingly remarks, led them to penetrate the dark recesses of our Canadian forests, and to brave the trials and vicissitudes of pioneer life. The writer has consulted a variety of works by Bouchette, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, McTaggart, Dr. Bigsby, and others, in order to insure accuracy of facts and description, and is also indebted to the traditions of old settlers collected at various times and places. The result is that many of the incidents thus drawn from actual life are fraught with deep interest. Tales, such as "The White Chief," serve to keep alive the old traditions to which we have referred, and record in a trustworthy manner habits and customs that are fast dying out with the rapid advance of our modern civilization. On the thread that serves to keep the various parts of the story together many delightful chapters are hung, and we regret that want of space prevents us from making quotations from them. The tenth chapter, entitled "Tobacco Offerings," tells how the Chief and several members of his family, sat on the beach in front of their wigwam, and listened to narratives from the eloquent lips of the Hon. Louis Joseph Papineau, who with his son the younger Louis Joseph (deceased in 1903), had come up in a canoe to see the falls. The volume is illustrated by six old portraits and six clever drawings, by Mr. John Innes.

Hope Deferred. By Kate B. Myers. (Broadway Publishing Co., New York.)

This is a love-story of the usual order of society novels, which possesses one element of novelty. Louise Montrose, a typical Southern beauty, believes that she has won the affections of Hilary Radne. But when Althea Somers appears upon the scene, the heroine of the tale is promptly undeceived, and forces herself to dissemble her feelings towards her rival, whom she hates with all the intensity of her strong nature. Relying upon the love of Neal Ireton, she plans her revenge, and in obedience to her overpowering will, he steals from his parents the infant son of Hilary and Althea. Not content, however, with depriving the hateful pair of their child, Louise further carries out a most hideous revenge that involves in the meshes of her intrigues the lives of two innocent people. Long after her love for Hilary is dead, and she has loved again, and married one who is painted as her ideal, she still pursues her evil designs to the end. "Sensationalism," as it is called, is no doubt relished by a large number of readers, but we think that the author has failed to lend to her story of detestable and unnatural crime any air of probability. As to this, however, opinions may be found to differ. The title seems optimistic, but no hope illumines the tale, and, if we were acquainted with the novelist, we would certainly recommend her to choose for her second effort a less gruesome theme. She is endowed with considerable ability, and would please better if she selected a more pleasing subject. In addition to a portrait of the author, there are six illustrations drawn by W. H. Hudson.

The Effendi. By Florence B Whitehouse. (Boston: Little, Brown & Co.)

The term "effendi," sometimes translated "gentleman," is, we believe, a Turkish title for civil officials and educated persons generally, and the sub-title of the story is "A Romance of the Soudan." It opens with the fall of Khartoum and the death of Gordon, and closes with England's tardy homage to her hero, and the brave death of "The Effendi" on the very spot where his parents had been killed when Khartoum fell. With Gordon on that occasion there was a young Greek who had served under him in China, and was now with his wife and two children in the old castle where the General had established his headquarters. On the night that the Arabs burst into the town Niccoli Boucouvala, the Greek, and his young American wife were killed, while the two children—a boy too dazed to remember the events of the night and a girl too young to heed them—were carried away to the harem of one of the Arab leaders. This was in January, 1885. Later on, in 1897, England sent her troops to the Soudan to avenge the blot on the national escutcheon, and among the troops were some who play an important part in his, Mrs. Whitehouse's, romantic romance. The whole story is one of love and adventure, and "The Effendi," whose life was saved at Khartoum, is throughout the tale a man of high aims and noble deeds. The scenes of the story are chiefly laid at Khartoum and Luxor, and the Armenian, English, and Arabian nationalities furnish the characters. Through the tragedy run two love stories, both ending happily, about which, in justice to the novelist, we must give no details. Few books of the day have attracted more favourable notice than "The Effendi," which is even more full of interest than her recent book "The God of Things." The four illustrations furnished by I. H. Caliga lend an additional attraction to the romance.

Under Suspicion. By Adeline Sergeant. (Methuen & Co., London.)

The right hand of Miss Sergeant, who has already contributed ten or twelve novels to a delighted public, has not lost its cunning, and her latest volume, "Under Suspicion," is a most ingenious tale of modern English society. The mere title of the book is suggestive, excites curiosity, and is cleverly kept in view by Miss Sergeant throughout all the scenes of her busy drama. Towards the close of the book we find that Dr. Kennedy, an admirable man, who eventually marries the heroine, Laurence Boudinot, is also labouring unjustly "under suspicion," and the union of the two, who are thoroughly convinced of each other's innocence, is thoroughly satisfactory to all readers. Lord Hugh Castleton, the adroit schemer (we can hardly call him the villain), in the complicated plot of the novel, married in early youth a vulgar music-hall singer and dancer, of whom he tries all means to rid himself, falls in love with Laurence, and when, by the accidental deaths of her brother and his wife, she is left to struggle alone for a livelihood, induces his sister, Lady Adela Bingham, to receive her into her aristocratic home as a companion. When he fancies that he sees his way clear, for reasons that seem valid, to be delivered from his hated wife, he proposes marriage to Laurence, who has fallen in love with Dr. Kennedy, unconscious that he, like herself, is under suspicion. She firmly but respectfully rejects his addresses, and Lord Hugh then threatens that he will ruin the reputations of Laurence and Kennedy by spreading far and wide the false accusations under which the betrothed pair are supposed to suffer. They both defy him, and his schemes fall through, dooming him to live with the coarse, vulgar woman to whom, as he finally discovers, to his great mortification, he has been legally married. We have no space to do more than mention the strange escapades of their daughter, Daphne, a lovely girl, about eighteen years old, who has inherited to a certain extent the Bohemian taints of her strange mother. The plot is worked out with consummate plausibility, and ends pleasantly for every one but Lord Hugh, who, perhaps, deserves his hard fate.

The Fisherman's Handbook. By Edgar S. Shrubsole. (John Lane, New York.)

The amateur, or even expert, who cannot gain valuable information from this manual of fishing must have a more than ordinarily good conceit of himself, and is much to be pitied. Strictly speaking, we must regard the volume not so much as a volume confined to positive instruction, as a discourse concerning the various methods of angling and the tackle best suited to them, from the author's point of view. Mr. Shrubsole rightly considers that the difficulty of the beginner lies as much in the direction of the choice of outfit as in the manipulation of it, and when he has advanced in the craft, even to the time when he plumbs the last deep swim of all, he is still wondering about a thousand details, which he will find all clearly dealt with in "The Fisherman's Hand-Book." The photographs of the proper positions for trout and salmon fishers are admirable, and the illustrations interspersed through the volume amount to one hundred and twenty-two. It is by far the ablest treatise on angling that has recently been published.

Great Britain, Etc.

Editor of "Notes and Queries:"

Would you kindly answer the following questions in your next issue?

1. What comprises Great Britain?

2. Was Scotland ever conquered and by whom?

J. D. D.

1. Great Britain is be name given, in 1604, to England, Wales and Scotland. Wales was united to England in 1823, and Scotland was united in 1603. They have had the same legislature since 1707, when the three were authoritatively styled "Great Britain." Ireland was incorporated with them by the act of legislative union, 1 January, 1801, and the whole was called "The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

2. On the death of Queen Elizabeth, 24th March, 1603, James VI. of Scotland, as the most immediate heir, was called to the throne of England, and proclaimed King of Great Britain, 24 October, 1604. Each country had a separate Parliament till 1707, when the kingdoms were united. No question of conquest was involved in the union, as in the wars between England and Scotland, honours may be said to have been easy.

Particulars About "The Great Eastern."

Editor of "Notes and Queries:"

A rivet from the dismantled SS. Great Eastern has come into my possession. I should feel grateful if you would give a few of the particulars relating to the time of her launching, her dimensions, and her subsequent history.

C. E. C.

(Dorchester street).

The Great Eastern for a short time in 1857-8 was called "Leviathan," 692 feet long, and 83 feet broad. Horse Power: Paddles, 1,000; screw, 1,600. Weight of ship, 12,000 tons; ordinary light draught, 12,000 tons. She was designed by Mr. T. K. Brunel, who died 15 September, 1859, and was built by Messrs. Scott Russell and Co., at Millwall; the launching lasted from 3 November, 1857 to 31 January 1858. The capital subscribed having been all expended, a new company was formed to fit her for sea. On 7 September, 1859, she left her moorings at Deptford for Portland-roads. On the voyage an explosion took place, off Hastings, owing to some neglect in regard to the casing of one of the funnels, when 10 firemen were killed, and many persons seriously injured. After repairs she sailed to Holyhead, and arrived there on 19 October. She endured the storm of 25-6 October well, and proceeded to Southampton for the winter, on 4 November.

She was fitted up to convey 5,000 persons from London to Australia, a distance of 22,500 miles, with accommodation for 800 first class passengers, 2,000 second class and 1,200 third class. Her able Captain (Harrison) was drowned in the Solent, 22 January, 1860, deeply regretted. She sailed for New York, 17 June, under command of Captain Vine Hall, and arrived there 28 June. After being exhibited there she left New York on 16 August, and returned to England 26 August. Owing to a lawsuit in April the ship came into the hands of Sheriff's officers, but was released and sailed for New York on 1 May, 1861. In 1862 she performed many voyages to and from New York, but in August ran on a rock near Long Island, and injured her bottom. She was repaired, and arrived in Liverpool 17 January, 1863, and sailed to New York, 16-27 May. She was brought by Glass, Elliot and Co., in 1864, and was chartered to convey the Atlantic telegraph cable, sailing from Sheerness, 15 July, and returning, 19 August, 1865. She sailed for New York, prepared for 2,000 passengers, 26 March, and returned with 191. She was then seized by the seamen claiming their wages, May, 1867, and the case was carried into Chancery in July. At the meeting of the shareholders on 10 February, 1868, no dividend was declared. She conveyed the French Atlantic telegraph cable which was successfully laid in October, 1869. On 27 February, 1870, she arrived at Bombay with Bombay and Suez cable, and returned to Sheerness in June, 1870. On 8 June, 1873, she sailed with the fourth Atlantic telegraph cable, which was completely laid, 3 July, 1873, and sailed with the fifth Atlantic telegraph cable, which was laid in August and September, 1874. The career of the Great Eastern was strangely varied, as well have been seen in the preceding account.

One of the lines about which an inquiry was recently made in the Star, viz., "Love that sways the sun and all the stars," is the lact of Dante's "Il Paradiso."

Undoubtedly not; but, for all that, the line does not seem to mean much.

Editor of "Notes and Queries."

I note the enquiry for the author of quotations cited by "Manningah" in the Star of Saturday, June 25th. Probably his first is a translation of Dante's Italian, "L'amor che muove il sol a l'altre stelle," which forms the device on one of the ablest works of fiction of the year, viz.: "Four Roads to Paradise." The other quotation is elusive.

Christian Names and Their Meanings.

Editor of "Notes and Queries."

A SUBSCRIBER.

Montreal.

A list of the more common English Christian names, with their origin and meanings, is generally appended to the best dictionaries. For instance, the latest edition of Chamber's "Twentieth Century Dictionary of the English Language" has an appendix of more than six double columned pages devoted to the subject, and the larger lexicons, such as "The Century," "The Standard," and others, have spared no pains to make their catalogues of all sorts of names as complete as possible. As special treatises I can recommend Miss Yonge's "History of Christian Names," in two volumes, and Dr. R. S. Charnock's "Praenomina: Etymology of Christian Names," (Trubner: London). Of the names mentioned by my correspondent, "Ethel" is Teutonic, and means "noble"; "Mary," with all its variations, "Marion," "Miriam," etc., is Hebrew, probably akin to "Marah," bitter; "George" is Greek, meaning "husbandman"; "Robert" is Teutonic, and means "bright in fame"; "Elizabeth" is Hebrew, and means "worshipper of God," literally "God is her oath"; while "Beatrice," or "Beatrix," is Latin, and means "making happy."

A Grammatical Question.

Can you tell me if it is proper to say "Twice two are four," or if it should be, "Twice two is four"? I believe you answered this question once before, but am unable to find the paper in which such answer appears.

JOHN L. FORRESTER.

St. Johns, P. Q.

Though I do not remember having answered in the Star the question asked by Mr. Forrester, I have no hesitation in saying that the verb should undoubtedly be in the singular. As some correspondents prefer to obtain a quotation from some authoritative book in answer to their queries, I will cite the late Dr. Henry Alford, Dean of Canterbury, for the benefit of Mr. Forrester. Byron tells us that "A book's a book, although there's nothing in't," and, therefore, when I quote from Dean Alford's "Queen's English," page 218, this must not be taken as a token that I consider him a great authority on the use of the English language. In many cases, as his fierce opponent, Mr. Moon, showed, "he was a castaway," and made several bad blunders in his guide-book to English. On the question that my correspondent asks, the Dean writes as follows: "We sometimes hear children made to say, "Twice one are two." For this there is no justification whatever. It is a plain violation of the first rules of grammar; "twice one," not being plural at all, but strictly singular. Similarly, "Three times three are nine" is clearly wrong, and so are all such expressions, what we want to say being simply this, that three taken three times makes up, or is equal to, nine. You may as well say "Nine are three times three," as "Three times three are nine."

So far the Dean, who considers that the case of "Two and two are four," or "Two and two is four," is "a somewhat doubtful one." What is Mr. Forrester's opinion on that point?

F. G. SCOTT.

St. Matthew's Rectory, Quebec.

The French Adjective "Feu."

Emily D. (Quebec) asks me how the word "feu" in French came to mean "late, deceased, defunct."

"Feu" certainly seems a peculiar word. The French speak of "mon feu pere," or "mon pere feu," my deceased father. "Feu la reine," or "la feue Reine," the late Queen. "Feu les oncles," his late uncles. The adjective "feu," meaning late, lately dead, is from the Low Latin "fatutus," a derivative of "fatum." Hence, "feu" properly means one who has fulfilled his fate. "Fa (t) utus" loses et medial "t," (as "abbate" an abbey) from "abbatia" used in St. Jerome), and changes "utus" into "u," as in "cornu," horned, from "cornutus," and "chenu," hoary-headed, from "canutus," a derivative of "canus," white. Thus we obtain "feu," which becomes "feu" by softening "a" into "e," as "fratrem" becomes "frere." This etymology is now generally considered correct; though, in former times, Estienne, Mahn and others (followed by Auguste Scheler in his "Dictionnaire d'Etymologie Francaise") preferred to derive "feu" from the Latin "fuit," i.e., "he or she has been." Dies has not troubled himself about the word. Menage derived it from the Latin "felix," and other writers from the Latin "functus." I may note that the noun "feu," fire, comes from the Latin "focus," a hearth, just as "jeu" is from "jocus;" "lieu" from "locus," and "peu" from "paucus."

The Change of One Letter in a Line of Horace.

Editor of Notes and Queries:

A perusal of your "Notes and Queries" column, dated April 30th, furnished me with the key to the discovery that Horace gave vent to the expression,

"Mutato nomine de me Tabula narratur"; and I am curious to know whether you can verify this statement or not. If you can, to say the least, it is strange. On turning over the leaves of my Horace to find BK.I. St. I. lines 69-70) him practically repeating himself when he writes "Quid Rides? Mutato nomine de te Fabula narratur." Only two hypotheses remain: Either you have misquoted Horace, or else Horace has repeated himself. As the latter one is improbable, I came to the conclusion either that you quoted from memory (being a recognised scholar), or finding it specially to the purpose to change "te" to "me," you have not—and very wisely, too,—scrupled to do so.

"Semper Quinti Horatii Flacci amicus."

(Montreal.)

My correspondent surely cannot mean to charge me with ignorance of what Horace wrote. By simply changing "te" to "me" for the purpose of my article, I cannot see that I was guilty of a heinous crime. On one notable occasion, I proved to an American scholar, that if he began any quotation from the Odes, Satires, Epistles, or "Ars Poetica," of the Latin poet, I could continue it "ad infinitum." He published an account of the incident in one of his educational pamphlets, and declared that he had never met with a more extraordinary instance of verbal memory. I published his account at the time in the "Star," as a curiosity, and not from any personal feeling of vanity.

The Character of Socrates.

Students in our schools who read the "Apology" of Plato and other of his dialogues are frequently referred to a certain chapter in Grote's History, dealing with the character of Socrates. If you see fit to do this you will very greatly oblige numerous readers of your paper here.

Wanted—Explanation of a Picture's Subject.

Editor of "Notes and Queries."

I should be very grateful if you could explain the characters and meaning of a picture called "The Justice of the King," by T. Faid. I saw it in "Masterpieces from the Art Galleries," issued in 1894. I am much puzzled to understand it. The King appears to be handing a sword to the executioner, who refuses to do his office. Are the women begging for the life of one of their number? What has the young man on the other side of the table to do with it all? Is it historical? Or, perhaps, a scene from one of Scott's romances?

Hoping you may be able to explain it.

(Bay du Vin, N.B.)

As I have never seen the engraving of the picture described, I am unable to offer any opinion on the subject, and must leave it to be dealt with by some kind correspondent.

BASKET BALL.

By George T. Hepbrow,
Secretary Amateur Athletic Union Basketbal Committee—Secretary International Committee Y. M. C. A.

(Copyright, 1904, by W. R. Hearst.)

The game of basketball was invented by James Naismith while an instructor at the International Training School for Y. M. C. A. Executive Officers, situated at Springfield, Mass.

VALUE OF GROUP GAMES.

Sport is a great revealer of character. Especially is this true of sports having the group, characteristics, such as basketball, football, lacrosse, etc., The coach is responsible not only for the physical training of the boys, but the ethical training as well. The coach who neglects the latter should be given a ticket-of-leave, and that quickly. If the boys do not learn self-control, honesty, fairness, poise in victory or defeat, deference to the decisions and self-sacrifice, something is wrong with the system of coaching, and either a change in coaches should be made or the game given up entirely.

President Roosevelt says: "The whole test of the worth of any sport should be the demand that sport makes on those qualities of mind and body which in their sum we call manliness." This game stands the test. No amount of physical benefit would warrant the adoption of the game if the ethical results are wanting.

I recall the effect of the game on two players, both having quick tempers, which cropped out under the least provocation. One of them we will call John. He applied for a place on the team, and even his best friends advised against his acceptance on account of his uncontrollable temper. The condition was frankly laid before him, and he said: "So that is the reason I was refused. Well, you let me play in several trial games and I will show those fellows I am a man enough to control myself." At the suggestion of the coach he entered into an agreement with several of his friends to call out his name when they saw he was about to "lose his head," which, by the way, was easy to detect, a peculiar expression on his face just before getting mad. He played in several games and all went fairly well. Then a championship game was on and a question arose as to whether he should play. It was finally agreed to try him in the first half, and if he "lost his head," he was to be taken out. His opponent in the game knew his failing and tried his best to get him rattled, but at the end of the first half had not succeeded, and he was showered with congratulations.

His friends insisted that he should play in the second half. He did, under the same agreement. His opponent, knowing him to be a strong player, continued to harass him, a very unsportmanlike trick, to say the least; but he was equal to the occasion, and his prompters cautioned him less than in the first half. Finally the timer's whistle blew, the game was over, his team won, but a vastly greater victory was his. He had come out victorious over himself. The scene that followed is indescribable. Those who were on the inside cheered themselves hoarse; his friends nearly separated him from his clothing as they bore him off the floor triumphantly on their shoulders to the dressing room, and when the facts were made known to his opponent he also congratulated him. His place on the team was assured after this game, and he never betrayed the confidence placed in him. He now holds a position of trust.

The other player, who began with the one described above, had to be dropped because of his mean playing, and last year I saw him playing in a game where the same tricks were in evidence. Both illustrations could be multiplied. The game itself will not produce good character, but offers the opportunity for the development of those traits which go to make the kind of men parents are proud of, employers trust and nations honor.

THE TEAM.

Several years ago in one of the basketball championships, a club entered a team of players who had not played together long enough to develop team work, but were stars selected from five different organizations. They went into the championship sure of success, but when the tournament was over they were in the fourth place. The question arose why such an aggregation of stars did not carry off the honors. The answer is plain—lack of team work. Every player was a unit, instead of the whole team being a unit. Every player was a unit, instead of sacrificing self for the good of the team played an individual game. This team did not develop into champion timber until they played together three years and developed their team work to the exclusion of individual grand stand play.

Teams of inferior individual players had beaten them often because of superb team work. The individual player must know the rules thoroughly, exercise prompt judgment, never get "rattled," know his place in the team, and fill it at all times, be accurate at passing and throwing, must practice often, so as to acquire endurance, and, above all, exhibit that rare quality, self-control, without which no one can hope to develop into a first-class player.

THE VARIOUS POSITIONS.

In general the above qualifications are necessary for each position on the team. In particular the most successful players are noted for the following, in the positions indicated:

The centre should be a tall player, who can jump well and is agile enough to stoop well when the play demands it. He is a sort of a general, playing between the two goals and assisting to pass the ball from the opponents' end of the field to his own forwards, so they may throw for goal.

The forward gets the most glory, as he throws the greatest number of goals and receives the most applause when successful in caging the ball. He must work in harmony with the other players, and have the knack of getting into an uncovered position, so that the other players may pass the ball to him. Accuracy is the chief qualification of this position, as the game is won on goals thrown and not on simple attempts.

The guard has the most unsatisfactory position, from a personal standpoint, on the team, yet one of the most important from the standpoint of the game. He it is who prevents the opponents' forwards from making goals, and the prevention of scoring is as necessary to the successful outcome of the game as making goals by his brother guards. He must be quick, accurate and cool to a marked degree, and as he is the one most liable to make fouls, must know the rules thoroughly. The value of an efficient guard is never underestimated by his team.

The officials, as the rules state, must be competent, honest and impartial, and not members of either organization represented in the game. Most of the abuses present in the game are due to poor officials. They can make or break the best game ever begun. All organizations accept the responsibility for training the team, but few for training officials. Every school should begin at once the training of at least a half dozen officials for games between other schools, and then the dishonest and incompetent ones would be kept out of the public eye, for the good of both the game and players. Poor officials are often used because good ones are scarce. I know of no way to better advance the game on right lines than to produce each season two or three competent officials from each school.

Good plays should be recognized, whether by the home team or visitors. Hissing should be reduced to a minimum; audible uncomplimentary comments about the decisions of officials should not be tolerated for an instant. Usually they are indulged in by the spectators who know least about the rules, and would not know a correct decision if they saw it.

Yelling or hissing when the visitors' team has a free throw for goal is not only unfair, but abominable, and the alternative of going out peaceably or being put out forcibly ought to be presented to the persons behaving in this way, and acted upon at once. I remember attending a game where a young man, after a decision by the referee hollced, "Rotten." The man in charge of the gymnasium where the game was played immediately blew a whistle and announced publicly that such actions would not be tolerated, that the young man could get his money back if he was not satisfied with the game, and that if such conduct occurred again the perpetrator would be assisted to the street without getting his entrance money. Nothing of like nature occurred during the remainder of the game.

The game is a vigorous one, played by vigorous individuals, and often witnessed by vigorous spectators, and at times needs vigorous action by those in authority to keep down the unruly spirits who are ignorant of the rules and purposes of the game. The object of the game is to assist in the development of clean, wholesome character. If it cannot be conducted in this spirit, it ought not to be conducted at all.

REAL ESTATE SALES FALL OFF; DECLINE IN BUILDING PERMITS

The real estate market is very dull just now, according to all accounts. The amount of the sales registered last week was $268,571, or $83,276 less than those of the previous week. The record is a very good one for this time of the year, but had it not been for a couple of large sales it would have been exceedingly small. One sale in St. Louis Ward, alone, amounted to $185,000, as the appended list will show, while one sale in Westmount amounted to $43,250. When these are taken away there remains very little of the total amount of $268,000.

SOME NEW BUILDINGS.

The permits for new buildings issued at the City Hall during the first week of July, amounted to $44,128, which was an enormous falling off, being $126,194 less than those of the last week of June. No permits for any specially large amount was issued, a $12,000 factory being the only permit over $4,500.

The permits for repairs amounted to only $6,270, this being $4,105 less than those of the last week of June. In fact, of the permits issued during the week, those for one building alone, that of repairs to the theatre on Guy street, for the J. B. Sparrow Amusement Company, amounted to $4,000.

Among the permits for buildings to the value of $4,000 or upwards, were the following:

Two houses of three stories and three dwellings each, 38 by 35 feet, on St. Timothee street, for Aug. Jean, to cost $4,000.

A three-storey house containing three dwellings, 30 by 45 feet, on St. Catherine street, for S. Girouard, to cost $4,000.

A three-storey dwelling, 30 by 40 feet, Sherbrooke and Visitation streets, for Joseph Daniel, to cost $4,500.

A three-storey factory at 38 St. Antoine street, for estate Hon. G. W. Stephens, to cost $12,000.

The accompanying illustration represents the front view of the new Sovereign Bank building, upon which work has now begun. As previously announced in the Star, it will be erected on the south side of St. James street, a few doors west of the new Bank of Ottawa building. It will be ten stories high and of modern fireproof steel cage construction throughout. The walls of the lower storey will be of Stanstead granite, the remainder, including the cornice, being of Kentucky blue sandstone. The entire ground floor will be occupied as a banking room and in the basement will be constructed the vaults for the preservation of the documents not only of the Montreal office but of the entire system of branch banks throughout Canada.

The entire building above the ground floor will be laid out into offices. These will be airy and in each will be fitted a fireproof vault for the convenience of tenants. The heating will be accomplished by low pressure steam with auxiliary hot blast attachment, insuring thorough ventilation throughout the entire building. The floors will be of porous terra cotta and the corridors will be finished in marble. The building will be furnished with 2 fast-running elevators and will be modern in all its appointments. As regards height, it will be the limit of 130 permitted in Montreal, the frontage being 45 feet and the depth 95 feet.

Already the old building which occupied its site has been entirely demolished and work on the foundations will be proceeded with immediately. It is expected that the roof will be on by the first of December and that the building will be ready for occupation by next February. The architect is Mr. H. C. Stone, and the general contractor, Charles Thackeray & Co.

Another building by the same architect, is that of the St. Paul street extension of the Coristine building, which is making rapid progress in the hands of Messrs. D. G. Loomis & Sons, who have the general contract. It is expected that the extension will be completed by the first of the new year, the work having already reached the second storey. James Coristine & Co., Ltd., will then move their offices, warerooms and factory into the new building and the present building will be converted into an office building from basement to roof. It is hoped that the alterations will be completed and the offices ready for tenants about the first of February.

New Home of Sovereign Bank on St. James Street, upon the foundation of which work has just commenced.

TO HONOUR MEMORY OF DR. HERZL.

Special to The Montreal Star.

New York, July 9. — In secret session the Association of Orthodox Rabbi's of America and Canada, continuing their convention, further ways and means were considered for combating what they consider portentious inroads upon the practice of the ancient faith made by Reform Judaism and "Higher Criticism"—so much interest has been aroused by the strong statements made by Orthodox Hebrews on these points that the meetings yesterday were more largely attended than on any other day of the convention.

Zionism was another question brought up and debate thereon occupied a larger part of the day. It was decided to support the movement in its "Misrachi" or Orthodox phases. Arrangements were made for services in memory of Dr. Theodore Herzl, founder of the movement. These will be held about July 17th, throughout America.

THE ROOT AND THE FRUIT

Bu-Ju is not a remedy for symptoms. It is a cure for disease. Disordered Kidneys will produce many troubles, among which may be mentioned Rheumatism. Sick kidneys cannot properly perform their functions; hence the system is flooded with uric acid and rheumatism in its various forms is the result. Bu-Ju cures rheumatism, because it cures the cause of rheumatism, Disordered Kidneys; for same reason it cures dropsy, blood poison, weak heart, loss of ambition, sleeplessness, brain fag, failing memory irritable temper, sallow complexion, bad breath, lame back, and a hundred and one ailments that spring from disordered kidneys, which is the root of the evil. You may pluck the leaves of a rank weed, or cut its stem, but so long as you leave the root it bears new fruit and spreads until its extermination is almost impossible. If you are suffering from any of the above troubles you cannot afford to neglect them. Neglect means misery, for what joy is there in living without good health? Bu-Ju, the Kidney Pill, has restored thousands and it can do the same for you.

The Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont. Preston, October 7, 1903.
Dear Sirs:—I have used a box of Bu-Ju Pills and have been greatly benefited by them. I was troubled with piles for years and tried several kinds of medicine, without getting any relief, but I have had no trouble with them since I took the third box of Bu-Ju. I still take them whenever I can get them, and I recommend them to all my friends. Yours sincerely,
MRS. GEORGE BORMAN.

The barrister considered the point for an instant before replying:

"Perhaps it would be better, as we have not got a warrant."

Winter grinned broadly again.

"Oh yes, we have," he cried. "Mr. Ooma's warrant has been in my breast-pocket for three days."

"What a thoughtful fellow you are," murmured Brett. "In that case we can dispense with local assistance. We five can surely tackle any man living."

"What can have become of Capella?" said David Hume, when they were all seated and bowling along the road to Beechcroft.

"It is impossible to say what such a mad ass would be up to," commented his cousin. "He has probably gone back to London from some wayside station, and failed to find his servant to tell him before the train moved on."

"What do you think, Mr. Brett," enquired Winter.

"I can form no opinion. I only wish Ooma was in gaol. For once, Winter, I appreciate the strength of your handcuffing policy."

CHAPTER XXXII.

THE FIGHT.

It was almost dark by the time they reached the lodge gates. Brett, moved by impulse, stopped the carriage in the main road. The others alighted after him. Mrs. Crowe, the lodge-keeper's wife opened the gates, and evidently wondered why the carriage did not enter.

"Good evening, Mrs. Crowe," said Brett, advancing. "Have you seen a telegraph messenger recently?"

"Lawk sir," she cried, "I didn't recognize you in the gloom! No, sir, there's been no messenger, only—"

Then she uttered a startled exclamation.

"Why, there's Mr. David an' Mr. Robert! I could ha' sworn one of you gentlemen walked up to the house five minutes ago, an' I wunnered you never took no notice of me. Well, of all the strange things!"

"It was a natural mistake," said the barrister quietly.

Then he told the coachman to wait where he was until a message reached him from the house.

He did not want to disturb the visitor who had caused Mrs. Crowe to "wunner," nor was there any use in sending the carriage back to Stowmarket. Somehow, he felt that Capella would not come to Beechcroft that night.

The five men went rapidly and silently up the avenue. As they approached the lighted library, they could see a servant parleying with the Japanese.

A motion of Brett's hand brought the party into the shade of the sombre yews.

"You and Holden," he said to Hume, "go round to the main entrance, proceed at once to the library door, enter the room, and lock the door behind you. Be ready with your stick, and do not hesitate to lunge hard if Ooma attacks you. You, Holden, keep the revolver handy. It must only be used to save life. The moment you appear at the door we will rush to the window, which is open. Ooma must have entered that way. You both understand?"

They nodded and walked off, clinging to the line of the trees. The others closed up. Timing their approach with perfect judgment, they crept over the gravelled road at the bend, and gained the turf in front of the window.

Ooma's back was towards them. They could hear his voice — a queer, high-pitched, yet strident voice—whilst he questioned a somewhat scared footman as to the whereabouts of his mistress.

The man had evidently perceived the remarkable resemblance borne by this uncanny stranger to the Frazer family. His replies were respectful, but stuttering. He was alarmed by those fierce eyes, more especially because his inability to give satisfactory information seemed to anger the new-comer.

"You are not a child," they heard Ooma say, with menace in his tone. "You must have heard, from her maid or some other source, where Mrs. Capella has gone to?"

"N—no, sir," stammered the man. "I really 'aven't, I t—t—thought Mrs. C—Capella was in London. The b—butler says we are all to 'ave a 'olliday next week."

'Is there no way in which I can find out where your mistress is at this moment? I must see her. My business is important. It cannot wait. It is of the utmost importance to her."

Brett, straining without like a hound in the leash, could note a slight accentuation in the perfect English spoken by Ooma. There was just a suspicion of the liquid "r" so strongly marked in Jiro's utterance. What an uncanny think is heredity! It even alters the shape of the roof of the mouth. The Japanese of English descent could necessarily pronounce English better than the pure-born native.

The servant within seemed to rack his brains for a favourable reply.

"You might ask Mr. Capella, sir," he said at length, with some degree of returning confidence. "He was expected here by the last train, but missed it in London, I expect. He is sure to come to-night, and he will tell you, if you care to wait."

"Mr. Capella! Coming by the last train! What is he like?"

"Do you mean in appearance, sir? He is a small, dark-complexioned gentleman, with wavy black hair and a very pale face. He—"

But Ooma turned away from the man, and looked through the window, with the lambent glare of a wild animal in his eyes. He instantly saw the three motionless figures, Brett, Winter, and Robert Hume-Frazer.

They sprang forward. Robert was quickest, and reached the open window first. The Japanese jumped back and made for the door, but it opened in his face, and David entered the room. Behind him was Holden, who made no secret of the fact that he carried a revolver.

Ooma caught the astounded manservant by the waist, lifted him as though he were a truss of straw, and threw him bodily at Robert Frazer and Winter, bringing both to the ground by this singular weapon.

It was a fatal mistake to attack the readiest means of exit. Had he used his human battering ram against Holden and David he might have escaped. But now he looked into the muzzle of another revolver, and heard Brett's stern demand:

"Hands up, Ooma! If you move you are a dead man?"

Nevertheless, he did move. He seemed to have the agility as well as the semblance of a carnivorous animal. He bounded sideways towards the wall of the library, picked up the writing-desk, and barricaded himself behind it. In the same second he produced a small, shining article from his waistcoat pocket, and shouted, in a voice now cracked with rage:

"Stand back, all of you. You may shoot me! I will not be arrested!"

Winter, swearing, scrambled from the floor. Robert, too, threw off the yelling servant, and rose to his feet. Alarmed not only by the curious entry made by David Hume and Holden, but also by the racket in the library, other servants were now clamouring at the locked door, for Holden had slipped his left hand behind him and turned the key. Brett similarly closed the window. They were five to one, but the one seemed to defy them.

"That he blowed for a tale!" roared the infuriated detective, whose blood was fired by the manner in which he had been floored. "I arrest you in the King's name for the murder of Sir Alan Hume-Frazer, and I warn you—"

Robert Hume-Frazer waited for no preliminary explanation of an official character. He wanted to feel that man's bones crack under his grasp. He had the strong man's ambition to close with an opponent worthy of his thews and sinews. Without any warning, he made for the Japanese, who seemed to await his oncoming with singular equanimity, though otherwise quivering with baulked hate.

But Brett had seen something that aroused a lightning-like suspicion. Twice had the Japanese looked at a small, shining thing in his hand, as though to make sure it was there. So the barrister was just in time to grasp Robert's shoulder and hold him back.

"No," he cried, "you must not touch him. I command it. He cannot escape."

"Then let me have a go at him first," growled Frazer, whose face was pale with passion.

"No, no. Leave him to me, Winter, do you hear me? Stand back, I say."

Brett's imperative tone brooked no disobedience. Thus, in a segment of a circle, the five enclosed the one against the wall—Ooma barricaded by the table, the others ready to defeat any stratagem he might endeavour to put in force.

"Now listen to me, Ooma," said the barrister sternly. "You must drop that thing you have in your right hand. You must hold both your hands high above your head. If you move either of them again I will shoot you. If you do not obey me before I count five I will shoot you. One! Two! Three!—"

The Japanese, gasping a horrible sort of sob, three times plunged the instrument he held into his left arm. Then he flung it straight at Robert. One would have thought his avengeance would be directed against Brett, whom he must have credited by this time with his capture.

No; he singled out a Hume-Frazer for his last attack. The instrument struck a button on Robert's coat and fell to the floor, where it lay twisted out of shape by the force of the impact.

It was a hypodermic syringe.

Again Ooma uttered that weird cry.

"This is the end," he said. "You have not beaten me. It is Fate."

He folded his arms and looked at them. A change came over his face. He was no longer a tiger at bay, but a human being, calm, dignified, almost impressive.

"I arrest you—" began Winter.

"You fool!" laughed the Japanese, with a quiet contempt in his tone. "I shall be dead in twenty minutes. That syringe contained snake poison, the undiluted venom of the karait. Put away your pistols. They are not wanted."

Quite nonchalantly he leaned back against the bookcase that lined the wall. He turned his eyes to Robert.

