Details of Hydro deal still up in the air, says spokesman

By Dennis Bueckert
 MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for Ontario Hydro has played down reports that it is actively negotiating the purchase of 2,000 megawatts of electricity from Hydro-Quebec.
 "We're negotiating with Hydro-Quebec, and have been for over a year," Michelle McMaster said Monday in a telephone interview from Toronto.
 "We are also negotiating with Manitoba Hydro and we're studyling all options, including burning garbage, conservation, and better load management."

 Radio-Canada, the CBC's French-language network, said Sunday that Premier David Peterson had agreed Hydro-Quebec and Ontario Hydro should negotiate a contract for the sale of 2,000 megawatts to be delivered to Ontario in the 1990s.
 Radio-Canada said that if a contract is signed, it will mean the start of Phase Two of the massive James Bay power development in Northern Quebec.

 Quebec's Premier Robert Bourassa, visiting the Rimouski region on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River, 300 kilometres north of Quebec City, said Ontario's electricity needs are growing and negotiations are underway for a contract which "might involve 2,000 megawatts."
EXPECTS SHORTFALL
 McMaster said it is true that Ontario Hydro expects a shortfall of electricity after the projected completion of the Darlington nuclear plant in 1992, and a study to determine the extent of the shortfall is under way.

 "Electricity demand in Ontario was forecast to increase by 2.6 per cent per year, but last year it was much higher," she said.
 "By the year 2000 we'll need 2,400 megawatts that we don't have now, and we'll need another 2,500 by the year 2005. But the decision on how to supply the shortfall won't be made until after the study is finished at the end of 1987."

 Hydro-Quebec official Jean-Guy Ouimet said the 2,000-megawatt figure mentioned in the Radio-Canada report was "in the domain of the possible," but all elements of the possible contract — quantity, duration and price — remain to be settled.
 Ouimet denied Radio-Canada's statement that Quebec plans to obtain the electricity from new dams on the Grande Baleine river.

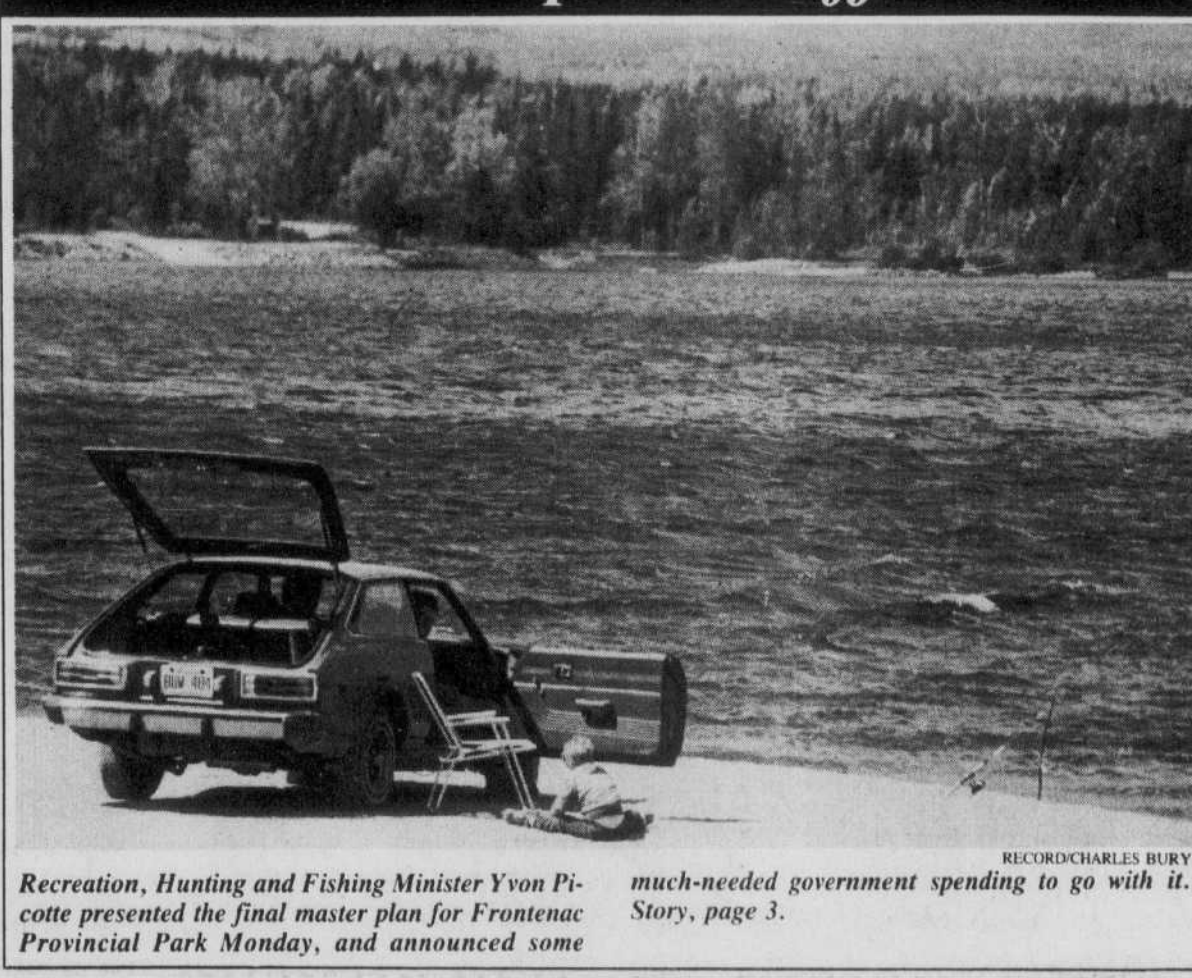

"So much for modernizing the farm."

Canada to congratulate Waldheim

By Janet Steffenhagen
 OTTAWA (CP) — Canada likely will congratulate Austrian president-elect Kurt Waldheim but will also review documents describing his Nazi past, External Affairs Minister Joe Clark said Monday.
 Clark, under pressure from the Canadian Jewish Congress to bar Waldheim from visiting this country, told the Commons it would be unwise to act until all facts are known about Waldheim's wartime record.
 "The people of Austria have just concluded a democratic election," he said. "It is not the practice of Canada to pass judgment or comment on the results of free elections in other countries."
 Although there will be no immediate action against Waldheim, Clark said the matter requires further investigation and hinted that Canada will seek information collected after the Second World War by the United Nations War Crimes Commission.
 Meanwhile, Gov. Gen. Jeanne Sauve likely will send a congratulatory telegram to Waldheim, the 67-year-old former United Nations chief who won a resounding victory in Austria's presidential election Sunday, Clark said outside the Commons.
 "I imagine that there will be a telegram sent by, I believe in this case it will be the Governor General, to underline the importance of the relations between the people of the two countries," he told reporters in French.
 Asked if Waldheim would be permitted to enter Canada in the meantime, Clark replied: "Mr. Waldheim has not indicated any interest in coming to Canada."
 Liberal MP Sheila Finestone asked the federal government to instruct Stephen Lewis, Canada's ambassador to the United Nations, to press for an independent, international investigation of allegations about Waldheim.

Frontenac park is official

Recreation, Hunting and Fishing Minister Yvon Picotte presented the final master plan for Frontenac Provincial Park Monday, and announced some much-needed government spending to go with it. Story, page 3.

Liberals approve pension changes

By Steve Kerstetter
 OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs gave their blessing Monday to proposed improvements in the Canada Pension Plan, but said they're sorry the package isn't even better.
 Liberal pensions critic Doug Frith and his NDP counterpart Neil Young said the changes negotiated last year by Ottawa and the provinces will improve the plan as it now stands.
 However, they told the Commons health committee further improvements are needed, especially in the area of disability pensions.
 Draft legislation is being given a quick review by the committee this week in hopes of getting a formal bill passed by Parliament before the summer recess. The actual changes are to take effect next Jan. 1.
 Health Minister Jake Epp spent 70 minutes discussing the proposals with the committee Monday night. The only outside groups who have asked to appear later in the week are the Canadian Labor Congress and the National Action Committee on the Status of Women.
 Epp said he's not prepared to accept amendments to the legislation because the bill reflects a federal-provincial agreement and will have to be ratified by at least seven provinces before it becomes law.
RELUCTANT CO-OPERATION
 Frith and Young said they're willing to co-operate with the Conservatives under the circumstances, but Young said he had misgivings about the way things were handled.
 "I don't know how long I'd be prepared to be charitable, quite frankly," he said.
 The draft legislation provides for several types of improvements in benefits and gradual increases in contributions by workers and their employers over the next 25 years.
 Here are the main proposals and the comments made Monday by Epp, Frith and Young:
Disability pensions: Some 143,000 permanently-disabled people will get across-the-board increases of $145 a month as of next January to bring maximum federal benefits up to the same level offered under the Quebec Pension Plan. Frith said the monthly payments should be raised even more.
 Frith and Young said the definition of disability should be eased so more people qualify for benefits. Epp said he'd look at the definition, but made no firm promises.
Age of retirement: The bill provides for retirement any time between the ages of 60 and 70 with appropriate reductions or increases in benefits. The Quebec Pension Plan also led the way in this field.
 The penalty for early retirement will be to have benefits trimmed forever by half a percentage point for every month of early retirement. In other words, a person who retires at age 60 would get only 70 per cent of a full pension.
 Young called the penalty excessive. Epp said it came from actuaries and was chosen so early retirement would not increase the overall costs of benefits from the plan.
Financing the plan: The bill will

MDs investigated for welfare fraud

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec provincial police are investigating doctors suspected of fraudulently declaring young able-bodied welfare recipients unfit for work, qualifying them for higher payments, an official of the force confirmed Monday.
 But in Quebec City, Solicitor General Gérard Latulippe told the national assembly the force's economic crimes squad's inquiry was not linked to a special squad of welfare police that investigated welfare cheats.
 Latulippe said provincial police are looking for "doctors who grant medically unjustified medical certificates and doctors who, in certain cases, simply and purely defraud medicare."

 Doctors have complained police are using a female undercover officer posing as a welfare recipient, in a bid to entrap them. The undercover investigator allegedly wears a wireless microphone to record conversations.
 Provincial police spokesman Andre Blanchette said it was possible a listening device was being used.
 Dr. Georges Beaulieu, spokesman for the 6,500-member Quebec Federation of Medical Practitioners, said while welfare cheating is a social problem, doctors are only concerned with the medical aspects of the problem.

An able-bodied welfare recipient under 30 receives $163 a month. However the same person, if ruled unfit for work, gets $448 monthly if he or she doesn't live at home.
 Sylvie Marier, a Labor Department official, said the number of people ruled unfit for work rose to 36,335 in 1985 from 19,685 in 1979. At that point the government demanded second opinions from its own doctors and by March of this year, the number of unfit welfare recipients was down to 32,934.
 An aide to Labor Minister Pierre Paradis, who has pledged a crackdown on welfare cheats, said Paradis was not aware of any provincial police investigation.

Grondin would step down for Chrétien's return

SHAWINIGAN (CP) — Gilles Grondin, a longtime friend of Jean Chrétien, said Monday he would be willing to step aside as the Liberal candidate in St-Maurice riding if Chrétien ever wanted to return to politics.
 "If Jean Chrétien ever wanted to return to politics, we would find a common ground, we would find a way to arrange it," Grondin said after being acclaimed the riding's candidate in a yet to be called byelection.
 But the popular Chrétien was ambiguous about a return to politics.
 "Tonight I am ill at ease," Chrétien joked to the 400 people present. "Gilles Grondin is leaving municipal politics in a few months and he's coming back. (Liberal finance critic) Raymond Garneau said he was retiring and he is back."

 "I can't say I'll never drink your water," said Chrétien.
 He also criticized the Conservative government's handling of freer trade talks with the United States.
 "The Americans are playing around with us in an awful way because we did nothing to get their respect," he said. "We won't get their respect through flattery."
 "We fought the battle to keep Quebec within Canada but now the Tories threaten to jeopardize our collective national identity by making too many concessions the Americans too soon."

 Chrétien, who has known Grondin for several years, supported his candidacy.
 The 43-year-old Grondin, an ex-mayor of Shawinigan-Sud, "is the big star here," Manon Pepin, director of communications at Liberal headquarters in Montreal, said when asked why there were no other candidates for Monday's nomination meeting.
 "Everybody knows him. He is involved in all sorts of things."

