The ultimate Sick-o-Meter

A hug a day keeps the children at play

Is there such a thing as a Child Sick-o-Meter? If not, let me be the parent to invent it and make a small fortune with it. A Sick-o-Meter would be a gauge by which parents could easily determine the validity of a child's claim to be ill. It would be more accurate than a thermometer, more reliable than a parent's lips pressed to the child's allegedly feverish forehead, and far less painful than the 15 to 20 minutes of relentless interrogation a parent inflicts upon the child to determine if he or she is REALLY sick, or just faking it.

As a parent, I understand that there are varying degrees of sickness from which a child can suffer.

For example, my kids might writhe and cry in agony, complaining of horrible stomach pains, yet be miraculously healed when I say, "That's too bad, because I was just thinking how much fun it would be to take a little trip to McDonald's tonight ..." Just the sound of the dreaded word "McDonald's" causes my kids to bolt upright and insist that the pain is ALLLLL gone now.

Will wonders never cease!

Then there are the times (usually on rainy days) when my kids lay around the house with a glazed look in their eyes - a look so vacant and scary that it causes me to pull out the First Aid basket and rummage around for Tempra and other remedies. Every time I see this look, I become convinced that the Black Plague has descended upon my household.

Black Plague? Yeah, right! Try a case of Terminal Boredom!

"Why don't you two play something together," I ask my kids? "How about actually trying out that Snakes and Ladders game you begged me to buy you a couple of months ago? Maybe today you can actually find out what the game board actually looks like!"

The kids will walk like zombies to their toy closet and rummage around for a game to play together. They pull out the Snakes and Ladders, actually OPEN THE BOX and, after a gentle accusation of, "Mom, you never told us we had this game!" they begin to play together. Then, whaddya know, within 15 minutes, there's life in their eyes again, laughter in their voices and a bounce in their step. Another miraculous recovery for the medical books!

But then there are moments where my kids seem perfectly fine but look kind of blue. They're not bored, but they're just quiet enough for me to feel their foreheads and rub their tummies and ask if they're feeling alright. It's when they insist that everything's FINE that I really begin to worry!

What? No claims of horrendous stomach aches? No sudden illness to coincide with the dreaded Chicken Kiev lunch at school? What is WRONG with this child???

That's when I look back at my week and realize that I've been doing too much and all but ignoring them. Sure, it was great when I spent 90 minutes cleaning my kitchen counters and rearranging the cereal boxes in the cupboards, but did I even spend so much as 20 of those minutes acknowledging that I even had children, or did I shoo them away like flies when they asked if they could help?

And yes, it was a great accomplishment for ME the other day when I ran up and down the stairs to the laundry room to do all my washing, but did I even say hello to my kids while I was doing all of this, or did they sit idly in the living room watching "The Little Mermaid" while I played Super Mom?

Oh, and then there was the time I screwed up their routine by bringing them grocery-shopping with me, dragging them from aisle to aisle when I could have done that while they were in school and daycare. How much fun did they have with me on THAT day? I'm sure they weren't all that thrilled to hear "Put that back, put that back" for an hour as I added and removed grapes from the little plastic bag to make sure I had exactly ONE pound and not an ounce more.

That's when it's time to let the house get as messy as it can, to ignore all the little things that need to be accomplished that day and take the time to hug and snuggle and kiss and play with the kids. TLC and a lot of attention are the ONLY remedies for this kind of illness. Once cured, though, the kids are so incredibly happy and bouncy that it makes me wonder how on earth I could've actually FORGOTTEN to spend this kind of quality time with them! Ah, but such is life, I guess.

Hmm ... I guess the old saying is wrong. It's NOT an apple a day that keeps the doctor away. It's actually a few moments of hugging and playing every day, books and lullabies at night and taking the time, every day, to stop and smell the children.

Children will enjoy tale of colored people

Youth theatre brings show to Haskell Opera House

Peacemaker, written by David Holman, is a delightful tale of diversity and tolerance which will be staged at the Haskell Opera House on Sunday, May 24, at 2 p.m., presented by Green Thumb Theatre for Young People of Vancouver.

The Blue People and the Red people have lived on either side of The Wall for years. Interaction is forbidden, and both communities live in an atmosphere of fear, suspicion, and mistrust. So when Simp, a young Red Person, actually sees a young Blue Person for the first time, his automatic response is panic; when the pair interact, however, they learn they have a great deal to offer one another and an unexpected friendship blossoms. This fast paced, humorous production helps to promote an end to prejudice based on what people look like or where they come from. Juggling, dance, music and colorful costumes will thrill audiences. Suitable for family audiences of ages 4 and up. Green Thumb Theatre for Young People was founded in 1975 to develop original Canadian plays for young audiences. Since that time, Green Thumb has emerged as one of Canada's leading theatre companies for young people. Green Thumb tours every school district in British Columbia performing to more than 180,000 each year; they also tour across Canada and the United States on a regular basis and abroad.