"You have the luck of your race," he said. "If that point had reached your skin no human skill could have saved you. As it is, you are spared, and I must go. The same blood flows in our veins, yet you are my enemy. I wish I could once get my fingers round your throat before my strength fails."

"Come from behind that table and try," was the quick rejoinder.

Ooma made to accept the challenge, but Brett intervened.

"If you are telling the truth," he said, "you can spend your brief remaining span of life to better purpose than in a mad combat with one who has done you no harm. Where is Capella?"

"I killed him," was the cool reply.

OUR LONDON LETTER

King's Birthday Week Ushers in Usual Number of Celebrations.

THE NEW COLONIAL CLUB

Anglo-Colonial Institution Soon to Have Elaborate and Commodious Quarters.

From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star.

London, June 29.—This has been a gay week, for has it not been King's Birthday week, and has not the weather been of the best? The eye of man, or woman either, could not have wished a prettier picture than was presented yesterday at the trooping of the colours on the Horse Guards Parade. The King was away at Kiel, instilling his Imperial nephew with good maxims, one may hope, but the Queen was there, and the Princess of Wales, surrounded by her gleeful little ones, and a crowd of royalties and fashionable folk of every class and colour of garment. The cheers of the crowds were deafening, and the Queen smiled as she only can, and her little grandchildren seemed overjoyed. There have also been ducal and high society parties and balls innumerable, making London a place of many delights in these long June days.

A NEW ANGLO-COLONIAL CENTRE.

Everyone who is interested in Anglo-Canadian affairs will be glad to hear that the Colonial Club is taking to itself a fresh habitation and a fresh lease of life. For five years past it has managed to carry on its work in rather crowded quarters in Whitehall Court, in close proximity that is to the National Liberal Club. There its regular dinners have been held; there its members have met together in social intercourse, and speaking generally the club has proved itself to be a useful Anglo-Canadian and Anglo-Colonial meeting place. Now, however, a new club-house is to be established in Piccadilly or St. James street, it being unanimously resolved that the present company be reconstructed with a capital of £10,000. The amounts already subscribed warrant the belief that the whole capital will be readily forthcoming.

Sir Charles Tupper has seen a good deal in London this week. He is keenly interested, of course, in the development of the Chamberlain campaign, and in the well-known fact that the campaign is about to enter upon quite a new lease of life. That is to say the Tariff Commission is on the eve of publishing its first report, being a preliminary report on the iron and steel trades. This publication is bound to give a great fillip to the movement, and everyone is, so to say, on the qui vive. Some interesting sidelights were thrown upon the subject at this week's meeting of the Compatriots' Club, presided over by Lords Cranmore and Browne. The immediate purpose of the meeting was to hear a paper read by Mr. H. W. Wilson, the naval journalist, on "National Defence and Tariff Reform," and Sir Charles Tupper's presence made one anticipate a fighting speech from him. Mr. Wilson is one of the naval out-and-outers. His first thought is the navy and his last thought is the navy, and he is firmly convinced that unless the British taxpayer is continually putting his hands in his pocket for the navy the British Empire must go to pieces.

Of course, as every one knows, the British taxpayer takes a somewhat different view of the subject, and perhaps it is a good thing that he does. Mr. Wilson, for instance, is very certain that the British nation must in future years spend a good deal more on the Navy than it now does, and he suggests that the increased expenditure be met by a British tariff. This is the gist of his argument:—Under free trade we had been driven to acquire open markets by war and annexation. Free trade involved at some point the active defence of our markets, yet it endangered our military position. The Cobden club had protested against the closure of the open door in China and elsewhere, denying the right of the foreigner to close the door where Englishmen had established trade rights. That involved perpetual threats of war and armaments, so that even the extreme free-trade view did not in the modern world bring peace. Free trade was also prejudicial to defence in the dependency on the foreigner which it produced, that dependency being dual for the food or raw material of manufacture, and for the market for the finished exports. The State would gain if dependence on the Colonies was substituted for dependence on the foreigner. The yield of a British tariff should be £24,000,000 and further, a surtax on foreign imports might be levied by the colonies and devoted to defence. This at the rate of 10 per cent. would give £5,000,000. But until we had a federation of the Empire the Colonies could not fairly be expected to contribute to the Imperial forces.

There will be very many people in Canada, as in this country, to dispute the wisdom of Mr. Wilson's suggestions and to deny the accuracy of his deductions. Sir Charles Tupper, had there been an opportunity of hearing him, would have found much to dispute with Mr. Wilson. It is quite certain that before such a suggestion as he makes as to a Colonial surtax could even be debated amongst serious politicians here there would have to be a good deal of preliminary elucidation. Indeed I do not know a single responsible politician—and of course Mr. Wilson is not one; he is a naval expert in journalism—who would go the length even of putting forward a suggestion of this kind in the public press. They at least would realize the extreme delicacy of making in this country such a proposal as regards Colonial taxation for Imperial defence purposes. One must not, however, take Mr. Wilson too seriously or too severely. He would himself probably say that he is merely a prophet and that he is only looking forward to what might become feasible in future years. From this point of view his statement must create interest, for it indicates the lines along which what may be called the ultra-Imperialists in this country are looking.

TANGIBLE TOKENS OF THE ESTEEM IN WHICH MR. R. L. BORDEN IS HELD BY HIS SUPPORTERS.

Mr. R. L. Borden has sent the following letter of thanks to the gentlemen of Halifax who acted as representatives of his other friends and supporters in the presentation of an address of congratulation and some silver plate to him last week:

Messrs. Frank C. Simson, A. B. Crosby and James A. McDonald, Halifax:

Gentlemen,—The appreciation and confidence of those among whom one has lived and by whom he is best known constitute a reward to which no man can be indifferent. These have been bountifully bestowed upon me in the kindly but all too flattering expressions contained in the address with which I was presented on Tuesday last.

While I cannot claim to have accomplished all that I have desired in the few years during which I have led the Conservative party in the House of Commons, yet this at least I can truthfully claim, that whatever of energy or capacity is mine has been wholly at the service of my country and of my party during that period.

The splendid gifts which accompanied the kindly words of our friends will ever be prized most highly by my wife and myself, not alone for their beauty and intrinsic value, but especially because they will always represent to us the sympathy and loyal friendship of those who have known us in our well-beloved province by the sea. May we be permitted through you to convey to all of them our sincere and heartfelt thanks for their exceeding kindness, and for the very great honour which has been vouchsafed to us at their hands.

Yours faithfully,

(Signed) R. L. BORDEN.

Emigration Companies Hurt Canada's Guid Name.

THE STORY O' A FORTUNE

Mrs. Quarrier Dead—Inverness's Bonnie Cemetery—Volunteers in Camp.

(Fra oor ain Correspondent)

Glascow, June 29.—I fell a wonderin' the other day as to what was the meanin' o' sae many guid hearted folks payin' guid money to papers for advertisements makin' public the fact that they, the guid hearted folk, were willin' to help a'body wi' an ambition to get to Canada to get there. Noo it was the Canadian Emigration Farmers' Assistants' Incorporation, the mern it was the Ontario- Assiniboia-Saskatchewan Development Syndicate (Limited) an' the next day it was somethin' wi', just as high soundin' a name. So I cut oot ane o' the advertisements an' went doon the street to the Canadian Government office an' asked Mr. J. Bruce Walker what he thocht o' it. "It's a' richt," he said. "If ye gang to that address ye'll find its a shippin' agency. This is just oor auld freen' the shipping agent wi' another name. He uses this name because it maks folk come an' ask him aboot Canada, an' then he sells them tickets for crossin' by some o' the steamship lines, an' he gets a commission on ilka ticket he sells. But he ne'er asks whether the buyer o' the ticket is the kind o' person to get on in Canada an' he does naethin' to see that his emigrant gets work when he gets there. If he taks onything frae the emigrant, he breaks the law, an' we soon stop his agency, but he's ower cute for that, and he is content wi' his commission frae the steamship line."

This explains twa-three things. Firstly it explains the way that 150 tradesmen frae Glasgow got stranded in Toronto no lang syne. They were sent oot by an "agency" that had na made proper arrangements for them at the ither end, although in this case they had been guaranteed work an' wages as soon as they arrived. Then it explains besides the warnin' the Canadian Government sent roond a' the papers last week, sayin' that they dinna approve o' ony body or ony society that sends mechanics to Canada. What they want is folk for the lan', an' Mr. Walker says if emigrants wad only come straight to him he wad mak sure that nane wad gang that were na needed an' that there wad be a place for ilka ane he advised to gang to Canada. But thae "agencies" were misleadin' folk, an' sendin' oot men that werena suitable, an' the result was that Canada and its Government was blamed.

There's a fine foundation for a story in "The Sinclair Millions." It has become public that somethin' like £2,000,000 is in waitin' to be claimed by some Sinclairs belongin' to Caithness, an' the firm o' lawyers in Edinburgh wha hae the case in han' are gettin' shoals o' letters frae Sinclairs askin' hoo muckle they're each to get. It seems that mair than a hunder year syne a Major Sinclair made a fortune in India, in the tea trade. He had ae lassie, an' she was sent hame to Caithness when she was young. Nane e'er heard what cam' o' the Major or that he had a fortune until noo. His will left a' he had to the lassie, but as naethin' e'er cam her way, she married an' settled doon in Caithness an' passed awa' in due time. Her bairns are a' dead, an' noo her bairns' bairns hae got wind o' the fortune, an' are tryin' to get it. That there was a fortune seems quite true, but I wadna like to be sure that it'll come to the richt heirs, or to ony heirs. There's aye a mighty lot o' difficulties in a case o' that kind.

It seems only the ither day that I was tellin' o' the passin' o' William Quarrier, o' the Orphan Homes, Bridge o' Weir; an' noo I've to tell o' the passin' o' his widow. She hasna survived him a year, but a' that time she's been workin' for the homes just as he worked, carin' for the orphans, an' seein' that they got a fair start in life. She was a richt bit body an' ane noo comfortably settled in Canada, an' without baith William Quarrier an' his wife the Homes winna seem the same. They baith believed that Providence wad pay a' their expenses, an' their belief was justified. If them wha come after hae the same faith, Providence will, nae doot, deal as fairly wi' them. If they haena, the care o' the Homes will be a serious question.

The Town Council o' Inverness are thinkin' o' buyin' Tomnahurich cemetery, the bonniest cemetery in broad Scotland. As a'body wha has e'er spent a day in Inverness ken, Tomnahurich is a fine hill on the outskirts o' the toon, seen frae nearly ilka place near by. Frae Tomnahurich ("the hill of the yew trees"), the visitors can see Inverness an' the country roond aboot, an' the idea o' makin' it a cemetery was a credit to the man that invented it, whae'er he was. It's to cost £2,500, but the Council calculates that at that price it will pay 4 per cent. profit. Glasga has been plannin' a municipal cemetery for a while, but if they dinna hurry up Inverness will be afore them. Likely when we get a cemetery we winna mak 4 per cent. aff it. We'll rin it for the beneft o' the citizens an' no for profit!

This is the season o' the Volunteers, an' the braw, braw lads are in camp, learnin' hoo to fight the foreign foe if e'er he shows his nose aboon the edge o' the sea encircled island. The 4th Gordon Highlanders are at Stobs, doon Hawick way. So are the Black Watch an' the 17th Lancers. The Scottish Horse are at Blair Atholl, the Lanarkshire Imperial Yeomanry at Douglas West, the Fife an' Forfar Imperial Yeomanry at Ladybank, the Argyll and Bute Volunteers at Dunbar, the Lovat Scouts at Fearn, the Highland (Volunteers) Brigade at Tain, the Queen's Own Yeomanry at Hamilton, an' the Clyde Naval Reserve Volunteers hae been marchin' through the streets o' Glasgow, wi' guns an' the Marquis o' Graham, their commander, at their head. Noo's the time for "haughty Gaul," or onybody else, to come an' see hoo we're livin'.

OUR IRISH LETTER

Supposed to Be Drowned But Had Eloped to Australia.

A STRANGE DIVORCE CASE

Irish Dealers Protest Against the Sale in England of Spurious "Irish Eggs."

Special Cable from a Montreal Star Correspondent.

Dublin June 25.—Mrs. Jane Sanderson was granted a divorce from her husband George Frederick Sanderson in the Divorce Court, London, on the ground of desertion. Mr. Sanderson was the manager of the Belfast Empire Theatre, and in July 1900, went out one morning to Blackhead, presumably for the purpose of bathing. His clothes, boots and towel were found on the rocks and it was supposed he had been drowned, a paragraph to that effect appearing in the papers. It turned out, however, that he had eloped with a lady to Sydney, where he has been living ever since, and it was only by his writing to his father to tell him he was in very bad circumstances that it became known he was still alive.

Another divorce case which created a great sensation in Dublin, where the lady is very well known, was that of Sir William McConnell, ex-Lord Mayor of Belfast, who was granted a decree against his wife. No defence was entered for the respondent.

Lady McConnell, who was a Miss Hewson of Co. Kerry, is very beautiful and well known in Dublin and Belfast society.

Sir William, who was knighted when Lord Mayor, was created a Baronet on the visit of the late Queen Victoria to Ireland.

A new "injustice to Ireland" has come to light in the matter of eggs. It is said that great quantities of foreign eggs are sold in England as Irish and it is no wonder that our eggs have succeeded in getting such an unenviable notoriety, as those which are sold as Irish are very stale ones, of the electioneering type. It is pointed out that the Danish Government look far more carefully after the interests of the farmers than the Irish Department of Agriculture, and the matter will shortly be brought before the House of Commons.

By returns recently issued, the live stock trade of Ireland for last year, showed a considerable falling off as compared with 1903; the numbers being 2,653,015 in that year and only 2,293,244 in 1903. The total number of cattle exported from Irish ports reached the figures 897,645, being made up of 246,877 fat cattle; 556,806 stores; 87,528 calves and 6,742 cattle of other sorts.

The export of horses of all kinds totalled 27,719, but this figure, though higher than in 1903, shows a considerable decrease as compared with the numbers exported some few years ago. Concurrently with this decline there has been a marked increase in the number of horses imported into Ireland and if the three years since 1900 be compared with the five years preceding it would appear that there has been an average annual reduction in the number of horses exported of 15,000, and an annual increase of 3,000 on the number of imported. This total number of horses imported into Ireland in 1903 was 5,013. One cause of the increased importation may be the substitution of electric for horse traction in the tramway systems in Great Britain of late years—a circumstance which joined to the agricultural depression in England has led to many horses of the dispersed tramway stud being brought to this country for sale by auction. It seems something like "bringing coals to Newcastle, importing equine stock to Ireland, but all the same it is being largely done.

The exports of swine in 1903 amounted to 569,920, and of sheep to 825,679 both of these departments showing a very considerable reduction to those of former years. The importations of sheep (chiefly from Scotland) are increasing every year. In 1903, 44,532 were landed at Irish ports, being nearly double the number for 1902. Ireland is a wonderful little country to send out such enormous quantities of live stock each year, but there seems to be a slackening off lately, and it would appear as if the great industry of the Green Isle was at last going down before foreign competition.

The running of slow steamers occasionally with the American mail starting at mid-week, must, I am sure, cause a good deal of confusion at times. A notice appears from the Postmaster-General now and again to the effect that it being found necessary to run a slower steamer from Liverpool on Wednesday, all correspondence for the States and Canada must be posted earlier, and if not marked to be sent by a particular steamer will be forwarded by the German packet from Queenstown. One sometimes does not know what to do with letters, when things are in such an uncertain state.

A good deal of excitement has been caused by the report that the River Shannon had been poisoned, with a view to the destruction of the fish in it. Diligent and exhaustive enquiries have failed to prove that there is any truth in the report. The police and water bailiffs have made the closest inspection, but can find nothing, nor can it be traced from whom the first hint of such an outrage came.

The Hon. Mrs. Henry Lovell Aylmer and Miss Aylmer passed through Dublin this evening, on their way to Limerick, where they go to attend the marriage of Miss Cleeve, niece of Sir Thomas Cleeve, ex-High Sheriff of the city of Limerick. Mrs. Aylmer has of late been staying at Pendower, Falmouth, Cornwall, where her late husband's father, General Aylmer, R.A., recently died.

There has been little or no haymaking in Ireland yet, but in England and parts of Scotland the hay harvest has begun and is in full swing in places. It is generally thought that the crop in Great Britain will be at least an average one. Here in Ireland it will be very good in some parts, but poor enough in others. It used to be the custom here to sell the meadows "on foot," but now it is usual to sell at so much a ton out of the stock. The price ranges from £2 10s to £4 5s a ton. This year, on account of the very short supply of 1903, it is thought the average price may be about £4 per ton, which is very high.

There is much rejoicing in the County Cork over the news that the Court of Appraisers in New York had been over-ruled with regard to the increased tax on cured mackerel. It is said that several important American importers have availed themselves of this decision already, and have wired their agents on the Irish coast to buy up all the available fish. The trade done in exporting cured mackerel from the south-west of Ireland to America was a very important one, and there was great consternation amongst the poor fishermen when what was considered a prohibitive tax was about to be put on.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

THE LATEST FOREIGN FASHIONS.

Dainty Costumes Worn at the Fashionable Summer Resorts. . . . .

Paris, June 28. — Do you want to know all that is newest in the mid-summer fashions? Then study the modern belle at the summer resorts. Her varying gowns cleverly reveal all of the secrets which Madame la Mode guarded so carefully earlier in the season.

To begin with, linen is having a special vogue of its own this summer—white linens and painted linens as well. These linen gowns are the smart thing in many varying styles. They are made with instep-length skirts and three-quarter length plaited jackets, and they are also seen elaborately embroidered and lace-trimmed.

Then there are the separate linen coats, which are quite the newest thing of the moment. They are full and loose and generally reach two or three inches below the hips. They are made of cut-out linen, which has the effect of eyelet embroidery in large designs. A champagne linen coat will have its openwork design outlined with coarse white silk done in the rope stitch.

With this style of coat is worn a lingerie hat in the same shade of linen, and the parasol carried is often of the same openwork linen. Whatever colour silk is used to line the parasol, a knot of this silk appears somewhere both on the coat and hat. The idea of repeating the same colour note in her coat, parasol and hat is a favourite fad of the summer belle. White linen sailor hats are also good style to wear with a tailored suit of linen. These hats are something entirely new. The prettiest are made of the allover eyelet embroidery, and have a band of coloured velvet ribbon about the crown. Geranium red and Empire green are the two shades most in favour for the velvet bands.

Narrow wash braid is much used to trim the linen frock. In its newest design it is made to simulate buttons. By the way, buttons are emphasized in the summer-resort girl's prettiest frocks. For example, if she is wearing a gown of ivory tinted soleiaine—that soft, silky fabric so much the mode this summer, she is just as apt as not to have her blouse fasten with odd-looking Japanese buttons. These buttons are made of kid or silk elaborately embroidered in gold threads in some artistic Japanese design. And when the Japanese buttons are worn, there is a Japanese belt to match, which a mass of embroidery and a shimmer with gold.

Though the skirts of the new mid-summer gowns are all extraordinarily full, measuring anywhere from six to eight yards around the bottom, yet over the hips they are designed to suit the figure of the individual girl who wears them. If her hips are slender and her waist unusually small, then a charming princess effect is given to the gown by having the upper portion of the skirt and the lower portion of the bodice shirred, the shirrings extending on the skirt just to hip depth. Now a full skirt of this sort, with the shirring over the hips and at the waistline would be quite out of the question for the big girl with generous hips and a waist in proportion. Of course, she wants to wear the full skirt, too, since it is so pronounced a summer fashion. Madame la Mode says, "So she shall;" and for her and her many feminine relatives there are skirts made with many varying close-fitting effects over the hips. The embroidered hip yoke is one of Fashion's latest fancies for the full skirt for the stout person. If a plaited skirt is worn, the plaits are carefully stitched and pressed so that they lie perfectly flat over the hips and for some inches below. Then the fulness is let out to give the wide effect at the bottom.

Though the summer belle laughs at the idea of hoop skirts, yet her own skirt shows a very billowy, bouffant effect from the knees down. This is due, however, not to the old-fashioned heavy crinoline lining, but to a new lightweight material, which gives just the right body and just the correct flare to the filmy materials which are now so much used for the fashionable dress skirts.

It is not only the vogue for the full, flaring skirt which the summer girl's wardrobe emphasizes, but for the skirt which just escapes the ground all the way around. And, because of this fashion of the full, short skirt, the shoe this summer has been brought especially into prominence. The fashion fad is to have the stocking match the tint of the gown and to have the shoe of black shiny leather.

In studying the summer belle's gowns their picturesqueness is surely their most pronounced feature. It is the feminine girl we have with us this year, not the girl who affects mannish fashions. And it is not only her clothes, but her manner that reveals to you her femininity. Where she was once a good fellow, she is now a coquette. And in every little detail she dresses to play the part. She wears flower-scattered filmy gowns with many billowy ruffles. She drapes about her shoulders a gauzy, lace-trimmed fichu, and her hats look as if they were just made to reveal and then suddenly conceal coquettish glances. Then there are her parasols to help out the picture, and they are ruffled and ruched and lace-trimmed too. Sometimes they are hand-painted. A white silk parasol that has pink roses scattered over it as its hand-painted design will be carried by the summer belle when she wears a white organdie flecked with pink roses. And another little fad of hers, too, when she is dressed in this fashion, is to tie to the handle of her parasol a big bunch of natural pink roses.

FROM A FEMININE STANDPOINT.

Weariness When Weighed Against Idleness Seems the Better Condition. . . . .

It's the same old story day in and day out.

On all sides we hear it, and from all sorts of people, until the similarity of this universal wail reduces us to weak mindedness, and we, too, join involuntarily in the great procession of people who exclaim at least once a day — and not always with good and sufficient cause—"I am tired."

The woman with nothing to do is tired of the ennui which besets her; while the worthy person who attends to the family washing is equally wearied of wash tubs and soap suds. Children as well as grown people weary of play, and everyone on some occasion or other tires of work. To do nothing is seemingly quite as tiring as to do too much, and unfortunately it is rarely indeed that a person is happy enough to balance amusement and toil in such a manner that he finds life a satisfaction, except by fits and starts.

Weariness seems more than a merely national complaint, for victims with the same symptoms are to be found in every country from the West Indian native, who takes his siesta under the pipe mango tree, to the brother living the Arctic tribes, who prefers that someone else do his food hunting for him. The secret of the universal weariness cannot be traceable to the pace we of the so-called civilized world live — that is among those of us who live at all. It is an old saying, but a true one, that "it's better to wear out than to rust out," and to the average mind a strenuous existence recommends itself, rather than stagnation. When one merely exists, and then rebels because one occasionally has an imperative duty to perform, it is surely indisputable that one must have been born "good and tired," and can't help it.

Primarily it is our fault if we fuss and worry ourselves into a state of fidget that we dignify with the name of "nerves," and make life uncomfortable for our associates until they are on the verge of a prostration far more deserving sympathy than that indulged in by the original sufferer. Hard work never killed any one yet, but worry and insufficient attention paid to the care of the mind and body fill more graveyards than any disease. A certain amount of ease and comfort, either of mind or body, is within reach of all of us, if we will only accept it.

The most general cure for weariness is work. It sounds paradoxical, but it needs no explanation. There are thousands of women, and not a few men, who are absolutely miserable because they have nothing to do, or else because they refuse to do what is required of them. Killing time is a pleasant enough occupation when first undertaken, but it wearies one more quickly than any other pastime invented for the amusement of the fortunate, and far more certainly than any labour, no matter how arduous it may be.

Certainly happiness is not to be found in idleness, although a holiday now and then, and a total cessation from one's ordinary occupation will work a revolution in the methods of the most diligent, and send him back in time, fresh, invigorated, and eager to do what lies before him. Many women fail to realize that it is better to be too fully occupied than not to be occupied at all. It is only when they have served an apprenticeship to life that they begin to see that it's better to be tired than idle; to do rather than simply to be.

Change is the secret of happiness for some people; monotony is what a

IN OUR LIGHTER MOMENTS

In mathematics she was first,
Her poems are a dream,
In science she is deeply versed,
In logic she's supreme.
The Latin prize to her belongs,
She topped the class in Greek,
And now she's singing comic songs
At two pounds ten a week.

We all remember Barrie's delightful story of the newspaper men who received a telegram during a small war in West Africa, saying that the natives had taken Umbrage. They looked up Umbrage on the map and could not find it, so put the news in with the heading: "Umbrage captured with Great Slaughter."

Similar to this is an error pounced upon by the Bookman. An American newspaper telling of Prince George's tour in Greece, said that His Royal Highness had landed "in Mufti." Doubtless they too fruitlessly searched the map.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

There has been a revival of interest in the French novelist, George Sand recently. Her letters to Alfred de Musset and his to her, during the progress of their famous and unhappy love affair, have just been published. One commentator on these letters says "It is little wonder they did not get on together. He was nervous, impetuous, artistic; she was calm, industrious, domestic. A sentence of de Musset's exemplifies the difference." He says: "I have worked all day. In the evening I wrote ten lines and drank a bottle of brandy. She has drunk two litres of milk and written half a volume." One can feel the irritated envy of a nervous temperament behind these words.

There is at present a French invasion of London going on. There are no less than three theatres given over to French actors and French plays. Bernhardt and Rejane divide the honours between them. The divine Sarah is playing in La Sorciere, Sardou's latest drama and one which has not elicited unstinted praise from the critics.

REPLIES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Stranger.—It is not necessary for the bride to provide the household linen, although it is often done.

N. R.—I am sorry, but I know of no reliable place to which I can refer you in the matter.

A. W.—It would not be correct to give her jewellery unless you are engaged.

M. X. L.—It is very foolish of a girl to give her photograph to masculine acquaintances, and unless you were very old friends you were quite right in refusing. 2. It would have been highly incorrect to have called. 3. Accept the invitation, and greet him pleasantly if you meet him.

Thos.—There are no expenses other than the giving of a wedding present entailed by the position of best man. The best man attends the groom, hands the clergyman his fee, looks after the bridesmaid, and usually sees the bride and groom off on their trip.

Nectar.—Unless your mother is in mourning, I would advise her to by all means wear a coloured gown at your wedding. If she insists on wearing black try and persuade her to have it made of some sheer fabric, and made over white. 2. Yes. 3. The bride's father should give her away, or if he is unable to be present, her eldest brother or some near relative. In England the bride's mother, if a widow, sometimes gives her daughter away, but it is very seldom done in this country.

Anxious. — To preserve raspberries, choose large fine berries which are quite ripe and freshly gathered. Look them over carefully to make sure there are no worms or insects hidden in their hollow cups. Then weigh the fruit and allow equal weight in sugar. Spread a thin layer of sugar on the bottom of a preserving kettle and then a layer of berries, and so on until all the fruit and sugar is used, having the top layer of sugar. Throw a cloth over the fruit and let it stand over night. In the morning stem ripe currants, mash and squeeze the juice through a cheesecloth and allow a pint of currant juice to every two pounds of the fruit and sugar weighed together. Set the kettle containing the crushed berries over the fire, add the currant juice in the proportion given above, and stir them together until they boil. Skim carefully and stir the berries often enough to prevent their sticking to the kettle, but do not break them. Cook until they look quite clear.

Amy.—I would not advise you to enter a long engagement, especially as you are both so young. I don't suppose you will believe me, but nevertheless it is quite true that people's ideals change in a wonderful manner as they grow older, and what pleased them at seventeen, seldom appeals to them when five and twenty. Wait a year or two before pledging yourself, and then if you are still both of the same mind it will be time enough to become engaged, especially as I will be several years after that befor the wedding can take place. With your fiance in India, you would have a very quiet time in a small Canadian town, for engaged girls do not go about a much as they did previously. My reasons for seeking to dissuade you may seem somewhat worldly, but they are fair sound, and the time is sure to come when you will agree with me, no matter how differently you may regard my views at present.

Alpn.—In Canada a girl seldom "comes out" before she is eighteen or nineteen. In England she sometimes makes her debut at an earlier age.

Housekeeper.—I will repeat the recipe for tomato fritters, which I am glad you found so successful. Cook half a can of tomatoes, or an equal amount of fresh tomatoes, four cloves, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one slice of onion, for 20 minutes; rub through a fine strainer; add one teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper; melt two tablespoonfuls of butter; add to it one-fourth cup of corn starch; then add the strained tomato, stirring constantly until thickened; turn into a buttered shallow pan, and when very cold turn out on a board; cut in squares or oblong pieces; roll in dried bread crumbs, then in beaten egg, then in crumbs again; fry in smoking hot deep fat; when a good brown, drain on paper, arrange on a folded napkin; serve hot.

THE HOME-MAKER'S DEPARTMENT.

For any one who is fond of fish there is nothing nicer by way of variety than fish chowder. The visitor to the Maine coast knows how delicious it is when properly made.

A recipe from the Boston Cooking School is as follows: Cod, haddock, lake fish, pickerel, bass, etc., are all good in chowders. The fish wants to be very fresh. Skin and remove the flesh from the bones in two long fillets. Cut in two-inch pieces and put in a cool place. Cover the head, bodybones and trimmings with cold water, and let it come slowly to the boiling point and simmer for half an hour. For three or four pounds of fish try out the fat from two or three ounces of fat, salt pork, cut small. In this saute a sliced onion without discolouring it. Add the contents of the pan to the saucepan in which the head, etc., are simmering and strain the liquid over the fish. Have ready a quart of sliced potatoes parboiled and drained. Add these to the fish with a tablespoonful of salt and a generous dash of paprika and let simmer until the potatoes are tender. Then add three cups of hot milk or tomato puree (cooked tomatoes strained) and one-fourth a cup of butter in little pieces.

Put about a dozen buttered crackers into the soup tureen and pour over the chowder. Serve pickles and dry crackers with it.

Use Some Moderation.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Sir,—During the last few weeks, I have noticed some letters regarding the seemingly much vexed question of "whipping children at school."

Do you not think if these excitable mothers, who seem to consider that to whip a child is to slaughter it morally and physically, would use a little self-control and moderation in their language when writing their letters, would be much more convincing. Surely nothing can be gained by writing hysterically.

De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, sear or paralyze the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories, because it is not poisonous; therefore, it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilatories, and does not break off the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. De MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is indorsed by physicians surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

De MIRACLE will be mailed to any address, sealed in plain wrapper, on receipt of $1.00. Your money back without question (no red tape) if it fails to do all that is claimed for it.

I cannot sing the old songs,
'Tis four years since I've tried,
Nor hum the tune I used to sing,
Of which the old cow died.
To sing those songs just now would be
Most inconvenient;
T'would place me in a quandary,
And bust the government.

I do not like the old songs.
I'm not in harmony
With free trade schemes and idle dreams
Of reciprocity.
My music now is up to date,
From ancient error free,
Not Drummond deals nor Yukon steals
Can mar my melody.

I would forget the old songs,
Nor e'er recall that ye
Once swore to turn the rascals out,
And rule with honesty,
That we were those who cursed Sir John,
And cursed the great N. P.,
Who cursed monopolies, and cursed
Protected industry.

Too long we sung those old songs,
Till all a change desired,
Like an organ grinders' monkey
Of one tune getting tired.
We fired them out, those old, old songs,
And now I try to troll
Some really modern music from
The repertoire we stole.

The Higher Criticism—No. 8.

THE PENTATEUCH.

THE PENTATEUCH. (Continued.)

In our last article we pointed out that as a result of the critical examination of the Pentateuch it was seen to resemble the previously considered books of Proverbs and Psalms in being a composite work. The Pentateuch was not written all at one time, nor all by one man, any more than the Proverbs and the Psalms. It is, like them, a growth. The Book of Proverbs enshrines the essence of the wisdom of the Hebrews, as it found expression through many generations. The Book of Psalms enshrines the sacred poetry of the Hebrews. In like manner, the Pentateuch is the Statute Book of the Hebrews, and contains the legal code, not of one period, but of their entire history. But just as Solomon is the founder of Hebrew wisdom, and so gave his name to it all, and just as David, for a like reason, gave his name to the Psalter, so the name of Moses, the founder of Hebrew law and of the Hebrew state, is attached to the entire Pentateuch.

The Higher Critics are agreed in finding at least three separate documents in the Pentateuch, documents which were perhaps finally welded together and published as one work by Ezra the scribe. (1) A historical document, itself the combination of two historical other documents, and indicated by the letters J E. (2) The Book of Deuteronomy, indicated by the letter D; and (3) the Priests' Code found mostly in the books of Numbers and Leviticus, indicated by the letters P C.

Such in briefest possible statement are the results of the criticism of the Pentateuch. We proceed now to give the main lines of reasoning which have compelled so many scholars to come to these conclusions. (1) More than two hundred years ago a few scholars had noticed occasional verses in the Pentateuch which seemed to indicate a later date than that of Moses. But nothing like a systematic examination of these phenomena was made until Astruc, a Belgian physician, supplied the clue to the maze by his observation that in different passages different names of God were used.

If the readers of this article will turn to the first chapter of Genesis they will find the word "God" throughout, and down to the 4th verse of Chapter II. But from the 5th verse of Chapter II. down to nearly the end of Chapter IV. the name "Lord God" is used throughout. The significance of this change is somewhat obscured in the English version, because with us the word "Lord" is a title, not a name. But it is really the name "Jehovah" and the Hebrew equivalent of God is "Elohim." So in Genesis I. we have "Elohim" as the name of God, and in Genesis II. we have "Jehovah Elohim."

Further examination showed that passages in which "Elohim" was used for God, and other passages in which "Jehovah Elohim," or "Jehovah" only, was used, ran through the first part of the Pentateuch, and that not a few indications pointed to the fact that the different names of God were connected with two narratives which had been subsequently pieced together. It is not easy within the compass of a short article to fully demonstrate this, but we will give one illustration of many.

Critics have long been convinced that we have two narratives of the Flood in the Book of Genesis. They agree in substance, but they differ in detail. We can show these two narratives in the following columns, but the reader who is really interested in the subject should compare the quotations with the Bible narrative. We shall use "Jehovah" for "Lord" and "Elohim" for "God," where in the English Bible we read Lord and God respectively:

JEHOVISTIC NARRATIVE.	ELOHISTIC NARRATIVE.
"And Jehovah saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. (Gen. VI. 5.)	"These are the generations of Noah. Noah was a righteous man and perfect in his generations. Noah walked with Elohim, and Noah begat three sons, Shem, Ham and Japheth. (VI. 9, 19.)
"And it repented Jehovah that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. (VI. 6.)	"And the earth was corrupt before Elohim, and the earth was filled with violence. (VI. 1")
"And Jehovah said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the ground; both man and beast, and creeping thing, and fowl of the air, for it repenteth me that I have made them. (VI. 7.)	"And Elohim saw the earth and behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth. (VI. 12.)
"But Noah found grace in the eyes of Jehovah." (VI. 8.)	"And Elohim said unto Noah, the end of all flesh is come before me: for the earth is filled with violence through them, and behold, I will destroy them with the earth." (VI. 13.)

The reader will observe that each side of this column contains virtually the same story, viz., the wickedness of man, and God's determination on that ground to destroy the earth. But one man is righteous and he finds favour with God. Omitting the description of the ark, which is found only in the Elohistic narrative (VI. 14-16), we proceed with the double narrative:

JEHOVISTIC NARRATIVE.	ELOHISTIC NARRATIVE.
"For yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights, and every living thing that I have made will I destroy from off the face of the ground. (VII. 4.)	"And I, behold I do bring the flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven; everything that is in the earth shall die. (VI. 17.)
"And Jehovah said unto Noah, come thou and all thy house into the ark; for thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation. (VII. 1.)	"But I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shall come into the ark, thou, and thy sons, and thy wife and thy sons' wives with thee. (VI. 18.)
"Of every clean beast thou shalt take to thee seven and seven, the male and his female; and of the beasts that are not clean two, the male and his female. (VII. 2.)	"And of every living thing of all flesh two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee; they shall be male and female, (VI. 19.)
"Of the fowl also of the air, seven and seven, male and female; to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth." (VII. 3.)	"Of the fowl after their kind, and of the cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the ground after its kind, two of every sort shall come unto thee to keep them alive. And take thou unto thee of all food that is eaten and gather it to thee and it shall be for food for thee and for them. (VI. 20, 21.)
"And Noah did according to all that Jehovah commanded him." (VII. 5.)	"Thus did Noah, according to all that Elohim commanded him, so did he. (VI: 22.)

