Hart on the rebound

You thought Muldoon was bad

Who's who

By TADEUSZ LETARTE

Stop the presses! The world is safe. Gary Hart is back! That's right, the man who went one step further than Jimmie Carter (who only lusted in his heart) has announced he will once again run for the Democratic nomination for president of the U.S. of A. Snow White — even if he is slightly tarnished — has returned to the Seven Dwarfs. You have to wonder what goes on in that empty room just above Hart's neck. First he announces, after much agonizing, that he will seek the nomination for a second time. Then he dares the press to find something slimy in his background. To give them a helping hand he then tootles off to Bimini on a boat called Monkey Business with Bimbo of the Month, Donna Rice. Having been 'caught' in the act, he mea culpas himself into a blubbering heap and announces Mike Dukakis can do it on his own. Now, suitably remorsefull over his remorse for the remorse of the original act — he's back. And you people complain about Brian Muldoon.

No matter how they explain it, no matter how they twist and turn, our representatives in the National Assembly are puting the provertbial screws to the public by giving themselves a raise. Parity doesn't wash. Ontario is bigger, has more people and a larger budget and their MPPs get less. Falling behind doesn't make the grade either since everyone else in the province started out behind in the first place. No, it's nothing but sheer greed. To suggest that big bucks are needed to insure the best and the brightest apply is nonsense. When was the last time there was a shortage of candidates for a seat at the trough? And, as a matter of fact, if we have been getting the best and the brightest so far, we seem to be in big trouble.

"Oh East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet. . ." I couldn't help but think of these lines of Kipling's this week when I came across the latest volley in the Royal Orr — William Johnson war of words being featured in the Gazette of late. Orr, the head of Alliance Quebec (they've got something to do with English rights) has been waging a 'battle royal' with the Gazoo's Ottawa correspondant over just who said what and how and to whom. A classic example of journalism at its finest, the debate now consists of basically:

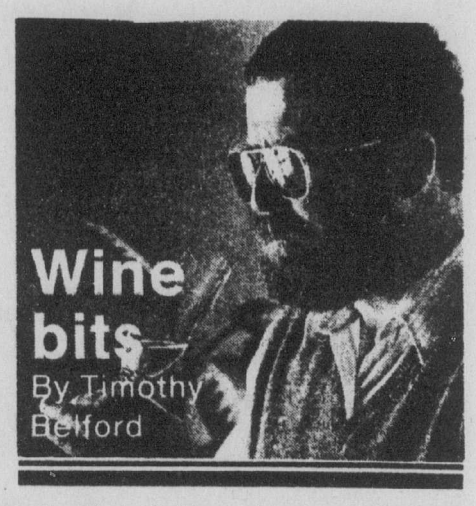

Orr: "You did so."
Johnson: "I did not."
Orr: "You said I did and I didn't."
Johson: "You're the one who said you did but you didn't."

Spare us.

Royal Orr... spare us.

What to serve for the festive season

Since it's still officially cocktail season and hosts and hostesses out there are indulging in culinary 'one-up-manship', a few hints on hors d'oeuvres and wine.

Rule number one: No wine goes with eggs! If you are serving stuffed eggs, devilled eggs etc. as part of the feast select your wine according to what else is being served.

Antipasto will go down very nicely when chased by a touch of dry Italian white such as Soave or Verdicchio. Failing that a lighter red such as Valpolicella or its neighbour Bardolino.

Nothing goes with paté de foie gras in my humble opinion better than Champagne. If you must waver, however, try a little Sauternes or if you can find it a semi-sweet Orvieto.

Some people prefer a dry white wine with a little body behind it when sampling the delightful quiche tarts popular at this time of year. Most Bordeaux whites and any other wine made from the Sauvignon grape should fill the bill. For myself, I prefer something a little stronger and tend towards lighter reds. Once again, however, the egg rule applies.

One wine that seems to go well when there is a wide variety of snacks, seems to be the Alstian Gewurztraminer. With a full, flowery taste of its own it seems to stand up well to stronger tasting hors d'oeuvres. At the same time, since it is a white wine, it seems to please those who have an unecessary prejudice against what they consider the strength of red wine.

If, like me, you also have a fondness for pickled herring, don't try to find a wine that will fill the bill — there isn't any. Serve your friends ice cold beer or something along the line of akvavit. I also find that iced vodka — taken in moderation — also goes quite well. Another trick is to have plenty of fresh bread on hand so guests can at least neutralize the pickle taste before returning to their wine.

While we're at it, let's talk about caviar. Now I realize that most of you think of the sturgeon's gift to mankind as just 'fish eggs' which is like saying Champagne is just sparkling wine. The fact of the matter is, they were born for each other. Iced vodka is nice, lumpfish roe is a handy substitute but caviar is caviar and Champagne the Queen of wines.

Finally, when in doubt, ask yourself where the particular appetizer comes from and make your choice based on that. Let's face it, many of these delights have been around for many years and the favorite wine for each is most likely based upon just as many years of experimentation.

Cheers!

Start a stamp collector off

Don't forget post office on Christmas shopping rounds

Stamp corner

By Peter McCarthy

It's that time of year again. The time of year when people complain of the shopping that hasn't been done, the lack of money to shop with, the baking wrapping and decorating yet to do. I guess we all say the same thing once in a while: 'Let's forget about Christmas this year.'

While I certainly don't have the solutions to your problems, I certainly can make a few suggestions.

For the philatelist in the house, one can do a good amount of the shopping right at the post office. One can start with a block or two of the thirty six cent Queen Elizabeth cameo. Seeing that this stamp only appeared in October, it will be one of the shortest runs of a definitive stamp in a long while because the rates go up by one cent on January first.

Next you might want to buy a CAPEX 87 souvenir sheet of post offices. There are year sets dating back to 1983 still available. Certain philatelic literature may also be purchased through the post office.

If the above is not enough, there's always the local stamp dealer where, the latest catalogue can be purchased or, a new pair of stamp tongs. There's no end to what you can buy for the stamp collector in the house.

After you have read this, you'll still have a few hours left for the last minute things that always seem to crop up.

Now that we have settled your gift giving problems, the real meaning of Christmas should be looked into.

Each year, most of the western countries around the world issue special Christmas stamps. Canada is one of them. This year Canada chose to get away from the spiritual part of Christmas by issuing stamps depicting traditional season plants.