Jazz, blues, rock, harmonies

Did I read Jacques Brel, Bob Dylan, The Beatles, Crosby Stills Nash & Young, Joe Cocker? Then it means INTIME LE BAND, a group with a varied sound, both acoustic and electric, mixing and English and a French repertoire. For the first time INTIME LE BAND will perform at the Haskell Opera House, May 22 at 8:30 p.m. INTIME LE BAND is a personalized integration of a repertoire based on vocals and harmonies. It has a folk style, with flavours of blues, rock and jazz. This Townships group includes six members: Chantal Poulin (lead singer); Robert Bureau (guitar & vocal); Guy Breton (bass, counter-bass, vocal); Jacques Robert (drums, percussion); Carlo Faby (piano) and Yvon Cloutier of Cirque du Soleil (guitar). But few countries as consistently competitive Canada offers modest digs at Cannes

By Craig MacInnis
SOUTHAM NEWS
CANNES

In the global scheme of things, it doesn't take a genius to figure out that Canada is, at best, a middling power at the 51st Cannes Film Festival.

While the Americans and Italians operate huge, user-friendly pavilions in the coveted walkspace between the Mediterranean Sea and the Palais (the festival's sprawling main bunker), Canada is consigned to more modest digs.

The Telefilm Canada offices are located about a half-kilometre away from action central, housed in a tastefully appointed suite in the Grand Hotel, a nondescript building set back from the festival's main thoroughfare, La Croisette.

A simple banner announces Telefilm's presence to pedestrians and potential business contacts, but it's easy to overlook, especially in the profusion of posters and hype that characterizes this busy seaport during the middle two weeks of May.

Still, Canadian officials here are putting the best possible spin on their new home.

"It's huge by comparison to last year when we were stuffed in like little sausages," says Telefilm spokesman Suzan Ayscough, who leads a delegation of nine Canadian officials on a budget of about $235,000.

During the festival they provide a home-away-from-home for Canadian filmmakers and journalists, pitch Canadian movies to foreign distributors and festival programmers, and help arrange parties to promote Canadian culture abroad.

Tonight (Friday, May 15) there's a Telefilm-sponsored fete on the beach, a dinner for Quebec producer Roger Frappier (Jesus Of Montreal, Un Zoo La Nuit). His work is being honored as part of a Cannes retrospective on independent producers from around the world.

Although the starting time is 9 p.m. and food will be served, a Telefilm spokesman half-jokingly says "it's more like a very, very late lunch." In other words, no pheasant under glass, no VSOP cognacs, no lavish party favors.

The federal funding and marketing agency has been in a downward spiral ever since reports circulated three years ago that the agency was spending too much, hiring too many and pouring too much champagne during its annual Riviera visit.

More's the shame, because for a brief moment in the sun, Canada marshalled a presence that impressed visitors from around the world.

While critics saw it as another example of government waste, movie officials saw it as a pedestal from which to proclaim our burgeoning industry. Few countries have been as consistently competitive at Cannes as Canada in recent years, with high-profile screenings for Jean-Claude Lauzon's Leolo in 1992, Atom Egoyan's Exotica in 1994 and The Sweet Hereafter in 1997, and David Cronenberg's Crash in 1996.

From its once-proud location in a white pavilion by the Mediterranean, Telefilm moved two years ago to a small promotions booth in the featureless maze of stalls and passageways behind the Palais.

So this year's move to the Grand Hotel, while far from perfect, is considered a step up.

"We have about three times the amount of space we had last year," says Ayscough. "We're facing the Croisette (the festival's main traffic artery) and we have a big banner telling everybody where we are."

Filmmakers seem happy that there's a comfortable place to check in for messages and relax between rounds of meetings.

Vancouver director Scott Smith, here promoting his upcoming movie Rollercoaster, looked tired but content as he traipsed into the Telefilm offices recently.

"I like it because it's in the middle and not at either end of the Croisette," said Smith. "It's a cool place where I can pick up messages and collect my thoughts."

Tea Léoni hits the big screen Deep Impact leaves a big impression

By Dominic Messier
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
SHERBROOKE

In the past few months, we've learned of the near-possibility that a cosmic body of some sort, might just pass us by, circa the year 2028. Capitalizing on this event is Hollywood which is set to release a slew of disaster movies this summer. One worth checking out is Deep Impact.

It's director Mimi Leder's second turn behind the camera in an action flick. Audiences will remember her first effort, last September's The Peacemaker starring George Clooney and Nicole Kidman.

This time out Leder focuses on what is most important about a life threatening issue, which is keeping an eye out for those you love. In this season of special effects and blockbusters, this film surprises the audience with a powerful look at human values, something often sideswiped in today's major productions.

Jenny Lerner (Tea Léoni) is a young NBC journalist who stumbles onto what she believes is the latest scandal affecting the White House, specifically a woman named Ellie. What she doesn't suspect however, is that the upper levels of government are trying to keep the lid (temporarily, that is) on an E.L.E., or an Extinction Level Event. To put it bluntly, there's a comet the size of New York City headed for Earth, and few are expected to survive.