In this second part of the narrative, its double character is equally obvious, but there is a striking difference. In the Elohistic narrative two of every creature are to go into the ark, and this is the version which has fastened itself upon the popular mind. For, in the children's toys, not only are the lions and tigers and other unclean beasts arranged in pairs, but also the sheep and oxen. But the Jehovistic narrative specifies seven males and seven females of the clean beasts. This was not in order to supply Noah and his family for food, since animal food was not eaten before the Flood (compare Genesis I. 29, with Genesis IX. 3), but it was for sacrificial purposes, and it accords with this that the Elohistic narrative says nothing of the sacrifice Noah offered upon coming out of the ark, but it is recorded by the Jehovistic narrator that Noah offered a great sacrifice of every clean beast and fowl to Jehovah. (Genesis VIII. 20.)

It would be possible to give many instances of the double narrative of the history contained in the Pentateuch and the book of Joshua did space allow of it.

(2) The second line of reasoning which establishes the composite character of the Pentateuch is based upon an examination and comparison of the three main legal codes it contains. These are (a) the Book of the Covenant (Exodus XX.-XXIII.), (b) the Book of Deuteronomy, (3) the Priests' Code (Leviticus and Numbers). An examination of these shows that the Book of the Covenant is the simplest, the Book of Deuteronomy is more elaborate, but the Priests' Code represents the most detailed ritualistic scheme of sacrifice and worship. Thus in the Book of the Covenant sacrifice may be offered in many places. "Altars of earth thou shalt make unto me and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, thy sheep and thine with his family in any decent comfort in London.

Many attempts have been made during the last generation to improve the housing conditions of the poor of the metropolis. Laws have been passed requiring better, safer and more permanent dwelling places and insisting upon improved sanitary conditions generally. The railroads have been compelled to run a number of working men's trains at reduced fares, so as to permit the wage earner to live at a distance; but the service of many of the lines still leave much to be wished for. The real underlying cause of the fearful congestion of many London districts is the lack of a complete system of cheap and rapid transportation. The omnibuses and tramways are very slow, and do not provide anything like the facilities offered by American electric railways. There are several underground railways which take the people out, and the service of the Great Eastern Railway is said to be entirely admirable. Very much, however, remains to be done before the working population of London can be released from the over-crowding and congestion under which it now suffers.

Fortunately, some improvement is being made in the conditions under which the London poor live, by public-spirited citizens and by the city government. There are several foundations for establishing model tenements and model cottages, and these residences show a vast improvement in the conditions of living. I saw some of these tenements, which appeared to be clean and well appointed, and I noticed that in many of the windows there were flowers, which show that the residents take an interest and a pleasure in their surroundings. These model dwellings are organized on what is called a four per cent. philanthropic basis; they seem to have done much good, although by reason of the high rents they do not reach the very poorest classes. The city government has also done excellent work in the direction of improving the homes of the people—largely through the initiative of John Burns and other radical members; and the London County Council has erected big tenements in various parts of the city, while others are in course of construction. These places are both clean and comfortable, and are eagerly sought after by the people in search of rooms. The result has not been, as is supposed, to prevent private individuals or companies from putting up new tenements, although I am told that these are not being built as rapidly now as before, owing to the rise in the value of land.

What London needs, and will probably secure eventually, is improved rapid transit, and the building of tenements and the tearing down of the thousands of little shanties and rookeries which now disfigure the place. Until some such reforms are inaugurated, the poor of the city will continue to suffer from the diseases and the high death-rate which prevails in [illegible] mon ills of childhood. How Great Britain Regards the Dundonald Incident.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in its comments on the Dundonald incident, voices succintly the views expressed by a large majority of the influential and important British reviewers and journals, under the heading "A Fool's Paradise," it says:

"The Canadian Government must have the uncomfortable feeling to-day that in their resentment of criticism they have only managed to call down upon themselves its heaviest and most galling artillery. By dismissing Lord Dundonald they have merely unmuzzled him and given a free hand to one whose firm purpose it is to drag into the light of day some sinister features and consequences of their policy.

"The ex-Commander of the Canadian Militia has lost no time in justifying the conception of his conduct formed by those who knew him in this country. His complaint of political meddling with the force was no thoughtless or impulsive exhibition of petulance. It was the deliberate choice of means for the attainment of an end of the highest importance: 'I was convinced,' he says in his long and impressive manifesto cabled from Ottawa to-day, 'that it was the only means of serving the Militia of Canada.'

"When an officer of Lord Dundonald's status and reputation is driven to a technical breach of discipline, in order to fulfil what he believes to be his conscientious duty, it raises the whole matter above the pedantries of 'constitutional usage' quoted against him by his late official superiors, and throws another and a far graver onus upon the latter than the simple task of maintaining their own dignity. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues have published a long statement to prove that they had the right, as no one denied, of giving Lord Dundonald his dismissal. But the carrying of their point has only brought them face to face with the question of their own proceedings, and the use which they have made of their responsibility for the security of Canada against invasion.

"Lord Dundonald charges them with neglecting that duty, and with concealing their neglect of it from the Canadian public. On the former count we may hear in due course what they have got to say. But the description which Lord Dundonald gives of his endeavours to acquaint the Colony with the situation, and of the steady and persistent suppression of the knowledge he sought to impart by the politicans over him, makes it difficult to censure the course by which he finally proceeded to disclose the truth to the Canadian public. He had employed, he tells us, all the methods of "constitutional usage," and employed them in vain. Report after report had been sent in to describe the defects of the force under his command, only to be buried in the pigeon-holes of Ottawa, or to be mutilated prior to publication. At last, realising that he lay helplessly in the toils of a political conspiracy of concealment, he chose the means with which we are acquainted to warn the people of the Colony that the organization of their militia is a sham and that "they are, as regards their preparation for war and their state of readiness to resist aggression successfully, living in a fool's paradise." Canadians will not, we are certain, be too censorious upon an officer whose mind was burdened with such knowledge, for selecting the only means left to him of making a national danger known to those whom it most immediately concerned.

"The disclosures which Lord Dundonald now feels himself at liberty to make present a rough sketch of the difficulties under which he has laboured since his appointment by the Canadian Government. His business was to put the colony in an adequate state of defence. There were extensive deficiencies in the armament of the militia and its means of instruction. "The militia lacks guns, rifles, ammunition, equipment, and all that is necessary to make a fighting force efficient." Certain units are seriously below their proper strength, and there are only eleven pack saddles for ammunition in the whole Ordnance department. The North-West is without defences or guns, and "patriotic offers to organize urgently-needed corps" are ignored by the Ministry.

"To us at home there is a painful familiarity about some details of the picture, and also about the excuses tendered for them. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's colleagues, like some other people we know, are great economists; they have no funds to make good these trifling defects, which they were so careful to keep from public observation. But they had money for other, and rather strange, purposes. "Sir Frederick Borden was anxious to have a number of senior and highly-paid posts," and he did succeed in giving "seven officers of the rank of lieutenant-colonel and upwards to a corps of about a hundred men." It is a fine thing to have plenty of lieutenant-colonels, no doubt; but at a time when, as Lord Dundnald says, "the most elementary requirements of the militia were neglected for want of money," such plenitude of commanding talent might have been spared if the salary list would have provided a gun or two, or a few more pack-saddles.

"It is true that lieutenant-colonels have votes and electoral influence, while guns and pack-saddles have not, but Canadians will scarcely need to have it explained that you cannot disperse an enemy at your gates by a heavy poll. In the seven lieutenant-colonels we seem to have the crux of the whole controversy between Lord Dundonald and his late superiors. The Commander endeavoured to have the militia made an efficient fighting machine. The Ministry preferred, unless their acts do them much injustice, to make it excel as a political auxiliary. "Constitutional usage" should prevent outsiders, perhaps, from hinting which of the two policies is the more patriotic. But "constitutional misusage" may reach a point, we imagine, at which the sense and spirit of an intelligent colony will insist upon parting company."

"Slater" Shoes at Lachine.

One of the busiest stores in Lachine is that of Mr. P. Donnelly, who has the agency for the famous "Slater" Shoes. Mr. Donnelly draws his patronage, not only from the regular residents of the pretty suburb up the St. Lawrence, but just now is doing a thriving business with the many Montrealers who are summering there. The "Slater" Shoes are so well and so favourably known that as soon as the visitors found that Mr. Donnelly carried a complete stock, they made his store their shopping headquarters.

Being so near the Slater Shoe factory, Mr. Donnelly is thus able to show all the newest styles in tan and patent leather Oxfords, white shoes for boating and tennis, as well as the proper things for dress occasions. This is also an advantage in being able to quickly obtain just the right sizes and shapes to fit every foot, should they not be in stock.

Mr. Donnelly controls the sole agency for the sale of the famous "Slater" Shoes in Lachine.

Mr. Dooley on Mr. Carnegie's Hero Fund.

(Copyright, 1904, by McClure, Phillips and Company, and pullbshed in the Montreal Star by Special Arrangement.)

"It's no use," said Mr. Dooley. "I give it up."

"What's that?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"I can't get away from him," Mr. Dooley went on. 'I can't escape me ol' frind Andhrew Carnaygie. I've avided him succissfully f'r manny years. Th' bookless libry an' th' thoughtless univarsity niver touched me. I'm not enough iv abrunette to share annything he done f'r Booker Washin'ton. Up to now, he been onable to land on me annywhere. But he's got me at last. He's r-run me to earth. I throw up me hands. Come on, Andbrew, an' paint ye'er illusthrees name on me. Stencil me with that gloryous name."

"What ar're ye talkin' about?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"He has created a hayro fund," said Mr. Dooley. "He has put aside five millyon dollars or it may be fifty, but annyhow more thin there is in me sugar bowl, to buy medals f'r hayroes in th' daily walks iv life—sogers, polismen, an invistors in steel common barred. Suppose wan day ye an I ar-re walkin' home fr'm a picnic an' ye thrip ye'ersilf into th' watters iv th' Illinye an' Mitchigan canal. I cannot see me frind dhrown an' besides, Hinnissy, I'd hate to lose ye as a sparrin' partner. A man can on'y talk good to his infeeryors an' ye're a great stimyiant to convarsation. So I take off em hat an' coat an' vest, hang thim on a three, pull off me Congress gaiters an' lay thim in th' grass, hang me cravat on th' fince, offer up a short prayer, an' lay down on th' bank and pull ye out. I grumble at ye f'r ye'er carelessness an' ye want to fight me f'r bein' so rough in savin' ye'er life whin ye cud have waded out without help, an' I break th' sthrap iv me gaiters pullin' thim on, an' we go home quarellin' an' jawin' an' ye'er wife thinks I pushed ye in. But th' talk gets ar-round th' neighbourhood, an' wan day a comity steps into me place, headed be a little dumpling iv a man, an' wan iv thim pins me hands while Andhrew Carnaygie nails on me chist a medal all in goold, with this inscription—here it is—that Father Kelly wrote out f'r me:

To Martin Dooley, Hayro,
This Medal is Prisinted by
ANDHREW CARNAYGIE

Dulcy et Decorum est pro Carnaygie
To Spoil Ye'er Sunday Clothes.

"I'l be so mad, I'l throw ye in again but that won't help mathers. I'm a hayro f'r good an' all. I'm f'iver doomed to be a sandwich man an' parade th' sthreets advartisin' th' gin'rosity an' noble charackter iv Andhrew Carnaygie. 'If ye want philanthropy go to Carnaygie's. Largest assortment iv canned charity in th' wurruld. Save a life an' get a medal.'

"Iv coorse, I won't be good f'r annything else. I'll have to sell out th' liquor store. What's a hayro doin', pushin' bottles acrost a bar an' mendin' a refractory beer pump? I'll quit wurruk f'r good an' hang ar-round a livery stable pitchin' horseshoes. They'se nawthin' a hayro with a medal can do f'r a livin' that ain't beneath him. Wanst a hayro, always a hayro. Afther awhile I'll be lurkin' in th' corner iv th' bridge an' pushin' me frinds into th' river an' haulin' thim out f'r a medal. I'll become an habichool Carnaygie hayro an' good f'r nawthin else. Carnaygie hayro an' good f'r nawthin' else. No, me frind, don't iver fall into th' canal whin I'm ar-round. I might be lookin' th' other way.

"An' think iv th' position ye ar-re in all this time, th' man who's life I've saved. Nawthin' cud be lower. Ye'er ravmimbered f'river as a foolish person that cudden't swim an' was dhragged f'm a wathry grave be th' owner iv th' Carnaygie medal. Ye'er wife despises ye because ye had to have ye'er life saved. She was always sure that if she iver fell into th' water ye'er sthrong arm an' risolute heart wud riscue her, an' lo an' behold! whin ye tumble in ye'ersilf ye have to be rescued be a stout gintleman in the li-

"I wanst knowed a la-ad that was more or less riscued fr'm a wathry grave be a tailor be th' name iv Muggins. He took th' la'ad be th' ar'rms an' walked ashore with him. Well, th' ag'nized parents, not wantin' to appear stingy befure th' neighbors, prisinted Muggins with a goold watch an' Muggins become a hayro. Th' la-ad didn't think much iv it. He'd have done th' same fr Muggins. But afther awhile he found that Muggins was chained to him f'r life. As a boy, he was spoken is as th' fellow that had his life saved be Muggins, th' tailor. As he grew older he was still Muggins' boy. Muggins wasn't much to look at, bein' a little, bow-legged man, but afther he become a hayro, he acted th' part. Me young frind cudden't get away fr'm him. If he was playin' baseball in th' corner lot, Muggins was lanin' over th' fence with an indulgent smile. Whin he grajated with honors at th' Brothers School, Muggins sat in th' front seat with a look iv fond attintion on his face. Whin th' Brother Supeeryor handed out th' first prize, he remarked that it gave him great pleasure to reward th' ability an' larnin' iv this young man in th' prisince iv th' hayro to whom he owed his life. It was th' same in after years. He become a lawyer, an' Muggins niver missed a day in coort. The' lawyer f'r th' opposition always managed to appeal to his finer feelin's in th' prisince iv th' man to whom he owed his life. If it was a suit over a pair iv pants, me frind always lost it. He niver wud take a case again' a tailor f'r th' jury wud always vote again' him. In pollyticks he thried to succeed, but Muggins hung on to him. Whin th' chairman iv th' meetin' arose, he invaryably began: 'Ladies an' gintleman, befure introjoocin' th' speaker iv th' avenin', I want to presint to yet th' man to whom he owes his life, an' who is here on th' platform to-night, Misther Alphonso Muggins.' Me frind was always supposed to put his handkerchief to his eyes at these wurruds an' with falthrin' step escoort him to th' front. Wan night he tol' me he give Muggins a kick. He said he cudden't help it, Th' timptation was too sthrong f'r human endurance. Muggins didn't mind it. He niver minded annyahing. He was a hayro.

"Afther awhile he took to dhrink. Habichool hayroes always do, an' whin in dhrink he was melancholy or quarrelsome, as dhrunk men an' hayroes sometimes ar-re. Clancy wud be settin' quitely in a cafe with some friends whin Muggins wud blow in, an' set down with his hat over his eyes. Th' frind wud have to inthrajooce him with a catch in his voice an' a tear in his eyes. 'Boys,' he'd say, 'I want to inthrajooce ye to Alphonse Muggins. Gawd bless him, boys, he saved me life.' 'Is that so?' says wan iv his companyons. 'Ye betcher life it is,' says Muggins. 'Did I save his life? Well, ask him. Ye ask him if I din save his life. Ye just ask him. If he don lie about it, he'll tell ye who saved his life. Din I leap into th' ragin' flood an' riscue him at th' risk iv me life? Maybe, I din. Maybe it was a man in Milwaukee that done that. Looky here. Look at this clock. I got fr'm his folks, if ye don believe me. An' what's he done f'r me? Tell me that, will ye? Who am I? I'm nothin'. I'm Muggins th' tailor. An' what's he? Look at him, will ye, with his dimon' pin an' his plug hat so gay. An' where'd he be if it wasn't f'r me? But it's all right, boys. It's all right. Life is a cur'ous place an' gratichood is a thing unknown.' An' he wud weep an' go to sleep. Sometimes he wud fight. He punched Clancy two or three times on account iv his ingratichood. Clancy had to support him an' bail him out an' get th' clock out iv th' pawnshop ivry Saturdah night. But an end comes to all things. Hayroes don't live long. They can't th' way they live. An' wan day Muggins wint th' way iv all our kind, proud an' simple, coward an' brave man, hayroes an' hayro worshipper. Th' pa-apers had an account iv his fun'ri. 'Among th' mourners none was more affected thin Congressman Clancy, whose life, near forty years ago, this humble hayro had saved fr'm a wathry doom in Lake Mitchigan.' Th' rayporthers didn't obsarve that Clancy tamped th' grave with his foot to make sure it was solid. He wint home with a light heart, an' says to his wife: 'Mother, to-day I begin me rale career. We burrid Muggins.' 'But Cornelius,' says th' good woman, 'ye owed him ye'er life.' 'Praps,' says Clancy, 'bnt,' he says, 'he took it out in thrade long ago.'

"No, sir, Hinnissy, if ye see me in disthress kindly call f'r profissyonal help. I'll be riscued be a fireman or a polisman because it's all in their day's wurruk, but amachoor hayroes is a danger whin they're riscuin' ye an' a worry iver afther. If I owe me life to annywan let it be to a man who won't thry to collect it. Annyhow, what is hayroism? If a man stops a runaway team that is dhragin' an empty milk waggon into a ditch, he's not a hayro. He's a fool. Th' line is lightly dhrawn annyhow. A hayro is often a succissful fool an' a fool is an unsuccissful hayro. I've heard Andrew Carnaygie called a hayro, but I don't believe it. If he was he wudden't be givin' medals f'r hayroism. If he was a profissyonal swimmer, he wudden't think anything iv savin' people fr'm dhrownin'. If he was a fireman he'd think nawthin' iv carryin' a man down th' fire-escape iv a burnin' buildin'. If he was a stable boy, he'd find that he'd have to catch runaway horses or lose his job. I wudden't hesitate to go down a laddher on ye'er shouldhers, but if ye thried to save me fr'm drownin', I'd scream f'r help. What wud I be doin' thryin' to stop a runaway team? But if ye fell through my coal hole into me cellar, I'd organize an hayroic riscue. I know th' way. Hayroes ought to know th' way to be safe. If they do they don't need anny medals. If they don't they'd betther turn in an alarm.

"There ar-re hayroes an' hayroes. We're all hayroes more or less Ye're a hayro ye'ersilf, towin' those tired feet afther ye ivry mornin' whin th' whistle blows. An' be hivens, if ye'er wife had a medal f'r ivry act iv hayroism she's performed, she'd have as manny now as Sousa. Hayroes in th' humble walks iv life, says he? Well, ther's enough iv thim to break him if he gives each wan iv thim th' on'y kind iv medals they need, th' kind th' govermint foundhry makes with an eagle on th' back.

"Wel, annyhow, he's a very gin'rous man an' he desarves ivrybody's gratichood," said Mr. Hennessy.

"Oh, as for that," said Mr. Dooley, "what good wud my little gratichood do him? He'll get gratichood enough. He tends to that himself."

"A hayro is often a succissful fool, an' a fool is an unsuccissful hayro."

"How the London Workingman Lives."

(John Mitchell, head of the Union of Anthracite Coal Miners and probably the best known and most influential labour leader in the United States, has lately gone to England where he is to study the labour conditions and problems there. His letters setting forth his investigations and their results will appear in the Star from time to time, this paper having secured the exclusive right to their publication in Canada.)

(Copyrighted 1904 by John Mitchell. All rights reserved.)

The most interesting thing which I have seen about London is not St. Paul's Cathedral or Westminister Abbey, but the homes of the London working men. The stranger in London is struck by the endless streets, extending hundreds of miles, and containing row after row of small houses, in which reside the men who have made the city what it is. The impression is very different from that of New York. In that great American city the streets are banked on both sides by huge tenements, each of them containing hundreds of inhabitants. London, on the contrary, is a city of small houses, and the population, instead of living in the air, as in New York, is spread over an immense and ever-increasing area. It is almost impossible for the casual visitor to understand or appreciate the immensity of London. A mere statement that it is greater than any other city in the world, that its population is larger than that of Scotland or Ireland, or of any State of the Union, except New York and Pennsylvania, does not mean half so much as a 'bus-ride through the endless miles of streets in the working men's districts.

I have spent many hours in various sections of this city where wage-earners dwell, and have gathered vivid impressions from what I have seen and from what has been told me. This city seems like a great, over-grown town. Its population is increasing by leaps and bounds. Every train brings in new people from the country or from foreign shores; and fresh throngs are yearly dumped into the great, seething, roaring sea of humanity which makes up the vast metropolis. Houses go up at the rate of tens of thousands per year, but still there is no room for the newcomers who crowd in so rapidly. There is no room to breathe; no room to live; no chance for the average working man of moderate income to live with comfort and in healthy and pleasant surroundings.

The great cry of London is for rooms. The city does not have to deal with the problem which confronts Manhattan, whose two millions are pressed in between the North and the East rivers. Here there is a chance to expand in every direction; to the north, to the south, to the east to the west; but hitherto this extension has not been sufficiently rapid to keep apace with the ever-increasing population. There is still considerably over a million working men and working women in the great city, and these must be accomodated with residences more or less close to their work. If there were an extensive and rapid system of electric traction with overhead and underground railways leading to all parts of the city, the average working man might live at a distance of eight or ten miles from the centre of the metropolis and still get to his work in time. As it is, the great mass of the working population is congested in the inner portions of the town, with the result that the houses of the people are crowded beyond their capacity.

Even the most crowded districts of London are probably not quite so densely populated as certain congested portions of New York City, as, for instance, some of the wards on both the east and west side; but the actual conditions are worse. There is more room in a six-story tenement than in a two-story hut. In London hundreds of thousands of people swarm in dirty houses and rookeries, in cellars, in back alleys, and in tumble-down shanties, compared to which some of the worst tenements of New York are like palaces. The over-crowding becomes worse with each succeeding year. If we count those people as over-crowded who live two or more in a room, it will be found that considerably over a million of London's inhabitants would come within this class. There are many who live four in a room, many who live six and eight, and there are even places where twelve persons occupy one room.

In certain sections of the city the over-crowding is even more intense. Taking London as a whole, thirty out of every hundred people are living in an over-crowded condition—in other words, two or more to a room; in some sections, fifty-five to sixty per cent. live in a similar state. In the famous White-chapel district, over one-seventh of the population is living four or more to a room.

We hear terrible stories of how the poorer classes of this giant metropolis live, or rather exist, in the houses which their means permit them to occupy. A room may be divided between two families, lodgers may be taken in; or a bed may be leased or divided between a man who works by the day and one who works by the night. It is impossible to see the conditions, and quite impossible to realize them. The over-crowding exists not only in the Whitechapel district, but in West London, and in many other parts of the city. The pressure for rooms near to the centre of the town causes rents to rise constantly, and the tenant is at the mercy of the landlord or his agents who exact from him the uttermost penny. The tenants rebel occasionally against this continued increase of the rent, and boycotts, and even riots have occurred but all this does not avail, the price of rooms still rises and crowding becomes worse and worse. The tenant who does not pay promptly is speedily evicted, and there are always plenty of others who will take the place the moment it is vacated.

Even rooms such as they are, are not always available. When you crowd over a million people in a narrow circle and force them to be near their work; when you pour into this already teeming population tens of thousands of new arrivals; when the demand for rooms increases faster than the supply, it becomes impossible, sooner or later, to find places for the newcomers; the new houses do not accommodate the new people, and rooms in the old houses, dingy and dirty and unhealthy as they may be, are not always available. Not seldom it has happened that working men, holding jobs and with money in their pockets, have actually been unable to secure any sort of rooms for their families, and have been obliged to apply to the workhouses. Even rooms which are secured after much effort are unworthy of the name. Damp, grimy cellars, reeking with an accumulation of vith; dirty, tumble-down shanties in the rear of other dirty houses, at the back of blind alleys; old rickety dwellings strung together in crooked lanes; all filled with countless throngs of men and women, and with hordes of little children, are a commonplace sight in this wealthy city. The stranger in London might walk miles and miles through streets of dark, low, forbidding houses, with smoke-covered, blackened walls, filling to overflowing with human beings, who are taxed to their utmost paying power for the privilege of living in these horrible hovels.

When one compares the average wage of the working man in London with the prices of rooms, the latter seems extremely exorbitant. Rents of rooms seems to average from 50 cents to $1.00 and more per week; and this rent often rises to one-fourth, and not infrequently to one-third, of the income of the working men. There is a movement now on foot to compel a minimum wage of 25s. (or $6.25) per week, since below that sum it is practically impossible for a working man to live with his family in any decent comfort in London.

Many attempts have been made during the last generation to improve the housing conditions of the poor of the metropolis. Laws have been passed requiring better, safer and more permanent dwelling places and insisting upon improved sanitary conditions generally. The railroads have been compelled to run a number of working men's trains at reduced fares, so as to permit the wage earner to live at a distance; but the service of many of the lines still leave much to be wished for. The real underlying cause of the fearful congestion of many London districts is the lack of a complete system of cheap and rapid transportation. The omnibuses and tramways are very slow, and do not provide anything like the facilities offered by American electric railways. There are several underground railways which take the people out, and the service of the Great Eastern Railway is said to be entirely admirable. Very much, however, remains to be done before the working population of London can be released from the over-crowding and congestion under which it now suffers.

Fortunately, some improvement is being made in the conditions under which the London poor live, by public-spirited citizens and by the city government. There are several foundations for establishing model tenements and model cottages, and these residences show a vast improvement in the conditions of living. I saw some of these tenements, which appeared to be clean and well appointed, and I noticed that in many of the windows there were flowers, which show that the residents take an interest and a pleasure in their surroundings. These model dwellings are organized on what is called a four per cent. philanthropic basis; they seem to have done much good, although by reason of the high rents they do not reach the very poorest classes. The city government has also done excellent work in the direction of improving the homes of the people—largely through the initiative of John Burns and other radical members; and the London County Council has erected big tenements in various parts of the city, while others are in course of construction. These places are both clean and comfortable, and are eagerly sought after by the people in search of rooms. The result has not been, as is supposed, to prevent private individuals or companies from putting up new tenements, although I am told that these are not being built as rapidly now as before, owing to the rise in the value of land.

What London needs, and will probably secure eventually, is improved rapid transit, and the building of tenements and the tearing down of the thousands of little shanties and rookeries which now disfigure the place. Until some such reforms are inaugurated, the poor of the city will continue to suffer from the diseases and the high death-rate which prevails in the working men's districts. As one walks through the sections of the metropolis chiefly occupied by wage earners, one is forcibly and painfully struck by the pallor of many of the inhabitants, and by their sickly and anaemic condition. Not until London has discovered the way of housing its people in a reasonable manner can it hope to have a population which will be physically sane and sound.

Summer Cottages by River, Lake and Sea-Shore Filled to Over-Flowing

MURRAY BAY AND CAP A L'AIGLE.

Mr. and Mrs. John Paterson, of Peel street, Montreal, have arrived, and will spend the summer at the Manoir Richelieu Hotel.

The Rev. C. E. Bidwell, headmaster Bishop's College School, Lennoxville, and family arrived last week, and have secured accommodation for the season in Murray Bay.

The Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzpatrick and family are among the families who intend making the Manoir Richelieu Hotel their summer home.

Mrs. Waring, of New York, has arrived, and is spending the summer with relatives at Cap a l'Aigle.

Miss Phillipa Gairdner, of McGill College avenue, Montreal, arrived last week, and has secured apartments on the road to Cap a l'Aigle.

Miss O'Meara, of Montreal, arrived last week, and has taken rooms at Cap a l'Aigle for two months.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Douglass and family, Sherbrooke street, Montreal, have arrived, and have taken a pretty cottage for the season.

Miss Watt, Stanley street, Montreal, who has been staying for some weeks at Chamord's Hotel, Pointe au Pic, has returned to town.

Mrs. Charles Skelton, of Rosemere, near Montreal, has left for Cacouna, having been the guest of Mrs. Hanbury Budden, of Mackay street, Montreal, while here. Mrs. Budden has taken a pretty French-Canadian cottage for the season.

Among recent Montreal names registered at the Manoir Richelieu Hotel are those of Mr. and Mrs. George C. E. Gudewill and Master George Gudewill, of Bishop street.

Miss Burns, of Montreal, has secured apartments on the road to Cap a l'Aigle.

Pointe au Pic and Cap a l'Aigle are filling rapidly, and each post brings letters from people anxious to find rooms in one of the many comfortable boarding houses to be found on both sides of the Bay. Besides the Manoir Richelieu Hotel and the well known "Chamord's," Warren's Hotel is an excellent family hotel, and is close to the beach, a desideratum to many who have children and sea-bathing to consider. Gagnon's, also near the water-front, is a comfortable boarding-house; clean beds and good meals, with excellent attendance, have made Gagnon's popular with numbers of summer visitors. At Cap a l'Aigle there are no hotels, but several comfortable boarding-houses, and the farmers along the roadside for several miles down the St. Lawrence bank are willing to let out rooms and supply meals at most reasonable rates.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Dawes, of Montreal, and family were among last week's arrivals, and have secured a furnished cottage for the season.

Mrs. F. Avery and family, of Ottawa, arrived last week, and are settled for the summer in the same, furnished cottage, near the old Manor House, that they occupied last season.

Miss Gertrude Mann, of Sherbrooke street, Westmount, has arrived, and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Dawes, of Montreal.

Mrs. Minturn and party have arrived from New York, and are settled in Mrs. Minturn's handsome villa near the Anglican Church, Pointe au Pic.

Mrs. Lockwood and family, of New York, have arrived, and are with Mrs. Lockwood's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Bonner, of New York, at Pointe au Pic.

Mr. and Mrs. Henshaw, of Peel street, Montreal, and their little granddaughter have arrived, and are in their pretty cottage near the wharf at Pointe au Pic.

Mrs. Macfarlane and family, of Montreal, have arrived, and have secured rooms for the season at Cap a l'Aigle.

Mr. H. Biggar, Dorchester street, Montreal, has returned to Montreal after a short week-end visit.

Riding parties are again much in vogue this season, many people bringing down their own horses and polo ponies. The country horse, though so wonderfully safe and clever at the steep hills, is very rought in the saddle, and, of course, very untrained for a lady to ride, although for driving, he cannot be equalled, as the town horse takes some time before he can come down the hills without nervousness, and is certainly not as sure of foot.

Dr. and Mrs. Osler and family, of Baltimore, U.S., arrived last week, and have taken the house they occupied two years ago on the ridge at Pointe au Pic. Dr. Osler proceeds at once to England to attend a medical meeting in London, and will be absent about a month, when he returns here for the remainder of the season.

Mrs. and the Misses Cartwright, of Toronto, have arrived, and have secured apartments for the season at Cap a l'Aigle.

Miss Robertson, of Phillips square, Montreal, arrived last week, and has joined a party of friends at Cap a l'Aigle.

Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Weir and family, who have spent several seasons at the Manoir Richelieu Hotel, have decided to go to Cacouna, where they have secured a cottage.

Mr. W. R. Miller, of Stanley street, Montreal, has arrived, and has taken rooms at Cap a l'Aigle for the month of July.

The Rev. A. T. Love, of Quebec, conducted the service at the little Presbyterian Church at Cap a l'Aigle on Sunday last, and, it is hoped, will do so again to-morrow. This curious little church edifice, with its flying buttresses, was erected mainly by the exertions of the late Dr. Mackay, of Crescent Street Church, Montreal, and stands on a high bluff in the lower end of Cap a l'Aigle, on the road to the next village, Ste. Fidele.

The Fourth of July was the occasion of many social gatherings among the American colony, and the Stars and Stripes of Uncle Sam floated over their numerous cottages. It was refreshing to see the Union Jack and the "Dominion of Canada" on Chamord's flag staff, otherwise a stranger might reasonably have inferred that he was on the other side of the line. The day, unfortunately, was cold and wet, so various picnics and drives had to be postponed.

Mrs. Wright, of New York, who has been staying with friends at Cap a l'Aigle, has arrived at the Manoir Richelieu Hotel, where she has secured rooms for some weeks.

Mrs. and Miss Greenshields, of Drummond street, Montreal, arrived this week, and are in their attractive villa at Cap a l'Aigle, where they will spend the summer.

Mr. Hanbury Budden, Mackay street, Montreal, returned to town last week.

Dr. Beech-Jones and family, of New York, have arrived, and are settled in the exceedingly pretty house owned by Dr. Beech-Jones near the residence of Mr. Lambe, of McGregor street, Montreal.

Among the Montrealers registered at the Manoir Richelieu recently were: G. A. Dilesy, Mrs. Bury Austin, E. D. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Hodgson, J. N. Dupuis, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Gudewell, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Sheppard, Miss Armton, Mr. and Mrs. Stanway, Miss Stanway, Miss Williams, Dr. F. W. Campbell, F. W. Campbell, Jr.; Stewart F. Rutherford, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Cook, Miss Kyle, Miss G. Kyle, Miss F. Kyle, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Shearer, Miss Eveleigh, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Keddie.

Miss Ethel Hodgson and Miss Theo. McConnell are staying at one of the Laurentide Park Houses, as are also Mrs. Grafftey, Miss Stewart, and Master Arthur Grafftey.

Mr. Lewis McIldowie and Mr. Ralph Johnson also spent a few days at St. Gabriel de Brandon last week.

HUDSON HEIGHTS.

The Dominion Day hop was all that could be expected, with the exception, perhaps, of the gentlemen being in the minority. Miss Whyddon officiated at the piano, and rendered excellent music. The floor was in good trim, as it had been well planed and waxed. With these things combined—excellent music, a fine floor, a beautiful evening, and, of course, good dancers (as we have here), what more could be desired? Among those present were: Mrs. W. B. Mathews, Mrs. R. T. Hopper, Mrs. T. J. Parkes, Mrs. Joyce, Mrs. Rodgers, Lynch, Mrs. T. Y. Foster, Mrs. Wood, the Misses B. Burger, E. Carson, Hopper, K. Boyd, H. Hutchison, Hanson, Lamb, O'Connor, Barrat, Joyce, Brown, O. Buchanan, Macaulay, Sargent, Mumford, Barlow, F. Brown, D. Oxley, Shea and Nolan, the Messrs. Sargent, Lee, Hodges, Lynch, Smith, Hilton, Fox, Shea, Burland, Lamb, Hutchison, Boyd, Galt, Wood, Morris, Jeffrey, Mathews, Nolan, Cushing, Munderloh and Drake.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers visited the latter's mother, Mrs. Harry Hutchison, "Braeside."

Mrs. Munderloh gave a most delightful haycart drive to her little friends last Tuesday afternoon. Refreshments were first served on her lawn, and then the jolly children, about twenty-one of them, packed on to the haycart, and went to Como, arriving back again a little after six. Among those present were: Jack Harlow, Catharine Pyke, Marjory McNally, Letitia Barlow, Blanche Pyke, Louis Buchanan, Jim Pyke, Walter Meldrum, Heber Buchanan, and Isabel Pyke.

The Masters George and Frank Cuttle were guests of Mr. Mullan.

Mr. A. Smith was Mrs. R. T. Hopper's guest for Dominion Day.

Master Gerald McIntyre is the guest of Master Talcott O'Connor.

Mrs. Massey has returned to town.

Miss Marion Ross made a short visit at Mrs. Joyce's, "Daisy Cottage."

The laugh was on the "early birds," as those who flag the "Soo" train in the early morning are called. To accomplish an early arrival in the city most of those who use this train sacrifice some comfort through the cutting short of the morning nap and the bolting of a hasty breakfast. Quite a number did this Monday morning, but were congratulating themselves, however, on having caught the train, which had not arrived when they reached the station. It had not arrived at five minutes past its time, nor at ten past, when the doleful announcement was wafted down from the telephone office that "the 'Soo' was two hours late." There were just 23 of the disgusted ones, but they were in plenty of time for the local, which left twenty-seven minutes later.

The tennis court is in prime condition, and the players are looking forward to more enthusiasm from the ladies, as it was rather one-sided the past season.

Mrs. Cunningham and little daughter, of Pine avenue, are the guests of the Rev. J. and Mrs. Strong.

Among the week end visitors from the city were the Misses Margaret Taylor, Ferns, Finlayson, C. and F. Chambers, Messrs. Ward Anderson, Robert McLaren, Grant MacLaren, Jack Chambers and D. Finlayson.

The following Montrealers contributed by songs, etc.: Mrs. Thomas, pianist; Mr. and Mrs. Hunt, Messrs. Bert Stuart and Wm. Macklaier. Popular Summer Resorts— Prince Edward Island.

