To pierce self for peace

MONTREAL (CP) — Caesar Ramon, 23, an Ecuadorian who believes in the invincible power of mind over matter, plans to pierce himself for peace.

He said the demonstration will take place in March in Puerto Rico, where he intends to fast for a few days with a gold ring stuck through his tongue and three swords through his midriff.

Ramon has been in Montreal since Christmas week, when he was injured while taping a show called The Occult in a CBC studio.

He was taken to the Montreal General Hospital for what was originally diagnosed as third-degree burns to one foot as a result of a walk through a wall of flame. When he got out of hospital, however, he said the injury was actually a cut received from the side of the vat that contained the fire.

Seek single strangler

MONTREAL (CP) — Police said Tuesday they are examining the possibility that five strangulation murders within the last 18 months have been committed by the same killer.

Four of the deaths occurred in Montreal and that of Linda Silverman, 15, of Ottawa on a Laurentian ski slope.

In the most recent case, Jean Way, 24, of Bonaville, Nfld., was found dead Saturday in her apartment here. She had been strangled with a belt.

Lieut. Denis Viau, chief of the homicide squad of Quebec provincial police, said Montreal city police and the QPP now are conducting a joint investigation.

But he said the only point of similarity between the slaying of Miss Silverman and the four deaths in Montreal is that strangulation was the method.

Gaspe water main in GASPE, Que. (CP) — A temporary water main has been installed to bypass a broken water line that has left this town dry since last Saturday.

Around-the-clock work to repair the regular water main is expected to be completed within a few days, Dr. Philippe Roy, mayor of this Gaspe Peninsula community, said in an interview Tuesday.

As a result of the breakage, schools and other public institutions were closed. Homes dependent on hot water heating were being supplied with water by municipal fire trucks.

Temperatures of 10 below zero hindered repairs to the main line and the laying of the temporary main.

Gaspe has a population of about 2,900.

Love potion investigated

MONTREAL (CP) — L-dopa, centre of a hot medical controversy as a claimed aphrodisiac, is under investigation as a high-blood pressure corrective.

Dr. Andre Barbeau of the Clinical Research Institute of Montreal said Tuesday that joint study of L-dopa's use in hypertension is being undertaken by his group here and Dr. Leon Goldberg in Atlanta, Ga.

It was sparked by L-dopa's known effects on lowering blood pressure in patients who suffered from Parkinson's disease, the condition for which L-dopa first was investigated.

Resists resignation demands

MONTREAL (CP) — Demands that he should resign as chairman of the Science Council of Canada because of conflicting interests are "hypothetical and intellectual," Dr. O.M. Solandt of Toronto said Tuesday.

"Hell, some members of Parliament have the most outstanding conflict of interest, but they never talk about it," Dr. Solandt, also chancellor of the University of Toronto, said in an interview after a speech to a literary club.

His comments followed a new barrage of criticism in the Commons Tuesday when New Democratic MPs called for his resignation because he is a vice-president of Electric Reduction Co.

The company was found responsible for severe pollution from effluents discharged by its plant into Placentia Bay in Newfoundland, damaging the local fishing industry.

Last week, Grace MacInnis told the Commons Dr. Solandt had discounted pollution caused by phosphates when his company was the sole Canadian manufacturer of them.

Dr. Solandt said in Montreal he is "at a loss to understand" the basis for the charges.

Art thief to trial

QUEBEC (CP) — Preliminary hearing of Leo Tremblay, accused of stealing paintings of the Duplessis collection, will be held without publicity Feb. 4, defence counsel Raymond Maher said Tuesday.

The closed-door provision will apply only to the preliminary hearing.

Tremblay, 49, of suburban Charlesbourg is the ex-leader of the now-defunct Quebec Christian Nationalist Party.

The Duplessis collection is valued at $2,000,000.

The robbery took place on the night of May 2-3, 1965, at the Quebec Museum.

Raymond Sutton, 44, of Montreal and Maurice Labadie, 52, of Quebec stand accused of the same offence. They are in jail pending voluntary statement.

In Quebec, an accused may seek to have the charges dismissed at voluntary statement, a legal step that precedes preliminary hearing.

Rushing the season?

Not really. But Montreal Claude Raymond is keeping in shape these days, travelling with the Expos Caravan and teaching proper pitching techniques at a dozen clinics throughout Quebec. Yesterday the caravan stopped in Sherbrooke. The stories are on Page 11.

BEFORE CHANGES IN EFFECT

Tax cuts possible in next five years

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson spoke Tuesday of possibly lowering federal income tax rates before his proposed plan of sweeping tax change is fully in effect.

The tax change proposals he made last Nov. 7 are planned to start Jan. 1, 1971, and to take five years to become fully effective.

Mr. Benson said that if, during the five years, the new tax plan produces more revenues than the government needs or feels should be taken in income taxes, the government can lower the rates of tax.

Can business absorb costs?

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal prices and incomes commission is ready to bring debate about a price-restraint program to a head at a national conference next month.

The commission will seek the agreement of business and the professions in Ottawa Feb. 9 and 10 to a program that would keep price increases below cost increments this year. In other words, business will be asked to absorb part of any increased costs in the anti-inflation program.

If a consensus is reached on a price-restraint formula, federal and provincial governments will be asked to back up the program by providing for legal sanctions to deal with transgressors, commission chairman John Young told a news conference Tuesday.

Answering Commons questions later, Finance Minister E. J. Benson told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield the government would do everything it considered reasonable to provide for sanctions.

Asked by Mr. Stanfield whether the government would submit specific price guides to the national conference—federal and provincial officials are expected to attend—Mr. Benson said it would be better for the conference to work out detailed formulas.

The decision to call the national conference, which probably will open and close with plenary sessions open to the public, followed a commission finding of "broad support" for a price-restraint program in talks with business leaders.

He told the Commons finance committee that the starting point of his tax proposals was that the new plan should produce nothing less in federal revenues in its first year of operation than current taxes would yield.

The new tax plan does involve an increase in revenues, mainly because of the five-year introductory phase of the proposal to tax capital gains as part of normal income.

Capital gains are to be included in taxpayers' incomes in two ways:

—The profit made, offset by any losses taken, on the actual sale of a capital asset after "valuation day," some time near the start of the new tax plan. A profit on the sale of a person's principal place of residence would be reduced by $1,000 a year after valuation day for tax purposes.

Big spender that Benson

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's chief inflation fighter, Finance Minister Edgar Benson, had the biggest travel expenses of any federal cabinet member in the 1968-69 fiscal year.

Figures in the public accounts for that year, tabled in the Commons Monday, show that Mr. Benson received $10,113 in travel expenses compared with $8,725 for Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, the second highest, and $8,382 for Prime Minister Trudeau, third highest.

Mr. Trudeau's travel expenses included $5,643 for the two-week Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London a year ago.

The accounts also show that Mr. Trudeau did not spend all of Parliament's $40,000 appropriation for him to run the prime ministerial residence at 24 Sussex Drive in Ottawa.

He spent $34,414 of the $40,000 allotment, including $3,963 for entertainment against an appropriation of $5,700.

FIRST NEWSMEN REPORT

Find hunger, looting, rape inside Biafra

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

OWERRI, Nigeria (AP) — The first newspaper men allowed inside fallen Biafra saw famished refugees fighting for food, looting by Nigerian soldiers and heard several firsthand accounts of women being raped by victorious Nigerian troops.

The farther the press party went inside former Biafran territory, the worse the conditions of hunger, homelessness and confusion became.

Everywhere refugees were on the road, teetering all their worldly goods on their hands, hunting lost husbands and children, trying desperately to change their Biafran money into Nigerian pounds to buy what food was available at little impromptu roadside markets.

A young British doctor, working in Nigeria less than two weeks, leaned his head against an ambulance and wept with rage.

"I've had Lugers stuck in both my ears," he sobbed. "My life has been threatened uncounted times by soldiers wanting to steal my trucks and ambulances."

The doctor said he had just returned from an open field where 80 to 100 wounded Biafran soldiers were "lying in their own excrement, waiting for treatment that never arrived."

"They bloody well ought to be dead," he said. "Now I've got to go try and fix them up. Don't go near them unless you've got clothespins on your nose."

The doctor, from Colchester would only give his name as "Doctor Phil."

Without naming the unit, he said the soldiers on duty in the area of the pediatric hospital at Okporo were "such monsters" he never let the nurses go anywhere without an escort, "especially white ones—the native nurses can always go into the bush if something happens."

"The young girls are afraid to come out of the bush, they are terrified of what will happen," Ibo novelist Cyprian Ekwensi told reporters. "There is now a saying among them: 'Stay in hiding or you will be conscripted into the army.'"

"My sister Bibi was taken off and raped by the soldiers," a university student named Paul Ohagwa said. Two Biafran nurses who would only give their names as Theresa and Caroline said they were raped several times as they passed through roadblocks trying to make their way out of the bush.

FEAST AMONG FAMINE

In Port Harcourt, recaptured by federal troops 17 months ago and now a state capital, the state governor entertained top brass at his daughter's wedding feast. But just a few miles away, Ibo refugees faced death. About 600 were crammed into the tiny Niger Maternity Home, many of them lying motionless in the hot sun amid vomit, dust and flies.

A group of British construction workers took up a collection to find food for them. They said three to four died daily.

Many of the children could not move and lay gasping as nurse Elna Petersen of Copenhagen tried to feed them.

"God help these children," Londoner Les Archer told reporters.

"Nobody else seems to want to. I cannot believe this is happening."

"The villages are the worst off," said an Irish missionary, Rev. Eammon McMahon, surrounded by hundreds of refugees begging for Nigerian pounds in the shell-pocked main square of Owerri.

"They have no food, their money is useless and we have no way of getting anything for them."

REDUCED TO BEGGING

The once proud Ibos, who through education and ambition had moved farther up the ladder of progress than Nigeria's 200 other tribes, were reduced to begging, with outstretched hands by the roadside, and fighting and clawing at each other when a food bag fell off a truck or broke at a feeding station.

Such scenes were repeated endlessly in the 150-mile tour of Ibo land. For all Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon's good intentions, it did not seem that the Nigerian army and the government relief machinery could begin coping with the problem.

Uli airstrip, except for a few potholes, seemed to be in excellent condition. But it was deserted save for the rusting carcasses of at least six planes bombed in their parking bays in the final federal siege.

"We used to get 40 planes a night, now we get nothing," said Ekwensi. "It is imperative that the government use the existing relief agencies."

But the government has barred all foreign relief agencies that helped Biafra.

A Nigerian captain in charge of guard detail at the ghost strip was outraged at questions of using Uli strip now.

Lawyers say: 'Nixon's role prevents fair Calley trial'

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP)

Defence lawyers charged Tuesday that no U.S. Army court could give Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. a fair trial because the commander-in-chief, President Nixon, made the decision to charge him with mass murder of 102 Vietnamese at My Lai.

The decision came down through the chain of high command and ultimately was carried out at Fort Benning, lawyer George Latimer asserted at a pre-trial hearing on defence motions. He sought dismissal of the charges.

The trial judge—Lt. Col. Reid W. Kennedy—did not act on the motion itself. He adjourned the hearing until Feb. 9 when he will take more evidence on the "command control" issue.

Kennedy said it would be up to the prosecution to answer the defence point that command control was exercised in charging Calley.

After Fort Benning authorities testify on that point, Kennedy said, he will decide whether to permit defence subpoenas for Defence Secretary Melvin Laird, Army Secretary Stanley Resor and Army Chief of Staff William C. Westmoreland.

PRECEDENTS SET

The U.S. Supreme Court has reversed court-martial convictions when command control was proven.

The fair trial issue was one of several broad issues raised.

Earlier there had been a discussion at the start of the hearing on whether the trial would open to the news media. The judge said Calley had a "right to a fair and open trial, and the public and press will not be excluded unless the defence requests such."

Latimer responded that he wanted a public trial.

Kennedy said the hearings would be open, except if classified information is to be discussed. No date has been set for the trial.

Calley was accused of 109 killings at My Lai. But the court, acting on a defence motion and with prosecution assent, dropped two specifications in the charge, reducing the number to 102.

BULLETIN

WATERVILLE, Que. — Fifteen firemen last night battled a $40,000 blaze that roared through the Rouillard Garage here.

The fire broke out at about 10 p.m. First reports indicate that the interior and contents of the garage were destroyed.

Say it isn't so, John

SAALBORO, Denmark (AP)

Beatle John Lennon had his long hair cut and his beard trimmed in his north Jutland retreat west of here and emerged "a new personality," Danish friends said Wednesday.

Lennon shed his Beatle image in a session with a woman hairdresser in the barn of the former farm where he has been staying for several weeks. He was joined in the haircutting ceremony by his wife, Yoko Ono, her five-year-old daughter Kyoko and several friends.

Aage Rosendahl Nielsen, head of the new experimental college Lennon has joined, said Lennon told him he sent for the hairdresser "because I just felt like shedding all that hair—and because a new haircut might enable me to move about anonymously."

Lennon himself was not reachable, nor was Aase Haukrogh, the Saalborg hairdresser who travelled to the farmhouse Monday.

SHOWBEAT

The true story of a man with "a hot line to God when he prays" brings an unlikely threesome together—writer-director Don Murray (left) and star Pat Boone (right) flank technical adviser Nicky Cruz, alias "The Garbage Can Killer."

Former White-Shoe Hero Helps Addicts Kick Habit in New Movie

The whole scene was so incongruous it had to be real.

Nice, clean-cut Pat Boone, the white-shoe hero of yesterday, was sitting in a bus parked on one of New York's seamier streets. He was pointing to a fairly attractive girl walking by and saying, "She's an addict."

He was looking for another girl, also an addict. She had said she would be by to see him and he was hoping she would keep her word. He's trying to help her.

"She's 22. Puerto Rican and Greek and she has been addicted 11 years. Her oldest son is nearly 9. She has three children and she looks 15. She's outgoing and warm and she says she wants to kick the habit," Boone says.

Pat, who is as clean-cut as he looks, is in the depressed neighborhood filming a movie, "The Cross and the Switchblade," an independent film produced by Dick Ross and Associates and written and directed by Don Murray.

It's a true story of a minister named David Wilkerson, played by Pat, who came to New York to work with street gangs and wound up founding a group called Teen Challenge.

One of the most ardent workers in the Teen Challenge group, and an assistant in the filming of the movie, was once admittedly one of the most vicious of New York's street gang leaders, a youth nicknamed "The Garbage Can Killer." His name is Nicky Cruz and he is a testament to the heart-warming message the film has, despite its sordid, violent setting.

Before he began work in the film, due for a February release, Pat admits he knew very little about addicts.