As President Beck (Morgan Freeman) addresses the nation to warn them of this danger of epic proportions, the major governments are already at work on a space mission, designed to destroy or redirect the deadly cosmic element. It is up to Commander Spurgeon Tanner (Robert Duvall) and his team of astronauts, to try and save the Earth, before an unstoppable ice age resets the Earth's evolutionary clock.

I must say this film was unusually gripping, in its success in focusing on the important issues which would face the legions of helpless people, who would simply be left to their own devices, in the face of such a deadly plight.

This is one of those films which provides a good ensemble cast, who work well with a great story, and make the best of it, by reducing the importance of the visual effects (mostly seen in the last 20 minutes). Instead of speaking in generalities about the moral implications of such a catastrophe, the film (running at about 2 hours 10 minutes) becomes an exercise in self-reevaluation. I learned that there is a lot we take for granted, and that we should concentrate on the simpler things of life because they may not be here tomorrow.

A must-see film.

3,000 people, 11 churches

The Colby-Curtis Museum in Stanstead is presenting a temporary exhibition entitled 3,000 people, 11 churches from May 22 to September 30. The exhibition hopes to answer the question, "Why so many churches for so few people?" With a population of just over 3,000, Stanstead boasts 11 churches and eight religious denominations. Some of these places of worship are linked to the settlement of the area in the late 18th century when settlers from the United States began to arrive bringing various Protestant faiths. Catholic families were established in Stanstead from 1848 and celebrate the 150th anniversary of their church. Other denominations followed and today, Stanstead celebrates a religious diversity that is both surprising and harmonious. The museum is open Tuesday to Friday from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.. Admission adults $4, seniors $2, and children six and over $2.

The couple that fishes together...

Paul Bean has been tying flies since the age of eight and now in his retirement years, ties on a regular basis. His fishing flies are known to be of top quality and are in great demand by anglers. Maureen Bean has been painting watercolors for almost 20 years and before that she was painting in oils. Her paintings have been featured in several exhibitions. Together they combined their talents and the shadow box frame with classic salmon fly and watercolor evolved. This collector's item has been sold to anglers and collectors all over the world. The husband and wife team have fished together for many years and their expeditions have led them to salmon rivers in the Gaspé, the Florida Keys and numerous other Quebec lakes and rivers. Their work will be featured at the North Hatley Library 165 Main St., from May 31-June 12.

Alf Svendsen's art on display in Sutton

Nudes celebrate triumph of human form

By Tanya Tkach,
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
SUTTON

Alf Svendsen's exhibit at Arts Sutton is the culmination of a life long passion displayed through 35 renditions of the nude.

"As with music, I prefer to explore sensory perceptions using the eye rather than the ear. It's improvisation, as you're responding moment by moment adding and making a series of relationships. It's a visual performance similar to a musicians," said Svendsen.

The body language of the model conveys emotions which at times are lyrical, sensual and bold, and other times sad, and vulnerable, becoming a marriage between artist and model, he explained.

Drawing presents a series of choices for Svendsen - whether to work in color or black and white, to use a fine pencil or thick charcoal, to choose the medium in reference to color or texture, and to visualize the scale and format suggested by the pose. He also enjoys the challenges of sensory experiences which he likens to jazz.

Svendsen has always had a fascination with the French and Italian drawings of the 18th century, especially those of artist Peter-Paul Prud'hon whose drawings of the nude he feels are the most beautiful of the Napoleonic era.

"When I look at those drawings intimately, it's not so much the subject matter but how they construct them - how they make space, how they tease the line, how they do the edge, the proportions and the rhythms," he said.

In his drawings, Svendsen tries to maintain the western tradition which involves the struggle between the linear and color aspects that existed even during the Renaissance.

