If Skaggs isn't pure bluegrass and he isn't newgrass...

Country music

By DAVE MULHOLLAND

Except for Emmylou Harris, Ricky Skaggs is the only contemporary musician who has successfully combined the sound of mainline country and traditional bluegrass.

But unlike Harris, a straight country singer who dabbled in bluegrass with her Roses In the Snow album, Skaggs is an established bluegrass performer who has made it on the country charts.

From his first contemporary album, Waitin' For the Sun To Shine, the 28-year-old Kentuckian has had no less than four singles up in the North American charts: Don't Get Above Your Raising, You May See Me Walkin', Crying My Heart Out Over You and, currently, I Don't Care.

"I want to bring bluegrass into the main stream of music and record sales," Skaggs says. "We've sold more than 250,000 albums in just over a year, and close to 600,000 singles."

"Some dyed-in-the-wool bluegrass fans have been negative about the new sound," he says. "They won't accept drums and steel, but hundreds of thousands of others are turned on by what I'm doing."

Crowe, leader of The New South, is regarded by his bluegress colleagues as the modern Bill Monroe because his group has spawned so many good performers. Skaggs is one of them.

After starting with Ralph Stanley's band, Skaggs spent a year with The New South before forming his own group, Boone Creek.

When Boone Creek dried up, Skaggs accepted Harris's persistent invitation to join her Hot Band, where he played mandolin, guitar and fiddle, and added his bluegrass influence to her albums. He was the thrust behind the Roses In the Snow project.

In 1980 Skaggs left The Hot Band to get back to traditional bluegrass by touring with Buck White and The Down Home Folks. Romance blossomed and Skaggs married White's daughter, Sharon.

Some observers think Skaggs is opening the door to mass popularity for traditional bluegrass artists. But, says Crowe, "Naw, it ain't going to happen.

"The Country Music Association has got the D.Js. buffaloed and they only play what they're told to play. I get disgusted with the whole thing."

Actually Crowe is happy about the commercial scuccess of his alumnus. In fact, Crowe's next album will feature mainline-country instruments in an attempt to capture some of the same audience.

Skaggs has a simpler answer for his sudden success.

"I just think it's good music and people have been waiting for it. I think it's given the disc jockeys something new and fresh, and radio eats anything like that right up."

Skaggs says there's no pressure from his record company to move closer to a middle-of-the-road country sound. He selects his songs and has control over the production of his records.

"That's the only way I can perform," he says. "Don't put me in a shell and expect me to come out with anything great. I can't do that."

His next album on CBS is Highways and Heartaches. Skaggs says it features the sound established on Waitin' For the Sun To Shine.

But Skaggs's fans who prefer him doing pure bluegrass should check out his recently-released Family and Friends on Stoney Plain Records. The album features the Whites, Skaggs's parents and several prominent bluegrass performers.

Playing Terry Fox means reliving 'awful things'

TORONTO (CP) — Eric Fryer has had to go back and take himself through some awful things in preparation for his role as Terry Fox in the movie the Terry Fox Story, says Rosemary Dunsmore, his acting coach.

Dunsmore, whose stage roles have taken her from Vancouver to Scotland, has been assigned to help Fryer, the Toronto man who will play the lead part but who has never acted before.

Dunsmore said Fryer — who has been barred from speaking to the press until the spring — was initially intimidated by the task of portraying Fox.

Fryer and Fox experienced the same affliction — they both lost a leg to cancer at the age of 18. Fryer now is 21, the same age Fox was during his Marathon of Hope run that raised millions for cancer research.

The two even look alike. Both were avid athletes and Fryer, a former hockey player, has learned to ski on one leg.

"Certainly he has a knowledge of Terry Fox's situation," Dunsmore says. "But it's getting hung up on the notion that 'no one will accept me as that guy because he's better than I am.' "

FACES ARDUOUS TASK

Having to invade his own privacy has been Fryer's most arduous task, Dunsmore says. "When terrible things happen to us, we usually find a way of coping — often blocking them out. All our behavior is, as a result, a defence. As actors, we've got to shed that. Eric has to go back and take himself through some awful things . . . that takes confidence and courage."

She says, "in life we are so busy ironing out our dilemmas — actors tend to get on the stage and do the same thing. Yet it's problems that create drama. As an actor, one must do the reverse . . . my work tends to be getting people to create problems for themselves."

Is that what she's doing with Fryer?

"The script creates enough problems as it is," she admits. "I've never worked for any length of time with someone on a one-on-one basis, but Eric has very good instincts. He's not an actor but he is an artist — he draws."

Dunsmore starred in Straight Ahead — Blind Dancers at Toronto Free Theatre and at the Edinburgh Festival '81 where the London Sunday Telegraph selected hers as the best performance.

Between parts, Dunsmore teaches scene study to professional performers. The Edmonton native studied at York University and has been studying with Kurt Reis at the Centre for Actors' Study in Toronto.

The Terry Fox Story, a Robert Cooper production directed by Ralph Thomas, will be broadcast in the spring on the U.S. pay-TV network Home Box Office and on the CTV television network.

The search for world's greatest wines part 2: Whites

Wine bits

BY TIMOTHY BELFORD

Last week I discussed the difficulty in choosing the world's greatest wine and offered some suggestions as to a possible pretender to the throne in the realm of red wines. This week I'll make a few more coments but this time in the area of white wine. Bear in mind however, my choice in wine like any matter of personal taste, is just that — my own subjective opinion.