"Now I can tell them. They start nodding and they get euphoric. Then that wears off and they get very talkative. See those two fellows? They're real addicts."

Long before Pat was approached to play the role of Wilkerson, he had read the book on which the film is based. He had been so impressed, he decided to produce a film version himself. But he couldn't get anyone interested.

"The time was not right and I was not ready," he says now.

Then Dick Ross acquired the property and Pat was approached to play the role.

"Wilkerson is a completely fearless man," Pat says, and Murray agrees.

"He asked me to go to a tough neighborhood in the Bronx with him," Don said. "I took a camera to get some background photos."

The stoops were filled with tough guys and it was after dark. I felt fairly relaxed because I figured they all knew Wilkerson. Then he said, 'Gee, I don't know any of 'em' and I wanted to turn and run."

"Wilkerson," said Pat, "has a hot line to God when he prays."

'Hope'

James Earl Jones—no fighter but he's learning fast.

Jones is big—but not THAT big that you would see him and think heavyweight.

His replacement on Broadway—Yaphet Kotto—is a bigger man. Jones is aware of the difference.

"Kotto is built more like Jack Johnson was," he says.

Jones is enjoying doing the film, enjoying Los Angeles.

He is staying on the Sunset Strip—"I want to be where there is life"—because he has no intention of settling here.

"I'll always be just a visitor in Los Angeles," he says.

He may be a frequent visitor. There is every indication that he has a promising movie career. He will next star in the film version of William Styron's successful—and controversial—novel,

"The Confessions of Nat Turner." Jones was not one of the black group who protested that novel.

"I thought," he says, "that there was stupidity on both sides of that argument. The crux of the black objection was Nat's just after the white woman on the plantation. To me, that was a very normal behavior pattern. It would have been abnormal, I think, if he didn't react in that way."

He'll do Nat Turner. If they don't like it, maybe by then he'll be able to belt them one.

Film Version Will Have More Punch

"The Great White Hope" is now shooting. This play, one of the most exciting stage attractions Broadway has seen in a decade, starred James Earl Jones. And the movie—surprise!—stars James Earl Jones, too.

On stage or screen, Jones, as the Jack Johnson character, is power itself—charging through his scenes like a lightning bolt. He is every inch the heavyweight champ.

You hardly notice the quiet, bespectacled, studious black man sitting in the 20th Century-Fox commissary.

James Earl Jones? Ridiculous. Jones is a fighter. This man is obviously a sociology professor here doing a thesis on the cultural patterns of a studio.

But it is Jones. He looks about as pugilistic as a feather duster. And then you realize that he is, simply, a fine actor.

He isn't a fighter. He never was. He is playing a part. And that was O.K. on Broadway, when the fights were just hinted at.

But here, in front of the motion picture camera, there will be a fight. And Jones is consequently in training for it.

Mushy Callahan, an old-time ring man, is tutoring him. Mushy says that Jones is an apt pupil.

"He's learning fast," Mushy says.

Jones will be up against a monster of a man—6-9 Jim Beattie, a 280-pound ex-fighter from St. Paul. He's playing the part of Jess Willard (or the character modeled after Willard) and he has fought such men as Buster Mathis and Alonzo Johnson, so he knows what he's doing.

"The fight in the picture," says James Earl Jones, "is the biggest difference between the play and the film."

With Mushy's help, I think I'll make it."

Besides training for the fight itself, Jones has to train to keep himself in shape.

Hollywood is spoiling him. He says that when he was doing the play the physical strain was so great he was constantly losing weight.

"I had to go out and eat strawberry shortcake and ice cream to gain weight," he says. "But here I'm putting on so much weight that every morning I run around the UCLA track."

Stephen Leacock 'Had fun doing what he wanted'

OTTAWA (CP) — "A man who did what he wanted and had fun doing it" — that's how Mrs. Elizabeth Kimball, niece of Canadian humorist Stephen Leacock, described her famous uncle.

STEPHEN LEACOCK

Mrs. Kimball was at the National Library Tuesday to open, along with Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier, an exhibit commemorating the 100th anniversary of the humorist's birth.

Close to 250 items are on display, including 61 books, and the original manuscript of Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town, loaned by the Stephen Leacock Memorial Home Board in Orillia.

The first area of the exhibit consists of a series of photographs, drawings and other documentation illustrating the author's boyhood and schooling.

Born at Swanmore, Hants, England, Leacock came to Canada as a child with his family, and settled on a farm near Lake Simcoe. He attended Upper Canada College and the University of Toronto and received a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Chicago.

MIND IS CLOSED

At the time he wrote: "The meaning of this degree is that the recipient of instruction is examined for the last time in his life, and is pronounced completely full. After this, no new ideas can be imparted to him."

The second area of the exhibit includes more photographs and some of his earliest published writings. The third area illustrates Leacock's 35-year alliance with McGill University, which he joined as a professor in 1903. He later became head of the department of economics and political science.

The most widely-known aspect of his career, his humorous writing, is displayed in the fourth area of the exhibit, with a collection of books, periodical publications, illustrations from his published works, posters used on lecture tours in Britain, Canada and the United States, and several translations of his works.

The Stephen Leacock memorial stamp, picturing Leacock and his fictional town of Mariposa, is also on display. It was issued in November of last year.

The exhibit will be at the library until April, when it will be moved to Orillia.

Agree on appeals for Loyola teachers

MONTREAL (CP) — A preliminary agreement has been reached regarding appeal procedures covering Loyola College teachers whose contracts are not being renewed, the Jesuit institution announced Tuesday.

The college administration's decision not to renew the contracts of 27 teachers is at the centre of a dispute involving repeated student demonstrations on Loyola's west-end campus.

Under terms of the agreement, the college recognized that the lodging of an appeal against the notice of non-renewal of contract suspends the effect of the notice until the appeal is decided.

Also, the appeals will be heard by a reconstituted body instead of the existing college committee on appointments, rank and tenure.

The nature and composition of such a body is being discussed before a mediator named by the Quebec government.

The college administration has maintained that staff cuts are necessary because of an expected decrease in student enrolment next year and also because of a need to upgrade standards in the English department, where 17 of the 27 affected professors teach.

Some students and faculty members say the college is "purging" the faculty of teachers who have disagreed with administration policy.

OH DAD, POOR DAD — Bronwen Mantell practices her best bedside manner on Bob Winters during a rehearsal of Arthur Kopit's absurd classic Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mamma's Hung You in the Closet and I'm So Sad, the student-produced major play which will be presented at Bishop's University Friday and Saturday nights. The play, directed by Bruce Retallack, will be the first production at the Centennial Theatre by the Bishop's Dramatics Society in 1970. Curtain time is 8 p.m. and tickets may be obtained at the Centennial Theatre box office.

Raised again The old OAS question

OTTAWA (CP) — The perennial question of whether Canada should join the Organization of American States is being thrashed out again as work proceeds on preparation of the government's foreign policy paper.

Indications at the moment are that Canada will decide once again to stay out of the hemispheric organization, opting instead to develop its relations with Latin America in other ways.

However, it is emphasized that the cabinet has yet to take a final decision on the question.

The issue of OAS membership has been under review by an interdepartmental committee on relations with Latin America, established following the return of a Canadian ministerial delegation which visited that area of the world in late 1968.

The preliminary report of the delegation, which included five cabinet ministers led by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, left open the possibility of a Canadian move to enter the OAS.

FAVOR INITIAL STEPS

Alternatively, the government could decide that "before contemplating this major institutional step," it would be best for Canada to develop closer bilateral relations with Latin American countries and increase its co-operation with more specialized inter-American organizations.

"Either way, it is the view of the mission that there should be more frequent and intensive consultation with Latin American countries on international and hemispheric affairs," said the report, tabled in the Commons one year ago.

According to an informed source, the issue must be viewed in the light of the government's over-all spending guides.

"We are going through a time of great austerity," he remarked. It would cost a fair amount of money for Canada to join the OAS, he maintained, starting with the expense of opening and staffing a mission to the organization's Washington headquarters.

Like most other government departments, the external affairs department has been ordered to live within its 1969-70 budget for at least one additional year. The resulting financial squeeze forced Mr. Sharp last fall to order the closing of seven missions abroad, including three in Latin America.

An Ottawa source involved with the work of the committee studying the OAS question said Tuesday he personally sees no reason to change Canada's policy of non-membership.

Executive of I-R

SHERBROOKE — J. Leo Tracey, 53, well-known Sherbrooke businessman, died here yesterday. He is survived by his wife, the former Jean Burbank, and three children, Kevin, Brian and Sharon.

Mr. Tracey was purchasing agent at the Canadian Ingersoll Rand at the time of his death, having previously been employed in the same capacity at Sherbrooke Machineries until the amalgamation of the two companies.

Active in community affairs, Mr. Tracey was president of the YM-YWCA, president of the Sherbrooke Fish and Game Club and a member of the St. George's Club.

He was born in Montreal and had lived in Sherbrooke for the past 22 years.

Funeral services will be held at St. Patrick's Church at 10 a.m. Friday. Burial is at St. Michael's Cemetery, Sherbrooke.

Alexander Galt principal Urges broader education for tomorrow's students

By DAVE MARROTTE

LENNOXVILLE — High school students of tomorrow — if they survive the potential effects of Bill 62 — should be given a broader education, getting away from strict curriculum profiles now in existence, Ian MacLeay, principal of Alexander Galt Regional School, said here last night.

Speaking to members of the Lennoxville Optimist Club, Mr. MacLeay said that trade school concepts in secondary education could be improved.

"We can turn out first rate mechanics," he said, "but we haven't been providing a good foundation for these people beyond their working hours."

Mr. MacLeay explained that instead of teaching mechanically-inclined students courses with only 25 per cent English, French, History and Mathematics, they should be given general subjects, saving specialization until post high school years.

DEVELOP PATTERNS

"That student," he added, "should receive basic training to help develop thinking patterns and learn how to communicate with others."

Quoting a Regional School Board brief on Bill 62, Mr. MacLeay said, "We find the plan of unified school boards laid down in the bill unacceptable, posing a threat to rights of the English-speaking community."

He said Bill 62, a political document, was designed by politicians to appeal to the vast majority of the population, and as such, is a step in the current trend to impose upon the English-speaking minority the same conditions which French Canadians have faced elsewhere in Canada.

"Bill 62," he said, "makes a mockery of Bill 63, which guarantees that parents may have instruction in the language of their choice. Such guarantees are useless if the minority group has no control over its own curriculum."

AN ECONOMY

The Minister of Education emphasizes that Bill 62 will represent an economy at the administrative level, said Mr. MacLeay.

"If the government really intends to allow an English-language course of studies, two sets of teachers and administrators would have to be created and this would certainly prove to be more expensive."

Since 1964, he added, there has been a gradually accelerating loss of control over curriculum by Protestant school boards. With the department pursuing a policy of centralization, dictating courses and instructions to follow them, we will get French texts or translations, contrary to our philosophy.

While being in sympathy with the French society in Quebec, in its struggle to preserve and safeguard its culture, we must defend the right to preserve and safeguard our own," he said.

SHERBROOKE — Peter White, chairman of the Association for Reform in Education and President of the Sherbrooke Record will be featured on the Program Civic Affairs to be heard on Radio Station CKTS at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

Mr. White will be available to answer questions on educational policy in general and Bill 62 in particular on the weekly open line show.

Although no official pronouncement of government policy has been announced, Bill 62 is obviously the first step in a program designed to cover the whole province, said Mr. MacLeay.

While the effects are extremely serious for the English-speaking population on the Island of Montreal, application of the same principle to the scattered English populations of the island would have grave consequences for the future of English language education in the entire province of Quebec.

Israelis invade Jordan

An Israeli armored force reinforced by aircraft invaded Jordan Tuesday night and the fighting was still going on today, the Jordanian army announced in Amman, capital of the tiny country.

A Jordanian military spokesman said several formations of aircraft took part in the battle in the Southern Jordan Valley, which began when the Israeli force entered Jordan after sunset. It was the first Israeli invasion of Jordan in 21 months.

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli military spokesman said an Israeli army unit crossed the Jordan border south of the Dead Sea during the night and carried out a retaliatory attack against Arab guerrilla bases, killing five guerrillas.

He said a mopping-up operation is still going on and the force will return to Israel when they will complete it.

The spokesman said the Israeli attack in the Safi region followed repeated attacks from Jordanian territory on a potash plant at Sodom near the Dead Sea and on Israeli civilian settlements in the region. A number of guerrilla vehicles were damaged including a jeep.

There were no Israeli casualties, he said.

Unofficial reports said that some 40 Israeli tanks and armored cars crossed the ceasefire line under a heavy cover of artillery fire and headed for Safi and Fifta after the area was softened up by an air raid.

The Israelis shelled hilltops and the main road linking the region to Karak, about 18 miles to the northeast.

The Amman newspaper Al Dita said that first reports indicated that one person was killed in the attack and seven others were wounded, including a woman.

A car used by an anti-malaria team was damaged, it added.

The Jordanian spokesman made no mention of casualties, nor did he estimate the size of the Israeli force.

He merely said it was composed of tanks and armored cars which, supported by artillery, crossed the ceasefire line into the area south of the Dead Sea and was engaged by the Jordanian forces.

The area was the scene of Palestinian Arab commando activity during the last two days and the Israeli potash plant at Sodom was shelled twice by the commandos who claimed to have caused heavy damage.

This was the first invasion by the Israeli forces since the battle of Karameh March 21, 1968, the Israelis then crossed the ceasefire line to attack alleged commando bases in the village which lies some three miles east of the River Jordan.

Nixon will submit 'state of world'

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States President Nixon began his second year in office Tuesday by announcing an "historic new precedent"—submission of a State of the World message to Congress following his State of the Union report.

Chatting with reporters in his office, Nixon said the traditional State of the Union message, which he will deliver personally at a Senate-House session at noon Thursday, will be followed early in February by a special written report on foreign policy.

He indicated he is taking this course because Thursday's speech, to be broadcast live by television and radio networks, will emphasize the fight against inflation, the forthcoming federal budget, and domestic concerns.

A test of the Liberals' mettle

By HUBERT BAUCH
Record News Editor

QUEBEC — Political pundits are forever fond of observing that the true test of a party's mettle is its ability to withstand a leadership convention.

In the case of the Quebec Liberal party, which effected a somewhat painful changing of the guard this weekend, the old cliché seems alarmingly apt.

The election of 36-year-old Robert Bourassa, considered by many to be a political Johnny-come-lately, coupled with the decisive rejection of populist candidate Claude Wagner, had the potentially disastrous effect of alienating the party's grass-roots supporters from its urban element.