The deadline for filing for the Liberal nomination was last Thursday. St-Maurice riding is 150 kilometres northeast of Montreal.
 Chrétien resigned his Commons seat Feb. 27 after a well-publicized dispute with Liberal Leader John Turner. Pepin said half a dozen people expressed interest in the nomination but they decided among themselves that Grondin was the best person for the job.
 Shortly after Chrétien resigned, Turner said the former cabinet minister and the Liberals of his riding would be free to select a candidate and fight the byelection, noting the riding had been Chrétien's domain "all along."

Bank teller has witnessed 30 holdups

MONTREAL (CP) — Bank teller Lise Chayer figures she has a good shot at a new listing in the Guinness Book of World Records.
 Chayer has witnessed 30 holdups in 10 years.
 The most recent incident occurred last month when three crooks made off with $2,300 from the main branch of the Bank of Montreal where Chayer has worked since 1980.
 "After it happened, I asked my boss, 'If I hit 50, do I get a cake?'"
 And what does Chayer do when she's ordered to "stick 'em up?"
 "I faint," she said.
 "The police hate it because sometimes later on they'll ask me to identify a suspect, but I can't remember what anyone looks like because I always lose consciousness."
 "I look a guy in the eye, but I can't remember his face."

Chayer doesn't remember all 30 holdups — some of them involved other tellers in her area of the bank — but the first robbery remains imprinted in her mind.
 It was in 1976 when a man approached her wicket at another Bank of Montreal branch and pushed a passbook toward her. Then she noticed a hat he was carrying slightly above waist level. Behind the hat was a gun.
AVOIDS STORES
 After the fourth or fifth holdup, Chayer decided never to use corner stores, notorious targets for would-be robbers.
 And she never goes into another bank.
 To assist victims like Chayer, all banks now make counsellors available to calm down the employees immediately after the holdup. The banks later use professionals for longer-term care.

"Most of us have been lucky," said Frema Engel, a mental-health professional at the Bank of Montreal.
 "We've not had to face the other end of a gun or knife. The people who go through it say it's like watching a piece of theatre unfold. You're there, but you're not really there."
 "Mostly, you have to let people talk about it," said Engel.
 "This is the workplace where people work together but usually don't talk to each other about important things like their feelings. You have to tell people what to expect in terms of their own reactions, help them normalize their feelings."
 But some banks also offer cash to help employees get over a holdup, with the amount depending on the nature of the crime and its proximity.

Rain helps firefighters circumscribe forest fire

SENNETERRE, Que. (CP) — Firefighters took advantage Monday of the second rainfall in two days to cut a firebreak around the worst of the forest fires in this region about 800 kilometres north of Montreal.
 The worst fires in the province's recent history have ravaged 82,000 hectares in the last two weeks.
 Within two hours Saturday, damage by one fire swept from 4,500 hectares to more than 9,000. Walls of flame more than 30 metres high prevented the use of water bombers.

 But the five centimetres of rain that fell Monday as well as nine millimetres of precipitation Sunday have helped firefighters circumscribe the blaze.
 Conservation officials say the next few days are crucial.
 The firefighting effort has already cost the Northwest Quebec Conservation Corp. $1.2 million and officials say at least $10 million worth of timber has been destroyed.

Environment inspectors to be trained

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Environment Minister Clifford Lincoln has hired a former police detective to teach his department's 63 inspectors how to conduct an investigation.
 He said the inspectors will also take courses at the Quebec Police Institute in Nicolet.

Lincoln said the inspectors are experts in such fields as chemistry, biology, and water or air pollution but have never been taught how to conduct investigations which will lead to criminal charges.
 In Ontario, the provincial Environment Department has hired more than 60 former policemen, insurance company investigators and customs officers for a special environmental police team.
 Lincoln said he has chosen to train inspectors within the department because he does not have the money to hire new people.
 The detective who will train the inspectors is Gilles Masse, former Montreal detective sergeant, one-time president of the Montreal policemen's brotherhood and a former investigator with the Quebec Police Commission inquiry into organized crime.

Home movie crew follows Mulroney around for a mere $40,000

By Edison Stewart

OTTAWA (CP) — Deputy Prime Minister Erik Nielsen maintained Monday it was "perfectly normal" to spend more than $40,000 transporting a seven-man sound and video crew with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney on a western tour earlier this year.

But Liberal MPs, slamming Mulroney's "presidential lifestyle," said the only apparent justification for the separate flight by the armed forces Hercules aircraft — complete with two equipment vans and a seven-man air crew — was to feed Mulroney's ego.

"They're probably going to be the most expensive home movies in Canadian history," Liberal caucus chairman Doug Frith quipped outside the House.

NDP finance critic Nelson Riis also questioned the expenditure at a time when the government is cutting back on increases in family allowance payments and raising taxes to fight the deficit.

"Is this the kind of signal that the government is trying to send out, that it is a priority for the prime minister to make a video of himself?" Riis asked Nielsen in the Commons in Mulroney's absence.

Nielsen replied that the practice is "quite normal" and that the Tories have been a model of restraint in their use of government aircraft.

"Comparing the last full 12 months of the previous Liberal government with the last 18 months of this government... the number of flights has decreased by 22 per cent, and the number of hours flown has decreased by 23 per cent, thus amounting to a saving of some $2.5 million to the Canadian taxpayer."

Nielsen also recalled that several years ago in Winnipeg, three Liberal ministers flew in on three separate governments jets at almost the same time.

Frith told reporters that was "a total red herring," adding that he has been told Mulroney's support staff have also used Hercules aircraft on prime ministerial trips to Europe and the Caribbean.

The Defence Department declined to confirm or deny that. Capt. John Paul Macdonald said such information is only available under the Access to Information Act, a process that can take a month or more.

The March flight to Regina, Vancouver, Prince George and Penticton was revealed by CBC Radio using information supplied by the department under the act.

SELLING THE BUDGET

Ironically, the trip in question was part of Mulroney's campaign to sell the Feb. 26 budget, which increased sales taxes on everything from pet food to new cars and slapped a new surtax on income tax as part of the effort to lower the deficit to $29.5 billion this fiscal year from $34.3 billion last year.

The seven-man technical team provided the sound system for Mulroney's appearances and prepared sound and video recordings.

Mulroney spokesman Michel Gratton could not say how that compared to operations under Liberal Pierre Trudeau and "I don't care."

He said the use of an armed forces aircraft was much cheaper than flying commercially, which would be "horrendously expensive and inefficient."

The vans include the sound and video equipment and "all the communications equipment to keep in touch with Ottawa, which is crucial of course," he added.

"So you're talking about Micoms (word-processors), fax machines for documents, secure fax, backup Micoms if something breaks down, a number of things."

The number of technical staff travelling with the prime minister varies according to the trip, Gratton said. The recordings are kept for historical purposes.

Neither Nielsen nor Gratton questioned the $40,000-figure, calculated on the basis of the number of hours the Hercules was in the air and its hourly operating cost.

Neither did Brig.-Gen. Terry Liston, the Defence Department's director general of information.

However, he called The Canadian Press to say it is "a bit unfair."

"The money would have been spent in any case. The plane would have been used on some other activity in support of the government or on training."

Lawyers withdraw after letter denounced as fake

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Toronto lawyers acting for one of three men accused of conspiracy to kill a Turkish diplomat quit the case Monday after Ontario Supreme Court heard that evidence they had presented was false.

The men — Haroutioun Kevork, 41, Raffic Balian, 30, and Haig Gharakhanian, 21 — pleaded guilty in April to conspiring to kill Kani Gungor, a Turkish business attaché who was crippled in a 1982 attempt on his life. In return, the Crown dropped charges of attempted murder against the three.

The same day, a friend of Kevork gave one of his lawyers, Marlys Edwardh, a letter he said he found while cleaning his safe. He said it had been there since it was written in 1982. Edwardh kept it until it was introduced in court during presentence arguments last month.

The letter contradicted the Crown's contention Kevork masterminded the attack on Gungor's life and discredited the Crown's two major witnesses in the case.

However, prosecutors told the court Monday laboratory tests conducted in Washington, D.C., show the letter could not have been signed before January 1984. Kevork was in custody as of March 1984.

Environment Dept. idea shows 'blatant disregard'

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal Environment Department would become little more than a public relations agency if a proposal now before the cabinet wins approval, a coalition of environment groups said Monday.

The recommendation, contained in a report commissioned by Deputy Prime Minister Erik Nielsen, shows a "blatant disregard" for public demands for even greater environmental regulation, spokesman David Coon told reporters.

The report was written this winter by Alain Desfosses, a special adviser in the cabinet office. A source who has seen it said last week it recommends that the department become a junior ministry stripped of its power to propose and enforce laws. Each government department would take control for environmental issues related to its responsibilities.

The coalition, representing 36 groups from across the country, planned to meet Monday with Environment Minister Tom McMillan to discuss the report.

The Tories have been whittling away at the department ever since they came to power, Coon said. The still-secret report is in line with Conservative attitudes which hold environmental regulation as a hindrance to economic development, he said.

Coon said the report should be made public immediately. In the Commons, Nielsen said it will be tabled in parliament as soon as it is printed.

Tobacco ad ban bill is introduced in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tobacco, advertising, magazine and newspaper industries have closed ranks under the banner of the first amendment in denouncing a congressional overture to ban all promotion and advertising of tobacco products.

Spokesmen for all four industries said the bill introduced Monday is unconstitutional. The chief sponsor of the measure said he disagreed, but conceded the stiff opposition and the short time remaining in this year's congressional session likely will kill any chance of passing the bill in 1986.

"We don't look at this as an easy battle," Representative Mike Synar (D-Okla.), conceded at a news conference unveiling the legislation.

The bill, introduced by Synar with six co-sponsors, would affect all forms of tobacco, including cigarettes, cigars, pipe tobacco, snuff and chewing tobacco.

It would ban all forms of tobacco promotion. Broadcast advertising has been forbidden since 1971.

The bill also would forbid tobacco companies from sponsoring athletic or artistic events under a brand name or promoting a non-tobacco product or service carrying the same name or logo as a tobacco product.

Synar acknowledged the constitutional question of freedom of speech is an issue, but he insisted a study has persuaded him and others the expansive bill could pass constitutional muster.

"The right to commercial free speech is not absolute," Synar said.

The bill was immediately attacked by the Tobacco Institute as "blatantly unconstitutional," and others joined the criticism.

Besides the constitutional question, Tobacco Institute spokesman Scott Stapf said the bill likely would be ineffective. He said studies abroad have shown advertising bans have little effect on smoking habits.

News-in-brief

Conspiracy hearing date set

MONTREAL (CP) — Five Sikhs held on explosive-related conspiracy charges will have their preliminary hearing June 30, a judge ruled today.

The five, arrested last month, are charged with conspiring to "either fabricate or have in their possession or in their care or control an explosive substance with the intention of endangering lives or of causing extensive damage to property."

Pesticides a hazard — Nantel

MONTREAL (CP) — Maria Destounis came down with an ugly rash on her arms, feet and legs shortly after sunbathing while a neighbor had his lawn sprayed with pesticides.

Her father, who was working in the yard during the spraying, got an itchy torso, and the family dog started having trouble breathing. Dermatologist June Irwin said the problem could be the result of contact with pesticides.

A leading toxicologist has warned that pesticides used to spray lawns pose a hazard for society.

"The more we spray pesticides in urban areas, the more the general public is at risk," said Albert Nantel, head of the Quebec Toxicology Centre.

Gervais dies of cancer

MONTREAL (CP) — Lizette Gervais, the first woman newsreader for Radio-Canada, CBC's French-language television network, died of cancer Sunday, less than a week after her 54th birthday.

She started her broadcast career in Hull, on radio station CKCH in 1959 and joined Radio-Canada the following year to host several radio and television programs, including one on popular psychology.

She read her first television newscast in 1967 and became the first woman to host a Radio-Canada television quiz show in 1973.

Don't hike wheat prices — CAC

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers Association of Canada urged the government Monday to reject a Commons committee proposal to boost wheat prices by $3 a bushel.

The subsequent increases in the price of bread, pasta and cereal products would place "an unfair burden on all consumers, particularly low-income families," said association president Sally Hall in a telegram sent to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

Canada will save rights' meetings

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will fight hard to ensure the United Nations' elimination of human rights meetings to save money this year doesn't happen again in 1987, Stephen Lewis, Canada's ambassador to the UN, told a Commons committee Monday.

A $60-million package of cuts was approved last month to offset the loss of millions of dollars in fees withheld by some 75 member states, including the United States and the Soviet Union.

CBC cuts 110 from roster

TORONTO (CP) — About 110 unionized workers will be laid off at the CBC this year due to a budget shortfall of $48 million, a corporation spokesman said Monday.

Anthony Manera, vice-president of human resources for the public broadcaster, announced last month that 307 jobs would be eliminated, but early retirements and unfilled vacant positions cut the final layoff figure to about 110.