Whereas France must indeed claim the world's finest red wine, the debate over white wine moves to the international level. There are many fine Californian whites and they both increase in number every year and in quality. Once again however, to find the 'greatest', one must concenetrate the search within Europe.

It is perhaps unfair to compare the superb sweet wines of Germany with the excellent dry wines of France since both categories differ so greatly in character and purpose but I intend to do just that.

Once again it is to Burgundy that one turns in search of the world's greatest wine. Whereas the names of half a dozen superb reds come immediately to mind, few but the well versed are aware that the region of the Cote d'Or contains probably the world's most fantastic dry white, as well.

Few are those who would debate that le Montrachet is probably a wine without peer. Straddling the vilages of Chassagne and Puligny, the vineyards of le Montrachet produce a wine of such intensity of color, bouquet and taste that it has been suggested the only proper way to drink this wine is on bended knee.

A combination of perfect exposure and limey soil give to the chardonnay grapes a strength of character the envy of lesser vineyards throughout the world.

From the above it would appear that I am about to give my endorsement to le Montrachet as queen of the whites, this is not the case. Although I am quite willing to admit the undoubted merits of le Montrachet, my own personal favorite lies slightly down the road in the vineyard called Corton-Charlmagne.

Not to be confused with the marvellous red, le Corton, Corton-Charlmagne is a wine of distinction that in any given year has no peer. Its earthy taste, full of fruit and yet reminiscent of roasted hazel nuts is noe that cannot easily be forgotten nor surpassed.

The only competition France has comes from the wines of the Rhineland in Germany. Here the wines dessert the dinner table in favor of the taste of sugar and honey with a touch of autumn gold.

The vineyard of Schloss Johannisberg dominate the area of the Rhine known as the Rheingau both physically and spiritually. The justifiable fame of these great vineyards is witnessed by the fact that throughout the world others have copied the German riesling and named it Johannisberger.

Of the many individual vineyards that lie in the shadow of the Schloss itself probably the most famous, and undoubtedly the best, is that of Johannisberger Schlossberg.

At its best, the Schlossberger is a wine of incredible depth. It has a subtlty of flavor and a rare sweetness that brings to mind soft autumn days and liquid honey. A drink fit for a king.

Between the dry magnificent whites of Burgundy and the richness of the Rhine there is little to choose as to greatness, the difference is merely one of style and intent. I'm afraid you will have to be the judge yourself.

Cheers!

M*A*S*H wouldn't make it today — Farrell

Emmys, rating and reruns aside, M.A.S.H. "wouldn't stand a chance if it were starting out today," actor Mike Farrell believes.

"To have a Barney Miller, a Hill Street Blues or a M.A.S.H., you have to allow time for the audience to begin to know the characters and care about them," says Farrell. "I don't think we get that time now."

If it were making its debut this season, he says the series would likely be put up against some silly, loud show "where some guy drops his pants."

"They'd get the immediate response, the ratings and we'd be dead."

The lanky actor, known for the last seven seasons as Dr. B. J. Honnicutt, the relativelyimmune member of the 4077th, place the blame on the American networks being run by businessmen rather than creative minds.

"These businessmen think that if you put together a program with seven or eight characters, one of them a woman, all of them in uniform, then you can make a successful series like M.A.S.H."

EXPLAINS SUCCESS

Good writing, a strong ensemble cast in believable situations are all behind the show's success, but most important is "the underlying belief we all have that the audience isn't stupid."

"I can personally attest to the affection you get when you speak to them intelligently just from the experiences I've had driving through the U.S. and Canada this summer," Farrell said in a Toronto interview.

"It might sound a little corny, but people would stop me and thank me for the show. It was sincere."

Farrell spent five weeks this summer travelling in a van "seeing a lot of McDonald's" with three children — his daughter, 9, his 11-year-old son and a neighbor's child.

M.A.S.H.'s 11th and final season begins this fall. There will be nine new episodes, plus six left over from last season and a two-hour movie in which the end of the Korean War is announced.

Although CBS and 20th Century-Fox, which owns the show, wanted to keep M.A.S.H. in business, Farrell was among the cast members who felt the program had run its course and it was time to quit while they were still on top.

Now that the end is clearly in sight, Farrell, however, admits to feeling ambivalent. "On the one hand you have to know when to leave the nest, but on the other, I really care about the people I work with and I'm going to miss them.

"At the end of last season, we were all drawing together, getting a little nostalgic and cherishing the moments more. I can tell you that last episode is going to be some kind of emotional farewell."

Work begins on the movie before Christmas and Farrell says he only knows about the script in general terms.

"I know you won't see the people at home (in the U.S.). Just like all the other episodes, it'll be set in the compound and it'll show how the characters deal with the end of the war and saying goodbye to one another.

Nana sings a sad song

MONTREAL (CP) — The Greek songbird Nana Mouskouri has been packing the halls for 20 years in Europe and North America, where audiences have been coming to hear her serene love songs and sad laments.

She admits that her music contains more than its share of sad songs. "It's the Greek in me, perhaps.