Former Justice Minister Wagner, who presented himself to the party militants as the people's candidate, was deeply stung by his first ballot loss and today his future with the provincial Liberals is, at best, uncertain.

Mr. Bourassa and most Liberals have stated they would like Mr. Wagner to stay in the party, but speculation has it that the MNA from Verdun may bolt the organization in favor of an alliance with the Creditiste party which has indicated it is ready to enter provincial politics.

PATCH-UP ATTEMPT

Following his election, Mr. Bourassa said he intends to meet with both his opponents this week in an effort to patch up ideological differences and to work out their future in the party.

But the rift between Mr. Wagner and the new Liberal boss goes deeper than a mere personality conflict.

Mr. Wagner's base of support lay in the lower middle class and the rural areas; elements of the population which distrust the upper middle and upper class financial interests with which Mr. Bourassa has become identified.

In the heat of the convention itself following the vote which saw Mr. Bourassa step into Jean Lesage's shoes, many Wagner supporters declared they had had it with the Liberals and urged their candidate to seek new political vistas.

If Mr. Wagner does indeed sever relations with the party, it could be a staggering blow for the Liberals.

In opinion surveys conducted by several Quebec newspapers last summer, Mr. Wagner emerged as the most popular politician in the province among the general populace.

He lost no opportunity to stress this during his campaign as he told delegates he was the man to lead the Liberals out of the political wilderness and back into power.

The convention, however, rejected the populist approach and opted instead for Mr. Bourassa's academic economic theories, hoping that he can increase his popularity with the population at large before the next provincial election which is expected this summer or in the fall.

BECAME MORE DYNAMIC

Until recently most observers had considered Mr. Bourassa too intellectually dry to appeal to the average voter, but late in the leadership campaign he began to develop a more dynamic style as he began to abandon his lengthy academic monologues in favor of more punchy statements.

After a brief holiday, the new Liberal leader said he plans to embark on a provincial tour to visit CEGEPs, universities and local party organizations to amplify his prosperity through economic development campaign theme.

He said he also plans to start organizing for the upcoming election, but observers feel his inside the party fence mending will depend greatly on the path Mr. Wagner decides to take.

The Union Nationale, which in 1966 took advantage of the Liberal neglect of rural areas to regain the power they had lost for six years, are still strong outside the urban centres and if the Liberals expect to make inroads into this power base they will need a speedy patching job of their current schism.

Should Mr. Wagner decide to leave the Liberal fold in favor of a new provincial political home, the ramifications of the move could further complicate the already chaotic Quebec scene.

PERSONAL APPEAL

The earthy, tough-talking former crime buster has a great deal of personal support; some have even estimated that by himself he could carry 20 per cent of the Quebec popular vote.

Should he leave the Liberals, he would take a lot of supporters with him and this would be an obvious blow to the party's aspirations.

However, the embittered mood of his followers in the wake of his convention defeat makes it doubtful that he could totally throw the full weight of his personal popular support behind Mr. Bourassa.

Should he strike out on his own or form an alliance with the Creditistes, the vote in the next provincial election would be split to the point where a minority government would be almost a certainty.

Either way the big losers will be the Union Nationale which already faces the prospect of sharing the rural vote with two forces with which it did not have to cope with in the 1966 election—the Parti Quebecois and the Creditistes.

Mr. Wagner's emergence as an independent political entity would be a further drain on the government's grass roots support.

COULD SLIP IN

On the other hand, the Liberals with their urban power base stand to lose less by such a move and could conceivably slip into power on the strength of their current support.

The big charge against the Liberals in the last election is that in the arrogance of power they neglected the rural areas.

However, they still had a plurality in the popular vote and despite the fact that they have not made any great advances in the areas they neglected in 1966, their city support has not dwindled to any appreciable extent.

Indeed, the Union Nationale's economic and educational fundings in the last four years have resulted in the Liberals gaining strength in the urban and industrial sector.

On top of that, the election of Bourassa, a top flight financial and economic theorist, could be the decisive factor in a Liberal sweep of the urban areas.

MATTER OF FACT
JOSEPH ALSOP

WASHINGTON — Let us suppose that President Nixon had been obliged to send Melvin Laird's nomination as secretary of defense to the Pentagon instead of to the Senate.

Let us suppose, too, that the Pentagon's generals and admirals had three times rejected the civilian, Laird, and had instead demanded the appointment of one of their own group. And let us suppose, finally, that President Nixon had thus been forced to name Gen. Earle Wheeler to the secretaryship.

We should then, rather clearly, have good reason to worry about the increasing power of the famous "military-industrial complex". Yet this is the exact-parallel of what actually happened in the Soviet Union, when Marshal Rodion Malinovsky died and Marshal Andrei Grechko succeeded him as defense minister.

After Malinovsky died, as already reported in this space, it is well established that the Soviet Presidium held out for a week for the appointment of the civilian chief of Soviet defense production, D. F. Ustinov. And it is also well established that Marshall Grechko was finally named at the insistence of the massed phalanx of his fellow marshals.

BASIC FACTS CHANGED

This is the context in which to consider the coming second round of senatorial argument about American ABM deployment. The basic facts, one must add, are also very much more somber today than they were a year ago, when Secretary Laird asked for authorization to deploy the Safeguard ABM system.

The heart of the matter is the rate of deployment of the giant Soviet missile, the SS-9. This missile is specially designed to neutralize the Minuteman missiles, which constitute the main strength of the American nuclear deterrent. And in 1969, SS-9 deployment surged forward at a record rate, instead of tailing off, as forecast by the wishful members of the Intelligence community.

The rate of SS-9 deployment in fact increased by 20 per cent, which the worst pessimists had not foreseen. Comparable accelerations are furthermore thought to be entirely feasible this year and next year. And if that is what happens, our Minuteman missiles will be entirely neutralized by about the end of 1974, unless the Safeguard program is also accelerated to the utmost.

This is a deadly dangerous business. If the SALT talks do not achieve an early, rather unlikely success, President Nixon will have to begin thinking about building a second generation nuclear deterrent, in addition to the Safeguard system.

To see the danger, you need only remember the Cuban missile crisis, when this country's nuclear striking power was five times greater than the power then possessed by the Soviets. Nonetheless, the Cuban crisis was the most breathless moment in all the troubled history of the years after World War II.

Consider, then, what may happen when Soviet nuclear striking power is five times our own — which is the prospect we face if the anti-ABM senators win the next round. No one but a fool can suppose that this kind of fearsome upset in the balance of nuclear power will fail to embolden the Soviet marshals.

INCREASED BOLDNESS

No one but a fool can suppose, either, that the increased boldness will not show itself in the kind of Soviet actions that the Kremlin policy-makers will consider much too risky. And none but fools can ignore the key fact, that the Soviets long since began to show greater and greater boldness in their actions in the Middle East.

Concerning the Middle East, we have already been warned by the gross bad faith the Kremlin has just displayed in the U.S.-Soviet discussions of an Arab-Israeli settlement. For the present, however, we can rely on the Israelis' splendid courage and hardihood to defend their land and people against any attack the Arabs can mount.

But it is quite obvious that we cannot possibly rely on continuing Israeli success, if the Soviets' actions in the Middle East go on getting bolder and bolder. For instance, a thousand Russian "air volunteers" would be quite enough to pound the Israeli air force out of the air, despite all the skill and bravery of the Israeli pilots.

That is the kind of future development that now has to be carefully weighed. And with the nuclear balance five-to-one against him, what can any American President do about such development, except to utter impotent protests?

The answer is simple. When Sen. Edward Kennedy and his allies declaim against the ABM, they are quite possibly talking about 2.5 million dead Jews.

Housing costs circle

A spokesman for the Canadian construction industry has suggested that an easement in taxation on building materials and property would ease the way toward construction of more low-cost houses.

Obviously there is something to be said in favor of the idea. The federal tax on building materials, provincial sales taxes and municipal property taxes do add substantially to the cost of current home construction.

But before pressing too hard for the elimination or substantial reduction of these levies, there are a number of points that must be considered.

The first of these is that it must be assumed that governments have no serious intention of reducing their expenditures, or the revenues which support this expenditure.

In other words, they show no signs of reducing the total tax load on the people. Thus it may be assumed that if they cut one tax here, they will only raise another tax somewhere else, to keep the national, provincial or municipal revenue unchanged.

And it is not very hard to guess what would happen immediately the federal government, for example, removed its tax on building materials.

Wages in the building industry would go up and close the gap at once, unless the provincial and municipal governments managed to get in their first with tax boosts of their own.

It would be too much to expect any lowering in the cost of home construction.

The simple truth of the housing problem is that costs and taxes are mounting too rapidly to keep new homes within the reach of low or medium income families.

Until, and unless, this process is reversed, the demand for more public housing on one or another kind of subsidized basis is going to increase.

And with the increase of subsidized construction, the burdens on the various government treasuries will grow with a consequent increase in the tax burden.

So the vicious circle will be accentuated.

A nonsensical argument

Following their store and car window-smashing attack on downtown Chicago last October, which somehow failed to stir the lethargic, oppressed masses in America to revolution, members of the radical Weatherman faction of the Students for a Democratic Society who had escaped arrest held a self-criticism session.

This is a regular practice faithfully observed by all good Communists and other fanatics.

It was agreed that the window-breaking had been a good idea. But some Weathermen objected, writes John Kifner in the New York Times magazine that Volkswagens as well as "ruling class" automobiles had been smashed in the orgy.

Now judging a person by the kind of car he owns can be about as useful as judging him by the color of his hair.

Cadillacs may be seen parked in front of the shabbiest slum dwellings; some bank presidents drive Volkswagens.

If there were not already enough evidence, this example alone would illustrate how incredibly naive are some representatives of "the best-informed generation in history."

How did they get that way?

Somewhere along the line a lot of young people have been misinformed or malinformed or not informed at all.

"It's nice of your little wife to invite your old boss over for dinner Smedley, . . ."

Letters to editor

Stand and declare on Bill 62

Sir:
I am writing in reference to the front-page feature of The Record of Tuesday, Dec. 16, 1969, wherein you tried to interest the English-speaking population of Quebec in the futility and bleakness of the future of English if Bill 62 was adopted as such without further amendments.

You advocated that interested people write on this matter, of implementing the main recommendations in the Page report, calling for separate language school boards, to their own local members of the Quebec National Assembly, to the Quebec Premier and to Mr. Cardinal, Minister of Education.

This I did, receiving a very kind, interested and considerate reply from our member Hon. Georges Vaillancourt in English.

Several days later a reply somewhat more reserved but in English came from the Hon. Jean-Jacques Bertrand's secretary, and then a reply a few days ago from the Education Minister's Secretary - but in French, not really acknowledging anything beyond receipt of my letter.

Therefore I believe, we English-speaking parents, need to stand and declare ourselves and be counted, as our esteemed crusading, Sherbrooke Record President has exhorted us to do, before it is too late to demand that our rights be considered, as well as the majority.

A very ardently interested English-speaking parent.

Sir:
In regards the condition of our streets: I was born and lived all my life here, except a few years during the war, and I have never seen the streets of our city in such a disgraceful and dangerous mess as they are right now. It's almost a month since the last heavy storm and the snow is still packed along each side of most streets between sidewalk and the thoroughfare making it about 6- to 8-feet narrower and very dangerous. Also, to get to a bus, a taxi or any car, you must climb over about three feet of snow or shovel your way through it. And it's getting worse every year even with all the expensive equipment that's been bought. Years back, when we had less, the streets were never left in such condition.

Yours very sincerely,
THOMAS PAGE

GRACE CHAPEL WOMEN'S MISSIONARY FELLOWSHIP

The Women's Missionary Fellowship held their monthly meeting with Mrs. Arthur Hill presiding on Jan. 12.

Mrs. Charles Haley was the pianist. The secretary's report was given by Mrs. Arnold Faith. Mrs. Frances Hatch gave the treasurer's report. Mrs. Thomas Young, work committee, reported a need for knitted bandages for cancer patients and woolen baby shirts to be sent to Angola.

A baby shower was given in honor of Mrs. William Wolitarsky, a worker in Quebec, for whom the ladies brought jars of baby food.

Mrs. Arthur Hill introduced the new executive and Mrs. Allison Welch led in a prayer of dedication.

Miss Marjorie Beckwith announced the theme for 1970 as "Ready to be used for every good work".

Mrs. Arthur Hill informed the ladies of the change in name from the former Women's Missionary Prayer Group to Women's Missionary Fellowship.

The highlight of the evening was a "Bethel Bible Institute", of Lennoxville, presented in three parts.

Mrs. Homer Payne introduced several members of the Bethel staff, including Mrs. Sheldon Band, Miss Doris Janson, Miss Charlotte Dancy, Mrs. Jules Mailoux and Mrs. Robert Hostetler.

Mrs. Sheldon Band told the interesting history of Bethel with Miss Dorothy Kenyon as the founder. Other points of interest were their active summer children's camps and the fact that 360 French Bible correspondence courses were completed this year.

Mrs. Jules Mailoux showed slides of a typical "Day at Bethel". Mrs. Homer Payne gave a short devotional and Mrs. Arthur Hill closed with prayer.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. John Haffenden, Mrs. Donald Fish and Miss Clara Suchard.

ASCOT WI

Members of Ascot Women's Institute held their first meeting of the New Year in the Lennoxville club room, Town Hall, Queen Street. Being home economics day, Mrs. Harold Robertson, convener, was in charge of the program. Mrs. Robertson gave a step by step demonstration on cake decorating. The model was a three story birthday cake, filled, iced and decorated with lighted candles. It was the center of attraction and discussion at the lunch hour.

A contest on a custard-cup size, moulded salad was won by Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. Lorne Butler. The salads were both attractive and contents well blended for nutritional value. The acting judges were Mrs. Kenneth G. Brown and Mrs. Hugh L. Wallace who added their congratulations to the contestants. Mrs. Robertson presented gifts to the judges.

Mrs. Ashley Hatcher, president, was in the chair and welcomed the members and guests. The Salute to the flag, and singing of O'Canada preceded the Club Woman's Creed.

Mrs. Frank Ingham, secretary, read the many items of correspondence including many letters of thanks for Christmas remembrances and a letter from the Archives in Ottawa expressing thanks for Volume 2 of the Ascot History.

Mrs. William Mitchell, treasurer, reported a most satisfactory sale of the book and noted several complimentary donations received.