Star of Bethlehem

While this may be alright to some, I still like stamps with more of a religious theme, such as those issued by the Irish Post Office. Stamps of this nature help to remind us that Jesus is the reason for the season!

Canada has issued some very significant Christmas stamps in the past. The one I like the most is the Star Of Bethlehem issued in 1964.

This year's secular designs

So philatelists, place your stamp collections aside for a little while this Christmas Eve and attend a service of your choice to celebrate the birth of The Prince Of Peace. By doing so, you are more apt to forget about all the little woes that the season seems to bring. Your day may just be a little more joyful and, a little more enjoyable.

To one and all, a Very Merry Christmas.

A scene from the Neapolitan Crib made circa 1850. Stamp designed by Anton Mazer.

No room in courthouse

Fine Arts Museum still homeless

SHERBROOKE (MHG) — The Sherbrooke Fine Arts Museum will not relocate in the old courthouse says the president of the museum corporation.

Lise Fontaine said while no new location has been found yet, there is no room for the fine arts museum to set up shop in the former courthouse.

Fontaine said Friday the museum had planned to relocate in the Wellington St. courthouse but "the city offices took up too much room."

The museum has been renting an upstairs suite at 86 Wellington N. since 1982 but wants more space for larger exhibits and offices. Their current location is badly lit and was originally built as apartments.

The museum corporation will need new offices too, since a $25,000 government grant they recieved Friday will go toward hiring three new staff members.

The grant presented Friday is the first part of a $50,000 provincial government grant given to the museum last April at the biannual conference. The money will be used to hire a secretary, administrator and director/conservator as part of the museum's expansion plans.

"A consultant made a study to allow us to work with what we have and get the museum running more smoothly," Fontaine said. That's why the museum asked for more money to hire the new staff, she said.

Fontaine said the $50,000 will not pay for all three salaries and the museum will have to depend on the "charity of the public" for the remainder.

Sherbrooke MNA André Hamel, who presented the cheque, said "it was more than a simple cheque-giving". Hamel said the money will help the museum to grow and "work to define it's new concept."

"It's a small amount for what it takes but it's a good start. We hope volunteers and the public will continue to support us in the future," Fontaine said.

The museum will receive the second half of the money over the next year.

Christmas reading, movies and music for every taste

Kaleidoscope

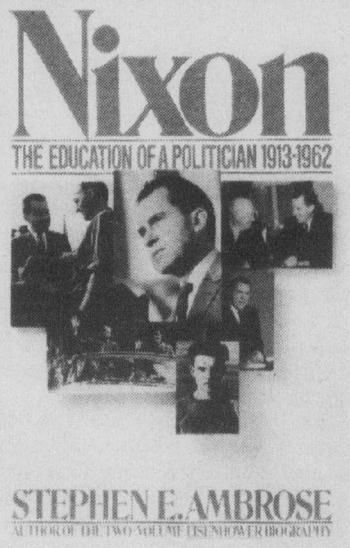

By RICHARD LONEY

For the second pre-Christmas week KALEIDOSCOPE offers a random tour through the bookshelves and record racks with capsule commentaries about recent issues in print and vinyl to aid shoppers in the annual dilemma of choosing suitable gifts for readers and music-lovers.

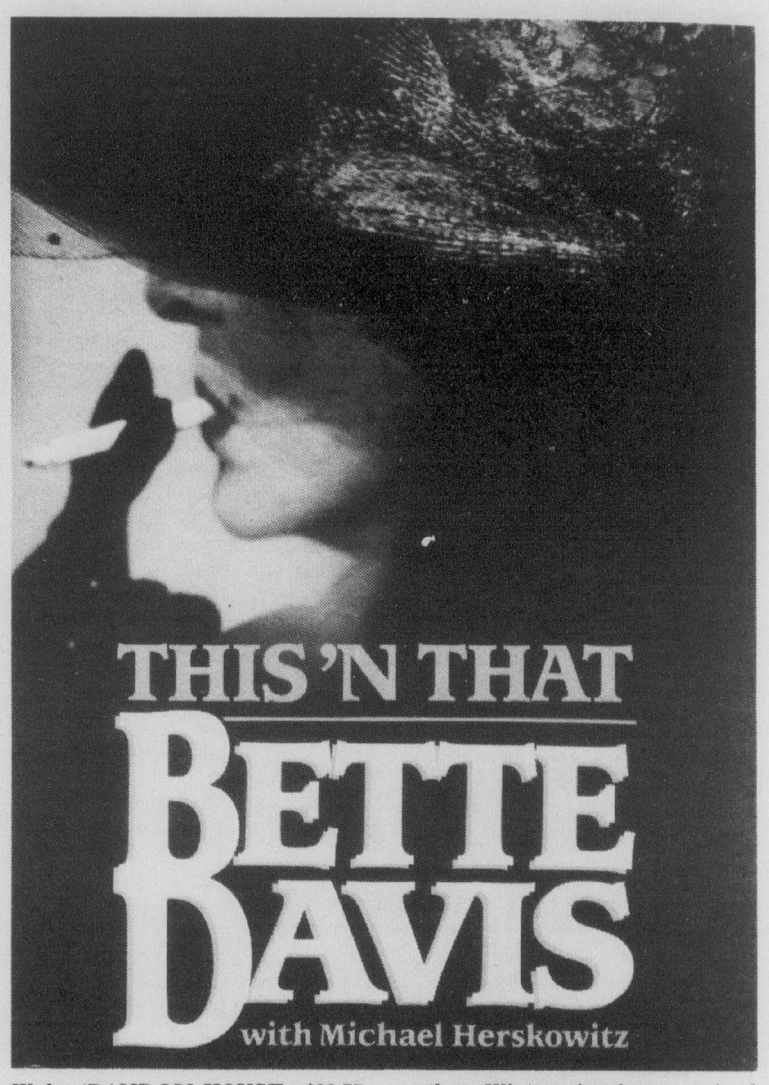

BIOGRAPHY

For the more serious reader on your shopping list there are a number of weighty and serious biographies and autobiographies on the bookshelves written about and by a wide variety of famous and infamous figures.