'A matter of great indifference'

TORONTO (CP) — Former prime minister Pierre Trudeau is not optimistic about Canada's chances of negotiating freer trade with the United States.

"I am always uneasy when two people enter into a contract when for one the success of the negotiations is extremely important and for the other it's a matter of greater indifference," Trudeau told a computer-services convention Monday.

Prisoners thumbed their noses at authority, walked away from rehab centre

COWANSVILLE (JM) — Two prisoners just walked away from the rehabilitation centre where they were being held in late May.

"The Waterloo Rehabilitation Centre is becoming known as an evasion centre," Crown attorney Pierre Gibeau told Provincial Court Judge Bernard Legaré during representations on sentencing in the cases of Daniel Grenier and Francis Soucy. The two evaded legal custody from the walk-away facility on May 26.

Gibeau reminded the court 57 persons escaped Waterloo in 1985 and the count so far this year is 33.

Gibeau noted prisoners admissible to Waterloo are fully aware it is a privilege and to use a privilege to gain their freedom is one way of thumbing their noses at justice.

Gibeau said Grenier had been sentenced to two years less one day and arrived in Waterloo on May 19, namely one week before he and Soucy fled.

"Soucy's case is even worse," Gibeau said. "He was sentenced to two years but was in Waterloo on an exchange between the federal and provincial governments to allow him to undergo the drug detoxication program. He was admitted to Waterloo on April 24, 1986.

"The court must be severe and impose at least a six month to a nine month term to dissuade others," Gibeau urged. He said that by the same token, he could not ask for such a harsh term for a first offender serving a one year term.

"One of them had been handed a penitentiary term for drug trafficking (Soucy) while the other was a whisper away from penitentiary on burglary charges and it is not as if I was asking for the maximum of two years additional," Gibeau commented.

Defence lawyer Daniel Lavalée noted the District of Bedford contains three prisons, Waterloo and Sweetsburg at the provincial level, and the federal Cowansville institution, and the local courts have proven to be the toughest in the province in sentencing escapees. He noted his clients had only been at large eight hours and they had lost all their rights and privileges.

Lavalée did not suggest what he felt would be an adequate sentence.

Judge Legaré noted if the accused had lost their privileges they were aware that would happen if they fled from custody. He sentenced them to eight months additional to all terms they were serving on May 26, and added, "If you feel that is too heavy you can go to appeal."

Frontenac Park to be 'recreational', will be developed at last — Picotte

By Charles Bury

BLACK LAKE — The Eastern Townships gained its third provincial vacation area Monday when Recreation, Hunting and Fishing Minister Yvon Picotte unveiled the final master plan for the long-awaited Frontenac provincial park.

The government intends to "privatize" some park activities, unloading some of the work and spending involved, and administering the new park "in partnership with private interests, community organizations and local governments," he said.

Picotte also announced that about $400,000 extra will be spent in the park in 1986-87, and he made vague references to an additional $4.5 million in money Quebec may invest there, "in the next few years, depending on budget conditions and priorities."

Picotte also said his department wants to make the park into a "four-season" facility by opening parts of it up to winter activities such as cross-country skiing and snowshoeing. But while the park's summer staff will increase from 19 to 33 this year, year-round personnel will remain at only two.

NEVER RECOGNIZED

Frontenac park 'reserve' has appeared on provincial maps for over a decade but has never been officially recognized or identified under provisions of the Quebec parks act. That will change now, Picotte said.

"Frontenac will now be considered an official park in every sense of the word," the minister told a group of about 150 officials, businessmen, community leaders and reporters gathered in a Black Lake hotel basement for the occasion.

The 156 square kilometre park is located in the area of Lake St-François, source of the St. Francis River south of Thetford Mines. It includes long stretches of sandy beach, other lakeshore property and large extents of forested land nearby.

VIRTUALLY ABANDONED

Although the park has been partly developed in the past, uncertainty about its future, poor planning and a weak provincial financial commitment led to its near abandonment by the government in recent years.

In several areas of the park, expensive roads lead nowhere and carefully laid-out campsites and other public facilities have grown over with thick weeds and young trees.

"We had the equipment, right down to the canoes to rent out, but we didn't get the money to run it," said park manager Nelson Renière.

At public hearings last year citizens' and business groups were united in demanding that the park get official status and be 'zoned' for recreational use only. They also asked for a greater role in park management for local groups and businesses. Monday they got much — but not all — of what they wanted.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

Frontenac Park will continue to be operated by Picotte's department, under manager Renière.

Some of the unfinished past developments will be completed.

More campsites will be opened in its northeast corner near the village of St-Daniel, busiest section of the park until now.

An expanded parking and public-access area will be built across Lake St-François to the west at St-Praxède, where an abandoned road, built to provincial standards and paved several years ago, is currently padlocked and unused, a victim of spending cuts in recent years. A beach will be opened and water-sports facilities completed.

Some $300,000 will be spent in the relatively undeveloped southern section of the park. A canoe-camping circuit will be developed at Baie des Sauvages (sometimes called Baie des Indiens) near the village of St-Romain, and around lakes Des Ours, A la Barbut, Noble, Des Îles and Egan, all completely within park territory.

Several day-rate summer cottages in the same area will be refurbished, and hiking, riding and ski trails will be built and access roads upgraded. Quebec also says it intends to promote use of the park for winter camping, cross-country skiing and snowshoeing.

Some of the park's existing facilities are already operated by private business. For example, cottage rentals are administered by Sherbrooke businessman J. Roch Boutet. Other private firms operate the sailing school and boat rental services as franchises.

Picotte said further privatization is in line with government policy and should "allow the government, the users and the private sector to get what they want from the park."

The neighboring province of Ontario tried 'privatizing' its provincial parks several years ago. Declaring that experiment a failure, the Ontario Natural Resources Ministry announced last week that all park management will be returned to the government.

Picotte was asked if Quebec's move towards the private side is a limited experiment or an irreversible policy. He did not answer the question directly but said the Ontario plan had turned over complete management of the parks to private businesses, while Quebec will maintain "overall operation" of its parks and simply rent out certain activities "on a partnership basis" to private entrepreneurs.

POSITIVE REACTION

Reaction to the announcement was quick and positive. Réjean Beaudoin, manager of the Eastern Townships Tourism Association, said developing the park will "finally give this region a chance to get away from its dependency on the asbestos industry."

"I've been working on this dossier for 18 years," Beaudoin said, "and today is the happiest of days for the park. It was a shame to get halfway into this and then not finish it up, as had happened until now," he said. "Now it is official."

"The park will help not only the immediate area, but the whole of the Eastern Townships," he added. "It will make the Eastern Townships a more complete travel destination."

Megantic-Compton Liberal MNA Madeleine Bélanger, whose huge district includes the until-now undeveloped southern end of the park reserve, was also pleased. "It's a good start," she said. "Now we have something to work with, a plan to be developed and works to be begun."

NO SOUTHERN ACCESS

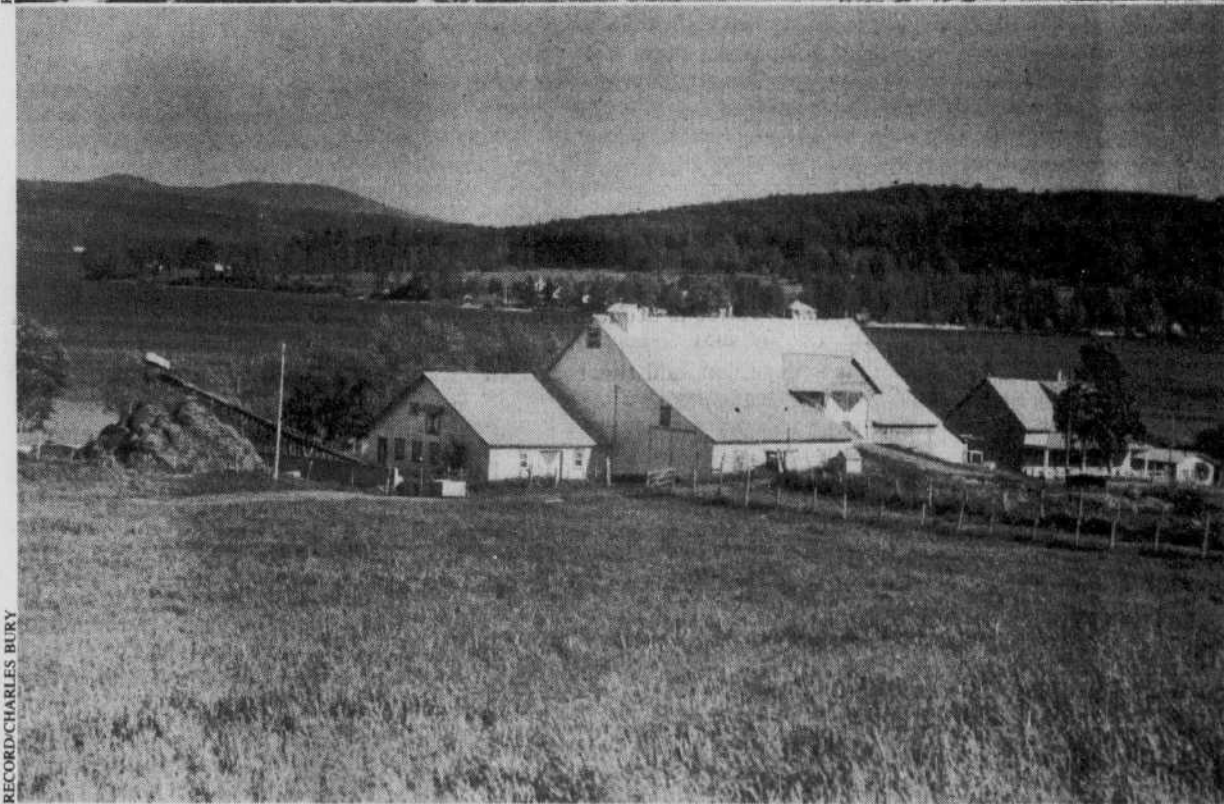

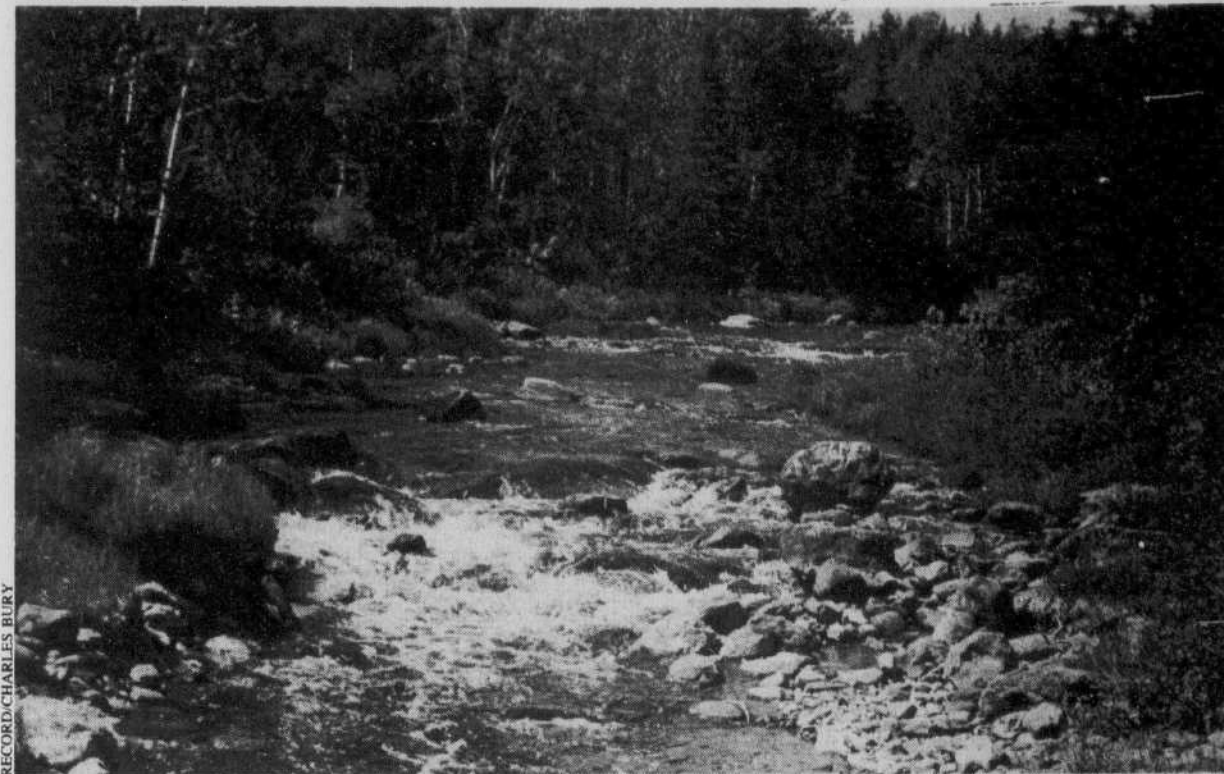

Left unpromised was a possible future southern entrance to the park. Although access to the north end, from Route 112 from the northeast (Quebec City) and west (Sherbrooke and Montreal), is easy, even finding the southeastern sections of the park is difficult.