The roll call, in keeping with the day's program was to give a sewing hint. Mrs. Wentworth S. Richardson read a Song of the Lazy Farmer and Mrs. Camille Bernard discussed Bill 62. Mrs. Harold Robertson spoke on the standardization of sizing for children's clothing according to body measurements instead of by age. Mrs. Armand Gregoire asked that a telephone committee be appointed to assist with publicity. Mrs. Elwood Marlin gave some valuable information on aids for the prevailing colds and flu. Mrs. Donald McElrea reported on items purchased for 20 Christmas baskets and commented on the joy and pleasure in calling on the shut ins.

Committees named were: nominating, Mrs. Frank Ingham, and Mrs. Elwood Marlin; program, Mrs. Hazel Coates and Mrs. Ashley Hatcher. The quarterly county meeting will be on February 11 in the Lennoxville Club room, with the branch as hosts. Mrs. Donald McElrea will be the convener.

The meeting was climaxed by a delectable salad tea served by the hostesses, Mrs. J. Ste-Marie, Mrs. Wentworth Richardson and Mrs. William I. Pedron.

Teacher and nurse plans for social work

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Every day is a challenge to Valerie Tustin, a former school teacher whose career has taken her from the wilds of northern Quebec to British Honduras in Central America.

Now she's studying nursing at the Greater Niagara General Hospital, and hopes some day to become a social worker.

In 1968 she was on the staff of a Cree Indian school 60 miles north of the town of Chibougamau on Lake Mistassini in Quebec. It all had started when she "just decided one night" that she would like to teach Indian children. She was accepted by Anglican Church House in Toronto and was sent with two other girls to the Mistassini area. There they lived in a government — supplied three — bedroom house.

Attendance at the school was good despite the fact that the Indian children go with their parents into the bush on trapping and hunting trips. "We lose some in the fall, but they come back in January usually. In the spring they go duck-hunting, but the parents try to rotate the children so they don't miss too much of their studies."

"They usually take the slow learners so they can get training in hunting."

PARENTS CONCERNED
She says Indian parents are concerned about the children's education and before they take them into the bush they consult with the teachers.

The settlement where she taught was only five years old at the time, but the Indians had made a good deal of progress. "Every year they build 10 or 11 houses. Gradually they are all getting houses, but even though there are houses they still have the instinct to go back into tents."

"But they are happy and contented. I like their life. It is very casual but interesting."

Both Anglican and Roman Catholic priests conduct Sunday services, and a woman

Pentecostal missionary holds services in a tent. At the Anglican services the pews usually are filled and people sit on the floor at the back of the church to listen to the Anglican priest and a Cree lay reader. "It seemed unbelievable," Miss Tustin said.

WANT WOOLLEN HATS
The people of Niagara Falls had sent up some 1,000 pounds of clothing, but there was a big demand during the winter for woollen hats. "At the end of last winter we found that the children's ear drums were breaking because of the cold winds."

"Some days the kiddies came to school with towels or sweaters tied around their faces to protect them from the cold."

But Christmas in 1968 "was beautiful."

"Before entering nursing school Miss Tustin spent six weeks in British Honduras with an Anglican volunteer work group."

Conveners present reports

WATERLOO — The annual meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary, Royal Canadian Legion branch 77, met on Jan. 13 with 16 members. Annual reports were presented and plans made for the coming year.

The ladies will be canvassing on Jan. 26 for the Mothers' March on polio. The entire campaign, run by the Legion, takes place from Jan. 15th to 31st. In addition to the Mothers' March, cards will be placed in stores and hotels where citizens may also donate.

The meeting was opened by immediate past president Mrs. Isobel Tryhorn. Following the treasurer's report, showing a balance of $434.35, annual reports were given. Mrs. Grace Rainville, membership, reported 51 members on the mailing list last year. Mrs. Ruby Sturtevant, ways and means, noted that 21 events had been catered to during the year and that 1792 individual meals were served. Mrs. Dorothy Nielson reported for the House; Mrs. Bernice Champagne for publicity and the secretary, Miss Myrna Fraser on social activities; Mrs. Lillian Bouchard reported on the concession. The auditors' report was given by Mrs. Reba Holloway and Mrs. Rainville. Mrs. Tryhorn thanked all the ladies for their support in 1969.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Sturtevant, who spoke on behalf of all the ladies in thanking Mrs. Tryhorn for her hard work. New committees for 1970 are: telephone, Mrs. Lois Campbell; social, Mrs. Joyce Sheppard; concession, Mrs. Bouchard; ways and means, Mrs. Rainville; publicity, Mrs. Champagne; Ste. Annes, Mrs. Lucie Cote; house, Mrs. Mildred McCullough; welfare and sick, Mrs. Lucille Aitken and auditors,

Frozen cream cheese cakes

Cheese — and strawberries? That's the latest innovation in frozen cream cheese cakes from Kitchens of Sara Lee and it's not as strange as it might sound.

"The Sara Lee people should know, because they are the people who first introduced frozen cream cheese cakes to the Canadian market only a few years ago, and they've seen the popularity of cheese cakes grow by leaps and bounds ever since."

They started with plain cream cheese cake, then followed with toppings of pineapple, cherry, and blueberry, and each new product was greeted by enthusiastic public response. Last year alone, the company's total cheese cake business increased 32 per cent — the year the blueberry cake was introduced.

"Strawberry is the most universally accepted fruit flavor in Canada, so our expectation — backed up by advance consumer research — is that the strawberry cream cheese cake will be even more popular with Canadian consumers than its predecessors have been," says the general manager.

In all cases, the fruit topping is fresh fruit, specially selected and cooked in its own juices. The cream cheese filling is a special blending of cream, cheese, bakers' cheese and fresh whole eggs, baked on a special formula graham cracker crust. In selection of ingredients and in processing, Sara Lee places strong emphasis on superior quality as a "guarantee of goodness" with all ingredients being subject to exceptionally rigid quality control.

The new cakes are being produced in Sara Lee's Bramalea, Ontario plant — most modern plant of its kind in Canada — and are now appearing in the frozen foods sections of food stores across Canada.

Labor leader's wife reflects

MONTREAL (CP) — Simone Chartrand, wife of volatile labor leader Michel Chartrand, says she has spent most of her married life explaining her husband's "aggressive public nature" to friends, their seven children and even school authorities.

Mrs. Chartrand's unceasing defence of Michel began in 1941 when she defied her parents to marry him.

"My mother didn't come to our wedding," she said in an interview.

"Our parish priest refused to marry us and my father, who liked Michel, warned me I was marrying a man who would never sacrifice principle for money and that I would have to give up material things for his causes."

Material possessions were never lacking in Simone's childhood home. As the only daughter of a judge, the late Amadee Monet, she "had everything" and was expected to marry someone in a similar category.

HASN'T CHANGED MIND

"My only brother was a lawyer and the family expected me to marry a lawyer. Had I married one of those lawyers they wanted me to marry, I suppose today I would be the wife of a cabinet minister. I'm convinced of that."

"But I would have become a snob and had I been giving conferences as I am now there wouldn't have been any union members among the audience."

"I thought of Michel as an extraordinary man and I have not changed my mind even after 28 years of marriage. People consider him intransigent now... imagine what he was like at

Even after their marriage, her family did not give up hope that Michel could be softened.

"My family kept suggesting that Michel should concentrate on trying to make money instead of trying to change the world. They kept asking me why he always had to lose in politics. They even suggested he should move over to the winning side if he wanted to remain in politics."

Her husband's ideals have been questioned by the children too. She said they are curious when Michel's name appears in the newspaper, as has been the case frequently.

Mr. Chartrand, president of the Montreal council of the 225,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions, is an avowed socialist who wants French made the working language in Quebec province.

CHARGE DISMISSED

In early December he had a charge of sedition against him dismissed by the courts. It arose from a speech he made in Quebec City during a wave of demonstrations to protest the provincial government's language legislation. The court ruled there was no evidence of sedition.

Mrs. Chartrand herself often thrusts herself into active political roles.

She helped organize a group of 150 women who marched on Montreal's city hall during Grey Cup weekend to protest the city's anti-demonstration bylaw. They were chained together, bounced into a paddy wagon and taken to jail, to be released later on bail.

"I always think of myself as Mrs. Simone Chartrand," she said. "I never agreed to giving up my identity. Nor did Michel want to expect that I came in for my share of criticism too, never forget that."

Being her own woman has included a career as a free-lance journalist and taking evening university courses.

"Michel would baby-sit or pay for a sitter. My family and friends criticized me for that. They could not understand why I wasn't content to be a wife and mother."

Brushing over their displeasure, Mrs. Chartrand, now a CBC employee, became even more active politically as her children, now 27, 26, 25, 24, 22, 16, and 15 grew older.

Husband Michel Chartrand

CAN'T ASK EQUALITY

"We can't ask for equality unless we have the qualifications. How else does a housewife become qualified? I learned about civic responsibilities through groups such as La Federation des Femmes, which I founded, and the Voice of Women. If women don't join such groups, they retain the intelligence of minors."

On the other hand, "I think today's woman is so determined to have a 50-50 partnership she sometimes forgets it is up to a woman to be flexible."

"I also try to impress upon them the importance of being friends with a man before marriage. Michel and I were friends first and friends we remain."

Simone has had to exercise tact at various times during the 28 years, both with her children and husband, whose approach to problems is different and more volatile.

"My nature is more conciliatory. It comes of being a woman and bearing children. I think Yes, we have disagreed in public. I've been at meetings where I have risen to say 'Mr. President, I disagree' — and Michel was the president."

"His approach is always being described as fiery and I do not consider that an exaggeration. Often I have said to him 'Why didn't you say it in such and such a way' and he replies 'But that would have been Simone Chartrand speaking, not Michel.'"

HAS NO ANIMOSITY

She laughed when asked about the touchy language situation in Quebec.

"Michel has no animosity against the English as such. He is against the establishment if the establishment is English, Jewish or French. But I agree his approach at times is terribly potent. At times he sounds fanatical. All seven of their children have learned to speak English."

"I say bravo to a person who can speak three or four languages. But it was Michel's influence as much as mine that made our children learn English. I think people misunderstand him when he pleads for the right of the majority. He is not denying the rights of the minority."

"I have a horror of prejudice, and none has been tolerated in our house."

"Our basic beliefs are the same. We are socialists. I'm less aggressive and I would take a more conciliatory approach but as he says, I'm Simone, not Michel. I think the difference in temperament was good for our marriage. Wouldn't it have been terrible had we both been that aggressive?"

Politician's wife reflects

QUEBEC (CP) — Andree Bourassa, wife of the new leader of Quebec's Liberal party, is a bright, brown-eyed blonde whose father was one of the founders of a multi-million-dollar shipbuilding industry.

She met her husband Robert in 1956 when he was campaigning as a candidate for the presidency of a student association at the University of Montreal.

Mr. Bourassa, elected Saturday as the successor to former premier Jean Lesage, lost the student election, but his wife says: "He won me in every sense of the term."

They were married in 1958 when Mr. Bourassa was working on a master's degree in political science and economics at Oxford and planning for a political career.

Unlike some women who detest following their husbands around in politics, Mrs. Bourassa finds nothing traumatic about being the wife of a politician.

"It's easy," she says. One of the reasons is that she knew her husband was planning a political career and realized she would have to make the personal sacrifices involved.

PREPARED HERSELF

"Psychologically, every woman prepares herself for her husband's career, and when you build it together as Robert and I have, then it becomes part of you as a couple."

Mrs. Bourassa, a mother of two, also says:

"I have always been interested in politics. I have felt involved, very close to Quebec society... very close to everything involving our culture."

She is, in her own words, "nationalist."

Mrs. Bourassa, who has a baccalaureate from an Institut de Pedagogie Familiale, has this opinion about Rene Levesque's separatist Parti Quebecois:

"For me, it represents something. It's not a thesis one rejects a priori without examining." Despite this, she says, she has serious reservations about it.

"I'm more interested in cultural things than Robert is. He's more materialistic. His concerns are more immediate. But I'm concerned with satisfying the creative side, the inner self."

Mrs. Bourassa is 36, the same age as her husband. They make their home in a rented town house in the Town of Mount Royal, Montreal's richest suburb.

PLAYS THE PIANO

She likes to read, to play the piano and to paint in oils.

Mrs. Bourassa accompanied her husband on about two-thirds of his travels during the four-month leadership campaign. To do so she had to abandon plans to become a full-time university student.

Nevertheless, between campaign meetings and caring for Francois, 10, and Michelle, 3, she managed to follow two courses toward a bachelor of arts in history at the University of Quebec.

Mr. Bourassa's public relations people say Mrs. Bourassa was an asset on the campaign trail. One said: "She's very flexible. She has a great deal of taste and fulfills her assignments."

But politics is not without its disadvantages. In the campaign Mr. Bourassa was attacked as the candidate of big business, largely because of his marriage to a millionaire heiress in the Simard shipbuilding family.

Mrs. Bourassa's father was Edouard Simard, one of four Simard brothers who founded a shipbuilding business that has now become Marine Industries Ltd. of Sorel, Que.

She says: "What annoys me is that this kind of thing isn't at the ideological level, but at the personal level."

Kinnear's Mills

Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Marshall, Waterville, Ont., and their sons, Cedric and Victor, daughter, Pauline, have returned home after visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney McKee, Lachine, were guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Lowry. They also visited Mr. and Mrs. Ivan McKee.

Mrs. Fred McElravy, Bulwer,

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Maxwell and son, Jimmy, Lennoxville, and Mr. Willis Nutbrown and two children, Waterville, Ont., were calling on Mr. Irvine Maxwell and Mrs. Annie Davidson.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Nutbrown, Shirley, Bradford, and Verlie, Waterville, Ont., visited relatives here. They also attended the funeral of Mrs. Nutbrown's father, Mr. Wilbert Learmonth, Inverness.

Beavers whip Verdun 10-4

SHERBROOKE — The Sherbrooke Beavers ran roughshod over Verdun Maple Leafs in a Junior A hockey league game played last night at the Sports Palace, taking the game by a 10-4 score. Among the spectators were the executive players and radio commentators of the Montreal Expos Baseball club.

The Beavers jumped to a three-goal lead in the opening period. Gilbert Smith tallied at the 13:38 mark with assists going to Bruno Landry and Michel Lefebvre. Bruno Landry got the second goal unassisted eight seconds later and Jacques Bedard connected with the third with less than two minutes to go in the period — Gilbert Smith and Michel Lefebvre assisting. There was only one penalty in the period — going to Gerald Lacompte of the Beavers. Beavers outshot the Leafs 17-6.

Denis Dussault and Bruno Isabelle each drew the first penalties of the second period during the first three minutes and although Yves Belanger in the Beavers net had a couple of tough shots to handle there was no scoring while his mates were off.