"I am extreme, but that is very human. I sing with my heart. You won't see Mouskouri dancing. There is just me, my voice and the audience," she said in a recent interview in Montreal where she is performing at Place des Arts.

She is singing more in English, even in France, where she recentlv completed an engagement at Paris's stately Olympia.

"I went through a folkloric period, but I'm singing less of those songs. I am redoing some of the old Greek songs I sang at the beginning of my career."

She has added operatic tones to those songs, and in France she also had a backup chorus and dancers to add a touch of color to her Olympia performance.

But in Montreal she returned to the austere, but classical, Mouskouri show, with five soberly-dressed musicians and the stage to herself.

She said experiences during the Second World War in her German-occupied hometown of Athens had a definite influence on her choice of music.

"People who went through a war, no matter which side, will always know what pain and sadness means. You have to be sad though, to know about happiness."

She is at the midpoint of a career that has seen her sell millions of records. But there is still a certain sadness to her life.

"My mother died five years ago and I was divorced four years ago and those things affected me.

"I went through a very difficult time deciding to end my marriage after 17 years. I am after all a Greek and marriage is only once and forever."

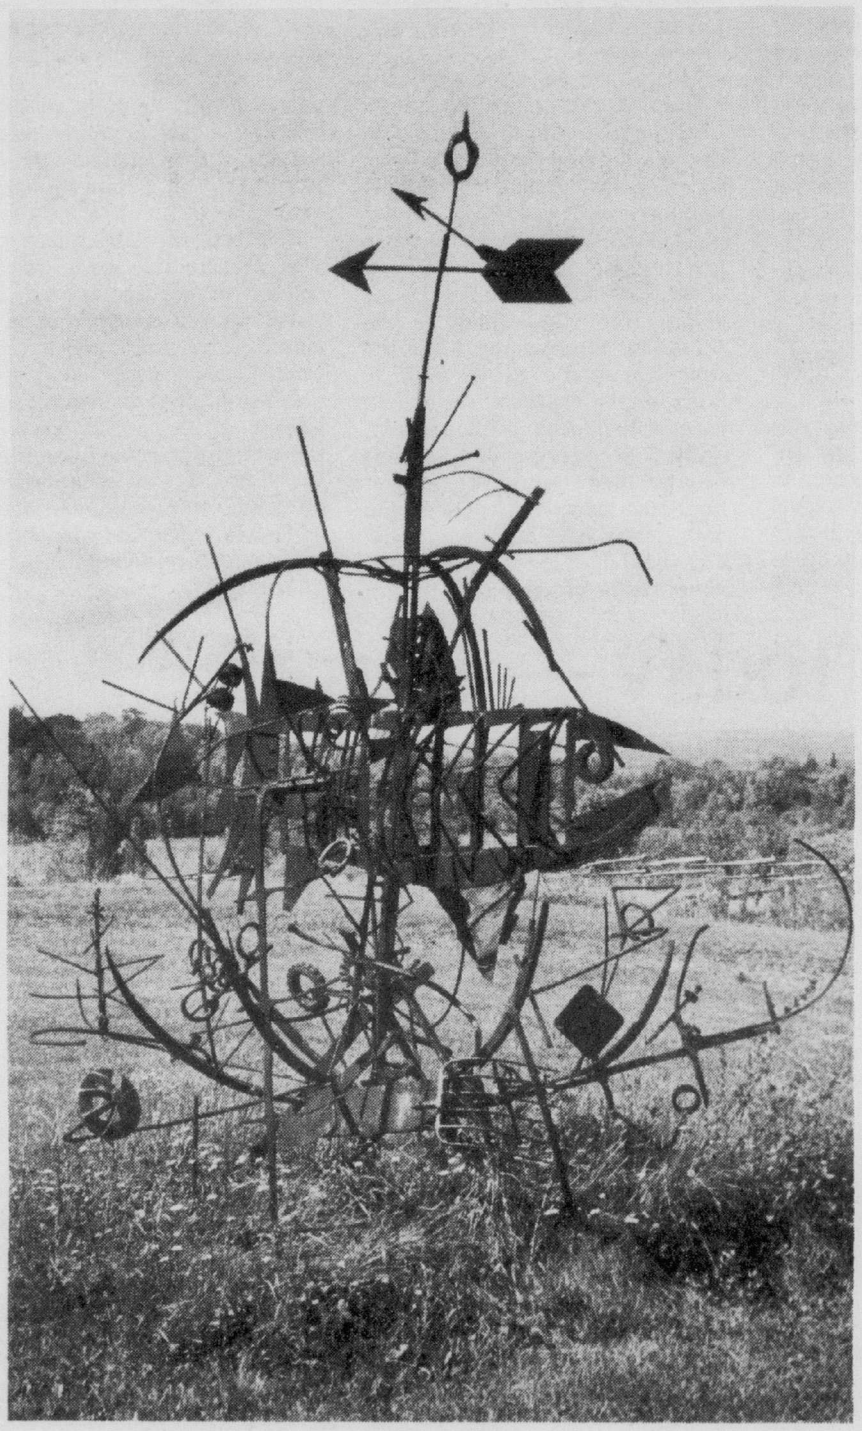
Pommery owners waste little time getting to business



By Carla Straessle

NORTH HATLEY — When Mariette and Jacques Campbell bought the Hay-Barn Gallery from Lowell Naeve last June, they wasted no time in re-opening it as an antiques and art gallery at the end of that month, calling it La Pommery.

