MEDICAL, &c.

TO THE AFFLICTED.—All those who are afflicted with loss of memory, morbid sensitiveness, impoverished blood, indecision of character, depression of spirits, sense of shame, lack of confidence, palpitation of the heart, incapacity to attend to business, wasting away of brain force, constipation, imbecility, impotency, and are generally aware of the cause (I need not mention it). I will simply state that by my new mode of treatment the vital forces can be restored without the usual injurious drug and nostrum treatment, and that I have given much time and careful attention to this fearful source of the ills which afflict the human family and that my efforts have been crowned with great success. I am averse to advertising, but I don't see how I am to make my discovery known otherwise; and yet I don't see why physicians have not a right to place new and useful medical discoveries before the public. Consultation hours from 8 to 11 a.m., and 7 to 10 p.m.

One of the largest white fish caught in Lake Ontario for some time was sold on the market in Belleville one day last week. It weighed 10 pounds and 1 ounce.

The Welland Telegraph says:—The branch line of the Great Western from near Allanburgh to Clifton is progressing very rapidly. Five miles of the western end has been graded, and the ties, &c., will soon be on hand to finish this part. The contractor is Mr. Wm. Hendrie.

A partially insane woman who lives at the North End, Halifax, managed to elude her guardians on Thursday afternoon last, and proceeded to her husband's room, where she obtained possession of about $1,000 in bank notes, which she destroyed by cutting, tearing, and scattering about the apartment.

The plum crop is considered a failure this season in St. Thomas and neighborhood. There are some good crops, however. Mr. Thomas Laidlaw, of Yarmouth, kept the curculios in check by burning tobacco and chips together under the trees. He has a splendid crop.

A few days ago, a person named Thomas Russel, of Cobourg, went into a hay-loft to throw down some hay, and threw the fork, prongs downward, to the ground, and then jumped, but he did not clear the fork, the handle of which was broken, so that it entered his abdomen to a depth of six inches. After being in great agony three days he died.

The Dominion Government have notified the Mayor that the Corporation of St. John must immediately say yea or nay, as to whether it will accept $20,000 for the property wanted by the Railway Department at the breakwater. If an answer in the negative is returned the Government will at once take the property under the Public Lands Act, and out on arbitrators.

A valuable mare owned by Mr. R. Neagle, of Mount Forest, was killed in a singular manner on Thursday week last. The animal had been set at liberty during the afternoon in yard in rear of Mr. Neagle's stables, and in some way stepped upon and displaced the boards covering the well. Unable to recover itself, the animal fell to the bottom—a distance of fifty feet, and had its back broken in several places and died in a few minutes. The pump in the well was broken and displaced.

Scratching River settlement is one of the most flourishing Canadian settlements in the Province of Manitoba. People are flocking in every day. The lands are certainly the best we have seen, with plenty of wood and water. Already there are a good number of Canadian settlers; amongst whom are W. C. Cowan, Mr. Galley, Mr. Thomas Mulvey, and Mr. John Moore—the former the first settler in the place. These parties have settled down at the confluence of the Scratching River with the Red River. Timber is now out for the erection of a school-house, and the building of a church is beginning to be talked of. The great want of this settlement is the accommodation of a post office, there being no post office between St. Norbert and Pembina, a distance of 50 miles. The stage passes three times a week, and it would entail but very little expense in giving these people a post-office.

NOTES.

When Horace Greeley visited Yosemite he picked up in the trail a horseshoe and hung it on the knot of an oak tree for whoever might choose to use it. No one took it, and in time the knot grew over the horseshoe, and recently the portion of the tree containing it was cut out and sent to San Francisco as a momento of Mr. Greeley's economy.

Before the sixty-seventh regiment left England for British Burmah, the officers purchased a printing press and types, and since their arrival at Rangoon have produced a "regimental newspaper" called Our Chronicle. The printers, publishers, and editors are all attached to the Sixty-seventh Regiment. This is probably the first paper of the kind ever published.

Some details are given of a projected aquarium in the Champ Elysees, Paris, to rival those of Brighton, Sydenham, Hamburg, Berlin, &c., to be supplemented by a museum of fishing utensils and an antediluvian department, where extinct animals are to be represented artificially with the natural surroundings of the periods in which they lived. The scheme will be carried out on a large scale.

The wife of Don Carlos is described as "a very majestic and beautiful woman." She is only 26 years old; her countenance is very pleasing, but at the same time indicates great courage; she is tall, and her bearing is noble; her eyes at times seem to be black, but they are really of a very dark blue, and her hair is golden. She is the daughter of the late Duke Ferdinand Charles II., and is the niece of the Count de Chambord.

The following little incident illustrating the superior policy of honesty should be read by all gentlemen engaged in lumbering. A man at Belmont, Mo., sold to a mill owner a saw log which proved to be hollow. As he sold it for a sound log, he voluntarily went and gave back the price, and hauling it to his own yard chopped it up for firewood. In this operation he found ten $5 gold pieces which somebody had secreted in it.

Nevadians assert that they were better off before the Central Pacific passed through their State. Seven years ago it cost $45 stage fare from Austin, Nevada, to Sacramento; now it costs $45.25 on the railroad. Seven years ago it cost six cents per pound to freight powder from Sacramento to Austin; now it costs six to seven cents a pound, and on all bulky goods, oils, &c., nearly as much. The exactions of the railroad are so severe that a popular uprising is threatened.

LITERARY NOTES.

Messrs. Dawson Bros. offer the following works:

THE WING-AND-WING; OR LE FEU-FOLLET. By J. Fenimore Cooper.

This is one of a new illustrated edition of Cooper's novels which Messrs. Appleton & Co., of New York, are getting out. The letter-press is excellent, and the engraving very fine. Wing-and-Wing is one of the best of Cooper's novels.

STRANGERS AND PILGRIMS. By Miss M. E. Braddon. Harper Bros., New York.

This is the story of a young girl who marries for wealth and station, drains the cup of worldly pleasures to the dregs, loses her husband and child, and finally dies happy in the arms of her first love. The scene is laid partly in England and partly in Scotland. It is a very interesting book.

The St. John, N. B., Telegraph comes to hand enlarged and printed from new type. We have always admired the independent course pursued by the Telegraph, and are pleased to see such material proof that it is heartily sustained by the public.

MAKING BELIEVE FIGHT.

A Naval Sham Battle in British Waters.

[From the London Times, Aug. 30.]

HER MAJESTY'S SHIP ACHILLES, BANTRY BAY, Aug. 25, 1873.

