DESIRABLE LAKE PARK PROPERTY FOR SALE

I desire to dispose of my summer home at Twin Pine Point, Lake Park. This property consists of two large and one small cottage. All are practically new and up-to-date in every particular. They are in an ideal location, having beautiful surroundings and the outlook from either direction is simply magnificent. There is a beautiful beach for bathing, being sufficiently shallow to be safe for children. The arrangement of the interior of the buildings is all that can be desired by any one, the finish being such as a home in town would be expected to have. There is a good, convenient stable, fuel house, ice house and a very commodious boat house. There is a good, well graded and cared for State Road to this property, making it very accessible. There is no more desirable summer home on the Lake Shore.

BENJAMIN P. BALL, Owner, Derby Line, Vt.
P. S. This property is all in Vermont.

Elder Harry D. and Mrs. Selby were in town Friday en route to their home at North Hyde Park, Vt. While engaged in the active ministry Elder Selby was for a time stationed at that place. The marriage took place May 22nd, and since that date Mr. and Mrs. Selby have been visiting relatives in this vicinity, in addition to attending the camp meeting at Beebe. The JOURNAL extends congratulations.

During a discussion of the sewerage problem Friday morning the JOURNAL was told that the deeds of land from Mr. Holmes to Messrs. Parsons and Stevens gave the purchasers the right to dump their sewerage in the "Kilburn pasture" west of the village. Several buildings are going up on the land in question. Building lots are being sold off, and if all deeds should contain the same privilege as the deeds to Messrs. Parsons and Stevens what an indescribable mire of filth the "Kilburn pasture" might become. The land is of a swampy nature, the soil being unsuited to receive sewerage. If the public has any rights it is about time they were asserted. There are already too many danger spots in the corporation.

Miss Katherine Reed Foster, daughter of United States Consul General John G. Foster, Ottawa, has accepted a position as head of the French and English Departments at Las Encinas, The Foothill School, Los Angeles, California. Miss Foster specialized in French and English while at Vassar and further prepared herself in the use of the French language by a winter's study in Paris. She is therefore eminently fitted for the work which she will enter upon this fall. Her many friends here wish her success.

The agricultural department of Vermont has just issued an important bulletin on the hemlock of log rules. It is from the pen of Austin J. Hawes, state Forester. Mr. Harry N. Atwood, the aviator, was in town Tuesday noon, taking dinner at the Derby Line hotel. He was en route from Sherbrooke to Weirs, N. H. The fourth of July he was at Colbrook, N. H., and gave an exhibition. He was trailing his biplane behind a 60-horse power American automobile. The biplane was resting on two auto wheels on a steel axle made for the purpose, and attached to the auto by means of a long wooden tongue, making the whole outfit about 65 feet in length, requiring care to make many of the sharp turns in our country roads. Mr. Atwood talked very freely of his experience, and was a very interesting and courteous gentleman. His biplane was of the Wright type, but was built by the Burgess-Curtis concern at Marblehead, Mass. The motor was of four cylinder type, 35 horse power, and weighed 190 pounds, air cooled. The two planes were 40 feet long and five feet wide, the complete outfit weighed 1,350 pounds. His assistant, Mr. Frank Lawson, was traveling with him. They went via Charleston, Willoughby and St. Johnsbury, going from there through the Profile Notch to Plymouth and Weirs, where he gave an exhibition on Wednesday. A large number examined the machine during the hour it stood in front of the hotel.

Boating, fishing and outdoor games made happy the young picnicers. At noon a tempting lunch was served, after which, a ride on the "Yooco" was enjoyed by all. Thanks are due Mr. and Mrs. Audinwood for their hospitality, also those who furnished automobiles for transportation.

NEWPORTS VS. FRONTIERS.

Again the Newporters came to defeat the Frontiers, and it was so different, the former decision was reversed very emphatically. The visitors caught a merit card in the first inning, but the locals went to bat and pocketed three scores. The Newporters made it two in the second, and it was "nip and tuck," 3 and 2 nothing doing in the third and everybody thought it a good game to gaze upon and "root" about. In the fourth the Frontiers advanced their scores to 7 and the skies became overcast, the mixture running through the Newport's magneto caused skipping and the motor lagged, in the fifth the Frontiers scalped two more, and in the sixth it was as calm as a summer sea, not a sail flapped; in the seventh the Tomifobia indians picked another peach from the Lake Bridgers and the score was 10 to 2, the breach was widening. The eighth was a loose, anxious inning, for the Newporters scored four and they were half a dozen on the half shell, yelling like Comanches, but our boys changed to high and made the hill on full speed catching on to 6 scores and they were 16. It removed all the sand from the visitors, their sun set with their score in "red ink." The attendance was the largest of the season and the weather ideal. Lackey played his best, the whole team were out to win—10 games and only one lost. The line up:

BUILDING OR SEWERAGE?

As the result of a peculiar misconception of the corporation's taxable resources, the withdrawal of by-law No. 46 of the municipality of Rock Island becomes necessary.

This by-law was planned for the purpose of raising funds to pay off the floating debt and erect a municipal building. When the by-law was framed the council seems to have been of the opinion that the total taxable valuation of the corporation was over $78,000.00 less than it really is. According to the 1911 statement the estimated taxable valuation was $207,090.00; non-taxable $78,400.00, making a total of $285,490.00. Without examining the matter closely the first figures were taken as the aggregate amount, the second figures being deducted therefrom, after which the year's increase of about $40,000.00 was added. The amount thus obtained was approximately $188,690.00, and in arranging the by-law upon that basis the special assessment was fixed at ten mills on the dollar.

In reality, however, the total taxable valuation at the present time is not far from $247,000.00. When this fact became known, after the publication of the by-law, it was realized that an assessment of considerably less than ten mills would suffice, hence the by-law is being revised and will again be considered at a special meeting of the council in the near future.

It is now understood that the special assessment is likely to be fixed at six mills on the dollar.

During the past week some objection has been raised to the by-law by those who believe that a municipal building is not a serious necessity and that a sewerage system is. During the past year or two there has been considerable talk of a complete sewerage system under municipal ownership. Competent engineers were brought here from Montreal, surveys were made and plans prepared at considerable expense. But at that point the matter was dropped. The opinion seems to have been that the ratepayers would not sanction the expenditure of so large a sum on sewers, yet the amount was not materially different from that which it is proposed to put into a municipal building. There are those who think that the sewerage question is of paramount importance and that it should take precedence over the municipal building. In opposition to this supporters of the building project argue that most of the village has been provided with sewerage facilities at private expense, and that it would be unfair to tax people residing in such sections for the benefit of those less fortunately situated. In further support of the building scheme they say that the present fire station and lockup are unsuited to the requirements of the village. These assertions are met by the claim that a small outlay would make the old buildings answer their purpose for several years, and that everyone is interested in a general sewerage system because the health and lives of all might be endangered by an outbreak of disease in some section not provided for.

