Ontario elects new mayors

Voters in Ontario's three largest cities had little difficulty Monday selecting mayors, but computer problems in Ottawa kept one of three winners in the dark about his exact victory total.

Incumbent mayors Vic Copps of Hamilton and Pierre Benoit of Ottawa were returned to office while youthful newcomer David Crombie was swept into Toronto's top municipal office.

The choosing of the three mayors was the highlight of a hectic, wintry day of municipal elections across Ontario. Thousands of voters returned some municipal leaders to office, dumped others and cast ballots on such far-ranging topics as Sunday racing and garbage collection.

Mr. Copps, 53, received only a token challenge from his one rival in winning his sixth term as Hamilton mayor. Final figures early today showed Mr. Copps finishing with 41,883 votes compared with the 14,822 accumulated by Doug Branigan, a freelance artist.

A 36-year-old university lecturer and alderman, Mr. Crombie easily defeated fellow aldermen Tony O'Donohue and David Rotenberg as well as four other less influential candidates. All seven were seeking to succeed the retiring William Dennison, 67.

Results early today, with all but 38 of the 1,490 polls in, showed Mr. Crombie with 81,156 votes. Mr. O'Donohue had 57,158 and Mr. Rotenberg 34,599. Paul Rimstead, a columnist with The Toronto Sun, came fourth with 7,807.

Despite the computer breakdown, voter apathy and bitter weather, Mr. Benoit was an obvious winner in Ottawa—possibly in a landslide.

Before the mechanical problems set in, Mr. Benoit held a 1,100-vote lead over the nearest of his three rivals.

Officials said the breakdown came because inputs to the computer jammed as all 840 polls attempted to get results in at one time. There are only 33 lines into the computer.

HAPPENED BEFORE

A similar breakdown was experienced in the 1969 municipal election in Ottawa. Voter apathy was particularly evident in one area in Ottawa in which only two of 273 eligible voters showed up.

Mr. Benoit, 33, originally became mayor seven months ago when council selected him to replace Ken Fogarty, who resigned to become a county court judge.

There was no shortage of slightly off-beat election issues.

Residents in St. Catharines voted 85 per cent against a proposal that would have forced them to leave garbage in front of their houses for collection. Many now keep it behind their homes, requiring gabagamen to do extra walking.

FAVOR RACING

Voters in Nassagaweya Township about 25 miles northwest of Hamilton decided in favor of Sunday afternoon horse racing at Mohawk Raceway while Welland residents voted in favor of enlarging their transit system to 10 buses from five.

Cold, blustery weather kept some people at home and away from polls. Temperatures hit lows below zero in some northern sections and other areas were hit by snow.

It was the first municipal election in which 18-year-olds were allowed to vote.

Some sections of the province had no elections Monday. The regional municipality of Sudbury voted Oct. 2 as did residents of Timmins-Porcupine.

both in the north. The Regional Municipality of Waterloo held its vote Oct. 16.

One of the few incumbent mayors to bite the dust was Dr. J. Russell Scott of Brockville, who also is president of the Association of Municipalities of Ontario.

Dr. Scott lost to Mrs. Robin Jeffrey, a city alderman for the last five years.

"I was too busy with the association to take care of my own backyard," he said.

WINS BY ONE VOTE

The closest vote occurred in the village of Pickering east of Toronto. Vic Dingley was elected reeve with 320 votes, one more than William McLean. The runner up hesitated for a matter of seconds before announcing he will seek a recount.

In the town of Dunnville, long-time Mayor Charles Lundy was re-elected. It was the first election he has had to contest in years and he breezed past two opponents. In elections during the last 11 years, he always had been returned to office by acclamation.

Incumbent mayors returned to office in cities included Philip Turner, Peterborough; Douglas Allin, Chatham; Bob Rutherford, Owen Sound; Paul Blundy, Sarnia and Ronald A. Irwin, Sault Ste. Marie.

Incumbent mayors in cities who went down to defeat included David Brown in Orillia and Niss Nissen in Port Colborne. Jack V. Andre won in Orillia and John Buscarino in Port Colborne.

Women elected as mayors in cities included Dorian Parker in Barrie and Mrs. Jeffrey in Brockville.

Blaze destroys 4,000 chickens

STANBRIDGE EAST (WM) — More than 4,000 chickens were burned alive when a barn in St. Ignace, near Stanbridge East, caught fire early yesterday morning. The chicken shed, belonging to Oege Bergsma, was completely destroyed and none of the 4,000 chickens survived.

The Bedford fire department, which was called from eight miles away to put out the blaze, arrived too late to save the building. They were able, however, to avoid a massive explosion by diverting the flames from a propane gas tank kept nearby.

The fire was apparently noticed by accident by a passer-by who reported it to the Bedford fire department. A spokesman for the fire department said he did not know how the fire had been caused.

Mrs. Bergsma, whose husband owns the chicken farm, said that the fire meant the loss of their entire income for the year. She valued the chickens and barn at some $6,000.

She was unable to say whether they would be able to collect insurance on the loss.

Trudeau returns 'gratified' with talks

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau returns to Ottawa today, satisfied that Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain will work for an outward-looking European Common Market, and hopeful that the Queen will visit Ottawa next summer.

Trudeau completed two days of talks with Heath Monday, and he told a news conference later he was "very gratified" with the British prime minister's reassurances that Canada's viewpoint is fully understood.

Britain joins the EEC Jan. 1, and Commonwealth preferential tariffs will be abolished gradually, affecting more than half of Canada's exports to Britain. In 1971, Britain imported $1.3 billion worth of goods from Canada—about eight per cent of Canada's total exports.

Trudeau came to London to urge Heath to keep Canada's interest in mind as a member of the community. He received a "very strong theoretical reassurance" of this.

After lunching with the Queen at Windsor Castle Monday, the Canadian prime minister announced that she has agreed "in principle" to visit Ottawa next year when the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference will be held there. She could not give a firm commitment until the date of the meeting is established.

TALKS RANGED WIDELY

Trudeau, who spent two days at Chequers, the country home of Heath, told his news conference that the two men informally discussed pollution, immigration, the Vietnam situation, the next Commonwealth conference, the next law-of-the-sea conference and other subjects. And then he faced a series of questions from British reporters on the current Canadian political situation.

One of Trudeau's stated reasons for coming to London was to brief Heath on Canada's position regarding its proposed membership of a supervisory commission in Vietnam before the British prime minister goes to Washington later this month.

The Canadian government has laid down a series of preconditions to any such membership, and Trudeau said he wanted to explain these. The preconditions include the establishment of a "higher authority" to which the commission could report, and that the invitation to serve must come for all the warring factions in Vietnam.

"We've had some experience in peacekeeping operations," Trudeau said Monday.

Asked about Heath's reaction to the Canadian position, Trudeau said, "He seemed to receive it with interest."

WILL TIGHTEN RULES
The question of immigration is a controversial one here with Britain's imminent entry into the EEC. Regulations will be tightened on Commonwealth migrants—an issue that resulted in a motion against the government.

But Trudeau did not discuss this directly. He told the news conference that Heath did not criticize Canada's immigration laws "and I didn't try to analyse Britain's."

The Canadian government has taken the position that this is an internal British matter.

Escaped convict recaptured

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Paul Mercier, 28, one of two escaped convicts issued passports by the external affairs department, was arrested here Monday in a robbery investigation.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Nov. 17 that his department had issued passports to Mercier and Jacques Mesrine, hoping the documents would lead to their capture. Mercier, serving 24 years for attempted murder, armed robbery and car theft, escaped from prison here last summer with Mesrine.

Mesrine, 36, serving 10 years for armed robbery, kidnapping and escaping custody, is still at large.

P.E.I. Tories take two from Liberals

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Victories by Progressive Conservatives in two of three byelections held in Prince Edward Island Monday show "the party is on the march again," says George Dewar, interim party leader.

The Conservatives won Kings 1st and Queens 2nd ridings, but lost a tight race in Kings 4th to Premier Alex Campbell's Liberals.

However, the Liberal government, which won all three seats in the last general election, still holds a solid majority in the 32-seat house. The byelections left standings at 25 Liberals 25 and seven Conservatives.

Dr. Dewar, whose party was swamped 27-to-5 by the Liberals in 1970, said the byelections indicated the people had reservations about some of the policies enacted by federal and provincial Liberal governments.

But Gordon Bennett, acting premier while Mr. Campbell is in Ottawa for meetings, said he felt the voting did not show a rejection of the government and its policies. He said the people had listened to Conservative requests to make the opposition "numerically strong and had taken it to heart."

LEADERSHIP AT STAKE

The election victory for the PCs may have been the opening volley in a contest for the provincial party leadership, vacated a year ago by the resignation of George Key. Dr. Dewar is filling in until a convention is called.

Melvin McQuaid, a former provincial cabinet minister and member of Parliament, was elected Monday to represent Kings 1st and he says he is considering running for the leadership post.

"I think things will start rolling now... Mr. McQuaid is a very strong contender," Dr. Dewar said. He expected to see a leadership convention called within a matter of months.

Mr. McQuaid, a 61-year-old lawyer, won his riding with 1,271 votes, 264 more than Liberal Francis C. White, Fred Cheverie of the New Democratic Party had 43.

In Queens 2nd, Bennett Carr was successful in his second attempt to capture the seat for the Conservatives.

Canadian Viet effort could involve 3,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian participation in a Vietnam truce supervisory operation could involve upwards of 3,000 troops and cost the country "scores of millions," reliable sources said Monday.

At the same time, officials reiterated that Canada has made no commitment to take part in a four-country truce commission proposed by the United States.