The picturesque shores of Bantry Bay were to-day startled into reverberating echoes by the thunder of broadsides and the quick rattle of rifles, for inside that beautiful bay was fought a sham battle between the two divisions of the First Reserve squadron, now completing their summer cruise off the south coast of Ireland. These ships left Portland on the 11th of August, and until the 22nd of August have been at sea, going through their various drills, manœuvres and steam tactics.

The weather generally has been rainy and uncomfortable, and a sufficiently strong wind has been experienced to give one more proof of the already well-tested qualities of the ships composing this squadron. On Friday, August 22, they sailed up Bantry Bay in single line, and anchored two miles from the town of Bantry, where they have since lain at anchor. This morning the weather was tolerably fine, though now and then a rain cloud passed over. At half-past ten A. M. the Hector, eighteen guns, the Achilles, twenty-six, the Vanguard, fourteen, and the Audacious, composing the second division, were ordered to go and anchor in Glengariff Bay, about four miles distant from the remaining ships of the squadron, and to form the attacking force. Between one and two P.M.

THE FIRST DIVISION

began to move from their moorings, at the same time clearing away for action. The fine wooden line-of-battle ship Revenge, thirty-two guns, carrying the flag of Rear Admiral Edmund Heathcote, bore down first, and was followed by the Black Prince, twenty-eight, Penelope, eleven, and Valiant, eighteen. The Seamew and the gunboat Goshawk acted as tenders, the former being attached to the second division. The attacked ships were not backward in preparing to receive the enemy. They got in their jibbooms and sent down topmasts and spars in a very short space of time, and then, crossing the enemy's bows, received and returned a few rounds from the Revenge and the other ships of her line. The tactics, however, of the second division were to retreat for a time, keeping up a mischievous fire with their stern guns in answer to the enemy's bow guns. At length the Revenge overtook the Valiant, and commenced. The second division stopped steaming and allowed the other ships to range up alongside, and then the battle became general. The two divisions were in single line ahead, opposed to one another, ship to ship. They were now, however, to come to closer quarters, and, forming line abreast, they bore down on one another. In an actual engagement there would, no doubt, at this time have been some ramming, and the short and long ships would have proved their relative merits. As it was, the perfection of their broadside firing was most satisfactorily shown, all the guns of a broadside sounding almost like one, as they were fired by galvanic batteries. All this time a murderous fire was kept up from the rifles of the men in the tops. For a short space there was a lull and the lines recrossed, firing as before.

FEW SCENES CAN BE IMAGINED FINER

than that presented by the squadron at this time. Heavy clouds had been rolling up behind the desolate savage range of hills which run from behind Glengariff to Castletown, where they terminate with the most desolate and barren of all, the lofty Hungry Hill, well named if we may judge from a distance. The white smoke from the guns was driven over the water until it seemed to form a wall at the foot of these hills and curled up the sides in fantastic shapes. It is to be regretted that this very thinly inhabited part of the country could not furnish an admiring crowd, who, from the adjacent hills, would have had a very fine view of these interesting manoeuvres. However, it is most satisfactory to know that such very useful exercises are carried on during their month's cruise by those ships which, during the rest of the year, lie so quietly in their respective ports. From various useful hints could be picked up by those who studied it with a professional eye, and the detection of the many mistakes which were undoubtedly made by individual ships shows where would be the weak points in our naval warfare, of which we must necessarily remain entirely ignorant unless such exercises were carried out. Another advantage of such a sham fight is that the drills for the men, both in shifting the spars, fighting the guns, and the other multitudinous employments which such an occasion produces, are rendered more interesting than the ordinary drills by the extra excitement which is created and the emulation between ship and ship.

STEAM BOILERS.

The Congressional Commission to Inquire into the Causes of Steam-Boiler Explosion.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.

The Commission to inquire into the causes of steam boiler explosions, for the expenses of whose experiments and tests Congress appropriated $100,000, will conclude its labors in this city to-morrow, and will begin their trials at Sandy Hook about the middle of October. Tests of boilers will also be made at Pittsburgh, after the Commission shall have made some of its experiments at Sandy Hook. The purpose of the members is to make a comprehensive, though incomplete, report to the Secretary of the Treasury in time to enable the latter to include theirs in his report to Congress in December. Work will then be continued until their examinations and tests have all been made, after which they will report fully, and make recommendations based upon their labors. The first series of tests to be made at Sandy Hook will consist of trials as to the capacity and rapidity of action of overheated metal in the production of steam; to test the same as to superheated steam; to test the generating capacity, and rapidity of overheated metal, in conjunction with superheated steam; the ability to drive water away from the absorbing surfaces by great activity of combustion; to test the temperature under given pressures at which water is repelled from heated metal; the effect of the application of cold water to the internal surface of the steam chamber of a steam boiler, while active fires and generation of the steam are going on at the same time, and to test in one or more steamboat boilers, as constructed and used, the effect of a gradual increase of the pressure of steam, under ordinary conditions of use, up to the rupturing point.

The Commissioner has resolved to issue a call upon persons, who may be conversant with facts upon the subject occupying the attention of the Commission, to forward such information to the Board, and also opinions and theories entertained by scientists and engineers on the various causes of boiler explosions. Machinists are requested to contribute, for experimenting purposes, specimens of safety valves, one of the purposes of the Commission being to determine the best form, construction and dimensions of safety-valves, so that they may be what their name denotes, and so operate automatically to relieve the boiler that it will be impossible, so long as the valve remains unmolested, to explode or burst a boiler in ordinary use by the gradual accumulation of steam. In regard to the tests to be made at Pittsburgh, the Commission has decided that three of the boilers, one of steel and two of iron, be tested for results on the ultimate strength of the same, by being fired up and the pressure increased until rupture occurs. That two boilers, one of steel and one of iron, be subjected to a continuous series of tests, such as by water sediment, etc., both boilers being tried, as near as can be judged, to the same extent.

When, in the judgment of the Commission, this usage has been carried far enough, then the latter two boilers are to be ruptured by steam pressure, to determine deterioration to the boilers, and also as a comparative test between iron and steel to withstand such usage. The same boilers are to be used for the purpose of making the tests relative to the proper area of safety valves. A report was read showing the progress made by the Commission since the meeting held at Pittsburgh in July last, when the ground upon which the experiments are to be made were selected, and the contracts for boilers, etc., were entered into. The building for the shop and for the accommodation of the workmen on the ground has been completed. The boilers contracted for at Pittsburgh are being made,—the one constructed of iron plates is nearly completed, and the steel boiler is now under way. The iron boiler constructed at Mount Vernon is in about the same state of progress. A new boiler is now being constructed at Cincinnati, and will soon be ready for shipment to its destination. The gauges, ordered at Cincinnati, will be ready for delivery as soon as they can be examined.

MURDER OF A MAN AND HIS WIFE.