Mariette said they scouted around the area approaching different artists. "We took some of their work on consignment, and bought some." To these pieces they added their own collection of Victorian furniture and Quebec pine antiques they bought from Serge Delisle, an antique dealer in North Hatley. They bought about one third of his inventory and took the rest on consignment.

In the spacious, airy barn which serves as the gallery, the first floor houses their present collection of porcelain, faience and some pottery as well as pieces in wood, both painted and natural, and some batik.

The Campbells are also gradually developing an apple farm as its name implies, something it never was in the past. They said the Naeves planted about 500 trees, but only about 15 of these are producing so far. They bought the Naeves' apple press with the farm, and go around to neighboring farms collecting rotten apples which they make into juice and sell on the second floor of the gallery.

The end of La Pommery's season will coincide with that of the apple season in late October, and in future, they will open the gallery in early June.

Mariette says they make sure the pieces they choose to sell at one time go well together. She added they are trying to slowly phase out pottery, which was the Naeve's big product and replace it with locally-produced porcelain. "Pottery is not so popular anymore. We sell a lot of porcelain. It's more delicate." Louis Desjardins of Bishopton makes their porcelain.

Other artists whose works may be seen at La Pommery are Gisela Kuepper of Lennoxville who has been doing batik for over 15 years; and Ailmut Thouin who makes wooden objects such as the hobby horse and hand-painted, Swiss-style children's

The Campbells say they get many of the Naeves' old customers who, they report, are surprised to see antiques for sale now. The Naeves had some, but they were mostly old pieces of farm equipment, according to Mariette.

Plans for next year's season include the integration of North Hatley's Galerie Menacine, run by Richard Gagnon into La Pommery. He will be given the bottom floor and they will hold a vernissage every 15 days, changing the artists at every interval.

The Campbells, formerly of Lennoxville, have made this new business a family effort. Sophie, 11 and Barbara, 12 helped out this summer in such ways as showing people around the gallery, their mother says. They all pick the apples together as well. Besides this new undertaking, Jacques Campbell is a dentist in Sherbrooke.

La Pommery will be open every day except Wednesdays, until the end of October. Its business hours are from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. For additional information, call La Pommery at 842-4321.

Schaap's Steinbrenner story as spare as hearsay

If the Bronx Bombers are to repeat their miraculous finish of 1978 — on September 2 the Yanks were 6½ games back of Boston, won 48 of their last 68 games, only to end in a tie with the Red Sox which was snapped by Bucky Dent's three-run homer, then on to Kansas City and an elimination of the Royals thanks to Mr. October and the vacuum cleaner at third base, Graig Nettles, demoralizing the Dodgers in the six-game series — they had better begin to justify their owner's faith in the move from home-run power to speed on the bases immediately.

For those who dote on the famous sports team, and for those inveterate Yankee haters, Dick Shaap's book presents little that is unknown to a close follower of the wire services since the ebullient, volatile Streinbrenner purchased the Yankees from CBS broadcasting for $10 million in cash on January 3, 1973.

One of the 12 purchasers, George M. Steinbrenner, quickly moved into control of the destiny of sport's most famous team, and Schaap's biography is more a plotting out of the Yankees' fortunes since 1973, than it is any kind of definitive biographical portrait of the controversial ship-builder.

Detail about Steinbrenner's youth, his college years at Culver Military Academy, in northern Indiana, and later at the prestigious Williams College in Massachusetts, reads as sparely as hearsay, which indeed appears to be Schaap's principal source of information. The writer has a decided prejudice against Steinbrenner, and certainly his portrait of the man on the sports fields, in shipping industry boardrooms, and most blatantly in his front office jockeying with the Yankees' publicity, is not an endearing character sketch.

The chief fault of Schaap's subtle indictment of Steinbrenner is that it is so poorly written — pastiches of sports column accounts of baseball anecdotes do not hold up as biography, no matter how convincingly retold they may be. Here, Schaap is not even successful in shedding any new light on the Billy Martin marshmallow salesman fiasco, the straw-that-stirs-the-drink declaration of Reggie Jackson, or Steinbrenner's slip from the gentlemanly ranks with his fisticuffs aboard an elevator in the Hyatt Wilshire Hotel in L.A.

The New York tempests of the past nine years are given chronological replay, but the central figure in the baseball drama, Steinbrenner, is painted as a boor, a liar (as Martin so comically declared when linking him with the unruly Jackson), a convicted felon (the Watergate conspiracy cast its wide net over the Cleveland ship-builder when he unwisely contributed to the C.R.E.E.P. fund of Tricky Dickie Nixon, contrary to the law), at the same time as he is revealed to be generous, kind, demanding, a workaholic who demands the same of his workers, and totally dedicated to the Yankee pursuit of excellence through winning.

His story would appear to be a controversial one, but it is really not fully exploited in Schaap's "Steinbrenner!". Yankee fans will have to turn to The Yankees: The Four Fabulous Eras of Baseball's Most Famous Team by Dave Anderson, Murray Chass, Robert Creamer and Harold Rosenthal (RANDOM HOUSE), 1980, for the kind of fascinating writing about the team that is not to be found in Dick Shaap's book.