Canada's position will depend on the terms of reference given the commission, they maintained, adding that a refusal by South Vietnam to subscribe to a ceasefire agreement could gravely imperil prospects of Canadian involvement.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has said Canada will want to be assured that, among other things, all parties to the Vietnam war are bound by the ceasefire agreement.

However, recent reports from Paris have referred to indications that the U.S. may be preparing to sign such an agreement without South Vietnam's concurrence.

TALKS RESUME

Negotiations between the Americans and North Vietnamese resumed Monday in Paris amid speculation that a truce plan may be signed this week.

Sources said that under the right conditions, Canada would be prepared to earmark the 1,000 to 1,450 military observers that Washington has been asking, with Indonesia, Poland and Hungary—the other members of the proposed ceasefire commission—presumably supplying a similar number.

Most of the men assigned to the international truce team would be officers. But they would require a support organization of something like double the number of observers, and made up of both officers and NCOs.

Mr. Sharp has said Canada would be prepared to pay her share as a contribution to world peace and a way of helping bail the U.S. out of "this terrible situation."

But the Canadian government wants the division of financial responsibility for the truce operation established in advance. It also wants a limit set on the life of the proposed commission; two years has been mentioned.

Ottawa authorities made clear that Canadian personnel are not likely to be without the means of self-protection should they be assigned to a delicate and possibly dangerous truce observer role in Vietnam.

Mr. Sharp has stated several times that the troops will not constitute a "military formation," and other external affairs officials have emphasized that Canada won't be sending an armed force.

However, said the authorities, this doesn't mean that the soldiers would be completely unarmed. Planners here are going on the assumption that the Canadians will be permitted to carry pistols for personal protection.

Moon men counting, ready

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts Eugene Cernan and Harrison Schmitt practised simulated landings and takeoffs from the moon Monday as the countdown for the last Apollo moon mission ticked on towards a Wednesday night liftoff.

The two astronauts, who may be the last men to walk on the moon for a decade or more, rehearsed in a lunar lander simulator the tricky descent over a 6,000-foot-high mountain into a volcanic valley named Taurus-Littrow.

Then they ran through procedures for leaving the moon Dec. 14 for a rendezvous with Ronald Evans in the command ship America. They are to stay on the moon a record 75 hours.

Near the lunar module simulator is a large reproduction of the mountain-ringed valley in which the astronauts are to land.

A computer projects a picture on a screen outside the trainer window, giving the astronauts the same sensation they will have as they approach Taurus-Littrow, with the terrain looming ever larger during the gradual approach.

The takeoff simulation is similar, except that the landscape disappears rapidly as the lunar module Challenger rockets quickly away from the moon.

Evans worked in the command ship simulator on how he will control the vehicle on reentry through the earth's atmosphere and splashdown in the Pacific Ocean on Dec. 19.

On the launch pad, with the threat of a strike averted, chief test supervisor William Schick said the countdown was proceeding according to plan "toward a 9:53 p.m. EST blastoff Wednesday, the first manned launching at night by the United States."

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Questions Surgery For 89-Year-Old

Dear Dr. Lamb — My father has an aortic aneurysm and has had it for about eight years. However, now it is getting bigger and our family doctor suggests an operation with a graft. He is 89 years old and I don't know whether the family should encourage the operation or not. I, being the son with power of attorney to handle all legal matters, seem to be left with the decision. Would you please comment on this for me. He is in pretty good health other than hypertension and also he is taking digitalis tablets four times a week.

Dear Reader — An aneurysm of the aorta is caused by a weakness in the wall of the aorta which allows it to balloon out like a weak spot does on an inner tube only usually in these cases the area involved is much larger than that you might see on the inner tube. The real danger of course is that the dilated part of the weakened wall or the aneurysm may blow out or rupture. When it starts getting larger, if it is going to be operated on, it is the time it should be done.

Many of these that involve replacing a section of the aorta in the abdomen can be done with a limited amount of risk. If the section to be replaced is in the chest, the operation is more difficult and carries a higher risk. The synthetic material that is used for a graft works very well and in fact in time a new lining grows inside of it just like the lining in the ordinary aorta.

It is not possible for me to tell you whether it is wise to operate or not because I don't know that much about the rest of the medical condition of your father. There is a point, however, when one has very little to gain by waiting. If the likelihood is that a rupture of the aneurysm is going to occur relatively soon and nothing is done, once it ruptures there is only one possible outcome. So, even when there is a reasonably high risk involved because of the age and health problems, it is still sometimes indicated.

This must be balanced against the probability of operative success. Sometimes in people your father's age the aorta has undergone so much change that it can't be operated upon successfully. The aorta may be so hard from calcification and associated change that it is very brittle. Such an aorta is sometimes called a "glass aorta" and it shatters on attempted incision and it is impossible to suture successfully.

I would suggest that you go along with your family doctor's suggestion, at least to the point of having your father referred to a large medical center where operations of this nature are done rather frequently. To be certain to get the best team effort, I would suggest that he be referred to a medical cardiologist, not directly to a surgeon. The medical cardiologist will need to evaluate some of the problems I have mentioned in judging whether your father is a candidate for surgery, but I must urge you to proceed as rapidly as possible to obtain a decision because of your comment about the aneurysm getting larger.

Go to a doctor — don't treat yourself landed you!

Dear Ann Landers: Two and a half months ago my mother-in-law left her husband. Every weekend since the separation she has been at our house. She is a very nice person, but I think she is mixed up.

The reason for the split is that my father-in-law has a bad temper and has beaten her up several times. She says she hates the sight of him and there is no chance that they will ever get together again. Yet every weekend she telephones him and he comes over and they go off together until all hours of the night.

The next day she says she had a rotten time and she wishes he would leave her alone. She must not remember that we know she called him. She tells everyone a different story.

My husband and I have been married only a year and his mother keeps our home in constant turmoil. We have no free time together since we both work and the weekends are taken over by his mother. He says he can't abandon her in her hour of trouble. Any suggestions? — Fight Fight Fight

Dear Ann Landers: I have a serious problem and don't know who to turn to. Please help. I am 23, male, with a fine wife and two small children. About four months ago I started to work a second job to make more money. I began to take "pep pills" when one of the guys at the second job told me that's how he got the energy to carry him through a second shift. Now I am hooked.

I realized I'm addicted to oral Speed and it is killing me. I feel like a revved up motor with no brakes. Twice I tried to quit but I couldn't keep my eyes open. I can't tell my wife I'm hooked on cross-tops. It would kill her if she knew. This lousy stuff is making a paranoid nut out of me. Do you know of an anti-amphetamine I could switch to that would give me the energy I need and get me out of this junkie routine? I'm desperate. — Portland Troubles

Dear P.T.: You can be helped by a doctor if you follow his instructions. I implore you not to try to treat yourself. You did that once and you see where it

'Regime pedagogique' causing hassles between CEGEPs, Quebec

By WENDY McMULLEN
Record Reporter

LENNOXVILLE — Following the strike of French CEGEP students in Sherbrooke last Thursday protesting the "Regime Pedagogique", Champlain Students decided Friday to present a White Paper to the government outlining their objections to the proposed rules governing CEGEPs.

The reason Champlain students decided not to join the strike of Sherbrooke students was because we received a telegram from the education minister saying he would listen to our complaints," Cal Martin, chairman of cultural affairs for the students union executive council, declared yesterday.

"We felt that since the proposed rules are still being discussed it is premature to strike at this time."

At the meeting Friday students from Champlain agreed on a series of modifications and extensions to the government rules. "The main point of most of our modifications is to try to retain power for the institutions themselves," Cal Martin commented.

The most politically controversial of the proposed regulations is one proposing that the college's executive board may order a re-registration during the semester for serious reasons. This would mean, according to students, that political undesirables could be refused readmission to the university.

DECLARED ILLEGAL

This measure was declared illegal last year by a court in Montreal after two colleges, the CEGEP de Vieux Montreal and Rosemount had tried to invoke this procedure after campus demonstrations.

The Champlain students propose that this regulation be changed to read "only in the case of loss of records." They also recommend that an amendment be added giving faculty, with the support of the campus council, the right to dismiss a student whose only intention is to disrupt the work of other students.

A problem on which the Champlain students could not agree was the amount of specialization proposed by the new regulations. According to the Regime Pedagogique proposed by the government half the courses would be taken in the field of specialization and half must be taken from other fields.

This would mean that in a two-year program leading to a college diploma 30 of the 60 credits required would be taken in a particular subject and a minimum of 10 each must be taken in Humanities, Science, Art or Literature.

Cal Martin, of Champlain, said the student vote on this subject was too close to be decisive since the number of students wanting more specialization and the number wanting more general courses was about equal. He suggested that because of the conflict in this area the students and faculty themselves should be left to decide.

Mr. Martin proposed that a counselling centre be set up within the institutions staffed by trained and experienced faculty who could advise the student on whether to specialize bearing in mind the needs of the college and the job market and the psychological needs of the student.

MOST IN FAVOR

Most of the students were in favor of making the number of credits more flexible. They proposed that the number of credits for a two-year course should vary from 55 to 65 depending on the type of courses taken.

They suggested this should be subject to approval of the academic council made up of students and faculty.

Regulations requiring students to take four credits in philosophy and only two in humanities were rejected by the student body on the basis that philosophy courses are too rigid while humanities subjects allow more scope.

The students also objected to the education department's proposal to establish course outlines which they felt might lead to power being given to the government to impose its own external examination system. They felt it should be the sole responsibility of the institution to determine the methods of evaluation of students and courses.

Other proposed regulations which were contested by the Champlain students were the proposed regulations which would give the government the power to dictate the length of the academic year and rules governing admittance to the CEGEP.