Citizens groups had asked that a road be built into the south end of the park from Stornoway (Route 108) to the south and Stratford (Route 161) to the east, but Picotte said that would have to wait. However he added that local municipalities apparently have the money, equipment and desire to do the job themselves and are welcome to begin it on their own.

Gagnon-Tremblay takes new approach to job

By Philip Authier

SHERBROOKE — The Liberal government's new plan to advance the status of women represents a pragmatic yet realistic approach to the problem and will likely accomplish more good than the plans of past administrations, says the minister responsible for the status of women.

The report, released last month by the government, is perhaps closer to the minister's own attitude to the job than people realize.

Monique Gagnon-Tremblay — the St-François MNA who came to power in the red sea that was the last election — says she views her job fundamentally different from those of her predecessors.

TEAM PLAYER

For Gagnon-Tremblay, the posting does not mean siding with any one of the 40 or so women's rights groups in the province.

Above all, Gagnon-Tremblay, interviewed by The Record Monday, sees herself as a Liberal team player, faithful to the government.

But that does not mean she is failing to address the problems of women in society today. She says it simply makes more sense to work on a few assignments she knows the government can address, rather than assuming everything at once and getting nowhere with any of them.

"It's a different approach," Gagnon-Tremblay said. "Given the budget constraints, it is a realistic approach. If I can't defend your dossier, I won't bring it in (to the government)."

Gagnon-Tremblay, while not overly critical of past status of women ministers, says the danger in her ministry is in losing touch with the government's overall game plan, especially when it comes to funding.

"They (previous ministers) stayed good friends with the women's groups but they got nowhere," she said. "My colleagues know if I ask for something, it's serious."

The plan Gagnon-Tremblay, an East Angus notary, has prepared — Le Plan d'action gouvernemental en matière de condition féminine 1986-1987 — is a reflection of that attitude.

Instead of taking a revolutionary approach, it sets out to create a coherent government policy that affects ministries when they are drafting legislation.

And for the first time, a realistic schedule on when policy changes are to be implemented is included.

HEAVYWEIGHT

The 60-page report, soon to be translated, groups the ministry's priorities under four general headings: the education of women, the reality of the Quebec work place, economic security for women who work in the home and finally the availability of services.

"The schedule puts a lot of weight on my shoulders and on the shoulders of the ministers," Gagnon-Tremblay said, noting that the plan is the result of many years worth of consultations with women's groups across Quebec.

In that sense, says Gagnon-Tremblay, the report is a tool to be used to implement some of the changes people have been talking about for years and yet have never seen bear fruit.

It deals with everything from the role women are increasingly playing in the management of businesses often owned by their husbands, to the difficulties farm women face in shouldering the burden of the farm and family.

Some policy changes have already made headlines. Justice Minister Herb Marx has introduced legislation on domestic violence.

Daycare services, in contrast to other sectors of the provincial budget, have seen a 14 per cent increase in their budget allocations.

This fall, Labor Minister Pierre Paradis will increase the province's minimum wage level, something which is particularly important for women, 70 per cent of whom work at the minimum wage level.

But beyond that, says Gagnon-Tremblay, the report represents a realistic public reference document which clearly sets out the government's priorities on the status of women.

And in that sense, it may work out to be the best political watchdog the women's movement has yet seen.

Cabbies and gas station attendants are important: They meet tourists first

By Laurel Sherrer

SHERBROOKE — The city's tourism office Monday kicked off its third annual tourism week, a week designed to make everyone more aware of the importance of making tourists feel welcome.

This year, more than ever, organizers would like to reach those who are usually first to greet tourists coming to the city: store clerks, gas station attendants, taxi-drivers and such, said coordinator Sylvie Lafleur at a press conference.

"All these people have a very important role in receiving tourists," she said.

One way the Bureau du tourisme et des congrès is hoping to heighten awareness is by providing tours of the city in the new articulated bus. These free tours are open to everyone and set out from different locations at 7 p.m. each evening this week. Tuesday the bus will leave from Parc Camirand, Wednesday from the Ivan Dugré arena, Thursday from the Parc St-Jean-Baptiste and Friday from Parc St-Alphonse.

INVITE FRIENDS

Sherbrooke residents are also being encouraged to consider themselves as unofficial guides to the city, and to invite their friends and relatives from out of town to visit Sherbrooke's attractions.

"We hope the people themselves will see themselves as spokespeople for the town," said Lafleur. "We want them to know that they too can do something to increase tourism in Sherbrooke."

An incentive is being offered in the form of a contest. Families are invited to send the names of friends or relatives they intend to have visit this summer to the Bureau du tourisme et des congrès. All these will receive a personal written invitation from Mayor Jean-Paul Pelletier, and will be given special treatment and a souvenir of the city during the Lac des Nations festival.

One of these host families will win a free weekend at the Hotel Le Baron along with their guests. The winners will be guests of honor at the Lac des Nations festival.

Coupons to enter the contest are in today's Tribune, but a plain sheet of paper with the names and addresses of the guest and host families will do as well.

A supper is planned for 6 p.m. today at the Hotel Le Baron for various service clubs in the city, but everyone is invited. The cost of $15 includes the meal and a performance by the musical group Les 4-temps.

IMPROVE ENGLISH

Encouraging an improvement in the use of English is another goal of the week, said Lafleur. "We expect lots of tourists from outside the province," she said. "I think Sherbrooke is already known as a bilingual city, but we can make some improvements."

Tourism is a close second to manufacturing in importance to the city's economy, said mayor Pelletier, also present at Monday's press conference.

"Being a park city — we have 55 parks — it becomes a very attractive city," he said. Sherbrooke is known for the preservation of trees and for its flowers, he said. Bilingualism is also an asset, with 65 per cent of the population speaking both official languages.

RECORD/MELANIE GRUER

Monique Gagnon-Tremblay visited The Record Monday to discuss a new report on the status of women in Quebec.

We've come a long way, baby

The Marlboro man may soon be a thing of the past.

Seven U.S. congressmen have introduced legislation to ban all forms of tobacco promotion. They say the constitutional right to commercial free speech is not absolute and all forms of promotional activities involving cigarettes, cigars, pipe tobacco, snuff and chewing tobacco should be banned.

Tobacco related advertisements on T.V. and radio have been banned in the U.S. since 1971, but this new legislation would put an end to newspaper and magazine ads, billboards, posters and matchbook covers, athletic endorsements, store shelves and counters displaying cigarette advertising, promotional premiums or allowances, and free samples. All promotional activities from the manufacturer to the retailer would be banned.

Unfortunately, the legislation is receiving heavy opposition from a group called the Tobacco Institute. The group, which consists of cigarette manufacturers, say the proposed legislation is 'blatantly unconstitutional'. They say studies prove advertising has little effect on smoking habits, and that advertising is more aimed at getting smokers to switch brands rather than enticing young people to start.

The Tobacco Institute has been joined in their battle by various tobacco and advertising industries. These are the people who stand to lose everything if such a legislation comes to pass.

What seems ironic is the fact that the American Civil Liberties Union has also joined the Tobacco Institute. They claim the congressional overture is unconstitutional and note the question of freedom of speech is an issue.

Approximately 350,000 Americans die every year from lung disease or other tobacco related illnesses, but still the American Civil Liberties Union is more concerned with the freedom of speech than the freedom to live. What tobacco manufacturers continue to hide, and the union fails to see, is that tobacco is a clear killer.

Mike Synar (D-Okla), the spokesperson for the legislative group, knows his team will be coming up against some stiff opposition. Synar says the short time remaining in this year's congressional session likely means the bill will not be accepted.

But Synar and his cronies must keep battling — if it doesn't happen in this session, maybe it will in the next. There are more bridges to cross before tobacco products are banned completely, but many smokers have caught on to the fatalities and have already quit. If they hadn't, the number of smoking related deaths would be much higher than 350,000 per year.

Thank goodness, we've come a long way, baby.

Ottawa expects surge of retiring war veterans

By Richard Hoffman

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal government is bracing itself for the largest surge of retiring war veterans in Canada's history. Veterans Affairs Minister George Hees said Monday.

"We are expecting to be more heavily engaged in helping veterans during the next five years than we have since the busy post-war years," Hees told an audience of mostly retired ex-servicemen attending the Royal Canadian Legion's biennial conference.

Hees didn't outline government plans to cope with the rising tax burden for veterans' pensions and allowances, but promised improvements in spouses' benefits, housing and health services.

One project currently under study by the veterans affairs department is the development of "portable health clinics to serve veterans in rural and semi-rural communities," he said.

Hees, a Second World War veteran himself, said the Progressive Conservative government has improved services for veterans since the Tories came to power in 1984.

"When I first came to this job I had to wear asbestos gloves to open the mail."

KNOCKS HEES

However, Legionnaire Al Harvey of St. John's, Nfld., said any improvements since the last federal election were "simply evolutionary... They would have happened regardless of who was in power."

Harvey, a past-president of the Legion, said Hees avoided controversial issues such as extending War Veterans Allowance benefits to servicemen who didn't go overseas during the war.

"He stayed with the motherhood issues," said Harvey.

Hees invited Legionnaires to "write to me personally... if you ever hear of a veteran who receives anything but courteous treatment" from government employees.

The week-long conference marking the 60th anniversary of the Legion in Canada has attracted about 2,800 members from across Canada, the United States and Britain.

The conference ends Thursday after members elect a replacement for out-going national president Steve Dunsdon of B.C.

Ireland: The price of solutionism is very high

"After the first attack I boarded up the windows from the inside. Just after 1 a.m. on Saturday morning the front door was kicked off its hinges and two fire-bombs exploded in the stairwell. If we had been upstairs we would have been cut off by the fire."

The victim had been a reserve policewoman in the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) for 12 years. She, her mother and a younger sister have now been moved from their ruined house to a closely guarded RUC accommodation in another part of Belfast.

They were the 31st police family that has had to abandon their home in Northern Ireland since the Protestants turned on the police in early March. After almost two decades of restraint, often under severe terrorist provocation, the 'Loyalist' Protestant community of the province is in revolt. The irony is that they are attacking the police, who are 90 per cent Protestant.

Much of the Loyalists' previous restraint was due to their conviction that the RUC and the British army were there basically to protect their interests, and in particular their right to remain part of the United Kingdom. But the agreement of the British government at Hillsborough last November to admit Dublin to a consultative role in the running of Northern Ireland has finally destroyed that belief.

Fire-bombs are only the first bitter consequence. The agreement between Dublin and London was well meant, but there are some situations that are better just left alone.

Back when the Hillsborough agreement was signed, I wrote an article about the perils of 'solutionism' — the naive belief that there must be a neat political solution to every problem. I regret to say that all its predictions are coming true. The deal that was meant to pacify the Catholic minority in Ulster has simply inflamed the Protestant majority, and brought 'Doomsday' — and all-Ireland civil war — appreciably closer.

Of the five million people who inhabit the island of Ireland, almost four million belong to the 'Nationalist' Catholic tradition, and want nothing to do with Britain. But the other millions are 'Loyalist' Protestants, descended mainly from 17-century Scottish settlers, who want nothing to do with a united Ireland in which they fear that they would be an oppressed minority.

They may be wrong about that, but the important thing is that the Protestants believe it to be true. When the rest of Ireland freed itself from Britain 65 years ago in one of this century's first successful liberation wars, the Northern Irish Loyalists were fully prepared to fight their own war to stay within Britain.

In the end, the victorious Nationalists in Dublin agreed to the partition of the island rather than try to conquer a million well-armed Protestants. They then had to fight their own civil war against Irish Republican army (IRA) diehards who refused to accept partition.

The present IRA is descended from those diehards, and it is still as deadly an enemy to the Dublin government as it is to London. But it cannot reopen the civil war until and unless Britain is forced to withdraw from Northern Ireland. That is the ultimate danger of Hillsborough.