The Leafs got their first goal after seven minutes of play when Duck Wiseman stole the puck from a Beaver defenceman and beat Belanger from close in. Verdun got another four minutes later with Raynald Tessie scoring unassisted. This made it a 3-2 game. The Beavers went further ahead forty seconds later when Claude St. Sauveur hit on passes from Gaston Boulanger and Jacques Bedard.

Serge Martel teamed up with Wayne Altomare and Bernard Dion to tally for the Leafs. Then, suddenly, in the next three minutes the Beavers poured three goals in the Verdun net — Bruno Landry unassisted; Gerald Lacompte assisted by Claude St. Sauveur and Gilbert Smith; and Claude St. Sauveur with Bruno Isabelle assisting making it 7-3 for the locals. Beavers again outshot the Leafs 13-8.

Four Sherbrooke goals were scored in the final frame while the Leafs clicked for their fourth Normand Dube, Bruno Landry and J. C. Landry were the Beavers' marksman and Martel got the Leafs' tally. Les Castors performed well in the game — Bruno Landry, Claude St. Sauveur and Bedard were most effective.

Youthful Howe leads way in 4-1 win

East all-stars prove too strong

ST. LOUIS (CP) — East Division hammered the West Division 4-1 Tuesday in the annual National Hockey League all-star game and none of the players is arguing the outcome.

A record 16,587 fans attended. Last season's first East-West all-star game at Montreal, ended in a 3-3 tie. Up to then, the annual game involved an all-star team against the Stanley Cup champions.

Coach Claude Ruel of Montreal Canadiens, who guided the East Tuesday, said after the game he felt his division had shown it had the better team.

"They all played good hockey and they were the best on the ice," Ruel said. "They skated, checked and shot the puck like I told them and I think you could see they had the best team on the ice."

Scotty Bowman, manager and coach of St. Louis Blues, who coached the West team, said that he couldn't complain about his squad's performance.

"They all played their best," he said. "You couldn't have asked them for any more."

HAD BIGGER STARS
"The East obviously had the bigger stars. There's no way of getting away from it. You couldn't put together a much better team than they had."

Bobby Orr, 21-year-old Boston Bruins defenceman was playing in his second all-star game and contributed his usual outstanding performance, although he failed to score any points. Orr said he thought the whole team played an outstanding game.

Asked if he would some day like to coach such a power-packed squad, he had a better idea:

"No, I'd like to own one like it."

Orr took the greater share of defensive duties and Howe joked about his ice time in the dressing room later.

GORDIE HOWE

"You'll have to go out and practice tomorrow since you didn't get much work out there tonight," Howe said.

Hull, appearing in his ninth all-star game, was another outstanding player for the East, scoring his third all-star goal and assisting on Howe's 10th.

Ruel kept Hull on a line with centre Dave Keor, and right winger R. Ellis, both of Toronto Maple Leafs, and the trio provided the greater share of the East's 44 shots against western goalies Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers and Jacques Plante of the Blues.

Hull also lavished praise on his team-mates, saying the whole squad contributed to the victory.

He said he wasn't sure of how many more all-star contests he could look forward to.

"You never know, this might be my last," he said.

Hull was not among the first 12 players selected to the all-star team by the eastern section of the NHL Writer's Association.

MISSED 14 GAMES
Hull missed the first 14 games of this season but Ruel picked him as one of seven players to fill out his team.

The outstanding stars for the West were Plante and Prentice.

"Prentice was easily our best man out there," Bowman said.

Plante won praise from Bowman for stopping six shots in the last half of the second period and 20 in the final period.

Many of his saves were on close in shots by Hull and Ellis.

But while Plante shut out the East in his half of the game, Chicago's Tony Esposito was doing the same against the West by stopping nine shots. The West managed only another eight shots on Ed Giacomin of New York in the first half of the game, while the East fired another 18 at Parent during the first 30 minutes.

The game opened with the fastest two goals ever scored in an all-star match.

Laperriere blasted a shot from just inside the blue line that beat Parent with only 20 seconds gone in the game. Parent said later he was screened by Howe on the shot.

Prentice replied for the West just 17 seconds later with an easy shot from about 40 feet in front of Giacomin. The Rangers goalie appeared to have an easy stop to make but the puck hit a bump in the ice and bounced over his stick into the net.

The previous fastest two goals from the start of an all-star game came in 1963 when Frank Mahovlich of the Stanley Cup champion Maple Leafs scored at 2:22 of the first period. Montreal's Henri Richard of the all-stars scored the second goal of the game at 4:08.

PUT EAST AHEAD
Howe put the East back in front at 7:20 of the opening period when he took a quick pass from Hull and fired a hard shot from about 40 feet in front of Parent.

The goal came with right winger Frank St. Maurice of St. Louis in the penalty box.

It was the 22nd all-star power play goal ever scored, the fifth for Howe and the second game-winning goal for the Detroit veteran, which matches Richard's record. Richard scored his second game-winning goal for the Canadiens in the 1966-67 game.

Hull made the score 3-1 at 3:26 of the second period when he took a pass from Detroit defenceman Carl Brewer and fired a hard shot from about 30 feet to the right of Parent.

Tkaczuk banged in the rebound from a shot by Bruins' winger Johnny McKenzie.

It was Tkaczuk's first goal and his first all-star game appearance.

The goal at 9:37 of the second period brought a change in goalies for both sides.

Although outshot 47-38, the Vert et Or squad pressed Gatter goalie Phil Stote and emerged with tallies from Yvon Robert, Normand Delisle, Gerard Langelier, Alfred Charland and Pierre Bordeleau. The Gatters, now with a record of 5-4, countered with markers from captain Don Liesemer (2), veteran Willie Mitchell, and left-winger Ken Chipman.

Lennoxville — The University of Sherbrooke Vert et Or squeaked by the Bishop's University Gaiters 5-4 in a regularly scheduled OSLAA hockey game played last night at the W.B. Scott rink at Bishop's.

Although outshot 47-38, the Vert et Or squad pressed Gatter goalie Phil Stote and emerged with tallies from Yvon Robert, Normand Delisle, Gerard Langelier, Alfred Charland and Pierre Bordeleau. Snowmobiles

Accidents Can Be Prevented

TORONTO (CP) — People have driven snowmobiles off 50-foot cliffs, into open water, into trees and other snowmobiles. They have done damage to themselves and other people that ranged from minor sprains to fatal injury.

To find out what kind of injuries are occurring and why, a study has been made of three years of snowmobile accidents as they show on Peterborough, Ont., hospital records. They have shown a marked increase, from eight four years ago to 105 last year.

Dr. L. J. Calbert of Peterborough, provincial surgeon for the St. John Ambulance, requested the report. St. John is providing courses in first aid for snowmobilers and is increasing the number of snowmobiles for its own people in the snow belt.

Dr. Calbert says: "There were probably about twice as many people treated by independent doctors as by hospitals. It looks as though, in addition to car and motorcycle accidents, there will be these.

"Three-quarters of the group were men, usually older men. The snowmobile is not a child's toy, though people are treating them like outboard motors, letting kids run around in them."

FOOT TWISTED

A snowmobiler himself, Dr. Calbert says the machines are not dangerous unless they are used dangerously. He says most of the accidents in the report were unnecessary, the result of over-confidence or thoughtlessness.

There were 42 soft-tissue injuries, eight ankle sprains, five knee injuries, two cases of bursitis and 25 fractures, some of them severe.

"People dangle a foot going around a curve. One girl's foot got caught in the snowmobile's track and twisted right around backward. She had to lie face down in the snow while someone freed her.

"It behooves somebody to know how to take these things apart."

There were 18 head injuries, mostly caused by people falling or being catapulted over the top of the machine. There were eye injuries caused by branches, fence wire or broken glasses.

"This would indicate safety glasses should be mandatory. We think 20 per cent of the injuries would have been prevented if people had been wearing hard hats and safety glasses."

The accidents took assorted forms. People fell off, turned sharply and tipped the machine or collided with things. Some of them ran into diving boards while cruising on ice.

"Two people drove out into space at high speed—one off a 50-foot cliff. One went up a ramp and fell into a burned-out barn.

"We know of 28 deaths in Ontario in association with snowmobiles. Six of them were by drowning; one died of exposure because he was too far from help.

"Night-time injuries accounted for 30 per cent of the total accidents in our report.

TIPS FOR SAFETY

"One way to prevent accidents is to know the trail you are going on. You don't go full-throttle down a trail you don't know—you might hit a pothole just filled with snow."

You should have snowshoes with you on the snowmobile, or travel in pairs. If you do get into trouble far from help, you should have an axe, cut down a tree, start a fire and relax, get mentally cooled off. You can't walk through deep snow, and the numbing factor of cold impairs your judgment, even if it is normally good.

"You should, of course, wear suitable clothing, including proper mitts and footwear.

"You should know how to run the machine properly. People think it's a toy, and it's not.

"And they are not as easily handled if they are pulling something. One man towing a toboggan cracked the whip and threw two kids under a car."

Cigarette poker cards are back! The popular poker contest, played by millions of Canadians in the 1930s, returned to the Quebec market yesterday in Sweet Caporal cigarettes, together with the new Filter Sweet Caps. The photo shows the old (right) and the new in poker cards and Sweet Caps.

Poker Contest Revived

Cigarette poker cards, a game that millions of Canadians played in the 1930s, returned to the Quebec market yesterday after an absence of 34 years.

The popular poker contest has been revived, with modifications, in Sweet Caporal cigarettes under the name "You Bet Your Sweet Caps!"

Sweet Caps dominated the Canadian cigarette market in the 1930s at a time when 90 per cent of all cigarette brands carried poker cards.

The contests ended almost exactly 34 years ago, on January 10, 1936. Now, along with maxi coats, long sideburns and other popular revivals of the past, poker cards are once more ready to capture the imagination of Canadian consumers.

With the re-introduction of poker cards, Imperial Tobacco Products Limited is also introducing its new Filter Sweet Caporals. Each pack of Sweet Caps, either Filter, Plain, Regular or King Size, contains two playing cards. By collecting these cards and making up certain poker hands, a participant will win prizes of $100, $50, $25, $5 and $1. Main prizes of $1,000 will go to those collecting a royal flush, top hand in poker.

Imperial Tobacco test-marketed the new card-carrying Sweet Caps in the Maritimes late last year expecting the campaign to be mildly successful.

"The results are amazing," said L. E. (Ed) Ricard, Vice-President and General Manager of Imperial Tobacco Products Limited. "The acceptance of Sweet Caps and the poker card contest is nothing short of outstanding."

In three months, Sweet Caps has captured more than 10 per cent of the market in the Maritimes.

"The fun of playing poker cards in the 1930s has not been forgotten," Mr. Ricard said. "And we also found that even those adults born since the days of poker cards eagerly joined in the fun."

Does Imperial Tobacco expect its new contest to match the popularity of the poker card games of the 1930s?

"You bet your Sweet Caps!" Mr. Ricard said.

Canada's little people Problems all their own

TORONTO (CP) — Simple tasks like putting a dime in a pay telephone or pushing the top button in an elevator always cause trouble for Al Porter and his friends.

Al is only four foot four and none of his friends is taller than four foot eight. They have discovered the world is designed for people much taller.

Putting a dime in a pay telephone is a challenge because the slot is almost six feet from the floor. It is impossible to reach the top buttons in an elevator—so they have to walk up the last three or four flights when visiting friends in high-rise apartments.

Al and his blonde wife, Kathy, also four foot four, have invented their own method for handling the elevator problem. Kathy climbs on Al's back so she can reach the top button.

To help discover other ways of handling similar problems and just for the fun of it, Al, a jeweller, and his friends have a group called the Little People of Canada.

It now has about 39 members, who meet twice monthly. The club has members across Canada and is affiliated with the United States-based Little People of America.

BEGUN BY THREE

The Canadian branch was formed in 1965 by Jim Hill of Toronto, four foot seven. He, Al and Richard Telford of Oakville were the original members.

Members help each other by supplying information about jobs, cars, education, houses and clothes because the "little people" encounter problems unique to themselves.

"Some of our problems are pretty expensive—like having to buy tailor-made clothes all the time," says Jim. "What really hurts is I still have to pay full price when they make my suit out of half the regular amount of cloth."

Kitchens present difficulties for Kathy and the other women because it is impossible for them to reach the oven or sink.

Al and Kathy have built a platform that runs from the stove to the sink and they keep a ladder to help them reach the cupboards.

Another problem is learning to drive. Some driving schools will attach extensions on the gas and brake pedals and Al and Jim have custom-made fittings in their cars.

Perhaps the most important aspect of the club, says Mr. Hill, is that it helps people of their size to build up their confidence and overcome shyness.

Unusual Alliance in Film Making

HOLLYWOOD — An unusual alliance between a major university and a leading motion picture company in a film-making program has been announced by Davidson Taylor, dean of the Columbia University School of the Arts, and Fred Weintraub, vice-president for creative services of Warner Bros.

Warner Bros. will finance and distribute a series of short films produced entirely by students in the Film Division of Columbia's School of the Arts. The students will receive course credit towards their master of fine arts degrees.

Calling the action "a bold cultural initiative," Prof. Arthur Barron, chairman of the School's Film Division, said that "Hollywood is now opening the door to young talent and we at Columbia University are enthusiastic about it."

The action, he said, "will allow the students a freedom from worrying about laboratory and other practical expenses in addition to the experience of working on a real film and gaining a professional credit while working toward their MFA's."

Mr. Weintraub said that "Warner Bros. looks forward to getting exciting new products and to having an opportunity to find gifted young people."

At least two films will be made by Columbia students during the current year. They will be conceived, written, produced, directed, photographed, scored and created entirely by students, under the supervision of a faculty member and subject only to an initial approval of subject matter by the film company.

A hard look at Canadian mass media

In the United States, Vice-President Spiro Agnew criticizes the press and television.

In Canada, a Senate committee headed by Senator Keith Davey conducts hearings on the mass media, to consider and report on the ownership and control of the major means of mass public communication in this country.

How does the public feel? Do people believe what they read in the newspapers? Do they think TV distorts the news, as some politicians charge?

See No Evil, Hear No Evil: The Reporter and The People is the title of a 90-minute color special on the mass media in Canada, for telecast on CBC-TV's Thursday Night series, Jan. 29, at 9:30 p.m.

Produced by Don Cameron, the program attempts to probe the reasons behind recent signs of governmental and public distrust of the media.

Host is Elie Abel, a native of Montreal who won journalistic fame in the United States and was recently appointed dean of Columbia University's school of journalism.

In-studio interviews and discussions, and (black and white) film sequences, bring together an important cross-section of people in the media, as well as government officials and members of the general public.

A confrontation between some members of the Senate committee on the media, and some members of the CRTC (Canadian Radio Television Commission), and reports on special situations and reactions to the press and broadcasting, will be among the show's elements.

