Fifty-fifth Year

World News In Brief

Montreal, Sept. 11.—(P)—Provincial police seized 50,000 books of tickets and closed a printing shop at Montreal's south shore in a raid against an illegal sweepstakes organization yesterday. No arrests were made.

A number of tickets of the "Canadian Racing Association" were seized at nearby Lachine two months ago but police kept the investigation quiet until the printing plant was located. They were to sell at 50 cents each and were for an October handicap to be run at Atlantic City, N.J. Monthly cash prizes of $55,000 were offered.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Sept. 11.—(P)—Quadruplet girls were born here Sunday to Ricardo Oyola Velez, 37. All are "doing well," her doctors said yesterday.

The babies weighed less than four pounds each at birth, the doctors said, and are the first Puerto Rican quadruplets who have lived more than a few hours. Their father is unemployed.

Anchorage, Alaska, Sept. 11.—(P)—Six crew members survived the emergency crash landing of a U.S. air force B-17 bomber 100 miles north of here Monday.

One man was killed when the No. 3 engine exploded while the B-17 was flying at 11,000 feet.

A para-rescue team dropped at the scene reported it found the survivors. It said they needed medical attention.

Westcliff, England, Sept. 11.—(P)—Four persons were killed after an R.A.F. jet Meteor plane exploded in the air over this resort town yesterday. The blast killed the plane's pilot. The plane's engines set one house afire, killing a man and two women occupants, and demolished part of another house.

Hollywood, Sept. 11.—(P)—Lana Turner is calling it quits after three years of marriage with millionaire sportsman Henry J. (Bob) Topping.

They quarrelled several weeks ago. Topping left home, ostensibly on a fishing trip. Miss Turner's movie studio finally confirmed rumors that all was not well in the Topping household. It issued a statement that the couple had disagreed but that the situation might be clarified later when Topping returned from the trip. Miss Turner's studio announced yesterday that she is taking "immediate steps to effect a legal separation."

Wellington, N.Z., Sept. 11.—(Reuters)—New Zealand's National (Conservative) government gained four seats in the general election Sept. 2, a revised count revealed today. The National party will hold 50 seats in the new 80-seat Parliament compared to Labor's 30. The Nationalists held 46 seats and Labor 34 in the old Parliament.

T.L.C. Delegates Discuss Cost Of Living Increase

By JOHN LEBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Halifax, Sept. 11.—The Dominion's high cost of living will be a hot topic again today as the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada swings into the stride of its annual convention.

The Congress expressed "alarm" yesterday at Prime Minister St. Laurent's recent statement that there would be no price controls at the present time and that the government was "lacking of interest" in the welfare of Canada and in not putting federal price-rent controls into effect.

One of the first things the convention did at the opening session was adopt resolutions looking for improvements in the old-age pensions set-up. It asked that pensions be provided for all at 65 years—as federal and provincial governments now are working out—but it said the monthly payment should be a minimum $65 instead of the $40 in the current plan.

Another Congress request was that, until there is a national health insurance plan, all necessary medical care for pensioners should be provided free. On the Dominion-Provincial relations front, the Congress expressed regret that not enough progress had been made on a number of matters including rent control and expressed alarm at legislation adopted at the last session of Parliament which would enable the federal government to restrict trade in margarine.

Other resolutions adopted by the Congress called for:
1. Wider unemployment insurance coverage and increasing the insurance benefits for unemployed by at least 50 per cent. The top weekly payment for a single man now is $16.20 a week.

United Nations Command Admits That Allied Plane Strafed Kaesong Zone

Acheson Sees French, U.K. Ministers

By EDWARD E. BOMAR
Washington, Sept. 11.—(P)—Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison, of Britain, and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, of France, meet State Secretary Dean Acheson separately today with these problems in their little black bags:
What to do in Korea if cease-fire talks collapse for good (with a query from Acheson if Britain, France and others can't contribute more troops)?

How to keep mounting world prices from stifling the west's arms buildup?

How to deal with anti-French independence movements in Morocco and Indo-China (both strategic spots in the fight against communism)?

Morrison was first to visit Acheson. It was his second day of official talks. Diplomats said he was prepared to tell Acheson swelling prices have made the arms budget a crushing burden on Britain and other North Atlantic allies.

Hugh Gaitskell, Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer, who has been telling other U. S. officials the same story in economic conferences in recent days, was expected to be called in. He has sought reassurances that Britain can get needed steel from the United States, estimated by Britain at some 800,000 tons in the next year. What further economic measures are proposed have not been indicated, beyond some means of strengthening the effort already being made by the international materials conference to divide scarce raw materials among the principal western consumers without boosting prices. Gaitskell has indicated Britain will not ask new American financial aid at this time. Some sort of international price stabilization appears to be the British aim.

The big-three meeting opened yesterday with a three-hour conference between Acheson and Morrison devoted in part to the Iranian oil crisis and the breakdown of efforts to find a solution. If any decisions were reached they were undisclosed.

A survey of European issues by Acheson and Morrison and their advisers was understood to have touched on the effect of the proposed $1,000,000,000 or larger cut in American foreign aid funds now before Congress.

Tomorrow, all three foreign ministers will get together in their first such three-power meeting since last year, with the primary aim of ironing out remaining details of a proposed new partnership deal to be offered western Germany.

Appropriate Disciplinary Action Will Be Taken, Allied Statement Declares.

By DON HUTH

Tokyo, Sept. 11.—(P)—The United Nations command admitted tonight that one of its planes strafed the Kaesong neutral zone by mistake yesterday.

The Reds charged that the plane raked the site of the suspended Korean armistice talks before dawn Monday.

Headquarters of the supreme allied commander, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, said Vice-Admiral C. Turner Joy, chief allied negotiator at the truce talks, will send his communist counterpart this message tomorrow morning:

"The United Nations command regrets this violation of the agreed neutrality which resulted from the pilot's error in navigation. Appropriate disciplinary action is being initiated."

The allied reply notes that no casualties were inflicted and only slight damage was caused.

This is the first time the U.N. command has admitted any basis to Red charges of neutrality-zone violation. The strafing charge was the 11th by the Reds.

The allies have denied or ignored all previous charges.

The U.N. command statement said a plane detected by allied radar in the Kaesong area at the time of the Red-report strafing turned out to be a U.S. bomber.

"Continuing radar plot including a directed identification turn and subsequent transmission indicates plane was one from third bomb group. The pilot reports having strafed lights at 1:36 A.M. in what he believed to be a different area but which in view of the radar plot must have been Kaesong."
"Faulty navigation on pilot's part led to error."

Earlier the communists warned the allies to accept Red terms for resuming stalled Korean truce talks in Kaesong or "bear the responsibility for the consequences."

They didn't say what "the consequences" would be. But it could only mean resumption of full fighting in Korea.

The Reds want the allies to admit that United Nations planes and troops have violated Kaesong's neutrality zone. This the U.N. command has refused to do. The allied command repeatedly has denied or simply ignored Red charges that its planes bombed and strafed in the Kaesong area and that allied troops invaded the neutral zone.

The Reds broke off armistice negotiations Aug. 23, charging that an allied plane bombed the conference site the night before.

The Reds' warning Tuesday came in a 3,000-word statement by their truce delegation at Kaesong. It was broadcast over Red China's Peiping radio.