Northern Ireland remained reasonably stable for a half-century after the Republic of Ireland's independence, even though half a million Catholics were trapped there, inextricably mixed in with the Protestant majority. The Catholics had a miserable time of it, for perfectly democratic elections to the local parliament invariably produced a Protestant government that systematically favoured its own people.

The present crisis began with the Catholic 'civil rights' movement of the late 60s, which triggered savage Protestant reprisals. The British army was brought in (initially to protect the Catholics from Protestant paramilitary forces, though that is now forgotten), and the moribund IRA exploited the situation to launch a new guerilla war.

The terrorism quickly drove both Protestants and Catholics back on their traditional tribal loyalties, and the presence of the British army became indispensable to prevent the outbreak of full-scale civil war. The British government suppressed the Protestant-dominated parliament of Northern Ireland and replaced it with 'direct rule' from London. But it could not impose a political settlement.

Every attempt to restore democratic self-government to the province has failed. A free vote would recreate the Protestant ascendancy, which is utterly unacceptable to the Catholic minority. 'Power-sharing' compromises that would guarantee the Catholic minority an equal voice are equally unacceptable to Protestants, who see them as the first step towards being abandoned by Britain and immersed in an all-Ireland republic with an overwhelming Catholic majority.

So for 17 years the British army and the RUC have held the line and taken their losses. As the security forces have grown more skillful and sensitive in their operations, there has even been a large relative improvement in the situation.

Deaths from 'the troubles' have fallen steadily from 467 in 1972 to only 47 last year, and civil life is now almost back to normal in most of Ulster. The number of British troops in the province was gradually reduced from a peak of 22,000 to around 9,000 by 1985.

It is still a dreadful situation, but it could be much worse. And because well-intentioned people cannot leave things alone, it is getting worse. Northern Ireland is now heading back towards 1972, and all Ireland may be heading back to the civil war of 1922. The Hillsborough agreement may have a lot to answer for.

An apology for the Great Fire of London

By Marcus Eliason

LONDON (AP) — London's bakers apologized to the mayor Monday for setting fire to the city.

The Great Fire of London happened in 1666, but in a country that not only treasures its history but often seems to be living in it, what's a mere 320 years?

So the members of the Worshipful Company of Bakers gathered in Pudding Lane at the place where the fire began. Watched by a small crowd of dignitaries and bystanders, the bakers formally acknowledged what Londoners have known for some time: that the fire was started by Thomas Faryner, the king's baker, who failed to douse his oven before turning in on Saturday night, Sept. 1, 1666.

Clad in his robes and chain of office featuring sheaves of wheat and a scale, John Copeman, Master of the Worshipful Company of Bakers, unveiled a plaque in the wall of the bank that stands where Faryner had his establishment.

Copeman then presented the Lord Mayor of London, Allen Davis, with a scroll written by the bakers "as an acknowledgement of their regret for the great damage caused by one of their number."

Davis said: "It's never too late to apologize, and I'm very happy to acknowledge his confession and say the city has approved it. To err is human, to forgive divine."

The five-day fire, though it caused no fatalities, laid waste to 13,200 houses, 89 churches and 44 livery halls over an area of 180 hectares, and to this day is known simply as the Great Fire.

The Worshipful Company of Bakers chose 1986 as the year for their apology because it is the 500th year since it was recognized by the King Henry VII as a guild.

In medieval times the guild set standards, prices and weights for baked goods.

Dear Editor:

The caption under the picture of the windsurfer on Brome Lake in last week's Record is very misleading.

The water in Brome Lake is so clean it is safe to drink and does not pose any health dangers to windsurfers or swimmers.

The accompanying article was about a boy in the St. Lawrence River and had nothing to do with Brome Lake.

The Oh-rings of Ottawa and other tall tales

From the transcript of the news broadcast covering the launch

Good morning to everyone across the country. A special good morning to all the school children who got out of bed so early this morning to watch the launch of the space shuttle "Canada".

From where I'm standing it looks like it's going to be a perfect launch, we've got a glorious day for it and everyone says it's going to be spectacular event. Nobody is talking about the last attempt by the Conservatives to get the shuttle off the ground. As you remember the ship was piloted by Captain Joe Clark and the mission had to be aborted after only a few weeks into space. Today however with Captain Mulroney at the throttle I'm told things will be different and we can look forward to a successful launch and full mission.

Well the election results are in. Only a few minutes ago Captain Mulroney and the stewardess Mila appeared, waved, sang three choruses of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" and spent some time with Mission Control who asked him to form a flight crew and get the thing off the ground. The crowd gathered here at the Ottawa launch pad is cheering wildly. Ladies and gentlemen... we have a lift off!

What a sight! This new shuttle is really something else! Manned by one of the largest flight crews ever assembled and backed by pages and pages of pre-election promises, this launch has the potential to be one of the most exciting ever in the history of Canadian Flight.

And now the primary stages are over and the Space Shuttle "Canada" is well off the ground and raising into the clear blue... oops... mission control just reported that the flight crew seems to be missing some clothing. Their "Coates" have discovered in a German Strip Club and charges of improper conduct are bouncing all over the launch pad. Don't worry, Captain Mulroney has radioed from the cockpit that the mission can still be successful, even without their clothing. Everything is still on course.

Where the pavement ends

Hold it...something just fell off the shuttle...it looks like a tuna fish...the smell of decaying fish is stinking up the pad and stretching right across the country. Apparently the Fraser has malfunctioned and we would be headed for serious problems. Wait, the Captain has just announced that the shuttle can perform perfectly well without a Fraser and things are back on schedule.

Oh No! Here's another set-back. One of the co-pilots has resigned in a huff because of enemy activity and allegations of overspending in his fervor to get onto the flight crew. Captain Mulroney has smoothed things out though and apparently the enemy was wrong about the co-pilot's bank balance. Whew! I thought there for a minute we might be in real trouble.

Oh-my-gosh! Something called a Blais-Grenier has developed serious cracks and has proved far too expensive to keep aboard. A door has opened in the shuttle and the malfunctioning part has been thrown out. We can relax now, the flight is still proceeding.

You know folks it's really exciting to see the way this new Captain is handling things. You remember when he was planning the mission how he accused the Liberal Flight Crew of appointing their friends as ground support? Well, only a few minutes after the shuttle lifted all those recent appointees were dismissed and replaced with really close friends of the new crew. I wonder a little bit about their experience and qualifications but I supposed when communications between the ground and the shuttle are so important it's only natural to want your buddies manning the support positions.

What's this? A report has just reached us that the Captain's children can't be left alone and the cost of maintaining a sitting service has been charged against the cost of the mission. Gee! That doesn't seem too fair to me. Wait! Another report has just arrived. The stewardess has requested a special office at base control and funds have been spent remodeling the bunker. Gee I didn't think she was really part of the flight crew. I mean, when the Captain was selected I didn't think we'd hired her too. Surely there's only room for one Captain at a time. Oh well I guess I just don't understand flight expenditures.

A door has just opened on the side of the shuttle. Captain Mulroney has come out and is preparing for one of his famous space walks. Boy-oh-boy this is exciting. He walking all over the place and sure enough the stewardess is walking right alongside of him. They'll be out in space trying out all kinds of experiments for quite a long time. We need not worry about the shuttle however because the co-pilot has been left in charge.

Hold it folks, we've got some sort of a problem developing. The Stevens looks like it's acting up. The dastardly enemy again! The Enemy spies are claiming that the Stevens is hooked up to another shuttle as well and that it's draining power from the Shuttle "Canada" and making use of it to power another vehicle. Apparently another Stevens of similar construction has been borrowing fuel all over the place with no plans of replacing it. It looks like we could be in serious trouble. The flight crew is looking white-faced and embarrassed, the co-pilot is fumbling, the Stevens has been temporarily disconnected and we're eagerly waiting for a mechanic to look into the situation. Meanwhile Captain Mulroney and his sidekick are still off on a space walk.

Don't go away from your television sets. This exciting program will continue with the day-by-day progress of the "Canada".

Will the Captain get back in time to save the Stevens? Will the co-pilot start a war with the enemy? Will the stewardess ever get to use her new office? Will the shuttle just simply self-destruct? Tune in again and see the up-to-the-minutes progress of the space shuttle "Canada" and hear the Captain say "Everything's for the best, in this best of all possible worlds!"

Farm and Business

Entrepreneurs say don't run your own business, hire someone

By Karen Benzing
Ottawa Citizen

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Phillip Carroll, Michael Blair and Pierre Ducros all have a fire in the belly that won't quit, a passionate commitment to their ideas and a lot of chutzpa.

Their full stories, told at a University of Western Ontario conference, are too long to relate here, but would-be entrepreneurs might be wise to consider what they say about making it in the business world.

Take Carroll. He is vice-president of Three Buoy Houseboat Vacations, a four-year-old Calgary-based firm with gross sales expected to reach $30 million this year.

Marooned in a small town in the British Columbia interior in 1982, the affable 26-year-old and two partners stumbled into the houseboat vacation business. In 48 hours they came up with the idea to build and rent luxury houseboats, used their last $3,000 as a down payment on a dilapidated marina, rented an old barn as a boat manufacturing plant and drew up their game plan on a paper napkin.

In the first year, the firm had two boats, one marina, four employees and gross sales of $25,000. Today, Three Buoys has 480 boats and six marinas. It employs 500 people, 200 of them in its 6,300-square-metre factory. Boat production has soared to eight a day from one a week.

LOST FRIENDS

Carroll says the three partners have lost girl friends, family friends and security because they ate, drank, slept and dreamed the business.

"Don't run your own company," he says. "You can make decisions but don't run it, hire people to do it."

When hiring, Carroll says they select people for their attitude, not their aptitude. They want entrepreneurs.

And when managers come to the three partners with a idea they want to pursue, Carroll says they are given more money than they ask for and more staff members than they need to develop it. If it doesn't work with more than enough resources, they can only blame themselves.

But before you decide to run with your latest idea, Carroll has some parting words: Is the idea big enough to make money, do you have the discipline to carry it through, are you prepared to make the necessary sacrifices, and do you have the guts to take the plunge?

Michael Blair is president and chief executive officer of Enfield Corp. Ltd., a merchant bank which arranges mergers, acquisitions and management buyouts and is expected to bring in more than $20 million this year.

In 1984, Blair, a former pilot with the Royal Canadian Air Force, was vice-president of corporate development at Canadian General Electric Co. He decided to arrange financing for a group of talented employees who wanted to buy a money-losing division of CGE.

Blair's pitch to a couple of Toronto investment dealers was this: "I need $15 million by this afternoon to buy an unprofitable firm in Cobourg, Ont.) that makes plastic parts for automotive companies." He got it and in four days the transaction was completed.

In the first 10 weeks, the CGE money-losing division, renamed the Complx Corp., made $1.6 million. One year later, after-tax profit was $2.8 million and this year $5 million.

Enfield, formed at the same time, reported profits for the nine months ended March 31, 1986, of $18.7 million, almost nine times the $2.1 million made the year earlier. At the same time revenue rose 43 per cent to $31.5 million from $22 million.

Says Blair: "We don't take any risks. We're a gray, shuffling group of bureaucrats."

He's partly right. Blair gets between 200 and 300 proposals a year from companies that want Enfield to finance a deal in exchange for shares.

Enfield buys companies that are leaders in their fields, are established, have been managed by the same people for a long time and have the opportunity to extend themselves to their full capability with financial backing.

The company's philosophy is to spend enough time with the people who may become Enfield's partners before going ahead with the deal.

Blair says the merchant bank invests in people, not assets.

Pierre Ducros is co-founder and president of DMR and Associates, a management consulting firm with 22 locations worldwide and sales of $62 million this year.

In 1972, Ducros and two others, all Quebec branch managers for IBM, decided over drinks at a company meeting to leave their well-paying jobs and start a consulting firm.

Market research, if they had bothered to do it, would have told the three not to go ahead, he says. "But there was something in our guts, a driving force telling us we had to do it."

In the first 10 years the three survived by renting a dingy office with no windows. They had one secretary, didn't pay themselves a salary and followed up every lead, no matter how tentative. As they secured more contracts they expanded until the company had 930 employees and 22 locations in four countries — Canada, the United States, Britain and Australia.

Ducros says the firm is successful because the three partners knew the local Quebec market well, had been trained in management consulting at IBM, were respected as managers among their peers and wooed 80 senior people away from IBM.

There was also "a hell of a lot of energy and enthusiasm" so the hard work was and still is play, he says.

Lowest grain market ever has bad consequences for US and Europe

By Clyde Graham
The Canadian Press

The European Economic Community and the United States are like two freight trains laden with grain, racing toward each other down the same track.

The collision could be devastating for Canadian grain farmers, who already are losing money growing food for the world.