Seldom has Nature joined hands with man in the formation of an ideal spot for summering so unreservedly, or with better results, as she has in the case of Prince Edward Island.

The tourist, or summer visitor, can there drink to the full that cup of pleasure which bright skies and cool salt breezes afford.

Pastoral charms are also easily to hand, for this million acre island is rich in cool and pleasant glades.

A rich menu is offered for the pleasure loving, —bathing, deep sea fishing, (sea trout abound in the waters of the coast) long country drives, sailing etc., all that summer in an ideal location can offer, is here obtained.

In this the garden of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, there is shortly to be a celebration of deep interest to Prince Edward Islanders generally. Beginning July 11 and lasting for some two weeks, there will be a grand reunion of the country's former inhabitants from all parts of the continent.

Relatives and friends who have not met for years will soon assemble to talk over the old days, bringing up the old associations and enjoy to the full, the two weeks' programme of amusements which the various tourist societies of the locality have prepared to take place at Summerside.

The associations have already been deluged with correspondence containing enquiries concerning this great Home Gathering, the largest in the history of the province.

As she did not leave till the last train for Vaudreuil, every one was satisfied.

Dominion Day was observed in loyal style by the village, flags flying from every house top, and in the evening several residences looked charming, with Chinese lanterns, etc. The Strathcona team, which was to he played baseball with us, was unable to secure a strong enough battery, and so the "Birds" were awarded the game by default, 9 to 0.

Mrs. F. Molson arrived last week with her family and has opened her cottage for the season.

ST. PATRICK.

The weather this week has been exceptionally fine and warm, and if the weather man grants us another week of such delightful temperature, a very busy season should be expected down here.

The country is simply charming at this time. The lilac and apple trees are all in blossom, while the foliage and the trees are beautifully fresh and green. Wild flowers are to be found in abundance in the woods and fields. The daisies especially have already given a snow-white appearance to the fields.

Mr. Codville, from Winnipeg, has had a most delightful cottage built on the hillside.

Among those who will be absent from St. Patrick this season is Mr. Aylwin Coristine. He has just left Montreal to go to Switzerland for a year or so to complete his studies.

Mr. Guy Hamel, from Montreal, is expected as usual for the summer months.

The Golf Club House opened last week, and a very active season is expected.

The links, and the greens in particular, are in perfect condition and should be a great attraction to the amateur golfer.

Owing to an unusually large demand for rooms, Mr. Picard has opened another cottage for the convenience of his guests.

Military Camp at Laprairie . . . Breaks Up To-day.

The quaint and usually quiet old village of Laprairie has been shorn of its military glory. The camp broke up this morning. When the long rows of snowy white tents disappeared from the common, and the troopers returned to the more prosaic walks of life, from which their duties as members of the Canadian militia called them for a few busy, fleeting days of drill. During the past ten days the pervading air about Laprairie has been martial. The visitor felt it even before he landed. It was about the ferry boat that landed him across the river, for among the passengers he could not fail to notice the masterful stride of the officer and the self-sufficient dignity of the high private. They were soldiers of the King on their way back to camp after a visit to town. You saw them at the village wharf, and a walk of twenty minutes brought you to the common where the soldier was supreme, and the civilian tolerated if he kept out of the way and did not intrude. Here sentries walked their beat in solemn silence, and men in brilliant uniforms hurried to and fro. It was a pretty sight, full of life and colour and action. Being almost exclusively a cavalry camp, it presented in proportion to its numbers a livelier scene than one composed of foot soldiers. The man on horseback always appears masterful; he seems to command the situation, to form the combination nature intended. It is not too much to say that the well-extended line of troopers sweeping across Laprairie common was a sight almost magnificent, especially to the eye of the average Canadian, who perhaps had never seen at one time a larger number of mounted men.

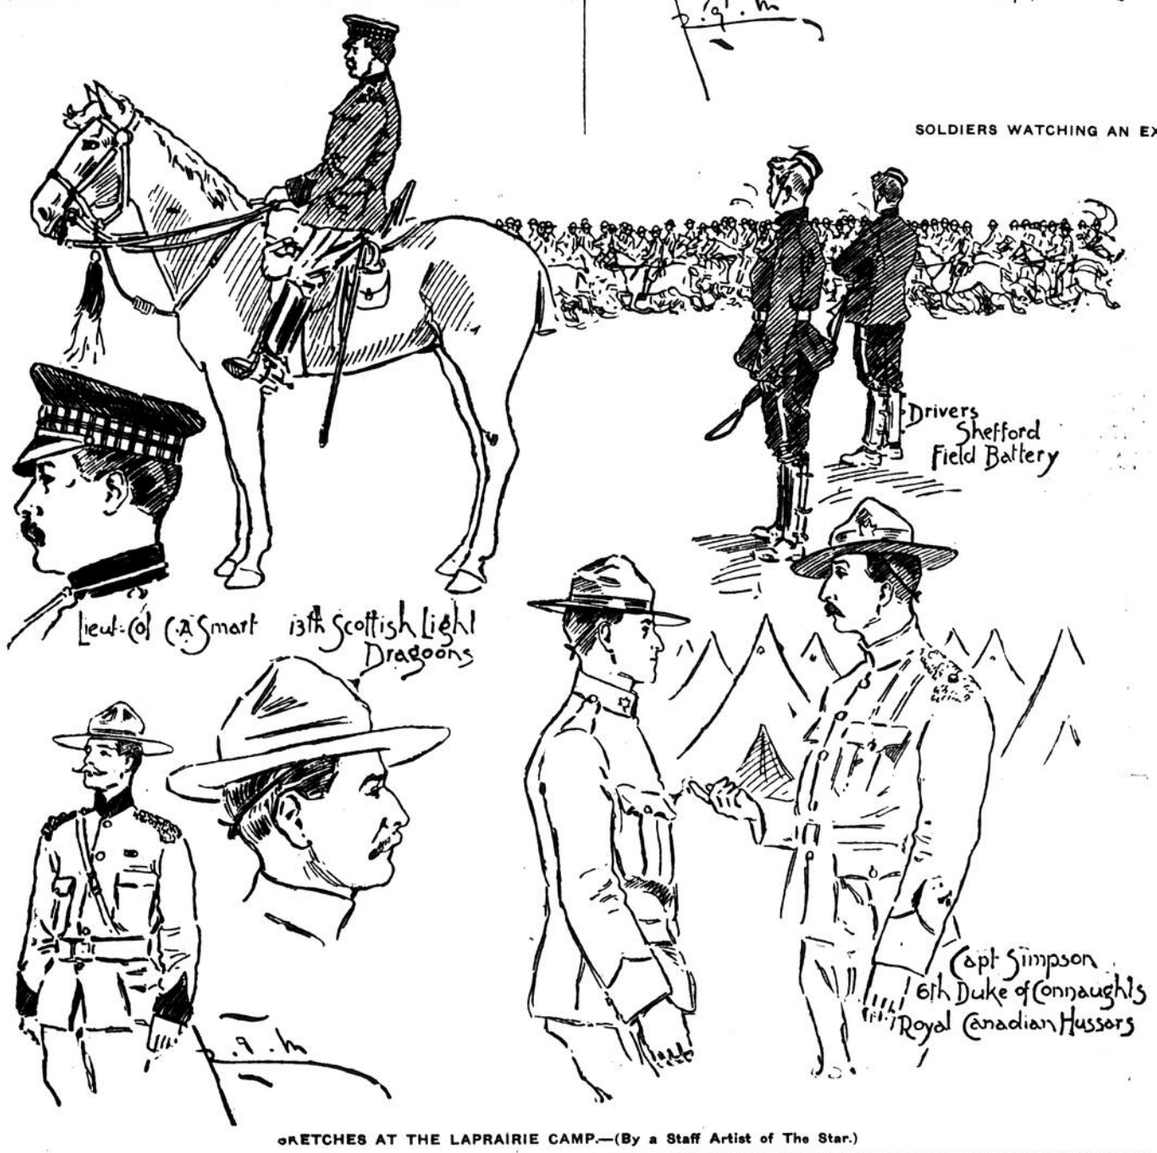
The camp has now come to an end, and the results of the few days' drill are evident. Perhaps the great soldier, like the poet, is born, not made; but with good raw material it is possible to make the rank and file, and during the last ten days as much as possible under the circumstances was done in this direction on Laprairie common. "Things were now going with a swing," said one officer, "and it seemed too bad we had to leave so soon." However, this cannot be helped, and officers and men have the satisfaction of knowing that the most has been made of the time.

Every day had its own programme of instruction, and on a recent afternoon the men were given a lecture on the use of explosives in the work of demolition. What a reminder this subject was of the hard, cruel purpose of the soldier. Demolition—his mission is destructive, and in this lecture he was specially told how to destroy bridges. The men were drawn up along three sides of a hollow square, in the centre of which stood a small boulder, and on the top of the boulder rested a few innocent-looking packages; not very innocent, however, for they contained enough gun-cotton, fuse and detonators to play havoc with all around. The lecturer was Sergeant-Major Rhodes, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, of Toronto, a very soldierly young man, with a good voice, who knows how to impart information.

Briefly he told the men about gun-cotton and how to use it. It is, he said, the safest and best of all high explosives, and could be handled with comparative safety. Then he took up a little packet of it, and tapped it freely with his knuckles as if it were nothing more than a piece of paper pulp. Then he exhibited fuses; an emergency fuse that would burn thirty yards a second, and the safety fuse, that would burn only one yard a second. The lecture concluded, he gave a demonstration of the terrific force of the explosive. About one hundred yards below the men, towards the river, a steel rail was placed on the ground. Against one side of this at the centre was placed a small bit of gun-cotton, only ten ounces, and this was exploded. It made a loud, sharp report, and it tore out of the rail a piece about one foot long and hurled it perhaps a quarter of a mile away. That was the way to cut lines of communication and destroy steel bridges—the work of months ruined in as many seconds.

The lecture over, the men were ordered to bring out their horses. It was the paymaster's muster, and every horse in camp had to be accounted for. Then came time for watering, and down they all went to the river. And so the afternoon wore away, and another day of the soldier's life at Laprairie came to an end. But it is all over now, and the soldiers are civilians again.

SOLDIERS WATCHING AN EXPLOSION AT LAPRAIRIE CAMP.



SKETCHES AT THE LAPRAIRIE CAMP.—(By a Staff Artist of The Star.)

Military Happenings.

The 65th Regiment of Canadian Infantry, of which Col. F. S. Mackay is the commanding officer at the present time, took a very active part in the incidents attending the North-West rebellion. Its various companies were spread over a wide area, maintaining the line of communication between Red Deer River and Edmonton, and down the Saskatchewan as far as Fort Pitt. Most of the officers who were in active service at that time have since severed their connection with the regiment, and Col. Mackay himself was only a very young volunteer at the time. Joining the 65th in 1884, the following year saw him serving as a sergeant in actual warfare. He was present at Frenchman's Butte when Big Bear was captured after a sharp but decisive engagement. On that occasion two members of the regiment were shot—Privates E. Lemay and Marcote. Prior to this termination of the chase after Big Bear, the companies of the 65th were distributed over the North-West as follows: Capt. B. Normandeau was stationed at Red River; Capt. John Ostell at Battle River; Capt. Ethier at Peace Hill, Capt. des Trois-Maisons at Fort Edmonton, Lieut. Doherty (afterwards Judge Doherty), and Lieut. Labelle, now Colonel Labelle, at Fort Saskatchewan; Lieut. Mackay, now Colonel Mackay, at Fort Victoria; Capt. Giroux at Fort Pitt, and Lieut. des Georges at Lac la Biche. It was while at Calgary in 1885 that Colonel Mackay was made a lieutenant, that being followed, in 1888, by promotion to the rank of captain. The other dates in Col. Mackay's military career are: Adjutant, 1896; Major, 1897; Colonel, March 22nd, 1902. Colonel Ouimet was in command of the 65th when Col. Mackay joined it as a private. Col. Ouimet was followed in the command by Col. Dugas, who is now a judge in the Yukon. Then Col. Prevost served for six years, beginning in 1891. Col. Labelle assumed command in 1897, and contiued in that position up to the time Col. Mackay took over the regiment in 1902. Under Col. Mackay the 65th has been very successful it maintaining the position it has always held as one of the best drilled corps in the city. During the past spring some particularly good work was done. Nine new officers have joined the regiment since last December, which would seem to indicate a good deal of activity upon the part of those to whom the regiment must always look for its light and leading. Since Col. Mackay joined the regiment, it has twice been called out to quell civic disturbances—during the Valleyfield riots in 1900, when Col. Labelle was in command, and during the longshoremen's strike last year, when, under Col. Mackay, the regiment did some particularly effective work on the Hochelaga wharves. Col. Mackay has always taken a very active interest in the shooting of the regiment, and was himself the adjutant of the Bisley team in 1900. He is also a member of the Council of the D.R.A., and of the Council of the P.Q.R.A. He is the vice-president of the Montreal Amalgamated Rifle Association.

Col. Mackay is a French-Canadian with a Scotch name, and springs from an essentially military family. His great-great-grandfather was General Francis Mackay, who, at the time of Maria-Theresa of Austria, distinguished himself in the conquest of Transylvania, and was appointed Viceroy of that country; his great-grandfather, Samuel Mackay, was ensign in the famous 60th Regiment, forming part of the troops of Gen. Amherst at the capitulation of Montreal in 1760. He rose to the rank of Major, and was in command of a corps of Royalists during the American War of Independence. On account of his services, his son, Stephen Mackay, the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was appointed ensign in the 2nd Battalion of the King's Royal Regiment of New York, when only three years old; the latter fought as Captain under de Salaberry at the battle of Chateauguay in 1813, and afterwards became a lieutenant-colonel. His father was also adjutant of a rural battalion. His great-grandfather was the first British officer to marry a French lady in Montreal, the event occurring in 1760. His wife was Louise Marguerite Herbin, a daughter of Captain Louis Herbin, Knight of the military order of St. Louis, commanding at Crown Point, and a granddaughter of Pierre Boucher, Governor of Three Rivers under the French regime, and head of the great Canadian family of de Boucherville. His grandmother was a daughter of Dr. Globensky, a surgeon in a British regiment.

Following in the steps of his ancestors, when Major Mackay came to Montreal for his legal studies, he soon connected himself with the militia, and commenced that military career that has led him to the colonelcy of the 65th.

A citizen of Montreal writes to the military editor drawing attention to a condition of affairs which may have struck some casual observers, but which has not often been presented in so direct and forcible a fashion. The correspondent says:

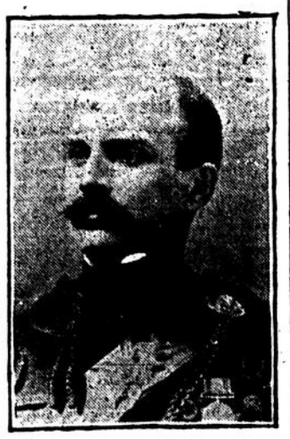
"While watching the passing of the recent Church Parade of our city brigade, I could not help noticing the extreme youth of a very large proportion of the rank and file. If I am not mistaken, the minimum age for troopers, gunners and privates is 19 years, but I think an investigation would show that a large number of our militia are below that age Should there arise any demand for the active service of the militia, the deficiency in any age would undoubtedly manifest itself very strongly. You cannot get a man's work from an immature youth. Doubtless the people who read reports on the strength of the various units, and the militia as a whole; think that the figures given represent able-bodied men which is not so. The trouble is caused by the dearth of full-grown men offering themselves for enlistment, and the natural desire of all commanding officers to keep their units as near full strength as possible. The defect will not manifest itself so much in time of peace, as it would in a time of trouble (unless you except the recent accidents at Laprairie Camp, where the ages of the sufferers are given as 16 and 17 years respectively) because boys are able to perform the routine drills, and parades of peace times, and so nobody worries, but when the real thing comes up, although these lads have the best possible spirit, and loyalty, you will find that there is another case of misplaced confidence somewhere."

Colonel Carson has presented the city of Kingston with a handsome photograph of the officers of the Royal Scots, as a memento of the visit of that regiment to the Limestone City, May 24th, 1903.

A practical test of long distance riding was made recently by a small detachment of the Governor-General's Body Guard, says Major Morrison, writing in the Ottawa Citizen, when they rode from Niagara camp to Toronto, 90 miles in less than twenty-four hours. "They carried their provisions with them," says the Toronto News, "the horses' backs were uninjured and the animals next day were fresh. This remarkable ride was made possible by the simple expedient of having five horses to four men. The fifth was a pack-horse. It carried about 160 pounds of necessary stores, thereby lessening the weight carried by each riding horse by forty pounds. That forty pounds made all the difference between success and failure, between a long distance and a short distance ride. The plan of providing an extra horse with a pack saddle for every four men should be tried on a larger scale in the militia. For example, a squadron could be allowed this establishment and equipment, and next year could be sent to Niagara by route march. The experiment would be most instructive."

The Highland Cadet Battalion's engagements for the coming week are: Monday, 11th, Battalion drill, no uniform; Wednesday, 13th, battalion drill, uniform, brass band, pipe and bugle bands to attend, march out. First appearance of the band in kilts. Route: St. James, Windsor, Dorchester, Mountain, St. Catherine, Peel, Dorchester, Beaver Hall and Craig streets to Armoury. Saturday 16th, annual inspection, 2 p.m. Every member, including brass, pipe and bugle bands to attend. Fred. Lydon, Major, Comd. H.C.B.

The 34th annual Prize Meeting of the Province of Quebec Rifle Association will be held on the Pointe aux Trembles Ranges, on the 9th, 10th and 11th August next. An attractive programme has been arranged, and is now in the printer's hands. It will be distributed next week. A new match for "green" shots, that is, who have never won any prize before, has been added this year, and moreover special prizes are given in all the matches for green shots. Every inducement is offered this year to bring out and encourage new shots. The ranges and the accommodation have been greatly improved since last year and we look forward to a large entry list.



COL. F. S. M'KAY.

EDMONTON,

The Coming Commercial and Manufacturing Centre of the West.

Edmonton, the chief commercial centre of the western portion of the wheat belt, is making rapid advancement, and is creating wide attraction. With the tremendous influx of settlers this extraordinarily rich agricultural place is rapidly filling up, and experts predict that the town will experience the most rapid progress of any place on the continent.

It is the commercial supply point of the Mackenzie River basin. The vast country that lies back of it for two thousand miles, and on either side for eight hundred miles, must pay it tribute, must get its supplies from Edmonton, must sell its product in Edmonton.

Surrounding Edmonton for many thousands of miles the vegetation is rank, the climate surprisingly moderate, else there would not be the immigration, for settlers have come in only on the advice of those who have preceded them. Coal is abundant, worth about three dollars a ton, and the country is well wooded. This wonderful section contains countless fortunes, and Edmonton is the keystone of it all.

Realizing the commercial future and importance of Edmonton the following banks have opened branches there: Banks of Commerce, Montreal, Merchants, Imperial, Nova Scotia and Union. A street railway is under construction, and the Grand Trunk Pacific has made Edmonton its western basis of operation, while the Canadian Northern Railway is extending its line from Winnipeg to Edmonton.

By buying a town lot in Edmonton these extraordinarily natural and artificial resources are your security; you can't lose your money, because this remarkably rich section simply must progress.

Do you want an absolutely safe investment for your money? Do you want to invest your money where it will earn many times the bank per cent? If you do, then write to-day for a map of the town, showing exact location of each individual lot and our system of easy payments, which make it easy for you to own a lot in Edmonton.

STRENGTH OF MILITIA AT LEVIS CAMP

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Dear Sir,—Being still interested, more so now perhaps, than in the past, although not now employed as a newspaper writer on military matters, and having a chance on Wednesday while at Levis to visit the camp now on the Heights, I took a run out to see how things were; naturally expecting that said things might be as in the days of yore. Alas! however, it is a different tale, and it is no benefit to the militia force to hush matters up or to keep them secret. It is only by fair criticism and faithful reports of what actually are the circumstances that remedies can be made and efficiency gained.

This is how I found matters. The Levis camp ground is an ideal one in every respect, the staff and corps officers are doing herculean work with the material they have, but the material is sadly lacking. What the actual number of each of the corps in camp is I cannot state. The First Field Battery seems to be very nearly up to strength, also No. 5 Bearer Company, and No. 5 Field Hospital Corps, but there it ends. The Fourth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Fifty-fifth, Sixty-first, Eighty-seventh, Eighty-ninth, are sadly lacking in numbers, and many in the ranks could be recognized as those that had served in city corps.

To have a camp like this is simply throwing away money, and so that yourself and readers can judge what a farce it is, at three o'clock there was a brigade parade called for skirmishing drill and a walk around the tents afterward showed me that at least 95 per cent. of the muster in camp were in parade but the battalions were skeleton ones in every sense of the word, and when the officer commanding had his brigade fronting him, they were not called by battalions, but each one as a company, taking seven battalions on paper to make one real one. Of the drill, the least said the better, and as far as the men are concerned they are as good as it is possible to get under the present system of payment, as no man can be expected to turn out for camp duty unless he can get at least the wages of a common ordinary street labourer.

The officers cannot do impossibilities and many regretted to me the way matters stood, but asked what else could they do under the circumstances A proof that what little money is spent, is spent in the wrong way, is shown in the fact of the new erected stables of the First Field Battery. From appearances they look fine, to the non-military eye—but even an ordinary carter that had to put up his own shack would not build his this way if he had any love for his horse. There are enough joists, braces and uprights, with other material, to build stables twice the size, and make them proper and fit for horses, but instead of this, the stalls are under five feet in width and two short, again, the alleys between are altogether too narrow, with the result that it is a misfit all round.

There is no doubt that mistakes have been made, not only in the system of recruiting but in seeing that recruits are paid a just wage. Patriotism is alright and the class of men in Levis camp, and who could be got there, no doubt, at any time, would sacrifice their lives for their country, but no man is fool enough, unless he goes simply for recreation, or for the love of the service, to turn out for camp duty in times of peace, especially when they know that a great deal of the expenditure now for the militia is for officers, really not needed until they have someone under them to instruct.

Right Hon. Lord Aylmer, who was present in camp at the time, made a thorough inspection, and it would be very interesting if his views could only be gained as to the standing of the force in this camp from an efficiency point of view.

EXPERIENCE OF A BIRCHTOWN LADY

Tried in Vain to Cure Her Dyspepsia Till She Used Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets—They Cured Her Completely and Permanently.

Miss Mary Brown, of Birchtown, Shelburne Co., N.S., relates an experience that is of immediate interest to thousands of people in all parts of Canada. These thousands are the people who face a square meal with mingled feelings of pleasure and dread; in other words, the victims of indigestion and dyspepsia.

"I can say I had dyspepsia for some time," says Miss Brown. "I tried many medicines, but never met with anything to help me till I used Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

"After taking three boxes I think they have made a perfect cure. And as it is over a year now since I took them I think I can safely say the cure was a permanent one."

If you want to eat three square meals a day and enjoy them use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

OILS, PLASTERS and OPERATIONS

Fail to Cure Cancer

There is a peculiar condition of the blood which favours the growth of cancer germs in the system, and that is the reason that local treatment like the above fails to make permanent cures.

Those who suffer from cancer or tumours will be glad to learn of a constitutional remedy that is pleasant to use and can be taken in the privacy of one's own home without even the members of your own family knowing it. Mention this paper and send 6 cents in stamps to Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., for a useful booklet, "Cancer, Its Cause and Cure."

Lord Dundonald.

(Canadian Churchman.)

The exit of Lord Dundonald is one of the painful incidents of our history. Having spoken as he did in public of his superior officers, his fate was inevitable. We can recall, however, how General Butler, commander of the British troops in South Africa, was recalled shortly before the outbreak of the war for reporting very plainly the inefficiency of British preparation for a conflict. It was thought he was not wholly loyal to his own country, but the Empire soon learned that he had spoken only too wisely. We trust that no conflict will arise to justify Dundonald's warning, but wisdom would lead us to take it to heart before it is too late. Lord Dundonald has captured the imaginations of the Canadian people. His brilliant military record and his manifest confidence in the worth of citizen soldiers has given him a high place in our esteem. Many will regret the circumstances of his withdrawal, but the good wishes of our people will go with him into whatever work he may be called to perform for the Empire.

Railroad Rates and Railroad Earnings.

Port Arthur, Ont., July 9.—He got on the train at Rossport and threw himself with rude force into the other half of our seat. Farmer, merchant, miner, it was difficult to say, but as the face is still the index of the mind we clearly saw that he was in an angry mood.

My friend, a commercial traveller, sitting next to me and directly opposite the stranger, with one glance took him in from old top boots to newly trimmed beard. His closely clipped hair revealed a gray fringe half way between the place for his collar and the rim of his old slouch hat.

With a "pale cast of thought" and furrowed brow he sat there stooped before us figuring, on the end of his fingers, the mysterious secret.

What was this man's trouble? If he would only give some hint. My poetic friend appealed to me, "Give sorrow words, the grief that will not speak whispers the o'erfraught heart and bids it break."

The train whirled around a sudden curve and put another furrow in that brow.

"By heaven," the stranger snarled It made us both sit up. He now held his ticket, nervously turning it over and over.

"Outrage!" he again exclaimed.

"Get the wrong ticket old man?" ventured the traveller.

"Outrage! by heaven I'll not be robbed," was the only answer.

"A case for Sherlock Holmes," whispered my friend.

"Try it yourself," I urged. "Holmes isn't the only man who can solve a mystery.

My friend took out his watch. As the case flew open he let a sympathetic hand fall on the stranger's knee. "Robbed sir? when—of what, and sir if—"

"By this grasping corporation, the C. P. R.—by heaven I."

The traveller snapped the cover of his watch. "Crank," he ventured to me in a whisper. I was not sure. Certainly he was not a dangerous crank. We would humour him and hear his tale of woe.

"I tell you what it is," he said as he now replaced the ticket in his pocket with unnecessary force, "these railway companies are all alike. They work the politicians and the people—get millions in grants of land and money, yet hold us up, we—the people who really own the land and money. Three cents a mile. Outrage."

"Ha, ha," laughed the traveller. "So you're a 2-cent-a-mile advocate, eh?"

"Yes—and I should be lower."

"Why my misguided friend, so it is."

"Yes—in the United States. We want it here.

"And so it is, this very company, this grasping corporation as you call it."

It was the stranger who now "sat up." So did I to hear in the promised war of words for my friend was all but an authority on this question of a 2-cent rate.

"Now I mean what I say, and will prove it," went on the traveller.

"Oh," drawled the stranger—don't need proof—from an official of the company."

"Nothing to do with the company whatever. Leave it to my friend, or here to the conductor." But the stranger was easily reassured.

"Now," said the traveller, warming to his subject, "How much would you believe that the average receipts of the Canadian railways net less than two cents per mile and that the average rate on the Canadian Pacific Railway is but one decimal sixty-eight—that is they earn but 1.68 of your three cents."

"Don't earn any—steal it."

"Net, you see, less than two cents," continued the traveller, "so with your two-cent rate you would have them earn all of decimal sixty-eight for all these improvements, this speed and comfort, even luxury. Is that fair?"

The stranger was silent.

"Base ingratitude, I would call it," said the traveller. I think they should stop the train and put off the man who holds such a view—put him off and put him back on the stage coach of fifty years ago."

The stranger brightened. "Oh, I see—I see it."

"Knew you would," smiled my friend. the traveller, with a glance of triumph to me.

"You're travelling on a pass."

"Pass—why, of course, would you like to see it." Here, handing him his commercial ticket. "That is the consideration they show me for the amount of traveling I do—three-quarters of a cent off the three-cent rate. But that is only one of a dozen "passes," limited "passes," reductions. A thousand mile book of tickets, there's half a cent off there. Press rate, a cent off there, homeseekers and harvesters taken a thousand miles and more for the fractional part of the regular fare. Then there are the immigration rates, never over a cent a mile, and then the round-trip tickets, and the excursions local and general for hundreds of societies and associations.

"These are the railway's bargain counter sales, but see how the people generally take advantage of them. And this is, to my mind, far better than your two-cent rate and does more good. Besides how many trains the company run and have to run regularly at times and in places where there are not enough passengers to "make it pay," even that one decimal sixty-eight. Still further, did it ever occur to you that it would be much more to their benefit to carry your weight in freight? Let me tell you that a passenger car hauls from three to six tons of its own dead weight for every passenger, while a freight car will, in wheat, carry three times its own dead weight, and in coal four times the amount of its own weight, that is the cars own weight.

The stranger, long silent, now asked: "Well then, how is it that the American roads can give a two-cent rate?"

There was the best question yet from the stranger, and I had, I confess, fears for my friend.

"Well, my dear sir, "he at once replied, "there's your error where you misunderstand the whole situation, if I may be permitted to say so."

"What, no 2-cent rate in Michigan?"

"Let me show you. I have the facts and figures here," answered the traveller.

"In Michigan there is a graded rate law. For instance, on roads earning $3,000 per mile from pasenger traffic, the rate is 2 cents. On lines earning less than $3,000 per mile and more than $2,000, it is 2 1-2 cents, while in Northern Michigan 3 cents and 4 cents may be charged according to the earnings of the road."

I saw the furrows coming back to the stranger's brow.

"Now in New York State," the traveller went on calmly, "the 2 cent rate only applies to the New York Central and then it is confined to its local business, and that is enormous. Why there is not a road in Canada that would not willingly give a 2-cent rate if they had the millions of passengers to handle that the New York Central has or the Pennsylvania. And there, I think,is the whole point in the case—density of population and volume of traffic."

"Now just one illustration," he continued. "Up to June of last year there were 19,077 miles of railway in Canada. They carried, during that year 22,148,742 passengers and their total earnings were $24,662,109. Now in the United States the Pennsylvania line made that alone. To be exact the official reports showed that they carried 50,287,009 passengers over only 3,637 miles of line road. Their passenger earnings were $24,431,948, or within $430,000, say, of what all the roads in Canada earned. Compare that with the C. P. R. with its 7,439 miles carrying 5,580,739 passengers and passenger earnings, of $10,865,769. How, under such circumstances, is it fair to compare American and Canadian roads or make the laws the same?"

"Yet here is the only transcontinental line in the world, the only line that can take you from ocean to ocean in better comfort, without change, and in less time than any combination of lines that go to form your so-called American transcontinentals, asking no more per mile than is charged on short lines in the thickly populated Eastern States."

The stranger's face had now much of the colour and set of a marble mask.

"Nipigon" called out the brakeman. The stranger calmly rose.

"And then you take the duty on coal, and the cost of removing the snow, up in the hundreds of thousands last year, why——"

"Nipigon" came from the other end of the car.

And now, as the train slowed up, the stranger edged to the door. What he said as he picked up his valise was inaudible, and all we heard him say, as he left, was—

"—And to think I gave that Rossport Agent the ——"

"Well," said the traveller, as the brakeman called Port Arthur, "that's the trouble—they only get one side of the case."

LACHINE.

Rev. Canon and Mrs. W. P. Chambers have returned from a visit to Old Orchard and to Fabyans and Mount Pleasant in the White Mountains, N.H.

The St. Stephen's excursion came off in spite of the rain, 340 people braving the elements. A violent storm came on up the lake, but good management brought the staunch old boat through all right. Water parties are not likely to be very popular this year.

The boys all regretted the remissness of the boat-builder, who got the new war canoe here just too late for the St. Johns regatta.

Mr. Crombie is enjoying a short holiday at the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club.

The house formerly occupied by Mr. J. Savage has been rented by Mrs. E. C. Wilson, of the city.

Mr. J. McLaughlin's new brick cottages on the lower road are approaching completion, and will be a great addition to that charming locality.

The Country Club had a pleasant little invitation dance on Wednesday. Among those who attended were Mesdames Russell, Thornloe, Sewell, Seybold, Lawson, Girouard, Smith, and Messrs. P. Coughlin, H. Dresel, N. Whitaker, H. Gordon, E. Girouard, D. Russell, A. H. Knight, E. Harris, J. Seybold and G. Leger.

POINTE CLAIR.

The sun shone with particular splendour on Dominion Day, and an ideal holiday was one result. Flags were hoisted in all directions, and a brisk and patriotic breeze assisted greatly in the celebration of our National birthday. The C. P. R. and G. T. R. did a rushing business—there is really no pun intended here—and Pointe Claire absorbed a goodly portion of the great crowds of holiday-makers seeking fresh air and freedom from toil for at least twenty-four hours.

We think the Grand Trunk Railway should do a little booming in our direction, as it possesses considerable property in our vicinity; also a first-class summer hotel is greatly needed. We are certain we could produce a string of fish fit for any photograph, and the shores of Pointe Claire Bay could easily afford a fitting back-ground for the pet of the G. T. R., the giant Maskalounge.

The cobweb party given by Mr. and Mrs. Tellier at Elm Point on Dominion Day was a great success and thoroughly enjoyed by the many guests present. The following-up of the various "webs" and the consequent entanglements gave much amusement, and the tasteful decorations about the spacious grounds added greatly to the occasion. With many others present were the Misses Fortier, Holland, Haskell and Lilly.

Mr. Davis, Montreal, was one of the guests at a most enjoyable fishing party given by Mr. Dube on Saturday afternoon.

The Ste. Rose Club held a very important meeting on Friday evening, 24th ult. One of the principal features of the evening was the election of officers. Mr. J. C. McAdam was re-elected president, and Mr. A. Darling appointed as secretary-treasurer. The committee chosen were: Messrs. Howard, Benny, H. Garant, R. Stevenson and Sithe. The executive met at the president's house the following Monday evening to decide on a programme for the season. A very fine one was mapped out, and one which, at all events, is expected to surpass all their previous efforts. They decided also to re-decorate the club house, and at present everything looks very promising for the coming season.

The opening hop took place here Dominion night, and, being attended with such beautiful weather, almost all the members and their many friends were present. There was another hop the following evening, and, notwithstanding the heavy rain we had late in the afternoon, many strangers attended the dance.

Mr. and Mrs. McGarr and family have opened up their cottage here for the season.

The first of the hotel hops was held at the Hotel Fiske on Independence Day, and was largely attended. The Canadian guests at this house were Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Goldvogel, of Montreal; Rev. Canon and Mrs. W. P. Chambers, of Lachine; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Byrd, Mr. and Mrs. C. Coughlin, and Mr. V. E. Ryder, all of Montreal.

The thunderstorm which was so destructive of property all through the New England States, struck here with terrible force on Tuesday afternoon. One house was badly smashed, several were damaged, a cow was killed, and a B. & M. engine driver was badly shocked in his cab.

Automobile races have been arranged to take place on a five mile straight-away course on the beach at low tide, two of them in July, two in August, and two in September.

Very few guests here as yet, though a busy season is expected.

VAUDREUIL.

Dominion Day opened all sunshine, which fortunately lasted all day and tended to make the holiday all the more enjoyable. A Presidential Candidate

Endorses Pe-ru-na, the National Catarrh Remedy.

An Ex-Senator, Hon. M. C. Butler, also is a Convert to the Good of Pe-ru-na

Catarrh of Stomach from Coughs and Colds and Other Ills Cured by Pe-ru-na when Other Medicines Failed.

Hon. M. C. Butler, of South Carolina, was United States Senator from that State for two terms. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., from Washington, D.C., he says:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach. I have been using your medicine for a short period, and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."—M. C. Butler.

The only rational way to cure dyspepsia is to remove the catarrh. Peruna has won its way into thousands of homes and millions of hearts by its marvellous cures of catarrhal affections. Peruna does not produce artificial digestion. It cures catarrh and leaves the stomach to perform digestion in a natural way. This is vastly better and safer than resorting to artificial methods.

Peruna has cured more cases of dyspepsia than all other remedies combined, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. If catarrh is located in the head, Peruna cures it. If catarrh has fastened itself in the throat or bronchial tubes, Peruna cures it. When catarrh becomes settled in the stomach, Peruna cures it, as well in this location as any other.

Peruna is not simply a remedy for dyspepsia. Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Peruna cures dyspepsia because it is generally dependent upon catarrh.

A Most Wonderful Cure of Dyspepsia Made by Pe-ru-na.