It dodged answering the latest proposal of the supreme allied commander, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, that truce talks be resumed in some neutral third location. But it hinted the suggestion was unacceptable.

The Red statement, broadcast for 4½ hours, said Ridgway merely was trying to "play a new trick."

The broadcast said the U. N. "should deal in a responsible manner with the resumption of the negotiations created by them instead of raising the demand for changing the conference site with the aim of diverting attention from the settlement" of the Red neutrality violation charges.

"If they are not sincere in wanting the resumption of the negotiations, then their demand for transferring the conference site only serves to prove that they are creating a pretext for breaking off the negotiations."

Authorities here presumed the Reds were trying to goad the U.N. command into taking an over step that would explode all hopes of resuming the talks.

The latest Red charge of a "provocative incident" was lodged Monday. The communists charged that a U.N. plane strafed near the conference site early Monday morning.

The Peiping radio also revived its old complaints that allied planes had flown over mainland Red China. It said the Red border was violated 16 times by 17 planes in the five days ended Sept. 3.

The Red broadcast charged also that a U.S. Lst (landing ship, tanks) and three U.S. warships violated Red coastal waters three times in the same period. It placed the alleged violations near Tsing-tai and Weihaiwei in Shantung province of China and near the Liaotung peninsula of Manchuria.

U.S. Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea, Sept. 11.—(P)—Allied troops on a limited offensive threw softening-up attacks today at four communist strongpoints in eastern Korea.

On the western front, the communists surprisingly broke off attacks they started a week ago.

Red truck traffic in North Korea diminished Monday night after two weeks of heavy movement. In that time allied warplanes pounded communist vehicles mercilessly and scored some of the highest damage - and destruction

Closure On B.C. Forests Is Lifted

Vancouver, Sept. 11.—(P)—Some 15,000 loggers streamed back to work in British Columbia timberlands today after a two-month lay-off caused by drought and the resulting forest fire hazard.

Heavy week-end rains prompted forests minister E. T. Kenney to lift the forest closure, imposed July 12, at midnight last night.

The closure had affected some 2,000 woods operations in the Vancouver forest district, which takes in the southwestern section of the province and Vancouver Island.

The record drought - including one stretch of 98 rainless days - cost B.C. about $40,000,000 in lost wages and lumber production. Loggers packed onto every available plane and ship which would take them back to work. Airline and steamship companies said the rush would probably continue for another three or four days.

There was happy jostling on boat decks as loggers searched for nooks and crannies to throw down their bedrolls and sleeping bags. They had been scraping by on unemployment insurance cheques for weeks.

Operators now are faced with the big task of cutting enough timber to supply mills before winter weather closes the woods again. Loggers have been asked to work overtime to catch up on the huge backlog of work. The loggers' union, the International Woodworkers of America (C.I.O.), said it was a matter for negotiation between companies and locals.

The number of forest fires was down more than 100 to 30 by the week-end rains. All were under control.

Japan's Rapidly-Growing Population Is Likely To Increase Expansion Urge

By SYDNEY BROOKES

Tokyo, Sept. 11.—(Reuters)—An overriding consideration in Japan's post-treaty policies is likely to be her need and desire for recovery of overseas territory. Japan has accepted the San Francisco treaty and its restrictions as an essential step towards full recovery of her sovereignty. There is, however, a growing belief here that neither the occupation nor the treaty has essentially changed Japan's urge towards expansion.

Americans in Tokyo consistently express their belief in the complete democratization of Japan. Considerable doubt has remained among other westerners here as to whether the occupation powers' precepts have really penetrated so far.

Recent expressions of Japanese opinion have been taken here as suggesting that Japan's tendency towards authoritarianism has not been greatly weakened and that Japan's former leaders—as they reappear with the relief of post-war restrictions—will show themselves still convinced of Japan's need for an empire.

The quiet and humility of the Japanese representatives of San Francisco was a reflection of designed policy. Authoritative Japanese sources admitted that before San Francisco every possible care was taken to avoid raising any issues which might delay the treaty.

But the week immediately before San Francisco, comment became more bold. There was open talk of "asphyxiation" of the Japanese people if they must be confined in their small home islands. There was openly expressed resentment at the loss particularly of the northern possessions now held by the Soviet Union.

Just as traders elsewhere were expressing fears of Japanese economic competition, the Japanese expressed fears that outside restrictions and economic discrimination might prevent the full — and vitally necessary — expansion of their world trade.

There is one hard fact in the situation—the Japanese population. A century back, Japan had a population of 31,500,000 in her home islands. The land area available to this population was nearly 136,000 square miles.

Today, Japan is back in the same restricted territory but with a population exceeding 84,000,000 and growing at the rate of about 100,800 net each month.

Between the two world wars, Japan complained bitterly at having a smaller population — less than 80,000,000 — confined in almost twice the area.

Channel Swim Attempted By Three

Cap Gris Nez, France, Sept. 11.—(P)—Two French gendarmes sped here today to investigate reports that Florence Chadwick "has been lost" while attempting to swim the English Channel from England to France.

Dover, England, Sept. 11.—(P)—The Dover listening station had no progress report from Florence Chadwick today, 10 hours after she set out in foggy darkness to swim the English Channel to France.

The 32-year-old San Diego, Calif., typist was trying to become the first woman ever to swim the Channel both ways.

Detective, Arsonist Lose Lives

New York, Sept. 11.—(P)—Three men were charged with homicide and arson today after a city detective and an alleged "torch" died in a $1,000,000 explosion and fire.

One of those arrested was a clothing manufacturer, allegedly seeking to collect insurance.

The detective died as he pursued the trail of an arson plot that backfired last night into an inferno which wrecked a nine-storey building.

One of the alleged arsonists was taken to a hospital in critical condition with burns.

The explosion—on West 18th Street just off Fifth Avenue—shook a large area. Damage to the building, its contents and the surrounding area may exceed $1,000,000, fire officials said. Thirty-five pieces of fire apparatus responded to five alarms.

Shortly before the explosion at 9:30 p.m. EDT, three detectives trailed four men into the loft of the manufacturing building.

A drum containing 55 gallons of gasoline blew up on the fifth floor. Windows were shattered for blocks around and dense smoke covered the area.

The blaze was brought under control at 11:45 p.m.

Fire officials surmised today that the alleged arson plot might have depended on a timing device to ignite the gasoline.

They said that apparently too much gasoline was used, and fumes might have ignited prematurely by the lighting device. No timing device or fuse was found in the ruins, however.

Police listed the dead as detective James Daggett, 38, and Mos Shapiro, one of four men alleged to have entered the building to commit arson.

Jack Weiss, 67, was charged with homicide and arson as he lay in hospital in serious condition with burns.

Police said Weiss had been hired by Al Keshner, 42, president of Keshner Incorporated, manufacturers of sports coats, on the fifth floor of the building.

Keshner admitted he was to have paid Weiss $1,350 after the fire was set, police said. They quoted Keshner as saying his concern carried $20,000 fire insurance.

Keshner and another suspect, Jake Mayron, 59, were questioned through the night.