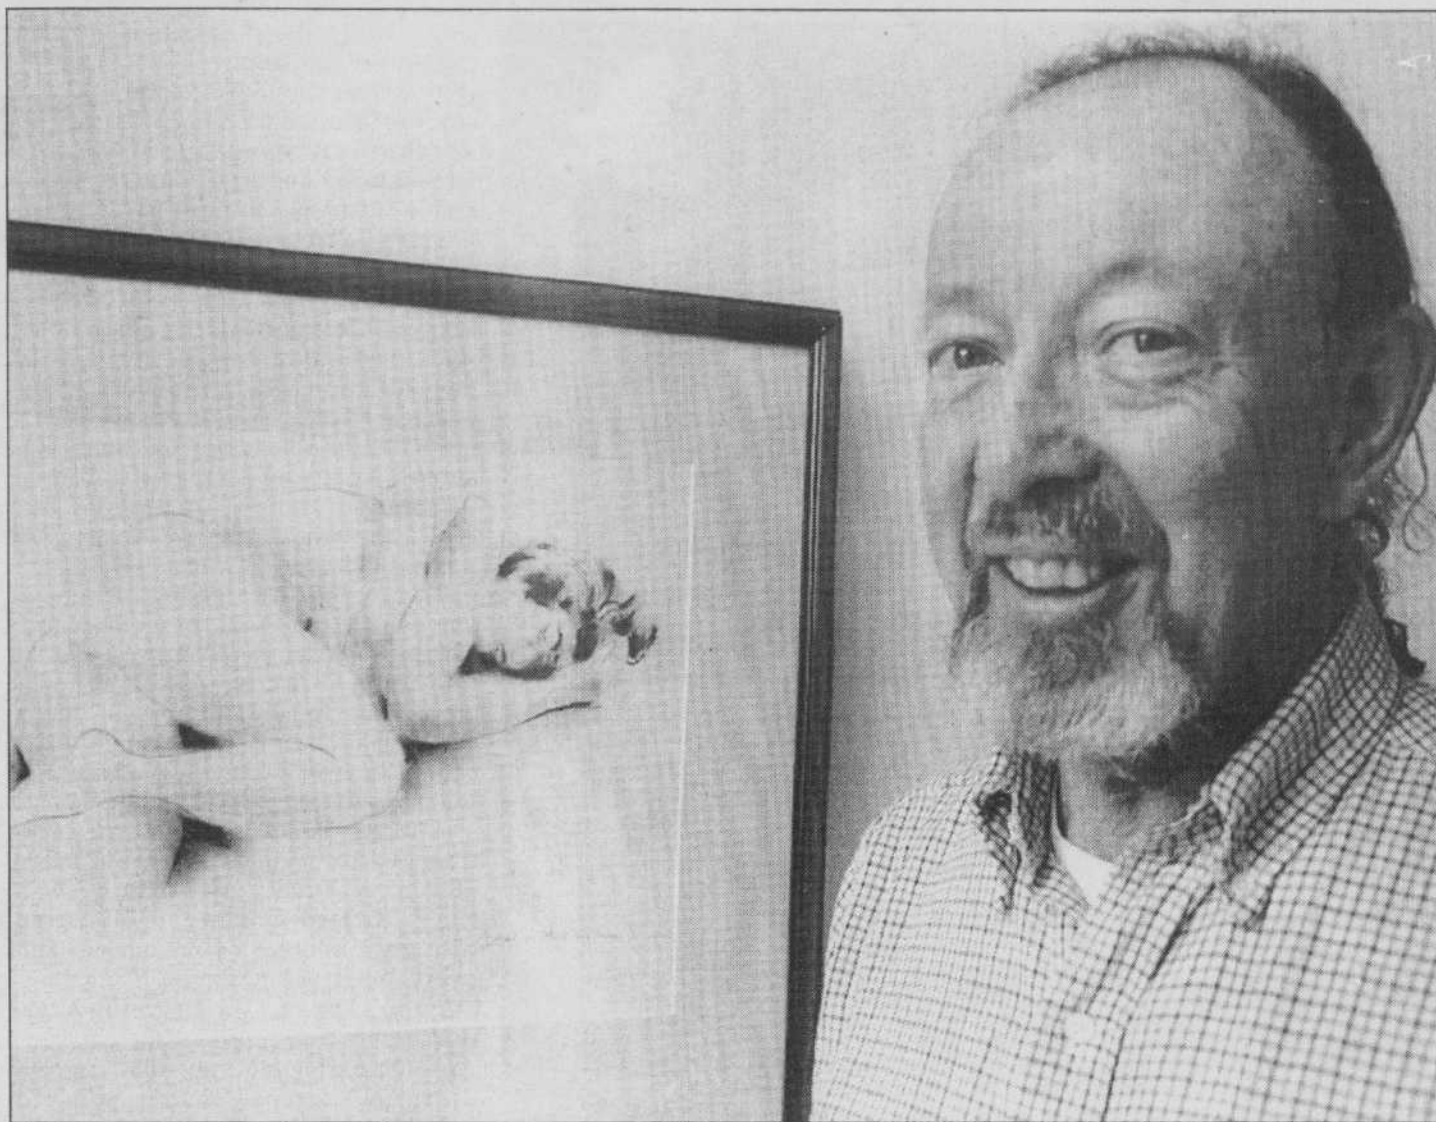

He is particularly interested in the illusion of form that moves in space and his work portrays interplay between two and three dimensional forms.

"In my drawings there are some pure lines, some patterns, some patches of color as in the Leotards, with lines which present a challenge even after years of drawing."

As a young boy, Svendsen was good in math and with parental guidance he studied engineering at a special high school.

"Back then, I wanted to be an architect," he said.

But after spending four years in the Navy in hot climates such as Trinidad, Puerto Rico and the Mediterranean (Svendsen being Norwegian hates the heat which gives him headaches) he de-cidied to follow his first love - drawing, by enrolling in the Bachelor of Fine Arts (B.F.A.) program at Syracuse University.