A. C. Lockhart, corner Cottage street and Thurston road, Rochester, N.Y., writes:

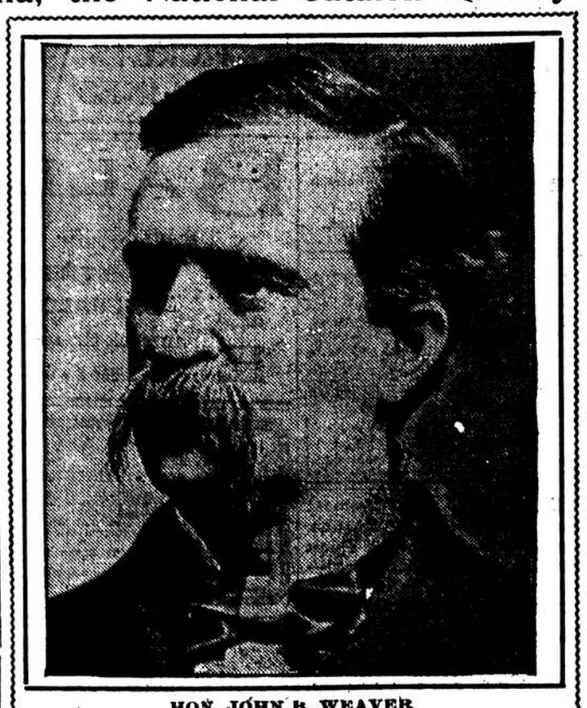
"About fifteen years ago I commenced to be ailing with a species of dyspepsia and called on a physician, who gave me only temporary relief.

"I consulted another physician, with no better results.

"I am now taking the fifth bottle of Peruna, and have not an ache or a pain anywhere. My bowels move regularly every day and I have taken on eighteen pounds of flesh, my usual weight being 145 pounds. I was down at one time as low as 126 pounds."—A. C. Lockhart.

The only way to cure a disease is to strike at and get to the source of the indisposition. A cold left to run on and on induces catarrh, and catarrh produces consumption. What is catarrh but a consumption of the vital life forces of one's body? Many people die from consumption, when, if the case were more closely diagnosed, it would be called catarrh.

The specific cure for catarrh is Peruna.



HON. JOHN B. WEAVER.

Hon. John B. Weaver, of Colfax, Ia., a candidate for the Presidency on the Populist ticket in 1892, writes from the National Hotel, Washington, D.C., as follows:

"I can unhesitatingly recommend your remedy, Peruna, for coughs, colds and catarrh. I am satisfied that it will do all you claim for it."
—John B. Weaver.

"For a long time, until I came into this climate, I had congratulated myself upon having a perfectly sound pair of lungs. Rev. J. T. Harding Eminent Scotch Divine Is Cured of Stomach Trouble After the Greatest Suffering All Last Winter.

Intestinal Grippe Left Him So Weak that the Least Exertion Was Too Much for Him—St. James Wafers Have Now Enabled Him to Fully Minister to His People's Spiritual Needs.

At 95 Leith street, in the thriving city of Aberdeen, one of the most famous in Scotland, lives the Rev. J. T. Harding.

The minister of a Scotch church is always held in high esteem, and the Rev. J. T. Harding is no exception to the rule.

A remarkable thing about the people of Scotland is the interest they take in what the minister says. The words of their pastor are listened to with respectful attention to an extent which is seen in no other country.

This fact causes the Scotch pastor to weigh his words well and to verify his facts, with more than usual care, before he makes a statement.

With a full knowledge of his responsibilities, the Rev. J. T. Harding says:

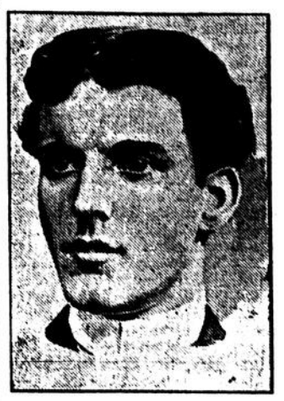
"An attack of intestinal grippe which kept me in bed for a week left such weakness that the least exertion was too much. Last winter was for me a time of greatest suffering, and backache, headache and sleeplessness incapacitated me for my work.

"My people were much concerned about this, and with an earnest desire to do my duty in my high calling I sought every means to once more obtain the blessing of health.

"Finally on the advice of my doctor I started to use St. James Wafers. The first box greatly relieved me, and after the sixth box my troubles had entirely gone.

"This experience has led me to believe that St. James Wafers are unsurpassed as a stomach strengthener, because I feel that it was by giving me digestive power that St. James Wafers cured me."

—Rev. Jas. T. Harding.



This emphatic statement, made so recently as May 1st, 1904, has enhanced the popularity of St. James Wafers in Aberdeen, where on all sides is heard praise of this great stomach and nerve remedy.

No man has a harder life than the pastor who is thoroughly in earnest in his work and the fact that St. James Wafers cured the Rev. J. T. Harding is proof of their value to any one who is feeling worn-out after such an illness as intestinal la grippe.

Notice what well-known leaders of thought and action throughout the British Empire are publicly giving their words of praise to St. James Wafers, which are making as successful cures in Canada as they are in Great Britain.

The reason is that St. James Wafers get to the inside of the trouble. Every one knows that when the stomach is healthy, pain and weakness can be driven out of any part of the body. To get the stomach healthy should be the first aim of the sick, and that St. James Wafers do get the stomach healthy is being proved every day.

Dealers everywhere recommend and sell St. James Wafers at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50; or they will be forwarded post free on sending remittance to the sole Canadian agents,

ST. JOHNS.

The C.C.A. meet on Dominion Day brought a number of visitors here, who remained over till Monday.

Mr. P. Roy and family arrived on Tuesday of last week, and are occupying their beautiful summer home in the north end of the town.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison and Miss Morrison, of Montreal, were the guests of Miss G. Roy on Dominion Day.

Miss McGuire left for a month's outing at Riviere du Loup on Monday.

On Dominion Day two very fine automobiles came out from Montreal with visitors to see the canoe races. One was owned by Mr. Ahern and the other by Mr. David Yuile.

Mr. Hector Dalbec, of Montreal, is spending the month here, having taken rooms at the Canada Hotel.

Miss Katie Clark, who has been visiting Miss E. Futvoye in St. Armand for the past two weeks, returned home on Tuesday.

Mr. Arthur Wood, of Montreal, and Mr. Percy Wood, of Waterloo, were the guests of their parents, Dr. and Mrs. Wood over Dominion Day holidays.

Mr. C. N. D. Osgood and daughter, of Montreal, were here from Thursday till Monday, being the guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Wilkinson.

Mr. Charles Howard and Mr. Robert Howard were here on Dominion Day.

The Dominion Day holidays did not pass by without leaving a sad fatality to remember the date. On Sunday afternoon, Mr. J. E. A. Benoit, architect, took a party of his friends up the river aboard his steam yacht. Among those aboard were Jos. Brosseau, M. Lord, E. Predette, T. D. Renaud, M. Leduc, and the two young Gervais boys. The first three of the above were in the stern of the boat, while the others were in the bow. When about a mile up the river, while sailing quietly along, there was a sudden explosion, and immediately there was a rush of steam into the fire box, which forced open the door and sent the burning coals flying about the stern of the boat, and immediately those who were there jumped or scrambled into the water. Two of the three, although somewhat scalded, were successful in their efforts to hold to the boat, but the third, Joseph Brosseau, apparently became bewildered. He failed to catch on to the boat or to make any effort to help himself, and as he could not swim he sank, and was drowned almost before his companions could realize what had happened. There were many boats, canoes and yachts around at the time, and they rushed to the assistance of the distressed party. On Friday morning the body was found about three-quarters of a mile away from the scene of the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Desaulniers, of St. Lambert, were on a visit here, the guests of Mrs. G. Marchand.

Mr. J. Moisan spent a few days here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Stuart, of Montreal, spent the holidays here at the St. Johns Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Chaput, of Montreal, spent a few days here, the guest of Mr. Chaput's sister, Mrs. G. Marchand.

Several crews are going to St. Lambert to-day to take part in the regatta.

The bonnet-hop held in the Yacht Club House on Dominion Day after the C. C. A. races, was well attended, but quite a number of St. Lambert and Montreal people were disappointed, as they had intended staying for the dance, but there was no late train. Those that remained over spent a most enjoyable evening. Among those present were: Commodore and Mrs. J. B. Tresidder, Hon. and Mrs. W. A. Weir, Mr. and Mrs. G. Rainville, Mr. and Mrs. J. Audet, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wight, Mr. and Mrs. F. Marchand, Mr. and Mrs. H. D'Orsonnais, Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Tresidder, Miss T. Carbin, Montreal; Miss E. Bailey, Westmount; Miss Ferguson, Stratford; Miss H. Larendeau, St. Gabriel de Brandon; Mr. and Mrs. J. Benoit, Mr. and Mrs. E. Stuart, of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Scott Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cousins, Mr. and Mrs. H. McGinnis, Montreal; Miss M. Mount, of Montreal; Miss LaMothe of St. Hyacinthe; Mr. and Mrs. R. Futvoye, Miss E. Hart, of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Desaulniers, of St. Lambert; Mr. and Mrs. Chaput, of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. G. Marchand, Miss M. Weir, Miss B. Tresidder, Miss E. Farrar, the Misses Mercier, Miss W. Bury, of Montreal; Miss V. Robeson, the Misses Black, the Misses Smith, the Misses Rebetaille, Miss G. Roy, Miss Tasse, Messrs. Harold Trotter, A. Ryder, C. H. Pierce, A. J. Wight, C. Trotter, L. Mercier, M. Tresidder, of Montreal; W. Hart, Montreal; W. Cummings, Montreal; Mr. J. Moisan, Montreal; M. Robetaille, Arthur Tresidder, R. Shanneman, A. You Are Going to Have Cramps

Some of these days. You may escape them altogether by taking fifteen or twenty drops of Nerviline at the first sign of the trouble. Nerviline, powerful, penetrating and spasm subduing paralyses a cramp at the very beginning. That's why you can't have them if you use Nerviline.

Just as good for other pains as for cramps. No matter where the pain is or how deeply seated or how useless other remedies have been, Nerviline cures because it's five times stronger than other liniments, more penetrating and therefore more healing. Nerviline will save dollars to every family by saving doctors' bills and save a heap of pain besides. Nerviline is the king of pain.

THOUSAND ISLANDS.

The Thousand Islands of the upper St. Lawrence continue to be popular with Montrealers. A large colony of Canadians is spending the hot months at Gananoque, and many cosy summer homes are located here. The Inn has opened for the season and has good bookings. Tri-weekly hops will be given in the hotel ballroom.

Social gaiety at the Islands will be centred in the Frontenac on Round Island. Tennis, golf, sailing races and dancing here reign supreme. The usual silver trophy cup will be competed for this season in the annual golf and tennis tourneys.

The yacht Rex, owned by G. F. Benson, of Montreal, is one of the fastest boats on the river this season. Mr. Benson is entertaining Mr. George R. Major, manager of the Place Viger Hotel, and Mr. L. S. Robertson, of Montreal, at his island home opposite Round Island. Mrs. G. F. Benson is in the party, and all took dinner at the Frontenac.

Hon. G. R. Carter, Governor of Hawaii, is also registered here. Other prominent persons summering at the Islands are Frederic Remington, the artist; Joseph M. Weber and Miss May Irwin, of theatrical fame, and Commodore Luckenbach, of the New York Yacht Club.

George E. Ashley, of Montreal, is at Alexandria Bay for the summer.

Senator Fulford, of Brockville, Ont., has engaged Captain James Allen, of Kingston, for his pleasure yacht.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pennoyer, of Chicago, are en route to Montreal.

Reginald Graves, of Montreal, is at Alexandria Bay for the season in the interests of the C.P.R.

Dr. and Mrs. Fred. Whiting, of New York, have gone to Montreal to visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Slater, of Montreal, and Master Melville are stopping at the Thousand Island House.

At the Hubbard Hotel, Clayton, are: Miss J. Fogarty, Miss L. Fogarty, Miss A. Fogarty, Dr. and Mrs. E. J. O'Connor, and Mrs. Charles P. Soden.

The new Wellesley Hotel, at Thousand Island Park, is open for the season.

THE WAR SITUATION.

The Japanese army is slowly but steadily advancing all along the line of about 250 miles front. There are frequent skirmishes as the result of which the Russians almost invariably give way. Still more serious for General Kuropatkin is the fact that on June 28 one column of the Japanese army was forty miles east of Mukden, thus gravely threatening his communications. Yesterday General Oku, with thirty thousand men, occupied Kaiping after some heavy fighting. Military experts are under the impression that General Kuropatkin intends to accept a general engagement near Liao Yang, and is not offering any serious opposition to the advance of the Japs upon the battle ground of his own choosing.

A Russian fort on the main line of the Port Arthur defences was captured by the Japs on Wednesday. The fighting in the rear of Port Arthur is constant.

BOGUS LIFE PRESERVERS.

It is stated that the life preservers on the Norge, like the life preservers on the General Slocum, were no good. All the life preservers in existence ought to be thrown overboard occasionally. A large proportion of them would probably sink, but a life preserver that will not float is certainly not worth keeping. Possibly many of those that floated would not be capable of sustaining much more than their own weight. Nearly every time life preservers are wanted it appears as though a large proportion of them were useless. Whether they deteriorate or whether they are a delusion and a snare from the moment they are manufactured, is not clear, but so long as they nominally comply with the requirements of the law, nobody seems to care whether they will keep a man afloat or not. Steamship inspection, which takes no account of the number, or of the condition of the life preservers is very inadequate.

DIRTY MILK CANS.

That was a pretty steep sentence imposed upon Aaron Engel by Recorder Weir yesterday. A fine of $3 or fifteen days for driving without a license; $20 or one month for selling milk without a license; and $40 or two months for keeping milk in dirty cans. But it was not a dollar or a day too severe, and ought to have a good effect upon Aaron and upon others like him. His crime really amounted to wholesale manslaughter. How many children have been killed by his dirty milk nobody will ever know. In every case of this kind we hope the maximum penalties will be imposed. For driving without a license, or selling milk without a license there may be some excuse; for keeping milk in filthy cans there is no excuse whatever. A milkman in gaol for this offence is the right man in the right place. Scores perhaps hundreds of families in Montreal are in mourning to-day through this kind of criminal negligence. The Recorder's severity will have the heartiest public aproval.

AN ENGLISH STUDY OF THE AMERICAN WOMAN.

The London (England) Telegraph publishes an interesting and lively study of the American woman, partly laudatory and partly critical. The subject it will be admitted is a large one, for the woman kind of a nation of 82,000,000 must be a numerous and varied host. If there are women and women anywhere it must be in the United States, or, as Mr. John Hay would say in "America." The writer in the Telegraph, however, seems to think he has focussed his subject pretty well for he makes his statements with little hesitation or reserve. "A state of perfect quiescence," he says, "would be to the American woman of to-day an exquisite inferno." She revels in change, in motion, in all that is new—new clothes, new places of residence, new forms of entertainment, and—thanks to the divorce courts—new husbands." To her the one unendurable horror of existence, we are told, is to settle down to a quiet life. Between a quiet life and death there is little to choose.

The average American young woman is "co-educated" with the average American young man. Their studies are the same; they take the same degrees. What the writer omits to tell us is that the young woman as a general thing carries her studies farther than the young man. In the higher classes of most of the colleges in the land female students are in a decided majority. If the college woman does not marry she usually goes in for some profession, and as a rule does whatever she undertakes to do very well. Others plunge into social activities of various kinds—anything to find an outlet for their energies. "The American woman," if we may quote again, "is quick to catch at an new reform, but she flits from one cause to another with an inconsequence that bodes ill for the success of any." She is quick, keen, and intuitive, but her thought is seldom subtle. What commonsense can see, she sees. She is vigorous in initiative and undaunted by obstacles. She is full of a proud self-confidence. She is not in any special degree interested in politics; and, in the three or four states in which she has obtained full rights of suffrage, she is not to any visible extent hastening the millenium; political methods and result remain much as they were.

It cannot be said either that she is particularly religious. Especially is this true, the writer says, of the younger generation. Dark men in Oriental garb, uttering dark sayings on occult subjects are more likely to command her interest than steady-going teachers of an ancient and familiar gospel. In fact, she seems to be drifting, if our authority is to be depended on, "toward an agreeable sort of paganism, which combines a mild reverence for the good, the true, and the beautiful with an unflinching determination to take all the goods the gods offer in this life." She is interested in personal beauty, but she adores bodily strength. Nor is she content to worship it in others. She must be strong herself, so she plays golf and tennis, swims, rows and paddles; and if there is anything else to be done in the athletic line, she does it. The writer bears testimony that when she is a mother—which doesn't happen as often as President Roosevelt would like—she is usually a good one, thoroughly devoted to her children. What she is as a wife is the one important thing he has omitted to say. Whether with all her knowledge and all her athletics and all her general competent, she still falls in love is a question he has not grappled with. Somehow the whole effect of the picture he draws is to make us half doubt whether so superb and "fit" a creature could fall in love—whether, when the idea occurred to her, she would not simply take a "harmless, necessary" husband, with complete observance of course of the usual forms — the forms which create the illusion in the male mind that he had something to say in the matter. One thing is certain: the American woman counts—no negligible quantity she.

THE PROBLEM OF EVIL.

The recent terrible disaster on the East River near New York, by which over a thousand individuals, mostly children, lost their lives has provoked a great deal of discussion as to whether so much sacrifice of innocent lives is consistent with the theory of a merciful and just God. For the most part the New York Sun has been the recipient of the communications of those whose minds have been agitated on this subject; and the view which that journal has expressed is that "the problem of evil" has ever been and will ever remain an insoluble one. It combats the opinion that such calamities are at war with the belief in a Being of infinite goodness, but convicts equally of inconclusiveness, every attempt, to maintain the opposite position. We are asked to resign ourselves to a hopeless mystery. To our mind this seems to be a most unprofitable view of the matter. A great public calamity is simply an aggregation of individual calamities. These questions are not as a rule raised when a simple individual; or a few individuals only, are affected; though the loss of a single life will often cause the maximum sorrow of which human nature is capable, and impose the severest strain upon religious faith. The same view, it seems to us, is one that recognizes the unalterable character of the laws of nature, and that does not look for the slightest suspension of the action of those laws under any circumstances whatsoever. It is upon these laws that we depend every moment of our lives. In building our houses, in the construction of railways and bridges and ships and roadways, in the preparation of food and the practice of all the useful arts, in everything that makes for the preservation of life and the advancement of civilization, we deal with the laws of nature, and look to find them unchangeable. Upon their absolute fixity all human interests depend. A bridge well made and well looked after will carry railway trains by day and night for fifty years, or as much longer as may be desired, in perfect safety; but if a bridge is not well made or well looked after, is the Author of Nature to supply, by some occult process, the strength that it lacks? If so, where are our demands on the Author of Nature to stop, and what is going to become of the whole scheme of natural law? We do not blame Providence if a shoe-string snaps when we are in a hurry. We do not expect that God will mysteriously strengthen the string that we knew was wearing out and ought to have replaced. Yet if not a string, why a stringer? We want the fire to burn when we have complied with the conditions of which combustion depends; and shall we expect it not to burn when those conditions have been supplied carelessly and without intention? A smoker throws a lighted match on an oil-soaked floor and turns away. The fire is not to catch, some are inclined to say, or at least to think, because if it does, it will do much harm. That simply means that there is to be no law in nature, so that human beings may not suffer from their own or others' carelessness.

It is plain that the safety of human life depends upon the most absolute recognition of the invariability of natural law. That innocent persons should suffer in a general calamity only means that there is no natural law which removes innocent people from the scene of a disaster. What kind of a law can we imagine that would have that effect? If a good man is standing beside a powder-magazine when it explodes, the good man goes up. It was no fault of his, neither was the law under which the explosion took place, at fault, for the conditions were supplied and the explosion followed. It is not too much to say that the human race has been educated to rationality solely by the action of natural law. It is thus that we have been led to connect cause with consequence, and to introduce method into our lives. The Supreme Power has given us a good world to live in and has placed all its resources at our disposal. Fire and water, gravitation and chemical action are all at our service. To use them wisely is life. To use them unwisely may mean death, but in that case to blame the Giver is surely most unreasonable and most unjust.

PROVERBS OF THE WORLD

By Geo. Murray, B.A., Oxon.

There are, I believe, few French proverbs better known to almost all educated men and women than the saying, "Il n'y a pas de grand homme pour son valet-de-chambre." "No man is a hero to his valet." The essence of the sentiment was floating about in the air long before it was brought down to common earth. According to Lord John Russell's definition of a proverb, which I quoted in a previous paper, it was "The wisdom of many, but the wit of one." Who that one was who crystallized the "diction" about the hero was for a long time a matter of doubt. M. Pierre Larouse, at p. 279 of his "Fleurs Historiques," now before me writes: "Selon Mademoiselle Aisse ("Lettres," edition Collin, p. 260), cette phrase aurait ete prononce pour la premiere fois par Madame Cornuel, femme d'esprit du temps de Henri IV., et dont les bon mots sont souvent cites par Mme. de Sevigne. Ce n'est sans doute qu'une reminiscence de cette phrase de Montigne, Peu d'hommes ont este admires par leurs domestiques." Still, the saying, as it is generally quoted, belongs on the authority of Mademoiselle Aisse, whose letters were published in 1853, to Madame Cornuel. Marshal Catinat (1637-1712) (whose modesty was equal to his bravery, so that Sainte-Beuve calls him "le heros sans desir," i.e., "a hero in spite of himself," and of whom, when he saw his name in a new list of marshals, Louis XIV. said to Pere la Chaise and Archbishop Harlay, "C'est bien la vertu couronnee," "Here is virtue crowned," used an expression which may probably be the original of all these French "mots" about the "hero": "Il faut etre bien heros pour l'etre aux yeux de son valet-de-chambre." That is, "A man must indeed be a hero to appear such in the eyes of his valet." In his famous "Caracteres," La Bruyere also wrote in a kindred spirit, "The nearer we approach great men, the clearer we see that they are only men. Rarely do they appear great before their valets," or,in the original French, "Rarement ils sont grands vis-a-vis de leurs valet-de-chambre." The words of Montaigne in his "Essays" III., 2, have been thus translated: "Many a man has seemed to the world to be a miracle, in whom his wife and his valet have not seen anything remarkable. Few men have been admired by their servants. The experience of history says that no one has been a prophet in his own house, or even in his own country. The great Conde, in the same way,when wearied with pompous and extravagant eulogies of himself, sent their authors to ask the opinion of his private manservant, "Allez le demander a mon valet." But long before the times of Conde or Marshal Catinat a king of Sparta, Antigonus I., when a poet named Hermodotus had described as a god, and a son of Hellos, the Sun, simply remarked (as Plutarch tells us), "My valet sings me no such song."Longfellow,in his Hyperion," Book 1.,Chap. I., says: "Dost thou know what a hero is? Why a hero is as much as one should say—a hero." Carlyle in his "Sartor Resartus" tells us: "Hero-worship exists, has existed, and will exist forever, universally among mankind." But the valet draws a line at hero-worship, though Carlyle has written a long book about "Heroes and Hero-Worship," and why does the valet withhold the customary worship? I have always believed that the answer to this question was contained in another proverb, "Familiarity breeds contempt." The valet has heard his master snore — has perhaps even seen him intoxicated—has been sworn at occasionally by him, and at times been nearly brained by a flying bootjack. In what light can he regard these incidents in connection with his heroic master? There can be but one answer,but it effectually settles the question why "no man is a hero to his valet." Goethe refers to the proverb, and says that this is merely because a hero can be recognized only by a hero, and that the valet is only able to estimate his fellows correctly. But another German, Schopenhauer, contends that the proverbial saying is correct, because no man is, or can be, really great. Carlyle in "The Hero as a Man of Letters" seems to agree with Goethe. He writes: "We take the liberty to deny altogether that saying of the witty Frenchman that 'no man is a hero to his valet-de-chambre,' or, if so, it is not the hero's blame, but the valet's; that his soul, namely, is a mean valet-soul. . . . . The valet does not know a hero when he sees him! Alas! no, it requires a kind of hero to do that, and one of the world's wants, in this, as in other senses, is for the most part want of such."

FRESH AIR FUND EXCURSION.

The first excursion this season under the auspices of the Fresh Air Fund was held last Tuesday, and proved highly satisfactory.

There were fully eight hundred and fifty present. The morning that looked a little unpromising brightened up into a charming day. The steamer Duchess of York left at the appointed time with this large company of happy excursionists from the more crowded parts of Griffintown and neighbourhood, and reached Sherringham Park about noon. Here a bountiful supply of sandwiches, buns and cake, with plenty of milk for the children and tea for those of maturer years, was done ample justice to.

Rev. Dr. Campbell, who was present, offered three prizes for specimens of plants and flowers which caused quite an increase in the number of thoite clergy, and was well known also for his literary work.

students of botany, fifty-one specimens being gathered by the winner of the first prize.

The merry afternoon passed all too quickly and the young faces turned sorrowfully homeward, reaching the city about six o'clock. The ladies and gentlemen in charge of the excursion, and to whose untiring efforts much of its success was due, were: Rev. James Patterson, vice-chairman; Rev. E. McManus, Rev. Dr. Campbell, Rural Dean Sanders, Rev. E. DeGruchy, Mr. J. Cordner, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Esmond, Mrs. Allan, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. De Gruchy, Mrs. Penman, Mrs. Caulder, Mrs. Leet, Mrs. Tinning, Mrs. Sanders, the Misses Wilson, Misses Clendinning, Miss McSween, Miss Esmond, Miss Van Buren, Miss Boyd, Miss Tuile, Miss Peard, Miss Leet, Miss Mills.

THE PASSING HOUR.

Even the estimates are guilty of "offensive partisanship."

Major-General Fisher has one important military qualification. He can hold his own.

Scholes is said to have a bad style, but no one will deny that he has a capital finish.

The Democrats knows what's what. They declare for "a Conservative revision of the tariff."

The "fall" would be an exceedingly appropriate time for the Government to bring on the elections.

A live wire was too much for a Shamrock lacrosse player. Those live wires must be "corkers."

A motorman tried to over-ride the Sixth Hussars. He must have taken himself for another Sydney Fisher.

The Minister of War drove to Laprairie camp in a cab. He is a soldier who has his "arm-chair" on wheels.

The stable business community is, no doubt, enjoying this new Fielding feature of "a daily tariff change from Ottawa."

Anyway, those Diamond Sculls of Scholes will not be any harder than a good many other skulls they have in Toronto.

General Cronje, having got married, has now decided to go on the stage. Is it not about time that an alienist looked into his case?

There seems to be a chance that an important part of the defences of Port Ottawa, like Port Arthur, will be a Golden Hill.

No summer is ever quite so hot as people think it is who stifle in summer resort bedrooms, and tell each other "how terrible it must be to-day in the city."

Another Canadian George W. Ross has taken high rank in the art schools of England and France. All our George W. Rosses seem to be artists in their way.

It is said that Kelly, whom Scholes beat for the Diamond Sculls, learned to row while playing the piano. So he has faced the music many times before.

THIS DATE 30 YEARS AGO.

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Merchants Bank was held yesterday, Sir Hugh Allan, the president, in the chair. The directors state in their report that they see no reason to apprehend anything beyond a temporary duiness, at present experienced in business. The rest is now 25 per cent. on the paid-up, or 20 per cent. on the nominal capital, and the net profit made during the past year amounted to $940,968, or over 13 per cent. on the average capital. The paid-up capital amounts to $7,340,930, and the rest to $1,850,000. The report was adopted, and at a subsequent meeting of the directors Sir Hugh Allan was elected president, and Hon. John Hamilton vice-president.

THE late Mr. Jackson Rae was the general manager of the Merchants Bank at the time, and a year after the above report the bank began to get into troubled waters. Efforts to stem the tide proved unavailing, and the shareholders demanded a complete change of management, whereupon the president, Sir Hugh Allan, and Mr. Jackson Rae resigned, the late Hon. John Hamilton becoming president and Mr. McLennan vice-president. Still the drain on deposits went on, and a crisis was averted by the calling in of Mr. Geo. Hague in 1877 as general manager, and then wiping out one-third of the capital stock. Mr. Hague and his assistant manager in a few years placed the bank in a good financial condition. Mr. Hague gave up banking a few years ago.

The Finance Committee resolved last evening to recommend the Council to send Ald. Charles Alexander and R. Thomas with the city treasurer to England to negotiate a new loan of £750,000 sterling. The report will be submitted next Monday evening.

ALD. CHARLES ALEXANDER was chairman of the Finance Committee at the time mentioned, and put his foot down against the intrigues of the Northern Colonization Railway directors to utilize the mayor (the late Dr. Bernard) to help them negotiate their bonds on the London market at the same time as the placing of the city loan, which latter was eventually put through by the London banking house of Morton, Rose & Co. The late Ald. R. Thomas was a member of the council for many years, and resigned to become one of the city assessors. He has been with the silent majority a long time. The late Mr. Black was the city treasurer at the time.

Mr. Freer still performs the duties of postmaster. It is understood that no Cabinet meeting has as yet been held to confirm the appointment of Mr. Lamothe to his position, a mere matter of form, however.

THE late Mr. Freer was superannuated as a result of the age clause, was the excuse given out by the partizans of the Government. The report made by the post office commissioners, of which the late Premier Mercier was chairman, of the management of the Montreal post office had much to do with the changes. Mr. G. J. B. Lamothe was gazetted as postmaster on July 15, 1874, and held the office till 1891, when he retired on a pension.

The quarterly meeting of the Board of Trade took place on Thursday afternoon. The president, Mr. W. Darling, reviewed the most noteworthy matters that had occurred during the past three months, touching upon the port warden's visit to England, the appointment of an assistant port warden, correspondence relative to the reciprocity treaty with the Premier, and changes in the insolvency act. At the request of Mr. M. P. Ryan, the reciprocity correspondence was read.

THE late Mr. Darling was for many years a very prominent merchant of this city and Dominion. During his connection with the Board of Trade, he filled at various times the most important positions in the gift of the members. He ran for the House of Commons once and was defeated. The late Mr. M. P. Ryan represented Montreal Centre in the Commons for many years. In 1882 he was appointed collector of customs for the port of Montreal. He died about ten years ago.

NIAGARA WORKMAN SWEPT OVER FALLS.
Niagara Falls, July 9.—A fatal accident occurred at the crib works of the Toronto Power Company's works late yesterday afternoon. A cribman named Albert Levine, walking along the river side of the crib at a point near the lower end, stumbled and fell in the rushing water, and in a second was swept out of reach. He struggled hard against the waters that were hurrying him to the horseshoe falls, about a mile below, and foot by foot he seemed to be getting closer to the shore, when he came near the intake pipe of the city water works pumping station. In his struggles he managed to reach the rocks, grappled them, and partially raised himself out of the water, but fell back completely exhausted and before the eyes of several people who were unable to render him any assistance was swept over the Falls to his death.
He came from St. Andrew, Argenteine, Que., where his mother resides.

THE FRESH AIR FUND

One Sure Way to Reduce the Mortality Among Infants.

OPEN THE CITY GATES

Some of the Supporters of the Fund and What They Have Done.

July brings the heat which in the crowded city spells death.

The terrible mortality among infants produced by summer conditions has already shocked us, and moved the authorities to emergency measures. There is no such death rate in the country or even in the smaller towns. It is the stifling, suffocating, crushing heat of the great cities which produces the conditions in which disease works so tragically among the children of the poor.

A breath of cool air blowing over fresh fields and rippling waters would revive them.

A week in the country at the critical season would save many lives.

This the Fresh Air Fund seeks to supply to as many as the charity of its patrons permit. It has tickets for the country and free board and lodging by the lakeside for just as many mothers and their gasping children as the good people who support the fund will pay for. The arm of the committee is just as long as the charity of its friends chooses to make it.

Did you ever think that, when you decide against helping the Fresh Air Fund, you close the city gates on a sick mother and, perhaps, a dying babe, and leave them on the inside of the furnace?

But very many have opened the gates, and many are escaping to the life-giving country; and the time is fast coming when your final decision must be given whether you will be with those who open the gates or with those who push them shut.

We append a list of a few of those who have already voted for the opening of the gates.

HEALTH COMMITTEE TO GRAPPLE WITH IMPORTANT MILK PROBLEM

The Health Committee held a meeting yesterday at which several important matters were discussed.

Perhaps the most important matter was that introduced by the chairman, Ald. Dagenais, in connection with the impure milk evil which has recently been brought prominently before the public. The chairman stated that he, with several other members of the committee, had last evening called on a number of the surgeons of the city and discussed with them the milk question. They stated that it was one of great gravity and that steps should at once be taken to provide chemically pure milk for the city babies.

At a meeting held last evening in the office of the chairman, it was decided to form an association to look into the matter.

The Finance Committee would be asked to expropriate $4,000 or $5,000 to establish depots throughout the city for the free distribution, or the sale, at a very low price, of milk to the city's poor. A meeting will be held tomorrow evening to discuss the scheme in its entirety.

The recommendation was well thought of by most of the members of the committee and will probably be endorsed by them.

The committee decided to endorse the recommendation of the mayor for a thorough analysis of the city water supply by three analysists, one from McGill, one from Laval and one to be appointed by the city. There will be fifty-two different analyses extending over a period of a year.

A letter was received from the city solicitors stating that they had looked into the question as to whether the morgue property could be made exempt from taxation.

As this was at present private property they stated that under the city's charter it was at present impossible. They considered that were the property owned by the city or the government it would change the situation. They advised the committee, however, to apply to the local legislature for power to exempt the same.

The chairman, while the matter was under discussion, stated that a very good location for the proposed new morgue, would be at the corner of Lagauchetiere and St. Urbain streets.

A letter was received from Dr. de Montigny stating that he would be pleased to accept the commission which the city offered him to investigate the value of the new Parisian serums for treatment of tuberculosis and typhoid fever.

The meeting then adjourned.

Amusements.

The Play Without a Name, to be produced by the Una Clayton Stock Company at the Theatre Francais, next week, should be of special interest to Montrealers, as it is the work of two Canadian playwrights, W. A. Tremayne and Irving L. Hall, and was specially written for Miss Clayton by them. These gentlemen wrote in conjunction "The Light of Other Days," which has been played by Robert B. Mantell for a season of over forty weeks, a fact which speaks well for it in this season of failures. I made a big hit at the Theatre Francais last season, and is now playing in the Maritime Provinces. They also wrote "The King of Tramps," a successful melodrama which toured the United States the season before last. Besides this Mr. Tremayne, who has been well known in the theatrical world for the past ten years, has written "Lost 24 Hours," and Mr. Mantell's successes, "A Secret Warrant," "A Free Lance," and "The Dagger and the Cross." Besides this play of Miss Clayton's, Messrs. Tremayne and Hall expect to have out at least two new plays next season, and are contracting for a new piece for Mr. Mantell. The management of the Una Clayton Company have decided to offer a prize of $50.00 in gold to the person who sends in a suitable name for the play, now nameless, after witnessing it. The rules for this contest will be found printed on the programme. A grand military night—Tuesday, July 12th, will be a feature of the week—and the carnation matinee which made such a hit this week will be repeated next Thursday.

For the fourth week of the season at the Arena, "The Girl From Paris" will be the offering, and this promises to surpass the previous offerings of the company. "The Girl from Paris" was one of the biggest hits of recent years. There is a real plot, not one of those comic opera nightmares, which begin nowhere and end the same place, but a sane story, carefully worked out with due regard for the feelings of the auditors. The story hinges about the adventures of an English Squire, who pays a visit to Paris, and who readily falls into the whirl of gaiety, known at home as a staid and respectable citizen, subsequent disclosures place him in a bad light with his native villagers, so he hies him to a far away Swiss chalet, and then and there begin a series of complications which furnish a great deal of innocent merriment before being untangled

"The Girl from Paris" will run during the week, and there will be the usual matinee on Wednesday afternoon.

MISS UNA CLAYTON,

Of the Clayton Stock Co., at the Francais next week.

In the enjoyment of the delightful breezes which come from the river over Sohmer Park, entertainments of an excellent character are being given. All week long the park has held record crowds. For the coming week a lot of new talent has been engaged. For those who are longing for a bit of good opera a treat has been arranged. M. Oceeller, the baritone, Mlle. Ciaparelli and M. Vany are to appear in the famous prison scene of "Faust." All three are singers of renown. The Zarnes duo in the flying rings will present a novel and daring performance and Spencer Kelly, a baritone of note, is to be heard in solo work. The Rappo sisters have just returned from an extensive trip through Europe. They are Russian dancers who have made a great name for themselves on the other side of the water. Rostow, the equilibrist, is another big feature for the week, and these with the band should form a programme of rare excellence.

SISTERS RAPPO,

Siberian dancers, who appear at Sohmer Park next week.