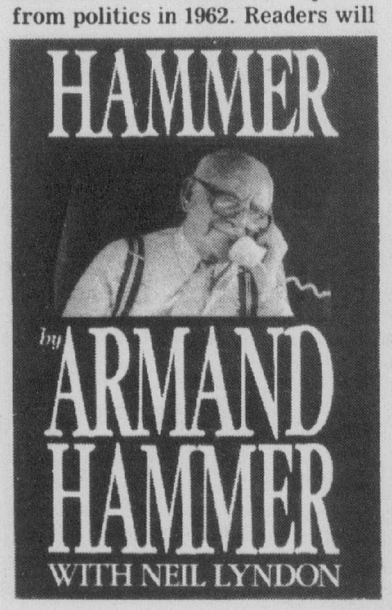

Nixon: The Education of a Politician 1913-1962 by Stephen E. Ambrose (SIMON & SCHUSTER—GENERAL: $35.95, 752 pp.) Stephen Ambrose is the author of the two-volume Eisenhower biography, and here he tackles another Republican, the wily Tricky Dicky, documenting his life up until the time of his "retirement" speech from politics in 1962. Readers will be eagerly awaiting the events a decade later in the second volume of this study, when Nixon and his band of C.R.E.E.P.s decided that the political fabric of America needed a few rips in it. The Watergate scandal and Nixon's ignominious exit from the American political scene will make for far more meatier reading, but until Ambrose publishes his continuation of this weighty tome, the early hijinks of Richard Nixon will have to suffice.

This 'N That by Bette Davis with Michael Herskowitz (PUTNUM—GENERAL: 24.95, 207 pp.) As outspoken in print as she has been about her screen career. Bette Davis tells is "her way" in this screen autobiography about her life in Hollywood. With acerbic wit and her usual acid glare, Davis casts her memory back to the days with her fellow contract player at Warners, Ronald Reagan, as well as recalling such screen luminaries as Humphrey Bogart, Marilyn Monroe, Helen Hayes and Elizabeth Taylor. It is somehow only fitting that this book will be battling it out with Katherine Hepburn's memoir about the making of The African Queen, this Christmas, just the way the two celluloid ladies used to vie on the big screen.

Hammer by Armand Hammer with Neil Lyndon (PUTNUM—GENERAL: $32.95, 544 pp.) This best selling autobiography is like everything else that Armand Hammer ever touched since the fateful moment he took over Occidental Petroleum 30 years ago, parlaying it into the 12th largest industrial concern in the United States. With ample space devoted to the political endeavours along the way, Hammer documents his successes in dabbling in pharmaceuticals, pencil factories, mines, art dealerships, cattle herds, radio stations, chemical empires and oil wells, with each one of his acquisitions having its own fascinating story attached to it. This genuine "how to" book also happens to be a revealing portrait of one of the most dynamic men in business whose corporate exploits have linked him with Lenin, Pearl Harbor, Lend Lease, and the plight of Soviet Jews—truly a remarkable memoir from a multi-faceted gentleman.

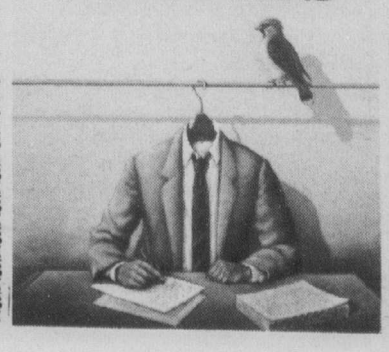

Jung: A Biography by Gerhard Wehr (RANDOM HOUSE: $36.75, 549 pp.)

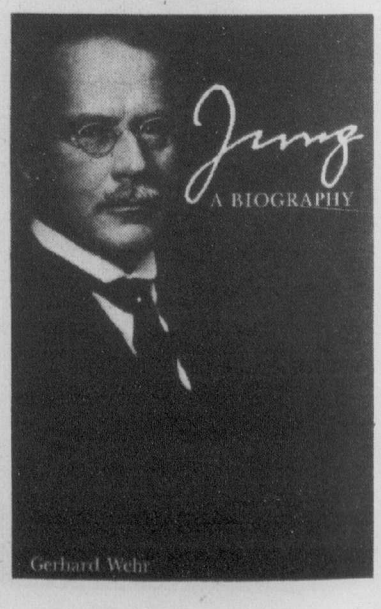

Translated from the German by David M. Weeks, this book represents the "best available biography of Carl Gustav Jung" according to the great thinker's son, Franz Jung. This scholarly and densely written book represents the most definitive study of the father of modern psychology, whose theories, along with those of Freud, continue to prop up the superstructure of that discipline. The ponderous Germanic sentences will not be to everyone's fancy, but this book is aimed at a specialized audience anyway.

STORIES

Winters' Tales by Jonathan Winters (RANDOM HOUSE: $19.95, 216 pp.) Anyone who has ever thrilled to the comic genius that is called into play when comedian Jonathan Winters is given a mixed array of hats to turn into quick bits of business with instantaneously hilarious results will be eager to know what ensues when the man turns his hand to composing short stories. The result is just what the reader might expect, wonderfully zany, patently absurd, but genuinely comic short anecdotes from the master of the non-sequitor and the droll observation on life. Mixed in with the comedy, however, are some short pieces that edge over into pathos as Winters occasionally lets his maudlin side get the best of him. As with his comedy, his stories will not be everyone's cup of tea, but Jonathan Winters warns us in the subtitle to this book that these are "Stories and observations for the unusual".