World wheat prices have fallen to a seven-year low and global surpluses are expected to rise again next year.

Dressed in a blue cardigan, Richard Lyng, the 67-year-old U.S. agriculture secretary, sat on a straight-back chair in his hotel suite recently and repeated his country's determination to blast its way back into grain markets with price-cutting and subsidies.

"We pointed out that our aim is to regain export markets we have lost," Lyng told reporters after a summit of ministers from the major grain exporters wrapped up at Whistler, B.C.

The European Economic Community, the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina account for about 95 per cent of the wheat trade on world markets each year and more than 80 per cent of the corn, barley and other coarse grains.

Downstairs, in one of the hotel's meeting rooms, Frans Andriessen, the European Economic Community agriculture commissioner, folded his hands on the table.

SUBSIDY GOES ON

He said European farmers would continue to be subsidized at high levels.

Andriessen said he realizes the Americans have a huge war chest — $7.5 billion over the next five years — to finance export programs.

"They will not very rapidly run out of money," he said. "I think we can match their monies."

That leaves farmers in Canada, Argentina and Australia — the other major exporters — caught in the middle.

While farmers in the United States and Europe are protected from low world prices by high levels of subsidies, farmers elsewhere have been bearing the brunt of the low prices.

The Canadian Wheat Board estimates that for every dollar a Canadian farmer earns in subsidies on a tonne of wheat, farmers in Europe and the United States get the equivalent of $3.

MINISTERS MEET

Charlie Mayer, minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, had worked for more than a year to coax the ministers to the summit at the mountain ski resort 100 kilometres north of Vancouver.

But he had been careful to pour plenty of cold water on expectations of any breakthrough.

"I think it was useful to get together," he offered after the meetings ended.

What was accomplished was an agreement to meet again next year in the United States.

The ministers also pledged to push for the inclusion of agriculture in the next round of negotiations on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. GATT sets limits on protectionist measures among western countries.

Mayer said that was the major achievement. "For the first time, there is general agreement that we want this discussed at the next GATT round."

All the ministers at Whistler gained a better understanding of the political pressures the others face in setting farm policy, Mayer added.

Domestic garbage should be supplying factories, not dumps

By Allan Swift

MONTREAL (CP) — There's money in that trash you throw out of the home, says a small Quebec company that believes garbage recycling can grow into a big Canadian industry.

Recuperation Bois-Francis Inc., grew out of a school ecology project in 1977, and today has sales of $350,000 annually, working only in the Victoriaville region.

"Our approach is ethical and political, but the program is on a strictly industrial basis," representative Normand Maurice said Wednesday before an international audience of businessmen involved in recycling.

Each year Quebec municipalities spend close to $135 million to collect and eliminate, mostly in landfill dumps, some 3.1 million tonnes of garbage.

With an adequate collection system and sorting the material at the source, Maurice said, "most of our domestic garbage could supply factories rather than filling dumps."

Maurice, a high school teacher in Victoriaville, is the driving force behind Recuperation Bois-Francis. He is still a volunteer but the company now has 17 full-time employees, six of them formerly students at his school.

Last year they collected 6,000 tonnes of recyclable materials, mainly paper, in a region of 50,000 people.

COMPANY INVESTS

The project was big enough to prompt one local paper company to invest in equipment to take ink out of waste paper in order to recycle it.

Maurice wants the federal government to provide start-up costs for local paper plants to recycle waste paper. He said all it would take is money equal to what it costs to develop landfill dumps.

He said there are three steps in such a project: convince householders to separate the garbage they put out for collection; get municipalities to pay the cost of the separate collections of recyclable materials; and find markets for it.

He said the first two obstacles have been overcome in the Victoriaville region, but the last obstacle drew a response from some of the Europeans at the meeting of the International Recycling Bureau.

Joachim Neumann of West Germany said that household collection of waste paper and glass in his country has progressed to such an extent that there is a serious surplus of those products.

"Recycling has become a surrogate religion to many people," he said, speaking through an interpreter. "The bottom has dropped out of the market."

He said some cities are taking out the paper and burning it in incinerators at night.

TOWNS COMPETE

"We've learned there is no easy solution to this," said Neumann. The system also gives the municipal authorities a sort of monopoly which competes with private recycling companies.

Maurice agreed that a recycling program must be introduced gradually and in collaboration with existing recycling companies.

Hugh Parenteau, president of a Quebec recycling company, said that he saw the project of Recuperation Bois-Francis at first as a threat.

"We were against it 150 per cent," said Parenteau, of Orford Recycling Inc., which salvages waste from companies and institutions.

Better airport security is good news for airlines suffering from terrorism

NEW YORK (AP) — Airlines and travel agents in the United States, hurt by the terrorist scare in Europe, say they are starting to see a turnaround because of aggressive security precautions and giveaways.

Major trans-Atlantic carriers reported this week that reservations have risen significantly compared with the period immediately following the bombing of a Trans World Airlines jet April 1 and the subsequent U.S. air attack on Libya.

Air Canada — this country's major carrier to Europe — said Canadian bookings weren't seriously affected by the scare.

Air Canada spokesman Brock Stewart said that despite the scare, more expensive European currencies and greater travel within Canada, the airline is forecasting a six per cent increase in trans-Atlantic traffic this year.

U.S. travel agents said in the past few weeks, inquiries about trips to Europe have sharply increased.

H. Wayne Berens, president of the New Jersey chain Revere Travel Inc. and a member of the Travel Security Advisory Council, an industry group formed in response to the tourist fear of terrorism, said increased bookings in his offices range from 25 per cent to 75 per cent over a few weeks ago.

Berens expressed doubt that his business could recoup all cancelled plans, but said "we'll have a pretty clear picture in July."

Travel agents and airline officials attributed the change largely to more aggressive marketing tactics by carriers such as Pan American World Airways, TWA, British Airways and American Airlines.

They also said fear of terrorism has receded because no incidents have been reported for several weeks.

"I think there was a timidity among the public in April and May," said James A. Arey, spokesman for Pan Am. "People haven't been calling. Now they're starting to call."

ANNOUNCES SECURITY

Pan Am took one of the strongest stances against terrorists when it announced formation of an elite security force May 13 designed to foil hijackers and saboteurs.

Reversing a policy of silence on security, Pan Am said publicly about the force was necessary to reassure travelers.

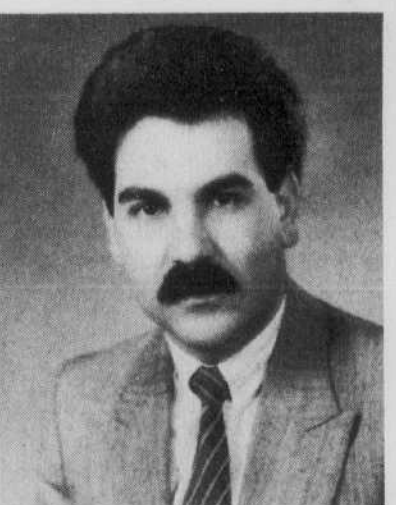

British Airways followed a week later with its "Go For It, America" campaign, in which U.S. passengers to Britain fly free June 10 and will be eligible for prizes ranging from a Rolls Royce to portfolios in stocks and bonds.

The airline said Thursday the campaign has been a "smashing success."

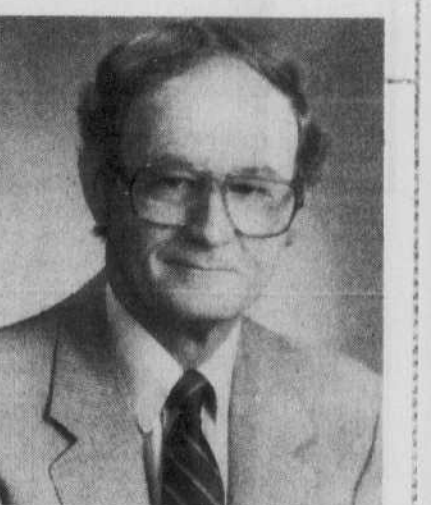

The only carrier to specify its increased trans-Atlantic bookings, British Airways, said they rose from 5,087 in late April to 43,961 in late May.

Kurt Bachofen, president of Imopac (Intl.) Inc., announces the appointment of three senior officers, reflecting a recent reorganization in the company. It was formerly known as International Packing and Moving (Intercanimpex division). Jurg Hertner was named vice-president for air/sea export services; Frank Di Fruscia, vice-president for air import and customs services; and Jean-Claude Lord, vice-president for moving, packing and exhibition services. All three have extensive experience in the freight transportation industry. Imopac, one of the largest freight forwarders in eastern Canada, offers a complete range of services in international freight transportation. The company, which operates its own trucks, warehouses and distribution facility, is agent for North American Van Lines, and is associated with two major European freight forwarders, Pandair and Alisped. Imopac has an office in Granby serving the Eastern Townships area.

Some solid summer salad recipes for you

A few ideas for salads. This is great for a summer luncheon!

Chicken Salad with Fruit
3 cups chicken, cooked and diced
1 cup celery diced
1 cup Mandarin orange sections (seedless white grapes may be substituted)
1 cup pineapple chunks
mayonnaise
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons orange juice
2 tablespoons vinegar

Combine chicken, celery, orange sections and pineapple chunks. Blend the oil, orange juice, vinegar and toss with the chicken mixture. Chill one hour. Drain and add enough mayonnaise to bind. Serve on lettuce leaves. Serves 4.

German Potato Salad
Just right for a buffet - marvelous with ham.
1 quart boiled potatoes, diced
1 onion, diced
1 egg
¼ cup cider vinegar
¼ cup water
1 tablespoon mustard
4 tablespoons sugar
6 slices bacon
1 teaspoon salt

Fry bacon until crisp. Remove from pan, reserving drippings. Combine the egg, sugar, mustard, salt and pepper and beat well. Add vinegar and water to the egg mixture adding extra vinegar to taste; combine this mixture with the bacon drippings. Cook until the sauce thickens; combine sauce, potatoes, onions and crumbled bacon.

Place mixture in a casserole and keep warm in the oven until serving time. Serves 4-6.

Choice Potato Salad
This has a lovely rich flavor - will serve 12 persons
8 medium new potatoes
1 can bouillon
1 medium red onion, finely chopped
12 cherry tomatoes
4 hard-boiled eggs, diced
chopped parsley
salt and pepper to taste
1 cup mayonnaise (homemade is best)
1 4-oz. can artichoke hearts, drained and sliced.

Boil potatoes in their jackets until tender. Drain. Peel and slice. Marinate the potatoes in the bouillon for 1 hour. Combine the chopped onion with the whole cherry tomatoes, sliced artichoke hearts, diced eggs, and a sprinkling of chopped parsley. Add salt and pepper to taste. Drain the potatoes from marinade and fold gently into the vegetable - egg mixture; blend in mayonnaise. Chill.

Kay's kitchen korner

Vegetable Medley
A snappy combination - serves 8-10. Must be refrigerated overnight.

½ cup brown sugar
½ cup cider vinegar
½ cup vegetable oil
salt and pepper to taste
1 lb. canned green beans, drained
1 lb. canned corn, drained
1 large onion, diced
2 cucumbers, peeled, seeded and sliced
2 tomatoes, peeled and chopped

Combine brown sugar, vinegar and oil. Add salt and pepper to taste. Add vegetables to the dressing and refrigerate in a covered container overnight. Will keep up to two weeks in the refrigerator. A useful recipe year round as ingredients usually on hand.

Easy Tomato Aspic
Serves 6-8
1 large can tomatoes (2 lb. 3 oz.)
6-oz. package strawberry gelatin
1 tablespoon horseradish
½ cup celery, finely chopped
½ cup green pepper, finely chopped

Place tomatoes (do not drain) in blender and blend 1 minute. Transfer to a large saucepan and boil 2 minutes. Add strawberry gelatin and stir until dissolved. Put the horseradish in a bowl; add the tomato mixture, celery and peppers. Mix well and pour into lightly oiled 2-quart mold. Refrigerate for several hours before unmolding.

Roya - Desnoyers wedding

A lovely spring wedding took place at St. Andre's parish church in Sutton, on Saturday, May 17 at 11 a.m. when Karen Lisa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Roya and Jean Edward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Amedee Desnoyers of Sutton area were united in marriage at a double ring ceremony. Father Francois Tanguay and Rev. Arlen Bonnar officiated with Mrs. Irene Gagne (sister of the groom) assisting. The choir provided lovely music throughout the service.