Carnegie Steel Mills Shut Down.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 9. — Operations have been suspended at the four steel hoop plants of the Carnegie Steel Mills, two at Youngstown and one each at Girard and Warren. These are the only works of the big steel concern that have been under the wage scale of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. All the other plants of the company are operated on a strictly non-union basis.

The officers of the association regard the shut-down of the mills as a lockout, but the company has not declared that it will not re-open the wage conference when it is ready to resume operations.

Official announcement was made yesterday of the wage settlement with the American Sheet and Tinplate Company.

Cornelius Shields is General Manager.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Sault Ste. Marie, July 9.—Cornelius Shields, who held the position previous to the financial crisis, was to-day re-appointed by the directors of the re-organized Lake Superior Co. as general manager again. He will be given control at once, with instructions to go ahead with the operation of practically all the industries. It was definitely stated by one of the directors that the steel plant will be among those to start as soon as possible, and as this is the most important of all, it means much to the town. The directors have not yet made a definite announcement as to which will be opened first.

Sully Likely to Resume Business.

New York, July 9.—That Daniel J. Sully will soon be in business again is the announcement contained in a statement issued by Mr. Sully's counsel, who says that "all that is necessary now to do is to carry out the forms prescribed by the bankruptcy law, which will be immediately done. A sufficient number in majority and amount of creditors having voted in favour of the proposition upon the terms agreed upon, it follows that the matter will go through."

EACH PEN GUARANTEED FOR 2 YEARS.

EXCHANGE OF ANY PEN OUT OF ORDER WITHIN TWO YEARS.

In this new Fountain Pen will be found a GRAND COMBINATION of Simplicity, Durability and Effectiveness. It is constructed to take ANY NIB, and NO SEPARATE FILLER IS REQUIRED. It is neat in appearance, and it acts better than many Pens costing four or five times as much.

The Pen is so constructed that it is practically impossible for it to get out of order.

It is refilled by simply placing the Pen in the ink and turning the small screw "C" to the right until it stops, when it automatically fills itself. To make ink flow turn screw to the left.

A few turns to the right takes ink back again.

In the end of the Pen is a small brush which cleans the nib after use.

This Pen can be carried in the pocket, in any position, without ink escaping.

THE SHAM FIGHT AT THREE RIVERS

Col. Cotton Inspects Army Service Corps.

CAMP BEING BROKEN UP

Dundonald Drill Was a Success—250 Cases of Sickness Treated in Field Hospital.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Three Rivers, July 9.—The process of breaking up the military camp here, which has been in existence for the past twelve days, was commenced last evening, and was continued in real earnest this morning. By evening, if all goes well, the Army Service Corp will have fulfilled its mission here, and not a single vestage of the camp will remain—only the ashes of the camp fires and the memory of several joyous days spent under canvas.

It has been generally admitted by both the officers and men who participated that the present camp is the best that has ever been held in this city. While numerically not so strong as in former years, the numbers were more than compensated by the smoothness with which every detail was carried out. So far as could be learned there has not been the slightest friction, and Col. Houliston, the commander of the local regiment, says that the citizens generally have commented in terms of great approbation on the manly and orderly character of the men during their sojourn in this vicinity.

Not a little of the credit for the irreproachable conduct of the camp is due to Col. W. D. Gordon, the commandant, who has seemingly augmented the feeling of affection that has always been borne toward him by all arms of the service wherever he has been known. To an outsider who did not know Col. Gordon, it would be surprising that a man occupying a position where insistance upon the strictest discipline is essential should, at the same time, have succeeded in tempering the situation so as to render the daily duties rather a pleasure than irksome in character. Certain it is, in any event, that Col. Gordon occupies a very warm spot in the hearts of all those under his command. Considered amongst all military men to be one of the leading tacticians connected with the Canadian militia, Col. Gordon, while very firm on parade, is most genial in those moments of social relaxation which tend to render the work of the camp less arduous.

THE FIELD DAY.

The sham fight of yesterday morning was in every respect a most successful affair, although the proceedings terminated somewhat more speedily than had been anticipated. This was owing to the fact that Col. Chinic manoeuvred his men so as to place those of his opponent at the very outset at a distinct disadvantage. One regiment was ordered to make a feint attack on the front of the position, while the two other regiments prolonged the line to the left, with their supports and reserves, and make a flanking movement that was carried out admirably. The advance, notwithstanding, was very well contested by the defending forces under Col. Piche. A few prisoners were taken, but were not exactly treated as prisoners of war. At the termination of the field day, when the commanding officers and the field officers of the regiments comprising the fourth infantry division were called up for instruction, as well as to hear the observations of the umpires, Col. Gordon took occasion to thank the officers for the admirable fashion in which throughout the course of the camp their every duty had been performed. He also alluded to the generous support they had given him as divisional commandant.

The formal proceedings of the camp were brought to a termination yesterday afternoon, when a

HIGHEST TENDERER BUILDS ENGINE

Fire Committee Gives Waterous Co. a Job.

CITY LOSES SUM OF $400

Another Firm Was Lowest Tenderer, But Their Offer Was Not Accepted.

Ald. Walsh and Dagenais tried hard at the meeting of the Fire Committee yesterday to save the city some four hundred dollars in the purchase of a new fire engine; but their efforts were fruitless.

The Canadian Fire Engine Company, of London, Ont., was the lowest tenderer but failed to get the contract.

The following were the tenders submitted:

Merryweather (England), one 960 gallon engine, at $6,700, one 1,200 gallon engine for $9,200.

Waterous Engine Company (Ontario), two 1,000 gallon engines, $11,300; one engine for $5,900.

Canadian Fire Engine Company (Ontario), two 1,000 gallon engines, $11,000; one engine for $5,500.

It was explained that the city only needed a single engine. This made the tender of the Canadian Fire Engine Company $400 less than that of the Waterous Engine Company, which company got the contract.

When the meeting opened Mr. Champagne, boiler inspector, submitted a report as to who was the lowest tendered and what kind of engines were being offered. The report showed the engine of the Canadian Engine Company, was the lowest in price.

Ald. Walsh said that this should stand in favour of the engine of the Canadian Fire Engine Company, seeing it was both the lowest in price and the lightest in weight.

Ald. Nelson—"A light engine may not be able to do the work as well as a heavy engine; we have heavy grades in Montreal."

Chief Benoit—"All such engines would have to be drawn by three horses anyway."

POINTS OF ENGINES EXPLAINED.

It was now decided to meet the representatives of the different companies to hear what they had to say.

It was explained by the representative of the Merryweather Company that the company's engines had been in the city's service and had given satisfaction. The company was willing to add runners for winter service seeing they were needed, no extra price would be asked. If a less finely finished engine was required a reduction in price would also be made.

"I should like to know," said Ald. Nelson, "if the boiler inspector found all the engines equally equipped with necessities not mentioned in the specification."

In reply, Mr. Champagne said the engines in this respect were very similar.

The Representative of the Canadian Fire Engine Co was now called, and stated that his company was willing to furnish an engine that would live up to any test that might be required. This engine was the cheapest, besides being the lightest. He said his company had furnished engines to Winnipeg, London, Ont., and other places; this should be sufficient guarantee that the company could build fine machines. His price would also include runners, although they had not been called for in the specifications. The company would also furnish what was termed a water warmer. This would enable steam to be got much quicker than with other engines. The engine would be nickle finished and would be a fine machine in every particular. An engine of this company had done service in Winnipeg for twenty years and was still at work; he thought this should be a good recommendation. It should also be remembered, he said, that the boiler would accommodate imperial gallons instead of American gallons. This meant the weight of the engine, when loaded, would be much less than that of the other engines offered. In conclusion, he held that his offer should not be turned down by the committee.

WATEROUS ENGINE COMPANY.

The representative of the Waterous Engine Company was now heard. He said that while his company's engine might be a little heavier, it was built in that way so that the rough roads of the city would not injure the machine. The company could easily build a light machine, but it would not last. He pointed out that the city a few years ago had bought a couple of the Waterous engines, and that they had given satisfaction in every particular. He said his price included the runners. He did not think it was fair to allow any tendered to amend his tender before the committee. This had been done in the matter of the runners.

To this latter remark Ald. Sauvageau agreed.

Ald. Walsh—"I have heard nothing said before this committee why we should sacrifice $400 so that a dearer machine can be bought."

"We should certainly not turn down the offer of the London, Ont., firm," said Ald. Dagenais. It was now moved by Ald. Dagenais that a deputation go to London and see what kind of engines this firm builds.

Ald. Sauvageau—"I see no good in this; we should be independent, and buy an engine without deputations taking trips."

It was explained by Ald. Robinson that a deputation had gone to London a couple of years ago, but that no good had come of it.

Ald. Nelson—"It may be true that there is some difference in the price, but we should not experiment. We know what the Waterous engine people can do, and we should buy their machine."

Ald. Robertson—"The difference in the price is small, and it will be better to buy a machine we know."

Ald. Walsh—"A couple of years ago we did not want to buy a Waterous engine, because we did not know it. We tried the engine, and it turned out to be good. We should treat the London, Ont., in the same way. Let us get one of their engines, and see if they are not as good as they are represented to be. I would act in this way if I were buying something for myself."

Ald. Dagenais—"I say there is no excuse for us sacrificing $400 in the way proposed; it is not business-like."

Ald. Walsh—"Then let us send the delegation to London to inspect the machines."

The motion to send the delegation was voted down.

Ald. Walsh—"I now move that the Canadian Fire Engine Company get the contract, seeing it has sent in the lowest tenderer."

This motion was also voted down.

A motion was then made by Ald. Nelson to award the contract to the Waterous Company. This was carried with only Ald. Walsh dissenting. Seeing that he was beaten, Ald. Dagenais voted with the majority.

The ayes were: Ald. Nelson, Sauvageau, Duquette, Dagenais and Proulx. Ald. Robertson did not vote, seeing there was a majority in favour of this company.

Vesper Music at Notre Dame.

Owing to the increase of visitors who, every year, during summer time, attend service at Notre Dame Church to hear the great organ of world-wide fame, M. Dussault, the organist, has decided to play after vespers, at 3.20 p. m., a Postlude of a more elaborate character. To-morrow M. Dussault will play as a postlude the first Sonata by Mendelssohn (the four movements).

Miss Florence Quinn, of 61 Cathcart street, left on Thursday morning to spend a month at Robinson, Bury.

CANADIAN ORDER OF FORESTERS

Excellent Report of the Year's Operations

This popular Society held its annual meeting in the city of Toronto, Ont., commencing on Tuesday, June 14th, and reports for the year 1903 presented by the High Court Officers showed the Order to be in a most flourishing condition.

By reference to the report of the High Secretary, Mr. Geo. Faulkner, some conception may be gained of the vast amount of business transacted through the Head Office of the Order.

There were 7,439 admitted during last year and at the close of the year the membership had reached 53,160.

The year opened with a balance on hand in the Insurance Branch of $1,310,159.79. The receipts for the twelve months from Insurance Premiums were $438,210.43 and from interests on investments $52,224.46, making a total of receipts of $185,434.89, or an aggregate of $1,795,594.68. Out of this sum was paid for death claims $268,627.45, leaving a surplus at the end of the year of $1,536,967.23 a net increase for the twelve months of $216,807.44. This sum much exceeds the addition to the funds in any previous year and represents a saving of about 45 per cent. of the total receipts, the remaining 55 per cent. being required for liquidation of the death claims.

The rate at which the surplus funds increased during the year was 16.5 per cent which is somewhat greater than in 1902, when it was 14 per cent.

Death losses were actually less in amount than in 1902 by $3,563.30. In 1902 the death rate was 5.22 and in 1903 5.18.

The receipts from interest for 1903 amounted to $52,224.46 as compared with $44,533.06 the previous year, an increase of $7,671.40 and sufficient to pay 19 per cent of the liabilities arising from death losses.

The surplus moneys of the Insurance Funds are invested as shown in the following table, which gives also the proportion of each of securities to the whole amount:

Municipal and School Debentures, $1,176,742.26 or 77 per cent.
Deposits in chartered Banks, $160,224-97 or 10.5 per cent.
Dominion of Canada Stock, $150,000.00 or 9.8 per cent.
Loan Company Debentures, $40,000.00 or 2.7 per cent.

The Sick and Funeral Benefit Branch of the Society is shown also to be in a most flourishing condition. On the 1st January, 1903, the balance at the credit of the fund in this branch was $23,627.80; the receipts during the year amounted to $109,493.76, making a total of $133,121.65. Out of this sum were paid claims of $94,351.00, leaving at the end of the year a credit balance of $38,770.65. The net gain for the twelve months was $15,142.76.

The expenses of management and organization in 1903 amounted to $65,815.60 or $1.26 per member.

Altogether the record of this purely Canadian Society, for the past year, is one of marked progress and the management and membership are worthy of unqualified congratulations.

The following High Court Officers were elected for the year 1904-5:

J. A. Stewart, High Chief Ranger, Perth, Ont.
Thos. W. Gibson, High Vice Chief Ranger, Toronto, Ont.
Geo. Faulkner, High Secretary, Brantford, Ont.
Jno. Neeland, High Treasurer, Brantford, Ont.
W. L. Roberts, High Auditor, Horning's Mills, Ont.
D. R. Kennedy, High Registrar, Montreal, Que.
A. R. Galpin, High Chaplain, London, Ont.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

RIVALS OF THE CAR BARN BANDITS.

Chicago, July 9.—Three men, whose crimes are said to rival those of the carbarn bandits, Van Dine, Neidermeier, and Marx, are being held by the police here while an investigation is being made of assaults, hold-ups, and train robberies, of which the prisoners are accused.

The existence of the band, whose members say they are "The Original Automatic Trio," became known through the confession of one of them, Truman H. Wilkinson, who is at the point of death from a bullet wound received after he and his companions had held up and shot J. C. Meiler, secretary of a labour union. Suffering from the mortal wound, Wilkinson made a confession, implicating his two companions, Charles Pheloyn and Wm. Erwing, who were surprised and captured in a room. Later the two men also confessed.

The prisoners admitted committing the robbery of a Northern Pacific train at Bear Mouth, Mont., recently, but said nothing of a shooting which took place in connection with the robbery. In his confession Pheloyn spoke of having committed numerous robberies, one of which was in a jewellery store at Waukegan, Ills., $3,000 worth of jewellery having been secured. Pheloyn boasts of having lived in style at Chicago hotels. All three prisoners told of an alleged fortune of $26,000 buried by them in Indiana.

GEE VISITED BY VICTIM'S FATHER.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Woodstock, N. B., July 9. — George Gee, whose sentence of death is to be carried out on the 22nd inst., the Government deciding against commutation, has been notified of this decision. He remarked that he had not expected anything else. He keeps very calm and says that he is ready to die, and his only regret seems to be that the execution cannot be sooner. Yesterday he had as a visitor his uncle, Cornelius Gee, the father of the girl he killed. It will be remembered that Cornelius Gee signed the petition asking for commutation of the sentence. He expressed himself as very sorry that the death sentence must be carried out. The condemned man seems fully conscious of the enormity of the crime he committed. He professes hearty contrition and confidence that his repentance will be effectual.

LUMBER MILLS BURNED AT PORT MOODY.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Vancouver, July 9.—The Canadian Pacific Lumber Mills, at Port Moody, 12 miles from Vancouver, on the C. P. R., were totally destroyed by fire early this morning. The fire started accidentally from a dry kiln. The loss is estimated at 125,000, with insurance of about $75,000, held by English companies in Victoria, B. C.

There is an epidemic of cholera in Teheran, Persia. The deaths number several hundreds daily.

DEMANDED A DRINK AT POINT OF REVOLVER.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Brockville, July 9.—A man, giving the name of Thomas Marron, was placed under arrest at Prescott last night. He walked into the Queen's Hotel bar quite late and demanded a drink, not producing any money. The bartender refused to comply with his request, whereupon Marron pulled from his hip-pocket a loaded revolver, and pointing it at the man behind the counter, exclaimed, "There is my cash." Before he had a chance to fire, a young Englishman pounced upon him and grabbed his hands. Others came to his assistance, and the man was overpowered and turned over to the police. A search of his clothing revealed a suspicious outfit of tools.

In addition to the revolver, he had a number of cartridges, two drills, three pounds of powder, three feet of white fuse, and a can containing oil. He was committeed before the police magistrate to-day, and landed in Brockville gaol.

MASON AND RISCH

ART is the expression of man's joy in his work," some one has truly said, and we find it so in our workshops. Each one of our workers is not only skilful in his particular line, but his heart is in his work, and it is admitted that it is only by a union of heart and mind that the highest ideals are possible.

The head of our tone-regulating department has been with us since we began manufacturing. Our ideals are his, and those under him are animated by the same spirit.

Tone-regulating is one of the final stages the piano passes through. The regulation of the hammer requires a very high degree of skill on the part of the operatives, who through years of training are able to detect immediately the slightest unevenness in the quality of the tone. The felt of the hammer must be neither too hard nor too soft. If too hard, it is pricked up carefully and skilfully, until it is brought to the right degree of softness. If too soft, however, the hammer is removed from the piano and thrown aside, for it cannot be remedied satisfactorily by any treatment.

Our literature tells you more about the care and skill which is employed in the building of a Mason and Risch piano. Won't you write for some of it? 25

"THE ALPHA."

One of the White Bear would-be challengers for the Seawanhaka Cup.
—Taken specially for The Montreal Star, at White Bear Lake, Minn.

They Meet Buffalo Again.

The Royals meet Buffalo again this afternoon, and hope to beat them.

Buffalo's Low Batting.

None of the Buffalo batters are above the three hundred mark now. The Bisons have taken a great slump in batting lately.

Thoney a Failure.

Thoney is not putting up the sensational game for Rochester that he did for New York. It makes a great deal of difference with whom you play.

Jersey City is getting bumps regularly, as well as Buffalo. Strange that these two sterling teams should buck up against it like this.

Rochester is playing a much better games of late than it did at any stage of the race so far.

Viau held Newark down to two hits while Breckenridge did almost as well against the Clamdiggers yesterday.

Baltimore has passed Buffalo, and it now looks as if the Orioles are where they belong.

Dyer will join the Royals next week. One or two other additional changes in the team are looked forward to.

Centre Fielder Gettman, of the Buffalo team is lying near death's door with typhoid fever. He will not be seen in a uniform again this season at any rate.

Manager Buckenberger, of the Bostons, says that the league balls are not as good as they were several years ago. He claims they are too dead. Wonder of the fault isn't with some of Buck's swatters.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The veteran catcher, Wilbert Robinson, of Baltimore, broke a finger Saturday, and thus terminated his connection with professional baseball. Byers the catcher who was with St. Louis and now goes to Baltimore, batted for .224 with St. Louis in 17 games.

While in the East President Dreyfuss was informed that the American League is again figuring on placing a team in Pittsburg. "I was told that the scheme is to transfer the Washington Club to this city," said Mr. Dreyfuss, "the intention being to have Patsy Donovan in charge. I don't think I'll lose any sleep over the rumour."

Chesbro's record of straight victories, like McGinnity's, include every opposing team. In every one of Chesbro's 13 straight he has pitched the full game, relieving nobody and being relieved by nobody. He has pitched nine of the 13 away from home. Chicago stopped Chesbro and McGinnity. Who will or when, then? No matter who does respective feats glory enough in their for both Joe and Jack.

FOOTBALL

James Malcolm, drowned near St. John, N.B., yesterday, was a member of the Dalhousie football team, which visited Montreal last fall. He was a fine type of manhood and well thought of at Dalhousie, where he studied theology. A brother is studying medicine at McGill.

The M.A.A.A. Team.

The following men are requested to turn out for M. A. A. A. against C. P. R., Saturday: Goal, Brighton; backs, Rogers, Brown; half backs, Roberts, Anstey, Mathews; forwards, Small, Douglas, Duncan, Marshall, Stuart, Spares, Hayes and Chinn.

LACROSSE

The Big Match To-day.

Everything is ready.

The players are all in the pink of condition.

The time set is three o'clock.

The rules will be the same as last first of July.

"Tom" Carlind is Gone.

There was a great farewell when Tom Carlind, former captain and vice-president of the Montreal Lacrosse Club, left for Toronto.

Half a hundred members of the club, and personal friends, were at the station to bid him godspeed, and to cheer him on his way.

St. Catherines Loses Good Man.

Special to The Montreal Star.

St. Catharines, Ont., July 9.—There is grief in the lacrosse ranks here, and not without reason, for the Athletics have lost their crack goal tender, E. Brown, the man upon whom most of the hopes of winning the Championship rested. Brown was called away to the States suddenly, last night. On business as he expressed it, but when given the straight question would he return, he answered that he thought he would not. It is quite probable that the brilliant player has been offered and has accepted a "good thing" to play with some Yankee team. There is another disconcerting rumour afloat, fortunately, apparently without foundation. It is that W. J. Elliott, the clever defence man of the Athletics was going away. Elliott denies the rumour stoutly and declares that he will be on hand on Saturday to meet Fergus.

The Athletics management admit that Brown has gone and have put on Charley Devlin, an old timer, to fill his place. Crowse, the Indian, who was here for a time, has departed for Buffalo. There are many who think he did not get half a chance. It was given out that his colour was against him, but it was rather hard to put the Indian out of his own game. Notwithstanding Brown's absence the Athletics will likely win from Fergus Saturday.

AQUATICS

Grand Reception for Scholes.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, July 9. — Champion Lou Scholes was cabled to yesterday by his father, to come home at once and directly to Toronto, instead of visiting St. Louis, as was his original programme. The sub-committee of the Civic reception and the Legislature Committee appointed to arrange details for the city's reception to Scholes, held a conference last night with the representatives of the Toronto Rowing Club and friends of the Champion oarsman, at which it was decided that the reception and presentation should be held in the Queen's Park, after a parade around the city. The presentation probably will take the form of a silver service.

Chateauguay Boating Club.

The new Chateauguay Boating Club signalled its former opening on Saturday by a series of boat races. The attendance was large and the utmost enthusiasm was evinced in the different events. The following were the races with the names of the winners: Canoe, single, 1st Jas. Boulter, 2nd Hy. Crepin, 3rd W. A. Creighton; canoe, tandem, 1st Jas. Boulter and W. W. Crepin, 2nd Ed. Crepin and W. Bastian; lady and gentleman skiff, 1st Miss Maybury and W. A. Creighton, 2nd Miss Creighton and C. McCrudden. After the races a hop was given in the new club-house, and a delightful time was spent. The building was decorated with bunting and flags and looked very pretty. It is the intention of the club to give prizes for cases every week. In the course of a few weeks' time the first annual regatta will be held. There will be boating races at Chateauguay to-day. The club promises to become one of the strongest in the vicinity of Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS

Would Not Allow Boxing.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 9.—The six round boxing bout between Bob Fitzsimmons and Jack O'Brien, which was to have taken place last night, for the benefit of the Evening Telegraph ice fund, was declared off late yesterday afternoon by the management, on account of Mayor Weaver in issuing orders to the police to stop the contest. The Mayor held that the contest would be a prize fight, and, therefore, a violation of the law. He warned the management that he would order the police to arrest the fighters.

Parr Was Defeated.

Parr was defeated last night by Maupas, the Frenchman, in Graeco-Roman style, at the Theatre National Francais. The match was a most interesting one, and ended in two falls to nothing.

Both falls were from flying rolls, and in each instance was due to the starting efforts of the loser. The rules were strict, and were the best rules seen in any local contest. These rules were such as prevail in Europe, yet Jim Parr has been so long on this side of the water and became so accustomed to the careless rules of America, that he appeared to suffer from them, and explained his loss as owing to inability to use his feet. Maupas looked the bigger man of the pair, yet the weights gave Parr a pound the better of the Frenchman. The first fall went to the Frenchman in 32 1-2 minutes, and the second in 18 1-2 minutes.

ATHLETICS

Handicaps at the Island.

2. 100 yards, junior.
3. Egg hunt, junior.
4. Greasy pole, senior.

THE BOWLERS

The Canadians Lost Again.

Canadian Associated Press.

London, July 9.—In the game between the Canadians and Dumbarton, the latter won by 106 to 77. The game at Glasgow was unfinished on account of rain. The score was: Glasgow, 74; Canadians, 63.

THE TURF

Reiff Reported Reinstated.

New York, July 9.—John Rieff, the clever lightweight jockey, who was suspended two years ago by the stewards of the French Jockey Club, is reported on good authority, according to the American, to have been reinstated, and will be granted a license. He is now in San Jose, Calif., and it is not known whether he will ride on American tracks or return to Europe.

More Races at Delorimier Park.

A five days' meet will be given by the Gentlemen's Driving Club at Delorimier Park, on July 26, 27, 28, 29 and 30. There will be two races each day and $2,500 will be given in purses. H. Paquet, 1644 Notre Dame street, will furnish any information required.

To-day's Brighton Handicap.

New York, July 9.—For a purse of $25,000, the prize of the Brighton handicap, the greatest horses in America are carded to struggle to-day at Brighton Beach. The track has been deluged with rain at intervals during the past two days, but yesterday afternoon it dried out rapidly and should be in good condition to-day.

Eleven horses are listed. Should Water Boy, Hermis, Irish Lad, The Picket and Ort Wells go, they alone will furnish a grand spectacle. Water Boy, owned by J. B. Haggin, of California, who won the Brighton of last year and set a record for the mile and one quarter, not since equalled, has trained in grand style. He will be ridden by Lucien Lyne.

Ort Wells, from the stable of John A. Drake, is the opponent Water Boy's trainers are watching. Hermis, winner of the Suburban, has a world of speed, but on account of slight lameness he showed after winning the test handicap at Brighton on Wednesday, he may not be capable of his best work, if indeed he is not withdrawn. Two others—Palm Bearer and St. Valentine—may go from the same stable. The Picket has shown well in his training, but will have a different sort of race to run from the Brooklyn handicap, which he won. Irish Lad is a doubtful starter. For the others on the list, little favour can be found, except for Highball, the winner of the American Derby. The probable starters, weights, jockeys and odds are:

Odds.	Horse and Jockey.	Weight
5	Ort Wells (O'Neil)	108
4	Irish Lad (Hildebrand)	127
3½	Water Boy (Lyne)	129
25	Major Daingerfield (Martin)	124
3	Hermis (Redfern)	129
5	The Picket	124
25	Eugenia Burch (Shaw)	110
20	St. Valentine (Travers)	92
20	Palm Bearer (H. Phillips)	95
15	Broomstick (Burns)	104
8	Highball (Odom)	115

means for every man.

It means the fostering of a given amount of nerve energy which otherwise is wasted.

It means the saving of the unconscious consumption of nerve energy which you are expending day by day.

A little strain at first, but when multiplied by the number of seconds in a day, means a big loss of nerve energy.

O-P-C suspensories are sold by nearly all druggists. No doubt your druggist has them. We assure you it will be to your interest to insist upon the O-P-C. If your dealer will not supply you, send to us. No. 2 O-P-C, lisle, $1.00; No. 3 O-P-C, silk, $1.50.

Toronto Favours National Testimonial to Lord Dundonald.

RECEPTION THERE ON 15TH

In Meantime Steps Are Being Taken to Get in Touch With Other Municipalities.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, July 9.—A public meeting was held here yesterday afternoon to consider what steps should be taken to recognize the services of Lord Dundonald to Canada. The meeting was well attended, and representatives both of citizens and the military, and also of both political parties were present.

J. F. Ellis, president of the Board of Trade, presided, and Major Robertson, of the 48th Highlanders, acted as secretary. After a discussion, in which the warmest appreciation of Lord Dundonald's work in Canada was expressed, it was decided on the motion of Col. Davidson, of the 48th Highlanders, that a committee be appointed and instructed to take such steps as they might deem advisable to present Lord Dundonald with an address and such other tokens as they might think best, at a date suitable to His Lordship. It was stated by the chairman that many desired that a sword of honour be given to Lord Dundonald.

ALL TO CO-OPERATE.

Lieut. Osborne, of the Grenadiers, then moved that the committee be recommended to co-operate with committees in other municipalities in Canada to further the cause of such a general scheme as might seem to be desirable, having for its object an expression upon the part of the whole of the people of Canada of the esteem in which the Earl of Dundonald is held by the Canadian citizens, and of their hearty and grateful appreciation of his eminent and devoted public services.

Lieut. Osborne believed that although Lord Dundonald might be leaving at an early date, the matter should not be rushed. An opportunity should be given to all the citizens of the Dominion to contribute to a token of appreciation which, he advocated, should be worthy of the country as well as of the dintinguished soldier who was to receive it.

Barlow Cumberland, who spoke at some length, stated that Lord Dundonald had done an immense good to Canada, as a whole, and the citizens at large desired to express their appreciation. The motive that prompted that desire could not be laid at the door of militarism. It was due to the splendid work he had achieved. Lieut. Osborne's motion was finally carried.

At the committee meeting, which followed the public meeting, it was arranged to tender Lord Dundonald a public reception on Friday, the 15th instant, and to present him then with an illuminated address. It was also agreed to take proceedings at once to get into touch with other municipalities to arrange for a testimonial for the country at large.

Among the speakers in addition to those mentioned were Col. Denison, Dr. Ferguson, Capt. Dixon and Mayor W. M. Hendrie, jr.

BEST OF THE CANADIANS.

Percy F. Barrett, of the Lambton Golf and Country Club, of Toronto, made the best showing of the Canadian contestants, finishing with 157 for the 36 holes. Barrett was paired with Harry Cowis of Indianapolis, Ind., and played a brilliant game, although he took seven strokes for the sixth hole in the first eighteenth on account of driving into the long grass.

Barrett, so far as the results of to-day go, is in the money, for in the morning round he took 78 strokes and came in this afternoon with a came in yesterday afternoon with a card of 79. His card for the thirty-six holes follows:

Out	6 3 4 3 4 7 4 4 4—39

MONTREAL'S REPRESENTATIVE.

C. R. Murray, of the Westmount Golf Club, of Montreal, met with misfortune at several holes and the best he could do was 165 for the 36 holes. Yesterday morning he took 84 and reduced these figure three strokes yesterday afternoon.

Murray played a consistent game for the first twenty-seven holes, taking forty-two strokes for each nine holes. He came home like a whirlwind in the last nine, taking thirty-nine for the course. He is still in the competition to-day, as he finishes below 174, which was fifteen strokes behind the player in tenth place. His card follows:

IN HARD LUCK.

Murray took nine strokes for the sixth hole in the afternoon. He had to drop a ball going to this hole after driving into the long grass and took three strokes on the putting green. However, he finished the round in forty-two, which shows that his golf was brilliant in spots.

CUMMINS ALSO IN RUNNING.

The other Canadian player was Geo. Cummins, of the Toronto Golf Club. Cummins will also be in the play to-day, as he finished with 166. He played decidedly consistent golf, but was not equal to the fast company, taking two 83's. Cummins had only one three on his card, negotiating the eighteenth hole in the morning round in those figures. Cummins was paired off with W. Duffy, of St. Louis, who took eighty-nine for the morning round and withdrew. Following is Cummins' card:

Out	5 4 5 4 4 5 6 4 4—41
In	6 4 4 6 4 6 5 4 3—42—83
Out..	6 4 5 4 4 6 4 5 4—43
In	5 4 4 6 3 6 5 4 4—41—83—166

The presence of the Canadian golfers gave the championship an international flavour. The trio of representatives from the Dominion arrived on Tuesday. Cummins was entered in time, but Barrett and Murray were accepted with half a dozen others who were late in sending in their names.

THE MORNING ROUND.

With the weather anything but pleasant, sixty-nine professional and amateur golfers started on the first thirty-two holes of the seventy-two holes medal play competition for the open championship of the United States Golf Association.

Intermittent showers did not interfere with the play, however, as evidenced by the scores made by Stewart Gardner, of Garden City, Long Island, and John Hobens, of Yountakah, N. J., who were the second pair to finish, the former taking 75 and the latter 77. David Foulis, of the Chicago Golf Club, brother of the 1896 champion, came in a few minutes later with a 79.

Three Canadian golfers are entered in the competition. Oke, the champion of Canada, did not enter, although the Dominion is ably represented by George Cummins, of Toronto; C. R. Murray, of Montreal, and P. F. Barrett, of Toronto. Owing to their belated entry the Canadians did not start until almost last. However, at practice they have been showing well, Cummins doing the course several times in 77. Barrett was credited with a 75, and Murray with a 76.

THE FIRST EIGHTEEN HOLES.

Following are the scores for the first eighteen holes:

	Out.	In.	T'l.
Stewart Gardner, Garden City, L. I.	37	38	75
John Hobens, Yountakah, N. J.	38	39	77
David Foulis, Chicago ..	40	39	79
Lawrence Auchterlonie, Glenview	41	39	80
Kenneth Edwards, Midlothian	42	42	84
Fred. McLeod, Rockford, Illinois	42	44	86
A. C. Tollifson, Lake Geneva, Wis.	45	41	86
George Turpie, Calumet.	42	42	84

THE CANADIANS.

George Cummins, of Toronto, was the first of the Canadian players to finish. He made an 83, which, at the conclusion of the first quarter, did not look particularly bright for his landing in the prize money.

His card follows:

Out	5 4 5 4 4 5 6 4 4-41
In	6 4 4 6 4 6 5 4 3-42—83

WHY ITALIAN KICKED GIRL.

She Bought Ice Cream and Did Not Pay for It.

An ice cream peddler, named Benedict Siniliculo, was arrested last night on a charge of kicking an eight year old girl. The child, whose name is Florence Casey, lives with her parents at 627 Dorchester street. It is alleged that she bought some ice cream from the Italian and did not pay for it. He says that is the reason he kicked her. Siniliculo will be tried next week.

Quebec Rifle Association.

The Province of Quebec Rifle Association annual meeting will take place on August 9, 10 and 11.

A new match for "green" shots, that is those who have never won any prize before, has been added this year, and, moreover, official prizes are given in all the matches for green shots. Every inducement is offered this year to bring out and encourage new shots. The ranges and the accommodation there have been greatly improved since last year and a large entry list is expected.

The New Cheese-Loading Device Tested.

The new cheese-loading apparatus, which was invented by Capt. MacMaster, was successfuly tested yesterday at the Thomson line wharf, where the steamer Kildona was loading. The apparatus loaded cheese much faster and with less damage to the boxes than the former method, and requires fewer men to manipulate it.

A long shaft leads down into the hold of the steamer. A carrier runs within this. The cheese when placed on this runs to the bottom of the shaft, where it is removed from the try, which immediately rises.

One or two cheese can be carried at once. The apparatus is said to be capable of loading over 1,000 cheese an hour.

JAPANESE HAVE TAKEN KAIPING

Gen. Oku Occupied This Point After Severe Fighting.

AROUND PORT ARTHUR

Tokio Reports That the Besieging Lines are Being Drawn Closer Daily.

Tokio, July 9.—Operations of paramount importance are being carried out within the war scene, but the Government succeeds in veiling them in almost absolute secrecy. It is known that the Japanese army and navy are daily tightening their grip upon Port Arthur, and that the final assault upon it and its fall is a question of weeks only.

Russian fort No. 16, on the main line of the defences to Port Arthur was captured on Wednesday by the Japanese.

The Japanese have reached the northeast slope of Takushan Mountain, the summit of which is less than three miles from Port Arthur. The Russians claim to have annihilated three Japanese regiments during the last week.

The Jiji Shimpo reports that the southward movement from Taschichao, in the Liao Yang region, was palpably checked Monday. The paper again urges the Government to permit foreign correspondents to proceed to the front.

In some quarters, the German denial of any intention of harbouring the Russian Port Arthur squadron at Kiaochau, the German port in the Chinese province of Shantung, is regarded as being quite natural. Nevertheless the report that the squadron will seek shelter there if it succeeds in getting away from Port Arthur, is generally accepted as being true.

The Japanese legation at Seoul has made an investigtion of the situation in Northern Corea. It reports that that section of the country is prosperous. The traces of Russian devastation are slight. The Japanese have disbursed two million yen there. The Admiralty denies that Russian torpedo boats were at Gensan, Corea, on Wednesday, as reported.

JAPS TAKE KAIPING.

Tokio, July 9.—After severe fighting General Oku occupied Kaiping on Friday.

AN EARLIER DESPATCH.