If we ask ourselves—which would be of the greater good to the greater number of people, which would be the more valuable public asset, a complete sewerage system or a nice municipal building?—we must in all candor decide in favor of the former. We would like both, but if we can have but one, give us a sewerage system.

Later—After the above article was put into type, the council, at a special meeting, Tuesday night, passed a new by-law, substantially the same as the old one, with the exception that the special assessment is fixed at six mills on the dollar.

THE JOURNAL'S FRIENDS.

Mrs. Frank Milotte, Woodsville, N. H., writes: "I am inclosing money order to pay for another year's subscription to the Stanstead Journal. I find I could not get on without the home news."

Just a few Observations from Georgeville-on-the-Lake.

As the good old summer time brings round again the glad holidays which make our water front so gay with the city people, we find that motor boats have now become their chief amusement and they seem to vie with each other to see who will bring out the finest equipment in that line. It is worth one's while to sit upon the dock and watch these beautiful craft glide in and out. The twenty mile boat has now become no uncommon thing—Georgeville has contributed its quota of fine boats this season. The builders are Mr. Jas. E. Davidson and Mr. D. A. Bullock. Our village is unusually lively this season with a superior lot of visitors. The tide is changing and the village of Georgeville and its lovely Lake are being known for what they are.

We see erected upon Mr. Wm. Rediker's grounds a fine flagstaff, upon which floats the glorious colors of our grand old nation. Mr. Rediker has lately been appointed Customs and Emigration Officer for the port of Georgeville by the present Borden government—a good choice for a "Conservative."

We now have a resident physician in the person of Dr. King, who brings his family here to reside.

Mr. John B. Pearce is putting his village property in thorough repair and he contemplates buying more here—so again the village is getting a boost.

The merchants report trade much better than usual and the large boats are always loaded with people and freight.

There are many deer swimming about the lake this summer—the probable result of intense heat.

THE TEMPERANCE LAUGH.

(Canadian Courier.)

Temperance people in Ontario are laughing at Mr. Rowell and Sir James Whitney. Mr. Rowell's "abolish the bar" has been accepted and so has Sir James Whitney's "abolish treating." The former is taken somewhat seriously, the latter with a shrug and a smile. For the time being, the Temperance people have both the leaders in tow.

"Years ago," says Secretary Spence of the Provincial Temperance Alliance, "the temperance people adopted three cardinal principles: (1) banish the bar; (2) do away with drinking in clubs; (3) abolish the treating system. Mr. Rowell takes the first two and Sir James Whitney grabs the third. It looks to me as though I'm out of a job."

This is good. It indicates that the temperance people know that Mr. Rowell and Sir James are simply playing politics. They will use these clever politicians as far as it suits the temperance purpose and then forget them. Mr. Rowell has little to lose in the mix-up; Sir James has much.

Sweeney hall to let. Enquire of Gilbert Suddard.

SHOP AND WATER POWER FOR SALE

We have vacated our wood shop in the Foundry Hill, moving to our new wood shop near our Canadian factory, and the old shop is for sale. There is 12 feet head and 38 horse power, and this property carries its prorata proportion of the canal improvement. Its location and water power makes it a very desirable property. The price at which we are offering it is low, taking into consideration the present activity of the realty market in our villages.

Sermons in Strawberry Shortcake.

[Hardwick Gazette.]

Superintendent Lovell of the state's prison at Windsor has under cultivation in the prison garden a strawberry patch from which he expects to get about 25 bushels of berries, all of which will be used for the prison inmates. The world in general and penal institutions in particular move on and instead of a dungeon with bread and water we have the modern prison with now and then a strawberry shortcake on the bill of fare. The Vermont Journal truthfully says: "Acts of this kind on the part of the superintendent show that he understands that people in confinement need now and then something extra for keeping them in good condition physically and mentally. The purpose of a penal institution is for discipline and not for revenge, and it seems good to think that here in Vermont we have an institution that plans to build up the inmates instead of sending them back into the commonwealth in worse condition than they were received."

"In short, if you want to show a true appreciation of what sensible Christianity is, help the people who have fallen."

The shortcakes have been made and eaten, as shown by later reports and the state through the warden of its prison preaches by example the gospel of the sermon on the mount, overcoming evil with good, even turning the other cheek and giving the cloak. This warden is learning that he is his brother's keeper in the higher sense.—Ed.

AYER'S CLIFF.

Received too late for last week.

Through the careless writing of your correspondent, or several errors occurred in last week's items, among them that the Dominion Day celebration should read, netting the Ayer's Cliff Band (instead of Bank) under whose auspices the arrangements were made, &c. Farther on, representing instead of respecting the different industries of our village, and the numbers on the fair ground suggested annual fair, instead of the members of the fair ground. But let us overlook most anything these hot, sticky days with the thermometer ranging from 90° to 100° in the shade. THE AUSTRALIAN BLACK.

Stories of Ill-Treatment by Whites Denied.

Statements have been published from time to time both in Australia and the Mother Country containing sweeping allegations of ill-treatment of the aborigines by white men resident in the outlying parts of the Commonwealth. The following statement on this question is made in The Sydney Morning Herald by two of the pioneer pastoralists of Northwestern Australia—Mr. F. B. Wittenoom and Mr. Stracker. They characterize such allegations as both untrue and unjust. "There may in the past have been isolated instances of cruelty, just as there are anywhere else," Mr. Wittenoom said; "but if, because I saw a drunken man beating his wife in Sydney, I were to go away and say that here all men get drunk and beat their wives, what would you think of me? Just the same as I think of those people who tell these stories about us because they have seen or heard of some one up in our part who may have treated the blacks badly."

Mr. Stracker remarked that in the Kimberley district of Western Australia there were immense tracts empty and adapted for grazing, but they had never been taken up, solely because the blacks were so troublesome. They were so pestered by the Government nowadays that there was no doing anything with them. In his district (Roebourne) they had not the same trouble, owing to the fact that the stations had, as he put it, absorbed and utilized them. It had often been said that the whites had killed off the native game, and so forced the blacks to spear stock in order to provide themselves with food. That was entirely wrong. There were more kangaroos, emus, and other game about to-day than ever. He accounted for that by the fact that the blacks had to a large extent given up hunting, preferring the food they got at the stations, and because the settlers had waged a war of extermination against dingoes, the natural enemy of the native game. The blacks were dying off in the northwest as in other parts, the decrease being most marked where goldfields had been opened up, disease then becoming rife among them.