Record Reviews

The Go Go's VACATION (A&M)

Although they had to break into the magic circle of mega-bucks in the big-time by virtue of touring in Britain with the Specials, L.A.'s The Go Go's have certainly attained the twin symbols of American pop supremacy – a 2 million-selling album and the coveted cover of the Rolling Stone. How to keep it going? Record an album of original material to try to prove that Fem-Rock has a solid spot in the Hot 100. But, unfortunately, aside from the novelty of hearing five ladies playing rock, once you have heard "We Got The Beat" or "Our Lips Are Sealed" from their debut album, the songs on VACATION sound monotonously similar.

The guitar playing is as fluid and adept as it was on "Wipe Out", or some of that vintage shlock, and the thin, albeit sincere, vocals prove how much some of the current music passing as punk-oriented and new-beat is a throwback to the fallow period between Elvis and Buddy Holly's heydays and the advent of the Beatles in '64. The Rolling Stones do not have to quiver in their chauvinistic boots at the mere mention of the all-girl Go Go's for a while yet.

Stray Cats BUILT FOR SPEED (EMI-AMERICA-CAPITOL) & THE BLASTERS (WARNER BROS-WEA)

The British fascination with the American phenomenon of rock meeting hillbilly has spawned entire movements in pop music -- the skiffle sensation that gave us Lonnie Donegan, and the later more celebrated rumblings on the shores of the Mersey, to name but two.

The Stray Cats are a trio of young Brits who look like a cross between the late punk craze and the visual counterparts of Brando and Elvis that were called "rocks" originally -- something to do with their headgear no doubt. But the Stray Cats, while presenting a rather bizarre visual side, reveal some of the most authentic rockabilly to be heard since Ersel Hickey unslung his guitar.

The slap bass, Gretsch Country Gentleman guitar licks and simulated Sun Records sound contrive to make the Stray Cats about as close to the authentic rockabilly hoots as anybody has never been. Brian Setzer plays some fine lead guitar, Lee Rocker slaps the bass and Slim Jim Phantom has all of the rhythmic beat of the American craze of the mid-50s. Under the production of Dave Edmunds, five of the 12 tunes are heads above the rest -- the remarkable aspect of this Stray Cats album is the fact that these songs, so rooted in nostalgia, were actually recorded in the 1980s by kids who were not even born when rockabilly was all the craze.

The American counterparts to the Stray Cats are the Blasters -- a quintet from Downey, California

Book's significance lost in a wave of words

THE POLITICS OF ECONOMIC MODERNIZATION IN THE SOVIET UNION

ERIK P. HOFFMANN AND ROBBIN F. LAIRD

Eric Hoffmann and Robbin Laird are both academics and as such tend to write in the rarified jargon of the professional scholar. Admittedly their book, The Politics of Economic Modernization in the Soviet Union, is not one that will be of interest to the average North American and was neither conceived nor written as such, yet the style of writing is pedantic to the extent that even those with an intense interest in the subject matter will have certain difficulty in finishing the book.

Essentially an attempt to explain the dichotemy of Soviet economic thought — the intellectual battle between conservative and modernizer — the book is loaded with economic and philosophical buzz words. The sentence structure, although containing a world of information, is also fraught with confusing constructions and unnecessarily long combinations of phrases.

For example, "Is the primary intent and effect of these efforts post facto justification (of the status quo or of change); or are the new conceptualizations of the STR (scientific-technological revolution), developed socialism, and the scientific management of society entering significantly into the practical ideology of Soviet leaders (and perhaps into 'grand' ideology, too), thus reinforcing or reshaping Soviet officials' political motivations, calculations, and perhaps perceptions of situations and options, and truly serving as 'a guide to action'?"

Compared to two earlier releases by the Cornell press, Lenczowski's Soviet Perceptions of U.S. Foreign Policy and Hahn's Postwar Soviet Politics: The Fall of Zhdanov and the Defeat of Modernization, this joint effort is intellectually cumbersome and unwieldy.

What comes out of the book is a foggy look at an extremely important development in Soviet society — a development that will most assuredly take on added significance with the death of Leonid Brezhnev.

Not only is there presently a conflict between economic conservatives who look to a retrenchment of economic theory centring upon Soviet self-sufficiency and the modernizers who wish for increased economic co-operation with the capitalist west, but there is a tension within the system itself as witnessed by conflicting statements by Soviet ideologues.

Fathers of radio, soldiering featured in new Brome book

By Charles Bury

Yesterdays of Brome County, The Brome County Historical Society, Knowlton, Volume Five, edited and compiled by Marion L. Phelps and Leon J. Darrah.

The many Eastern Townships lovers of local history can look forward to many treats in this volume, fifth in the Brome County Historical Society series. It's easy reading, with "biographical sketches, folklore, history, poetry and family pictures" enough to keep buffs going all winter.

Among the local luminaries to fall under the society's limelight in this volume is Reginald Aubrey Fessenden, "Father of Radio", who was born in East Bolton in 1866 and grew into one of science's most prolific and important inventors, with more than 500 patents to his credit.