WANT AMENDMENTS

Students felt the institution should have the right to determine its own calendar. They also wanted amendments to the rules concerning admittance to allow students to bypass the regulations under extraordinary circumstances.

However, despite the furor aroused by the new Regime Pedagogique, especially in the French-speaking CEGEPs it appears that it is meant only to be a proposed outline not a definite set of rules.

Louis Sontra, director of academic affairs for Champlain, pointed out that the Regime Pedagogique was only a working document which the minister fully intended CEGEP students and faculty to study and report their reactions on.

"It has been a bit misunderstood," Mr. Sontra commented. "It is not actually a fait accompli."

Mr. Sontra reported that the Minister of Education, alarmed at the strong reactions aroused by his document, had held a meeting with the director-generals of CEGEPs to find out why there was so much opposition to the proposals.

The minister, Francois Cloutier, revealed at this meeting that the proposed changes, if they became law, would come about slowly. Some minor changes were projected for 1973-74 but the big changes which in any case would be left flexible, would not take place until 1975.

CEGEP students, faculty and administrators from both French and English-speaking colleges are expected to submit briefs to the minister before Dec. 14.

ARCHIVES DESTROYED — Issues of The Record dating back to 1897 were completely destroyed by a fire early this morning. The blaze, which was reported by an employee of Progressive Publications at 12:31 a.m., did not spread past the room housing the newspapers. Sherbrooke firemen appeared on the scene with four fire trucks fearing a major alarm. Smoke damage was suffered in the offices of Sherbrooke Cablevision, Sherbrooke Record and Progressive Publications. An investigation will be carried out today. But for now, no one can say we aren't the hottest newspaper in town.

Council meeting provokes confrontation

By ALEX RADMANOVICH
Record Reporter

SHERBROOKE — Director-general Serge Racine last night won his first open confrontation before city council but the victory had a hollow ring.

Sherbrooke councillors voted in favor of naming incumbent treasurer Olivier Routhier city comptroller while he retained his position as assistant director-general, finance. The move was strenuously opposed by councillors Romeo Bergeron and Romeo Quintal, a stand which resulted in Mr. Routhier's reluctance to accept the nomination without giving the matter some thought.

Under the proposed administrative manoeuvre the city comptroller would be given direct powers from the director-general to supervise the function of all city departments.

Mr. Racine explained that this did not necessitate the creation of a new job per se but that it was an internal mutation of the existing personnel.

Councillor Romeo Bergeron objected to the change, contending that the elevation of Mr. Routhier would give too much power to the director-general. His thought was echoed by councillor Quintal.

While several other members of the council asked for a definition of the city comptroller's duties, none were opposed and none reiterated the views of the two dissidents. It was clear that a confrontation between councillor Romeo Bergeron and Serge Racine was the real issue.

After debate had meandered for over one half hour, councillor Rosaire Coutu insisted that the regulations of council be respected and the controversy resolved by a vote. He proposed that council accept the creation of the new function under the control of the director-general and nominated Mr. Routhier.

To counter this motion councillor Bergeron added an amendment which would have placed the comptroller under the assistant director-general, finance. The amendment was defeated 7-2 with councillor Raymond Bergeron absent.

In view of the fact that council was not unanimous in its rejection of the amendment, Mr. Routhier declined to accept the nomination. The treasurer made it known that he did not want the new position at the moment while two councillors were dissident.

Mr. Racine thanked the council members for their vote of confidence in his proposal, adding that it was unfortunate things turned out the way they did.

"I would like to assure all council members that my proposal is very much in line with efficient municipal administration," he declared.

In retrospect the opposition by Romeo Bergeron takes on an unhealthy connotation. While the councillor did mention the danger of too much power for one man, he did not give reasons for his strong stand.

Kissinger called improbable sex symbol

By MICHAEL PRENTICE
WASHINGTON (Reuter) —

At first glance Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's peace negotiator, might appear one of the most improbable sex symbols in the world.

He is stocky, wears thick glasses and speaks with a heavy German accent.

But improbable or not, the 49-year-old Kissinger is the one superstar in the Nixon administration, the most sought-after escort in Washington.

It is a role he seems to relish almost as much as being one of the world's most powerful men, the key foreign policy adviser of President Nixon.

His power is a source of his sex appeal, as it has been for many other figures in this power-conscious capital.

HE'S MOST ELIGIBLE

But his taste for the good life and his evident pleasure in the company of beautiful women, combined with his wit and talent as a conversationalist, have made him the most eligible unmarried man in Washington.

Kissinger, a German-born Jewish professor from Harvard who has not considered the life of a party in his professional days, seemed somewhat surprised when he first came to Washington by all the attention paid him by society hostesses and columnists.

But he accepted the flattery and social prominence and cultivated his image as a party-lover and ladies' man.

Referred to by government colleagues as "Henry the K" and sometimes as "Henry the Kiss," Kissinger is not the secret swinger he is sometimes portrayed to be, according to some who know him or have been dated by him.

For one thing, he does not have the time—he works at the White House 12 to 15 hours a day, is dogged by a Secret Service agent when off duty and stands constantly on the alert for a call by radio from the president.

DATES NUMEROUS

But while his social life is restricted, Kissinger has dated a string of attractive women in his four years as the president's right hand man on foreign policy.

He even found time to go to a fashionable and highly-publicized Washington party one night recently while preparing for climactic Vietnam peace negotiations in Paris.

Kissinger's appearance at the party stole the show—as he surely knew it would—and enhanced his reputation as a play-boy who could find time for fun even in the midst of most delicate and crucial international diplomacy.

Kissinger's date was Margaret Osmer, who is about 30, a television producer with stunning good looks who has been seen on his arm several times in the last year or two. His fascination with show business is reflected in his frequent trips to Hollywood when he accompanies President Nixon to the Western White House in California.

Money talks muddy, not clear

By PETER BUCKLEY
WASHINGTON (CP) —

Despite President Nixon's obsession with making things perfectly clear, there is a decidedly murky quality about the future of United States international economic policy as a result of the high-level appointments he has made so far.

Trade and monetary specialists in Canada, Europe, Japan and other areas seeking to know who will call the shots during the president's second term are understandably confused.

The confusion doesn't extend to the question of the importance that these issues will be given during Nixon's next term. The president has emphasized that his administration will concentrate much of its effort on international trade and monetary questions in future and senior aides have frequently embroidered the theme in recent public statements.

But one of Nixon's concerns in the past has been the lack of co-ordination in the U.S. approach to trade and monetary matters, and the failure of the U.S. and other nations to treat such questions as being interlocked and mutually dependent. It had been widely expected that he would set out clear lines of authority and decision-making on international economics for his second term. So far, the lines have not emerged.

George Shultz, the soft-spoken former industrial relations professor, is to remain as treasury secretary, but with the added role of assistant to the president in charge of a new council on economic policy.

The Shultz council is to be responsible for all economic matters, domestic and international, the White House says. Shultz is being described as the Henry Kissinger of economic policy.

However, the extent of Shultz's control over international trade matters has not been specifically defined.

No new role has yet been announced for Commerce Secretary Peter G. Peterson, one of Nixon's most influential and attractive cabinet officers. He has been frequently mentioned in speculation for a new White House position in over-all charge of trade.

Whelan's trial. In 1968 he published The Assassination of D'Arcy McGee which told the story and the tragic death of one of Canada's most colorful founding fathers. He has delved deeply into records of the case and now is out with Part II—"They Got to Find Mee Guilty Yet."

WITNESS DISCREDITED The quoted title is taken from a message Whelan defiantly scratched on his tin food plate as he awaited trial. There were other misspellings in the message, such as "heir" for "here," which also asserted, "I am not a Fenian."

Step by patient step, almost verbatim, Slattery draws upon his experience as a trial lawyer to present a vivid picture of Whelan's trial. Evidence was accepted that would not be admitted in a court of law today. Here and there is, perhaps, a bit of journalistic licence—"the jurors seemed frozen as they listened with a horrified fascination"—but it helps tell the tale.

This re-creation of the dramatic trial raises strong doubts about the evidence of the only eyewitness to the shooting, a laborer subsequently shown to have been of poor character and described as a chronic liar. The detection methods of the police are reviewed unfavorably.

Slattery is senior partner in a large law firm. This is his third book.

"They Got to Find Mee Guilty Yet," by T. P. Slattery, $10, Doubleday.

Grant McConachie was one of a legendary breed, a bush pilot running a crazy airline in the Canadian North out of Edmonton. His first passengers 10 minutes after he got his commercial licence were an eccentric university professor and 200 yellow-tailed crows. His first business partners were a Maltese princess and a bald carnival barker who sold Sure-Gro hair tonic.

The story of McConachie's rise to the presidency of Canadian Pacific Airlines at the age of 38 and his extension of CPA routes across the world is told by Ronald A. Keith in Bush Pilot With a Briefcase.

It's a gee-whiz type of biography by one who knew McConachie well, as happy-go-lucky as was McConachie himself.

McConachie kept his aircraft in the air by seat-of-the-pants flying as did all the other bush pilots who helped open the North in the pre-Second World War days of flying over a wilderness with few navigational aids and instruments. And luck seemed to ride with him as he survived one financial crisis after another. He was constantly in financial trouble but somehow he always managed to struggle through.

Once, he wrangled a $100,000 line of credit from Imperial Oil by persuading the directors that his slap-happy airline to the Yukon was really the start of an air route to China.

It all seems too good to be true, as Keith tells it, but it happened.

McConachie died in Long Beach, Calif., in 1965 while on a business trip as CPA president. He was 56.

Bourgault found not guilty

SHERBROOKE (WM) — The jury at Sherbrooke superior court yesterday found Gaetan Bourgault, 26, not guilty because of temporary insanity of murdering Pierre Lanctot on June 14 this year.