[Monmouth (Ill.) Atlas, Sept. 5.]

The details of the murder at Cucharas, Col., of William F. Richardson and wife, former residents of this city, are sad indeed. The bodies were found on Sunday, the 24th of August, and were supposed to have been dead since the Thursday before. A letter received here from Mrs. Charles Carr, dated at Apishapa Station, Col., says:

"It seemed that the terrible wretch who committed the deed had entered the barn, lying in wait for Mr. R., and had taken him unaware, and dealt the deadly blow, and it is supposed that Mr. R. gave a cry, which Mrs. R. heard and rushed in the direction of the barn to ascertain the cause, when the wretch met her, and she turned and ran, trying to escape him. There were running footsteps in the direction of the house, and evident signs of a struggle, her hair pins, hair-comb, etc., being scattered all the way from the corral to the house. She had evidently been sewing at the time when she heard the disturbance at the barn, as her thimble was found on her hand, and had taken her work and ran out. At the corner of the house lay a pillow-case, half finished, with the needle in where she had been sewing. She evidently received the first blow there, and threw her work down, badly stained with blood. There was, also, a large pool of blood upon the doorstep, through which she had been dragged into the house, apparently by the hair, as her hair was flowing loosely over her shoulders. It seems that life may not have been extinct when she was dragged in, and there received blows upon the back of her head (she too was lying on her face), beating the back of the skull almost to a jelly. The murder is supposed to have been committed about three or four o'clock in the afternoon,—at least it was in broad daylight. None of the jewelry was taken from her person, and nothing is missing from the house."

Mr. R.'s watch, money, and papers were undisturbed in the house. An axe found on the premises covered with blood is believed to be the weapon with which the terrible deed was committed. Two Mexicans who were in Mr. R.'s employ were arrested for the crime, but before the trial they were taken from the guards by a body of masked men and hung. They confessed their guilt on the gallows.

A New York Murder.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Merrigan was brought from the Williamsburg police station, where she had been locked up after the rendition of the verdict finding her responsible for the death of Miss Margaret Ann Hamill.

In answer to the formal questions of Coroner Whitehill, after reading to the prisoner again the verdict, which accuses her of causing the death of Margaret Hamill, by strangulation, on the 2d day of September inst., at the house of the prisoner, in Williamsburg, she gave her name as Sarah Cecilia Merrigan, aged twenty-three years, born in Brooklyn. Her counsel instructing her, she answered to the capital accusation, "I am not guilty."

HOW WAS THE MURDER DONE?

After hearing all the testimony and gleaning all accessible facts the belief is irresistible that Margaret Hamill, at the time of her strangling, was sitting in the large room at Merrigan's, somewhat overcome by liquor; that the slip-noose, formed by the doubled clothes-line, was suddenly thrown over her head by a person behind her and at once tightened till the victim ceased resisting, when the body was dragged by the sofa to the bedroom and placed upon the laths of the bedstead. After this the loose end of the rope was carried downward through the laths and beneath the bed to the front, the straw bed placed upon Miss Hamill's body, the rope pulled tight and so held till death was certain, and then reaching with a sharp knife it was cut close to the noose. The loop was left round the neck and the balance of the cord hid in the pantry. After this, preparations were made to dispose of the body.

RESULT OF THE INQUEST.

Through the inquest coroner Whitehill has shown the most earnest purpose to elicit the actual facts in the case. He has been anxious to admit and draw out all testimony tending to that end, and though in some instances deviating from the strict rules of judicial procedure, he has done much to clear up a dark and diabolical crime. There are yet many features of the case in the dark; but enough has been proved to afford the District Attorney clues by which to bring before a jury all the evidence of which this monstrous crime admits. During the public examination an astonishing spirit of levity was manifested among those listening to the attempted elucidation of the mystery shrouding the death of one person by criminal violence and threatening the life of two others there present as a just penalty of offended law. This levity the Coroner endeavored without full success to repress. How even the young and happy can turn such serious tragedy into a farce, making the occasion one for the explosion of weak criticism and noisy guffaws of laughter is one of the unanswerable questions. Does it not indicate that life is held far too cheap for the full safety of society?

AGRICULTURAL.

WANT OF CARE.

Want of care is the prolific cause of accident and disease amongst stock. The master's eye or the owner's solicitude are proverbially preventives against trouble or waste; but if the master or the owner will not trouble themselves to exercise the watchful care needed, we may be sure no one else will. A careful shepherd will never bring his flock home at night without counting them, and passing amongst them, observing carefully any suspicious change or defect. In the dairy, the least falling off in the yield of a cow should be the cause of inquiry or observation until the reason is found; for that we may be assured. A limp or a suspicious failure in the team should also be a source of uneasiness until it is accounted for; and if this habit of close scrutiny and observation becomes the rule instead of the exception there will be much less trouble and loss for farmers to complain of.

INTERESTING TO CATTLE RAISERS.

Forty Thousand Six Hundred Dollars for a Cow.

[N. Y. Herald.]

The highest prices for cattle ever obtained in the New Word or the Old were brought by the leading specimens of the improved short-horn herd, sold near Utica, in this State, the other day at auction. The sum of two hundred and sixty odd thousand dollars, paid or to be paid, for fifteen cows appears almost incredible. But as some of the most noted breeders of fine stock from England and from all the most famous cattle raising districts of the United States were the bidders and purchasers at this sale the prices obtained were, doubtless, bona fide, puzzled as practical farmers of the old school may be to account for the outlay of forty thousand six hundred dollars, or of even thirty-five thousand, or twenty-five thousand, or ten thousand for a single cow. But we see that the time has come when fancy cattle bring fancy prices, and that the picture dealers, with their "old masters," are no longer to have the monopoly of fancy prices. These high sums obtained for improved stock, however, is encouraging our stock raisers to procure and improve the choicest breeds, will have a good effect in promoting generally the production of the finest cows and the best beef, milk and butter that can be obtained from the choicest stocks and the best attention to this important branch of the necessaries of life.

It appears that one of the fortunate cattle raisers, upon one hundred and eleven of his blooded cattle disposed of at this sale, realized a clear profit of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Here is an example which cannot fail to inspire a host of other cattle raisers to go and do likewise. Here are premiums worth contending for, and here is a line of business for sure profits which cannot be exhausted. Doubtless the cattle breeders of our State fairs now being held or soon to come on will appreciate the advantages of their position from this Utica sale, and we shall have this season throughout the country finer displays of improved stock of all kinds than at any season heretofore. Thirty thousand dollars is considered a fancy price for a blooded horse of the best pedigree; but when a choice cow brings forty thousand six hundred dollars, and at this price is purchased to be carried over to England, our American cattle raisers may well be proud of the high distinction they have won and of the boundless fields they command for producing the finest cattle in the world.