There Svendsen met the famous Croatian Sculptor Ivan Mestrovic, known as the peasant genius of Europe.

"He was a great and interesting man and was the first living artist to have a one man show at the Metropolitan Museum of Art," he said of his mentor.

After completing his B.F.A., he was invited by Mestrovic to open the graduate program for sculpture at Notre Dame University, after which he pursued sculptural projects in New York working with the anthropologist Colin Turnball by making clay figures of Pokots (country cousins of the Masai tribe in Africa).

According to Svendsen, even though it was illegal in '55, he was one of the first artists to rent a loft in New York.

"Generally whenever artists moved into run-down areas they'd build them up again making them more livable," he said.

"I had to sneak out my garbage and keep my lights down." During that period Svendsen continued drawing. After the age of 40, Svendsen had to teach in order to cover his expenses which were more than he made as an artist. But he continued his drawing sessions sharing a model with other artists and professionals.

Twelve years ago during one of the sessions, Svendsen had an extraordinary experience that prompted his use of colors. He had to think quickly and switch his technique in order to draw a moving model - a belly dancer who danced during the three hour session.

"I was going crazy trying to render it in black and white, I had 16 drawings all incomplete," he said.

"She had a reddish-purple scarf and blue pantaloons and I had a box of pastels so I started working with those colors like a painter."

Since then colors started sliding into Svendsen's work and at times he works entirely in colors and pastels with line.

"As an artist, you try to do things that you feel have permanent value or interest," said Svendsen.

Besides drawing the human form, he also likes drawing landscapes trying to reveal the beauty and harmony of each scene.

"I like to look at reality and capture the secret of what I'm looking at - not a photo or picture of it," he said.

Even though Svendsen is nervous about approaching 70 years of age, he has many projects on the back burner.

"I feel I should be doing my art work as long as I can and would also like to do some evening paintings such as moonscapes," he said.

"I feel I was born to be an artist."

Alf Svendsen exhibit at Arts Sutton from May 2-May 31. Hours are 1-5 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Sunday and 10 till noon and 1-5 p.m. on Saturdays. Parallel exhibit includes creations by goldsmith Antoine Lamarche and six apprentice jewellers.

Gospel singer abused by husband Being famous didn't help Reba's sister Susie Luchsinger got the support she needed from her famous sister, Reba McEntire. Luchsinger was abused by her husband, a minister, for 10 years.

Once in a while a book of interest for country fans comes out. This time around it's not the story of a country artist but rather the hard times of a gospel singer, Reba McEntire's sister, Susie Luchsinger and her husband Paul.

Still it might be very interesting to most of the people who had a chance to see Luchsinger perform. Even though she doesn't have the superstar status of her famous sister she still has a very successful career in gospel music.

Here's my review for you:

A Tender Road Home, Paul and Susie Luchsinger, (Broadman & Holman Publishers)

A Tender Road Home tells the true story of a woman who has been abused by her husband (a full-time Christian minister), who has since reformed with the help of counselling and Bible study.

What makes a man, attack and humiliate his wife, the mother of his children, then walk into a church to give a testimony about how God changed his life? On the other hand why does a woman with a family as close and supportive as the McEntires stay with a violent husband?

These are the aching questions that you find in the book and the attempt to answer them. It sure isn't easy and as Susie Luchsinger tells her story, Reba's fans will catch glimpses of the McEntire sisters' lives together. From their childhood on an Oklahoma ranch to their early adult years when Luchsinger worked for awhile as Reba's backup singer which fueled a jealous rage in her husband.

A former champion steer wrestler, Paul accused his wife of countless, groundless affairs, making her life an intolerable situation. You can feel the pain as she recalls some of the many beatings she faced.

"I felt my feet leave the floor as I flew through the air, slamming into the side of the wall like a basketball off a blackboard. I crumpled in a heap on the floor, pain throbbing through my entire body. I just wanted to lie there and die, but Paul was already hovering over me. He was not done yet."

The portrait painted by the book is one of vivid and painful feelings of a woman so afraid and ashamed to even tell her own family. When she was picked Entertainer of the Year by the International Country Gospel Music Association in 1994, no one was aware that she had suffered over 10 years of abuse.

A Tender Road Home is at the same time heartbreaking and helpful while offering practical advice to others battling domestic violence. It is written with great honesty, no pretensions and a very important message.

There's hope for people in this situation and for restoring a loving marriage. Through understanding what triggers the violence and how victims say in bad relationships because of low self-esteem, Luchsinger writes about realizing that there is a way to escape this pattern.

Counselling, prayers, patience, control of the fear and lots of love are most likely the secret ingredients to getting out of this situation. Being violent to the point where you hurt the ones you love is definitely a disease. But this disease in many cases can be cured.

If you are a battered person please don't put up with it anymore as only you can decide to pick-up the phone and call for help.

Getting back to new musical releases:

Cledus T. Judd (No Relation) Did I Shave My Back For This? (Razor & Tie Entertainment).