Gaetan Bourgault was accused of murdering Pierre Lanctot in the yard of the Golden Eagle gas station on King street west in June this year. Dr. Alexandre Kindy, testifying for the defense, claimed that Bourgault was suffering from schizophrenia when the crime took place and therefore could not be held responsible for his actions.

Defense lawyer, Reynald Frechette, said yesterday evening that Bourgault would be sent to hospital for an indefinite period until doctors could pronounce him cured.

Problems for NATO

One of the first tasks James Richardson will face as the new minister of defence will be to attend the December ministerial meeting at NATO in Brussels. The meeting will be of particular importance in that it will discuss the knotty question of mutual and balanced force reductions in Europe, MBFR in short. (Another task facing Mr. Richardson will be to memorize the numerous acronyms so beloved of NATO.) Negotiations on MBFRs were the price paid by the Communists for NATO's agreement to the European security conference. It was a very small price as far as the Soviet Union is concerned, and there is now considerable danger that the West, which made the original demand, might yet rue the wisdom of this initiative.

Joseph Luns, secretary-general of NATO, recently pointed out that while the Soviet Union is pushing "a so-called detente for political purposes" she continues to assemble and modernize the mightiest military force the world has ever seen. "The Soviet armed forces constitute a concentration of military power that goes far beyond reasonable requirements for national security or defence of her borders, in conventional as well as strategic fields."

It is difficult to reconcile this situation with the Soviet Union's professed desire for detente, but it remains a fact, a fact that we cannot ignore.

Nor can Mr. Richardson and his ministerial NATO colleagues ignore the basic imbalance between NATO and Warsaw Pact powers. The Communists have arrayed along Western borders 21,000 heavy tanks as against NATO's 8,000, they have more aircraft and more airfields to disperse them on, and all their equipment is standardized whereas NATO's air forces come from different national production lines. The Soviet Union remains the preponderant force within the Warsaw Pact, and the national armies of her satellites have merely auxiliary roles. In NATO the United States has only a relatively small force in Europe, while Canada has cut her force by half and Mr. Richardson's predecessors have rendered it of no use in NATO's defence.

The Russians have shown interest in equal cuts on the central front, which would leave the area denuded and at the same time would allow the Communist armies to concentrate on Europe's flanks. This is quite unacceptable, and the cuts have to be drastically asymmetrical. As long as the Russians refuse on-the-spot inspection there can be no qualitative limitations on arms development, something that, unlike quantitative limitation, cannot be cut without impairing their defence capabilities. The Western forces cannot, and this is an axiom that must be remembered.

As Mr. Luns pointed out, the division of Europe is far less one of divergent policies than of basic and deeply rooted fundamental differences in the fabrics of our free societies and those created by Lenin and his successors. These fundamental differences will not be resolved by a conference or even a series of conferences. "It would be wrong to let ourselves be carried away with euphoria at the mere idea of seeing some 35 nations sitting at one table to discuss problems."

There can be no all-European security system that would exclude the United States and Canada from the European continent. Such a system, which has been the steady post-war goal of the Soviet Union, would replace the Pax Atlantica that has maintained peace, freedom and prosperity in the Western world for the past quarter of a century with a vastly different Pax Sovietica. The Finlandization of Europe is no idle nightmare.

The Chinese city holds a secret

PEKING, China — This busy city has few busier commercial streets than Ta Sha La. Besides a whole series of specialty shops, the short street has two department stores, an opera house, two movie houses and a couple of hotels, altogether employing about 1,800 people.

Ta Sha La also has a secret. I learned of it in a bustling store where they sell the padded coats Peking people wear against the cold. Ta Sha La's Gloria Steinem, fair but formidable, dramatically revealed the secret by stepping on a hidden spring.

Whereupon a section of the store's flooring slid back. A concrete staircase appeared, steeply descending into the earth. And so our party went down to inspect one section of Peking's all but incredible system of air-raid shelters.

Ta Sha La, it must be understood, is only one of countless districts into which Peking is divided. The shelters are tunnels, the main ones eight meters below street level, all brick and concrete built, and all wide and high enough for three tall men to walk abreast. Ta Sha La alone has a couple of kilometers of these tunnels all connecting, in turn, with similar tunnels in neighboring districts.

with Joseph Alsop

All this was begun in 1969 when the Soviets came so close to launching a preventive nuclear attack on China. Under a full-time staff of four, the Ta Sha La tunnels were entirely built by the employees of the street's enterprises. "Like me," proudly said the local Ms. Steinem, who is a shop assistant.

Nowadays, in fact, there are two complete cities of Peking, one above ground and another underground. The theory of the shelter system is that of the Soviet civil-defense system — not to provide permanent hiding holes but to move the people safely out of the city into the countryside in case of threatened attack.

Fallout travels with the wind. Peking's winds are all but invariably from the north. Peking has this enormous network of underground tunnels, while Moscow solely depends on early warning for timely evacuation. In sum, the Peking civil-defense system is ten times better than that of Moscow — as well as a hundred times, even a thousand times more costly in human and material investment.

All this is pretty awesome, if you reflect upon it. To begin with, every other major city in China today, and almost all the smaller ones, too, have close to identical shelter systems, all proportionally costly.

In order to perceive the true cost here, you have only to consider how Peking people live. Fairly high placed officials with wives and two children must be content with two-room flats. The same holds true for workers. For the investment put into the underground city, every family in Peking could surely have been provided with one more room of precious living space.

In all Peking districts, the people further gave their work without pay for the construction of the shelter system. Until a year ago, too, work went on late as 11 at night, after the long ordinary working days.

Weight these astonishing facts. No government in its senses could have ordered such enormous sacrifices and burdensome investments without a grimly serious, grimly urgent motive. There is no doubt at all about the motive, either. It was the fear of Soviet surprise attack, which became acute when the Soviet government vainly asked for U.S. support for such an attack in 1969.

Informations erronées

Cher Monsieur;

Je suis indigné des propos malveillants qu'a tenus Monsieur Lewis Harris à l'endroit de l'Université de Sherbrooke dans son éditorial du 24 novembre dernier.

Je ne m'attendais pas à lire dans votre journal une charge aussi mesquine que burlesque contre une institution d'enseignement qui travaille depuis ses débuts pour le bien de l'Estrée, du Québec, voire du Canada, qui se développe conformément à l'intérêt de notre pays, en général, et à l'avancement de notre région, en particulier.

Je suis outré et presque stupéfait d'y rencontrer à la fois tant d'arrogance et tant d'outrecuidance, d'y trouver des informations aussi erronées que méchantes, qui manifestent une étroitesse d'esprit patente que j'ose encore croire dépourvue d'un certain racisme ou d'une certaine envie. J'ai la naïveté de croire que Monsieur Harris s'est montré, dans cet éditorial, plus galeux, plus lépreux, plus dénué de tout scrupule qu'il ne l'est en réalité.

A titre de professionnel de l'information, je ne puis accepter qu'un journal — à moins que le Record ne soit moins qu'une feuille de chou! — publie un tel éditorial chargé de venin de crapaud sans être réprimandé tel un enfant grossier!

En tant que Canadien et que Québécois, j'ai trop de respect pour mes compatriotes anglophones pour leur prêter des sentiments malhonnêtes envers la communauté francophone dont l'apport est si grand pour le pays. Aussi, je m'empresse de chasser la pensée que la majorité des anglophones estriens partagent cette infamie.

Il n'est évidemment pas question que je m'abaisse à réfuter les allégations fallacieuses de Monsieur Harris. Je m'interroge plutôt sur son motif. A tète reposée, il me semble que seule une émotion incontrôlée a pu l'inspirer. S'agit-il d'une rancune personnelle contre la communauté francophone tout entière ou contre l'Université de Sherbrooke?

S'agit-il d'une provocation à un débat raciste afin de faire lire davantage le Record? A moins que ce ne soit une motivation inavouable, une manière de vice? ou tout simplement de l'ignorance?

Quel que soit le motif, à la réflexion, l'éthique professionnelle m'oblige d'ajouter que l'éditorial de Monsieur Lewis Harris dessert non seulement la communauté francophone de l'Estrée et l'Université de Sherbrooke, mais encore la population anglophone qui a le droit le plus strict d'être bien informée.

Je vous prie, Monsieur Black, d'agréer l'expression de ma considération très respectueuse.

Racist editorial?

Dear Sir;

It is impossible to read such a glib, defamatory editorial as "Crying deal" (Nov. 24) without writing you a few lines and asking you to publish them.

Whatever the reasons for making such venomous attacks — to vent a personal grudge against the French-speaking community in general or against the University of Sherbrooke in particular, or to provoke a racist debate to make The Record more interesting reading, or other reasons — the result was a gross distortion of the facts. The malicious innuendos and the ignorance about the University and its relationship to the community were not worthy to be called journalism.

A great disservice has been done, not only to the University, but also to the English-speaking population of the Eastern Townships, who have a right to be well-informed and correctly informed through our newspapers. Our rights have been trampled upon.

If the editorialist had read the University's information bulletin a little more closely he would have noticed that the correct spelling of its title is Liaison.

Yours truly,
Jack Cochrane
English Department
University of Sherbrooke

Editor's note: According to Canadian Press newspaper style guidelines the spelling is liaison although as you correctly point out, the publication mentioned in the November 24 editorial originating by taxi from the University of Sherbrooke is, in fact, called Liaison.

A consumers' union on drugs

On the right

with William F. Buckley Jr.

The Consumers Union has issued a massive report on "Licit and Illegal Drugs" which will be released in a few days. The recommendations of the Union have been distilled and publicized. Concerning these, a few observations:

1) The argument that heroin addicts should receive free heroin rests on an incomplete social evaluation of the addict's condition. It is clearly preferable to give an addict heroin rather than "force" him to acquire the money with which to buy it from the black market. It is established that the acquisition of that money is often done by theft — sometimes violent theft.