Mr. Wittenoom said that it cost him a large amount of money to provide for the blacks on his properties. On his main station he fed 48 blacks daily, old men, young men, girls, and children, and of that number only about ten were required to do any work. It was quite a mistake to suppose that a station-owner got cheap labor by utilizing the blacks. In order to keep one good boy, a station-owner had to keep all his relatives as well. They were not paid in money, because money would be of no use to them, but they got all they required, and little luxuries they appreciated.

In his latest annual report the chief protector of aborigines in Western Australia, says: "During the year I made a lengthy visit throughout the East and West Kimberleys. I went very carefully into the native question in all its many phases. I traveled over about 2,000 miles of the country, and I am pleased to report that the general conditions existing between black and white are, with the exception of deprecatory comments among the herdsmen of cattle by bush natives, on the whole satisfactory. Reports have been received from all parts of the state, and it is pleasing to note that the general tone of the reports confirm my own observations."

Lucky Speculation.

A certain citizen of Montrose, it is said, wrote to his agent in London to purchase a ton of copper for him; but the letter being one of the very worst specimens of penmanship, as well as perhaps not very correct in point of orthography, the agent read the order "a ton of capers." Surprised at such an order, but nevertheless anxious to oblige his correspondent, he immediately set to work, and bought up the commodity in all quarters till he had the requisite amount. This, as may be imagined, was attended with the very natural effect of creating a demand for capers (in the language of the trade, capers came to be inquired after), and also of rendering them scarce, so that they in consequence rose very much in price. The agent now wrote his correspondent that he had had great difficulty in fulfilling his order, but at last had succeeded in procuring for him a ton of capers; but that capers had risen very much in price, and if he chose to sell he had now an opportunity of realizing a handsome gain on the transaction.

The Montrose citizen, as might be expected, was very much astonished in his turn by the communication, and the manner in which his order had been fulfilled, but had the good sense to write immediately to sell by all means; and thus, it is added, pocketed a considerable sum from an unintentional speculation and unexpected advantage.

Too Enthusiastic Gardener.

The beautiful green house of Mr. William Charleston, at Ormiston road, Shepherd's Bush, England, has been the envy of his neighbors owing to the number of rare and early plants in it. The owner was regarded as an enthusiastic horticulturist. Watch was being kept in No. 7 greenhouse at Kew a few days ago, because plants had been missed, and Charleston was discovered cutting a slip from a plant. When he was searched his waistcoat was found to be lined with small tins containing water for the purpose, it is alleged, of carrying away stolen cuttings. A detective who visited his house, found his green house full of plants, which was identified as belonging to Kew. The man was fined 25s.

THE BALL SUBDIVISION

This beautiful property is now ready for sale. It has been carefully plotted and over 200 Maple and Spruce trees planted. Phelps Avenue has been graded to the property on its Canadian side, and Caswell Avenue has been graded and graveled to the property on its Vermont side. The location of this property is about ideal for residential purposes, being very accessible from either of the Villages, and it has lots located on either side of the Boundary Line, and two, numbers 11 and 12 are bisected by the line. The price is very reasonable for this kind of property and it will doubtless sell readily because of its desirability.

THE ELECTRIC CONTRACT.

As has been pointed out on many occasions the contract between the Sherbrooke Railway & Power Co. and the local municipalities, made last year, distinctly states that "The present rates are to be continued," but evidence which goes to show that the company has no idea of carrying out that provision, except so far as it is advantageous to itself to do so, continues to accumulate.

CARD OF THANKS.

OBITUARY.

The entire community was saddened by the news of the death of Mrs. Aaron Chamberlain, which took place at her home here Tuesday, July 9th, 1912.

Deceased had not been in her usual health for some time, but her condition was not considered dangerous until about seven weeks ago. She was surrounded by loving hands, but no earthly help could save her. She patiently bore her suffering and to the last was ever considerate of those about her. No one except the immediate relatives, however, knew that the end was so near and her early death came as a cruel shock to her many friends.

Mrs. Chamberlain, whose maiden name was Ella Glidden, was the daughter of the late Noah Glidden, and was born near Libbytown, February 29th, 1852.

She was married in 1873 to Mr. Chamberlain and this union was blessed with five children, four of whom survive her. She was a member of the Methodist Church and by example and precept ever held high the standard of the Master. Possessed as she was, of a happy disposition, her kindly smile, word and deed will be sadly missed, not only by her family, but by a wide circle of relatives and friends.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, Aaron Chamberlain, four children, Fred Chamberlain, lately of San Francisco, Cal.; George Chamberlain, of Lynn, Mass.; Agnes Chamberlain and Wright Chamberlain; her step-mother, Mrs. R. D. Glidden, Brooklyn, N. Y.; two sisters, Mrs. W. H. Jones, of Brown's Hill; Mrs. M. P. Chattin, of Brooklyn; three brothers, Messrs. W. L. Glidden, Flatbush, N. Y.; Orrin Glidden, Hatley; C. K. Glidden, Compton; and a half-brother E. K. Glidden, Vermillion, Alta.

The funeral was held from the residence on Friday, July 12th, and the large gathering testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held as well as to the universal sympathy felt for the bereaved family.

The floral tributes were beautiful and included a pillow from the children; cut flowers, Mrs. Jennie Taylor; pillow, Mrs. Wm. Patterson; broken cross, Mrs. W. Abbott; wreath and pillow from the friends at Maple Hill Camp; cross, Mrs. Douglas Wells, besides several lovely bouquets.

The interment took place in the Pine Hill Cemetery, Magog, the bearers being the three sons of the deceased and her brother, Mr. C. K. Glidden.

"Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting
The soul that rises with us, our life's star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,
And cometh from afar.
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home."

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.
Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed. "Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.
Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation.

THE HORSEMAN.
During the last ten years with the growth in the use of the automobile the price of horses has increased 75 per cent.
Nothing will use a horse up more quickly than to be fed along on musty hay. Grain of any kind that is partly moldy will have the same effect.
"No foot, no horse." It won't take long for an ignorant shoer to ruin the best foot.
Don't let a bungler shoe your horse. Go to the intelligent shoer who knows how if you have to drive ten miles or more.
A stumbling habit may be caused by poor shoeing or it may be caused by ignorant or careless hitching. Too tight checking is often the cause. Sometimes a harsh bit with a tight check rein will destroy the balance, and the horse is liable to fall.
A blockish built mare with a large barrel on short legs is likely to produce a better foal than the tall, leggy kind.