London, July 9.—A despatch to the Chronicle from Tokio, says that the Japanese have captured more than ten guns and fifty prisoners near Kaiping. Strenuous fighting is going on daily at all points of contact. The Russians are making a stubborn defence. The Japanese fleet at Port Arthur is cooperating with the army and is bombarding the forts. The Che Foo correspondent of the Express says it is reported that there has been an engagement between the rival fleets at Port Arthur. The Japanese ashore have captured fort No. 14, in addition to fort No. 16. Both dominate sections of the main defences. Severe fighting continues.

WHAT THE RUSSIANS EXPECT.

St. Petersburg, July 9. — The War Office confirms the reports of the Japanese advance toward Kai Chou, as reported Thursday, but is inclined to regard this movement as a demonstration south, while changing the disposition of troops to make an attack elsewhere, danger is considered to be more likely from the direction of Ta or Fengshui Passes, although there is no sign of a movement in force there. Yet the advance upon Kai Chou extends over a front of 15 miles, and includes about 30,000 men. The Japanese centre is at Tai Si Shan, on the Choui river, eight miles southeast of Kai Chou. Constant skirmishing with General Samsonoff and Chirikoff is occurring as the Japanese move forward along the railroad and from the Siu Yen mountains.

The military expert of the Russkyja Viedomosti believes General Kuropatkin has now decided to accept a general engagement near Liao Yang, wherefore he is not offering strong resistance to the advance of the Japanese on Feng Wang Cheng, desiring to draw them on to his own selected ground.

AN OFFICIAL REPORT.

St. Petersburg, July 9.—General Sakharoff, commander of the eastern army, in a long despatch to the General Staff, dated Thursday, reports outpost skirmishes over a wide territory throughout July 5 and July 6, which indicate a general advance of the Japanese, who are driving back the Russian advance posts. Sakharoff says the Russian losses during the fighting July 6th have not been definitely ascertained, but it is known that two officers and fifteen men were killed or wounded. He says:

"In general we observed July 6th that the enemy was taking the offensive simultaneously along his whole front, extending from the seashore as far as the valley of the Chin-Chan river. On the morning of July 7 a vast camp of the enemy was discovered in the neighbourhood of Siao Khetzza. At 8 a.m., July 7, the enemy occupied the heights near Baositchja. No rains have fallen recently."

JAPS HAVE BIG FORCE.

Liao Yang, July 9.—There have been repeated skirmishes during the past few days at Dalin Pass, some of them being hand to hand encounters.

The Japanese have a tremendous force east of Liao Yang, and they evidently want to force a big battle before the rains set in.

BRITISH SQUADRON MOVING.

Wei-Hai-Wei, July 9.—It is understood that the British squadron which left here unexpectedly Thursday is anchored in Yung-Ching bay, sixty-three miles south-east of Chefoo, in consequence of orders to evacuate the gulf of Pechili. The squadron consists of four battleships and four cruisers.

Tien-Tsin, July 9.—The British cruiser Espiegle, which the Russians refused to allow to enter the port of New-Chwang, is returning to Chinwang-Tai. The Russian object in retaining a gunboat anchored at the mouth of the river at New-Chwang is supposed to be to dispute the passage should the Espiegle return.

JAP PLANS MISCARRIED.

St. Petersburg, July 9.—During the latest encounter of the Vladivostok squadron with the Japanese ships the Japanese plans miscarried, and they fired upon their own torpedo boats. When they were attacked by the Japanese torpedo boats the Russians broke through the torpedo boat line, sinking two of the boats. The others retreated toward the Japanese cruiser, and she, taking them for Russians coming to attack her, opened a deadly fire upon them, the effect of which the Russians were not able to ascertain.

JAPAN'S TRADE UNAFFECTED.

London, July 9.—The Tokio correspondent of the Standard says the war has as yet in no wise affected Japan's foreign trade, the total for the six months ending June 30 having been 320 million yen, an increase of 28 million yen over the corresponding period last year. The exports increased 11 million yen.

A CHEFOO REPORT.

Cheefoo, July 9.—Junks which passed through the gulf of Pe-Chi-Li on Thursday, July 7, report having heard heavy firing at sea all that afternoon.

SEVEN KILLED BY DYNAMITE EXPLOSION.

Sudbury, Ont., July 9.—Seven men were killed and two injured as the result of a premature dynamite eplosion up on the new C. P. R. Sudbury-Toronto line. The accident occurred on the afternoon of Wednesday about four miles south of Romford, at which point the proposed line joins the main line of the C. P. R. a few miles east of Sudbury. The dead are three Austrians, three Finlanders, and the walking boss, H. Poole, of Wakefield, Que. The bodies of the killed, save Poole, were literally blown to pieces. The foreman, named McIntyre, and an Italian labourer were badly injured, but will recover. The accident occurred through placing dynamite in a hole which had shortly before been blown with powder. It was still warm and the dynamite, it is thought, was exploded by the heat. McIntyre says, after blowing the hole, he walked about two hundred feet away to wait for it to cool. When Walking Boss Poole, thinking the hole was not too hot, ordered it loaded with dynamite. Several boxes had already been put down when the explosion occurred, blowing the whole gang to pieces. Poole's body was sent to Wakefield yesterday.

NORGE DEATH LIST AGAIN REDUCED.

Glasgow, Scotland, July 9.—Another boat with Norge survivors, eleven passengers, eight sailors, and one child, has reached the Shetland Islands. This boat, which was in charge of the second mate of the Norge, was eight days on the open sea. The party rowed the entire distance to the islands. All on board the boat were exhausted and unable to stand when they landed. The Shetland Islands were sighted by the boat on Wednesday last.

The arrival of twenty survivors of the Norge at the Shetland Islands, in addition to the nineteen landed at Thorshaven Farce Islands yesterday, reduces the number of the missing to 590, with one more boat of the Norge yet to be heard from.

Boy's Body is Recovered.

Special to the Montreal Star.

St. Catharines, Ont., July 8.—This evening the searchers for the body of 17 year old Edward Plumley, who was drowned Tuesday, near Lock Two of the old canal, recovered the body at Port Dalhousie, three or four miles away from the scene of the accident.

A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM.

This is a condition (or disease) to which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness—a break-down, as it were, of the vital forces that sustain the system. No matter what may be its causes (for they are almost numberless), its symptoms are much the same—the more prominent being sleeplessness, sense of prostration or weariness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinary affairs of life. Now, what alone is absolutely essential in all such cases is increased vitality—vigour—

VITAL STRENGTH & ENERGY to throw off these morbid feelings, and experience proves that as night succeeds the day this may be more certainly secured by a course of the celebrated life-reviving tonic

Cable News From Various Lands.

AUSTRIAN RULER IS DISTURBED

Over Activity of Edward VII. in International Politics.

HE FEARS FOR MONARCHY

Lest it Receive Shock in England Through Royally Inspired Unpopular Treaty.

Special Cable from Our London Correspondent.

Vienna, July 9.—Francis Joseph and the devoted monarchists of his entourage are disturbed by the activity of King Edward in practical international politics. They fear that the King, who is drawing attention to himself as an initiator of great policies, is deviating from the straight path of British constitutionalism and risking grave complications with public opinion.

They argue that if the British people should be drawn into an unfortunate treaty with Germany, for example, they would hold the King responsible and the monarchical system of England would suffer a severe strain, which would be the worst misfortune the principle of monarchy could sustain.

It would be more harmful than the fall of the Russian autocracy, because it would show the restless people of Europe that monarchy in its most popular form cannot withstand the highly democratic forces of the modern world.

Telegrams to the Vienna press state that similar arguments are finding lodgment in thoughtful minds in Great Britain.

THE JAPANESE FLEET.

Proposal of Japan's Vice-Admiral to Reorganize it.

Special by Cable from a Montreal Star Correspondent.

St. Petersburg, July 8.—In a long letter from Constantinople, a correspondent of the St. Petersburg Gazette reports an interview with a Japanese vice-admiral, who is at Constantinople with a proposal to reorganize the Turkish fleet. The correspondent states that he cannot state whether the vice-admiral's mission is official or individual, but alleges that the proposal is taken seriously in high political circles. Abdul Hamid is eager to obtain the necessary money for setting the fleet in order, but how that is to be done puzzles everybody, and temporarily balks proceedings. Turkish statesmen, who arranged the interview between the Russian journalist and the Japanese vice-admiral informed a Star correspondent that emissaries like the naval officer ond secret agents of Japan are in the Persian court in Afghanistan, and even in the large towns of trans-Caucasia, fermenting discontent. They stated that the news that th Governor-General of Tiflis would be assassinated was received in Tokio a few hours before the act was committed. The Russian inference from all this is that the Japanese are plotting trouble for Russia everywhere, and are taking the initial steps for a pan-Asiatic league against the white race.

CANTON HAS TELEPHONE LINES.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Tokio, July 9.—Thanks to a Japanese engineer, Canton is now in possession of telephone facilities. The Chinese Imperial Post Office some time ago engaged Mr. Masahide Yoshida, a well known Japanese engineer, to install a telephone system in Canton, and he proceeded there last autumn for that purpose. The streets of Canton being very narrow and the houses comparatively high, the erection of the telephone posts was no easy task. Owing to the superstition of the Chinese objections were raised against the erection of the posts in certain positions as regarded the houses. The work was further retarded by the inexperience of the Chinese workmen. In spite of these drawbacks, however, Mr. Yoshida was able to complete the construction of the work by the end of last year, and the telephone was opened for public use on the 1st of January, (Chinese calendar). The number of telephone posts is 646, the length of the route twenty-one miles, that of wires (double lines) 200 miles, the number of telephone connections 155 and subscribers 120. The last item is increasing at the rate of twenty a month.

SOCIAL REFORMS AMONG JAPANESE

Movement Chiefly Theoretical Like Fabian Propaganda in England.

POLITICAL PARTY CRUSHED

Industrial Progress Has Killed the Feudal Virtues—Workers Are Without Legal Rights.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Tokio, July 9.—The Government of Japan has never adhered very closely to the "let alone" principle. It has been paternalistic. In the early period of reconstruction Japan derived its political principles from Bluntschli, who is opposed to the individualistic view of governmental functions. Marquis Ito later on favoured German absolutism and the German idea of state interference with individualism became more in vogue.

The government registers, inspects and controls many private industries and enterprises. It registers all lawyers, physicians, patent agents, brokers, newspaper proprietors, playing-card makers, brewers and bankers; all corporations, insurance companies, lands, house, ships, arms, dogs, cabs, omnibuses; books, newspapers, trademarks and patents; lodging houses, saloons, restaurants, theatres, music halls and places of worship.

It carries on elementary and higher education; it owns many factories; it owns the monopoly of tobacco; it possesses and manages a considerable part of the railways and it executes many functions which in other countries have always been left to private enterprise. Most of the registered businesses are subjected to strict inspection and criticism.

NO PROTECTION FOR WORKERS

At the same time the protection of the working classes has been neglected. There is no factory law, no employers' liability act, no workingman's insurance laws. There is no regulation of workers' ages, hours of work, amount of air and light, cubic space for each worker, temperature of working rooms or necessary sanitary accommodations. Holidays and meal hours are not regulated by law. Wages may be paid as employers choose. No regulation controls the fencing and guarding of machinery, staircases, elevators, mines and quarries. Cleaning, repairing and working of all plants are left to individual regulation. An army of women and children is mercilessly employed in factories, often times under the lash of overseers. Heartrending accidents are reported from time to time.

MONEY IDEAL HAS SWEPT LAND.

Since the war with China in 1894-95, the industrial expansion of Japan has developed to an extraordinary extent. Machinery which wrought such a revolution in the United States, has been producing a similar result in Japan. Modern social democracy in the island empire has been to a great extent the product of this industrial revolution. Socialism has found its followers among the workers, who have looked with disfavour on the "let alone" principles of the bourgeoisie, whose moral conception has been corrupted by a misconstrued individualism. Recent revolutions have washed away the old moral ideals, which served to preserve fair dealing between man and man. No moral principle has as yet taken their place.

The money ideal has swept over everything. Piety, generosity, mercifulness, self-sacrifice, which descended as a moral inheritance from the old knighthood of Japan, have been gradually obliterated and perhaps one of the great blessings of the war will be the revival of these ideals.

Up till now it has been difficult—that is, since the revolution—to conduct philanthropic undertakings on account of the absence of public-spirited men. Wealthy people have rarely manifested that generosity that used to characterize the old feudal lord.

SOCIAL CONFLICT IS AT HAND.

Naturally the work of elevating the lower classes has been left almost untouched. The poor envy the rich, who indulge in a round of luxury and extravagance. These feelings are likely to give rise to a great social conflict in the near future. The decay of the old feudalistic spirit and the worship of money are at the root of the growth of the social democracy in Japan.

Five years ago a small body of thinking men inaugurated the Socialistic association. It is something like the Fabian Society of England. Its motto is "For the right moment you must wait; but when the time comes strike hard."

Japanese socialism aims at the emancipation of land and industrial capital from individual and class ownership and the vesting of them in the community for the general benefit. It looks for the extinction of private property in land and the abolition of rent. It works for the transference to the community of such industrial capital as can be conveniently managed by the communities and the nation. Rent and interest will then be added to the reward of labour, the idle class now living on the labour of others will disappear. The association is spreading its opinions by all means in its power and seeking recruits from all classes of the community.

ACTIVE SOCIALISM SUPPRESSED.

The leaders of this movement are all educated men. The society may be regarded as the counterpart of the English Fabian society. Its ideals are lofty and it patiently waits for the right moment to realize them. Real reforms, they believe, can only be effected through the efforts of law-abiding, God-fearing and intelligent men and women.

When this society attempted to organize a political party the government, under the law for preserving public peace, suppressed the movement. The platform of the suppressed party was modeled on the manifesto of the communistic party as formulated by Karl Marx and Frederic Engels in 1848.

Triumph of Clerical Party.

Special to The Montreal Star.

St. Petersburg, July 9.—Gen. Glasoff's appointment as minister of public instruction is attributed to the triumph of the Russian clerical party. Gen. Glasoff took upon him the obligation to give the elementary lay schools over to the clergy and to introduce into all secondary governmental schools the teaching of orthodox holy scripture. This plan for the coming academical year has just now been published, in which two weekly lessons in the church catechism are made obligatory for all classes in all secondary schools.

CARNEGIE'S ATTACK ON KING EDWARD

Quotations From His Book Reproduced in British Press.

REPUTATION WILL SUFFER

Outbreak of Dowie is What Lead Newspapers to Adopt This Course.

Special to The Montreal Star.

London, July 9.—Dowie's rodomotades against King Edward have had a curious and unexpected result. A number of newspapers in London, as well as in the provinces in discussing the pros and cons of the affair have called attention to uncomplimentary references to the sovereign that are contained in Carnegie's book entitled "Triumphant Democracy." Compared with the number of people who read newspapers, few have read the book in question, but the action of the press in printing some of the most unfriendly paragraphs about King Edward contained in the book of the Laird of Skibo, has rendered the masses aware, for the first time, of some of the sentiments which Mr. Carnegie entertained with regard to the King at the time he published the book. The paragraphs to which the most exception is taken are the following:

"Of course men can kiss the hand of Queen Victoria," as one is proud to kiss the hand of any good woman, but how will it be when the Prince of Wales holds out his hand and Chamberlain, Morley, Collins, Broadhurst, Trevelyan, Fowler, and others are required to kiss that. But the first man who feels as he ought to feel will either smile when the hand is extended at the suggestion that he could so demean himself and give it a good hearty shake, or else will knock His Royal Highness down."

And again:

"Whenever our American is met abroad with the assertion that the government in a republic is corrupt he can safely say that for one ounce of corruption here there is a full pound avoirdupois in Great Britain. Just look at some of the jobs of the Prince of Wales. He is colonel of this or that regiment and draws salaries for duties he does not perform. He has many mean modes of drawing money from the public."

The general opinion is that Carnegie will suffer a decline in the public estimation as a result of his attacks.

CHINESE PROBLEM IN AUSTRALIA.

Federal and State Authorities Dispute Over Celestial Immigrants.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Sydney, N.S.W., July 9.—Nine Chinamen were brought to Port Darwin from their native land and were prohibited from landing by the federal authorities under the terms of the alien-restriction act. The Chinamen produced papers purporting to show that they had lived in this country and had returned, as they had a legal right to do. The state authorities took the part of the Chinamen and sent officers on board the vessel, with instructions to the captain that the Celestials must be given up. The captain was in a dilemma, but on the appearance of a squad of policemen to enforce the orders of the state authorities he wisely decided to get rid of his alien passengers. Next morning, having taken in his cargo, he weighed anchor. A long and bitter altercation at once ensued between Mr. Jenkins, the minister representing the state, and Mr. Hughes, the new labour minister for external affairs, who sought to uphold the terms of the immigration act. The case was at once taken to the local police court, where the Chinamen were charged with an infringement of the act by coming ashore. Thereupon the Chinese produced the papers, on which the state authorities relied to uphold their action in allowing them to land, but on being submitted to a test the papers were found to be fraudulent. Meantime the vessel which brought them ashore having sailed for China, both the federal and the state authorities were left with their visitors on their hands. It looked for a little while as if the case of the nine Chinamen would almost cause as much stir in political circles as that of the famous six hatters when Sir Edmund Barton was at the head of affairs.

THE THRALDOM OF FINLAND.

Prince Obolensky's Appointment as Governor Unpopular.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Vienna, July 9.—Not even Die Rechswehr, hitherto a defender of Russia on all occasions, utters a word of approval regarding the appointment of Prince Obolensky, as Governor-General of Finland. Other important Austrian and Hungarian journals criticize the appointment severely and charge Obolensky "with barbarities."

Die Seit describes the prince as perhaps the cruelest official in the Russian civil service. They narrate many of his acts while governor of Kharkov, as evidence that he will be unspeakably repugnant to the Finnish.

Critics are agreed that in view of the Czar's uncompromising attitute, Finland will continue to be a theatre of strife growing ever more acute as the Muscovite yoke becomes more galling. Friends of Russia deplore the apparent determination of the St. Petersburg Government to forfeit the world's good will and predict that a day will come when the Czar's Government will rue its unwisdom.

HIGH-HANDED ACTION.

Stockholm, July 9.—Advices from Hango, Finland, state that when the passenger steamer Tornea touched at that port recently, the police compelled the passengers and crew to leave the vessel and stand on the quay two hours in the driving rain until the ship had been thoroughly searched. The people were then permitted to return singly showing passports. Another time the police boarded the same vessel at sea, arriving in the revenue cutter at 2 a.m. and requiring men, women and children to come on deck and stand until their passports had been examined. Similar incidents are constantly taking place and are expected to lead to serious trouble. The Russians appear to believe that the entire population of North-Western Europe is conspiring to overthrow the Czardom.

HER LAST YEAR ON FRENCH SHORE

France Will Probably Not Again Send Naval Guard.

A JOINT POLICE PATROL

Appointed by Both Powers Will Hereafter Keep Peace Among the Fishermen.

Special to The Montreal Star.

St. John's, Nfld., July 9.—Owing to the settlement of the French shore question recently arranged between England and France, this will probably be the last year that a squadron of French warships will be found in Newfoundland waters, for the first time in 190 years. This season the French ships are of an inferior class, in consequence of the better ships being held at Cherbourg in preparation for any possibility of an international struggle in the far east, and two out of the four dispatched here are merely armed transports.

Of course, such ships are quite as useful for the purposes they serve here—patrolling the seaboard and the banks and adjusting fishery disputes — but France has always tried to keep on an equality with the British ships here. One year, indeed, she went farther and commissioned as flagship the big ironclad Isly in place of the rather obsolete Clocheterie, which had done duty previously. The British Government in turn withdrew the Cleopatra as flagship, replacing her with the cruiser Charybdis, which in speed and armament outclassed the Isly, and supplemented the Charybdis with the Indefatigable. Now the Isly has been replaced by the Dupleix and the other ships are proportionately weaker.

After this season the coast will be patrolled by naval police, to be organized by both powers, and probably not to exceed a score of men in a couple of tugs, as the French, having abandoned the treaty shore, will probably leave the outer waters also, being no longer able to land and dry their catch on the coast. Therefore there will be no need for a French squadron, as heretofore.

Men of age consult too long, and adventure too little. Still there are thousands of young people to-day who remain on the fence starving, simply because they hesitate so long as to whether they should do this or that, until they miss the MIGHTY OPPORTUNITY that might have settled their problem and secured them independence for life, these very people then waste more time and energy in looking after this lost opportunity and in telling their friends how in vain they regret that they did not seize the road to wealth. Surely the one who can seize promptly and firmly an opportunity as it passes is the ACHIEVER. REMEMBER, he who seeks and will not eagerly grasp when once 'tis offered, SHALL NEVER FIND IT MORE.

ROSE EIGHTY FEET INTO AIR.

Not the First but the Tenth Big Producer.

Extract from the Montreal Daily Star, Thursday April 14, 1904.

OIL ROSE EIGHTY FEET INTO AIR.

Leamington, Ont., April 14.—The Leamington Oil Company have struck another oil gusher about a mile and a quarter from this town. When the drill was pulled out at a depth of 1,044 feet, a six-inch stream of oil started eighty feet into the air. This well, the fourth struck by the company, promises to be the best producer. There is also a strong flow of gas, as in the case of the other wells.

Extract from the Montreal Daily Star, Tuesday, April 5, 1904.

NATURAL GAS FOR LEAMINGTON.

Windsor, Ont., April 5.—It has been found that a daily flow of 13,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas is escaping from the new oil well sunk by the Leamington Oil Co., near that place, and steps will be taken to supply the town of Leamington with it. The amount of gas escaping every day is sufficient for the needs of ten places the size of Leamington, and the farmers in the vicinity of the new well will shortly commence drilling for gas.

Extract from the Petrolia Advertiser, June 8, 1904.

The United Gas Company struck a big oil well a few miles out of Leamington on Friday. This well is flowing at the rate of 150 barrels an hour.

From Leamington Post, June 9, 1904.

Two wells were bought in by the Standard Oil Co. on the Geo. Foster farm on Friday last. One of the wells is pronounced the best in the field, running more than 100 bbls. during the night.

WANTED

100 People——With $50.00 Each——100 People

To Unite in Drilling a Deep Well for Oil and Gas in the New

LEAMINGTON—WHEATLEY, "Canadian—Oil—Territory."

This new ELDORADO Oil field is situated thirty miles east of Detroit, between Leamington and Wheatley, Ontario, Canada, on the direct line of railway, right in the heart of the peach-growing district, and promises to excel all previous Oil producing fields in Canada, if not destined to become the greatest high-grade oil-producing centre in the world.

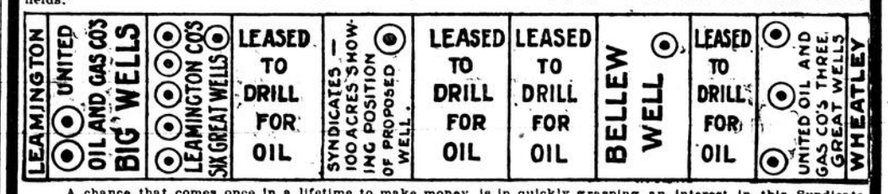
BOUNDED

by two wonderful producing Oil Fields, which are situated within about one to three miles on either side.

LIE UNTESTED—100 Acres of Promising Oil Territory, 100

The Oil and Gas rights of which I have secured FOR THIS SYNDICATE, and is on the Farm of Robert Simpson, S., the north half of Lot 233, on the north Talbot road, in the township of Mersea Essex County Ontario, Canada.

This Rough Plan shows favorable position of Syndicate's 100 acres, lying between these two fortune-earning fields:



A chance that comes once in a lifetime to make money, is in quickly grasping an interest in this Syndicate, which will cost you to-day, fully paid, fifty dollars, and which in a few weeks' time may sell readily for thousands of dollars. Understand fully, you are not buying a six per cent. bond, but an interest for fifty dollars in a Syndicate who will have sole control of the oil and gas rights on one hundred acres of land wedged in between two great producing fields, which may earn enormous revenues for the Syndicate.

REALIZE, a prolific oil field has just been discovered which is also rich in natural gas, and proven over a large area, in about the centre of which there lies, wholly untested, one hundred acres of land, upon which one hundred or more wells could be sunk. The United Oil and Gas Company's big flowing well, which has been reported to have produced from 300 to 500 barrels of oil per day, is but a short distance to the east, and about a mile to the west are the great wells of Leamington.

Under ordinary circumstances this field would be capitalized at one million dollars, whereas a fifty dollar interest is on a basis of only a capitalization of TEN thousand dollars. The opportunity is an exceptional one. There is absolutely no personal liability, and each interest is fully paid upon receipt of fifty ($50) dollars.

INVESTORS

Don't wait to invest your money until you have accumulated thousands, you may never have them that way, whereas an immediate investment of $50 in this syndicate may in a few weeks' time produce for you a fortune that will command you position in life.

I will sell 100 interests at fifty dollars ($50) each, for which I agree to give a contract and defray the cost to sink a deep well to the same depth as oil has been found in other surrounding wells, which is from 1,000 to 1,300 ft. deep. Contracts are now being made by me for the drilling of this well through competent oil drilling firms in Petrolia, and the boring will be pushed with all possible speed, so soon as the syndicate is closed. Should a corporate company be formed on the bringing in of oil—say, for example:—with a capitalization of only $200,000, each $50 interest holder would receive ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS OF THE STOCK.

Oil is King of Profitable Speculation.

If you have lost money on various deals the possible profits in this proposition may compensate you for all your losses and still leave you independent. Deep in the bowels of the earth lie stored the basis of all wealth. We propose to drill for it, and in a position where indications are of a sure nature. Undoubtedly, this is the greatest opportunity possible to earn tremendous profits in a very short time, upon a small outlay, or, in other words, to get into a square deal at a minimum cost. Have the nerve to grasp the deal and occupy a front seat when the profits are dealt around.

INVESTIGATION WILL PROVE that 50 MILES NORTH OF THIS FIELD MANY WELLS WERE DISCOVERED WHICH GAVE A DAILY OUTPUT OF 5,000 TO 7,500 BARRELS OF OIL. This would represent at present price of oil a profit of about $15,000.00 per day. Similar indications seem to exist in the new Leamington-Wheatley field.

I think well enough of this proposition to recommend it to my best clients. No fifty dollars invested in any enterprise can cover as broad a field for obtaining prospective enormous profits as an interest in this well and surrounding hundred acres may give to the interest holders, and the results will be known speedily, as a well can be drilled in this district in less than two months' time.

MY MAN ON THE SPOT SAYS:

I predict the greatest oil boom excitement Canada has ever known will take place within the next few weeks, when the buyers of this Syndicate may be offered handsome prices before the completion of the Syndicate well. Larger fortunes have been made through oil development than in any other known investment. CONSIDER THESE FACTS, one hundred dollars invested in the Union Stock Oil Company returned the investor one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, whereas, a one hundred dollar interest in the Home Oil Stock Company repaid the possessor fifty thousand dollars, and there are many other Oil Syndicates who have under honorable management shown similar results. Investors in these Companies had no brighter prospects when they invested than offered you in this proposition.

GOVERNMENT BOUNTY.

The Canadian Government, in order to encourage Oil development, will pay a bounty of 53 cents per barrel on all crude Oil produced from June 8th, 1904. This in itself ensures a safe revenue to a producing well, apart from the market price paid by the refiners in Canada. The Standard Oil Company have competition.

Allotments will be made in the order in which subscriptions are received until the whole 100 interests are disposed of, when the Allotment Book will be closed, and money returned intact to those who have over-subscribed, as there will positively only be one hundred of the interests offered for sale.

Orders either by telegraph or long distance 'phone, intimating that your money is following will be accepted in the order received.

TERMS—Cash with application, or, if preferred, twenty-five dollars may accompany order and balance follow 30 days later.

Not more than five interests will be allotted to any one subscriber.

Few readers of the principal newspapers published in Canada and the United States can have missed reading during the past five years my quotations for the purchase and sale of stocks under the headings of "I Will Buy—I Will Sell."

This advertising method which I have originated has cost me thousands of dollars, but I now hold in return the largest and best pleased list of clients of any broker. My advertising has brought me into correspondence with the multitude of investors who write me either with a view to purchase or to sell stocks which comprise the shares of every active company on the continent, and in order to get in closer touch with my clients I have opened branch offices where my clients are most numerous, for their convenience, where my representative will be pleased to receive applications to the SIMPSON FARM SYNDICATE WELL, which proposition I heartily recommend.

From Leading Papers on the Leamington - Wheatley Oil Territory.

Glycerine Factory for Leamington.

It is rumored that the Petrolia Torpedo Co., Limited, are making arrangements to erect a glycerine factory at the town of Leamington.

Leamington Post, June 9, 1904.

Will Again Burn Natural Gas.

Leamington Oil Co. Will Supply the Town.

A special meeting of the council was held Monday afternoon to confer with the officials of the Leamington Oil Co. regarding the natural gas supply for the town.

The Leamington Oil Co. are the owners of all the wells on the Rymal and also the well on Gordon Gowman's place. Each of these supply some gas, one well in particular being very strong. Mr. Beamer thinks his company could furnish about 1,000,000 feet per day, which is more than the town would require. It is doubtful, however, if this much gas can be found, but there is abundance for summer use, and possibly enough for cook stoves during the winter.

A verbal agreement was made to allow the oil company to use the town's pipe, the company and the town to share alike in the receipts. By this agreement the town will be to no expense, the company making what connections are necessary.

While nothing has yet been settled about gas rates, it is likely that $2 per month will be charged for cook stoves.

Leamington Post, June 9, 1904.

Leamington's Future.

Perhaps never before has the outlook for Leamington's future appeared so bright as it does at present, not even the boom year when Ward's tobacco factory was in course of erection.

Leamington oil field is attracting attention from far and near. All of Petrolia's big oil men have been here, and there is in town now D. B. Whipple, N. P. Hickey, and D. J. Govyen, of Bowling Green, Ohio, who are largely interested in the oil fields of Ohio.

The oil field, which is now being opened up, is giving employment to men and teams. The hotels are full of oil men, and oil talk and oil smell fill the air.

Leamington's kickers and knockers should have little to say just now.

Leamington Post, June 23rd, 1904.

Abundance of Natural Gas.

Biggest Well of Recent Years Struck Yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon the Leamington Oil Co. struck a rich flow of gas on the Rymal Farm. This is the best gas well struck in several years, and assures Leamington of a good supply of gas. The best sign in connection with this well is that it is absolutely dry, the cable and tools coming from the bottom of the well, over 1,000 feet down, as dry as powder. The well has not yet been tested, but experts who have seen it think it will show a pressure of 350 to 400 pounds, and will supply in the neighborhood of 2,000,000 feet per day.

The officials of the company say Leamington will again be burning gas, and that in a very short time.

Leamington Post, June 23rd, 1904.

Dr. Albert Foster and daughter, of Rockford, Mich., are spending a few days in town. Dr. Foster is one of the lucky men whose farm is a mine of wealth producing oil. The only well yet sunk on his farm is yielding one hundred barrels per day, but several other wells have been contracted for. No one of his old friends will regret his good fortune.

DIVIDEND OF 1,000 PER CENT.

Pioneer Company of the Batson Oil Field Orders a Large Disbursement.

Houston, Tex., June 20.—At the regular monthly meeting of the directors of the Paraffine Oil Co., at Beaumont, last week, it was voted to pay a dividend of 1,000 per cent., or $100,000, to the shareholders June 15th.

The Paraffine Oil Company has a capital stock of $10,000, all of which is issued. It was the first company to prospect at Batson, and it opened up the field there by bringing in a well from the shallow sands on October 31, 1903.

It is now one of the largest producers in the Batson field, and after paying the dividend of $100,000, which is the first to be declared by the company, it will have a comfortable surplus on hand.

The directors of the company are: S. W. Pipkin, president; W. L. Douglass, vice-president; F. W. Freeman, C. W. Kidd, John W. Davis, Dr. J. A. Lovett and L. A. Carlton.

WHY YOU SHOULD INVEST IN MARCONI SECURITIES

1st: Because MARCONI WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY is a commercial necessity. Any means by which business may be carried on more safely or quickly, or by means of which the cost of production may be materially reduced, is a commercial necessity. A commercial necessity is primarily a money-maker and hence a dividend-payer. That the Marconi wireless system of telegraphy will do all this is apparent to the most casual observer. Business may be carried on more safely and quickly because the line of communication is never broken or outof repair, and the cost is reduced because the Marconi Company is at no expense for right of way, poles, wires or repairs. They have no use for a large and expensive force of linemen to keep up the line, or, as is the case in the cable service, expensively equipped vessels to grapple, raise and splice broken cables. No matter at what point or from what side one may look at it, the wireless system of communication is a "money-saver" and hence a "money-maker."

2nd: MARCONI WIRELESS TELEGRAPH is an electrical invention, and most electrical inventions have proven a great success; some of them have made millions for their stockholders, and Marconi Wireless Telegraphy will simply be a repetition of history in that line. Take for example, the Edison Electric Light, the Western Union Telegraph, New York Electric Controller Co., the Bell Telephone Co. (whose stock increased 1,000 times in value), or any one of the numerous others, and their history is the same. The stockholders who invested $1.00 in some of these companies finally were able to take out $1,000 for every $1.00 invested. MARCONI WIRELESS is conceded to be greatest and most useful of all.

3rd: MARCONI SECURITIES have already proved to the public that they are the best investment now offered. The stock of the English Company, which was first sold at $5 per share, has since advanced to $22 on the London Stock Exchange, showing an increase of 340 per cent. The AMERICAN COMPANY should offer even a greater opportunity, owing to its enormous territory.

4th: THE MARCONI SYSTEM is rapidly being adopted for commercial purposes. It is now employed on over 100 Ocean Steamships and by the navies of the leading nations of the world. The United States Government has given the Marconi Company a contract to build Three Stations in Alaska, thereby recognizing it as an absolute necessity. A very important fact is that the Postal and Western Union Telegraph Companies receive and transmit messages for the Marconi Company from each of their 50,000 Offices, thus giving the Marconi Company the benefit of their hundreds of millions invested in receiving and operating plants, and enabling the Marconi System at the present time to have an office in every town in the United States and Canada.

5th: THE MARCONI WIRELESS TELEGRAPH SYSTEM has the stamp of approval of the leading governments of the world, and is undergoing serious study and consideration by others, preparatory to adoption.

Canada has just subsidized the MARCONI SYSTEM, after a long series of practical tests, and has contracted to pay the Company an initial subsidy of $25,000 and an annual payment of $12,500.

Stations at Port Gibbon, Chena and Tolovana, Alaska, are in progress of erection for the use of the United States Government. Permission has been obtained from the Cuban Government for the erection of a station in Havana to connect with the United States. Permission has been obtained for installation in Porto Rico, and stations are contemplated in the West Indies. The Pacific Coast has been carefully surveyed by engineers of the Company, and the installation at various points there will naturally follow with the extension of the system.

The British Government has contracted to use the Marconi System for all vessels of the navy for fourteen years; has agreed upon a basis of interchange of business with the Postal Telegraph system, and is using the systemin connection with its lighthouse and life-saving service and in the army.

The Italian Government has adopted the Marconi System in every department in which it can be made of service. Further, the Italian Government, after a series of tests extending over several months, has published the results of its investigations in an official pamphlet, giving unqualified indorsement to the system, and has instructed its delegate to the St. Louis Exposition to report the results of these investigations officially to the diplomatic representatives of the United States.

The Newfoundland Government has adopted the Marconi System, and has contracted for the erection of five stations in Labrador.

6th: Lloyds has adopted it exclusively for fourteen years. It is employed in the service of Reuter's Telegram Co., the Associated Press, the New York Herald. Large banking and commercial establishments in Great Britain and the United States have subscribed to the Marconi code.

The Patents and Field of the Marconi Company.

7th: The MARCONI WIRELESS TELEGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA owns the present and prospective patents of Marconi, as well as the Wireless patents of Thomas A. Edison, Professor Michael Idvorsky Pupin, of Columbia College, and Professor J. A. Fleming, of the university of London. This fact practically removes fear of serious competition. The company is authorized to operate under the above-named wireless patents in the United States, Cuba, Porto Rico, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippine Islands, Alaska and the Aleutian Islands. It has plants in operation as follows: Transatlantic Station, South Wellfleet, Mass.; Nantucket Light (Herald) Station, Siasconset, Mass.; Sagaponack, L.I.; Babylon, L.I.; New York (American Line) Station. There is also a Transatlantic Station at Glace Bay, Nova Scotia; another at Poldhu, Cornwall, and one building at Pisa, Italy.