Is current criticism of the media due to bad news or bad reporting?

What is the effect on the Canadian culture of the one-newspaper, one-TV situation which exists in some communities?

Reporting on these and many other aspects of the media question, from various parts of the country, are Gordon Donaldson, John David Hamilton, Ron Collister and Bob Evans.

Another element of the program is a survey conducted by Thursday Night to determine the reactions of the general public to the press and television. On film, Knowlton Nash and John Kerr (director and deputy director of CBC information programs) are seen addressing meetings in Saskatoon and Halifax, inviting questions from audiences.

This Thursday Night special on the mass media looks for an answer to a question put by Senator Keith Davey who heads the Senate committee: "Do Canadians get the press they need or simply the press they deserve?"

Movie Anne Boleyn Is a Level-Headed Woman

'Anne of the Thousand Days' . . .

"Anne of the Thousand Days" is a good film. Much of its success is because of its young girl star, Genevieve of the Big Brown Eyes.

Genevieve Bujold is her official name. A French-Canadian, her last name is pronounced, surprisingly, Bujold, with every consonant heard from. Although she now speaks English as often as French, there is still just a hint of an accent, because French was her first language.

"I do not particularly like women, as a rule, but I think if Anne were alive, we could be friends."

In fact, her first acting was in French, on the Montreal stage. She made a film in France and director George Schaefer saw it and said to himself, "Gee, I'd like her for Joan of Arc—if she could only speak English."

lish." He checked and found out the facts of Genevieve's life and she first attracted U.S. attention in his televised story of the Maid of Orleans.

Despite all the attention lavished on her now—she is virtually certain to get an Academy Award nomination and the Oscar itself would be no surprise—she remains, so far, a very down-to-earth young woman.

She is rapier-thin, dresses well, talks easily, likes people—but men more than women.

"I came to like Anne after I played her," she says. "I do not particularly like women, as a rule, but I think if Anne were alive, we could be friends."

Men automatically like her. Her wonderful eyes, a rare golden brown, look directly at her conversational partner. She has a knack of turning an acquaintance into a champion quickly. It is easy to understand her playing a king's lady.

She still lives in Montreal with her husband, Paul Almond. He is English-Canadian, a director. They lived, for awhile, in Toronto but she didn't like it.

"It is not alive enough," she says, "to satisfy my French-Canadian personality. I like cities, as well as people, that are alive and vibrant."

She was educated in a convent but, she says without

. . . is Genevieve of the Big Brown Eyes

elaboration that she wouldn't send any daughter of her's to a convent. So far, the Almonds have one child, a 1½-year-old son named Matthew.

Acting came naturally, even in the convent. After her early stage work in Montreal came a tour of France and Russia with a Canadian theatrical company, then some films in Europe, then this.

"But I am not ambitious for stardom," she says. "I don't want to be a great big star. That's why I like living in Montreal. I can go out to the market there, looking like a bum, and nobody cares. Nobody looks at me twice. That's the way I want it."

For awhile, like so many actresses, she was beset with self-doubts, questions about who she was and whether or not she liked the person she had become.

"I have come," she says, "to like myself. And I am not talking about the external me. I know I am not the most beautiful thing in the world. I'm all right, that's all."

"But inside, I am all right, too, I think. And that's important to being happy. Everyone needs solitude, needs to be alone with himself. If you don't like yourself, then solitude is terrible. If you do, then it is good."

That's Genevieve Bujold, who may become a big star in spite of herself.

"I know I'm not the most beautiful thing in the world. I'm all right, that's all."

Canada — past and present

HALF A LOAF — Canada's Semi-Role Among Developing Countries by Clyde Sanger. Published by THE RYERSON PRESS. Price: Paper — $3.95, Cloth — $6.95. Illustrated.

There is a saying in Sao Paulo, Brazil that "God is a Brazilian — and also works for the Light" — the Canadian-based Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Company.

But while in the half century since its inception this company has stimulated the dramatic development of Sao Paulo as an industrial centre, managed to keep pace with the growing demands for power even during the worst periods of drought, and undertaken an investment of more than one billion dollars in plant property and equipment in Brazil, it is one of the few Canadian businesses participating in the developing world.

What about Canada's participation as a nation? In 1968 Ontario budgeted to spend 1,126 million dollars on operating its school system — a figure only thirty million less than the total aid Ottawa had disbursed in the previous ten years to all the developing countries.

Now Clyde Sanger examines critically Canada's role in inter-national development in HALF A LOAF: Canada's Semi-Role Among Developing Countries, a book sponsored by Manitoba Association for World Development Inc. and available from The Ryerson Press. Taking into account what the developing nations are doing for themselves, what they think of our aid and what their greatest needs have become today, he brings into perspective an area of national policy about which he feels there has been surprisingly little public questioning.

Approaching the question of aid from the viewpoint of the recipient countries, the author details specific developments in Nigeria, Tunisia, Turkey, East Africa, India, Ceylon, Korea, Jamaica, Columbia, St. Lucia and Brazil.

The reader is shown with text, photographs and maps, the problems the developing countries face and what Canada is (or is not) doing about them — from agricultural advances to family planning, from the growth of "black power" in the Caribbean to the transformed role of women in an Arab country.

Soon after coming to power in 1966 Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba passed into law the Code of Personal Status, a basic charter of women's rights aimed at ending such practices as marrying off fifteen-year-old girls against their wishes, and keeping women behind veils and sometimes behind walls; and beginning programs of adult education and training so that women might put their new freedom to use in professions. This social change has not been without opposition, even from the women themselves. But Bouguiba's plans have been paced to a "reintegration" of women into the active life of the nation.

Not for him the peremptory attempt at social change of Kemal Ataturk in Turkey thirty years ago who decided to break the pattern of men and women clustered separately at an Ankara celebration by barking at his officers: "I now give you an order. Disperse throughout the ballroom. Quick march! Dance!"

In two concluding chapters the author discusses such topics as whether CUSO should lose its "volunteer image"; Canada's position in the aid consortia; trade rather than aid; immigration disparities and Canada's inevitable involvement in the race-war in southern Africa.

For two years a member of the Editorial Board of the Globe and Mail, Clyde Sanger is also on the executive board of CUSO and the projects committee of Oxfam. Before coming to Canada in 1967 he was for five years staff correspondent in Africa for The Guardian and then for two years that paper's correspondent at the United Nations. He is the author of Central African Emergency published in 1960 in England.

Title: The Lonely Ones; Author: James Bacque; Publisher: McClelland and Stewart; Price: $6.95.

This novel — as urgent as today's telex — or tomorrow's peace treaty — brings a human perspective to bear upon Canada's major human controversy — the rift between French and English Canada. Its purpose is not so much to examine the patterns of revolt as to consider the impact of revolt and revolution upon individual existence.

The Lonely Ones tells the story of four young people. Two are French Canadian — one is English — one is half-and-half. Two men and two women. What happens in their lives mirrors — and is mirrored by — the political tensions and conflicts of contemporary Quebec.

Here is a novel of love, of action and political intrigue, and of love in action. It ranges from London to Paris — Montreal to Toronto — and the solitude of the Canadian North. It takes its richest movement and colour from the harsh tempos and dichotomies of the immediate Canadian scene — and it presents that scene with a relentless honesty, constantly leavened by humour and compassion.

James Watson Bacque is himself half French, although he was born and educated in Toronto. The Lonely Ones is his first novel, but he has already won two Canada Council interim grants and is hard at work on another book. In The Lonely Ones he has not written a book for our comfort — but what he has to say may well add much to our understanding of both ourselves and those "others" — who dwell, not only across provincial borders, but also beyond the immediate climate of our comprehension.

TITLE: Northern Dancer and Friends; AUTHOR: Trent Frayne; PAGES: 132; PUBLISHER: Longmans Canada; $4.95.

Red Smith who writes the introduction to Northern Dancer and Friends is the most highly regarded sports columnist in the United States. He writes "Canada has been blessed with Stephen Leacock, the Mounties, Rintintin, Sir Frederick Banting, James McGill, Canadian Club, Beaverbrook, the Meramichi, Mike Pearson, Ted Atkinson, Rose Marie and Guy Lombardo. What does she need with guys who write like Trent Frayne. He makes life very difficult for a lot of us down here below the border. He's a Canadian. He should go birl a log." No doubt that is high praise for a notable rival but it's one that is deserved as Frayne's readers will testify. He has an easy, smooth, informal and informative style; he has the art of building suspense and maintaining interest.

Northern Dancer and Friends will capture the reader's imagination and empathy. Horse racing is an exciting and exacting sport and the author makes that very evident — particularly about Canadian horses and jockeys of outstanding, supreme quality. Frayne shows the deeper excitement, the guts, the high-tailing guts of horse and jockey. He shows the other side, too.

Any one who can read Northern Dancer and Friends without sitting on the edge of his chair and feeling his heart beat as quickly as though he were at the track watching his favourite, doesn't deserve to read the book.

Alfred Arthur

TITLE: The Crowning Years; AUTHOR: Siegmund H. May, M.D.; PAGES: 182; PUBLISHER: Little, Brown and Company (Canada) Limited; $4.75.

Dr. May has worked with the old and not-so-old for forty years and draws from this experience in showing the reader that growing old can be as purposeful and gratifying as any other phase of life.

In this new career, as he calls it, he stresses the point that everyone needs something to live FOR as well as ON in their retirement.

Prolongation of life may not be the blessing it may seem unless we use these extra years wisely. Life extension should be life expansion.

The changes brought about by the industrial revolution have changed every phase of life so naturally, the way we age has been changed too. In an urban society traditions are overthrown, family relationships are not the bond they once were, so the aged tend to be isolated.

Among the many subjects dealt with in the book are nutrition, drugs, heart attacks, the bones and joints etc., sex as well as the patterns and technology of aging. Much of the information would be helpful to anyone facing middle or old age and to those who work with the elderly.

BOOKS ON WESTERN CANADA

Mitchell Press Limited, a Vancouver based firm continues to publish interesting and well produced books about Western Canada.

It is now deepening and expanding its range beyond its original regional appeal.

In fact, many of its titles have had international as well as Canadian significance. There have been books on educational TV, alcoholism and travel. But the most interesting still have a local flavour.

Victoria: The Fort tells the story of rapid transformation from a fur trading centre (The first settlement was behind stockade walls guarded by timber bastions) to a beautiful provincial capital.

The first volume of the projected trilogy by historian Derek Pethick deals with the early colonial and the frantic gold rush days.

Walter Hamilton, author of "The Yukon Story", took part in the great Yukon gold rush and followed the tortuously difficult overland route into the gold fields. His anecdotes have the authenticity of participation and the detail, characteristic of a natural story teller.

The curator of the Vancouver Public Museum feels that this book should be on the shelves of "every library of the North American continent."

It is more than a limited interest local history for it contains the moving saga of human endurance and determination in an untamed and formidable land.

MONEY CLIPS

by Mort Reed

What's New for 1970?

Eisenhower Dollar

No final decision has been made on the design or composition of the proposed dollar. Since the federal stockpile of silver is less than 85 million ounces, don't look for an immediate approval of the coin by the Nixon administration.

1970 U.S. Proof Sets

The Treasury Department is still accepting orders for 1970 proof sets but a closing date may be expected before the end of January. If Mary Brooks, director of the Bureau of the Mint, abides by the original ceiling of 3 million sets, the ordering deadline may come earlier.

Each buyer is limited to five sets at $5 each. Send check or money order to Officer in Charge, United States Assay Office, 350 DuBois Ave., San Francisco, Calif. 94102.

Foreign Proof Sets

A survey of the coin investment market shows proof sets of any nation to be greatly underrated and their values are expected to show considerable increase in the next few months.

More and more countries are becoming aware of this market and have begun to issue special uncirculated and proof coins for collectors in the United States, Canada, Great Britain and France. Latest to join this group is India with a nine-coin set that is already as popular as Panama and Jamaica sets. Practically all foreign issues are distributed by Paramount International Coin Corp., Paramount Building, Englewood, Ohio 43222. Interested readers can get further details from that firm.

Foreign Gold Imports

The ban on importing foreign gold is still in effect and is not likely to be lifted. However, the Office of Gold and Silver Operations has approved the 1960 20-Pound Gold coin for importation. All other Israel coins are considered non-numismatic items and require special license for exhibition purposes.

New One-Dollar Design

Sen. Karl Mundt's idea for an impression of the Mt. Rushmore Memorial on the reverse of our $1 bill is not quite dead. Look for this proposal to pop up again and, if there is enough pressure from the Dakotas and collectors, the director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing may just go along.

The director informed this writer that the conversion to a new design would not be prohibitive in cost.

Apollo 12 Commemorative, Canadian

The Lombardo Mint in Sherbrooke, Quebec, has submitted the design above for a 1½-inch commemorative medallion in bronze and pure silver to sell for $2 in bronze and $10 in silver. The obverse shows the three astronauts superimposed by their names—Conrad, Gordon, Bean—with a portion of the "Intrepid" landing module in the background.

An unusual treatment for the reverse device depicts the command craft, "Yankee Clipper," in the likeness of its namesake, a 19th-century sailing vessel under full canvas riding ahead of her wake from the earth to the moon's outer orbit. The design is completely encircled in a border of unbroken chain surrounded by the inscription APOLLO XII Return to the Moon.

Interested readers in the United States may address inquiries to the American division of the Lombardo Mint, P.O. Box 525-A, Derbyline, Vt. 05830.

Bird watcher's notes

By J. GRAHAM PATRIQUIN

A bit of everything

Variety package this week: the Vale Perkins count, a bit about wintering birds on the tree trunks, an indoor meeting of the Bird Club and a berry feast on 10th Avenue.

The McLenahans of Windsor and Art Campbell, Lennoxville, took off to Vale Perkins on New Year's day to help Mrs. Eric Sullivan raise her winter count. Their combined efforts recorded 434 individuals representing 23 species, a respectable showing indeed for a region with one of its main assets, Lake Memphremagog, frozen solid.

According to all three vocal reports, the first day of the 'seventies was a day to be spent outdoors. They rated 100 blue jays, flocks of grosbeaks both pine and evening, redpolls and snow buntings as the best viewing.

This week's winterers simply have to be a group with common preference for the bark of trees. Let's throw away the genetic guidelines and lump together as birds of a community habitat, three woodpeckers and two nuthatches. All but one of these, the pileated woodpecker, frequent the feeding stations, and with luck, all may be seen on trees within sight of home.