RECORDS

Cher CHER (GEFFEN-WEA) She marked her return to recording with some late night talk show apperances with her old squeeze Sonny Bono, but Cher is back on track on an album with support from Jon Bon Jovi, Michael Bolton, Steve Lukather and Jerry Marotta.... Michael Bolton THE HUNGER (COLUMBIA) After years of writing hits for everyone from Joe Cocker to Laura Branigan, Michael Bolton releases an album of his own songs, complete with his Journey style of big vocals and corporate rock backings.... The Secret Policeman's Third Ball THE MUSIC (VIRGIN-A&M) Some classic rock cameos on this album, plus the thought that the proceeds go to Amnesty International should make this one a popular stocking-stuffer for rockers of all stripes. Choose from among the likes of Duran Duran, Bob Geldof, Jackson Browne, Nik Kershaw, Mark Knopfler dueting with Chet Atkins, Peter Gabriel and Lou Reed for some of the most disparate sounds in rock today....The Ramones HALFWAY TO SANITY (SIRE-WEA) This is one for all the lyricists on your shopping list, as the New York City quartet which provided the role model for the Beastie Boys grind their way through a new set of rock songs in the primitive zone...Aztec Camera LOVE (SIRE-WEA) Roddy Frame and Aztec Camera perform their British interpretations of the Motown sound with a feel for the original music that comes through distinctly on this well-produced album....Steve Winwood CHRONICLES (ISLAND-WEA) A hits retrospective with a sense of history, this album traces Winwood's career back to the earliest solo work after Traffic's demise. Highlight songs include "Arc of A Diver", "While You See A Chance", "Higher Love" and "Talking Back To The Night". Superb synthesizer arrangements, electric keyboards in both senses of the word, joined with Winwood's impeccable rock phrasing make this one a virtual delight....HEARTS OF FIRE SOUNDTRACK (COLUMBIA) This new film starring Bob Dylan, Fiona and Rupert Everett should stir up some fresh talk about the reclusive Dylan, as he contributes two songs he wrote "Night After Night" and "Had A Dream About You, Baby", plus one he sings which was written by John Hiatt, "The Usual". Other notables on the project include Eric Clapton, Ron

Wood, and ex-Wings drummer Henry Spinetti.... Waylon Jennings HANGIN' TOUCH (MCA) The former guitarist and bass player with Buddy Holly's Crickets digs deeply into his roots for this rockin' record which sees the country artist doing versions of Gerry Rafferty's "Baker Street" and Sammy Johns's "Chevy Van" which stand tall when compared with the originals. The balance of the album is closer to the usual fare from this country legend.

VIDEO SCREENINGS

THE REAL BUDDY HOLLY STORY (SONY VIDEO)

Paul McCartney was obviously not very pleased with the Hollywood versions of rock pioneer Buddy Holly's life, which starred Gary Busey, so he has put together a 90-minute nostalgic and loving look at the life of the Lubbock, Texas native whose work the Beatles so admired. Paul does some voice-overs on some of the documentary footage, as this film traces Holly's roots in Lubbock, thanks to many interviews with some of the original Crickets—Jerry Allison, Sonny Curtis and Joe B. Mauldin, whose reminscences help to give a flavour of what it was like in Holly's early scuffling days. The Crickets reflect on their playing days, adding vignettes about the young, exuberant Holly's antics, and they are aided in their memories by such rockers as Don and Phil Everly who comment on the bus tours that the gala Holiday of Stars packages took on the road. If some of the print biographies of Holly can be taken as authentic then there is one jarring note to McCartney's portrait of Buddy. It is that Norman Petty's widow is given a substantial portion of the film on camera, showing the interviewers and cameramen around the studios in Clovis, New Mexico where the Buddy Holly group made their first records and even decided on their name, thanks to an inadvertant recording of a chirping cricket at the tag end of one of their tunes. According to writers such as John Goldrosen Norman Petty was a grasping, cheating mogul who managed to get his name on the writing credits for most of Holly's best songs, without having ever really contributed anything to the compositions. The McCartney film overlooks these commercial aspects and even shows Mrs. Petty seated at a keyboard playing the licks for "Think It Over" on the low keys of the piano, or running through the music-box instrumentation for "Everyday". Whatever the truth may be, this film about Holly will help to erase the attitude of Don McLean's song which claimed that the "music died" on that cold day in February, 1959 when Holly's plane went down near Clear Lake, Iowa — as McCartney explains, Holly's music lives on in the Beatles' Heritage, and Keith Richards opines that you can hear Holly on the radio just about any day you tune in. (VIDEO AVAILABLE AT LE CLUB VIDEO, QUEEN STREET, LENNOXVILLE; AND AT TREIZIEME AVENUE, SHERBROOKE.)

Aislin has opening show at the Rose Window

Gallery aims to make Knowlton 'more than just shopping'

By Gracie MacDonald

KNOWLTON — Three years ago, the Rose Window was Chris Severs' first art purchase. Now it's his first art gallery.

Geographically, Severs and his John Ballantyne painting haven't gone far in those three years. The gallery is across the street and above the Severs family's two retail clothing successes. The painting came all the way from Sutton.

But things have changed. The painting now hangs in a place of honor, and Severs, well, he's learning about art.

Wrapped around his family's England Hill clothing store on Lakeside in Knowlton, the gallery seems to represent everything Severs loves about the good life in small-town Quebec: ducks, colorful children, leafy roads, old houses. The works, mostly prints, present comfortable, cheerful views of life. Like the original Rose Window — a painting of the United Church in Sutton — the gallery, and Severs art selections, share a common theme: clean, simple and a little bit country.

COMPLIMENT TOWN

It's no coincidence that the gallery's art style ranges from autumn scenes to country kitchens.

"It's meant to be a compliment to the rest of the town," Severs said during a visit this week. "Knowlton has to be more than just shopping. There should be a cultural side too." To that end, Severs is organizing art appreciation classes for later this winter.

Severs' art taste harmonizes well with Knowlton's New England style store signs and newly recreated Victorian flavor: subdued, but never boring.

The art world is a bit of a departure for Severs. At 32, he's been partners with his father in the fabric import-export business for the last 10 years.

Severs will tell you he's no art expert, and he's certainly never run a gallery. But he knows what he likes, and well, there's a first time for everything.

Take Aislin's first cartoon exhibit, on from now until Dec. 28. The Montreal editorial cartoonist's work that currently lines the walls of Severs' loft-like gallery is a far cry from Severs' other artistic tastes.

But he says the incongruity of opening a serious gallery with a cartoon exhibit doesn't bother him a bit.

"People love his work... and whether Terry (Mosher) says so or not, it's art."