It is not frequently enough remarked, however, that the addict is seldom satisfied to practice his vice privately. He is something of a cultist, both out of economic necessity, and psychic loneliness. The easiest way for him to earn the money with which to supply his own habit is to become a pusher. Pushers are energetic salesmen. Although they usually need to ply their wares discreetly, there is opportunity to proselytize. On this point alone society is entitled to conclude that the taking of heroin is a communicable disease. And that therefore those who do take it should be sequestered.

2) It is one thing to advocate the decriminalization of marijuana use, another to advocate the freedom to merchandise marijuana. The Consumers Union apparently argues that only if the sale of it is legalized is it possible to control the quality of it, which is correct; but which is an insufficient point. To permit the sale of marijuana is in effect greatly to encourage the regular use of it. The Union correctly says there is no conceivable law which will at this point succeed in the elimination of marijuana from the national scene. That argument is a sensible one for decriminalization. But package-store availability for marijuana is a positive, corporate encouragement of the use of a drug which the Union concedes is dangerous and undesirable.

3) The Union's recommendation that the advertising of cigarettes and liquor be banned seeks most curiously to take off from the precedent of the banning of cigarette advertising in radio and television. This was done several years ago but, to the dismay of the initiators of the ban, cigarette smoking proceeds at an all-time high. Since everyone concedes that radio and television in particular are the principal selling media for consumer products, does it follow that cigarette smokers have been encouraged to continue to smoke by the advertisements they come across in the magazines and subways?

The notion is surely naive. Cigarette smokers aren't people who fantasize life in Marlboro country. They are, typically, 15-year-olds who are given a cigarette to puff by 16-year-olds. The fact that no apparent relief was enjoyed from the proscription of radio and television advertising hardly argues for prospective success by eliminating advertising in newspapers and magazines.

Moreover, the Union's report apparently neglects the point that advertising is primarily useful as a competitive spur. End the competitive stimulus, and you depress the anxiety for improved tobacco. This could be the most conspicuous result of an end to any advertising whatever of tobacco. And even this is to suppose that there is no constitutional point to worry about. Congress's authority over the airwaves is not disputed. Its authority over what the newspaper prints in the way of advertising is by no means established.

4) On the other hand, the Union does a service in directing our attention to alcohol as the principal predator on American health, happiness, and stability. Alongside alcohol, smoking, and even pot are as nothing.

The many friends in this vicinity were shocked and saddened to hear of the tragic death of Mrs. Bruce Sargent's brother, Lorenzo Chartier, taxi driver of Magog. Deepest sympathies are extended to Mrs. Sargent and the Chartier family.

The District of Mansonville Chamber of Commerce held a dinner-dance at the Owl's Head Chalet Saturday evening, Nov. 18, at which many business people attended. The delicious roast beef dinner was catered to by the staff of the Owl's Head dining room and dancing was enjoyed to the music of the Hitchhikers from Cowansville.

Let's talk about money.

And how understanding it will help you make the most of it.

It's not how much you earn, it's what you do with it. If you'd like to do more than you're doing, we'd like to talk to you.

About how to develop a budget that really works for you, your family, and all of your needs.

And about all kinds of things you might not know we can do.

Not just different accounts, but stock investment plans, our free Money Guide, flexible mortgages and loans, high-interest savings certificates, and more.

Chances are good that, together, we can come up with a plan.

To give you more of what you want now and more of what you want later.

Let's at least talk about it. Because it's in both our interests to have you get more out of life.

And besides, what have you got to lose?

Let's talk.

The family

Pleet-Rafal wed

The marriage of Sheila, daughter of Mrs. Ella Rafal, (T.M.R.) and of the late Dr. J.K. Rafal of Lennoxville, to Mr. I. Leonard Pleet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pincus Pleet, Montreal (formerly of Brockville, Ont.) took place recently at Beth-El Synagogue, Town of Mount Royal, Rabbi Alan Langner officiated, assisted by Rev. J. Feiner and Cantor H. Gisser. Miss G. Langner played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given away by her brother David, wore a white crepe lace trimmed fitted gown which was gathered at the waistline and fell at the back into a short train. She wore a matching capelet-style lace shawl and carried a bouquet of white stephanotis, baby mums and roses.

Mrs. L.A. (Beatrice) Rosmarin, attired in a long beaded pink gown, was her sister's matron of honor.

The flower girl, Chantal Julie, Beatrice's daughter, was also in a pink handsomely trimmed empire style long gown. She carried a small basket of pale yellow and white shasta daisies.

The junior bridesmaids, Sharon and Aviva Kantor, nieces of the groom, were attired in matching pink and turquoise anklelength empire style gowns. They carried small bouquets of daisies and wore coronets to match.

Suzanne Cohen, cousin of the bride, in chiffon turquoise blue long print as bridesmaid, matched the others for flowers.

Mr. M. Kantor acted as best man for his brother-in-law. The ushers were Dr. L.A. Rosmarin, Mr. Wm. Rogge, Mr. K. Kantor and Carl J. Spector.

Mrs. P. Pleet, mother of the groom, wore an original gown of turquoise blue chiffon print, with a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. E. Rafal, mother of the bride, wore a long-sleeved eggshell hand-made lace trimmed gown which was enhanced by a corsage of yellow roses.

The couple spent their honeymoon in Bermuda. They reside in Westmount.

Among out-of-town guests, except from the Eastern Townships and Ontario, people came from Washington, D.C., Cleveland, Princeton, N.J., Boston, Mass. and Hartford, Conn.

DOLLARS & GOOD SENSE

Are you going to change this year? Change your Christmas shopping habits, that is. Most of us have admirable intentions about shopping early, but somehow always manage to put it off until the last minute.

It pays to shop early. Why don't you try it this year and see? Avoid that last minute rush when your most important consideration is that you have to buy something, not how much you have to spend.

You can go through a lot of money if you shop that way. Maybe this year will be different?

Get yourself organized. Make up a list of the people you are going to buy gifts for this year, then determine the total amount of money you have to spend. Divide this sum up among the names and stick to it.

Once you're ready to shop, don't hesitate. Right now you'll find full stocks and may even be able to order some items by mail, although be careful by the end of November.

If you shop early and systematically, you can save money. You won't have to grab at the first thing you see, but can take the time to do some comparative shopping. The crowds will be lighter, too.

It's going to be tough enough during the holidays. Organize that annual shopping expedition now.

Readers' questions are welcome and should be sent to Box 5875 London, Ontario.

Obituaries

HELEN OLIVE BELAND of Lennoxville

On Nov. 1, 1972 the neighbours were saddened to learn of the accidental passing of Helen Olive Beland near her home on Belvidere Road.

She was born on June 11, 1956, only daughter of George Beland and Olive Bowring, and attended the Lennoxville High School and later was a model student at the Alexander Galt Regional School.

She was a member of St. George's Anglican Church. The remains rested at Webster-Cass Funeral Home, where classmates, relatives and friends paid their respects.

Funeral services were held on Saturday Nov. 4 at 1:30 p.m. in St. George's Church, Archdeacon S. Meade officiating, assisted by Father Daniels from AGRHS and church choir.

Interment was in Malvern Cemetery.

The bearers were Steven Harrison, Billy Dezan Jr., Nelson Beland, Frankie Dezan, Eddie Lidole, and Emile Paradis.

Left to mourn her loss are her parents George and Olive Beland, a brother James, a sister-in-law Karen and nephew Donnie. She was predeceased by her eldest brother Donald.

Floral arrangements and donations were many, testifying to the esteem in which she was held.

MRS. JOHN PURCHASE of Cowansville

The many friends and relatives of Thurza Purchase were saddened to learn of her death at the Brome-Missisquoi Perkins Hospital on Oct. 26, 1972. She was in her 76th year. Mrs. Purchase was the third of twelve children of the late William and Sally Bowbrick of Iron Hill.

After spending her childhood days in Iron Hill where she was born and brought up, she married John Purchase in Cowansville on August 15, 1913.

Mrs. Purchase is survived by her husband John and six children, Rita (Mrs. A. Parratt) of Goodwood, Ont., John of Bowmanville, Ont., Dorothy (Mrs. A. Moynan) of Cowansville, George of Cowansville, William of Australia and Douglas of Montreal. She also had two daughters Lilly and Isabelle who predeceased her.

Left to mourn are 22 grandchildren and 30 great-grandchildren; brothers William, Walter, Harry, and Nelson; and sisters Lilly and Hazel. Four sisters predeceased Mrs. Purchase - Flossie, Jessie, Susie and Marion.

The funeral service was held in Trinity Church in Cowansville on Monday Oct. 30, at 2:30 p.m. with Rev. John Peacock officiating. Bearers were all grandsons of Mrs. Purchase - Mr. Arnold Weinhold of Cowansville, Mr. Edward Weinhold of Ontario, Mr.

Relatives and friends attended the funeral from Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, Beloeil, Points of Ontario and Northern Vermont, The Townships and Boundary Villages.

In addition to her four children, daughters-in-law and son-in-law, she leaves 15 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren, and a host of friends.

Mrs. Chamberlain had also been a former member of the Rebekah Lodge of Coaticook and in her younger days a member of the Women's Institute and was active in all these groups as well as her church.

Relatives and friends attended the funeral from Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, Beloeil, Points of Ontario and Northern Vermont, The Townships and Boundary Villages.