White, and rose-breasted nuthatches, differing in size, colour and in the volume of their woodwind music, occasionally become quite friendly with humans. Their down-headed tootling arouses instant curiosity, both auditory and visual. The flute-like note of these untiring activists makes human eyes search the Nuthatch out of trunks and branches. When he is spotted, reaction is generally one of amusement. Wherever he moves, his beak is pointed downwards, and you wonder why he isn't dizzy.

Downy (7") and hairy (9") woodpeckers are usually more wary, but become accustomed to people near a reliably-provisioned feeder, the more so if it is well stocked with suet. Some years ago a family of fledgling hairy came regularly to a forgotten suet-bag, and took to a fresh supply on a nearby feeder with obvious glee. The young birds pecked their fill of suet, then hopped to the "4" support pipe and slid down to the base, repeating the manoeuvre several times per feeding. On each descent their suet-smudged claws greased the iron pole and accelerated their downspeed. This took place in three successive summers.

For a long time, a natural but mistaken prejudice branded the woodpecker as a destroyer of trees. Careful and exhaustive research has established them as drillers only in dead or infected trees. This helps to reduce dead trees to a state where they are more rapidly changed back into earth. In infected, living trees, they are invaluable enemies of insect larvae. A six year observation programme in Nova Scotia, for example, proved that the downy and hairy woodpeckers reduced the overwintering larval population of the Coddling Moth by 52 per cent, and left no poisonous, residual D.D.T. in their wake!

It might be that the wire birch, so plentiful in Townships such as, keeps many of these delightful riveters in our more accessible smaller woods. In the deep forest, woodpeckers hang around the old, obscure giants that are partly or quite dead and loaded with grubs. Wire birch, common along hedgerows and property lines, begins to get punky and wormy not much later than a dog's age, and provides food-drilling opportunities for woodpeckers amongst younger trees and saplings that are not stuffed with insects. Since the handsome black triangles on the white bark of the Wire Birch give it an ornamental touch, it is often planted or allowed to grow close to human dwellings. There we often see these otherwise deep-woods inhabitants.

Fifth of the species to be considered is the rarest and most exciting: the pileated woodpecker. About once in ten years, someone reports a leisurely close-up viewing of this glamorous creature, and such a story made woodpecker talk seasonable right now. Out near Brompton Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Greenlay have been identifying birds with the aid of a fine Christmas present, a field guide to the birds. For beginners, they had the greatest luck ever. On January 8th, what appeared to be a crow flew (uncrowlike) to a cedar tree about ten feet from their viewing window. A bright red crest on the head and white stripes down the neck aren't a crow's trimming, and out came the field guide. For a good ten minutes the big fellow chopped chunks out of the tree and cast them down in a disorderly pile, while the tyro birdwatchers nailed down his identity in the best circumstances possible. It may be that the Greenlays won't see one again for many years, but when they do, there will be no doubt about him, depend on that.

Ornithologist Austin Reed's ducks of the lower St. Lawrence represent some of the species that breed in great quantity but also suffer tremendous losses at crucial times in their life-cycle. This extremely articulate scientist made his second contribution to the winter programmes of the St. Francis-Massawippi Bird Club on Monday night.

Excellent filming of water birds in the air, water and on the nest displayed deep understanding, artistic taste and a keen sense of humour. With high glee, he showed sequences where he took nesting predatory gulls for a merry ride. Perhaps the thesis of most general interest was his contention that autumn hunters unwittingly perform a service to survival by reducing surplus flock numbers before the other hazards of winter set in. A smaller population, he argues, has a far better chance of surviving.

Cedar and Bohemian waxwings frequently migrate laterally across North America, rather than north-south. Flocks of the latter have been seen here at intervals of five to eight years, and there is always excitement in these appearances.

East Sherbrooke had it this time. A dozen and a half Bohemians, sleek, fat, highly colourful fruiteaters, perched on high trees above 10th Avenue, early on January 12th. Freeman and Fran Clowery, passing by, stopped and looked hard. Obligingly, the flock swept down upon a street-side Mountain Ash and breakfasted only feet away from the Clowery car. Good scientists and good birders, they passed on the word at once. Only additional sighting of Bohemians we have heard of this year was a loner, on December 31, near Marcel Couture's feeding station on O'Reilly Street.

Borodin Quartet half-hour concert

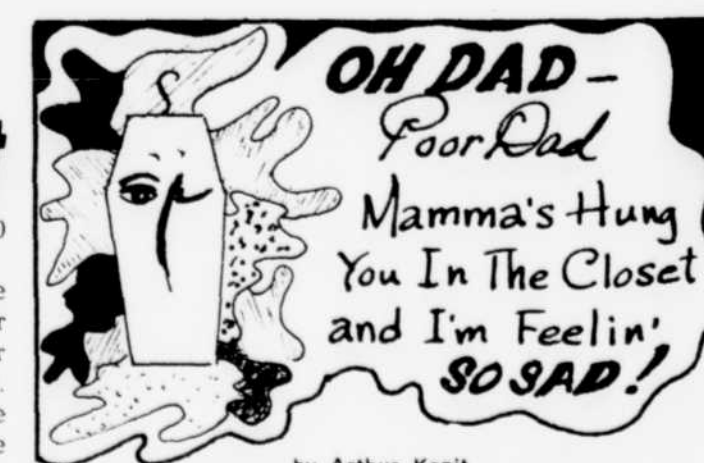

When the world-famous Borodin Quartet chamber group from Russia visited Vancouver last summer, to give concerts organized by the Friends of Chamber Music Society of that city, its members also taped two half-hour programs for CBC-TV.

Produced by Neil Sutherland at CBC Vancouver, one of the half-hour TV concerts will be telecast in color on the network this evening at 10 p.m. The program features the Quartet No. 2 of Alexander Borodin, the composer for whom the group is named. The work contains some themes made familiar in the score of the Broadway musical Kismet: tunes like Baubles, Bangles and Beads (the quartet's scherzo) and This Is My Beloved (the slow movement).

Music on Records

By Elisabeth Gustafson

BEETHOVEN: The Five Piano Concertos; The Violin Concerto; The Romances for Violin and Orchestra; The Triple Concerto, And and Kempff, pianos; Ferras, Oistrach, and Schneiderhan, violins; Fournier, cello, Leitner, Karajan, Goossens, Fricay, conductors. Berlin Philharmonic, Radio-Symphony Orchestra Berlin, The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra. Deutsche Grammophon. Beethoven Edition 1970, six-record Album 2, Nos. 643, 608-13.

AS you can tell from a glance at the above heading, here in this album is an almost incredible wealth of artists, conductors and orchestras. Only something special could bring these headliners together under one cover. And of course something special is at hand—the 200th Anniversary of the birth of Beethoven. Deutsche Grammophon has already supplied us with the first album of all Nine Symphonies and this was given notice in this column last December. The project of putting on record almost the entire output of Beethoven's genius in anniversary celebration continues on its way.

One must say again that surely this is the most ambitious and far-reaching project ever conceived by a record company. The ancient among us can remember the incredible announcement that the whole of Grieg's piano concerto from beginning to end was to be put out on shellacs—those old 78rpm records that had listeners bouncing out of their armchairs every five minutes to turn the platters over! Here we are with an album of six-hours-worth of listening with few turnovers and with gorgeous high-fidelity as well.

A project can be far-reaching. But anyone can whip a project up. The point is how it is carried out? With what quality? In this case, the project is carried out with an artistry and sound that is second to none. Authority is evident from the playing of the first grooves in the first record of Beethoven's first piano concerto, Kempff, the pianist in all five Concertos, is of course no stranger to this area of music and continuously his results are mature, stylistic and satisfying. In addition, in the first four Concertos he supplies some interesting cadenzas of his own.

Oistrach negotiates the violin Romances in lovely fashion. There is a fine performance of the Violin Concerto by Christian Ferras. Everyone is in a first-rate Beethoven frame of mind.

You may have other particular favourites for particular compositions but it is safe to predict that this album will win and keep your respect.

BEETHOVEN: Sonata in B-flat Opus 106 ("Hammerklavier"). John Ogdon, pianist. RCA LSC-3123.

Not necessarily tied in with the Beethoven anniversary but nevertheless its own tribute, is a new release by John Ogdon, the British pianist. He plays the late, great "Hammerklavier" Sonata. Ogdon has always loved pianistic challenges: Rachmaninoff's Sonatas, the Busoni piano Concerto, and now the "Hammerklavier" with its almost unplayable passages. Ogdon brings his challenges off as well as anyone in the field—though that final fugue ends up being mighty choppy. When doesn't it?

De Havilland aircraft's position critical over short haul plane

By IRVING C. WHYNOT
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — The white hope of the Canadian aircraft industry, a short-haul passenger plane in the design stage at De Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd., is reaching a critical stage.

The problem is money, totalling somewhere between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000.

The company feels it has a saleable product, but without financing, the project will have to fold. It is the only plane now in the design stage in Canada.

Talks are continuing between the company, the federal government and the parent Hawker Siddeley Group Ltd. of London, England.

WITHDRAWAL POSSIBLE

There have been reports that the parent company has decided to pull out. That would throw an added financial request to Ottawa, which already is trying to cut back on its spending.

Company officials are reluctant to talk about future prospects.

"As of now, it is still a 'go' project," an official said Monday. "But a decision has to be made fairly shortly. We can't go on delaying the decision if we have to go into production by 1973."

De Havilland already has spent two years on the DHC-7, a 48-seat short-takeoff-and-landing aircraft designed primarily to serve routes of up to 100 miles.

COMMUTER CRAFT

It is also being touted as a commuter aircraft to shuttle passengers from the big jumbo jets landing at airports far out from major cities to smaller landing strips closer to the city core.

Operating at 240 miles an hour, the plane would, in the company view, be well suited to such routes as Toronto-Montreal-Ottawa-New York.

De Havilland has had sales teams scouring the market trying to whip up interest in the plane and has had some success. But prospective customers are not willing to write orders at this stage of development.

Another problem is that not many cities have the close-in airports that the DHC-7 would utilize, and tight money and high interest rates make it unlikely that many will move in this direction for some time to come.

If the de Havilland project folds, it could have more than immediate repercussions for the company. It is likely that many of its top design staff would have to go to other fields.

Stanstead Legion mortgage paid off

STANSTEAD — In the presence of a number of Legion and Auxiliary members, Stanstead Frontier Branch, No. 5, ended 1969 on a happy note with the ceremony of the burning of the property mortgage.

Owen Quillinan, Past President of the Branch and Past District Commander was M. C. Jack Heald, present District Commander, a past Branch president, I. B. Corey, D. F. C., of the Royal Flying Corp, WWI, Lite member of the Legion Branch, and also a charter member, was the gentleman who presented the legacy from the estate of the late Fred Bellam of Beebe, making it possible for the mortgage to be paid off sooner than planned. Gordon Laberee, President of the Legion Branch, who has held many jobs with the Branch, was one of the two men on the building committee, and officiated in the ceremony.

Mr. Quillinan mentioned what a great occasion it was and how proud the active members are on the achievement. He singled out two members who helped when the building was being renovated, Keith Armstrong, also a friend and member, Stanley Emslie, who helped in a momentary way to get things started. He stated that Mr. Heald, then president, helped to purchase the building from the John Tilton, estate, while he (Mr. Quillinan) helped to put the Branch "in the hole" but during the presidency of Gordon Laberee "got us out of the hole".

The building itself was purchased at a nominal price but some $14,000 was spent on the renovations to make it a fine Legion Memorial Home, it is dedicated to the Veterans and Legionnaires who have paid the supreme sacrifice.

It is also a community building as the upper story is planned with a separate stairway from the main ground floor hall, so that it is used by Legion and Auxiliary members, as well as others of the community, for social events.

Many members of the Branch and Auxiliary have worked and helped in various ways to keep the Home in action. In Mr. Quillinan's closing remarks he, on behalf of the Legion Command and Branch executive, thanked everyone for a "job well done" and asked for continued interest to keep it, "one of the best in Quebec".

Remarks were also given by Mr. Laberee, Mr. Heald and Mr. Corey, these three holding the mortgage over the candle flame until it fell to ashes, marking an event which will be long remembered with a glow of satisfaction, for it was a tremendous undertaking a few years ago.

The remainder of the evening was spent socially.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Today's hand is a cinch for five hearts provided declarer remembers to ruff a diamond in dummy. Let's look at George Gooden's teaching technique.

He starts by explaining why the South hand should be opened one heart. It has 17 high-card points but you should never open no-trump with a singleton. For suit purposes it is worth 19 points because of the two distributional points for a singleton. It is a good hand but too weak to open with two. You open one heart because with two biddable suits of unequal length you should open the longer one.

The North hand is worth eight points in support of hearts and with adequate trump support is a proper raise to two. South has enough to go right to game.

Remember, 26 points is the normal requirement for a 12-trick suit game.

South looks over dummy and counts five trump tricks, one diamond trick and three or four club tricks depending on whether or not the club suit will break 3-2.

Can he get an extra trick in the trump suit? He can ruff some spades in his own hand but this isn't going to give him any extra tricks since he will be ruffing with a normal trump trick. On the other hand, if he can ruff some card in dummy he will be collecting a sixth trump trick and he can ruff a diamond there provided he does not pull trumps.

Hence South wins the first heart in dummy; plays ace and another diamond and ruffs his last diamond in dummy the next time he gains the lead.

Not Really a Menace
The octopus is not a deadly menace to swimmers, despite its reputation.

DOCTOR'S MAILBAG

Surgical Removal Needed In Cancerous Mole Cases

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q—I have several dark-brown moles on my back. What causes them? Is there any way they can be removed other than by surgery?

A—The moles are hereditary. It is best not to remove this type of mole unless it appears to be growing larger or is subject to irritation by your clothing. These moles are almost always benign. They may be removed by irradiation with Grenz rays or by freezing with carbon dioxide snow.

Q—What are the characteristics of a cancerous mole? What treatment is best?

A—This type of mole is likely to be slate gray, black or dark blue. Usually, it causes no trouble if you let it alone but, if it becomes irritated, ulcerated or starts to enlarge, it has very likely changed from a precancerous to a cancerous stage. This is especially apt to happen if the mole is on the sole of a foot, palm of a hand or near the groin. All such moles should be removed surgically.

Q—How old must a person be before he can have a birthmark removed? What is the upper age limit for such an operation?

A—It is wise to wait until a child is three or four years old to see whether the birthmark will disappear by itself. If it doesn't, it may be removed at any age, provided your surgeon thinks removal is advisable.

Q—Our boy, 15, has a red birthmark on his cheek. When he was nine months old, a plastic surgeon told us it would probably disappear before he was 7. When it was still present at age 9, another plastic surgeon advised against a skin graft because of the difficulty in matching the exact color of the surrounding skin. Do you know of any new treatment for this condition?