Most country fans already know Cledus T. Judd for his parody of Shania Twain's "Any Man of Mine" turned into "If Shania Was Mine" which had great success on country radio and with fans.

Judd is back this time with a third album which deserves a lot of praise. His witty sense of humor is still there, and it is clean enough to play anywhere or in front of anyone.

COUNTRY CONNECTION

What Judd does is take a song of the day and twist them around with new words, something Weird Al Yankovic did with popular pop songs. He gives Deana Carter's hit "Did I Shave My Legs For This" a new treatment taking the song in a direction no one really wants to go.

There's also the Mindy McCready-inspired parody "Wives Do It All The Time," and "Third Rock From Her Thumb," for Joe Diffie's "Third Rock From The Sun." Trace Adkins' "Every Light In The House Is On" is turned into "Every Bulb In The House Is Blown."

On this new release Judd doesn't stop at parodies as he also tackles some original material on "First Redneck on the Internet," which has a real authentic Bakersfield sound.

Buck Owens is also a guest on that tune as he sings the chorus while Judd sings the verse. It's pretty neat to hear the two of them together and it is easy to imagine Owens' facial expression as he performs the new number.

His new original material doesn't get much air play as radio station mainly pick the parodies for their listeners but still the album sells very well. Everyone needs a good laugh once in a while and with Cledus T. Judd (No Relation) you're assured to get it every time.

Judd doesn't have the greatest voice but his vivid imagination has been working well for him.

Lee Greenwood, Wounded Heart, (Kardina).

Lee Greenwood fans will be happy to learn that even though he's not with a major label anymore, a new album has just been released, this time on an independent label. After scoring more than 30 country hits between 1981 and 1992, Greenwood wasn't ready to silence his country vocal cords.

The new album includes a few new songs but he has also rerecorded some of his biggest hits such as "Somebody's Gonna Love You," "Fool's Gold," and "God Bless The USA."

The new material offers some worthwhile numbers such as the first single, a catchy love song "Who's That Knockin' on My Heart" which brought him back on the independent country charts.

The lyrics are set to an edgier contemporary country arrangement which suits his smooth voice. There's also the title track "Wounded Heart," a self-penned, warm ballad that's a lot closer to what he used to do back in the '80s.

Have a nice week and keep your country state of mind!

NBA Conference finals set to tip off

TSN has lots of action on the pitch and between the pipes

By Ted Shaw
 TVDATA

Soccer and hockey share a common goal - scoring goals - and they dominate the sports world on television this week.

On Sunday, May 17, TSN has taped coverage of the FA Cup final between Arsenal and Newcastle United from Wembley Stadium in London. The game was played Saturday, May 16. Graham Leggat, TSN's soccer commentator and a former Scottish national team star, will host the pre-game show.

The international Arsenal squad is led by Dutch striker Dennis Bergkamp. Its manager, Arsene Wenger, speaks English, German, Spanish, Italian and some Japanese, as well as his native French.

Newcastle United's rise to the English Premier League championship wasn't without controversy. Outspoken striker Alan Shearer was accused of dirty and illegal play - charges that are usually leveled against the fans in the stands - by Sheffield United players in a crucial game in April.

On Wednesday, May 20, Spain's Real Madrid meets the Italian Serie A champion, Juventus, in the UEFA Champions League final at Amsterdam Arena in the Netherlands. The game will be shown live on TSN, with a pregame show hosted by Leggat.

- On Sunday, before the FA Cup, TSN will have World Hockey Championship action from Zurich, Switzerland. Paul Romanuk and Gary Green call the action.

After the FA Cup, TSN will show junior hockey's championship, the Memorial Cup, from Spokane, Wash.

This week on CBC Television, the Stanley Cup playoffs continue with conference semifinals and finals. Ron MacLean will host the coverage from the CBC Broadcast Centre in Toronto.

- On Monday, May 18, TSN will show the championship match of the ATP Italian Open. Check your local listings.

- On Saturday, May 23, TSN will have live coverage of CART's Motorola 300 from Madison, Ill. Canadians Paul Tracy, Patrick Carpentier and Greg Moore will compete.

- The NBA conference finals begin this week, with TSN and CTV providing coverage. CTV will also carry the NBA Finals, set to start at the end of May.

- The Toronto Blue Jays host the Seattle Mariners Sunday and Monday on TSN.

Other diamond action on TSN includes the Tampa Bay Devil Rays at the Blue Jays on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 19 and 20, and the Blue Jays at the Cleveland Indians on Friday, May 22.