Fessenden's family was one of the first to settle in the Townships when Ebenezer Fessenden moved to Brome from Barre Mass. in 1804. Young Aubrey showed an interest in science — more particularly things electrical — and vied with Marconi in the early wireless sweepstakes. This book contains a fine precis of Fessenden's career and highlights the many troubles he had with early patent pirates, including The Westinghouse Corp.

A member of another famous Brome family is also given a good look. He's pioneer photographer Norman Edson. Edson's father Allan was a famous painter and a co-founder of the Royal Canadian Academy. But the younger Edson was more interested in technical things, turning his father's artist's eye to the camera. Several of his better-known photographs are included in the book, along with a brief summary of his life.

Volume Five also delves into some lesser-known aspects of the military history of Brome County. Did you know, for example, that from 1901 to 1904 the 79th Shefford and Brome Light Infantry Battalion was commanded by Lt. Col. J. Dinwiddle Bulman? And that at least one critic said the people of Brome were 'decidely unwarlike'? They couldn't have been that unwarlike, because: (although this is probably a rare, unfortunate typing error) the 79th "evolved into the 13th Scottish Light Dragons".

My only negative remark about this book, whose profits will help the Society with its operations, is the quality of the photographs. It varies from mediocre to terrible, with some exceptions. At least some of the fault for this belongs to the printers, Sherbrooke's Progressive Publications. But some of the modern-day pictures are just plain bad to start with.

But don't let a detail like that turn you off this book. It is the work of volunteers and they have done a fine job under the leadership of Marion Phelps, who is also the long-suffering curator of the Society's museum in Knowlton. If you want to find out more about the history of the Eastern Townships, this book should be on your list.

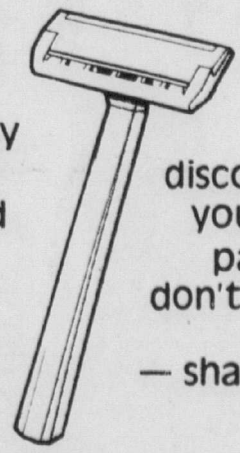
BIC SHOWS THAT ITS ONE BLADE SHAVES JUST AS CLOSE AS TRAC II, BUT FOR A LOT LESS MONEY!

In an independent test men shaved one side of their face with Trac II and the other side with BIC. Every other day they alternated razors.
Each day scientists measured whiskers with an electron microscope. Minutes after shaving, they saw no difference.



Even eight hours later, no difference. But the price? Big difference. Compare BIC and Trac II and you'll discover the big difference for yourself. Then consider. Why pay for a second blade you don't need when one BIC blade shaves you just as close — shave after shave after shave — for less.

Shave after shave after shave for less

WHAT'S ON

Theatre

Although the Piggery has shut its doors for the season, after another successful run, theatre lovers won't be completely deprived of dramatic entertainment in the coming months.

Centennial Theatre's cultural series begins the 1982-83 season with the English language premiere of BROUE, a tremendously successful Quebecois play about the goings on in a typical Montreal working-class tavern. The play offers an hilarious insight into some of the more down-to-earth aspects of Quebec society, and is peopled with quintessential low-life stereotypes. If the play is as funny in English as it was in French, this will be a must see. The play opens on Thursday Sept. 16, and runs until Saturday the 18th. The curtain rises at 8:30 p.m. and tickets are $10.

Movies

Cinema Capitol is sticking with Steven Spielberg's incredibly popular E.T.- The Extraterrestrial for the sixth week. If you haven't seen this one yet, you still can. Its about a delightful little critter's attempts to get back home after being stranded on Earth, and the help he gets from a little earthling. Too cute for words. Newport drive-in is also showing this modern-day fairy tale.

The Derby-Port Drive-In will be continuing with Kenny Roger's SIX PACK tonight and tomorrow. The story of a racing driver who receives some dubious aid from a gang of youngsters, Six Pack is made for all.

Sunday, the drive-in will host SCAVENGER HUNT, a wacky off-the-wall effort starring a host of comics including Richard Benjamin, Tony Randall, Robert Morley, Ruth Gordon and Cloris Leachman. It's not the best movie in the world but there are lots of laughs and some genuinely hilarious moments.

The rest of the week Derby-Port will feature Clint Eastwood in FIREFOX. Even the most adamant Eastwood fans, myself included, will have a hard time appreciating this one. The plot has potential, but that's about all.

The Cowansville Cinema will be showing two movies this week starting this evening. Unfortunately the telephone recording is less than clear, so the only one I'm sure of is Steven Spielberg's POLTERGEIST. This should be enough however, since Poltergeist is one of the best horror-suspense films I've seen in a long time.

For those of you not familiar with the term, a poltergeist, at least Spielberg's version, is a departed spirit who hasn't quite made it to heaven or hell but lingers around, creating considerable havoc. The havoc is greatly increased by the forces of darkness, which are intent on keeping the souls for the other side.

Things really get complicated when the youngest child of the couple who own the house, inhabited by the Poltergeist, is literally stolen by the forces of evil. The family's efforts to regain their child and the hair raising finale are enough to keep even the most avid horror fan rooted to his seat.

The hit musical Billy Bishop Goes to War airs on CBC TV Sunday at 8 p.m. The 90-minute TV adaptation of this award-winning production stars co-author Eric Peterson as Billy Bishop and author-composer John Gray.