Tobacco Strike Talks Planned

Montreal, Sept. 11.—(P)—Plans for renewed discussions between the Imperial Tobacco Company and its 3,700 strike-bound workers were laid in Quebec yesterday, at a meeting between Hon. Antonio Barrette, Minister of Labor, and International Union of Tobacco Workers (A.F.L.) representatives. Mr. Barrette has consented to act as mediator in the three-weeks-old dispute.

Attending were John Purdie, international vice-president of the union; Leopold Barrette, president of the local, and councillor Roger Provost, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor.

Mr. Purdie said today discussions would be held "some time this week," at which it was hoped company and union representatives would gather round the council table to try to iron out differences.

Washington Will Forward Iran Ultimatum To Britain

Tehran, Sept. 11.—(P)—Iran's ultimatum giving Britain two weeks to resume talks about their oil dispute is being forwarded by way of Washington today, a government spokesman said.

Premier Mohammed Mossadegh was unable to get parliamentary approval of his move. But the Premier went ahead with his plan in the face of outspoken opposition by 14 deputies who braved assassination threats to defy his policy and despite Britain's moves to cripple Iran's finances.

The plan calls for Britain to resume negotiations on Mossadegh's oil nationalization policies or see the 300 British technicians remaining at the old Anglo-Iranian company's Abadan refinery thrown out of the country.

The ultimatum was routed to Nasrollah Entezam, Iran's ambassador in Washington, to turn over to W. Averell Harriman, President Truman's special envoy who tried to mediate the quarrel.

The government spokesman said Harriman promised when he left Iran that he would do anything further to help settle the dispute. Harriman will be asked to relay the ultimatum to London. The opposition deputies signed a communique accusing the premier of making enemies of Britain and the United States.

It charged him with failing to carry out promises of riches he made when he pushed through a law nationalizing the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Company installations four months ago.

One deputy said there were 30 in the Majlis (lower house of parliament) who would vote against Mossadegh in a showdown. Opposition deputies have been boycotting the Majlis sessions to keep it from mustering a quorum of 75 to succeed him. Said Zai Ed-Din, seeks.

Some opponents talked of trying to unseat the Premier in the next two weeks.

One of the leading candidates to succeed him is said Zai Ed-Din, who claims to be a direct descendant of the prophet Mohammed. Zai Ed-Din, 60, was premier for three months in 1921 after leading a coup which brought Reza Shah to power.

The Premier's opponents say they favor oil nationalization, too, but that his policies by making enemies of Britain and the U.S. were endangering Iran which has depended for decades on a balance of power between Russia and Britain.

Britain's move yesterday to cut off Iran's dollar sources was interpreted as a clear bid to force out Mossadegh and get some one more amenable to deal with.

Last night, the cabinet approved terms of Iran's first foreign sale of nationalized oil. It was a deal with Afghanistan for $3,400,000, a price 10 per cent under Mexican gulf prices.

Despite the old theory about the "busy bee," wasps are said to be far more intelligent and active than bees.

GLENN FORD'S HOME LIFE IS UPSET BY WESTERN ON TV

By GLENN FORD

(Subbing for Erskine Johnson, NEA Staff Correspondent)

Hollywood—Like everyone else I'm convinced television has unlimited possibilities. And like everyone else, I suppose, I have a grievance concerning TV. I'm looking for the guy who introduced westerns to television.

My grievance is based upon the fact these western pictures on TV have been creating chaos in my home life for the past several years. My wife, Eleanor Powell, and I have a son, Peter, a friendly, likeable six-year old.

Until this character who merged TV and western pictures came on the scene, Peter and I had a good, normal father-and-son relationship.

And I was doing very fine until we got ourselves a television set. That did it. I found myself competing with all these western stars for prestige in my son's eyes.

The pictures I've been making have rarely been of the "western" type, lately. The fact I was also an actor and appeared in pictures with Rita Hayworth, Evelyn Keyes, Bette Davis, Anne Baxter, and others, made no impression on him at all. Their names weren't as bewitching to him as Topper, Champ, Silver, Tony, etc. Peter Not Impressed.

Breakfasts at our house used to be gay, friendly affairs. Full of plans for the day. But after television, Peter's interest plummeted to zero when I started to talk about my pictures. Peter would always get back to what the western stars were doing on television, and how great they were.

Things reached such a desperate state I was forced to come to breakfast complete with chaps, guns, and range talk. When I got to the studio, everyone figured I was going through one of those "daffy" stages, and were exceedingly kind and gentle.

The novelty of having me dress western wore off for Pete in a few weeks. I had to resort to another fraud. I carefully built up the fiction we were having a peck of trouble with Indians.

My parting shot each day as I left the house, with Ellie giving me one of those I-may-never-see-you-again hugs to make the scene more valid in Pete's mind was, "I'll sure gun those Injuns to-day!"

This fiction came a cropper suddenly. Forgetting all about it one day and dressed in my goin'-to-town clothes I took Pete to a studio where I had some business to discuss.

Walking past one of the big sound stages, the doors opened and erupted scores of Indians. Several stroled over, shook hands and patted Pete on the head. He was plain disgusted.

"You're a fake, Dad," he accused. "You didn't shoot 'em dead like you claim you do."

Life wasn't worth living with my son for weeks after that episode. I climbed back up a peg or two the day we meet Bill Boyd and he stopped to chat.

That enabled me to come to breakfast in my store clothes. At the studio they figured I was over Callers at the same home were Mr. and Mrs. H. Maddis and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Maddis and children, of Sherbrooke.

My "queerness," at least for a time.

But I still wasn't making the grade with Peter. The western stars on television were the real guys, and I was only some bum who told him tall tales, and wasn't getting away with it. Tough Day.

About the time the crisis was at its peak, I was making a western. Bill Holden and I do our own riding stunts in pictures, but usually we don't package them all into one day.

The studio was a trifle concerned, but I finally persuaded them I wouldn't break any bones or walk bow-legged through the rest of the film.

I got Peter a comfortable chair next to the camera. And then I put on a show—I really did. I leaped on racing horses from every angle. I did every stunt with a horse that's in the books. And others that aren't.

Peter, whenever I could wipe the sweat out of my eyes and see him, sat quietly, never blinking an eye. When it was all over people applauded. But not Peter. He said nothing, even when we were in the car driving home.

"Well," I asked wearily, "what did you think of Dad, Peter?" He meditated a moment. "It wasn't so bad," he replied kindly.

"But you 'member when you leaped from that stack of barrels onto the horse's back? Yea, well, if that had been Hoppy he'd a jumped outta the third-story window. He's a real whizzer!"

Until I meet the guy that put western pictures on television, my only hope is that Pete will suddenly get the idea it'll be much more fun being a golfer.

checking it over and touching things, then disappeared into her bedroom. She emerged in a few minutes and went out to where Grandpa was preparing dinner in the kitchen. She was dressed in a scarlet cotton skirt and a white homespun peasant blouse and her hair was tied back with a blue ribbon. She looked like anybody's young granddaughter, even old man Bruno's.

She unpacked her parcel. It was brown flour and fresh yeast tablets, the latter going into the refrigerator. "I'm going to make bread tomorrow. Remember that home-made bread I used to bake? I'm yearning just for the smell of it baking."

"Why Angie, you're glad to be home. You didn't come just to please me?"

She smiled, but her eyes were wet. "Sure. And you're glad to have me. I can see it, darling. So I'm going to stay all the time. That trip to England was an out in case I found you didn't want me. So many of us do find that you know. People think a little money changes us. They're afraid, or they want something—oh, you know."