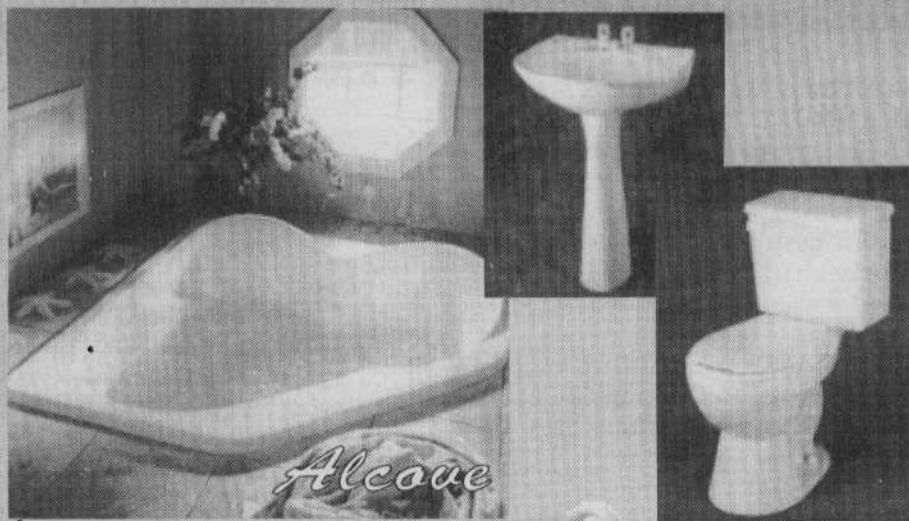

CBC's lone baseball telecast this week will be the Blue Jays at the Indians on Saturday.

Former Scottish national team player Graham Leggat anchors TSN's soccer coverage of the FA Cup.

Lolita remake fails to make grade

By Mark Steyn
THE SPECTATOR

Three years after Lolita was published in 1955, Hollywood had no problems with Louis Jourdan salivating over...

"Gigi!

You're not at all that funny, awkward little girl I knew!

Oh, no!

Overnight there's been a breathless change in you..."

Well, maybe not overnight. But the precise point at which an awkward little girl becomes a woman has always been a respectable theme of mainstream entertainment, especially when there's an older, worldly man to ease her down the slipway. Alan Jay Lerner rarely wrote about anything else: My Fair Lady - older, worldly man takes in hand young unsophisticated girl he thinks he can mould; Gigi - older, worldly man takes in hand young unsophisticated girl he thinks he can mould; and, in the '70s, with James Bond composer John Barry, he even wrote a musical of Lolita - older, worldly man takes in hand...

All this is by way of saying that Nabokov's Lolita is endlessly fascinating, Adrian Lyne's Lolita rather less so. The Barry/Lerner version captures more of Nabokov's humor, its score both skewering the folly of Humbert Humbert and brilliantly musicalizing the petulant whine of the 12-year-old Lolita as her possessor drags her from town to town.

Lyne introduces us to Lolita languidly sprawled across the grass, her dress moistened by the garden sprinkler - ah, "the way it clung/On one so young" (Lerner again, from Gigi, not Lolita). It's a typical Adrian Lyne moment, poised somewhere between 9 1/2 Weeks and a Flake commercial. The Lyne style, which manages to be both fevered and dead, was best distilled in the big sex scene in the spoof Hot Shots, when Charlie Sheen fries a couple of eggs, bacon and sausages on Valeria Golina's stomach. You keep waiting for Lyne to wake up to his material: at its core, Humbert is a creepy pervert who's screwing his stepdaughter, but that wouldn't make him any more interesting than those dead-eyed losers we read about in the papers. What makes the novel is the way Nabokov plays off the European Humbert against the world he finds himself in - 1950s America, a cornucopia of soda fountains and bubble gum and motels. The couplings themselves are the usual lyrical, soft-core Hollywood horizontal choreography: whatever Irons's narration may be saying, the sex tells us these two are great, they go together as naturally as Demi Moore and Woody Harrelson in Lyne's Indecent Proposal.

Dominique Swain (a very Nabokovian name) is 15 and certainly doesn't seem any younger. But it's also true that, for a '90s audience, the lines between childhood and adulthood are hopelessly blurred: grade-school kids and grown-ups in late middle-age now wear the same basic wardrobe, the shapeless jumble of perpetual adolescence. In the 1950s, the distinctions were clearer: a 12-year-old didn't have a conical brassiere, or pencil eyebrows. Lyne manages to evoke the landscape of time brilliantly, but not the culture.

Film makers tell us all the time that they can now have the artistic freedom to do things their predecessors couldn't. Yes, they can show us Frank Langella's genitals, but what they can't do is address the themes of Nabokov's book in the way Kubrick could in 1962. In 1998, Lyne's love for Lolita would seem to be as unacceptable as Humbert Humbert's.

Theatre Lac Brome staging Victorian special

Theatre Lac Brome presents the Montreal West Operatic Society's production of Gilbert & Sullivan's "The Gondoliers," Saturday, May 16 at 2 and 8 p.m. The Gondoliers is the twelfth of Gilbert & Sullivan's fourteen operettas, a hilarious satire on republicanism and social snobbery.