SHEEP MANAGEMENT.
Mistakes In Handling the Flock That Tend to Cut Profits.
In the management of a flock of sheep there are several mistakes usually made, among which may be mentioned, first, the temptation to turn them out too early in the spring with the thought of saving feed, says W. H. Underwood. If they are turned on the regular pasture they will get the start of it and fall to obtain the sustenance they should from it the rest of the season, whereas if it had been allowed to get a sufficient start it would served them much better later in the season.
If the pasture is a field to be plowed I feel quite sure the extra vegetable matter that would be turned under if left, rather than to have it pastured off, is worth much more to the land than to the sheep. In any event, this soft, watery grass, while relished by the sheep, has little nourishment in it. It fills, but does not feed. The animals will get to scouring and lose flesh, while it will take more and better feed to put them back in good condition.
Another mistake is to shear the sheep, as the custom was, in June. By all means shear before they go to pasture. If they are put on grass with the wool on, the looseness of the bowels, always following a change from dry to green feed, will soil much of their wool about the hinder parts, which is a loss, for it will cost as much to wash it out as it will bring.
The old talk about the gain from accumulation of oil in warm weather is nonsense. If the weather is at all wet the rains will wash out more oil than will accumulate twice over, to say nothing about the discomfort of the sheep with its heavy fleece in the hot days.

A third mistake is to leave the young rams uncastrated and lambs with their tails on. In removing the tail place it on a hardwood block, shove the skin toward the rump and sever it with a sharp two inch chisel. The skin will cover the bone, and it will heal quickly. If a knife is used with a drawing cut the bone will protrude, making an ugly wound. In all these operations it is very important that the knife or chisel be clean. By this I mean disinfected by dipping in carbolic acid, corrosive sublimate or, what I have used for years, sheep dip. A tool used for all sorts of things, loaded up with germs, is responsible for more bad "luck" following such operations than unskilled operators all put together.
Furthermore, every farmer should learn in his youth to perform all such operations. To see a man brought up on a farm running around to find some one to castrate his lambs or pigs or to tap an animal in case of blot, as well as to dress his sheep, hogs and bees, indicates, to my mind, one who is not thoroughly posted in his business.

Selecting Breeding Swine.
In selecting breeding swine attention must be given to size, quality, strength of bone, evenness of fleshing and the use of more mature boars and sows. All pigs intended for breeding purposes should be selected from well developed, mature sows. If the sires are mature animals, so much the better. These pigs should be fed on rations calculated to produce bone and muscle, not fat alone.

In Honor of John Cabot.
Halifax is preparing for a very interesting function, to take place in August next, when His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, will dedicate the tower now being erected above Halifax harbor in memory of the landing in Nova Scotia of John Cabot, that brave old navigator, who during the reign of King Henry VII. carried the flag of England to the New World, when it was almost as unknown as it was new. This was four hundred years ago, and the tower in Halifax will remind the people of Nova Scotia at how early a date their fair land came into the light of history.
Cabot sailed from Bristol, then certainly the third, and possibly the second, seaport in England. Long ago Bristol erected a monument to commemorate these exploits of the Cabots, and next August the Lord Mayor of Bristol, accompanied by other representative citizens, will come out to Halifax and take part in the dedication of Halifax's monument to Cabot. In commemorating the achievements of the brave old navigator, St. John's, Newfoundland, has first place so far as this side of the Atlantic is concerned. Several years ago it erected a Cabot tower on one of the hills overlooking the city and harbor, and from which can be had a magnificent view.
Lady Cops.
To have lady police officers patrolling some boats in Vancouver is the decision arrived at recently by that city's board of police commissioners, which authorized Chief Chamberlin to appoint two suitable members of the first sex to work in conjunction with the police force in maintaining law and order in the city.
It was explained by the police commissioners that the duties of the lady officers would be to keep a watchful eye on the movements of recalcitrant girls who were likely to fall into the clutches of the law. Men will not have a chance to be arrested by the lady constables, but it is possible that the male members of the force will be informed of many things that may have escaped their notice.

A SILVER SOLO.
Into our dreaming hearts were run The wild sweet wines of earth and sun.

Through hollowed ranks of osiers old We saw the northland marigold. And hailed the sudden sapphire flame When the first bluebird called and came.
A soon. O soon the winds shall bless Our slim leaf-shaken loveliness. O soon, O soon we call the hours Silver above a sward of flowers.

RECEIVING NEW CITIZENS.
Every Consideration Is Shown to the Incoming Stranger.
We hear a great deal about Canada's efforts to get immigrants, but everyone seeking admission to the Dominion is not necessarily accepted. The Canadian is glad to welcome the new-comer, but he very properly requires that he shall be "desirable"; he has no intention of making his broad acres a dumping ground for other nations' outcasts.
Consequently, one of the duties of the immigration department is to examine the immigrants as they land, and suffer only those to proceed who satisfy certain requirements, of which the chief are that they be healthy, are going on farms, into domestic service, or into assured employment, and have a little money in their pocket, so that they are not likely through any mischance to become a public charge. The money qualification is waived in the case of farm hands and domestics going to assured situations, and of certain persons going to join a relative.
The examination of the shiploads of immigrants as they disembark at Quebec is one of the most instructive and poignant sights in the Dominion. The breaking of home ties and the departure for a strange land will ever form one of the most touching themes for the artist, whether of the pencil or the pen; and only second to it in interest is the landing on this side, when, after the discomforts of the long voyage, the little family looks with widely-opened eyes on the strange sights that abound, wonders what the new home will be like, and prepares for the tedious overland journey to the final destination. What a blending of hope and fear, of confidence and misgiving, of sick longing for the old friends, and eager curiosity concerning the new.
It is at such a critical juncture in the immigrant's career that a little kindness goes a long way. Hence it is one of the department's instructions to its agents to extend to the new arrivals all courtesy and consideration. Comfortable quarters are provided for their accommodation at the various stopping places en route, and all information is readily given to assist them in reaching the distant town or homestead to which they may be going.
In fact, a stranger in Canada need never fall of information and counsel. His own experience has made the Canadian sympathetic, and even a busy man will go far out of his way to direct a wayfarer to a difficult destination.