OVERWORK AND WANT OF SLEEP.

Overwork causes a great deal of ill health in farming communities. Very many farmers, in their efforts to avoid idleness, which they consider a sin and a shame, go to the other extreme and lose both health and happiness thereby. While industry tends to health, overwork breaks down the constitution and shortens life. It injures both the body and mind, and if long continued results either in death or premature old age. For this sin, and sin it is to overwork, there is not nearly the excuse on the part of farmers which there was twenty years ago. Now one has machines to take, in a great degree, the place of hand labor, and the farmers who will use them need not break down his health by working too hard. But it is not the farmer who is most liable to overwork. The farmer's wife is generally the greatest sufferer. Every day in the year, Sundays not excepted, she has much to do. Often there is as much required of her as two women ought to perform. As the result of her overwork, health is lost, and she either dies long before her time or lives only to suffer the penalties of the law she has transgressed. For this course there is no justification. No woman ought to work herself to death, and no man is justified in requiring or allowing his wife to do so. He ought to furnish her with household machines, if her health is poor, and either help her himself or hire a girl to help her. This killing himself and his wife, which so many farmers do, for the sake of laying up a few dollars which they never expect to use, and which they cannot carry with them when they die, is a miserable speculation as far as profit and loss are concerned, and a sinful, shameful thing for any man to do.

Want of sleep is one of the chief causes of much of the physical and mental trouble of farmers and their families. During the busy season, when the farmer rises at four in the morning and works until six or seven in the evening, then eats his supper, does his chores, and sits up an hour or two later to read his paper or chat with a neighbor, he does not obtain sleep enough to keep either body or mind in perfect vigor. The evil consequences of his course may not be apparent for years, but sooner or later they will come. The waste of the brain is not fully made up. Little by little it decays and insanity or some incurable disease is the final result of using the hours which should be devoted to sleep for other purposes. Farmers' wives, who are often kept awake at night by the exhaustion caused by overwork or by the crying and fretting of children, are the greatest sufferers. and year by year a vast number of this class go to the insane asylum or the grave. It is slow but certain suicide to curtail the hours of sleep, and no man, woman or child need expect to long continue in good health without taking the fullest amount of quiet rest.
—Working Farmer.

AN ADMIRABLE REMEDY.

The Governor of a prison in Cornwall, England, has discovered an admirable remedy to cure tramps and vagrants, in casual wards and prisons, of the habit of expressing their profound grief at the buffets of fate by rending their garments, thus placing society in a ridiculous position by compelling it to provide them with new wardrobes at the very moment when it is least inclined to bestow upon them any mark of its favor. When he finds a prisoner huddled up in a corner of his cell, covered only with the cell rug, and his clothes lying in a heap of torn rags at his feet, he sends for a needle and thread, which he gives to the clothes-destroyer, informing him at the same time that he will be fed on bread and water until he has thoroughly reconstructed his garments.

This cure has been found to work wonders, for long before the time allowed by law for bread-and-water diet expires, the clothes are mended with marvelous skill, and the intelligence of the hardship thus inflicted being conveyed by tramps on leaving the prison to their friends and acquaintances, not only induces them to resist the temptation of tearing up their clothes when they are sheltered beneath its roof, but leads many of them to avoid confinement altogether in an establishment where they are exposed to such ungentlemanlike treatment.

The late Charles Thiebault, merchant, Dundee, has left the following important legacies:—£1000 to the Dundee Royal Infirmary, to be invested by the Directors—the Catholic clergymen in charge of the chapel of St. Joseph, Blackness Road, Dundee, for the time being, to be entitled to rank as a subscriber for the amount of the interest of the investment, with the right of recommending patients accordingly; £1000 to the Rev. Mr. McGinnes, or his successor as the clergyman of St. Joseph's, for behoof of that chapel; £2000 to the Little Sisters of the Poor, Wellburn House, Lochead; £500 to the establishment of the Little Sisters of the Poor in Edinburgh, and £500 to the establishment of the Little Sisters of the Poor of Glasgow. He has also directed his three trustees—to each of whom he leaves £50—to convey to Mr. Michael Connors, his steward at Rockwell, Ireland, all his furniture, carriages, &c., at the house there, and to grant him a thirty-one years' lease of the farm at Rathgowan at the rent of £200 per annum, and make over to him the stock on the farm. The trustees are Messrs. G. Mackenzie, banker, and J. Luke and William Lindsay Boas, merchants and manufacturers, Dundee.

DEATH BY DROWNING

Mr. Johnston, a resident of Lachine, well-known as vendor of newspapers for many years past, met his death by drowning in the canal yesterday afternoon, under the following circumstances: He was crossing the bridge at Cote St. Paul, when it opened to permit the passage of a steamboat; passing under the guard-chain however, he fell into the canal and was drowned. The deceased was a man of singular habits, and had a reputation of being eccentric and possessed of some wealth. He regularly walked into the city, and purchased the papers which he was accustomed to deliver in the vicinity of his place of residence.

THE TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

An important meeting of temperance men was held last evening in Perry's Hall, Senator Ferrier in the chair.

It was unanimously resolved:—

"That all good laws ought to be enforced, and evil-doers held in check thereby; and that it is the duty of all good citizens to aid the constituted authorities in said enforcement.

"That whereas, by the common consent of Judges, Grand Juries, Officers of Police, and others best competent to judge, the Liquor Traffic is the principal incentive to immorality and crime, it is most important that it should be held in check to the greatest possible extent.

"That the existing Provincial and Municipal Laws, if faithfully enforced, are competent to prevent much existing evil; but that the present police force need a strong pressure of public opinion to enable them to overcome the difficulties in their way.

"That the City Statutes, chapter 17, sections 1, 2, 4 and 9, absolutely prohibiting the drinking as well as the sale of liquors in any dram-shop on the Lord's Day, ought to be peremptorily enforced.

"That the provisions of the Robertson Act, under which it is illegal to sell liquor to minors and others, and the liquor dealer is made responsible for losses and crimes resulting from drink, ought to be widely known and unsparingly executed."

With the view of enforcing these resolutions, it was agreed that a City Vigilance Temperance Association should be formed, and with this end in view, a number of gentlemen, including Rev. Gavin Lang and Messrs. Weaver, Scott and Scribner, with power given to add to their number, were appointed a Committee, with instructions to draft a constitution, and report at the next meeting.

Addresses were delivered by the Chairman, Rev. Mr Wade, Rev Gavin Lang, Rev M Lafleur, Drs Carpenter, Bessey, Larocque, Messrs Dougall, McDonnell (delegate from the St. Bridget's Temperance Society) Jas Black, J Gardner, and others.