Grandpa felt like crying himself. But he hugged her and kissed her. Then he gave her the skillet. "Here Angie, cook the steak, I want to catch the news on the radio."

War Correspondent Bill Boss Tells About Conditions In Korean Theatre

Everything you have heard about the smells, dirt and difficulties of Korea is true, Bill Boss, Canadian Press war correspondent, home on leave from that Asiatic country, told a standing-room-only crowd at the Legion home last night.

"It is not possible for our boys to overpaint the hardships and dullness of Korea, a land which suffered immense hardships under two generations of Japanese occupation and more than a year of this war."

Boss said the Allied troops in Korea were suffering from "a spiritual weariness" because of the bleak conditions of this land, the language barrier and the fact that the troops are largely confined to their unit areas.

So great are the hardships which the soldiers in Korea face that the superficiality of a five-day pass in Tokyo is almost like going home to them.

"Korea, the soldier knows," Boss said, "Japan, he dreams about."

But, he stated, Korea embraces more than geography and the peculiar type of top dressing they use on the farms there. (human excretion).

"Korea, which has a culture more than 4,000 years old, represents an embarrassment to our cause politically, an embarrassment which our troops have helped to maintain."

"The Allies have denied Communism a valuable base in Korea," Boss said, but they have done so to the detriment of the Korean people.

"The lack of consideration for the Koreans, prevalent among western soldiers, has taken from the Koreans even their pride."

"We have been brutal, perhaps, but not on a scale that would alienate a whole people. Rather, we have humiliated them."

Boss disagreed with the statements of U. S. General Lawton Collins and assistant Defence secretary Pace, words to the effect that the attitude of the Koreans towards the U. N. troops has not deteriorated.

The superiority attitude towards the Koreans is because we have not taken the words "freedom" and "democracy" too seriously.

He blamed the folks at home for this lack of consideration among U. N. troops for the Koreans. "The army has to take the sons we produce," he said. "The ideological training for the war begins right here in the home."

The attitude of the average Canadian soldier towards the Korean he illustrated in a story about a U. N. policeman who kicked a Korean all the way across a street, merely because the Korean "was in my way." A nearby Canadian soldier only watched.

Boss said the integration of troops into one fighting force had its advantages but can be drawn to dangerous extremes.

"It should be so done that we know that local policy is Canadian policy," he said.

Boss spoke of the hardships suffered by the Koreans in 45 years under the Japanese, whom the Koreans disliked intensely.

"There was no advancement for the Koreans under Japanese rule, except in the church. While the Koreans hated the Japanese they admired them for their technical superiority."

He feels the Koreans are capable of building a modern state. Koreans value human life as much as we do and have strong family ties.

They have a culture almost 4,000 years old and an alphabet of 29 characters, which allows them to represent any human sound, one result of which is that the Koreans have no difficulty in correctly pronouncing foreign names.

"While they have no religion, only three per cent are Christians, the rest follows Shamanism and Confucianism, this does not mean they are not an ethical people. They are extremely so and very, very honest."

Women have the status of chattels in Korea, Boss stated. The boys usually marry at 14, women who are in their twenties. By the time the boy reaches the age of 21, brought up by his wife, he is ready to discard this woman and take another wife. Koreans are polygamous, up to the number of wives they

Address By J. A. Blanchette Marks Opening Night Meeting Of Lions

Featured by an address by J. A. Blanchette, Member of Parliament for Compton County and Parliamentary assistant to the Minister of National Defence, the "Ladies' Night" staged by the members of the Sherbrooke Lions Club proved an unqualified success.

In addition to the address by Mr. Blanchette, the members and their guests enjoyed a short musical program presented by some of the students at the Quebec Musical Summer School held at Knowlton this year. The soloists were Florent Garand of Sherbrooke, and Jacques Pronovost, of Cowansville, with Jack Lenaghan, of Sherbrooke, acting as accompanist.

Introducing the soloists was Harry Long, director of the summer school, who also thanked the members of the Sherbrooke Lions Club for the support and assistance they had given the school and the young students attending it.

The thanks of the club to the visiting artists were expressed by President Alberic Julien who also welcomed the ladies and the other guests present. During the course of the evening, he also presented the past president's button and the gavel he used during his term of office to Ossie Goyette, the president of the 1950-51 term.

It was also announced that Lion Eddie Caron would replace Lion Leo Henri Gagnon as chairman of the reception committee, Mr. Gagnon having tendered his resignation owing to reasons of personal business.

Mr. Blanchette, who was introduced by Lion Dr. Rene DuBerger and thanked by Lion Alphonse Saumier, dealt with the efforts of the National Defence Department to remove the language difficulty in connection with members of the armed forces.

As a result of the combined action of the people of two races, Canada had reached a point of importance in international affairs unequalled by any other nation of 14,000,000 people and the government realized the importance of bringing this feeling into the armed services.

He denied charges made in certain quarters that the French-Can-

UNDIPLOMATIC, BUT —

When a new ambassador arrives, protocol requires that he almost immediately call upon the President or Prime Minister by appointment and present his credentials. It is usually the occasion for the exchange of a few stereotyped and mutually complimentary remarks, chiefly about the friendly feeling between the two countries. And that is about all.

But, comments the St. Thomas Times-Journal, when Dr. Vladimir Prohazk of Czechoslovakia arrived in Washington to take up his appointment he called on President Truman. For a few moments the two exchanged the traditional diplomatic pleasantries, but when the Ambassador said his say, Mr. Truman switched off the track to say that the best way to make relations between the two countries cordial was to send home William N. Oatis, Associated Press correspondent, now undergoing a term of imprisonment as an alleged spy. Mr. Truman also said that relations between the United States and Czechoslovakia had deteriorated since Dr. Jan Masaryk was murdered. After seeing the President, Dr. Prohazk paid a courtesy call on Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who was less than coldly formal; he did not even shake hands with the new ambassador.

Dr. Prohazk emerged from the Truman meeting distinctly ruffled and refused to talk afterwards to reporters, except to say that "in no instance will Czechoslovakia submit to trade or propaganda pressure."

President Truman has been criticized by some United States newspapers for departing from diplomatic usages to deliver a scolding to the new Ambassador, but we are inclined to think that, political bias aside, the vast majority of the American people will approve what he did. It is no use trying to make national feelings known to Communists through the polite finesse of diplomacy. It has to be accompanied by a metaphorical kick in the pants.

BEYOND IMAGINATION

The United States has secret weapons which are beyond the imagination in destructive power if used in war, Senator Milton Young, of North Dakota, assures the people of the free world in a message. Unoubtedly the statement will be read very carefully by the Russian emissaries now in the United States. The weapons are not atomic, declares the Senator, who added:

"They are something new and different. They are something even more startling than germ warfare."

"They are new and terrible weapons of war that are just beyond imagination. They certainly would be a deterrent to any possible foe using any possible new weapons they have."

On top of a previous vote of $56,000,000, the sub-committee in Congress voted another $5,000,000,000 to make sure of the delivery of the new weapons, whatever they may be.