Of the various callings followed by the settlers, farming—either as laborers or as homesteaders—that is, farmers of their own free grant of land—claims by far the majority. This, according to the authorities, is as it should be. The Government does not encourage in any way the immigration of skilled laborers, mechanics, or artisans of any sort. Only farmers, farm laborers, and domestic servants are advised to go, and the Government publications strongly insist that all others should have definite engagements in Canada before leaving home, and have enough money to support them for a time in case of mishap.
In a letter from Captain Edmund Knox, written in November, 1809, he describes the Iron Duke's entry into Seville: "The mob took the horses from the carriage and drew him along. After a time a woman among them, quite six feet high, was not content with that, so she took his little lordship in her arms out of the carriage and carried him, kissing and hugging him all the time, to where the junks was assembled and put him down among them, saying she had brought them the savior of her country."

Strange Treasure.
Englishman Finds It Buried Under a Rock on His Ground.
For centuries the search for ancient treasure has been pursued in the glens and wild places of the Highlands of Scotland, and sometimes unexpected "finds" have been made. For instance, a tradition that a treasure was hidden at Inverary had long been handed down. According to the legend, it would never be found except by a stranger. Generation after generation of children searched for it. If a badger made a hole in the hillside the children believed that the badger had the scent, and dug up his burrow; but no young or old badger ever came forth with bangles on its neck or its nose. The children watched every rabbit scrape to see if animal or bird had been attracted by anything shining under the sod or in the sand.
Then drainage was introduced. Formerly the glen was too wet to be cultivated, except on dry slopes where water could not gather, and a hand plow did all the necessary furrowing. But now red tiles were put down to drain off water from flatter ground, and it was possible to sow in comparatively level places.
One pretty piece of grass land under a cliff was pointed out as a good bit for plowing. From the precipice above a great rock had fallen in long past ages. This had to be removed. The man at the plow was a stranger, an Englishman.
He put a bag of powder under the rock to blow it up. The explosion followed, the partly splintered rock heaved and fell on its side. Underneath where it had been was a gleam of lost treasure! There were three beautiful, heavy gold bracelets, two of which had cups at their ends. The treasure had been found, and by a "stranger," as prophesied.
Those bracelets were beautifully wrought; one of them had plain ends where the wrist was slipped through. As for the pair with the hollow cups, an old tradition was recalled which declared that no person who had committed a fault could be forgiven unless the cups of gold at the gap in the bracelets were filled with his penitential tears. There is just room for the nose, like the wrist, to slip in between the golden ends, and it is possible to hold the cups under the two eyes.
Sometimes ignorant men who have found such bracelets have looked on the gold as mere brass. In one case a number of bracelets found in an island of the Hebrides were used as drawer handles for an old pine chest of drawers. A pedlar came to the cottage, found that the old chest had very heavy handles, and gave 15 shillings, or $3.75 for it. He took it away and sold the old handles for twenty pounds each.
Such heavy ornaments as the bracelet must have been a burden to a Celtic beauty. For a warrior the gold was beaten out until it was thin, for then it was more portable and easily worked. Patterns of all kinds could be punched in it, so as to give a good effect in front. We can imagine how grand an old chief from Brittany or Wales or Ireland looked with a shining yellow hand on his conical helmet, a broad plate of gold on his right shoulder and on his left a long yellow mantle girt in by the belt itself.

Distinguished Assistance.
Dr. Jenkins, master of Balliol College, Oxford, one day slipped and fell in the street and lay where he had stumbled. Two undergraduates ran hotfoot to assist him, but those who watched saw them draw back, while the master continued genially kicking his treacherous legs in the air. Another man came along, and then the great one got up. This was the explanation: When the undergraduates were about to set him on his legs he was at first willing; but lo, a master of arts appeared in sight. Dignity must be preserved. "Stay, young men!" he said. "I will be assisted to my feet by a master of arts!" And he was.

Laws on Dress and Diet.
Britain's Parliament used at one time to say not only what a laborer should earn, but also what he should eat and drink. The statute of apparel, passed in 1363, regulated the diet of servants, artificers and tradesmen. They and their wives were further compelled to wear clothes of a certain low price with no gold, silver or embroidery. If they did not possess goods or chattels to the value of 40 shillings they were to wear only blanket or russet and girdles of linen. Other laws of a similar character were also passed. Most of them were repealed under James I., but the last was not expunged from the statute book till 1856.

The Dignified Duke.
In a letter from Captain Edmund Knox, written in November, 1809, he describes the Iron Duke's entry into Seville: "The mob took the horses from the carriage and drew him along. After a time a woman among them, quite six feet high, was not content with that, so she took his little lordship in her arms out of the carriage and carried him, kissing and hugging him all the time, to where the junks was assembled and put him down among them, saying she had brought them the savior of her country."
Henry VIII.'s Way.
King Henry VIII. had a good notion of passing bills proudly. Your head or my bill was his short way with dallying ministers. On one occasion he sought the dissolution of various monasteries and turned at delay. He sent for the influential Edward Montague. "Ho, man, will they not suffer my bill to pass?" he stormed. Montague bowed. "Get my bill passed by to-morrow," he continued, "or else to-morrow this head of yours will be off." And the Commons hesitated no longer.
Mountain High Tides.
Sir Robert Ball calculates that in early times our tides were over 600 feet high.

WILLING, BUT LAZY.
Peruvian Indians Work When They Are Coaxed With a Lariat.
An American whose business interests in Peru have led him from time to time to spend considerable periods in the interior of that country has found that the Indians of Peru are the laziest people in the world. If they have a duty to perform, a promise to keep or a debt to pay, though not unwilling to meet the obligation, they can, it is said, hardly summon resolution to do so without some assistance. During his stay at a place called Cajamarca, in the Cordillera, the American was enabled to witness an instance of this.
He was sitting one evening with his hosts at the door of their house. Suddenly there was a great noise in the quiet street, and a horseman rode up. It was a friend of the family, who was on his way to settle an account with a troublesome debtor. When the family hinted that a creditor would hardly be received at such an hour the man touched something hanging on the pommel of his saddle and said that he had something there that would settle things.
His debtor was an Indian who lived not far away in the country and who had promised to make for him three or four hundred large adobe bricks in payment for some small wares that he had purchased two years before. He seemed perfectly willing to fulfill his contract and whenever he was reminded of it would promise to be on hand the next day, but he never appeared. An hour later the merchant, who was repairing his house, returned with his man at the end of a lariat. The next day the American saw him cheerfully at work. It was but a matter of getting the Indian busy.—National Magazine.