Mr. Lang cordially endorsed the scheme of organising a general temperance organization in which all good citizens could unite in a common and desirable object; while he denounced intemperance he explained that he could not see his way clear to the advocacy of total abstinence views.

Dr. Carpenter called attention to the by-law, and quoted to the effect that any person seen drinking in a public house could, "on view," be arrested.

Dr. Bessey referred to statistics to prove the extraordinary evils and diminution of life that was due to the use of intoxicating liquors.

It was further urged that the laws on the liquor question were not enforced, because the officers of the law considered that they would not be sustained in their acts by the opinion of the general public—hence that it was necessary to educate public opinion to a point at which their objects would meet with general favor.

THE PROVINCIAL EXHIBTION.

Besides entries already noted, numerous other stallions of famous breeds are worthy of notice.

Messrs. David (of St. Eustache), Hickson, and D. L. McDougall showed handsome thorough-bred mares with foal; the heirs Shedden, Messrs. Drummond, Hudon, Kidd, Brosseau (St. Hubert) Beauvais and Molson, heavy brood mares; Mr. J. McDougall, a three year old iron grey thorough-bred filly, and Messrs. A. Allan, Winks, Molson and J. J. Abbott, carriage horses. A fine Clyde, "Chieftain," belongs to Messrs. Boyer and Charlebois, of St. Lamberts; another stallion of the same serviceable breed is owned by L. Ste. Marie, and a third, "Prince," by Mr. James Shields, of Lachine. The Hochelaga Co. Agricultural Society exhibit "Lion," and Narcisse Gosselieu, "Ontario Warrior"; a thorough-bred, "Champion," a Cœur de Lion, is shown by the Soulanges Co. A. Society, and choice specimens of the champion breed by M. Lasseline, of Lapcairie, and Edward Sadler, of Ormstown.

Farm Stock.

Messrs. Boyer and Charlebois exhibit a very creditable herd of Ayrshires, and Mr. Andrew Allan several Herefords.

Mr. W. Keese, of St. Jean Chrysostome, with Devons, and Messrs. R. and S. Stephens, with Alderneys, make a very commendable display; good grade cattle are also shown.

Sheep, Swine, &c, &c.

The Leicesters, Catswalds and Southdowns, among the sheep exhibited, attracted great attention, and among the swine, the Yorkshires, Suffolks and Berkshires.

A very fair exhibition of poultry is made, comprising Dorkings, Black Spanish, Brahmas, Cochins, Polands and Hamburgs. Aylesbury and Roman Ducks, and Bremen, China and Toulouse Geese, were fairly represented.

The Industrial Department.

In the Industrial Department are, in addition to article already mentioned, an Excelsior Gate, which can be opened or shut without alighting from a vehicle, is shown by Mr. Jos. Stone, of Newtonbrook, O; capital specimens of merchants' account books, by Mr. John Lovell; show cards and stencilling implements in great variety, by Mr. S. Hicks; card board, by Mr. E. P. Carter; and office desks by the Tees Bros; a dining-room set of the style of Louis XVI., by Mr. A. Lavigne, of St. Lawrence Main street; and syrups, &c., by Messrs. Winning, Hill & Ware. A table composed of 4,226 different pieces of wood, pieced together with great ingenuity by Mr. Jos. Bianchette, a fireman of Quebec, was the subject of general interest.

Among the prizes yesterday in this Department of the Exhibition, the following were awarded Mrs. Henry McVittie, of this city:—Ladies' Work: Silk embroidery, 1st prize; wool embroidery, 1st prize; muslin embroidery, 2nd prize; flassel embroidery, extra.

The price of admission to-day being twenty five cents, the attendance was very large, beyond all question; the influx of visitors from all parts of the Province by boat and rail, gives abundant warrant for this statement.

THE TRANSPORTATION QUESTION

Reception and Entertainment of the United States Committee.

The long expected United States Senate Committee on Transportation Routes arrived in town yesterday afternoon, and were met at the Depot by H McLennan, Esq. President of the Board of Trade, and M P Ryan, Esq. M P, President of the Corn Exchange, with members of their respective committees; Consul-General W A Dart and Hon J Young, M P, were also present. Conveyances were in waiting, and the guests were driven at once to the Canal Basin, where all embarked upon the S.S. Bohemian, of the Royal Mail Line. About 150 members of the two commercial bodies were waiting on board to receive them, consisting of the leading merchants interested in the flour, grain, lumber, and iron trades. They then proceeded up the Lachine Canal, its present capacity, as well as the proposed enlargement and improvements, being pointed out and explained by Mr. Sippell, the engineer of that work. After passing St. Gabriel Locks, the company sat down to a sumptuous dinner in the saloon served by Mr. Martin of the Carlton in his accustomed masterly style.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Hugh McLennan; on his right sat Senators Windom and Conkling; on his left, Senator Lewis, Consul-General Dart, Senator Sherman, and Hon. Mr. Weed. The vice chairs were filled by Mr. M. P. Ryan, M. P., and Mr. Alex. Mitchell.

The courses having been removed, the Chairman rose to propose as a toast "The Transportation Routes Committee of the Senate of the United States," and in doing so referred to the enterprise that had heretofore characterised the Americans in opening up the channels of the Far-West, towards utilizing the vast cereal products of that country. He remarked that much remained to be done by both Americans and Canadians, pointed out that the latter had not been idle in the matter of improving transportation routes, and hoped that our neighbors might be able to realize the benefits of our means of communication to the utmost. It only remained for him to express the satisfaction he felt, in conjunction with the commercial representatives present, in welcoming Hon. Mr. Windom and his party to their city.

Senator Windom, in reply, wished to assure their entertainers that the compliment just paid to his committee was fully appreciated, not only on account of the personal gratification it gave them, but because it manifested a warm sympathy with the objects of their mission, as well as kindly feelings towards the country they represented. The more he had investigated the question before them, the more had he been led to see the greatness of the commerce of their brethren in Canada. He thought praise was due to their northern neighbors for their energy and perseverance, when they felt able to begin such immense public works, at a time when the annual revenue of the country was scarcely $200,000. People who could act so boldly were destined to succeed in their efforts to provide such further facilities as are required. Coming from the abundant western interior, where corn has actually been used as fuel, for lack of means of disposal, he felt an interest in seeing all means of transport developed, and could congratulate them upon engaging in such improvements. He felt that it would be imprudent for him to express an opinion in favor of any one route contrasted with another, as his committee had not yet presented its official report to Congress. They desired to ascertain the best method of lessening the cost of freight, and cheapening food to the consumers of Europe; they would be glad to have the Canadians as their carriers, if it would be done the cheapest, and the world, crying out for cheaper food, would gladly thank them too. He concluded by thanking those gentlemen who had assisted his committee, by giving them statistics and information upon their enquiries.