Karen, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white polyester voile and net dress with a high neck and long train, trimmed with pearl beads and embroidered roses, with a double ruffle around the train and bouffant skirt. The net voile veil was also trimmed with embroidered roses and the crown with pearl beads. Karen carried a round bouquet of roses, carnations, orchids, baby's breath and stephanotis with pink streamers and ivy trailers.

The bridesmaid Marjorie Poll of Cowansville was attired in a white organdy dress with double ruffle trim, a bouffant skirt trimmed with fabric roses and carried a bouquet of pink roses and streamers.

The groom and father of the bride wore a boutonniere of white roses, and the best man Allan Laflamme of Cowansville had a white carnation boutonniere, as did the ushers, Henry St. Amour of Sutton and Mark St. Pierre (cousin of the bride) of St. Albans, Vt. All attendants were in dark suits and white accessories.

After the wedding a reception was held at The Dairy Center, Enosburg, Vt. under the able supervision of Mrs. Lisa Gates, proprietor. About 150 guests enjoyed the hot buffet luncheon, served with punch and wine. Friends and relatives came from Ontario, Montreal, Burlington and St. Albans, Vt. as well as from local areas to offer their congratulations to the happy couple. Lisa Boulanger was in charge of the guest book. After the meal everyone enjoyed dancing to Raymond Parent's band.

The bride's travelling dress was rose and white with small ruffles in petal pattern on the skirt, and she carried a bouquet of roses. After a short honeymoon the couple will reside in Sutton.

Birthday wishes

Happy birthday greetings from family and friends to Janet and Jim Squires of Knowlton. Jim on June 14 and Janet on June 18.

Friends and family extend warm good wishes to Mrs. Irene Royea, Knowlton, on the occasion of her birthday on June 20. All wish her good health and much happiness in the year ahead.

Congratulations to Rufus Riddell of Vulcan, Alberta, on his 93rd birthday, June 18. Rufus is fairly well and enjoys reading the Sherbrooke Record. Greetings may be sent to Rufus Riddell, P.O. Box 750, Peter Dawson Lodge, Vulcan, Alta. T0L 2B0.

Hospital gets cheque

By Judy Creighton

The Canadian Press

Strawberry shortcake, strawberry pie, strawberry fool and strawberry jam — just the words are mouth watering. No wonder most of us can't get enough fresh, domestically grown strawberries during the short but sweet season, now beginning.

If you're planning to preserve or freeze the best of the crop, it's wise to set aside mid- to late June when strawberries will be at their highest volume, says Nick Luciano, a spokesman at F.G. Lister and Co., a fresh produce brokerage firm at the Ontario Food Terminal.

Ontario produces about 40 per cent of Canada's total strawberry crop, with the remainder grown in British Columbia, the second-biggest producer, Quebec and Manitoba. Shoppers in the Maritimes can enjoy the Ontario and Quebec bounty from June to mid-July, as will Alberta and Saskatchewan consumers who get some of their strawberries from British Columbia, where the season is only about a week earlier, Luciano says.

The quality of fresh strawberries on the market this season is excellent, he adds, although he couldn't predict how much a 500-millilitre or one-litre basket will cost at any one time during the peak season.

CAN BE FROZEN

All strawberries can be frozen but, if possible, choose varieties that are particularly suited for the process, such as Veester, Vibrant, Kent and Bounty, suggest food consultants at the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

The consultants suggest cooks select only fresh, good quality strawberries at peak maturity and prepare them for freezing as soon as possible to prevent deterioration in quality. Rinse with water, pat dry, hull and remove any damaged spots.

Strawberries can be frozen with or without sugar, sliced or whole. Unsweetened whole berries may be more convenient to use in recipes because they are individually frozen.

For this method place whole strawberries in single layers on shallow trays. Freeze. Package frozen berries in freezer containers, date and return to freezer. When needed, measure out necessary amount and return the rest to the freezer.

For eating fresh berries, choose bright red ones without white spots. Berries should be bruise-free with fresh green caps or hulls that are still attached.

Purchase berries last when shopping and make sure they are at the top of the grocery bag to prevent them from being crushed.

Here are three scrumptious ways to serve them:

—Strawberry croissant: For a quick dessert or special brunch, spread one-half of sliced croissant with softened cream cheese. Top with sweetened sliced strawberries, close and garnish with a dollop of whipped cream and more strawberries.

—Strawberry chicken salad pitas: Add sliced strawberries to chicken salad sandwich filling and spoon into halved pitas.

—Saucy strawberries: Just before serving, fold together equal amounts of whipped cream and softened vanilla ice cream. Flavor with a little brandy and spoon over strawberries.

Resting at the Armstrong Funeral Home, 1640 Cote Vertu (West of Decarie), St. Laurent, where a funeral service will take place in the chapel, Tuesday at 11 a.m., thence to Waterloo Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, donations to the charity of your choice would be appreciated.

WILKIE, Jennie — Peacefully at the Sherbrooke Hospital on Sunday, June 8, 1986. Jennie Millicent, in her 102nd year. Beloved wife of the late Avery Wilkie. Cherished mother of Blanche (Mrs. Clinton Stocks), Harley and his wife Theresa, the late Curtis and his wife Winnifred, and the late Howard and his wife Mildred. Also survived by five grandchildren, six great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren. Resting at the R.L. Bishop and Son Funeral Chapel, 300 Queen Blvd. N., Sherbrooke, where funeral service will be held on Wednesday, June 11 at 2 p.m., Rev. Blake Walker officiating. Interment in Malvern Cemetery. If friends so desire, contributions to the St. Paul's Rest Home, Bury, Que., or to the Word of Grace would gratefully be acknowledged. Visitation Tuesday 2-4 and 7-9.

She walked with God through all her years,
She walked with a smile through all her tears,
She walked with faith so strong and true,
She walked the path her Lord once knew.

Card of Thanks

PELLERIN — The family of the late Roger Pellerin would like to express their gratitude and appreciation to the many relatives, friends and neighbours for the kind gestures, calls and expressions of sympathy and support at the sad occasion of the passing of our beloved husband, father and grandfather. Our sincere thanks to all of you.

Obituary

HERBERT LUDOVICI
of Knowlton, Quebec
1900 — 1986

The entire community were shocked and saddened by the sudden death of Herbert Ludovici, which occurred March 26, 1986. Herb was born July 19, 1900 in Colombo, (then Ceylon) now Sri Lanka. He joined the Royal Navy in 1926 and rose to the rank of Lieutenant, R.N., having previously served during World War I, again re-joining the Royal Navy in 1926, serving again throughout World War II, until his demobilization in 1946. He then joined the C.P.R. as consulting engineer, and was largely responsible for the design and construction of the Cote St. Luc Railway Yards. He was also consulting engineer for the Salvation Army, and was again responsible for the installation of the entire heating and plumbing system of the Salvation Army Headquarters on Notre Dame Street, Montreal.

He was a 50 year member of the Masonic Order, and during his extensive world travels, was always proud to have attended Masonic Lodges in Sydney, Australia, Auckland, New Zealand, Colombo, Sri Lanka, London, England, Glasgow, Scotland, Norfolk, Virginia, Savannah, Georgia, New York City, New York, Ottawa, Ontario, Montreal, Quebec, Halifax, Nova Scotia and finally joined Brome Lake Lodge No. 35 in 1972. It was a sad irony of fate that he was due to be presented with his 50-year jewel in Brome Lake Lodge at their regular May meeting, something he had looked forward to for a long time; he died just a very few weeks previously.

He was a member of the Royal Canadian Legion Branch No. 7 in Montreal, and on taking up residence here he joined Brome Branch Royal Canadian Legion No. 23 in 1972.

A Memorial Service was held in the Creek United Church, West Bolton on Saturday afternoon May 17, the Rev. Peter Hartgerink officiating, burial taking place in DuBois Cemetery. The church was filled to overflowing with relatives and friends.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife Margaret Sims, a sister Miss Annie Ludovic of Sri Lanka, and a host of close friends.

ASTRO•GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

June 11, 1986

There is a strong possibility in the year ahead that you will make a major job or career change. You'll enter a different field that gives you greater chances for success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Even though you'll have good reasons for criticizing a co-worker today, it's best to keep your comments to yourself. Focus on his good points. Major changes are ahead for Gemini in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Subdue tendencies today to cater to your whims despite what your common sense tells you. Ignoring better judgment could prove expensive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Recent rules that you have laid down for your household may be violated today. Don't be too harsh when dealing with the culprit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't waste valuable time today concentrating on the "ifs" while ignoring the "yes, I cans." You can only make progress when you're determined to do so.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're not apt to come out too well in material dealings you have with friends today, but you will show a profit in situations with strangers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Put your trust in methods that have proven productive for you in the past and not on concepts that have yet to prove their merit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may have to work out a delicate matter today with a person you're not fond of. Don't let old feelings influence your judgment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A friend's information from a dubious source cannot be relied upon today. To be on the safe side, start digging out the facts for yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll lose points with a friend if you make a decision today that serves your interests but not his or hers. Avoid selfish plans.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Divorce yourself from a co-worker today who does not take the tasks at hand as seriously as you do. This person's poor attitude will dilute your productivity.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try not to involve yourself in a situation today where what you gamble is greater than what you hope to gain. Use your common sense.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The uncertainty that you'll feel prior to making an agreement today will vanish once negotiations get started. Concentrate on desired terms.

One more river to cross

By James Jacoby

In the play of today's hand, it was obvious that declarer had to throw a loser on a winner before going after the trump suit. Less obvious was the need to continue by throwing the other loser away, this time on a losing card. Declarer won the ace of diamonds, played ace of clubs, overtook the club jack in dummy and played the third high club, pitching a diamond. Next he played a spade, which East took with his ace. East knew from his partner's fourth-best lead of the two of diamonds that declarer had one more diamond, so he cashed the king. Only then did he play the 10 of clubs. South ruffed with the 10 of spades. West, who was in no rush to take his king, discarded a diamond and later scored the setting trick with the lowly spade eight, promoted to winning rank by careful defense.

South bemoaned his luck: "If trumps had split 3-2, I'd have made the contract." Although luck was lacking, so was skill. Declarer might make the contract if, before playing a trump, he played dummy's last club and ditched a diamond. To then beat the contract, West would have to unguard his heart king. East would play a heart and, upon winning the spade ace, would play a second heart, once again promoting that spade eight to a winner.

Wolf Cubs celebrate 70th anniversary

On Saturday, May 31, some 98 Cubs and leaders gathered to celebrate the 70th Anniversary of Cubbing in Canada at Camp Kinagaw which is located at Spooner Pond, Richmond, Que.

As this was an "Inter-District" Rally, Cubs from both the St. Francis Valley and Sherbrooke Districts were present. Towns or Cub Packs represented were Danville, 1st Drummondville, Richmond, Drummondville L.D.S., Lennoxville and North Hatley.

The day began with a slight delay due to a misleading road map. Compass instructions and directions should have been included, for as all good Cubs and leaders know, a compass is always true.

The Cubs were divided into six small groups comprised of boys from each of the different packs thereby enabling them to make many new friends. During the course of the day the groups participated in six different activities which included a nature trail; fire by friction; rocket launching; a scavenger hunt; a games area which included waterpistol fire extinguishing, three legged races, potato sack races etc.; and a special 70th anniversary gateway erection and decorating. Each of the boys helped with the lashing of the gateway and then designed and painted banners which were later attached to their gateway. This special project will be left up for the summer to welcome all groups camping at the Scout camp and to serve as a reminder of the exciting day the Cubs spent celebrating the birthday of their section of scouting.

Many people contributed to the success of this day including the boys themselves. All leaders present were kept busy with operating each of the project areas or leading the groups through the day's program.

Several people came in from out of town to help with this Rally. They included Fred Hicks, John Hewitt and Jim Sweeny (D.C. for Sherbrooke District), Chief Top Leaf-Burt McArdle, Roy Oilfield, Dave Michaud and a special guest, the Assistant Provincial Commissioner for Cubbing - Mrs. Brenda Bleakley.

The final activity of the day drew the eyes and breath of both the Cubs and leaders but also that of the many parents present for the finalies. Chief Top Leaf entertained the Cubs with true Indian dances complete with head dress and told many Indian legends which the boys will remember for years to come.

For parents of boys who attended the rally; if you sometimes have problems establishing a quiet time around home, ask your son about the Chief's "Talking Stick".

Every Cub leader should have one in their Pack.

The day came to a close with the presentation of Certificates of Appreciation to the special guests and 70th Anniversary badges to each leader and boy. Sincere thanks were expressed to each and everyone who had helped to make the day a success by the District Commissioner, Linda Frost. The closing "Grand Howl" expressed the enthusiasm of the Cubs, for it was as loud if not louder than the opening howl!