8th: THE MARCONI SYSTEM HOLDS TO-DAY THE SAME POSITION ON THE SEA THAT THE TELEPHONE DOES ON LAND. IN THIS WAY IT COMPARES IDENTICALLY WITH THE BELL TELEPHONE. It has been endorsed by the press of the United States, and by such men as Thos. A. Edison, who is one of the Board of Engineers of the MARCONI COMPANY; Andrew Carnegie, Jos. J. Frye, J. A. Fleming, and many others of equal prominence.

9th: Because the personnel of the company guarantees an honest, competent and conservative management of the business of the Company. On the Board of Directors are such well known and highly respected men as H. H. McClure, of McClure's Magazine; John W. Griggs, former United States Attorney-General; Eugene H. Lewis, of Eaton & Lewis, New York; John D. Oppe, of Montreal, and others of equal prominence.

We advise immediate application in order to secure certificates at present price. The stock is now on the eve of a pronounced advance.

Applications are received in amounts of not less than $120, and it is advisable that immediate remittance be made.

RAILWAY AND CANAL ESTIMATES

Occupied Attention of House of Commons Yesterday.

MR. EMMERSON IN A HURRY

He Proposed to Vote Money for G. T. P. But Was Persuaded to Wait.

Special Staff Correspondence.

The Press Gallery, House of Commons, Ottawa, July 9.—The afternoon and evening sittings of the House yesterday were devoted entirely to discussion of the estimates. All of the items relating to the Intercolonial Railway were passed, with the exception of one which was held over with the understanding that matters in general, having reference to the railway, may be considered when it comes up. Several items of canal expenditure were also put through.

Mr. Gourley asked whether it was the policy of the Government to double track the Intercolonial all the way from Halifax to Moncton.

"The future must take care of itself," replied Mr. Emmerson.

WANTED TO VOTE G. T. P. MONEY.

The Minister of Railways desired to take up the item of $500,000 for surveys and other expenses of the National Trans-Continental Railway, but the Conservatives objected. Mr. Clarke and Mr. Lennox pointed out that a great deal of information should be given to the House with reference to this matter and also that the evidence taken by Judge Winchester regarding the employment of aliens should be printed for distribution. Mr. Emmerson was not prepared to go into the subject fully, and the discussion of it was accordingly postponed.

The discussion of the Davis contract for lighting the Cornwall canal was fixed for next Wednesday.

CANAL EXPENDITURES MISUSED.

Dr. Reid, of Grenville, criticized the expense incurred in looking after the canals. They were used largely as a means of good jobs to Liberals who were well paid for doing practically nothing. The case of the collector of customs at Cardinal was a flagrant instance of this kind of thing. This man had nothing to do, and did not collect a dollar of customs during the year. Nevertheless his annual stipend was $1,000 together with an allowance of a dollar a day for driving from the village to the locks. In addition he got 20 cents an hour for extra work on Sundays, although the canal was closed from midnight Saturday to midnight Sunday. Besides all this he was paid office rent, although he used his own house as an office and received an allowance for fuel.

Mr. Emmerson did not attempt to deny that the facts were as set forth, but contented himself with observing that there were now more locks than there used to be—a remark that had no connection whatever with the matter in hand.

A COSTLY WORK.

Dr. Reid also criticized the vote of $40,000 to complete the Galops Rapids channel. He said that this work was commenced in 1878. The original contractors were paid $170,000 to make a 14-foot channel. Now a vote was taken year after year and the explanation was offered that the money was needed to take out the loose rock carried down by the swift current. Inasmuch as a dam had been built and the water was now still, the doctor could not see how this explanation applied.

The discussion continued for some time, but it developed little beyond the obvious fact that Mr. Emmerson had no knowledge of matters relating to the canals. The work at the Galops Rapid thus far has cost Canada $1,400,000, and it is estimated that another $200,000 will be required.

Mr. Haggart repeated the statement which he has made many times that, as Minister, he refused to sanction this work. He knew then as he knew now that an equally good channel could have been procured for $100,000.

Mr. Emmerson substantially admitted this but urged that the channel of which Mr. Haggart spoke of would be partly in the United States waters.

Dr. Reid closed the case with the remark that vessels have to go into United States waters as things are.

The House sat until midnight. The items carried during the day included those for strengthening the bridges on the Intercolonial Railway, for the Galops Canal, the removing of obstructions in and the improvement of the Welland Canal and for deepening the summit level between Port Colborne and Thorold.

PARLIAMENTARY NOTES.

Mr. Monk gives notice of an enquiry regarding the cost of the dredge Richelieu lying at the wharf at Sabrevois.

Mr. Clarke will enquire as to the number of railways having schedules prepared under the fair-wage resolution.

Sir Wm. Mulock gives notice that on Tuesday he will introduce a bill to consolidate and amend the act respecting Alien Labour. This is the bill already foreshadowed to enable the Government to deport expert as well as artizan labour.

The Situation in Armenia.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Constantinople, July 9.—In spite of all the sympathy shown by the powers for the Armenians in their present situation at Sassoon, it is a pity to see, after the recent destruction of seventeen villages, that the powers share the opinion of the porte that the Armenians must be brought down from the mountains and established in the plains on crown lands. The porte declares that this is necessary, as in this way the revolutionaries who stir up the inhabitants of the mountains will no longer find shelter there. The authorities then will not have to make searches for arms nor arrests and the revolutionists will not dare enter the low country. This is true, but it is none the less true that in trying to help the Armenians away from a danger they make them fall into another, as they will be more exposed to the attacks of the kurds.

WALL STREET IS PLEASED

Over the Nomination of Judge Parker by the Democrats.

BROKERS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Charles G. Gates Has Returned from West More Bullish Than Ever.

From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star resident in New York.

New York, July 9. — The passing of Bryan and Hearst at St. Louis has acted like a great sedative to Wall Street. Nothing like it has ever been witnessed before. The calm since prevailing is equal to a whole year's product of Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup factory. Even Russell Sage, with the heavy load of responsibility and one hundred million dollars resting upon him, feels lighter and happier. Over a year ago Uncle Russell, with the keen foresight which his 84 years had given to him, sounded the warning of coming trouble, and trouble came. Now he sees a large rift in the heavens, and says that the future will be bright, providing that caution is used and manipulation stopped. Honest business is what this country now needs. The big crops in the fields please Uncle Russell very much, and with fine weather for the next few months, he says, the United States will have a new era of prosperity opened before it.

CONFIDENCE RESTORED.

Of course, with this view everyone in the financial world agrees. Bryan and Hearst were regarded as two gorgonian monsters, who were ready to pounce down on values. Now that they are harmless, at least so far as the immediate future is concerned, and a solid, safe and conservative candidate has been placed before the people by the Democratic party, confidence has been restored, as no other circumstance or series of circumstances could have restored it. In short, nothing is to be feared from either political party, and the success of either will not be a menace to trade and commerce, and the millions of activities of the country. Hence, the quiet and peaceful repose of Wall Street.

WALL STREET CONTRIBUTIONS.

Some persons assert that Wall street is committed to Parker as regards the campaign funds, owing to the fact that August Belmont has so conspicuously promoted his candidacy, but of this nothing definite is known. The truth probably is that those who favour Democratic policies will contribute toward Parker's success, while those who favour Republican men and measures will as freely contribute to the Roosevelt fund. It is a matter of utter impossibility to determine which has the larger following in the financial district. There is, however, decided opposition in that part of the world to allowing Tammany Hall to handle any part of the campaign funds. Any Wall street contributions, it is safe to say, will go to the national and not to the city committee. Consequently, there will be wailing and anguish in the Tiger's interior when the good things are passed out. Tammany, evidently, had wind on this aspect of the campaign when Parker became prominent as a candidate, and opposed him as far as its own safety permitted. Parker's nomination almost certainly means that Tammany must provide its own campaign funds.

GATES IS A BULL.

Charles G. Gates, who has just returned from the west, says: "I am a more enthusiastic bull than ever as a result of this trip. There are lots of bears in the west, and a lot of people who are short of stocks. I talked with them, but they gave no reasons for their pessimism, which appealed to me. All the unpleasant things said were discounted a long while ago. The situation has changed entirely since these people were made wise."

MUCH MONEY IN CIRCULATION.

With regard to the large increase of money in circulation in the United States, as shown by the U. S. Treasury reports, a Republican authority says: "This fact must sicken the souls of the Bryan element of the Democratic party, as it has been their constant cry that there is not enough money in the country, but the figures $12,000,000 increase last month and $133,000,000 since last July—will prove more than welcome to the business men and financiers of the country, especially as large amounts of gold have been exported. The indications are that there will be no disturbance in the money market when the time comes to move the crops."

NO DECREASE IN EXPORTS.

The idea prevalent in some sections, that exports from the United States are decreasing, is refuted by the latest Government reports. In the case of grain, there has been a decrease because farmers are unable to meet the foreign demand, but the decrease is insignificant. As regards manufactures, there is a considerable increase.

During the past week $150,000,000 in dividends and interest was paid at this centre, and most of the money is seeking reinvestment. This accounts for the excellent demand for high-class bonds of every description.

It is believed in financial circles that when the war ends in the Far East some serious questions will come up for settlement. In what manner they will affect the financial status no one can predict, but in some quarters the feeling prevails that grave conditions may arise.

Ottawa Street Railway Sued for $3,000.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, July 9.—A writ has been issued against the Ottawa Electric Railway Company by Michael Cunningham and Annie M. Cunningham, claiming $3,000 damages for the death of their nine-year-old son, John James Cunningham, who was killed by a street car on Bank street on June 28th. The plaintiffs claim that the death of their son was caused by the negligence of the defendants and their servants.

Shot Himself in the Neck.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Peterborough, Ont., July 9.—Richard Steel, a farmer, 42 years of age, unmarried, living with his brother, Joseph, at Villiers, near Keene, committed suicide by shooting himself in the neck with a shot-gun.

Steel's mind was unbalanced.

Shot by Young Playfellow.

Plattsburg, N. Y., July 9.—Leo Beauvais, the ten-year-old son of Alfred Beauvais, of this city, was shot and killed by a neighbour boy, who was playing with a 22-calibre rifle, and in shooting at a swallow missed his aim and struck young Beauvais.

STREET GOSSIP AND STOCK EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Star Office, Saturday, July 9

Although Nova Scotia Steel and Coal stock has appeared in a very different financial light from its sister industrials in Nova Scotia, the price of the stock has not entirely escaped the experiences of Dominion Iron and Dominion Coal. The break in yesterday's trading to 65 indicated that selling has been going on for some time for a reason known to some which has not yet been allowed to become known by the general public. The "Street" believes the influence which has been working against the stock is a forthcoming issues of new shares in some form or other possibly not yet definitely decided upon, but thought by some as likely to be in the shape of preferred stock. Liquidation has been going on quietly, but persistently, for some time, which has carried the price down from 80 to 65. Yesterday the decline was more rapid than at any time since the weakness became apparent. A couple of years ago Nova Scotia rose to 119, and last year a good deal of the stock was taken off the market for investment at 100 or over. The apparently strong financial position of the company and the 6 per cent. dividend was a strong attraction to buyers. If the company is in need of fresh capital, it has not been generally known until very recently, but the initial weakness seems to have been caused through the underwriters of $800,000 of new stock being called at a time when the market was some 25 or 30 points underneath them. It is believed the bears have been gunning for some weak holders in that connection. The balance of the market has been devoid of striking changes, C. P. R. having maintained its late strength with only a fractional reaction. There is also some talk of new stock in connection with that company. Transactions for the four business days of this week were 9,000 shares and $80,000 bonds.

TRADE SITUATION IN UNITED STATES.

New York, July 8.—Advices to the International Mercantile Agency indicate little change during the week in the general trade situation, jobbing centres reporting active business, several lines showing good gains over a year ago. In many instances these gains are sufficient to compensate for losses sustained early in the season. The outlook is generally encouraging, reports from all centres indicating a more hopeful feeling than prevailed a month ago. While there is the natural uncertainty of the Presidential year, there are few "blue spots" in the country.

At the West, business is active. Future deliveries in clothing, shoes, men's furnishing, and some branches of dry goods compare favourably with a year ago. Sections where mills have shut down reflect some depression, but this is not unusual for "inventory week." Owing to the rush work of a year ago, and consequent postponement of repairs needed then, the period of inaction this year may be somewhat prolonged. Except for the hardship to employes, this interference is not likely to prove of much inconvenience. The labour situation at the West has unquestionably improved. Employers and employes are working in greater harmony than at this date for years past.

The more confident tone noted a week ago in the iron industry continues, and the belief gains ground that the improvement will gradually extend to all branches of trade. Pittsburg has grown decidedly optimistic, compared with the forebodings of depression emanating from that centre last month. Some improvement is noted in New England, where general trade is picking up slightly, and merchants appear somewhat more hopeful. Jobbers are very anxious, however, making hand to mouth purchases in cotton goods so as to meet whatever declines the market develops. Retail business is dull, but collections are fair. The shut-down of cotton mills is still the chief cause of depression, and with the stoppage of additional spindles during July and August, the outlook in this line is still dubious.

Crop conditions everywhere have shown improvement, the Government report confirming the encouraging tone of private advices to the effect that the outlook was excellent for a record cotton yield.

Hot weather makes no difference in the enthusiasm of the happy crowds that throng our aisles these pleasant summer days.

Of course we put forth extra efforts to make the formerly dull months of July and August busy, bustling ones, and we are succeeding beyond our expectations.

To-day's story is brimful of interest, and if you realize it as you should you'll surely be a Monday visitor.

OGILVY'S
Second to None in Dry Goods

Montreal, Saturday, July 9.

We spend thousands of dollars every year in newspaper advertising. We aim to tell people what they ought to know in spite of themselves. But sometimes the truth seems like exaggeration because so much exaggeration passes for truth.

Newspapers are so overloaded with screaming advertisements of bargains, an ordinary announcement such as this is apt to be discounted. Nevertheless we're doing big business, and the more people make comparisons, the surer we are of their money.

Figuring 150,000 readers for the Star every day how long ought such goods as these to last, with everybody anxious to save money? Those who can't get to the store can shop by mail and get anything they send for. We make a special feature of mail orders, and aim to do better than you expect in order to be sure of you the next time.

A FARMER'S FALL.—Yesterday afternoon Walter Morris, 36 years of age, employed by a farmer at St. Laurent, fell from a waggon on the Back River road, and received a fracture of the right leg. He was brought to the Notre Dame Hospital.

BIG FOREST FIRE IS DESTROYING CROPS NEAR SYDNEY.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Sydney, July 9. — The city is filled with smoke from a forest fire that has been raging for the past few days in the vicinity of the city. Over fifteen square miles of timber lands have been destroyed, together with ten or eleven houses and barns, these being burned near the city on Tuesday. Since that time all communication with several outlying country districts have been shut off for some days, and hundreds of people have been engaged in fighting flames to prevent the destruction of their properties. With the exception of a few showers, there has been no rain for about five weeks, and the crops throughout the country are practically ruined. Everything is as dry as tinder, and no fewer than half a dozen big fires are in rapid progress in different parts of the country, destroying crops and much valuable timber. The loss already amounts to fully one hundred thousand dollars.

PROSPECTS NOT BRIGHT FOR THE LUMBERMEN.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, July 9.—Prospects of wages in the shanties are not encouraging. At the present time choppers, teamsters and roadmakers are being engaged at from $2 to $3 a month less than last season, and a further decline is imminent. On account of the decline of value of square timber on the British market, it is not likely that much of the commodity will be manufactured during the coming season. As a matter of fact, several operators are holding their last season's cut on the limits, refusing to sacrifice it. The decline in the manufacture of square timber will have the effect of keeping wages down on the limits and leaving more men available for the other branches of work.

ITALIAN STABBED.—Last night Angelo Bucci, 19 years of age, living at 256 City Hall avenue, was taken to the Notre Dame Hospital by Capt. Millette, of No. 4 police district. Upon examination by the physicians it was found that he was suffering from a knife wound two inches long just below the heart. Bucci was stabbed in a fight with another Italian. The police are at work on the case.

THE WEATHER

The weather today is calculated to be hotter than has been this summer.

Old Sol got busy as early as five o'clock this morning, and displayed unwonted energy.

By slow degrees, under his guiding care, the mercury crawled upward, until, at 8 o'clock, the expectations for a day of sizzling warmth were assured.

Fortunately for the sports which are to take place this afternoon, the Weather Man does not give any indication of rain; he has evidently decided to permit the people to enjoy themselves unmolested.

VETERAN CONDUCTOR HAS PASSED AWAY

Robert A. Purdon, the veteran conductor of the G. T. R., between Montreal and Toronto, died at the Montreal Homeopathic Hospital yesterday evening. Mr. Purdon arrived on Thursday evening on his regular run, and, not feeling well, he sent word to some of his friends, who at once got medical assistance and had him removed to the hospital. The cause of death was hemorrhage of the brain.

"Bob" Purdon was one of the best-known and popular railway men in Canada, and will be much missed on the Montreal-Toronto run. He was a member of Zetland Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and Masonic brothers here gave him every attention before he died, and in conjunction with Mr. Charles Stewart, his running mate on the G. T. R. for thirty-eight years, took charge of the funeral arrangements here.

The body was taken to Toronto this morning and amongst those who followed the remains from Wray's undertaking office to the G. T. R. were the following Montreal Masons: A. J. McRobie, Charles Tonsaw, W. J. Little, H P. Swinton, W. Bruce, T. A. Adkins, W. Grose, T. McRobie, J. Hawkins, W. H. Brooke, Chas. Gardiner, C. Thackeray, J. White, K. L. Davis and others. Amongst the railway men present were Chas. Stewart, W. Osler, E. Empey, A. Demers, W. Devitt, J. Elliot, D. Carmichael and many others.

The funeral will take place in Toronto on Monday. Messrs. McRobie and Grose, of the Montreal Masonic Club, accompanied the remains to Toronto. Mr. Purdon leaves a widow to mourn his loss. Many beautiful wreaths were contributed by Montreal Masonic and railway friends.

CALEDONIAN SOCIETY WILL GIVE RECEPTION TO LORD DUNDONALD.

The executive of the Caledonian Society met last night and it was unanimously decided to tender Lord Dundonald a reception and farewell address. His Lordship has expressed his willingness to accept the invitation. The Caledonian Society, of Montreal, was the first Scottish Society to welcome Lord Dundonald when he came to Canada. The meeting last evening was attended by all the past presidents of the society. The reception will probably be held in the Windsor Hall.

Building Labourers' Election.

The annual meeting of the Building Labourers' Protective Union, No. 1, was held last night, at the St. Joseph's Hall. The elections proved to be the hottest in the history of the organization. There was a contest for every office and some of the candidates only succeeded by very small majorities. The following is the result: President, Edward O'Hara; vice-president, Peter Nelly; treasurer, Wilfrid Grenier; business agent, T. Robert Martin; English corresponding secretary, David McGillian; French corresponding secretary, J. Plante; financial secretary, Paul Desrosiers; assistant financial secretary, Raymond Aubin; trustees, J. Hardy, V. Coyer, H. Cousineau; chairman of the executive board, Edward Smith; auditors, F. J. Moore, Joseph Dupont and J. P. Morgan; first sergeant-at-arms, M. Conway; assistant sergeant-at-arms, A. Goulet; delegates to the Trades and Labour Council, T. Robert Martin, P. Fillon, H. Villeneuve and A. Lescarbeau.

The reading of the treasurers' report showed the union to be in a strong financial position. It is now the largest organization of the kind in the Dominion.

JUDGE PARKER FOR THE PRESIDENCY

New Yorker Nominated by Democrats on First Ballot.

HEARST NOT STRONG ENOUGH

His Followers Cheer Loudly, But Fail to Show Much Voting Strength.

St. Louis, July 9.—Chief Judge Alton B. Parker, of the New York State Court of Appeals, was nominated at about 15 minutes to 6 o'clock this morning, for President of the United States by the Democratic National Convention.

But one roll call ensued, and so decisive was the result of that one, that contrary States began to call for recognition and the ballot finally resulted in a unanimous vote for the New York statesman.

The scene was dramatic in the extreme. Darkness had witnessed the gathering of the Democratic hosts, while broad daylight, the sun paling the electric light, witnessed the close.

The Convention was in session from 8 o'clock last night until nearly 6 o'clock this morning. In that time eight names were presented to the convention. Nominating and seconding speeches innumerable were made and, as dawn approached, it became necessary to limit the seconding speeches to four minutes each.

BRYAN STILL GOES WRONG.

An exception was made in the case of William Jennings Bryan who, in one of the most dramatic situations ever witnessed in an American political gathering, addressed the convention and concluded by seconding the nomination of Senator Francis M. Cockrell, "the favourite son" candidate from Missouri. Mr. Bryan received the third great ovation accorded during the convention. His speech was an impassioned appeal to the delegates to give the party a candidate who had voted the Democratic ticket in 1896 and 1900.

He spoke in behalf of the Nebraska delegation, which, he said, had no candidate to present or favours to ask, but a candidate whose nomination would not prove a triumph for one faction over another. He suggested Hearst, if the convention thought best, then former Governor Pattison, of Pennsylvania, and finally created a surprise in the convention by declaring for Senator Cockrell.

One of the features of the long drawn out session had been the tribute paid to Senator Cockrell, when his name was placed in nomination by Representative Champ Clark. The thousands of cheering persons apparently converted Mr. Bryan to the belief that Senator Cockrell's chances of nomination were greater than other candidates. The Nebraskan gained recognition soon after Cockrell's demonstration and in a speech directed, undoubtedly in an effort to defeat Parker, made his electrifying plea for the anti-Parker forces to rally. He was given the closest attention. The great convention, which the police and sergeant-at-arms were powerless to control, listened as though every word were a personal message to each person, as if a hypnotic spell had been cast over the throng.

PARKER FORCES UNSHAKEN.

But when it was all over the Parker forces had not been shaken. The ballot for President gave Parker 658 votes out of the 667 needed to nominate, and before the result could be announced Idaho, Nevada, Washington and others made changes to the Parker column.

Governor Dockery, of Missouri, moved to make the nomination unanimous, and it was carried amidst increasing cheering. The result of the ballot was never announced officially, and it is not likely that it ever will be.

THE NOMINATIONS.

The Democratic National Convention at an all-night session, adopted a platform by a viva voce vote, and listened to nominating speeches for President. Judge Alton B. Parker was named by Martin W. Littleton and Wm. Randolph Hearst by D. M. Delmas. Both orators were much applauded.

Anti-Parker delegations attempted to create enthusiasm for their candidate, but the Parker men remained undisturbed and unconcerned. Hearst delegates paraded the hall, but the showing was small in comparison with the Parker procession which preceded it.

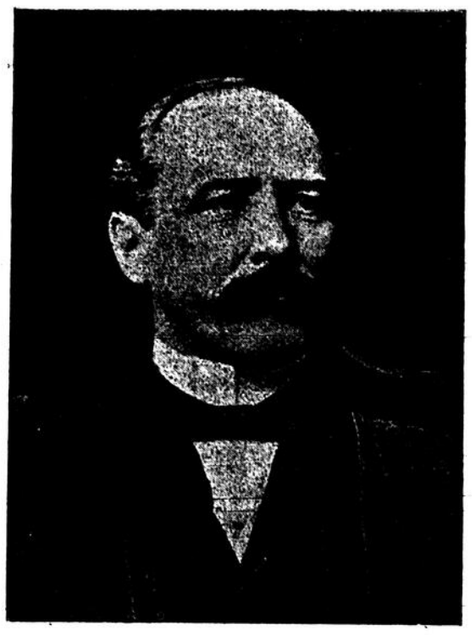
CROWDED TO DANGER POINT.

Nominating speeches for favourite son candidates, and seconding speeches for both Parker and Hearst occupied the convention for several hours. The convention seats about 10,500 persons, but from appearances hundreds more had been admitted.

The floor and lower and upper galleries contained thousands of sweltering men and women, oblivious to the fact that the crowded condition of the hall endangered every life.

The aisles were filled by spectators. Outside and in the crowds were the same, except for the fact that those within the hall were satisfied and those without were turbulent.

As soon as the convention had been called to order, Chairman Clarke announced that the report of the committee on resolutions was ready. Senator Daniel read the report as chairman of the committee. The confusion



HON. ALTON B. PARKER,

The Presidential candidate chosen by the National Democratic Convention.

Judge Parker is descended from English ancestors, who settled in New England, nearly 200 years ago. His great-grandfather served in Washington's army as a private. His father was a farmer. Fifty years ago the Judge was born on his father's farm near Cortland, New York. At the age of sixteen he taught school in a country schoolhouse, and established his authority by thrashing the bully of his class. Then he taught school in Binghamton. Later he was a teacher at $3 a day in Accord, an Ulster County village. After that his hopes of attending Cornell University failing, he entered the law office of Schoonmaker & Hardenberg, at Kingston. Next he attended the law school in Albany. Then he returned to Schoonmaker & Hardenberg's office, and after a few months he took a law partner named Kenyon and opened an office in Kingston.

For twelve years he practised law in Kingston. In 1877 he was elected Surrogate of Ulster County, and when his term expired he was re-elected.

In 1885 he was persuaded to become the chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee, which had charge of Mr. Hill's campaign for the Governorship. Gov. Hill appointed him temporarily to a seat on the Bench of the Supreme Court when Judge Westbrook died, and he was subsequently elected without opposition. He served in the Supreme Court until his election as Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals in 1897 by a plurality of about 60,000, which post he now holds under a tenure that will expire only on December 31, 1911. He will resign, however, in consequence of his nomination for the highest seat in the gift of the Republic.

building were completely choked by a pushing, struggling mass, with which the sergeant-at-arms and the police were utterly unable to cope. Several thousand people were packed underneath the main floor, vainly trying to gain admission to the auditorium. The congestion here was highly dangerous in itself, but the crowd poured through the entrance and no effort was made to keep them back.

The platform was adopted by a viva voce vote, two or three delegates voting in the negative, apparently in a spirit of fun.

THE NOMINATION.

"The clerk will now call the roll of states for the nomination of a candidate for president," shouted the chairman.

A wild cry of delight came from the galleries, who seemed to think the whole thing a show room for their entertainment. "Alabama," shrieked the clerk.

"Alabama yields to the empire state of New York," called Delegate Russell of Alabama, standing in his chair, one hand grasping the standard of the state marker.

Martin W. Littleton, of New York, of medium height and sturdy figure, with a full clean shaven face, with a heavy mass of dark brown hair tossed back from his brow and ears, took the stand amid ringing applause to place Judge Parker, of New York, in nomination.

A terrific outburst of cheering followed Mr. Lyttleton's remark about Judge Parker. "If you ask why he has been silent, I answer because he has not attempted to be the master of his party, but is content to be its servant."

A demonstration followed which lasted 25 minutes.

WILD FOR PARKER.

Arkansa yielded to Tennessee, and Mr. Carmack appeared to second the nomination of Parker.

All that had happened in the convention up to the time Mr. Lyttleton concluded his address multiplied many times was almost as nothing compared to the hurricane that broke out when he mentioned the name, "Alton B. Parker." On the part of the Parker delegates it was a revelation in the passion of politics. Like one man they sprang up in their chairs with everything that could be waved tossed high in the air.

The delegates tore their state emblems from the poles, and carrying them high overhead, tramped around the hall again and again, cheering frenziedly. American flags appeared magicly, and tossed flaming bits of colour into the scene.

A little boy was lifted up on the shoulders of one of the Texas delegates, and the flag waved by his small hand brought an increase in uproar already well nigh deafening.

The demonstration lasted 31 minutes. E. J. O'Donnell, of Colorado, seconded the nomination of Parker.

GRAY NOMINATED.

L. Irving Handy, of Delaware, placed Judge Gray in nomination.

Seconding speeches for Parker were made by the chairman of the Florida delegation, Moses Wright, of Georgia, and Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut.

UPROAR FOR HEARST.

Mr. Delmas, of California, placed R. Hearst in nomination, and seconding speeches were made by Rheinhart, of Iowa; John S. Beard, of Florida, and Clarence Darrow, of Illinois.

There was loud cheering at the conclusion of Mr. Delmas' speech. A six-foot portrait of Hearst was taken to the platform, another of similar size was raised in the gallery in the back of the platform, while numerous smaller portraits were shown on long poles raised from among the delegations.

The Hearst forces paraded around the hall, some of the delegates carrying pictures of Hearst. The banner of the Illinois delegation was carried into the line, but the majority of that delegation did not follow it.

The demonstration lasted for about half an hour.

At 12.55 a.m., J. G. Johnson, of Kansas, arose to second the nomination of Hearst, and he concluded at 12.58.

MILES NOMINATED.

The chair then recognized David Overmeyer, of Kansas, who placed General Nelson A. Miles in nomination.

THE PLATFORM.

The platform adopted is a compromise acceptable to all of the interests involved and was adopted unanimously by the committee. It may be said in general to have been a concession to the Bryan wing of the party without in any way stultifying the declarations of the Conservatives.

The absence of any pronouncement upon the financial question is most significant, and discloses the utter impossibility of finding any declarations upon this subject acceptable to all.

It is understood that Judge Parker, if nominated, will make a specific declaration on the subject in his letter of acceptance.

JUDGE PARKER NOTIFIED OF HIS NOMINATION WHILE IN SWIMMING.

Esopus, N. Y., July 9.—The news of Judge Parker's nomination was given to him at 6.50 a.m. to-day by the correspondent of the Associated Press, who found him clambering out of the water after his morning swim.

"Well Judge, you've got it," cried the reporter as the athletic figure of the Judge appeared over the bow of the barge from which he had been diving.

"Is that so?" replied the Judge, his ruddy face breaking into a cheery smile in which satisfaction was undisguised. He asked for details of the final vote and displayed the liveliest interest in every fact and figure, at the same time refraining from the slightest comment.

When asked if he would say anything on the matter of his nomination, he said:

"No, I shall say nothing whatever upon the situation until I am formally notified of my nomination."

From 9.45 p.m. until after 6 o'clock this morning, during the hours the convention was in session, Judge Parker remained in his room, which he left only to go to the river for his usual swim. At that time he knew only that there had been all-night session of the convention and that the balloting had begun.

DANISH CAPTAIN GIVES EVIDENCE

How the Kodan Was Sunk by the Kensington.

At the session of the Court of Investigation, held in the Harbour Board offices yesterday afternoon, the evidence of the Danish crew of the Kodan was taken.

Captain Hanson was the first witness called. He stated that his vessel was bound from Campbellton, N. B., to Castleton, Isle of Man, laden with lumber and battens. On the morning of the collision he went to bed about 4 o'clock, the vessel then being on the starboard tack and making about two knots an hour. She carried seven hands, including himself and the cook, which gave three men to each watch. The fog horn was a Norwegian patent, and made a much louder noise than a mouth trumpet. Just before the collision, the mate, who was on watch, went into witness' cabin, woke him up, and said that he had heard a siren blowing three points on the lee side. Witness replied that it must be a steamer, but before he reached the deck the collision occurred. After the mate awoke him, he heard the Kodan's fog horn give one blast ,two or three times. He was certain that it was one only, and not two blasts. When he heard the Kensington's whistle, the steamer was close to the brigantine. The Kodan was very sluggish in answering her helm. He thought it would have been possible to have towed the Kodan into St. Pierre, by putting a chain right around the vessel; but the captain of the Kensington would not do this.

By Capt. Riley—Witness could not say if the Kodan would have kept together during the tow, with her stem all gone, and much water in her.

The evidence of Mr. Heinrich Christiensen, mate of the Kodan, together with that of the two boys on watch with him, corroborated the testimony of the captain.

Mr. Meredith briefly addressed the court, which rose for the day.

The verdict will be rendered later.

THE C. P. R.'S PUPILS.—The school for shorthand and telegraphy, which was recently established by the Canadian Pacific, for the instruction of young men in its employ, has far outgrown its present quarters, though, as the instruction is entirely free, it is unlikely that the company will spend any more money on the school just for the present. Ninety young men have become pupils in the telegraphy classes and the number of those taking shorthand and typewriting, while not as large, is gratifying in every respect.

The total subscription to these eight journals would be $14.00 if ordered separately. I make you a special offer of $7.00 for all—to be sent you every issue for one year. If I receive your check within 30 days, I will send you, with my personal compliments, a copy of "Successful Advertising—How to Accomplish It," a large text-book of over 400 pages, printed on special-made antique paper and beautifully bound in cloth. Most exhaustively indexed. "It is brimming over with hints, ideas, and information." "It expounds the whole philosophy of push and publicity." In fact, it is the most complete text-book for advertisers ever published. Understand, this book is not sold or given in connection with the club offer, but is sent with my personal compliments.

The receipt of the eight advertising journals named below means that each subscriber to my remarkable club offer will receive the benefit of all that is newest and best in advertising ideas for one year—the benefit of the actual experience of some of the cleverest men of the day, those who have devoted years to the study and development of the greatest force in the business world.

NO SUCH OFFER HAS EVER BEEN MADE BEFORE AND CAN NEVER BE MADE AGAIN.

WESTERN MONTHLY, Regular Subscription, $1.00
ISSUED MONTHLY.

AMERICAN ADVERTISER, Reg. Subscription, $1.00
ISSUED MONTHLY.
The AMERICAN ADVERTISER is the oldest advertising journal in the world. It has no connection with any agency, advertiser or publishing house, and is printed for the benefit of the advertising public. Every publisher, advertiser, agent and student of advertising should receive the AMERICAN ADVERTISER.

Advertising has ceased to be a hit-and-miss game. It has become one of the safest and surest investments.

For bright, brainy men there is no profession that offers such opportunities.

My object in making this offer has no ulterior motive behind it; it is simply to help my fellow-students of the great publicity problem to think and to study.

In all frankness, may I ask why the average advertiser, publisher, agent or student of advertising or journalism does not study the leading journals as thoroughly as the lawyer studies the legal journals, the physician the medical journals, the minister the theological journals, the teacher the school journals, etc.? They must do it to keep abreast of the times—to really know something about the profession they claim to represent.

It can be readily seen that I shall lose money on every club subscription received, but I believe the ultimate results will be such as to fully warrant the sacrifice. These great publications are offered at a price within easy reach of every one. The offer can only hold good for a limited time, and I therefore urge you to send in your check at once. TARIFF REFORM IS VITAL TO EMPIRE

Declares Hon. Joseph Chamberlain in Speech at Hotel Cecil.

HIS BIRTHDAY DINNER

He Believes That the Colonies Must Be Brought Into Imperial Councils.

Canadian Associated Press.

London, July 9.—Mr Chamberlain, on the occasion of his birthday, was last night the guest of 200 Unionist members of Parliament at a banquet at the Hotel Cecil. The design of the menu was a sketch of the two hemispheres, showing the British Empire surrounded by the phrase "preferential trade," and above the portrait of Chamberlain the motto, "Je tiens ferne."

Mr. Chamberlain, who was frantically cheered, said he was a fiscal reformer because he was an Imperialist. On that reform depended the maintenance of the British Empire. His belief was that free trade was shaken twenty years before, and this was confirmed when at the Colonial Office he learnt how closely the question affected the Empire. No other nation had to grapple with such an infinite variety of problems. Colonial administration in the early years of this century would determine the future of the British Empire if the Colonies were alive to the situation. They never want a suitor to pay them court.

He would urge on the Colonies as well as the Motherland the absolute necessity of taking the present creative time to lay the foundations for the Empire. The Colonies must be brought into our councils. Sentiment without organization was nothing better than courage without discipline. The present position of the Empire was the same as the United States immediately after the declaration of independence, when it became necessary to bind together the different Colonies separated from England. The step was achieved slowly in face of great opposition. There was nothing sordid in commercial union as declared by the leader of the Opposition. It was more sordid to let individuals shift for themselves. When the time arrived the Unionist party would pull together.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN WILL LEAD.

London, July 9.—It is to be inferred from the editorials in the pro-Chamberlain newspapers that they regard last night's demonstration as sealing Mr. Chamberlain's claim to form and lead a new Unionist party pledged to his theories. The Telegraph declares that the event is of far-reaching and decisive significance.

It adds that it must satisfy every far-seeing observer that the fortunes of the Unionist party are inseparable from the combative inspiration which Mr. Chamberlain supplies, and from the supreme cause he has placed before the country. It shows, once for all, how the conviction of a majority of the party leans unmistakably, and indicates where the basis for consolidation must be found when the practical conditions of the present Parliamentary situation gives place in due time to consideration of the problem of the future.

The Daily Mail says that the question of tariff reform is not yet before the country, nor will it be while the Government remains in office, but it will be raised when the proper hour arrives.