Senator Norwood, of Georgia, being loudly called for, made several humorous remarks, to the effect that while the Committee had declined a formal dinner, in order to avoid any danger of committing themselves by speech-making, the Canadians had done a "smart thing," by capturing them on the "raging canal." He said Americans thought they knew a good deal, but this hospitable ruse was a new wrinkle even for them. He dwelt upon the breadth of the question they were considering—the commerce of the continent, and said the cheapest carriers would have the business.

Senator Conkling spoke of the reception as the fondling of the British Lion, alluded to the importance of the question of cheap transportation, and how the American continent could by its solution wrest the English market from Russian control. He reverted to the late war of North and South, and the magnitude of the debt left behind, remarking that a cheaper method of transportation would help them to quickly reduce it to a very fine point. In conclusion, he proposed as a sentiment: "British America and the United States; may they unite in progress, and join in generous rivalry for promoting prosperity in the world."

Senator Sherman said that in Ohio they cared nothing about country or locality; they felt that commerce knew no country but the cheapest market; and if Montreal could carry cheaper than New York, they would get the trade.

The Chairman next proposed "The members of the New York State Senate and Legislature."

Hon Mr. Lewis, in response, thought that while some men from different sections might feel inclined to be biased in favour of their special routes, yet there was grain enough to give work to all the avenues that could be constructed. However, he believed that a people that could construct such mighty works as had been done in Canada, were certainly entitled to control no mean portion of the commerce of the West.

Hon Smith M. Weed and Hon J. Bradford Prince followed. The former advocated the construction of the Caughnawaga Canal. The latter said that New York feared nothing from Philadelphia, Baltimore, or Boston; but Montreal was the only rival she acknowledged. He moved the sentiment:—"Merchants of the city of Montreal; those that control the business of the North."

Hon. John Young, M P., replied, comparing the advantages of the water routes over the land carriage, and produced statistics of cost and tonnage in connection with his remarks.

Mr. M. P. Ryan, M. P., also replied, stating that the Government had made appropriations for public works, and were heartily in sympathy with the people in their efforts to develope the growing trade of the country.

Mr. Hoffman, a prominent Chicago wheat dealer, followed, and reviewed the situation in emphatic language, condemning timidity in dealing with such matters, remarking that Chicagoans thought nothing of spending seven millions to beautify their burnt city, and that if the people having the products of the West did not open up routes the farmers and merchants would buy them out. He also warned the Senators, Congressmen and Legislators present that if they did not earnestly take up this question and solve it, the people would send men into office that would. He prophesied that at the next census the voting population of the Union would be west of Detroit, and warned the men in power to look out for themselves. These and other similar expressions were delivered in a high tone and with vehement gestures, the company laughing and cheering in turn. In the midst of a burst of true Chicagoan oratory the speaker was cut short by the steamer arriving at Lachine, and the company broke up to inspect the canal and prepare for the descent of the Rapids, which was safely accomplished, the feat eliciting many expressions of wonder and delight from the tourists. The Victoria Bridge was also much admired. Captain Bailley landed his passengers at the locks at 6:30, and carriages were in waiting to convey them to the St. Lawrence Hall, where later in the evening an informal meeting was held, at which the trade and commerce of the city was well represented. The party left for Ogdensburg and Oswego this morning, and we believe carried away very pleasant impressions of their brief stay. It is to be regretted that time did not allow of a tour of the harbor, also that the port is just now unusually bare of shipping. We must, however, congratulate the gentlemen of the Board of Trade and Corn Exchange Associations upon the manner in which they finally received and entertained the party, especially as the original plans were overthrown, and the movement of the committee extremely uncertain until the eleventh hour.

We omitted to mention above that Gruenwald's fine string band was in attendance, and added much to the eclat of the trip.

In that condition of the system known as used up, whether the vital forces have been exhausted by dissipation and bad habits, or by protracted mental exertion, brain worry and over-work, Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya is of extraordinary efficacy. The nervous system feels its sustaining power immediately, and that depression of spirits which so prostrates and kills is removed, and elasticity and energy of mind results. It is truly marvellous to witness the rapidity and certainty with which Phosphates supply the waste of tissues and restore vitality to all the organs of the body. They are the only medicinal agents known to science that at the same time modify and control diseased action, and furnish material for building up bone, muscle, and nerve. 212-d&w*

Early Marriages.

All things considered, we believe the world would be happier if earlier marriages were more frequent. When men marry young, they open life with glowing hopes and earnest ambitions. Idleness and frivolity fall away from them. Responsibility stimulates faculty and makes industry necessary. Many a man has been saved by marriage from dissipation and a wasted life; a young man with a young bride will soon show the stuff he is made of; virtues crop up out of soil that was even thought vicious before; all that is manly, aspiring, hopeful, earnest, exalted, honest, comes to the surface. If there is health on both sides - and it is only marriages where the physical development is good and health sound that we are advocating—it makes little difference what the worldly goods are with which the couple are endowed; if the man is sound in health and of industrious disposition, he is almost certain to make his way; while a young woman with an honest, industrious, energetic, affectionate husband has, take all the chances of life, about as reasonable certainty of a prosperous future as any human being whatever. The man might die and leave her with children; life insurance is a guard against want if this occurs; against all other chances she has the best card in the world—the devotion of an honest, strong handed husband. Those who marry rich men, and often do, become poor; those who marry under the conditions we have described are almost certain to obtain competency and assured comfort, especially if they study economy and neatness by obtaining their Clothing from JAMES CALLEN'S, 525 and 527 Craig street 217

At the Stratford races yesterday Harris won the local purse; Varese, the trotting purse; and Vandal, the race for Dominion bred horses.

Archibald Bishop, Warden of the County of Huron, is to be the Grit standard in the coming election in South Huron for the local House.

The steamer Silver Spray brought over from Dalhousie yesterday afternoon the remains of Henry Davidson, one of the victims of the yacht Sphynx disaster. Ward, the only survivor of the ill-fated crew, came over in the same boat. He is progressing slowly but is still in a low condition. The bodies of the other two are not yet recovered.

The Guelph Exhibition was formally opened yesterday. It is fully up to the standard of last year's show, and in many respects it is superior.

The electors are deciding the question as to whether it is advisable to grant another $600,000 to the Water Commissioners for the new Water Works to day by vote. The result will probably be pretty close.

A race for $100 a side took place at the Carlton Course yesterday, over eight hurdles, two miles, between Jack the Barber and Battle Cry. The former won easily.