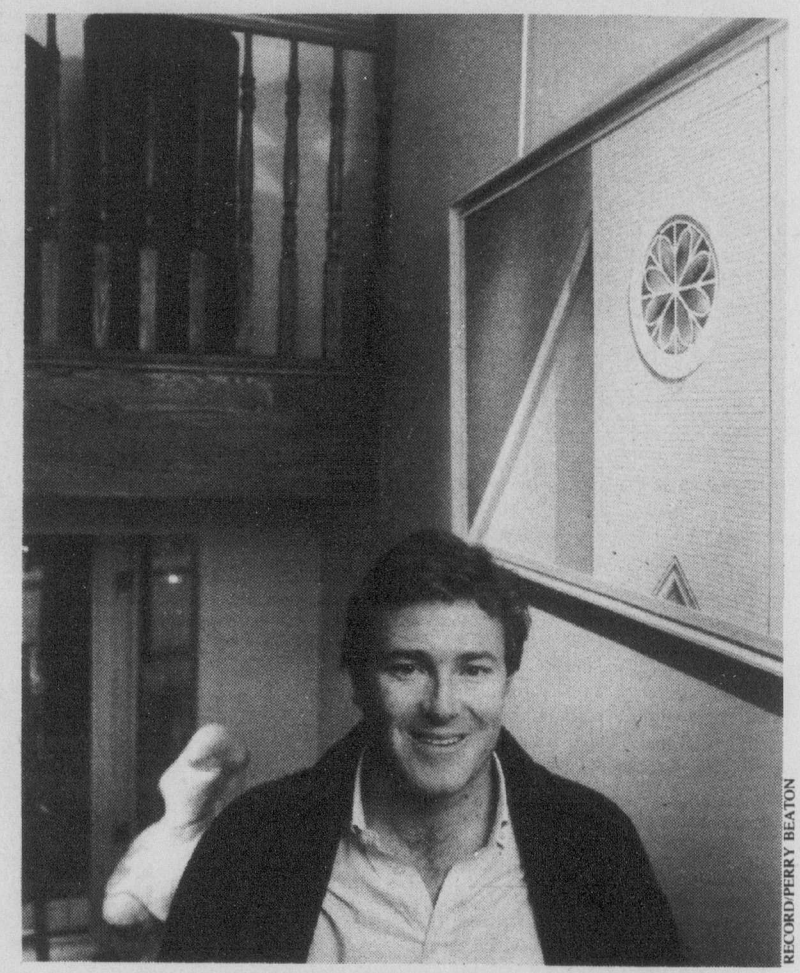

Besides, the gallery already had its official art-world opening on Dec. 5.

The exhibit is also drawing business. Mosher's prints and originals are selling fast and drawing in people who wouldn't even think of visiting a gallery.

PERSONAL FAVORITES

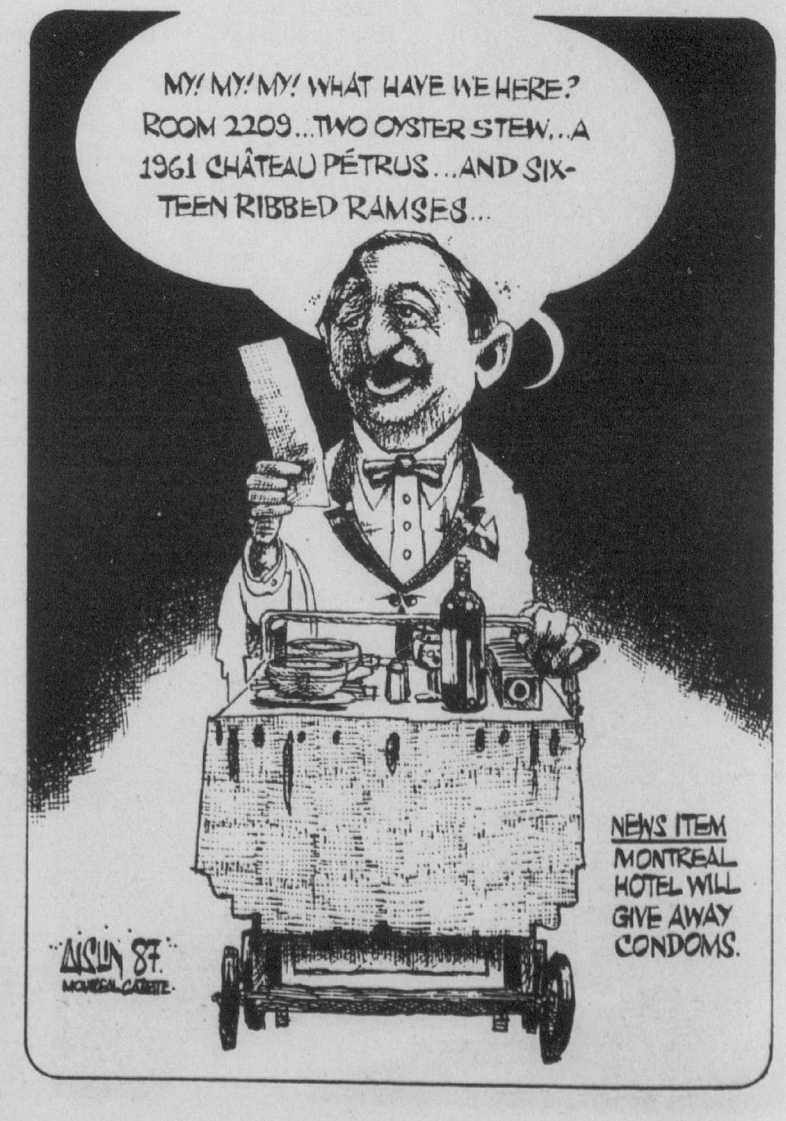

As for his next show, Severs plans to have Georges de Rome, a Nova Scotia watercolor artist some time this spring. A personal favorite of Severs, de Rome's work depicts breezy scenes of Nova Scotia marshlands.

First of its kind, gallery hopes to add to town charm

From last page

Severs says it reminds him of the Townships.

Also planned is a "winter theme" contest for local artists for February. The winner will get a vernissage and a show at the gallery.

Severs said he realizes there are talented artists in and around Knowlton. He even has some of their work. Dennis Hopi's marble sculptures are a welcome textural relief from wall art, and a traditional wardrobe — with cupboards inside — is the first thing you see when you walk in. The doors of the wardrobe, built by local cabinet maker Jack Quart, has painting on both panels.

The Rose Window, by John Ballantyne

AISLIN SHOW A SUCCESS

But Severs says he hesitates to get too involved with local artists. His says he's not sure he can pick a winner from unknowns just yet. For now, he hopes some originals and limited edition lithographs and silkscreens will draw clientele with money to spend, or just time to browse.

The Aislin show features 30 limited edition prints from the past 20 years, most of them drawn for the Gazette's editorial page. They sell for $150 framed, $100 unframed. There are also 10 originals — complete with whiteout and messy spots — for $700 apiece, framed. Terry Mosher, the mind behind the madness, will be there to sign books and art on Sunday afternoon. The number at the gallery is (514) 243-6565.

