QUEBEC, THURSDAY, SEPT. 2, 1897.

THE VACCINATION OF SCHOOL

CHILDREN.

With the advent of September comes the return from seaside and country of those who have been enjoying their holidays, as noted from time to time in these columns, and to-day many of the public schools throw open their doors for the reception of scholars, who from now on will be daily congregated in close rooms. This question is one which, in the city of Quebec, is of great importance, in fact too greatly overlooked and the result may be that some day we shall find ourselves brought face to face with a plague of appalling proportions.

Just now there exist circumstances which prompt this thought to an unusual degree, and it is well to manfully face the danger instead of shirking it. No one is unaware of the fact that smallpox has again obtained a foothold in Montreal and is steadily spreading. In fact from private and reputable sources of information we learn that the true extent to which it is spreading is being hushed up by both the Montreal press and by the physicians of that city. However true this may be, there is beyond a doubt grave danger of an epidemic in the metropolis, and Quebec, being as it is in close and almost hourly communication with the sister city, is by no means exempt from danger. Few Canadians to-day can forget the scourge which scourged Montreal in 1835, and if there is not such immediate danger of a general outbreak there this year as there was then, it is because the proper precautions are being more rigorously taken.

Quebec, it is true, at the time of Montreuil's last visitation escaped, but how she did so is almost a miracle, much of her immunity being doubtless due to her natural healthiness, even more to the energetic action of a few of her citizens, and a little to good fortune. Now she has practically the same problem to face again, but some of those who forced strong measures in 1835 have gone to their long rest and cannot now do so, while it is also to be remembered that for the last twelve years vaccination has not been practised or even thought of here. No circumstances are more favorable for the outbreak of the disease than those afforded by the congregation of people, and whereas they more indiscriminately huddled together than in school buildings? Moreover, persons coming into the city fresh from the pure and invigorating air of the country or seaside are peculiarly susceptible to the miasms of diseases of this nature and should be doubly proected. From all these considerations we are led to the belief that some active measures to remove all danger should at once be taken, and the best of these is compulsory vaccination. Will the proper authorities move at once in this matter, or will there be to force their hands as in 1835?

RECIPROCAL TRADE WITH

JAMAICA.

Reciprocity and preferential trade arrangements with many of the more prominent producing and consuming countries of Europe and elsewhere are topics which now occupy more than perhaps any other question, the attention of the Canadian press. Upon such a matter it is only natural that opinions are divided, especially in view of the fact that tariff and trade questions constitute the essential bone of contention upon which Canadian political parties divide. However, there are some cases with regard to which both parties agree and one of these seems to be that of Jamaica, for we now find the Canadian Liberal Government following in the footsteps of the former Conservative Administration with regard to that Island. The question has again been taken up in earnest and what is being done is well explained in the following taken from one of our Jamaican exchanges:—

"The Dominion of Canada's Government under the administration of the Conservative Party some seven or eight years ago manifested a desire to have closer trade relations with the West Indies and chiefly Jamaica. To that end a Commissioner,

Mr. MACKENZIE BOWELL—then Mr. BOWELL —was sent out here. Consequently upon the action of Canada, Jamaica appointed a Commissioner to go to Canada. But negotiations came to an untimely end owing to interference by the Colonial authorities at home and the only practical outcome of the negotiation was the appointment as representative of Canada in Jamaica, of Mr. G. E. BURKE. Last July the Liberal party under the leadership of Mr. LAURIER came into power and Sir RICHARD CAR-SWORTH, the Chief Minister of Trade and Commerce, at once evidenced great enthusiasm in the development of intercolonial trade. The first step thereto was the LAURIER tariff bill passed during the last session of the Canadian Legislature, whereby, as recently explained in the Gleaner, the Dominion admits English goods at a discount of 25 per cent. off the usual import duty. This by the clever arrangement of the clauses of the Bill gives England a preference over all other nations, in that the Bill allows the same advantages to any country that may reduce its tariff to a ratio as low as England's, which probably no country is prepared to do. Sir RICHARD CARSWORTH is in endeavouring to secure more open trade relations all around, addressed a letter to the Boards of Trade of the Maritime Provinces of Canada asking them to make suggestions as to the best method of developing trade, especially with the West Indies. All the Boards of Trade united in recommending the appointment of a special Commissioner to visit the West Indies, who should use his endeavours to secure increased trade facilities in every possible way. They also united in recommending Mr. J. A. CHIPMAN, of

Halifax, Nova Scotia, as such Commis-