JEFFERSON'S FAMOUS HOME.
Matchless in the Earthscape That Encircles Its Setting.
Monticello divides interest with Mount Vernon as the most historical homestead in Virginia. It is inseparably connected with the life of Thomas Jefferson, and his writings on philosophy, statesmanship, history, political economy and the common affairs of life, accomplished in its classic shades, have made him known as the "sage of Monticello." The architecture of the building is unique. It is, first of all, Jeffersonian, but as the name of the estate is Italian the builder preserved the harmonies in basing the form on Italian ideals.
The summit of the "little mountain" was leveled to form a park of some ten acres, in the center of which the lines of the mansion were laid. It has four fronts, and it is difficult to determine which presents the widest and most attractive view. In any direction there is outspread a superb view of a landscape that cannot be matched in its splendid setting of mountain and valley, highland and meadow, forest and stream. The prospect is an earthscape limited only by the power of vision.
The house was begun in Mr. Jefferson's youth and built in sections. Thirty years elapsed before its final completion owing to the fact that the builder was his own architect and contractor, and the demands of his country required more of his time than he could devote to his private affairs. When it was finally completed the influence of French art had left its impress on the builder's mind, and the interior decorations and furnishing reflected the taste of the Louis period.—Francis N. Barksdale in Leslie's.

An Invertebrate Punster.
"You have no business in that boat," said Theodore Hook one day to a stout man seated in a little craft on the Thames. "What do you mean?" said the man angrily. "Exactly what I say," retorted Hook. "You have no business in that boat." "Then perhaps it may interest you to know," said the stout man still more angrily, "that this is my own pleasure boat." "Exactly," said the invertebrate punster, "a pleasure boat. That is just what I said. You have no business in that boat." And before the man in the boat had recovered from his astonishment Hook had strolled away.

Deadly Glasses.
A contrast to the Venetian glasses which were popularly supposed to fly to pieces if poisoned liquor were poured into them were glasses which poisoned all who drank from them. The poison was crystallized at the bottom of the glass, from which it was indistinguishable, and as it dissolved very slowly it could be used many times with deadly effect. Some such glasses can be seen at the British museum.—London Chronicle.

Happy Thought.
Abby, the littlest girl of the family, was seated at the breakfast table one morning. As usual, eggs were served. Either she was not hungry or she had grown tired of the inevitable bill of fare, for very earnestly and soberly she remarked, "I do wish hens would lay something besides eggs."—Youth's Companion.

PRESERVING THE BISON.

There are now 900 bison in the national preserve at Wainwright, Alberta, and the number is increasing rapidly. Last year 170 calves were born in the herd, and it is expected that this year the natural increase will be about 250. Mr. Ellis, who has charge of the park at Wainwright, has stated in the course of an interview that it is not probable that many more of the animals will be brought up from the Flathead range in Montana. There may be twenty or thirty brought up this summer but it is not likely that the men who are engaged in rounding up the herd will be successful in catching more than this number.

Mr. Ellis states that a profitable industry might be evolved from the bison farm because of the value of the heads and hides. The old cows and bulls might be killed off each year for their hides. The cost of feeding the animals is very small. During the summer they are out on the range, and even in the winter they are able to graze and obtain sufficient nourishment to keep them in good condition. Last winter only 600 tons of hay have been required. This hay is grown on the farm in connection with the range, and about 1,200 tons of hay were put up last year, so that 600 will be carried over this year.

The range is one hundred thousand acres in extent, and the bison roam this tract during the summer, but in the winter they are confined to the winter quarters, which are about twelve square miles in extent. The animals browse on this tract, and their feed is carried out to them on hay racks. Mr. Ellis says that some of the cows are becoming very fierce, and it will be necessary to shoot them in all probability. They have charged the herders several times, and there have been a number of narrow escapes. None of the animals have charged the teams on the hay racks as yet, but it is feared that they will do so some day. The bulls, however, seem to be much more quiet than the cows, as they have not given any trouble as yet.

There is a large herd of bison in the country north of Fort Chipewyan, and it is probable that some of these animals will be brought down to Wainwright to put new blood into the herd there.

There are a number of moose, elk, antelope, and deer at the range now, it being the Government's intention to use this place as a stock farm. Animals which are native to this country will be bred there and used to stock the parks all over the Dominion—Standard of Empire.

Child Emigrants.

Speaking at a meeting held at the Mansion House in connection with the child emigration work of the Salvation Army, Earl Grey said a greater kindness could not be done to the state-aided children in England than by removing them from the Poor Law conditions of this country to the freer, more wholesome life in Canada or any of the Overseas Dominions.

People in this country could hardly realize how large was the number of good homes in which people were longing for the entrance of an imported child. Last year the number of children imported into Canada was 2,422, and the number of applications for children for whose care the state was responsible was over 18,000—eight applications for every child.

There was not the slightest difficulty in securing for the imported child the certainty of a good home in Canada. If the demands of the Canadian homes that required children were met in two years this country would save a million of money on its rate-aided children. That would help the rates, would help Canada, and would help the Empire, but that threefold assistance would be nothing compared with the good it would do the children.

Ontario Beavers Valuable.

The recent sale of furs at the Parliament Buildings realized $5,354.05 for the province. The pelts are taken from animals trapped in Algonquin Park under the direction of the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines. There were 430 beaver skins, which were caught under special order, and realized $4,000.50, 89 mink, 5 fisher, 11 martens, 71 muskrat, 12 otter, 8 ermine. In addition, twenty-three pounds of castoreum were sold. This is a secretion found in the beaver, and is used in making perfumes and for medicinal purposes. The bidding was keen, and buyers came all the way from New York.

The revenues of Algonquin Park have also been augmented during the past year by the sale of live beavers to several zoological societies. Animals have been shipped to London, England, and other cities.

Must Build Bigger Sheds.

The increase of freight traffic on the Canadian Pacific Railway at Port William has made expansion necessary, and work is now progressing rapidly on the huge new freight shed, situated on the Kaministiquia River. This great freight shed, the dimensions of which are 1,000 feet by 60 feet, will be the finest of its kind on the Canadian side of the Great Lakes. The building is a two-story one, with all the most modern and up-to-date conveniences. Boats docking alongside will be loaded, or unloaded as the case may be, by machinery. Package freight will invariably be consigned to this new shed, which, it is expected, will be in readiness soon.

Diamonds Now.

Diamonds in Ungava is now the word and diamond rumors which have been floating about northern mining camps for some months now begin to take tangible shape. The other morning a prospecting party passed through North Bay en route to Ungava, where one of the party is said to have previously uncovered rich diamond deposits and brought out samples of genuine sparklers.

SENTINELS OF THE SEA.

Life Aboard a Lightship is an Active One After All.

A faint splash of light on a dark waste of waters; the wash of the sea against the ship's side; the creak of clockwork; the measured footfall of the watch on the deck; the barely-heard throb of a distant steamer, or the near loom of ghostly sails passing in the night and, through a pall of chilling mist, the boom of the foghorn hurrying its note of warning into the far-off silences.