Television

CBC has a varied assortment of offerings this week, starting on Sunday at 2 p.m. with JAMES BAY POWER PROJECT — SPECIAL REPORT. a one-hour documentary shot during the construction of the $15.1 billion mega-project. The show, filmed by Quebec filmmaker Francois Floquet, focuses largely on the workers themselves as they struggle to build what many have called a modern-day wonder of the world. Just the size of the project should be enough to impress those who aren't overly familiar with the gigantic installation. This show was first broadcast in 1979 for the official opening of the project.

Also on Sunday, at 8 p.m. CBC is presenting BILLY BISHOP GOES TO WAR. This is a television adaptation of the immensely successful play by Canadian author-composer John Gray. Locals should remember this show from when it played at Centennial theatre a few years back. The show stars the original duo of Gray and actor Eric Peterson.

Monday night at 8 will be a special live broadcast of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra from their band new home in Roy Thomson Hall. This is the gala opening of the new hall, and the show will include interviews with audience members, many of whom will be the who's who of the Canadian Social and Cultural set. Music will include pieces by Francis Poulenc, William Walton and Ravel. Andrew Davis conducts.

On ETV Monday night Great Performances presents Frank Converse and Estelle Parsons in Frank O'Connor's GUESTS OF THE NATION about two Irish nationalists and their hostages, set in Ireland in 1921.

Animal lovers face a tough choice on Tuesday as CBC and ETV compete for the zoological ratings. At 8 on CBC the national network presents a special documentary on THE ELEPHANTS OF THAILAND. The documentary follows the history of the magnificent beast and shows how the animals are trained to work in the teak forests of Thailand and visits of two-day festival that annually attracts up to 400,000 people to witness the elephants play games and partake in dramatic displays which recall the elephant's days of glory as an instrument of war.

Radio

CBC's Rock and Roll Saturday Night presents the first of two broadcasts of singer JOAN ARMATRADING in concert at London's Hammersmith Odeon. Armatrading is like no other performer in music today, and for those who enjoy her music these shows should be a real treat. Broadcast time is 12:05, and the second show will be at the same time next Saturday.

Also, tomorrow's Saturday Afternoon at the Opera presents the Dallas Opera and their rendition of Verdi's ERNANI at 2:05 p.m. on the CBC.

At 7:05 on Saturday evening, CBC will be presenting A PORTRAIT OF THE PASERNAK FAMILY which will chronicle the early years in the life of the Nobel Prize winning Russian poet and novelist. Interviews with survivors of his family should provide unique insights into the heart and mind of this supremely talented writer, whose passion and lyricism made him one of Russia's most beloved (and by the state feared) writers.

CBC radio will also be covering the inaugural concert at Toronto's brand new Roy Thomson Hall at 9 p.m. Monday. The concert features the TORONTO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA and the TORONTO MENDELSSOHN CHOIR.

On Monday at 8:04 the CBC begins a four-part repeat broadcast of a series on German-Jewish political scientist and philosopher Hannah Arendt. Best known for her massive THE ORIGINS OF TOTALITARIANISM, Arendt was an outspoken critic of totalitarian rule as well as a controversial critic of Jewish affairs. The first episode of the series, which continues until Thursday, deals with Arendt's treatment of Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichman, about whom she wrote a book that caused much controversy and which led many to label her a Jewish anti-semite.

Music

The Noranda Heritage Concerts will bring the ORCHESTRE SYMPHONIQUE DE QUEBEC to Magog's St-Patrice Church, on Tuesday, September 14. Conducted by noted conductor James De Preist, the Noranda Concerts are designed to bring classical music to those communities that, due to economy or geography rarely have a chance to see live symphonic music. Sponsored by the Noranda Mines Group, the concerts also help raise funds for music scholarships for Quebec students. The performance begins at 8 p.m.

WHAT'S ON

Manoir Waterville brings back the ever popular BIGFOOT this weekend, a band that never seems to fail to please its loyal fans. The place is usually jumping when they strike up their own brand of country-rock.

One must presume that l'Evidence, the night club in the LaSalle Hotel will be featuring a band this weekend, but as usual the staff at that hotel don't seem to be able to read their own posters as once again they were unable to tell me who will be playing. This is frustrating, and a shame, because l'Evidence is becoming one of Sherbrooke's most popular music spots, and frequently provides excellent entertainment. They need some help in the publicity department, though.

Chez Rene will be presenting MIGHTY POPE, an eight-man funk band, which does most of its gigging in the Toronto area and the Northern U.S. As usual, Chez Rene's show runs from Monday to Wednesday, and there is no cover charge.

Events

After having completed another most successful season, The Piggery will be holding its annual auction show tomorrow beginning at 10 a.m. and running on all day. Included in this major fund-raising event will be antiques, furniture, appliances and all kinds of goodies to tempt the dollars from your pocket. There will also be crafts featuring the works of Almut Thouin and the quilts of the Wintle sisters. The Piggery will be providing day-care service for the children so you can enjoy the auction at leisure. Refreshments will be served all day in the completely licenced premises, so it sounds like this could be a good way to spend an early fall afternoon.

The Piggery will also present a concert by internationally-known pianist Didier Koromonorsky, tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. Koromonorsky begins a North American tour with this, his first North American appearance. Ticket price is $10 and the proceeds will go to help cover costs for renovations required by the government.