WHAT'S ON

Music

By Gracie MacDonald

Sherbrooke area talent Too Many Cooks fresh off a two-day tour of a couple bars in Montreal are back in the area. The popular band is at the La Brise in Magog on Friday night. The group has very good stage presence. So if you're in the area check them out.

Gaetan Beaulieu will be entertaining at the Hotel Arnold in Woburn this Saturday. Meanwhile Country Fever is playing at the Dixville Home on Friday, and Gail and Réal are at the Chartierville Hotel on Saturday.

The Troubadors are playing their country and western music this Saturday at 9 at the Domaine RSVP. The evening will be a Christmas party of sorts, with a Santa Claus and other surprises. What as great sounding name for a bar!

This is the season for Christmas parties and Georgeville is not one to be left out in the cold, so to speak. The Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols is going to be preformed by the Georgeville Occasional Choir this Sunday at 3 at the St. George's Anglican Church. The choir is directed by Sarah Hoblyn.

The next stop on the Christmas train is the Bulwer Community Centre on Saturday from 9 to 1 where Scott Lowd and Bruce and Sharron Patton as well as Steward Deacon will provide the music for a Christmas dance. It is a pot luck lunch, door prizes will be awarded, and everyone is welcome. An admission fee is going to be charged.

The Centennial Theatre has a gem for classical music fans on Saturday. Marc-Andre Hamelin, a Montreal native, is bringing his talents on piano to the theatre, with the concert starting at 8:30. Hamelin plays pieces from Chopin, Liszt, Schumann, Beethoven, and Mozart, to name a few.

He has won several competitions including the 1985 Carnegie Hall International American Music Competition. His material is often on CBC radio and televison. To top it off he even plays with the some impressive orchestras such as the Montreal Symphony Orchestra.

At the Old Brick Church in West Brome local classical music lovers will be in for a real treat this weekend. The Ensemble Arion with Danièle Forget are performing twice, Saturday at 8 and Sunday at 3 in the afternoon. They are going to present works from Vivaldi, Leclair, and Clerambault.

Meanwhile over at the Sutton legion, Wayne Durrelle sings on Saturday from 9 to closing. Admission is $2, and everyone is welcome. With this week's snow things look good for Mike Goodsell who plays Friday and Saturday nights at the Cedarwood Lodge in Jay, Vermont.

Keith Whitthall and Gail Klinck are giving a concert at the Danville Curling Club on Saturday. They have just released a new album with 13 original songs so this would be a good time to go hear their new material.

Completing the round up, The Good Ole Boys play this Saturday from 9 to 1 at The Hut in Lennoxville. Tom McKelvy's Long Shot is at the Bretagne in Waterville on Friday and Saturday, and Big Footis performing at the Maples. You'll have to call (819) 876-9050 for the nights and the hours. It looks like Blue Fuse is back at the F.L. Hideaway, and Mick Hall and the boys are probably at the Georgian in Lennoxville. Beverages will be served.

Chris Sever's gallery (see story on page 6) stocks high quality prints by such artists as Paul Rupert. Above is a scene near Warren, Vermont called the Valley Barn.

Exhibitions/Events

If you're looking for art with a Christmas theme, try the Musée Bealne in Coaticook. They have nativity scenes from around the world — a show that is sure to delight children. Each manger scene is made from different material, reflecting the country from whence they came. The museum is at 96 Union St., and the phone number is (819) 849-6560.

If you haven't been out to see Lucy Doheny's pottery at McRatts in Lennoxville, try to get down before Christmas. McRatts, of course, is on Queen St. in front of one of the area's finer drinking establishments.

Aislin's irreverent cartoons continues to draw chuckles over at the Rose Window Gallery on Lakeside (across from LL Brome) in Knowlton. This is the gallery's first big show... you can read more about it in this week's cover story of pages six and seven. Not only is Terry Mosher's humor priceless, but the explanatory blurbs beside the cartoons deserve a giggle as well.

Almost everyone has typographical errors and spelling mistakes. Now that's not to say anyone is a dimwit. Goodness knows enough of those crop up in Record copy.

But in an introduction to the show, Joan Fraser, Mosher's editor at the Gazoo, mispelled the word 'dilemmas', opting instead for the shorter 'dilemas.' Now this is particularly amusing since two paragraphs above she writes "I'm Terry's proofreader (why has nature ordained that cartoonists shall be lousy spellers?)" Is this disease contagious?

Continuing until Christmas at Place Wellington in Sherbrooke there will also be an exhibition of works by Emoke de Galocsy and Grace and Moe Aronoff. On display and for sale will be watercolors, and enamel on copper designs, stoneware and porcelain pottery as well as jewelry and masks. All at 124 Wellington North.

Movies

This might be a great weekend to go out and buy a VCR. You might have to battle through the throngs of fellow shoppers to get anywhere close to a store, but in the end you'll appreciate it. The reason for this sales pitch is that there is hardly an over abundance of good, or even decent, films in the area.

So if you are planning to take in a movie then a video shop would prove to be a better alternative than going to see some of the lousy movies in the area. At the Cinéma Princess in Cowansville they have held over for a second week Light of Day and The Running Man.

Now if one was to combine a few of the words from the above titles such as Running Man for the Light of Day then it would probably give you an idea of the combined quality of these two movies. If it is not clear enough yet then try this for size: STAY AWAY, (or) BEWARE OF BAD FILMS.

Michael J. Fox stars with Joan Jett (the rock singer with a few hit songs and jet-black hair) in The Light of Day. Fox

The original of this cartoon can be seen at the Rose Gallery in Knowlton. It was too risqué to be published as an editorial cartoon.

WHAT'S ON

had always said that his life dream was to become a rock star. Well, some airhead was listening and they went out and created a story idea (not much of one) for him.

The sad fact is that he agreed to the part. Believe you me, he is far better off as Alex P. Keaton of Family Ties fame.

As for The Running Man, this is Arnold Schwarzenegger's latest effort. He plays a cop who gets framed for a crime he didn't commit. The kissing bandit Richard Dawson plays a nasty game show host that tracks criminals through the streets as they are being hunted down. It is supposed to be a futuristic parallel on the Roman games. Showtime is nightly at 9:05 with The Light of Day preceeding it at 7:15.