Mrs. Harry Beakes, accompanied by Mrs. W. Willey of Warden spent a few days in Woodstock, Ont., with their mother, Mrs. Peter Champeau.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Peskett spent a couple of days in Ottawa visiting Mr. Peskett's parents who were celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Bill Badger accompanied Miss Helen Martin, Rev. D. Warren and Mrs. Allene Banks to Bishop's for the performance of Brahms Requiem Mass.

Mr. Yves Trotter of Cowansville, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Badger. Other recent guests at the same home were Mr. Al Sampson and son Kevin of Montreal, Mr. Fred Reed and Miss Marjorie Reed of Newport, Mr. and Mrs. Art Badger, St. Laurent.

Mr. Fred Badger, Miss Bev Norris, Mr. and Mrs. M. Bath, all of Granby, were guests of Mrs. Bill Badger.

Beautiful scenery effects more than just eye

CALGARY (CP) - The mountain scenery along the Rogers Pass Highway dominates the interest of most travellers taking the route west through the Rockies.

But in the 10 years since the route was opened, its impact has been on more than the eye.

The highway has lowered freight rates to the western Prairies and boosted business in parts of the British Columbia interior.

Besides the obvious advantages of a shorter trucking route between Vancouver and the eastern side of the mountains, the road has pushed a real estate boom in the Okanagan-Mainline area of B.C.

And extensive strip development has occurred along the highway through towns like Revelstoke and Golden.

In 1961, multiple listing sales in the area stretching from Kamloops in the north to the United States border in the south totalled $5.5 million.

With the opening of the highway the following year, sales rose to $8.5 million and in 1971 they exceeded $57 million.

Lake-front property became so popular the provincial government halted the sale of Crown-owned beach property.

DISTANCE SHORTER
The highway opened the area of the pass to hundreds of Calgary families who take a 360-mile round trip several weekends a year to reach their favorite recreational region.

Before the Rogers Pass Highway, the southern part of the Okanagan Valley received most of the attention with the main route east from Vancouver passing through the area.

Along the old route a trip to Calgary was 850 miles while the Rogers Pass cuts the distance to 654 miles. The Yellowhead Highway, opened in 1970, covers 78 miles to Edmonton from Vancouver.

The Yellowhead carried 939,000 tons of truck freight in 1971 and the Rogers Pass 724,000 tons.

The total tonnage is about 50 per cent higher than the amount carried 10 years earlier and rates have dropped an average of 30 per cent in the same time.

The lower rates have been introduced despite a 147-per cent increase in the cost of labor and materials, said Leonard Huyser, president of Canadian Freightways Ltd.

Factors allowing the decrease have been shorter mileage, faster time, better highways, more powerful vehicles and an increase in gross vehicle weight to 72,000 pounds from 59,000 pounds.

MAINTAINED BETTER
Although the Yellowhead Highway has more freight tonnage, the Rogers Pass is the better route to the coast, Mr. Huyser said.

"The grades are steeper near the summit but the highway is better maintained in winter, better curved, has better shoulders and more passing lanes than the Yellowhead."

"In the winter on the Rogers Pass we always feel confident because of the highway crews that are there all the time keeping the road open."

"The Yellowhead doesn't have the same adverse snow conditions but it is not as well patrolled or maintained as the Rogers Pass."

In 1971, when the mountains had one of the heaviest snowfalls on record, the Rogers Pass-Fraser Canyon route was open only 10 days in January.

"There was more delay in the Fraser Canyon than in the Rogers Pass. When the Rogers is tied up, the crews get in and open it up. With a Fraser slide, it is a mixture of mud and snow and it is days before that section is reopened."

But snow does not present as many problems to the truckers as do summer drivers trying to haul trailers up mountain grades and around curves.

In 1963, the first full year of Rogers Pass operation, 466,196 vehicles carried 1.4 million passengers over the route. Last year, 688,000 vehicles carried 1,565,000 passengers.

Monster still lives
LOCH NESS, Scotland (AP) - An intrepid investigator with the words "Bristol University" inscribed on her sweatshirt trained an anxious telescopic eye over the misty waters. At the ready stood a camera with a 36-inch lens and a battery of wind and depth instruments.

"There was a sighting last night, you know," in the moonlight of Urquhart Castle," she said with professional calm, raking the horizon like a U-boat commander in one of those old movies. "Second one this month, but of course we're thinking in terms of a breeding herd."

A breeding herd of what, she didn't say, and it seemed monstrous to ask. The sun went down, the wind came up and the purple fell out of the glen into 24-mile-long Loch Ness before she capped her telescope and disappeared into one of the little house trailers on the shore.

Being a scientific investigator with the Loch Ness Investigation Bureau Ltd., it seems, requires patience, as well as total indifference to pay, the Scottish weather, and a high threshold of ridicule. Also required is an icy nerve for dissecting salmon and eels to see who's been dining on what way down there.

SIGHTINGS RARE
Only once in every 350 man-hours of watching, bureau statistics indicate, is it given for mortal man to witness the massive fury of water, the gigantic bow wave that signify the Loch Ness monster is having another identity crisis.

A Royal Air Force photo intelligence team said there was something "almost certainly animate" after studying some photos made in mirror-calm conditions a few seasons ago.

Poor Nessie, as real scientific investigators never call her, has had a time of it. In the last 10 years she has been sighted by 3,000 lookers, spied on by underwater cameras, pursued by submarines, monitored by radar, sonar and echo devices, startled by underwater noise generators and baited with an aphrodisiac that was guaranteed to inflame the passions of a brontosaurus but got nary a rise from her. She has been pestered by voyeurs in diving bells and scuba gear, been the subject of three controversial books, a couple hundred feet of fuzzy movie film and innumerable scientific expeditions, including last year's two-week monster rally sponsored by The Daily Mail, all without yielding up her true identity.

This passion for anonymity has caused her to be variously identified as a giant eel, a long-necked seal, a monster snail, a water kelpie, a giant squid, a maxi-mollusk, a sea elephant, a killer whale, a huge otter, a blind salmon, a dead tree trunk and, ignominiously, a belch of peat from the gaseous bottom of Britain's deepest lake.

In her day, which may go back 150 million years, she has been called a diplocac, a plesiosaur, a gastropod, a pinnipee and an elasmosaur, all unflattering scientific terms.

NON-DAIRY TOPPINGS BIG HELP TO CONVENIENCE-MINDED HOMEMAKERS

In the go-go hustle and bustle of the 70's, Mrs. Homemaker is spending less and less time in her kitchen, yet thanks to the modern food technology, her menus can be delightfully diversified culinary creations.

Today's super busy homemaker is turning more and more to convenience foods and now there is the convenience factor more apparent and important than in dessert planning.

The 70's will be the era of the instant this and the ready-to-serve that.

Ready-to-serve frozen chocolate eclairs and Bavarian cream puffs are the perfect dessert problem solvers. These puffs and eclairs can be stored indefinitely in frozen state and for 48 hours under refrigeration.

The perfect party garnish for these dessert delights is a non-dairy dessert topping in a handy aerosol can. Almost instantly a luscious decorative dessert treat can be served. This topping has outstanding keeping qualities, too. The nation's most popular brand can be stored indefinitely in the freezer and for many months in the refrigerator.

This same pioneering packer has a frozen liquid non-dairy ready-to-serve topping that has outstanding convenience factors too. Packed in half-pint containers, it whips up into almost a quart of topping and it can be incorporated into any recipe calling for whipping cream.

Once whipped, this product stands up for at least 12 hours at room temperature. Mrs. Homemaker can store pies, cakes, and other desserts made or garnished with this product for days in the refrigerator. The product also blends perfectly with fruit juice.

This product has the great advantage of several months shelf life under normal refrigeration and frozen it can be stored indefinitely. When whipped it can be kept overnight in the refrigerator. What's more, it can be rewhipped if necessary.

Furthermore, there is a spoon and serve frozen non-dairy pre-whipped topping to round out non-dairy toppers. It has a two-week refrigerated shelf life and can be refrozen when necessary.

Sutton

Mrs. B. Russell

After the dinner on Armistice night Sutton Branch 158 Royal Canadian Legion held an Award celebration with the Legion Meritorious Service Medal being given to Comrade George DuVall, for his outstanding work in the Branch.

With his help this Branch was able to buy wheelchairs, walkers, and other equipment for the benefit of the whole community.

Four 25 year pins were given by M.L.A. Glen Brown to J.P. Daigault, D. Wighton, G. Meyer, and J. Turner.

Ex-Member of Parliament J. Delieries presented his granddaughter Miss Helen Delieries with the first prize Provincial essay certificate and the second prize Provincial essay certificate to Miss Doris Harvey, both pupils of the Frere Andre School, Sutton.

A large crowd gathered at the cenotaph on the Park lawn, Maple st. Nov. 11, where the two minutes silence and laying of wreaths took place, also laying the poppy spray at Our City Hall memorial clock by Women's Institute members. A large contingent of cadets accompanied by their captain of Chamby "Hap" Day was in attendance.

In the evening a delicious turkey banquet was enjoyed at Auberge de Sutton.

After presentations and speeches, all returned to the Legion Hall on Pleasant st. for dancing and entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Beliveau accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Anatole Demers to Melbourne on Sunday, where they visited Mrs. Julie Gagnon at the Upper Melbourne Residence.

Mrs. Gladys Coyle has returned from Sherbrooke, where she was a guest of her sister, Miss Beatrice George for a few days.

because West opens the deuce of clubs and South reads the lead as a singleton.

It still looks impossible, but watch what South can do after Analyzing the singleton lead and Reviewing the bidding with the opening three-heart call.

We rise with dummy's ace of clubs; play a trump to our ace and a second back to dummy's queen. Then we discard two clubs on the ace and king of hearts and ruff dummy's last heart.

We are back in our hand to cash our ace and king of diamonds and discard one of dummy's clubs.