In a period when there has been a scare about Russia, and about China too, it might be well to reflect that during the course of its history the United States was never launched on research, as Germany of old always was, in order to improve and intensify offensive war. The American industrial machine was given over to the assembly line for the products of peace. In the Second Great War, research and the spending of billions, brought out the atomic bomb. Research on a vast scale has been continued since Russia has shown its hand. The U.S.A. has secret weapons now or in the making soon, there can be no doubt. Even Hitler made good his boast in that respect, first the magnetic mine and later the rocket bomb.

TROOPS NEED READING

Canadian troops in Korea are "a restless bunch when they aren't fighting" and probably would be a lot happier if the fighting in Korea was more of a shooting war, according to Sgt. A. R. S. Blake of Montreal. Sgt. Blake, a right hand man to the senior Protestant padre, Major Roy Durnford, operates a small lending library for troops at the front and hears all their needs.

Besides craving action, the Canadians are avid readers. Western stories are most popular with men in the line, but they will read anything and everything. Magazines with a lot of pictures are best for taking the mind off the heat or when it's too hot to read. And pictures are easier on the eyes in poor light at night or during rain, he has discovered.

Regular shipments of books and magazines now reach the Canadians through the brigade's welfare section. Blake has set up his tiny library in a small tent at the end of the Canadian sector. His bookshelves are five wooden packing cases. Other pieces of furniture common to libraries are non-existent.

PRESS COMMENTS

PRICE CONTROLS

Toronto Star

The prime minister suggested that although price control worked well during the war, thanks to the patriotic co-operation of the people, it would fall now for lack of co-operation. Yet he urged the public to undertake a voluntary anti-inflation program, by buying only essentials, by saving more and by producing more. If he thinks the people would refuse to co-operate with price controls, how can he expect them to co-operate in a much more difficult assignment?

We believe the government greatly underestimates the degree of public support that would greet a price control program. All indications are that the vast majority of wage and salary earners, pensioners and others on fixed incomes, would co-operate enthusiastically. Consider, for example, the fairly typical housewife who can spend only $15 to $25 a week for the family's food. Given the opportunity to buy groceries at controlled prices, she is certainly not going to start looking for a black market.

Mr. St. Laurent referred to scarcities created by defence production and purchases as a prime factor, in the alarming inflation that has taken place since the start of the Korean war. But scarcities can hardly be regarded as the chief cause of rising prices. Only a minute proportion of the national product has thus far gone into the rearmament program. It seems that in the past year the price of almost every item in common use has gone up, irrespective of whether or not a shortage has occurred. In these circumstances it appears that profiteering has played a considerable part in the inflation spiral. And price controls would be the most effective method of curbing profiteering.

RUSSIANS IN PACIFIC

Montreal Gazette

The problems facing the Japanese Peace Conference in San Francisco are not simply problems of our time. They are also problems out of history. The world today has inherited the weight of Russia's ancient pressure in this identical region.

There is a danger of interpreting the present problems in the Pacific too exclusively in terms of Communism. It would be a wonderful thing to be sure, if Communism were to vanish from the face of the earth. But it would not solve the problems now being considered at San Francisco, if the power of Russia remained. For under the outward forms of Communism, Russia is today pursuing her historic and unwavering purposes.

A hundred years ago Russia was creeping into Asia and almost along the very lines she is now following. It was not in Communist Pravda, but in 1860 in the Imperialist Russian Military Magazine that Capt. Nevelskoi of the Russian navy was reporting to the government that "the entire basis of the Asiatz, and the coast of Manchuria, as far as Korea, must constitute Russian, not Chinese territory." And with a reference to Russian expansion toward the Black Sea, he declared that it was necessary for Russia to look Asia-wards also, and to create a "future Russia Savastopol of the Pacific."

Nor were these merely words or vague dreams of conquest. Russia had already built her posts in Manchuria and was established in harbors that had been seized along the coast of Korea. The next step (then as today) was to reach out toward Japan.

ORGANIZED LABOR LOOKS AHEAD

Windsor Daily Star

The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada opens its annual convention Monday in Halifax. The following week the other major Labor organization, the Canadian Congress of Labor, meets in Vancouver. These conferences concern not only members of unions, but every Canadian. All are affected in some measure by what unions do or accomplish.

The day is happily gone when union members were regarded as wild-eyed radicals. Most all union members are solid citizens, workers and producers. They have a stake in the nation, where they invest their lives, make their livings and homes.

The Labor movement in Canada has — or should have — emerged from the turbulence of its youth. The privilege to organize, of collective bargaining and other fundamental rights now are generally recognized. Labor has made rapid strides in promoting better wages, hours of work and working conditions.

The time now has come, as outstanding men in the Labor movement appreciate, to plan for the future on broad lines. In the past it has been so engrossed with securing practical progress it has had too little time for the study of the wider philosophy.

If Labor were to confine its scope in the future to immediate, practical problems, it would restrict itself unduly and limit its opportunities. It would be working against its own self-interest.

In the broad view, Labor can contribute most to its own members by contributing its maximum to the entire nation. Labor can only progress and prosper in relation to the general advance of all citizens. As an example, workers in Windsor cannot prosper unless people all across Canada can purchase automotive products.

Mr. Walter P. Reuther, president of the U.A.W., C.I.O., sees this clearly. "Labor will not make progress toward the high standard of living it is able to produce so long as it seeks to advance its own interests without regard to the interests of all other workers and of the community of which it is a part." These are state-of-the-art words.

Labor, as we envisage its future, can make a great contribution to the country, quite apart from that of its members as producers. It can co-operate with management in industrial problems, how to produce most efficiently and steadily, and within the ability of purchasers to pay for the products. This requires co-operation of management with Labor. If Labor approaches problems with the proper perspective, it is entitled to the co-operation of management.

In the wider field, Labor can be increasingly influential in the affairs of state. We are not speaking of allegiance to any particular party, but rather of the exercise of a healthy, progressive influence on governments — whatever be their political stripe.

Elizabeth Trained Since Girl To Be Britain's Future Queen

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—Princess Elizabeth is destined to become the sixth reigning Queen of Britain since the Norman conquest.

By custom and protocol, she is officially designated as the heir-ess presumptive — rather than heiress apparent — to the throne because tradition dictates that it never must be assumed that a male heir shall not be born to the King and Queen.

The Princess dedicated her life to the Commonwealth on her 21st birthday, while touring South Africa with the King and Queen. Recalling the "knighthood" dedications of "bygone heirs to the throne," she declared in a broadcast address that her whole life would be "devoted to your service and the service of our great imperial family."

Her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, has no place in the order of succession. He would become the Prince Consort as the husband of Britain's Queen. The last Prince Consort was the courtly, handsome German, Prince Albert, husband of Queen Victoria, the great-grandmother both of Elizabeth and Philip.

The Queens of Britain since the Norman conquest of 1066, with the periods in which they reigned, were: Jane, 1553 (14 days); Mary I, 1553-58; Elizabeth, 1558-1603; Mary II, 1689-94; Anne, 1702-14; Victoria, 1837-1901.

From Princess Elizabeth, the line of succession now goes to her son, Prince Charles, 2, and her daughter, Princess Anne, 1. Next in line is Princess Elizabeth's younger sister, 21-year-old Margaret Rose.