Koromonorsky will perform music by Liszt, Beethoven and Chopin as well as his own compositions.

Exhibitions

ARTS SUTTON presents its first show of the season with the works of Amanda Hale of Toronto; A.D. McDermott of Montreal and Myriam Bardoul-Plomteux of Cowansville. Hale, a playwright, has branched out from dramatic art to visual art. She brings her watercolors, acrylics and pastel drawings from her recent trip to Egypt and India., She has previously shown in England and in Toronto.

Returning, are the popular works of A.D. McDermott, who was born and trained in Ireland. His work was first seen in Canada in 1940 and has expanded from watercolor to other media such as acrylics, pastels and collage. He has shown around Montreal and has been part of several group shows at Arts-Sutton.

Bardoul-Plomteux's batik paintings are inspired by nature. The exhibition opens September 11 and continues September 12 and 18, 19. The gallery is located at 7 Academy in Sutton.

For further information call R. Price at (514) 243-5980.

Miss Piggy, the femme fatale of the Muppet world, kicks off CBC-TV's fall entertainment season headlining her own singing and dancing special, Friday September 17 at 8 p.m. Guest starring with Miss Piggy, the undisputed love goddess of the world, are John Ritter, Las Vegas dancer Tony Clifton and special guest star, George Hamilton. Miss Piggy's Muppet Show friends will be on hand too, including Kermit The Frog, Fozzie Bear, The Great Gonzo and Beaker.

Kay Kinsman and Perry Beaton will be opening an exhibition this evening at the Galeries Arts Lennoxville entitled Lennoxville Scenes. The display, which will run until October 3, will feature the works of local artist Kinsman and photographer Beaton, as they capture some of the essence of the town and surrounding countryside with camera and brush.

The gallery is open for viewing Thursday to Sunday from 12:00 until 5 p.m.

The Laurier Museum of Arthabaska's exhibit by HELENE LABRIE will run to September 12. More than 30 works by Labrie, who describes herself as a "humorous ceramist" will be on display, and viewers can look forward to top notch ceramic sculpture. The museum is open from 9 a.m. till noon, and 1:30 'till 5 p.m. Tuesday to Friday, and from 1:30 till 5:00 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Montreal's McCord Museum is presently running three different exhibitions that might be of interest to anyone spending time in Montreal during the next two months.

First there is a display entitled PIECES OF PICTURES which features works from the Notman Photographic Archives. During the 19th century it was common for patrons to use a variety of viewing aids to magnify the detail in the photographs they were examining. The present exhibit includes 18 contact sheets from Notman's work with accompanying blowups of minute portions of the glass negatives. Also included are a variety of the abovementioned viewing aids.

The McCord will also be presenting a display from now until December of ACADIAN HOOKED RUGS. Seventeen of the rugs, all by 81-year-old Catherine Poirier, depict landscapes and seascapes from her native Cape Breton village of Cheticamp.

Finally, until September 12, the McCord Museum will be hosting an exhibit from the Royal Ontario Museum of paintings and sketches depicting the war of 1812. The drawings, many of which were created by veterans of the many campaigns, give an interesting and often illuminating account of the events and people involved in the last war fought on Canadian soil.

Times are tough, money is tight, but there is a light at the end of the tunnel, and that light is Mary Bellows, host of the new CBC-TV series Do it for Yourself. Weekdays at 4 p.m. Bellows will show how to do your own home repairs.

SoapWorld

By Connie Passalacqua

Vacation months are crucial to all those involved in the soap opera industry. Viewership reaches its peak during the warm weather and in search of high Neilsen ratings, all soaps feature their most scintillating story lines and performers in this timespan.

Now that Labor Day has passed, it's time to appraise which soaps were hot — and those that were not.

The love story has always been the soap opera staple, and most often the best love stories are between characters who have "chemistry." On "General Hospital," Luke Spencer (Tony Geary) was initially matched with Jackie Templeton (Demi Moore) after the death of his beloved wife Laura last winter.

Diehard "GH" fans didn't cotton to the abrasive Jackie,so the show's producer, Gloria Monty, shrewdly brought a new woman into Luke's life this summer. It was clear Holly Sutton (played by Emma Samms, a British actress who resembles a young Elizabeth Taylor) was just the right match for Luke. Accordingly, "GH's" summer went swimmingly.

"All My Children" caught up with the No. 1-rated "GH" this summer at one point and had the quality material to make it one of summer's best bets. The comedy-tinged affairs between Opal Gardner (Dorothy Lyman) and Langley Wallingford (Louis Edmonds) and former spouses Palmer and Daisy Cortlandt (James Mitchell and Gillian Spencer) were lightheartedly entertaining.

Unfortunately, both "Days of Our Lives" and "Guiding Light" both fumbled badly. Both have couples with electrifying chemistry, but both failed to provide them with suitable summer story material. On "DOOL," Marlena Evans (Deidre Hall) and Roman Brady (Wayne Northrop) had the chemistry that flooded the studio with fan mail.

Their summer storyline, which had Roman's supposedly dead wife reappearing with a daughter he never knew they had, was nothing more than a hackneyed soap device. On "GL," the archaeological dig attended by Quint McCord (Michael Tylo) and Nola Reardon (Lisa Brown) turned out to be a big bore, wasting the talents of both actors.