Such in the long night hours, is one of the many lightships which keep their vigil around our coasts—the sentinels of the sea, the protectors of those who go out on the deep waters. To understand the spell of the life, let us step aboard a lightship.

No sooner are we on the deck than we feel at home. Spacious and cosy, one can picture happy hours spent in this craft, remote from the stress of shore life. There are even plants and flowers to give a picturesque touch of domestic life.

And the men who make their home here? They are eight all told—it may be only six—a master and his mate, three sailormen and three lamp-lighters; and of this small but sufficient crew only five are on duty—the remaining three are taking a well-earned rest ashore, turn and turn about.

No long-faced hermits are these guardians of the lightship, cheery men, all of them, and hospitable, as becomes a sailor, though they roam no seas.

"Dull?" said the mate of the Nore-ship to the press man on a visit. "Why, we've no time to be dull! No time for grizzling here!"

And this is the truth. From rising to sleeping no moments need be unoccupied. The lantern alone keeps two of the five constantly busy. At sunset the lamps are lit, and the lantern is hoisted to its eminence, a few feet below the ball of the mast; then the clockwork is started which sets it revolving. All through the night, at frequent intervals, a gong sounds the signal for the laborious re-winding, and was betide the watchman who is deaf to the signal, or does not keep an eye on his revolving light.

At sunrise the lantern is lowered, and a busy hour of more of cleaning follows, with rag and leather and cans of oil, until each reflector almost blinks one with its glitter. There is the foghorn to be kept booming every two minutes by strenuous work with a foot-pedal whenever the mist-clouds roll up.

Eyes must be kept ever on the alert night and day, the watchers ready at any instant to send a warning signal by gun or flag. It may be a vessel heading for a shoal; a ship in distress; an imminent collision which only the promptest action can avert. And every happening of night or day must be carefully noted by the master in his log.

But, of course, it is not all work. There are hours of leisure for those off duty. And there is always the prospect of that month on shore, which comes round with such welcome frequency, and which lends wings to the days aboard.

No; with a cheerful spirit, plenty of work, and play, good pay, and a pension to look forward to, the life of a lightshipman is far from being undesirable, even in the isolation of a foggy night amid the lone waters of the sea.

Additions to the Zoo.

The fine collection of animals presented to the King by the Government of Nepal, and offered by his majesty to the Zoological Gardens, is now on its way to England, and is expected to reach Tilbury soon. The ship which is bringing them home is the Afghanistan, of the British India line, and she has arrived at Aden. The journey from Calcutta, the most trying part of the whole trip, fortunately did not tell too severely on the animals, and there were few important losses on the voyage. Seventy-four mammals left India, and these included a male baby rhinoceros, a four-horned antelope, examples of the very curious "one-horned" sheep, three leopards, four bears, and a number of smaller creatures. The casualties included a female baby elephant which died in Calcutta, two Bharal sheep, and a snow leopard.

Old-Time Reviews.

As an institution naval reviews appear to be quite ancient, despite the fact that most people seem to think of them as dating back no earlier than the middle of the last century. Way back in days when the ships that fought under Nelson would have been thought incredibly large and powerful there was a big review at the Nore, when King Charles II. inspected his fleet before it set sail to give battle to the Dutchmen off Lowestoft. A big review, too, was held in the days of William III. in honor of the Czar Peter, who, it will be remembered, took such an immense interest in shipbuilding that he worked as a hand in the shipyards himself. George III. held several reviews, though, curiously enough, Nelson never came in for the honor of a royal visit. One of the most historic reviews on record was that held in 1856, after the Crimean war, when no fewer than 240 men-of-war saluted Queen Victoria at Spit-head.

Marks a London Boundary.

In the Strand, London, just by the "Griffin" monument marking the site of Temple Bar, there is to be seen, let into the kerb of the pavement, an iron anchor some 12 or 16 inches in length, with beside it the letters S, C and D. The mark is unusual and of some interest till we discover it to be merely the boundary mark of the Parish of St. Clement Danes!

Gold Sovereigns.

Sovereigns were first coined in the reign of Henry I., but they were then worth 22 shillings.

MAN'S IMPOTENCE.

It is Made Shockingly Manifest When an Earthquake Comes.

A traveler gives this thrilling account of an earthquake in the far east:

"The one occasion I saw a panic was in Calcutta in June, 1897. It was a Saturday evening about five o'clock. It was panting not, and I was one of a party of pajama-clad men sitting on the roof of a high house having tea.

"We were in the midst of a merry chatter when the whole building began to tremble. We were instantly dashed and looking at one another with blank faces until a feeling of terror took possession of us and somebody shouted, 'My God, an earthquake!'

"We stamped. There were three tugs of stairs to go down, and of course the tallest and slowest man was in front and blocked the way. The walls were cracking and yawning; the plaster was falling in chunks.

"We were all barefooted, but that didn't matter. In front of the house was the median, the great open space in Calcutta. We ran there. A great part of the adjoining house came down with a roar. The whole front of a newspaper office crashed into the street. The top of the cathedral spire came off and fell through the roof into the channel.

"Horses were stricken with madness and were careering furiously beyond all control. The natives were shrieking. Europeans, blanched cheeks, tore from their houses, and many of the women fainted.

"The thing I will never forget was what followed. There was the crunch of ripped walls, and the whole earth was heaving and trembling very much like a ship that has banged against a pier and taken time to recover. The awful sensation was the feeling of impotence.

"The earthquake lasted only five minutes, though at the time it seemed like hours. Men could only stand on the heaving, seasick ground absolutely helpless, unable to speak, but staring into each other's white countenances waiting for the earth to yawn. That was the terrible thing—crowds of folk reduced to mute horror, helpless, just standing with big, wide open, affrighted eyes, and the brain cramped in contemplation of what might happen next moment."

A Difficult Pose.

Sir Luke Filder, the noted English artist, told a comical story of one of his models for his picture "The Village Wedding." As a model for the bridegroom he had engaged a villager, and, as the man had never posed before, Sir Luke warned him not to move on any account. Soon after the sitting began Sir Luke noticed that his model was not looking very well, and he suspended work for a little to let the man rest. Soon after they had started work again the man's eyes began to bulge from his head, and he appeared to be on the verge of a collapse.

"You don't seem well," Sir Luke remarked sympathetically.

"No, zur!" gasped the man.

"Does the pose tire you?" the artist asked.