There are no English movies in Sherbrooke, but if your French is up to scratch then you might want to take in Kenny, the French version of Kid Brother. The movie is the work of Quebecer Claude Gagnon. Kenny Easterday stars in this movie about his life story. Easterday was born with a severe birth defect leaving him with no lower body. It is a fascinating story, with the intent to show how normal a life he has.

It will be there over the holidays until Jan. 3 every night at 7:15 and 9:15, with matinees at 1:15, 3:15, and 5:15. This looks like a heck of a human interest story. If this doesn't warm up the good tidings towards your fellow man I don't know what will.

Merrill's might be a good place to check out a movie this weekend. The only problem is that they were not answering their phone on Thursday. Hence, your guess is as good as mine as to what is playing. However, your guess might be better than mine if you had their telephone number. If you're going to be heading down to Newport then call (802) 334-6830 to find out what is on the menu. Good Luck!

Our apologies for last week's movie column. Some of the movies listed were playing the week before and we told you they were playing the week following the publication of Townships Week. The ghost writer has had her hands slapped and will not touch this column again. Maybe.

The Running Man will be showing at the Cinéma Princesse this weekend.

Group delves into Bishopton history, comes up with 704 pages

By Laurel Sherrer

SHERBROOKE — Virtually everything you could ever want to know about the town of Bishopton can be found in a history book published Friday.

The 704-page hardcover book, simply called Bishopton, is the product of three years of work by Jeanne-d'Arc Labbé and several collaborators, as well as just about every family in Bishopton and Dudswell, who wrote up their own family histories.

A thousand copies of the book have been printed, each selling for $98.50.

While this may seem a little steep, Labbé says people have been waiting anxiously for the book to appear, and will snap it up. Besides, unlike many town histories, the Bishopton book didn't require families to pay $100 per page for their submissions, so they're actually saving money.

HISTORY IN ATTICS

The project, Labbé explained, originated with an exhibition of historical photographs, which she put together with the help of a government grant.

After she had sent all the photos back to the people she had borrowed them from for the exhibition, it occurred to her that there was a lot of history there, in people's attics and closets. She decided to compile a local history.

She and two others managed to get a government grant that paid their salaries for six months and began to put the book together.

But the history of the area proved far too rich and varied to put together in the space of six months. The project dragged on for another year or more, with more people getting involved.

"We ended up doing all voluntary work since then and spending money and whatever," she said.

The book is printed on eight by 11 inch paper with an attractive leatherette cover in black and gold. The cover design, by Leger Robert, features the steeples of the three churches in town and a monument to the town's first settler, John Bishop.

Inside the cover is a design showing a covered bridge by Stuart Maine. Maine also drew little stagecoaches and the covered bridge again for the top of each page of the book.

COLLECTOR'S ITEMS

The editions will be numbered, making the book even more of a collector's item.

The book covers the history of the town of Bishopton from the 1630s to 1986. It tells about all the churches, schools and other institutions, as well as the town's industries. Families were invited to write their family history, and were not required to limit it in any way, as they would have if they had to pay per page.

Those who did not want to write their own history had the researchers put in at least the minimum of information about them, so that every family in town appears in some fashion.

The book features some thousand old photographs, as well as writings by local people.

"It has treasures," Labbé said. "It's incredible."

IMAGINED RIDE

Among the imaginative gems to be found in the book is a composition by Pearl Storry, who pretended she was on a carriage-ride around Dudswell Pond (now Mirror Lake) and described all the people and dwellings she came upon, as they might have been in the early 1900s.

One of the photographs featured in the book: the unveiling of a monument to the area's first settler, John Bishop, on Aug. 29, 1900.

Irene Harrison, taking her cue from Storry, did the same thing with the town, describing each dwelling as it originally appeared, as it is now, and at various stages in-between.

Other items, such as an 1805 electoral list and price lists from local stores in days gone by will help local residents reconstruct the past.

Labbé says people have been expecting the book out for the past six or seven months, and will be happy to have it by Christmas.

One woman has put in an order for 12 copies, for members of her family. Unlike the socks and keychains of other Christmases, "this time they will remember" what she gave them as gifts, Labbé said.

Anyone wanting to buy a copy of Bishopton can contact one of the following: Jeanne-d'Arc Labbé, Bishopton Mayor Gordon MacKauley, Irene Harrison, Thérèse Rodrigue, Gisèle Dugal, François Bélisle or Frances Joyce.

Fascinated by our own history

1987 Canadian book boom: We're not so boring after all

By Rod Currie
The Canadian Press

The book-publishing industry wrapped up the year in a buoyant mood with a record output of titles, apparently fuelled by a new-found desire by Canadians to read about themselves.

"It's either a boom or we've all been getting drunk on our own liquor," says Anna Porter, head of Key Porter Books and Doubleday Canada. The fall publishing crush left printing houses so jammed they were turning business away.

"We'll know early in the new year whether we're going to get killed," she said of the February-March period, when publishers face the reality of unsold copies being returned from bookstores.

Some others in the $1.5-billion industry are more confident, however, asserting that the number of titles illustrates the Canadian industry has come of age, as Canadian authors gain greater acceptance at home and abroad.

WANT OUR OWN

"The Canadian public has altered their perception of what they want to read," says Cynthia Good, vice-president and editor-in-chief of Penguin Canada. "Right now Canadians appear to be fascinated by our own history, our own economic situation, our own heroes."

Malcolm Lester, of Lester and Orpen Dennys, called it "a boom year."

Peter Gzowski's New Morningside Papers

"I can't recall a season when there have been so many Canadian books, particularly in the non-fiction list," he said.

A few years ago it was unusual to see a print run of 25,000 copies, "but this season there were maybe 25 to 30 books in that range."

A first run of 70,000 copies of his firm's The Illustrated History of Canada was sold out, Lester said.

Also high on the non-fiction list were a string of rather sensational political books by Ottawa-based journalists; books related to the Calgary Winter Olympics; and such offerings as Mean Business, about boxer Shawn O'Sullivan, Linda McQuaig's Behind Closed Doors, about the Canadian tax system, and Peter C. Newman's Caesars of the Wilderness, which had a first printing of 100,000 copies.