Now we lead our deuce of diamonds. West has to play a higher diamond and we discard another club from dummy.

This isn't a sure-thing play because East might have another diamond left. In that case he would win and cash a club, but it turns out that East started with one spade, seven hearts, two diamonds and three clubs.

West is on lead and has to play another diamond. We discard dummy's last club; ruff in our hand and there are the rest of the tricks.

Primate to visit

St. Peter's celebrations being brought to fitting close

SHERBROOKE — The celebration to mark the 150th anniversary of Saint Peter's Parish will be brought to a fitting close when the Primate of all Canada, The Most Rev'd Edward W. Scott, visits the parish on Sunday, December 10.

The Primate will celebrate the Choral Eucharist and also preach at 11 a.m. Earlier in the day he will preach at St. George's Church, Lennoxville, which is also observing its 150th anniversary.

The two parishes began as a joint mission in 1822, when the Rev'd Clement Lefebvre was appointed as the first priest-in-charge. Archbishop Scott was elected Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada in 1971, having previously served as Bishop of Kootenay since his consecration in 1966.

During this anniversary year many special services and events have been held in the parish, including an Ecumenical service at which Archbishop J.M. Fortier presided, the annual service for the Sherbrooke Snow Shoe Club, the Diocesan Girls' Auxiliary Festival Service at which Archdeacon Meade preached (thus strengthening the bond of fellowship between St. George's and St. Peter's) and a full church for the occasion of the service for the Sherbrooke Hospital Nurses Alumni Association.

Other celebrations include a folk mass for the young people, a visit from Bishop Timothy Matthews for the Confirmation and the Annual Evensong for the Eastern Townships Laymen's Association. Two outstanding musical events were the services conducted by the choirs from St. Helen's School, Dunham, and the Choir from St. George's Church, Montreal.

As the result of a successful appeal launched in the Parish, the interior of the church was redecorated and painted, and through the kindness of interested friends, a large memorial Cairn has been erected on Bank street, marking the site of the first Anglican church built in Sherbrooke. Details for the dedication of this Cairn will be announced later.

The Rector (Rev'd Canon John Franklin) and the Churchwardens of the parish (Messrs. Clifford Allan and J. Russell Bartlett) together with the Honorary Patron of the Anniversary Committee (Mr. A.C. Stevens) warmly invite all members of the Parish, other friends and well-wishers and the congregations from the Parish of the Advent and St. Paul's, to welcome the Primate on the historical occasion of his visit to what is affectionately known as "the Cathedral of the Eastern Townships."

New officers elected

By IVY HATCH
AYER'S CLIFF — Erwin Taylor of Stanstead was elected the new president of the Massawippi Valley Horseman's Association at the annual meeting held on Saturday evening, December 2.

Mr. Taylor replaces Lawrence Dewey. Mr. Dewey was unable to attend the meeting because his wife had a motor car accident and was taken to a hospital for examination. Mr. Taylor, vice-president, chaired the meeting.

A summary report of auditor Allen Wing was read and his recommendations given attention.

Mrs. Dan Helynick of Foster gave her report of the past year's riding schools. The 10th annual two-week riding course was held in the summer at the Ayer's Cliff Fair grounds. There were two divisions for beginner groups as well as intermediate and advanced intermediate.

There was an enrollment of 32 young persons instructed by four teachers. Mrs. Helynick was supervisor. Two riders were sponsored by this club and another two by the Lennoxville-North Hatley Club.

This past year, this Club introduced a second two week course for the first time at Danlee Farm, Foster, Brome County.

The annual horse show was held on the Ayer's Cliff fair grounds with over 100 entries in the 24 classes. Trophies and ribbons were awarded.

The Club membership was 59 seniors and juniors it was reported by membership chairman, Miss Anne Taylor.

Other club activities had included supper with social programs following and trail rides in the country areas.

Mr. Taylor summed it up "as a very successful year." He, on behalf of the club, extended words of appreciation to Mr. Dewey and his executive the past year. The message to be relayed Mr. Dewey.

The nominations committee were Mr. and Mrs. Omer Thibodeau and Stanley Whitcomb. Mr. Whitcomb presented the following slate as elected.

President, Mr. Taylor; first and second vice-presidents, Len Koraen and Michel Vossard; Secretary, Mrs. Sybil Laberee and treasurer, Arthur Laberee.

Under new business a letter was read from Mrs. Dewey Mosher, secretary of the E.T. Trail Riders Club. The letter suggested the club unite for a joint meeting to request government action to aid in the vaccination program of Equine Encephalomyelitis Eastern in Brome and Sherbrooke City region.

Discussion disclosed that a study is being made to determine if this horse disease is transferable to humans. Also veterinarians are urging vaccinations before fly time which will be in or about early April. Booster shots should follow in fly season it was reported. As well, if a horse dies, the veterinarians are asking the owners not to dig a hole and bury it but to give it to them so they might study the cause of death and if it died of this ailment.

It was resolved to have a joint meeting with the other area horse clubs as early in the new year as possible and to have at the meeting a professional man to talk on the matter and to have films about the disease. The directors feel education will be one of the best methods to combat the spread of the disease.

This club is interested in youth. So a sum of $25 was given following a request to the Rock Island Pee Wee hockey club.

Mr. Koraen also suggested a summer youth program, something similar to the 4-H Club only it would be a horse club.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Spiralling world leather prices are threatening the survival of some Manitoba leather goods manufacturers.

At least two companies situated in Winnipeg have indicated the continuing upward trend

FETE 150th — The St. Peter's church in Sherbrooke has been celebrating its 150th anniversary all this year. The celebrations will be brought to a fitting close when the Primate of all Canada, the Most Rev'd. Edward W. Scott, visits the parish on Sunday, December 10.

Pre-school education not child's-play

EDMONTON (CP) — Far from being just "kindergarten stuff," the issue of early childhood education in Alberta has turned into one of the most complicated educational problems the provincial government ever has faced.

The issue appears simple. Since it is the only province without established plans for publicly-supported pre-school programs, Alberta, in theory, now can adopt the most advanced educational systems and avoid the mistakes of others.

But legislators, educationists and parents can't seem to agree where to start or even whether it's worthwhile starting at all.

Into the already complicated debate is injected the sweeping question of whether standard educational programs are much value for five-, six- or seven-year-olds.

The pressures on the government are enormous. Many people want an immediate start on a universal kindergarten system so Alberta children can "catch up" to other parts of Canada. Others say top priority must be given to the physically handicapped and mentally retarded children. Some say a kindergarten system is needed only for children from "disadvantaged homes" where the atmosphere for learning is poor.

The government, at the same time, is facing unprecedented pressure to keep education costs down.

Most agree on at least one principle: that what a child learns before he starts Grade 1 may contribute more to his intellectual development than what he experiences for the rest of his life.

This important development, most agree, can best be nurtured in an atmosphere of warmth, continuity and security.

There the argument starts. One side says such an atmosphere can rarely be found in an institution. The other says that a well-run pre-school program can stimulate development through an atmosphere better than is found in most homes, where parents often have too many other concerns.

Rural areas often oppose kindergartens, not merely because the expense could hurt low-population areas more than in the city. What, they ask, would be the status under a universal kindergarten system of a mother who is reluctant to send her five-year-old 40 miles on a school bus at 30 below?

They get the argument that kindergarten attendance should be optional, that rural trustees could opt out of the system.

The rift is deep. The Alberta School Trustees Association has gone on record as favoring universal kindergartens. Yet Harold Gunderson of Calgary, president of the association, said in a personal statement that Alberta can't afford such a system and early schooling can harm young children.

The government has announced a partial position on the issue but this has only increased debate. A firm statement is promised for the spring session of the legislature.

Education Minister Lou Hyndman said in November that although a start may be made on some kind of kindergarten system by next September, universal kindergartens may be given a lower priority because of controversy about their worth.

The real question, he said, is how an early childhood education program should work, because it involves "75 variables with six options each."

The government bases its priorities on a report by L. W. Downey Research Associates, a private firm.

The Downey view differs from a commission report on the whole future of education in Alberta. This government-sponsored commission, headed by Dr. Walter Worth—now deputy minister of advanced education—said the most fundamental point of emphasis to be pursued in the development of early education is that of universal opportunity for all five-year-old children.

The Downey report, on the other hand, cites doubts among educationists about the benefits of universal kindergartens. It says some children may eventually do worse in school because their kindergarten could foster a negative attitude toward education.

The report makes no specific recommendations beyond stating that "adequate opportunities for the fullest development of its young children should be one of the top priorities of any society."

Mr. Hyndman says he interprets the report as meaning that the government must give top priority to helping children born physically or mentally handicapped or being raised in deprived conditions.

To some, this appears to mean the government is abandoning the idea of a universal pre-school program, making a major retreat from a bold advance in a neglected sector of educational and social policy.

To others, the government is merely looking before it leaps. The argument continues.

Leather prices threaten manufacturers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Spiralling world leather prices are threatening the survival of some Manitoba leather goods manufacturers.

At least two companies situated in Winnipeg have indicated the continuing upward trend prices could bring about their closure.

Aron S. Yukelis, president of Winnipeg Leather Goods Manufacturing Ltd., said, "if prices keep going up we may have to go out of business."

"Prices are going up everywhere, as much as 45 per cent in the last six months and it is forecast this will continue."

A shortage of animals and hides is the reason given for the increasing prices throughout the world, and Mr. Yukelis said an expanding European market also is aggravating the North American shortage.

The high prices of leather goods could prompt some European companies to sell their products in Canada at prices which the Canadian companies could not match.

CAN'T COMPETE
"If this happens there would be a very good chance we would have to liquidate. We couldn't compete because we have higher labor costs."