This is the Montreal West Operatic Society's 59th year of producing an annual Gilbert and Sullivan operetta. The company maintains the D'Oyly Carte Company's traditional style and this year is pleased to introduce a new stage director, albeit one who is very well known to Montreal musical theatre audiences, Corey Castle. A highly respected director, Corey has worked with the Lyric Theatre Players, Concordia University, The Fossils, and Theatre Lac Brome. Musical Director Douglas Knight returns for his eighth year with the Society.

The cast features Anita Hayes in the role of the Duchess of Plaza-Toro. Other principal performers include Wilfrid de Freitas, Howard Welburn Dimitris Ilias, Mark Oxner and Pat Sweeney.

Ticket prices range from $5 to $18. Details: (514) 242-1395.

TV WEEK

On Space Island no one can hear you scream

Judy Loe plays Kathryn McTiernan.

By David Migicovsky
TV DATA

After six months on the air, Space: The Imagination Station finally has some new programming to offer as it premieres Space Island One on Wednesday, May 20.

The science-fiction specialty channel had not expected to start broadcasting last fall and has mainly subsisted on reruns until now. Its first launch is probably not going to rocket to the top.

Closer in style to a soap opera than science fiction, Space Island One is set in a permanent space station named Unity, orbiting the Earth at a distance of 250 km.

Unity is owned by a giant corporation, so there is no talk of boldly going anywhere. Instead, the employees grouse about their working conditions, salaries and benefits. The effect is to make being an astronaut seem every bit as adventurous as working in a bank.

The time is 20 years in the future, so there are no phasers, aliens or warp drive. Except for its artificial gravity, Unity does not appear very different from the Mir space station. While this is at least partly by design - Space Island One is supposed to be a plausible extension of today's reality - one suspects that budgetary concerns were a factor as well.

Most of the effects budget seems to have gone into creating two R2-D2 knockoffs that resemble vacuum cleaners with headlights. More annoying than cute, the robots contribute little to the story.

The humans in the cast fare somewhat better, in that they don't make viewers wish their remote controls were phasers. The actors are largely unknown to Canadian audiences, although Sally Grace, who plays the crew's unseen contact on Earth, sounds so much like Star Trek actress Majel Barrett (the computer voice in the Trek movies and series) that viewers may be momentarily confused.

Judy Loe plays station commander Kathryn McTiernan, with Angus MacInnes as second-in-command Walter B. Shannon, a NASA veteran. Of course, there also is a doctor (Kourosh Asad) and a brilliant computer nerd (William Oliver).

It is the same basic list of characters that all the Star Trek series use, but that franchise has the ability to bring in guest stars to create conflict.

Regardless of any intentional or unintentional resemblance, Space Island One is definitely not Star Trek. Nor, despite the low budget, does it have much in common with British science fiction such as Doctor Who or The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, where the cheesy special effects were part of the fun.

Instead, it is a space version of Coronation Street, only not nearly as entertaining.

Riverdale returns this fall Few embraced by Kindred: The Embraced KINFOLK - A couple of years ago, there was a show about vampires living in New York. They had different clans that would meet every so often, and the head vampire owned a nightclub. What was the name of this show? -Sean Smith in Calgary via e-mail.

Kindred: The Embraced premiered April 2, 1996, and only ran for a few weeks. The drama series starred C. Thomas Howell as Detective Frank Kohanek; Stacy Haiduk as Lillie Langtry, owner of The Haven nightclub; and Mark Frankel as the prince of the vampires, Julian Luna.

Sadly, Frankel died in a motorcycle accident shortly after the series was canceled due to low ratings. The series, including a never-seen episode, was recently released on video.

RIVERDALE RIDDLE - I'm writing to inquire why Riverdale has not been seen lately. We were left hanging after the hit-and-run accident. Will the show continue? -William and Anne Ridob in Calgary.

The popular prime-time soap set in Toronto's Riverdale district will return in the fall with new episodes and presumably more information about the hit-and-run. Reruns of this season's episodes are airing Sunday mornings through the summer.

DANGER, WILL ROBINSON - Could you tell me who was the voice of the robot in the Lost in Space series? It is not listed among the credits. -Clara Auerwald in Prince George, B.C.

VIEWERS VOICES

The unforgettable voice of Will Robinson's (Billy Mumy) protector was provided by actor Dick Tufeld, who also lent his vocal talents to the robot in the current film version of Lost in Space. Actor Bob May was the lucky guy sweating inside the metal suit.

CRAZY FOR GRANT - I recently read that the actor who played Miles on Murphy Brown is named Grant Show. I am a big Melrose Place fan, and I am sure that Grant Show played Jake on Melrose.

They can't be the same person. Can there be two Grant Shows? Please answer. This is driving me crazy. -Grant fan in Newfoundland.

Murphy's boss was played by Grant Shaud, who bears scant resemblance to former Melrose Place thespian Grant Show. You are correct that there cannot be two actors using the same name professionally. Union rules do not allow it.

C. Thomas Howell played Frank Kohanek on Kindred: The Embraced.