GOOD IN QUEBEC

Jacques Fortin, president of Editions Quebec Amerique, said it was his publishing firm's best year and non-fiction led the way. Memoires, by Rene Levesque, was published in 1986 but it had a big revival amid the emotion that surrounded the former Quebec premier's recent death. Another big seller was Le Dictionnaire visuel, a "visual dictionary" that has already sold nearly 40,000 copies.

"There have been an unprecedented number of books this fall but it hasn't been a big season for fiction," says Judy Brunsek, publicity director for McClelland and Stewart.

"All of our best-sellers have been non-fiction — Peter Gzowski's The New Morningside Papers, Farley Mowat's Virunga, and Paddle to the Amazon by Winnipegger Don Starkell — a real sleeper that has gone crazy and is in third printing already."

A major problem in the Canadian industry is that most books — maybe 80 per cent — are printed in the September-November period running up to the pre-Christmas market, leaving printing plants overworked.

BOOKS AS GIFTS

"Canadian publishing is far too confined," says Morton Mint of Penguin. "We're sort of in the gift industry."

But publishers have largely been frustrated in attempts to break the boom-or-bust cycle. Many authors demand to be published for the Christmas season and booksellers insist that books don't do nearly so well at other times of the year.

Elsewhere in the book industry, there was considerable worry that the Canada-U.S. free-trade agreement would threaten Canadian culture in general and the book business in particular.

Author Pierre Berton, chairman of the 575-member Writers Union of Canada, told an Ontario legislative hearing that a provision excluding culture from the agreement was not strong enough to protect the "fragile" culture industry. There were loopholes "big enough to drive a truck through."

Last March, Communications Minister Flora MacDonald pressed a button to start a computer printout of cheques in a new $3-million-a-year program to pay authors for use of their works in libraries. The plan, ending a 14-year campaign by authors, means payments averaging about $600 and ranging up to a maximum of $4,000.

Designed to counter anti-fur lobby

Native exhibit shows startling contrasts of new and old

LONDON (CP) — The eye — full of images of snow, mukluks, seal and caribou — blinks in disbelief at the lime-green Jello package in the open-concept kitchen and living room.

This is an exhibition about the Canadian Arctic?

It's no illusion. Beside the Jello are red-and-white Carnation Instant Milk wrappers, Pampers diapers, a box of Arctic Power detergent, an Apple computer, a fur coat and a huge bin piled high with fresh red meat.

The meat is seal and the computer program is in Inuktitut.

This replica of a 1987 Inuit prefab home presents a startling contrast to the traditional lifestyle depicted elsewhere at the Museum of Mankind's exhibit, The Living Arctic: Hunters of the Canadian North.

Beside it there's a mound of pollution-flecked "snow," stark against a brilliant blue sky lightly streaked with the feathery cirrus clouds typical of high-pressure systems and freezing temperatures.

Appearing over the undulating horizon are the silhouettes of a hunter, dogs and sled returning in twilight from the igulviga — Inuit for a house made of snow blocks.

FACES GLOW

Inside, the faces of mother, father and son are lit by the glow of an aluminum lamp, no longer carved of soapstone but fueled by the fat of seal, caribou or whale and still the main source of heat.

A baby sleeps in the brown and creamy white layers of caribou and polar-bear skins.

Organizers say the display — complete with a woman scraping a sealskin on the linoleum kitchen floor — emphasizes that traditional hunting and trapping are still economically and socially important despite the presence of modern conveniences.

The new 18-month exhibit is among a series of events designed to counter the powerful anti-fur lobby in Europe, by showing that many native people still follow a traditional way of life.

"The issue is the right to hunt, trap and fish," says Cindy Gilday of Indigenous Survival International, which represents Inuit and northern Indians and is co-sponsoring the $1.2-million exhibition.

THREATEN LIFESTYLE

"What it comes down to is native people have become victims of economic blackmail by animal-rights activists who threaten our lifestyle of harvesting the land."

Some visitors get the point quickly.

"I didn't realize they still lived like that," said student Katherine Edwards during her second visit in a week.

A five-year-old friend who accompanied Edwards on her first visit was thrilled to meet "real Eskimos" and "hasn't stopped talking about it."

Organizers say their hope of attracting attention to their views is hampered by a lack of publicity.

The British media have all but ignored the exhibition. Also largely overlooked have been other aspects of the native campaign in London, including a concert featuring native singers and dancers alongside the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of Canadian Mohawk John Kim Bell.

SHOW ARTIFACTS

Most of the exhibit's artifacts come from the London museum's own collection, including Cree and Inuit materials gathered 250 years ago for Sir Hans Sloane, the museum's primary founder.

Also on view are artifacts such as a whale-boned corset and an igloo-shaped ice-cream sign made of tin, remnants tracing the influence of Europeans and the evolution of fur trading in the 16th through 19th centuries.

Another section focuses on the sub-arctic. Two Cree women — Emma Shecapio, 44, and Flora Mianscum, 51 — were flown from Mistassini, Que., to build a teepee.

To complement the exhibit, Indigenous Survival International and the Canadian government are sponsoring a two-month series of lectures and films, and are making available 100,000 teaching kits.

George Erasmus, co-chairman of the native group, said it hopes to "clone" the exhibit for other European centres if it proves successful in London.

Entertainment shorts

TORONTO (CP) — The Quebec publisher Le Boreal has purchased the French-language rights to The Illustrated History of Canada, published in English last September by Lester and Orpen Dennys.

The Toronto publishing house said in a statement that Le Boreal was one of several Quebec publishers to bid for the rights at the annual Salon du Livre in Montreal last November. The price was not announced.

Le Boreal said a team of three translators has already begun preparing the book for French publication, under the supervision of Paul Andre Linteau, professor of history at the University of Quebec in Montreal.

The English version had a first printing of more than 75,000 copies and has been a best-seller for three months.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mary Foy, one of the Seven Little Foys of vaudeville fame, has died following complications from surgery, relatives said Wednesday.

Foy died Sunday at UCLA Medical Centre, said her niece, Madeline Foy O'Donnell.

"She didn't like to tell her age, but she was in her early 80s," said the entertainer's sister, also named Madeline Foy O'Donnell.

Mary Foy had been married to film actor Lyle Latell, who died nearly 20 years ago.

The elder Madeline and her brother Irving are the only survivors of the famous seven.

The patriarch of the Seven Little Foys, vaudeville star Eddie Foy, took Mary and her brothers and sisters on tour during the early 1900s and the act continued on the road after dwindling to four.