A—If your son's lesion is a "port wine" birthmark, the most recent treatments are tattooing and the use of the laser beam. But these are not advised for every person with a birthmark.

Q—Can a doctor tell if a mole or birthmark is cancerous by taking a small piece for microscopic examination?

A—Yes, but most are benign. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

PRESENT—FOR YOU AND YOURS . . . Others may shift their work onto you but radiations indicate that you'll be able to handle the load efficiently and without strain. Don't show your annoyance if you can avoid it. It only brings on tension which delays matters. Don't be too casual when people expect serious comment from you.

The Day Under Your Sign

ARIES (Born March 21 to April 19) — Arguments between friends may occur under present lunars. Try to avoid controversial subjects.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) — Good time to plan for self-improvement. Enroll in an evening study course.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) — Things delayed earlier can go forward with a bang now. Take the initiative.

CANCER (June 22 to July 21) — Be careful with whom you ride. Avoid those who are accident-prone.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) — You won't feel like making the scene but once you get there, you won't want to leave.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — You know where you're headed but may be dissatisfied with progress just now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — You should be in the pink of condition now—feeling better than you have for some time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — Don't be afraid to ask questions or to let others know just how you feel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Dig deeply for the facts you need to back up your argument. You can win out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Show your appreciation in a tangible way as well as vocally expressing thanks.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — Romance blossoms under present rays. Don't be a stick-in-the-mud, and miss your chance.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) — Do what is expected of any fine citizen without counting the cost in time or effort.

The cake was made by Mrs. Kay Brock. The occasion was the engagement of Miss Wendy Cleveland to Mr. Brian Lodge.

Later cards and other games were enjoyed in the living room.

Ontario Government favours importing farm equipment from Britain

TORONTO (CP) — The secretary of the farm machinery division of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, David Crone, says the report of the Barber commission on farm machinery "validates the OFA's action in importing tractors directly from Britain."

"When we began doing this last year some people thought it was rather clandestine," Mr. Crone said in an interview Friday. "But my initial research had turned up the fact that farmers could save about half the price of a tractor by buying it directly in Britain. This has proved the case."

The 300-page report criticized farm machinery manufacturers for what it called "discriminatory and artificial price levels" of machinery sold to Canadian farmers.

Dr. Barber, head of the University of Manitoba's economics department, suggests that tractor prices are a matter for federal combines branch investigation. His report said Canadian farmers could save nearly $15,000,000 annually if they paid the British prices for tractors.

The OFA says that the 300 farmers who have imported tractors directly from Britain under its program in the last year have paid a total of about $1,140,000 for them, or $3,800 per tractor, about $1,000,000 less than the total Canadian price would have been.

Mr. Crone said some of Dr. Barber's proposals to remedy the situation, such as a reverse dumping duty to equal the differential between the Canadian price and that abroad, should help.

WILL IMPORT FOR ANY

Meanwhile, he said, the OFA is willing to import equipment for any Canadian farmer who wants it.

"We've already got three tractors for people in Valcartier, and the price is only $150 more than that for delivery to Toronto," Mr. Crone said. This would put the direct import price of a tractor at Vancouver at $3,950, compared with the Canadian price of about $7,000 for a similar tractor.

Can You Cope With Stress?

Air traffic controllers are employees of the Federal Aviation Administration who give instructions, advice and information to pilots by radio in order to avoid collisions and minimize delays as aircraft fly between airports or in the vicinity of airports.

They are stationed at airport control towers to give all pilots within the vicinity weather information and take-off and landing instructions.

They must simultaneously control several aircraft, which appear as tiny blips on a radar scope. They talk on the radio first to one and then others of the pilots of these planes, remembering their numbers and their positions in the air, and give each of them different instructions.

Controllers often work under great stress. It is not unusual for one of these people to be directing as many as 10 or even 20 or more aircraft at one time, so emotional stability is a great factor in employment qualification.

Applicants for positions as air-route or airport traffic controller must be at least 21 years of age and be able to speak clearly and precisely. They enter the field through the competitive federal Civil Service system, after passing a rigid physical examination, which they must pass every year. They also are required to pass a test designed to measure their ability to learn, perform the duties of air traffic controller and meet certain experience, training and related requirements.

Successful applicants are given approximately eight weeks of formal training to learn the fundamentals of the airway system, Civil Air Regulations and radar and aircraft performance characteristics. After completing this training, both groups of controllers (air route and airport traffic) qualify for a basic air traffic control certificate. At an FAA control tower or center, they receive additional classroom instruction and training.

It usually takes about a year from the time he becomes an assistant controller for a person in this field to actually work as a controller.

They can advance, in turn, to chief controller and to more responsible management jobs in air traffic control and to a few top administrative jobs in the FAA.

More airport traffic controllers will be needed through the '70s because of the anticipated growth in the number of airport towers that will be built to reduce the burden on existing facilities and to handle increased airline traffic. A smaller number of additional air-route controllers will be needed to handle the increases in air traffic.

Earnings vary, depending on experience and the amount of traffic handled, and some chief controllers earn more than $1,500 a month.

Check Into the Hotel Business

Well-qualified young people will find highly favorable opportunities throughout the 1970s to obtain entry positions that offers the possibility of promotion to managerial work in the booming hotel industry.

An estimated 700,000 people were employed in the industry in 1967, and the employment demand is expected to keep pace with the tremendous increases in business and pleasure travel.

In the case of hotel management, applicants with college degrees in hotel administration will have an advantage in seeking entry positions and later advancement, particularly if they have also had training in food management or can qualify as sales managers. There were approximately 150,000 managers in 1967.

Some hotel occupations can be entered with little or no specialized training, but in many kinds of hotel work the demand for specially trained people is increasing.

Managers and their assistants are a relatively small group, with the highly important task of supervising operations and making them profitable. While the managers are responsible for all operations, assistants and others on their staffs may be responsible for specific operations: food service managers, who operate dining rooms; and other facilities; sales managers, responsible for attracting more business; and others in charge of the front office and various phases of management.

Since most hotels promote from within, individuals who have proved their ability, usually in front office jobs, may be promoted to assistant manager positions and eventually to general manager.

Although successful hotel experience is generally the first consideration in selecting managers, employers increasingly emphasize a college education. Many believe that the best educational preparation is provided by the few colleges which offer a specialized four-year curriculum in hotel and restaurant administration. Specialized courses in hotel work, available in a few junior colleges, and study courses given by the Educational Institute of the American Hotel and Motel Association, are also helpful.

College graduates who have majored in hotel administration usually begin their hotel careers as front office clerks. After acquiring the necessary experience, they may advance to top managerial positions.

Some large hotel organizations have established special programs for management trainees who are college graduates or for less highly trained personnel promoted from within. Such programs consist mainly of on-the-job training assignments in which the trainee is rotated among jobs in the various hotel departments. In addition, some large hotels provide financial assistance to outstanding employees for college study.

Hotel manager trainees who are graduates of specialized college programs start out at annual salaries ranging from $5,000 to $7,200 a year and are usually given periodic raises for the first year or two. Experienced managers may earn several times as much as beginners and a few, in top jobs, earn $50,000 or more a year. Hotel location and type, and size affect earnings. In addition, hotels customarily furnish managers and their families with lodging in the hotel, meals, parking facilities, laundry and other services.

Other employment classifications include:

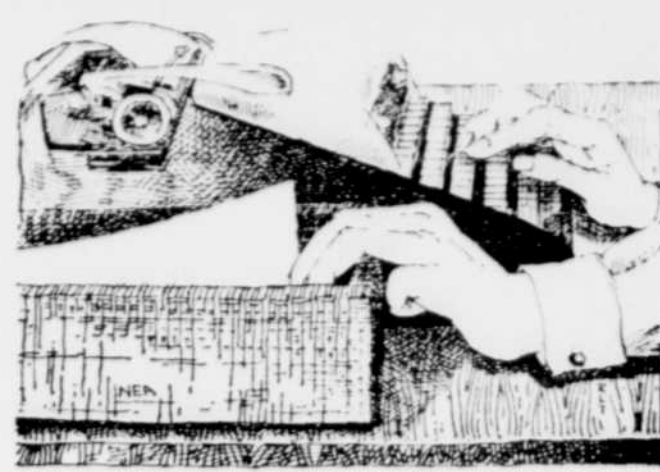

- Bellmen and bell captains, who handle the baggage of incoming guests, escort them to their rooms and provide information and service.
- No specific educational requirements exist for bellmen jobs, but graduation from high school enhances opportunities for transfer to front office clerical jobs and promotion. Since bellmen are in frequent contact with the public, it is important that they be neat, tactful and courteous. They must also be able to stand all day and to handle heavy baggage.

Nearly 1,000 openings a year are expected for bellmen in the 1970s.

Since earnings of bellmen are greatly affected by tips, obtaining meaningful data on their income is difficult, but in large luxury and resort hotels, they may earn $100 or more a week, including these tips.

- Front office clerks, who greet guests, rent rooms, handle mail and do other work related to assigning rooms.

Tech Writers Decode Complicated Data

The many technical and scientific developments of recent years have created a growing demand for writers skilled in interpreting these developments. The technical writer organizes, writes and edits material about science and technology into a form most useful to those who need to use it — whether it be a technician or repairman, a scientist or engineer, an executive or a housewife.

Their writing product can take many forms, such as publicity releases on a company's scientific or technical achievement; articles for scientific publications; or even preparation of technical manuals for use in an industry.

There were about 30,000 technical writers and editors employed in 1967, most recent year of record, and many of them were located in the electronics and aerospace industries.

Courses in the practice of judo are being offered to citizens of Waterloo by black belt holder, Vianney Cote. About forty have enrolled to date, including youngsters who meet every Friday evening at 7 p.m., and adults who meet the same night at 8:30 p.m., in the St. Bernardin school gym. Shown above with Mr. Cote are some of the students.

Social notes from Bedford

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Preston, who spent the Christmas season at their home here, have returned to their winter home at Sun City, Fla.

Miss Marilyn Brownrigg, Ottawa, and Mr. Joseph Brennan, Montreal, were guests for the New Year of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Jones.

Mr. Philippe Demers has returned from the St. Johns Hospital, where he underwent surgery.

Mrs. Mervin Corey, Stanbridge Ridge, is a patient in Hospital Lagace. Mrs. Sarah Messier, who has been a patient in the Mystic Nursing Home, is also a patient in Hospital Lagace, suffering from pneumonia.

Miss Marion Sawyer, who has been a patient for a time in the B.M.P. Hospital Sweetsburg, has returned home.

Mrs. Liette Butryn, Beaconsfield, spent the holiday weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Deleuze.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Herring, Toronto, have returned home, after visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. William Corey, who had been a patient for a time in Hospital Lagace, but who has now been transferred to the nursing home at Jameson's Point.

The Misses Helen and Dorothy Ewing, Toronto, were guests for New Year's of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gilman. They have purchased the home of Mr. R. Doak, Coburg, Ont., at present occupied by Mr. and Mrs. L. Creighton on Dutch Street. Their friends are pleased that the Misses Ewing are returning to Bedford.

The following are officers of Bedford Lodge No. 60 for 1970: W. Bro. J. M. Paton, W. M. Bro. M. M. Dussault, S. W. Bro. Wendell Corey, J. W. V. W. Bro. Lee A. Martin, treasurer; W. Bro. D. A. MacArthur, secretary. The installation of the new officers will take place at the January meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Draper have left to spend some time at Anna Maria, Fla.

Miss Leah Bradshaw, Cowansville, was a guest for the New Year of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kirwin.

Due to the severe snowstorm, the egg-nog party at the curling club was cancelled the next morning the roof of the arena over the curling club collapsed from the weight of snow, only the area over the curling rink was affected. It is expected it will take three weeks to repair the damage. On Jan. 3 an egg-nog party, held in the club lounge, was largely attended.

Ladies in charge were Mrs. Jack Paton and the Misses Leila Corey and Margaret Cockerline.

Starting in the New Year, pupils at the Butler Elementary School will be provided with hot soup at the noon meal. The local association of Home and School is responsible for the welcome addition with two mothers looking after the serving of the soup.

With the first year of operation over, members of the Yamaska Valley Citizens Band Radio Club have completed a successful year of service in an area, which covers the counties of Brome and Missisquoi.

The club was formed in January 1969 and has provided excellent service at both Brome and Bedford county exhibitions in the form of communication and a first aid team. Club members with radio communications in their cars, have helped many motorists who have been stranded or involved in accidents by contacting the police or garage when asked.

2070 sees the club with a full slate of activities, which will start with a combined radio jamboree and beauty pageant. Candidates will be chosen for the position of Miss Yamaska Valley and following her crowning, she will attend all functions with the club, in the area. The pageant is being planned for July 4-5, 1970.

The officers for the coming year are: President, Robert Farnam of Dunham; vice-president, Ralph Seaton, Foster; secretary, Miss Sharon Graves, Fulford; treasurer, Delmar Wilson, Stanbridge East.

The club is open to anyone interested in citizen band radio. Meetings are held the first Wednesday of each month in the Canadian Legion Hall, Knowlton.

Miss Isabel Marshall, Montreal, was at her home here over the holidays.

Two long time employees of the Torrington Company, Miss Sanny Maki and Mr. Rosario Bechard, on the occasion of their retirement, were feted by their fellow employees. Miss Maki was presented with a handsome lamp and a vacuum cleaner by her friends, while Mr. Bechard was presented with a chair from his co-workers.

Rev. Sister Noelle Moreau, Beloeil, has been the guest of Mrs. Joseph Moreau.

Gold Sixer's woggles and Green Star; Kevin Frost, Keith Bowen and Cary Hugg who received the Gold Sixer's woggles; and finally Ricky Tracy, Douglas Belair, and Jeffrey McComb who were presented with the Silver Second woggles awards.

At the same time, Robin Blair, James Murray, Eric MacKeage, Andrew Fuller, Jeffrey Loach, Travis Descoteaux, Pierre Gilbert and Kevin Lessard were invested into the pack as new members by Akela Porter, of the Lennoxville Club.

Lennoxville Cubs receive awards

Recently, several members of the 1st Lennoxville Cub pack were given acknowledgement for their achievements during the past few months.

Presented with merit badges were Ricky Tracy (Pet keeper and Toy maker); Eric MacKeage (Pet keeper); Keith Bowen (Toy maker); Warren Sutor (Gardener); and Steven Gillam (House Orderly and Handyman).

Receiving other awards were Michael Crack, who was given the Blue Star; Steven Gillam who received the Green Star and the Silver Second's woggles; Jamie McAttee with the