A few days since the interesting god-child of the Queen, the Lady Victoria Alexandrina Blackwood, daughter of their Excellencies the Governor-General and the Countess of Dufferin, was the recipient of a very beautiful locket with her name engraved in solid gold which is surrounded with diamonds. The entire circle is artistically arranged with pink coral and pearls alternating, whilst the pendants are gold and pink coral, the whole forming a rare work of art pleasing to the eye, and no doubt highly gratifying to the noble family whose daughter has been thus honored by our Queen.

Sir John A. Macdonald, Hons. Langevin, Aikens, Campbell, Abbott, Judge Ramsay, Mayor Manning, of Toronto, and a number of spectators present.

Mr. Campbell's deposition was read; he added the statement that after the elections Sir John told him Sir Hugh subscribed $25,000 towards the Ontario elections. After the publication of McMullen's letters witness heard from Sir John that Sir Hugh had subscribed altogether $45,000 to the Ontario elections; witness wished to add—referring to the suggestion in yesterday's Montreal Herald—he never had any correspondence with Hon. Abbott or anyone else respecting the amount or disposal of any election fund.

The deposition was then signed in triplicate; at this stage Sir Hugh Allan entered.

Two hours were occupied in reading and closing Campbell's evidence.

The Commission then adjourned till 2:30 p.m.

SPECIAL CASES.

James Kinsella, grocer, Lagauchetiere street, was yesterday fined by the Recorder, for the illicit sale of liquor, $50 and costs, or three months.

Olivier Therien, painter, St. Felix street, for keeping a dirty yard, $2.50 and costs.

MECHANICS' HALL.

The concert given under the direction of Mr. Boucher, in the Mechanics' Hall last night, was well attended. The programme consisted of selections from Flotow's Martha, a recitation by Miss Polly Swift, and a chorus from Lucretia Borgia. The performance calls for no special remark, though a clique in the rear part of the Hall persistently stamped an encore to every item. It was a subject of very general remark that while the Hall people were decorating the ceiling and walls, they might vouchsafed new curtains for the platform, touched up the coat of arms and statues, cleaned the seats and scrubbed the floor.

THE EXHIBITION.

Some of the Sights.

There is a big rush for the Exhibition to-day; our country cousins are abroad in force, and every avenue and mode of reaching the desired haven is well patronized. Around the entrance to the Exhibition grounds are the catch-pennies shows and uninviting refreshments booths common to fairs. The young person who rejoices in a waist measuring seven feet, (more or less) is there, also the bewitching beauties of Circassia (somewhere in the vicinity of the Bowery, New York), with each hair of their head standing on its particular end, and legs very much exposed. There are many other handy ways by which the credulous and their money may dissolve partnership. There is not much bawling, as at most such gatherings. The famous Montreal lime-dust which rises in clouds as every vehicle passes has this good effect at least. But let us enter the grounds. All around are roomy stalls for live stock, and right before us is a large ring, strongly roped, for the showing off of horses.

This morning the ring was encircled four deep by men, women and children to watch the jumpers. Beyond this, to the left is Sisson's dining hall, and on the right, the farm produce building. Next we see a building with fowls, ducks, geese and other feathered specimens. Right ahead we come to the Industrial Exhibition building. On the ground, in the immediate vicinity, are shown various implements and machinery to supplant manual labor on the farm and in the farm house. Noticeable among these articles is Stong's gate which may be opened and shut without alighting from the vehicle one may be riding in. The gate works beautifully, and is much admired. Each churn, plow, threshing machine, mill, &c., has its little knot of curious spectators, and quite frequently very interesting discussions arise among these onlookers as to the merits of various implements, and on farm matters generally. Thus, parties living many miles apart form acquaintanceships and exchange thoughts, ideas and suggestions, who but for such an opportunity as these exhibitions afford would, perhaps, never have come together.

At the main entrance to the building some fine drawing-room mirrors attract the attention both from their size and elegance, and also from the fact that in the vicinity may always be found a crowd of pretty girls, who somehow happen to gravitate towards this point. Immediately opposite will be found a fine display of surgical instruments, artificial limbs, instruments to relieve physical deformities, gymnastic apparatus, ear trumpets, crutches, splints, feeding bottles, swimming belts, &c., &c. These are exhibited by Mr. F. Gross, 690 Craig street. Mr. Gross is noted throughout the Dominion, and we may say the continent, for his successful manufacture of artificial limbs and articles to relieve physical deformities generally. His patent artificial legs defy detection, being devised and constructed on scientific and anatomical principles, possessing great strength with lightness and durability. Here also is to be seen the self-acting cow-milker. Close by will be found two wonderful models of marine architecture, which are not described on the ticket attached, but which are supposed to represent the sort of vessels that used to visit Montreal before the twenty-foot channel came into vogue.

Giving ourselves over to the will of the jostling crowd we next secure a mooring opposite the very handsome stand erected by Messrs. Winning, Hill and Ware for the display of their celebrated fruit syrups, liqueurs, cordials, bitters, brandies, &c. At each corner of the stand is a barrel of the famous Carratraca mineral water with tumblers, pro bono publico. An admiring crowd is always to be seen here. Passing on, our attention is drawn by an enterprising gentleman to the "Ross steam washer, stain remover and bleacher," or, potent words! "Woman's Favorite." It is claimed for this machine that it uses much less soap than required by any other method, does its own work, requiring no attention after once starting, and all articles cleansed by it wear double the time they would if washed by other methods. Every housewife should make a point of seeing this machine.

A machine that deserves notice is the "Bickford Knitting Machine," a very pretty specimen of the machinist's art. The "Bickford" does various kinds of knitting, all in first-class style. The headquarters of the manufacturers are at 689 Broadway, N. Y. The Montreal agent is Mr. D. H. Laporte, 282 and 284 Notre Dame street.

And now we have thrust into our hand a large illustrated circular, and find upon opening it that it tells us what Messrs. Ives & Allan can do. This firm, as many of our readers are aware, has its works on both sides of Queen street in this city, and manufacture a multitude of articles in iron, besides belting, and the famed Dominion Black Lead. They occupy a large space in the Exhibition, and show a great variety of work; some fine stoves, ranges for wood or coal, elegant iron bedsteads, fences, flower stands, baskets, mediæval work for churches, &c., &c. This circular contains a sheet of comic "Sketches at the Fair."