"No, zur; 'tain't that what does it; it's the holdin' me breath so long!" The unfortunate man had somehow got the idea that "not to move on any account" included that he mustn't breathe.

The Hardest Worked Women.

The women chainmakers of Cradley Heath, in England, could, doubtless, if they had the time, make good a claim to being the hardest worked women in the world. The hand forging of heavy chains is not play under any circumstances, and these women have been known to wield their hammers for fifteen hours continuously, when work pressed, and then to go home to do their own housework and washing for the family. The work is paid for on a weight basis, the women smiths receiving from $1 to $1.25 for each hundredweight of chain completed. A strong and active worker can complete a hundredweight of chain in from one day to a day and a half.

Meaning of Stepmother.

"Stepmother" is a word with a commonly unsuspected history. Probably most people, if called upon to explain it, would say that it meant a woman who had stepped into the place of the true mother. Dr. Johnson, at any rate, believed that this was the suggestion of the word to most minds. Really, "step" is the Anglo-Saxon "steop," the original meaning of which appears to have been "orphaned." Stepchild, stepbairn, stepson and stepdaughter came first, and then, by gradual fading of the etymological meaning of "step," stepfather and stepmother came into being.—London Chronicle.

Corelli and Caine.

Marie Corelli's first story, "A Romance of Two Worlds," which made her name, was sent to the London publishing house of Bentley. Hall Caine was the principal reader of that house, and his report condemned the book so strenuously that it was rejected. Miss Corelli was deeply discouraged, but after some time she was persuaded to send the manuscript to another publisher. He accepted it eagerly and made a big fortune out of it and out of her later novels.

The Derrick.

A derrick is an innocent mechanical apparatus for lifting heavy weights, but it gets its name from an English hangman called Derrick, who flourished many years ago. The people of that time thought that the device used only in the hangman's trade resembled the more common mechanism which now bears his surname.

Drill Holder.

A machine to hold a drill by which it may be sharpened by hand on an ordinary whetstone has been invented in England.

THE GLORY OF THE GARDEN.

(Rudyard Kipling)
Our England is a garden that is full of stately views,
Of borders, beds and shrubberies and lawns and avenues,
With statues on the terraces and peacocks strutting by,
But the glory of the Garden lies in more than meets the eye.

You'll find the cool and potting-sheds which are the heart of all,
The cold frames and the hot houses, the dung-pits and the tanks,
The rollers, carts, and drain-pipes, with the barrows and the planks.

And there you'll see the gardeners, the men and -prentice boys
Told off to do as they are bid and do it without noise,
For, except when seeds are planted and we shout to scare the birds,
The glory of the Garden it abideth not in words.

And some can pot begonias and some can bud a rose,
And some are hardly fit to trust with anything that grows,
But they can roll and trim the lawns and sift the sand and loam,
For the glory of the Garden occupieth all who come.

Our England is a garden, and such gardens are not made
By singing—Oh, how beautiful and sitting in the shade,
While better men than we go out and start their working lives
At grubbing weeds from gravel-paths with broken dinner knives.

There's not a hand so weak and white, nor yet a heart so sick,
But it can find some needful job that's crying to be done,
For the glory of the Garden glorifieth every one.

Then seek your job with thankfulness and work till further orders,
If it's only netting strawberries or killing slugs on borders;
And when your back stops aching and your hands begin to harden,
You will find yourself a partner in the Glory of the Garden.

A PROMISING GOLD MINE.

Very gratifying reports continue to come from the California gold mine in which Mr. J. B. Goodhue and a few other local men are interested. The following telegram was received by Mr. Goodhue last week:

Redding, Cal., July 12.
"Thirty days' mill run ending July 10th milled five hundred tons average assay eighteen dollars per ton. Recovery ten dollars per ton. Expended brick to you from here to-day. Value five thousand eighteen dollars. Returning to mine tonight. Mine looks better than ever."
R. K. CLANCY.

The mine has been operated, profitably, but on a small scale for some years, by a ten stamp mill. Recently the property was acquired by a syndicate in which Canadians are largely interested, and a new one hundred ton plant is now in process of construction. The operators are incorporated under the name of The Globe Consolidated Mining Company, with the following officers: President, R. K. Clancy, Dedrick, Cal.; vice-president, J. B. Goodhue, Rock Island; secretary-treasurer, T. M. Craig, Sherbrooke, and these gentlemen control the proposition.

The ore is being treated at present by a small ten stamp mill and amalgamation only, and a saving of over 55 per cent of values is being made, the tailing from the mill being stored for treatment later in the new cyanide mill now being erected.

By actual tests and measurements which have been made, upwards of one million dollars worth of ore averaging over fifteen dollars per ton has been developed, and ready for treatment in the new mill. Being a tunnel proposition it can be worked very cheaply, as there is no water to pump, no ore to hoist.

Large water power rights, partly developed go with the property which consists of some 1200 acres of mining lands on which there is an abundance of timber for all purposes. It is expected that the new plant will be in operation early in the year, and it is the intention of the management to double the capacity of the plant in the near future, with every prospect of the "Globe" mine becoming one of the largest producers in the State of California, a State famous for gold mines that have produced, and are still producing millions yearly.

With the new plant the promoters hope to mill a million dollars a year.

During July and August the Derby Line Studio will be open from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., daily; Saturdays until 5 o'clock.

FITCH BAY.

Mr. J. C. Gustin's undertaking shop and large sheds, also Mr. F. L. Carr's large two-story shop were destroyed by fire on Tuesday evening at 10.30. The fire started in the undertaking rooms and spread so rapidly that it was impossible to save anything. By hard work and with the "bucket brigade" the men succeeded in saving the adjoining residence of Mr. F. L. Carr. The buildings were partly covered by insurance. The shop belonging to Mr. F. L. Carr was used by Mr. D. J. Carr as a blacksmith shop. Mr. Carr's tools were not insured and his loss will be about $500. The origin of the fire is unknown.

A PERNICIOUS WEED.

There is being sent out from Ottawa a conspicuous hanger showing in natural colors the Orange Hawkweed or "Devil's Paint Brush" which threatens to crowd out all useful plants in certain districts of Quebec unless prompt and vigorous measures are taken to suppress it. The weed is said to be utterly useless, and spreads rapidly. A short rotation and clean cultivation where possible are claimed to keep it under control. In rocky pastures that cannot be tilled, an application of salt is recommended. Merchants, blacksmiths, and others, whose places attract farmers, and farmers themselves should apply to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa for this hanger which is designated Farmers, Circular No. 2, Division of Botany. It is republished by direction of the Hon. Martin Burzell, Minister of Agriculture.