The order of succession then is: the Duke of Gloucester, 49, the King's brother, and his sons—Prince William, 9, and Prince Richard, 7; the Duke of Kent, 15, the King's nephew, and his brother, Prince Michael, 7, and his sister, Princess Alexandra, 14; the Princess Royal, 54, the King's sister, and her children—the Earl of Harewood, 28, and Hon. Gerald David Lascelles, 27.

From there, it goes through the families of the sons and daughters of Queen Victoria.

The other event was the birth of Margaret Rose. The fact that this only other child of the King and Queen was a girl secured Elizabeth's position—a brother would have taken her place in line for the crown.

Elizabeth's pledge of faith to the Commonwealth came early in 1947 as she reached 21, the legal age of maturity. In a birthday broadcast to the Commonwealth, she gave this undertaking:

"There is a motto which has been borne by many of my ancestors—a noble motto—I serve. Those words were an inspiration to many bygone heirs to the throne."

The Record Short Story

No Orchids at Home

By OLGA A. ROSMANITH

Old man Bruno was afraid of his granddaughter. He had been father and mother to her and brought her up and even encouraged her music study. But now that he was directly responsible for making her what she was, he was afraid of what he had made of her. He looked at the telegram in his hands and he looked round the shabby comfort of his small town living room, then he looked out at the old trees in the yard with the faded hammock slung between them, then he looked back at the telegram:

"THREE MONTHS VACATION DARLING. COMING HOME FOR TWO WEEKS BEFORE LEAVING FOR ENGLAND. MEET ME AT THE FAIRVIEW AIRPORT 6 P.M. TUESDAY. ALL NEWS WHILE DRIVING HOME. LOVE ANGIE."

The old man's hand trembled to the airport, but in her opinion as he folded it. It had been five years since he had seen Angela in the flesh, but lately he had been seeing her on television. He had grown used to her voice on the air. The lark-like sweetness and lightness, flexibility and high coloratura sounded so innocent and simple anyway, nothing, in his opinion, any Centerville girl could not do. But the first night he saw her on the screen next door he had nearly fainted away.

Her gown was too low, she was too beautiful to be human, her brown hair was golden, her diamonds looked real and the women argued about her orchids. They were a very strange shape and the consensus of opinion was they were very rare and worth at least forty dollars.

She always wore orchids on her program, as if they were her trademark or badge of office. That night he had tried to remember her as she looked when she went away to study music in New York, safely chaperoned by an elderly great-aunt who had shared in fostering Angela's talent by giving her a home while Grandpa paid tuition and expenses. For two years now Angela had been sending Grandpa checks as well as supporting herself.

It was very hard to remember after growing accustomed to her smooth and polished blonde beauty on television. She'd had shoulder length brown hair with red lights in it, freckles sprayed across the bridge of her tipped nose and a crooked front tooth of which she was very conscious.

"How in the world," Grandpa muttered, "could they turn such a harmless sweet kid into that intimidating beauty?"

The Fairway airport. That was 26 miles away, on the outskirts of Fairview, a thriving town. He could see her getting down from the plane, probably in mink, certainly with a spray of white or green or tiger striped orchids on her shoulder, a jewel case in her hand, a maid behind her and a flock of photographers snapping her picture. "Angela Bruno going home for vacation. That thin-seedy old man with the white topknot is, believe it or not, her grandfather."

She would walk with that eager graceful swing toward his car and get in. The 1938 Ford in that mink coat? Oh, no. Grandpa Bruno reached for the telephone. Bill Parker had been her favorite boy friend before she left. His car was 1935. It had just been repainted and it had no dents in the fenders.

Bill was uncooperative. "Sorry, Mr. Bruno, I'd love to help. But I've one of those dates you just can't skip at the last moment. If you can't go, what about sending Joe Boyes in his taxi?"

"That's so inhuman!" "I guess so. Well, truly I'm sorry, I just can't make it. And I haven't had the seat repaired since Rover chewed it."

Grandpa gave up. He knew Bill's date was with his pride and it was positively unbreakable. All Centerville had had a shock when they saw Angie return to them via the screens in their living rooms. She was remoter than before. Centerville was a dreaming, sun-baked little town with great trees shading its homes and sidewalks. Its most prosperous citizens sold feed and farming implements.

Grandpa dialed the phone again, this time calling his neighbor who owned the television. Her tart cranky voice told him sure he could borrow her new car to go with no maid behind her and no waiting photographers. She was wearing an elegant gray suit, gray shoes, a stole of soft dark fur and as he expected, a spray of orchids. But as he watched she removed these and gave them to the stewardess, then she looked round towards him. She set her gray suitcase on the ground, threw her arms round him and kissed him.

He kissed her back on both cheeks, his old hand thumping with joy and gratification. Then he held her off and looked at her. Her teeth were now straight in her sweet dazzling smile, but her nose was still faintly sprayed with freckles. The blond hair suited her.

She got into the car without comment on its ageing condition. "Gosh, Gramp, it's good to be home. To breathe freely, to sleep without the telephone ready to wake me up at any time, to have my own car."

Grandpa slowed near the driveway. "Okay, if you wish, Angie, but I've stocked up on just everything I could figure you'd want. All the things you liked, as far back as I can remember—"

"Just the same stop. Bet you didn't get this and I'm taking no chances."

She left the rich fur stole on the seat of the car. Just the same the way her suit hung, the way she walked, the way her hair gleamed, the gray antelope bag tucked under her arm and her gray antelope shoes made her look worth a million dollars.

Her greeting had been warm and her talk was simple. But still Grandpa couldn't quite feel that the little girl who had gone away was still the same human being as this self-possessed, successful and gorgeous young lady.

She came out again with a brown paper package, dropped it on the seat and got in. As if their thoughts were conversing she said suddenly, "Gosh, I'll be glad to get into some nice casual clothes. You know Gramp I thought it would be heaven to wear mink and what-not. It gets such a nuisance to keep it up, to go and shop for them, always to be changing them for new ones."

"Your work, I guess." "That's it. One of those occupational headaches. You never wrote and told me what you thought when you first saw me on television."

"I nearly dropped dead, Angie. Can't you imagine the shock of finding my little brown duckling was all the time a swan?"

He turned into the elm shaded avenue of spacious seasoned old houses. He saw Angela smile as if with love. His heart thumped again.

"Gramp, you're grown up now. Didn't you know there's a glamor girl in every woman?"

He answered this much later. Angela ran into the house, set her package on the table in the big old kitchen, ran all over the place

Alexander Brott Will Conduct First Concert

Alexander Brott, who will conduct the Sherbrooke Symphony Orchestra in its first concert of the 1951-52 season on October 23, is one of the best-known names in Canadian music.

Violinist, composer, orchestra leader, lecturer, he is constantly in demand in many capacities.

Mr. Brott was born in Montreal and early in life showed exceptional talent in the musical field. At the age of 13 he already had won five prizes from the McGill University Conservatory of Music.

He went to New York in 1934 and studied at the Juilliard School for five years, taking violin and chamber music with Sascha Jacobson and Willem Willeke and composition with Bernard Wagenaar.

During his stay in New York he won two major prizes, one for the best composition of chamber music and the other for interpretation. He was awarded a purse, on his return to Canada, to study in England but was unable to make use of this because of the war.

In March, 1939, Mr. Brott directed the Montreal Orchestra in his symphonic poem Oracé which later was played at Toronto under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan and at Seattle under Sir Thomas Beecham.