Lawrence Fields, plant service manager of Greb Shoes Ltd., said the high prices are prevalent everywhere and there is no sign of a stoppage.

He said leather that cost about 53 cents a square foot last December now costs 96 cents to $1.05 a square foot.

"There is a serious shortage of hides that is making the prices go up."

"Some claim it is because no hides are coming out of Argentina and there are stories about Russia buying all the hides, but I can't sort fact from rumor there."

Mr. Fields said there should "be a stabilizing factor anytime now. It is impossible for prices to keep going up as they have been—if it does the small tanners are going to go out of business here."

CONSUMER PAYS

The end result of that would be higher prices to the consumer which would soon make "buying a pair of leather shoes like buying a fur coat."

That situation would force manufacturers to look for other fabrics which would open the door for low cost imports and "that would be the end of the shoe business here."

C. S. Riley, president of Dominion Tanners Ltd., said the price of leather has been stable for the last 25 years but has now made "too rapid a jump and caused confusion in the industry."

Kilmer asks Nixon to remain silent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins quarterback Billy Kilmer says President Nixon is "really hurting us" by being a vocal fan of his hometown team.

In a Washington Post article Sunday, Kilmer was quoted as saying the president is "something else."

"He calls all the time, he even called the coach on election night to talk about it."

Kilmer said comments favoring the Redskins prior to a game hurt the team.

"He told some guy from Cleveland he met in New York that Cleveland had a good team but they had quarterback problems. Then Cleveland gets all psyched up, and they're much harder to beat. I think I'm going to ask coach George Allen to tell the president not to talk about a game until after we've played it."

Kings, Sabres better and the stats bear it out

MONTREAL (CP) — Los Angeles Kings and Buffalo Sabres, each last in their respective divisions a year ago, have made large strides toward respectability in the National Hockey League standings this season.

Balance makes them both fourth-place teams with average of .500 or better.

A year ago, the West Division Kings' offense scored just 53 goals in their first 26 games and the defence allowed 106 goals while winning only five games, losing 20 and tying one.

But this season rookie coach Bob Pulford has 2 potent forward lines—Ralph Backstrom, Butch Goring and Serge Bernier; Juha Widing, Bob Berry and Mike Corrigan—which have helped provide an increase of 34 goals over last season's output in the same number of games.

On the defence, rookies Neil Komadoski and Barry Long and veterans Harry Howell, Terry Harper and Gilles Marotte teamed with goaltenders Rogatien Vachon and Gary Edwards to trim 20 goals, to 86 from 106, from the total allowed a year ago.

Los Angeles and Philadelphia Flyers are tied for fourth position in the West Division with identical 11-14 won-lost-tied records.

Buffalo's powerful forward line of centre Gilbert Perreault and wingers Richard Martin and Rene Robert has helped the Sabres attain a 23-goal increase.

LINE SCORES 44

While playing 23 of 26 games as a unit, this line has scored 44 of Buffalo's 93 goals.

Rookie defencemen Jim Schoenfeld and Larry Carriere and veterans Tim Horton and Larry Hillman have combined with goalies Roger Crozier and Dave Dryden to decrease the Sabres' goals-against record by 23—to 81 from 104 of one year ago.

The Sabres have almost doubled their points over last season, to 29 from 15, and occupy fourth place in the East Division with an 11-8-7 mark.

Tiant, Perry, Wood share pitching records

BOSTON (AP) — Luis Tiant of Boston Red Sox, Gaylord Perry of Cleveland Indians and Wilbur Wood of Chicago White Sox shared honors today in official American League records announced by president Joe Cronin.

Tiant, a right-hander picked up by the Red Sox after many considered his career ended because of arm trouble in 1971, won the earned-run average for the second time with a 1.91 mark.

Tiant, who led the league with a 1.60 ERA with Cleveland in 1968, had a 4-4 mark until promoted to a regular starting job last August. He came close to pitching the Red Sox to the East Division title, compiling a 15-6 record with six shutouts.

Perry, acquired from San Francisco Giants after the 1971 season, had a spectacular year for Cleveland. He compiled a 24-16 record, sharing the most victories with Wood, who topped the league with 29 complete games and compiled a 1.92 earned-run average.

Wood, the White Sox' knuckleball artist, had a 24-17 record. He led the league in most starts (49), most innings (377), hits allowed (325), most batters faced (1,384), runs surrendered (119) and earned runs given (105).

Reliever Paul Lindblad of Texas Rangers was the league's busiest pitcher, making 66 appearances. However, Sparky Lyle of New York Yankees was the bullpen standout with 35

Angel Gabriel works miracles, drops '49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Quarterback Roman Gabriel burned the San Francisco defense with a pair of touchdown passes on third-down plays and David Ray kicked four field goals Monday night as the Los Angeles Rams beat the 49ers 26-16 and knocked them out of the National Football League's tightest race.

The victory by the Rams, who went into the nationally televised game with a three-game losing streak, made the Atlanta Falcons 7-5, the leaders in the National Conference West. The Rams and 49ers are both 6-1.

The Rams trailed 9-3 before squeezing three scores, including Gabriel's 26-yard touchdown pass to tight end Bob Klein, into the final six minutes of the first half.

Ray, who kicked a 32-yard field goal in the first period for the game's opening score, added a 12-yarder with 5:50 left in the second period and booted one from 19 yards out with four seconds left in the half.

Midway in the third period, Gabriel hit Willie Ellison coming out of the backfield on a third-and-five situation. The running back caught the ball at the 25-yard line and went in on the touchdown play that covered 39 yards and put the Rams ahead 23-9.

Steve Spurrier passed for both San Francisco touchdowns, giving him an NFL-leading 18 scoring tosses for the season, and threw for 257 yards. But the 27-year-old quarterback who has been filling in for injured John Brodie for seven weeks, was intercepted three times.

Jimmy Nittles made two of the Rams' interceptions, including one late in the second quarter that set up Ray's second field goal.

Spurrier's six-yard touchdown pass to Ted Kwalick gave the 49ers a 6-3 lead in the first quarter and he threw an eight-yard scoring pass to Gene Washington in the third period. Washington's 11th touchdown catch of the year.

Bruce Gossett kicked a 31-yard field goal for the 49ers to put them ahead 9-3 early in the second quarter after he had missed a 40-yard attempt as well as an extra point try in the opening period, the latter coming after a successful attempt was nullified by a five-yard penalty.

Gabriel completed 11 of 26 passes for 175 yards and threw no interceptions in one of his best games of the year as he passed the Rams to a 9-1 mark in their last 11 meetings with the 49ers.

The Falcons will meet the 49ers here on Sunday while the Rams will be in St. Louis. On the final weekend of the season, Minnesota Vikings play the 49ers here, the Rams are host to Detroit Lions and Atlanta will be at home against Kansas City Chiefs.

Was Fleming in bounds?

TORONTO (CP) — Was Dave Fleming in bounds when he completed a 16-yard pass and was credited with a touchdown in Hamilton Tiger-Cats' 13-10 victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders in the 1972 Grey Cup Sunday?

Saskatchewan players protested at the time that Fleming had one foot at least partly on the sideline when he came down. This would have put him out of bounds under Canadian Football League rules and nullified the touchdown.

Officials declared it a legal catch.

The play was rerun on national television networks, but many observers felt camera angles made it impossible to be sure of where Fleming's foot first touched.

A Canadian Press photograph may add fuel to the controversial play. It shows Fleming's foot definitely hiding from view part of the sideline.

The Canadian Football League says its out-of-bounds ruling applies to a receiver "who, on landing, touches a sideline, a sideline in goal, a dead line or any object or ground beyond such lines."

Fleming was slanting toward the sidelines when the pass arrived late in the first quarter. He went up for the ball and came down on one foot.

"My foot came down inside," said Fleming, a University of Pittsburgh graduate. "Yeah, I guess it was close."

Ted Dushinski, defensive back with Saskatchewan, argued unsuccessfully that Fleming was out of bounds. He pointed out identifications on the white side marker to an official, but was unable to convince him they matched Fleming's cleat.

Ray Robinson, the rider who tackled Fleming as he caught the ball, said later he did not see where Fleming landed.

Laval dumps Hawks

MONTREAL (CP) — Laval Nationals exploded for five first-period goals Monday night as they coasted to a 10-4 win over Sorel Black Hawks in Quebec Junior A Hockey League play.

Mike Harniss sparked the Nationals with three goals, Jean Trotter added two and Michel Lefebvre, Gilles Quintal, Bernard Rocheleau, Robert Fee and Steve Jones contributed single markers.

The Whalers, who extended their unbeaten streak at home to 11 games, moved into a tie for the East Division lead with idle

Cleveland.

Tim Sheehy scored two goals and assisted on a third for New England, which held a 44-33 shooting advantage. Five other players—Larry Pleau, John French, Terry Caffery, Tom Webster and John Danby—chipped in with goals.

Wayne Carleton and Bob Leduc were the goal getters for Ottawa.

Whalers harpoon Nats

BOSTON (AP) — New England Whalers struck for four goals in the first 12 minutes of the game and coasted to a 7-2 World Hockey Association victory over Ottawa Nationals Monday night.

The Whalers, who extended their unbeaten streak at home to 11 games, moved into a tie for the East Division lead with idle

Cleveland.

Tim Sheehy scored two goals and assisted on a third for New England, which held a 44-33 shooting advantage. Five other players—Larry Pleau, John French, Terry Caffery, Tom Webster and John Danby—chipped in with goals.

Wayne Carleton and Bob Leduc were the goal getters for Ottawa.

Baltimore Orioles led the team earned run average with a mark of 2.53. Oakland's champion Athletics were second with 2.58, followed by Minnesota with 2.84.