Ah! what have we here? Such a crowd betokens something worth looking at. And we are not mistaken. In the centre of an admiring circle sits a charming young damsel gaily working the neat, nobby looking little Banner Sewing Machine. What this machine will not do in the way of needle work isn't worth much. We are shown two pieces of leather inclosing a piece of lead of about one-eighth of an inch thick, and the Banner has sewn all three together as easily as though the lead and leather were so much cambric. Well may it excite the admiration of the fair sex. The Banner Sewing Machine Company's works are at Sherbrooke; the agents in Montreal are Messrs. F. X. Loiselle & Co., 207 Notre Dame street. But we must stop our ramblings for this issue. Au revoir.

THE TOKEN OF FAITH,

OR,

FAITH, LOVE AND DEATH.

The housekeeper shrugged her shoulders and ascended the stairs.

Mildred motioned to Aubrey to follow her.

He obeyed, not without a strange beating of the heart, for there was a singular solemn silence reigning in the house. Everything in it looked motionless and grim, save Mildred, who, it struck him, as she turned her sweet face to him, and motioned him to follow her up the stairs, looked like some fair spirit moving radiantly in a temple of mourning.

As he moved after her, he thought of Marmaduke Stourton, and marvelled whether he should meet him again that night at the Cross of the Scarlet Flower; for, at all hazards, he intended to return thither himself, and while yet his mind was wandering with him to another place, he saw a black oaken door open, disclosing the exterior of a small library. The light of a lamp fell upon the pale but noble countenance of a man verging upon the eve of sixty, who was standing in the apartment, regarding, with evident anxiety the opening door.

Aubrey's heart leaped from its seat as he with wonder recognized this face, and the coldness of death stole over him.

CHAPTER III.

A grave old man erect and unsubdued ;
His frame large and well knit ; but pale his look
With studious thought ; and stooping o'er his book,
Had rounded him a little in the back :
His habit plain and made of seemly black,
But out of richest velvet.

KINGSTON.

The library in Digby Manor into which Aubrey Ashby was about to be ushered, bore a singular gloomy aspect. It was larger than it seemed, but the massive character of the furniture, and the sombre hue of everything within the chamber, had the effect of contracting its proportions and of imparting to it a sad and woeful air.

The room itself was lofty, but the ceiling was divided into compartments by heavy mouldings of black oak, picked out with thin streaks of gold. In the centre of the panels were escutcheons, carved also in black oak, the arms and quarterings being gilded. The sides of the room were covered for three-fourths of their height by massive book-cases or book-shelves containing hundreds of tomes, bound either in black or white parchment, or in dark-stained leather, banded and clasped. In niches were several pedestals, upon which were placed busts, being the sculptured portraits of some individuals whose memory the successive owners of the Manor had cherished—perhaps they were ancestors who had most ecclesiastical countenances—and in other parts of the room were articles of vertu, in the shape of vases, ancient oaken carvings, accoutrements of early Saxon and Roman warriors, pikes, bows, bills, &c There were two doors within the room at the further end, and there were two windows, one wholly, the other partially, concealed by long black curtains. The tables of black oak were covered with books and loose papers, and even upon the carved high-back chairs, a loose book and stray bundles of papers had been carelessly flung, and some were scattered upon the Turkey carpet, which covered only a portion of the flooring, constructed of black polished oak, inlaid with various devices in some dark wood. In one part of the room was a handsome and elaborate chimney piece, and over it a large picture in an ebony frame.

In keeping with the sable character of this chamber was its tenant, Walter Digby, who, as we have stated, was approaching fast his sixtieth year. He was tall and somewhat spare ; his face, which was colorless, possessed features of a noble stamp ; his forehead was high and polished, and intellectual in its formation ; his eyes were large, and of the same deep blue as his daughter's, and the lid was as full as hers, and fringed with a long dark lash ; his nose was thin and acquiline, his mouth small, and surmounted by a moustache, in which the fair hair, which was his by nature, was like that which receded from his temples, silvered by time. He wore his beard pointed, as was the custom of the period, and he was habited in a suit of black Genoa velvet, which ministered no little to the native gravity and austerity of his countenance.

As we have said, on beholding him, Aubrey's heart bounded in his body, and he impulsively fell back a pace or two, in truth he would have retreated altogether, but that the door of the library was already flung open, and his arrival announced.

Drawing himself up, he stepped forward as Dame Limejuice, in her sharp, shrill voice, exclaimed—

"May it please you, most noble sir, the lamb has returned to the fold, the dove has come back to the ark, and has brought you an olive-branch in the form of a jack-a dandy gallant, to make her peace with you for having alarmed you honored sir, and flinging us all into fits and convulsions. I warrant me, noble sir, you will read the witless young mistress a lesson of reproof for gadding abroad at such unseemly times"

"Peace, Lim-juice!" interrupted her master.

"And teach the roistering gallant——" continued the old woman, rather viciously.

"Silence, mistress, when I bid you!" exclaimed Mildred's father, sternly; "silence, and leave us!"

The old woman tossed up her head and cried—

"I have nursed the chitling ; shall I patiently suffer the wilful madbrain to come to sorrow ? I can save her ?"

Master Walter Digby pointed sternly to the door.

The old woman, muttering and swaying with an irritated mien, obeyed his gesture, and departed.

As she passed Aubrey, however, she favored him with a peculiarly malignant scowl, at which, as he observed it, he smiled good-humoredly, although he certainly felt a singular perturbation in his breast when his eye rested on the countenance of Mildred's father.

When they were alone, and the Mistress Limejuice had closed the door behind her with a bang which was echoed by the corridors, Master Walter Digby turned his face to his daughter, and addressing her said, in a calm, grave voice, which was not without sweetness in its tone—

"Mildred, my child, your continued absence this evening has greatly disturbed and alarmed me. I doubt not but the storm has had somewhat to do with the events which has detained you, but I feel that it has not been the sole occasion. Under ordinary circumstances you should have been at home before the storm commenced. You are truthful, I know, and you will, I am convinced, relate to me without omission the causes which, after the completion of the mission with which I entrusted you, combined to prevent your immediate return to me."

He laid a peculiar and emphatic stress upon those words, and fastened upon her a meaning look which she appeared fully to comprehend, and now really for the first time also the curiously equivocal position in which she appeared to stand with Aubrey Ashby. Not that she had any true idea to what extent malevolent suspicion might extend ; but, from the conduct of her cousin Marmaduke, she had some notion of what kind of matter Aubrey might have chosen in his discourse with her—and did not. Certainly he had spoken little, but that little had been most courteous, most decorous, and most respectful.

She glanced furtively at his youthful, fair, open, handsome countenance, and a rather heavy sigh pressed upward from her heart to her lips, and would have been audible, but that she suppressed it. The sigh was involuntarily, and so was its suppression, for she felt that it would be embarrassing to be caught sighing just now.

It was a little awkward, too, that she perceived that Aubrey had caught her hasty glance at his face, and had faintly smiled.