Another symphonic poem, War and Peace, was played in 1944 under the direction of Jean Beaudet. In the following year it was played at Toronto under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan and at Montreal under Desire Defauw.

This work, in the same year, was played by the London Philharmonic Orchestra under Sir Thomas Beecham.

Concordia, another symphonic poem, was played for the first time in 1946 at the International Festival at Prague, under the direction of Jean Beaudet.

Several of Mr. Brott's other compositions have been played in Canada, the United States, South America and Europe.

Two of his recent works have achieved great success in Montreal, one of them a concerto for violin and orchestra, the other a composition for string quartet and percussion instruments called Critic's Corner.

Farewell Party For Pat Finnerty

After nine years in Sherbrooke as resident manager for Imperial Oil, P. M. (Pat) Finnerty has been transferred back to Montreal by the company. During his residence in Sherbrooke, Mr. and Mrs. Finnerty and family have made innumerable friends who will be sorry to see them leave but will wish him well in his new post as resident manager for the St. Lambert residence, a larger territory than he covered while here. He hates to leave Sherbrooke but says "this move is one with a promise of a better position."

Typical of the heartfelt farewells Mr. and Mrs. Finnerty have been getting is the one shown above. The photo was taken Saturday night at a party given in their honor by the Active Members of the 35th L.A.A. Battery Sergeants' Mess, the Associate Members of the Mess and the members of the Shangri-La Club.

Douglas Kezar, president of the active members' mess, presented the flowers to Mrs. Finnerty while Charles Clark, president of the associate members' mess is shown above with Mr. Finnerty after presenting the travelling case. Mr. Finnerty replied in an appropriate manner for Mrs. Finnerty and himself.

Actually, the transfer has been in effect for some time now but the housing situation in Montreal necessitated Mr. Finnerty's being After Friday, however, their residence will be 4,320 Harvard Street, in the Notre Dame de Grace section of Montreal.

The allies announced Tuesday were in the jagged mountain north and northeast of the Hwachon reservoir and north of the Red's old punchbowl assembly area near the Sea of Japan coast.

The Reds turned back two of the attacks. The allies broke off two others because of darkness.

Failure of the attacks had no particular significance. In the savage fighting among peaks 2,500 to nearly 4,000 feet high it often has taken the allies two or three or sometimes as much as 10 days to wear down sturdy Red defence. Cargo planes parachuted almost 70 tons of supplies Tuesday to the troops in the east.

The Chinese attacks on the western front and their sudden halt puzzled observers at Eighth Army headquarters.

It was not known whether they were genuine probing attacks to feel out the allies for a major Red blow, or whether they were merely diversionary to take the sting out of the allied blows in the east.

Only minor patrol action marked the western front Tuesday. U.N. flyers reported sighting at least 1,800 vehicles Monday night. They destroyed or damaged about 360 of these. The night before, pilots reported they spotted 1,700 Red vehicles.

Reds on the central front Monday used for the first time—and only sparingly—a new weapon, a 132-millimetre rocket similar to the "Katuskas" used by Russia in the second world war. Allied authorities reported the big rockets hit no Eighth Army installations.

Also on the central front, Red cavalry was spotted for the first time in several weeks. Fifteen horsemen galloped up to reinforce comrades who were under allied attack.

The allies announced Tuesday that five communist planes were damaged Monday in three jet battles over northwest Korea. There was no report of damage to allied craft. One of the fights involved 110 jets—80 Russian-type MIG-15's and 30 U.S. F-86 Sabres. It was the largest jet battle of history. In it, two MIGs were damaged.

WILL "COUNTING SHEEP" HELP YOU TO SLEEP?

If sleeplessness is caused by being overtired, nervous, run-down and worried—it takes more than "counting sheep" to help you sleep. Though you toss and turn, hour after hour, you can't "wish" yourself to sleep.

Many find that taking a tonic regularly is beneficial—and helps them rest more easily at night. And Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is first choice with thousands! For the Vitamin B₁, iron and other needed minerals it contains are sometimes just what your system lacks. And Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does so much to build you up—by increasing appetite and improving digestion.

So if worry, anxiety, a run-down condition or the strenuous pace of modern living is upsetting your nerves so you can't relax and rest—try taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for a while. The name "Dr. Chase" is your assurance.

adans were discriminated against in promotions in the armed services.

In the past, the number of French-speaking candidates for junior officers' posts had been comparatively small with the result that the senior posts were predominantly held by English-speaking Canadians. But in the past few years, the number of French-speaking candidates had increased substantially and there was every prospect the future would see them holding a greater percentage of the senior posts. He cited the recent selection of Major-General Paul Bernatchez as chief of the Quebec command as proof that no discrimination existed on the grounds of language.

The armed services were establishing language schools for officers to increase the number of bilingual officers and make promotion easier.

In recent examinations for officers, 100 per cent of the French-Canadian candidates had been accepted while only 68 per cent of the English-speaking candidates had made the grade.

While seeking the widest opportunities for all elements of the population, Mr. Blanchette declared the armed services would follow the principle of other branches of Canadian life, a policy that had made Canada progressive—cooperation but no segregation and no assimilation.

cause of the late spurt by the third-place Liberal party of Sophocles Venizelos.

With only 49 of 3,910 precincts and 200,000 military votes missing, the interior ministry said, the Papagos group had 34.9 per cent of the total vote for a tentative 116 seats. Gen. Nicholas Plastiras' centre Progressive Union party had 23.7 for a tentative 69 seats; and Venizelos jumped from 17 to 19.6 for 50 seats. The communist-backed Democratic Front comes next with 11.2 per cent.

Under Greece's complicated proportional election system, Papagos can win Parliament control by getting about 35 per cent of the total vote.

Papagos, who resigned as commander-in-chief in a dispute with King Paul, needs possibly 131 seats to win a Parliament majority. The supreme court may have to decide whether the new Parliament will have 260 or 250 members.

Washington, Sept. 11.—(P)—President Truman said today the United States is stronger economically than ever before. He denounced as lies claims that the government is spending its way into bankruptcy.

Truman spoke at the dedication of the new seven-story building for the General Accounting Office, a watchdog agency for Congress on federal spending.

can afford. The official estimate of damage caused Korea by the war, Boss said, is $2,500,000,000 but we have only contributed $250,000,000 for reparations.

He spoke of the intense suffering caused Korea by the Allied evacuations of Korean families from war areas and said that only 8,000 of these war "orphans" were rounded up in June and July alone of 24,000 children who were taken from their parents.

"These are among the things we did not go to Korea to do, I feel," Boss concluded.

Boss was introduced to the gathering by D. G. Amaron, a fellow war correspondent in Italy and Northern Europe during World War II. The speaker was thanked by Alpheus Gauthier, general manager of La Tribune.

President Syd Hart, of Sherbrooke Branch No. 10, of the Canadian Legion, presided and welcomed the many visitors to the Legion "open house" meeting and warmly thanked Boss for his fine address.

Seated on the platform were: Mrs. Ivy Wheeler, president of Ladies' Auxiliary of the Legion Branch, Alpheus Gauthier, Col. A. A. Munster, Syd Hart, Bill Boss, D. G. Amaron, Ald. Wesley H. Bradley, K.C., representing the mayor, Joseph Bourgeois, John Kay, past president of the Branch, and E. J. Marshall.

President Hart especially welcomed several distinguished guests.

Channel Swim

take off from St. Margaret's Bay, east of Dover, at 9:20 p.m. (5:26 p.m. E.D.T.) last night continued into the morning hours.

But there was no alarm for the security of Miss Chadwick or the boats accompanying her. The sea is remarkable calm and scarcely a ripple is breaking the surface.

Before she set out, Miss Chadwick said she planned to reach the French shore about noon.

The walkie-talkie apparatus with which it had been hoped to keep in touch with Florence broke down at the start of one of the three motor launches accompanying her.

No woman ever has succeeded in swimming the Channel from England to France.

Last year, Florence set a women's record of 13 hours 20 minutes from France to England. British swimmer Brenda Fisher broke the mark last month, crossing in 12 hours 43 minutes.

Several other swimmers were on hand to follow Miss Chadwick, and Mrs. Betty Cohn, 51-year-old Brooklyn grandmother, made plans to try crossing from Cap Griz Nez, France, to England. She originally had intended to start last night also, but her escort boat never arrived. Her husband, Harry, an optometrist and her swimming manager, said she may try tonight or tomorrow.

Tom Blower, 240-pound Englishman, started this morning from St. Margaret's Bay on an ambitious project—he planned to swim the Channel both ways without halting. Blower already had crossed the Channel easily before.

The fog also hid the movements of Antonio Abertondo, of Argentina, he started shortly after midnight. Abertondo had crossed the Channel twice before.

Dr. George Brewster, 62-year-old British doctor, failed for the 16th time when his boat piled up on the rocks a few yards from the French shore.

The Doctor Says

BEST WAY TO GET RID OF RATS IS CLEAN UP HOMES, GARBAGE

By Edwin P. Jordan, M.D.
If our cities should someday lie in ruins as a result of a rain of death and destruction, rats would in all probability thrive mightily. Of all the warm blooded beasts, rats are most likely to survive and inherit the earth if we insist on blowing it up for our own kind.

Even without disaster, rats are our enemies since they carry diseases like plague, eat our food, destroy our crops, and even bite us on occasion.

Rats are fierce, resourceful and increase their numbers at tremendous rates. They are hard to trap, to poison, or to kill in other ways—they learn to avoid traps and poisons with remarkable ingenuity.

But if we would avoid a whole host of dangers and economic drains we must keep battling these pests even though it will be difficult if not impossible to conquer them completely.

From Baltimore, where a few years ago a report came of nearly a hundred people who were bitten by rats badly enough to require hospital treatment, comes an interesting study of rat control. Traps, cats, and poisons can keep the rat population low, but the lower it gets the harder it is to catch or kill the remaining animals.

But rats must eat and have places to make their nests. This is all well known, of course, but in this Baltimore study the rat population of three blocks treated by different degrees of sanitation was compared.

The more the rat food—garbage—was cleaned up, and the fewer places there were for rats to nest—cleaning up the houses—the fewer rats were left.

By sanitation, starvation, cats, traps and poisons the number of rats can be further reduced. This will lessen our chances of catching several serious diseases and it will save us other troubles.

Rats have chewed holes in dams and started floods, they have started fires by chewing matches, they eat corn on the farm—a single rat eats forty or fifty pounds in a year—they destroy poultry, wild birds, bulbs and plants and they often ruin merchandise.

It has even been reported that one circus magnate had to kill three elephants because rats had chewed their feet. And I can't think of a single thing which rats do which is favorable to human beings.

Community School Opening Night Planned

Derby Line, Sept. 11. — Plans for the opening evening, Sept. 18, of the International Community School were discussed at a meeting of the executive committee of the school at the home of Rev. E. C. Amaron, D.D., on Wednesday evening.

Registration will be held in the main building of Stansfeld College from 7:30 p. m. to 8:30 p. m., on Tuesday evening, and this will be followed by movies in Pierce Hall.

A short meeting of the Interest Groups and the Hobby and Handicraft classes to enable the members of the school to get acquainted with the leaders, and a talk on "History and the Community," by Arthur Wallace Peach, director of the Vermont Historical Society. The evening will close with the serving of coffee and sandwiches.

It was brought out at the committee meeting that some prospective members feel doubtful about joining unless they know what evenings their favorite hobby group will meet. It was decided to urge them to attend the opening evening of the school, and to join with the teachers in determining what would be the most advantageous evening for the class. They will be given an opportunity to register, either later on Sept. 18 or the following Tuesday evening.

By being present, these prospective members will have opportunity of helping to decide, which night would suit them the best, and at the same time be under no obligations to join unless they wished.

Copies of the program were given to the members present and will be available at the Haskell Library, Derby Line and Rock Island, and at the Goodrich Memorial Memorial Library in Newport, Vt. Posters were also passed out, and will be appearing in local and nearby communities soon.

Each program carries a registration blank, and those interested are urged to fill this out and send it in as soon as possible, as some of the classes are limited in number.

It was also announced that the date for the showing of the film, "Audubon in America," had been postponed until Oct. 23rd, and there will be a "Town Meeting" on Oct. 9, where community affairs will be discussed. Plans are underway for speakers for other evenings and the special events will include a Variety Entertainment evening and a quiz program.

Following the committee meeting, coffee, sandwiches and cake were served by Mrs. E. C. Amaron, assisted by Mrs. Ted Bissonnette and members of the committee.

The president of the school, E. J. Struthers, presided at the meeting, and others present were vice-president, Rev. E. H. Nickerson; secretary, Miss Gertrude Ketcham; treasurer, Miss Madeline Poisson; registrar, Miss Aline Ricard; and Mrs. Carroll Aldrich.

"Mummy took Auntie's advice"

"It takes seven colours to make true white," Auntie said. "One of them is blue. That's why you must use blue in your wash. Just swish Keen's Blue through the rinse. It prevents that yellow tinge and you avoid taking chances with anything that may damage fabrics." Keen's Blue costs so little, mummy says, "and out of the blue comes the whitest wash."

Science against pain

Science progresses: For 50 years we have used little white tablets—acetylsalicylic acid—for the relief of pain. Today this familiar pain-killer is available in a new form without the disadvantages of insolubility, acidity and bitter taste. It is called DISPRIN.

Why take DISPRIN?

Because DISPRIN is soluble and substantially neutral. When taken in water as recommended, it enters the stomach as a true solution and not as undissolved particles. It is therefore less liable to cause stomach discomfort.

DISPRIN is readily absorbed. Because it definitely dissolves (not merely disintegrates) it permits speedy absorption and gives quicker relief.

DISPRIN is palatable. Even children will take it readily.

DISPRIN is now available at your Druggist. Bottles of 26 tablets or Handy Pocket Folders of 8.

"What's new?"

AS HE PULLS UP at the end of his day's run, it's just his friendly way of saying "hello". But if there is some important development in town, he expects his friend the bank manager will know about it: ... plans for enlarging the school ... the chance of a new factory opening up ...

It's part of the bank man's job to know his community. His customers expect him to know "what's new" in other parts of Canada and elsewhere, too ... business facts, leads to new markets at home and abroad for farm as well as factory.

You will find your bank manager well posted, and ready to serve you. Chartered banks work that way.