Once again, I wish to thank the Richmond and Danville leaders, the three scouts, all Service Scouters and special guests who did such a fantastic job. The boys will long remember this special day of bilingual comradeship and adventure.

Legion Ladies Auxiliary holds regular meeting

SHERBROOKE — On Monday May 19 the Ladies Auxiliary of Royal Canadian Legion Col. J.S. Bourque Br. 10 met in the Legion Hall at 8 p.m., and was opened by the President Reta Morin, 1st Vice, Claudette O'Malley read the roll call with 12 members responding.

The minutes of the last general and executive meeting were read by the Secretary Annette Dubois, both being approved. Correspondence was also read by the Secretary.

Violet McNab, Treasurer, gave the financial report and also a brief report on the March of Dimes. The President wishes happy birthday greetings to the girls with birthdays in May, who were Gwen Fuller and Bernice Walker.

A list of coming events was read out by the President — June 14, Legion Golf Tournament, followed by supper at Br. 10 and dance; June 21, Private party in the hall; June 22, Last general meeting of summer. This will be a supper meeting.

Members were reminded there is music in the Lounge every Sunday evening, also darts in the hall upstairs on Friday evenings. After reading out the coming events, a brief business discussion took place.

Members were reminded that workers would be needed for the tea on the 24th, also there will be lunch served after D-Day Parade. Members asked to bring in 1/2 loaf of sandwiches.

Being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

Next general meeting on June 22nd, and supper will be served to the ladies by members of the senior branch.

If your money isn't growing at the rate it could, you need a Gain Plan.

THE GAIN PLAN: Daily Interest Investment Savings Account.

Making the most of one's savings. That's rule #1 for the smart investor. And in a nutshell, that's the reason for The Gain Plan. Scotiabank makes it easy for you to invest... in a savings account... one that earns high interest. Every day.

As a rule, the interest rate on daily closing balances of $5,000 or more will equal or exceed the rate you'll find on our 30-day Term Deposits. In other words it's high. On balances of $10,000 or more... it's higher. $25,000 or more... higher still. So the more you invest, the more you gain.

And interest, at a rate determined by your daily closing balance, is paid monthly on the total amount on deposit in your account.†

The Gain Plan is simple and straightforward. You enjoy attractive interest rates without locking up your funds and without the inconvenience of periodically rolling over Term Deposits, GICs and Treasury Bills. Plus, you retain the flexibility of a savings account. Transactions can be made over the counter at your Scotiabank branch or at any Scotia Cashstop®/Trans-Action™ machine. Two cheques or withdrawals a month are complimentary.

And you can watch your investment grow with your Gain Plan Passbook or if you prefer, you can arrange to receive a monthly statement.

At Scotiabank, we believe it's in your best interest to make your savings work even harder. So, if you want your money to grow at the rate it could, invest in The Gain Plan. Your financial game plan should include it. And Scotiabank is where you'll find it.

Remember, you have everything to gain.

†Interest will not be payable on daily closing balances under $5,000.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Women hold regular meeting

MELBOURNE — The Presbyterian Women of St. Andrew's, Melbourne, met at the home of Frances Dewar, President, for the April gathering. She welcomed the members and a visitor, Marion Jameson.

Rose Oakley, leading the devotions, chose Psalm 16, a meditation. "The Victory over Death" followed by prayer. The offering was received and dedicated.

Roll call answered by nine members. The minutes read by the secretary Rose Oakley and approved. Correspondence was a thank-you note.

Reports were heard on the Wales Home birthday party and World Day of Prayer.

Treasurer Peggy Eastman gave her report which showed a favorable balance. It was moved all bills be paid and we decided to send in our allocation after the Easter Thankoffering service.

Vera Hughes reported on plans for the Easter Thankoffering Service. She has obtained a film from the National Film Board and Lisa Hughes has agreed to play the piano. Notices will be sent to the United Church and St. Paul's. Norma Converse and Agnes Morgan, telephone committee, will contact the Young Mothers group and other members of the church.

The spring rummage sale would be held on April 25 from 2-8 p.m. with set-up on April 23rd.

Thera De Vries and Rose Oakley to attend Synodical in Ottawa on April 16 and 17.

After several ideas had been brought forward, it was moved that we look into pricing and purchasing of an electric broom with the remaining money of a donation received.

Frances Dewar and Thera De Vries attended a meeting of the Young Mothers re: a new format for the Fall Tea and sale. The Young Mothers will take over the tea room.

A committee of Frances Dewar, Vera Hughes and Rose Oakley will meet in May to plan for the Fall tea and sale.

The Young Mothers have proposed setting up a nursery on Sunday mornings in the fall. Margaret Converse, Thera De Vries and Frances Dewar will check into the proposal.

It was decided against catering the lunch for a wedding in May.

A card was signed for our Glad Tidings convener, Muriel Stalker, a patient in hospital. Reports were given by Thera De Vries for Buying, Vera Hughes, Friendship and Service and Margaret Converse, Literature and Youth.

Names were discussed as to whom we would sponsor at Camp D'Action Biblique this summer. There will be a picnic at the camp on June 14.

Agnes Morgan will take the study in May.

It was decided to buy a rubber stamp, Presbyterian Women, St. Andrew's, Melbourne.

It was moved we cater to a wedding reception at midnight, July 19 at the Golf Club. Plans for a bridal shower will be made at the May meeting.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction and our hostess served cake and ice cream.

St. Monica's Guild holds regular meeting

LENNOXVILLE — St. Monica's Guild held their May meeting in the upper room at St. George's Church on May 12 with a good attendance. The business meeting opened with members repeating the Lord's Prayer. Carol Cryan, secretary, read the April minutes, which were approved as read. Kay Graham, treasurer, gave the financial report and a good amount was shown from our April Military Whist party. Letters were received and read by the secretary; a thank-you note from Bernice Hewitt for help given at their rummage sale. Also a letter from the CRSSS-05, inviting members to attend a meeting on Tuesday May 20 at 7:30 p.m., 2424 King St. W., Sherbrooke.

Money was donated to Barbara Hewitt, $1.00 from each member to go towards buying items for the fish pond at the Christmas Bazaar. A basket of fruit to be sent to a member who has been in hospital (Eunice Findlay) from the Guild; Ruth Reed was asked to look after this.

Ruby Berry displayed material for aprons. It was suggested that each member donate one or take material from Ruby and make one for the apron table at the Bazaar, this would be a great help to Ruby.

Ena Smith and Ruth Reed attended the first joint meeting of the guilds in planning the Parish Christmas Bazaar and supper. The June meeting will be a salad supper, each member helping with the refreshments, and will be held at the church hall at 6:30 p.m. on June 10.

Meeting was adjourned by Elizabeth Wray and refreshments served by the hostesses, May Beers, Ruby Berry, Shirley Hopkins and June Peterson. Tables were afterwards set up in the main hall for the Military Whist party held the following night. A good crowd attended.

Prizewinners: 1st for highest number of flags won at one table - Mildred Holliday, Sandra Parisseau, Thera Devries and Alice Johnson. 2nd, Margaret Durrell, Amy Brennan, Mary-Jane Beasley and Lorna Young. Consolation went to two tables with same number of flags. Laura Page, Sylvia Tyler, Edith Knapp and Kay Coates - Dorothy and John Learmonth, Alta Fowler and Elizabeth Wray. A number of door prizes were also given.

The Guild members extend their thanks to May Beers for arranging these two parties.

Ascot Women's Institute members hold regular meeting

On April 24 Ascot Women's Institute met at Eustis with 15 members and two guests present. Since this was designated as V-presidents' Day, Mrs. E. Marlin opened the meeting with the singing of O Canada, Salute to the Flag and the Collect. Roll call was answered by naming a Canadian Industry.

Minutes of the annual meeting were read by Mrs. C. Kingsley and Mrs. H. Little, Treasurer, reported a satisfactory balance.

Mrs. Marlin then called on her convenors: Agriculture — Mrs. Nugent read an amusing article called "Calves in the kitchen, pigs on the stove."

Canadian Industries — Mrs. Butler spoke of the opposition to the diversion of water to the U.S. and the branding of asbestos as a health hazard. Mrs. Butler also reported on taking part in the "Day for Farm Women" held at Bishop's and the subjects discussed in the various workshops.

Citizenship and Legislation — Mrs. Marlin mentioned Vancouver's 100th anniversary and the largest flag of 85 metres at Expo '86. She also mentioned the 16,000 signatures against the nuclear dumpsite in Vermont.

Home Economics and Health — Mrs. Rothney read an article on "Skin Banks" — Vancouver General Hospital has had one for four years and is successful in treating serious burns and the donated skin can be easily frozen and stored.

Education and Cultural Activities — Mrs. Sims noted that the MacDonald Ethnic Scrap Book has become a reality and that André Viger, from Sherbrooke, had won the Boston Wheel Chair Marathon. Mr. Claude Ryan, Education Minister, has lifted restrictions on students allowed to attend English schools, and that E.T. students are poor achievers.

International Affairs — Mrs. Pearson spoke on the U.S. attack on Libya, and the U.S. Senate's approval to start talks on Free Trade with Canada. She also told of the "Y" Fair put on by diplomats' wives and of attending a cultural evening when different ethnic groups performed and gave short histories of their countries.

Publicity — Mrs. Ingham read an article on the work being done by "The Pennies for Friendship" collection taken in at Institute meetings around the world. These pennies have provided pumps and water pipes and equipment for pollution control, also health care training. People should save their pennies and give them to the W.I. of the world. The only women's organization, united in cause, purpose and dedication for those at the bottom of the heap, throughout the world.

Mrs. Marlin carried on to new business. Mrs. Hoy will be in charge of quilt tickets — Some beautiful articles for Convention sales table were handed in. Mrs. L. Butler will be our delegate to convention and the Sherbrooke County display will be "Maple Products".

Arrangements were made for food for the County meeting and Mrs. Marlin will be Ascot delegate.

The next meeting on May 22 at Sand Hill Church Hall, and Hatley Centre W.I. will be the invited guests. A short program followed of short speeches on topics drawn from the hat.

The hostesses Mrs. Nugent and Mrs. Ingham served an enjoyable afternoon tea, bringing a pleasant meeting to a close.

Megantic County Women's Institute holds annual meeting

The annual meeting of the Megantic County W.I. was held at the Municipal Hall, Kinnear's Mills with six members present from Inverness and seven from Kinnear's Mills.

The President Mildred Robinson welcomed the members and opened the meeting by repeating the Salute to the flag, Creed and Opening Ode.

The Secretary Margaret Dempsey read the minutes and the Treasurer Helen Jamieson gave her report.

Correspondence was read by the Secretary, and included thank-you notes and a letter from the Provincial President.

Conveners reports: Canadian Industries read by Edna Campbell for Pauline Nutbrown; Citizenship and Legislation, Joy Nugent; Education and Cultural Activities, Ann Wright; Home Economics and Health, Alice Muir closed with a poem; Publicity, Audrey Allan. The President complimented the branches for the work done during the year.

Megantic County had been asked to present a "Charade" on Wednesday May 14 at the first day of Convention. A mini bus would be leaving Inverness on that day and members planned to attend.

The President reminded the members of the QWI picnic at Dunham, on July 26.

The President will be responsible for bringing the order of trivets from the College.

The School Fair will be held on Wed. June 25 at the IOOF Hall, Inverness. The prize list was reviewed and questions answered.

Joy Nugent, Citizenship and Legislation, read a letter from Mrs. Goodfellow. We learned Alberta is our twin.

Audrey Allan took the chair for the installation of officers. The chairperson of the nominating committee, Edna Campbell, read the slate for 86-88, Past President, Pauline Nutbrown; President, Mildred Robinson; 1st Vice-President and Treasurer, Helen Jamieson; 2nd Vice-President and Secretary, Margaret Dempsey.

Conveners: Agriculture, Edna Campbell; Canadian Industries, Pauline Nutbrown; Citizenship and Legislation, Joy Nugent; Education and Cultural Affairs, Janet Lowry; Home Ec. and Health, Alice Muir; International Affairs, Dorothy Bolduc; Publicity, Ann Wright; In charge of School Fair, Joy Nugent and Lois Patterson.

Pauline Nutbrown was asked to judge the handiwork. QWI Handicraft Competition - Men's knitted socks, Margaret Dempsey; J. and P. Coats Competition - Crocheted Collar and Cuff Set, Evelyn Lennon; Knitted Golf Club Caps, (set of 4) - Evelyn Lennon.

All agreed each branch donate money to the County Treasurer.

The draw box was won by Mildred Robinson.

All joined in a sing song, with the meeting coming to a close when a humorous poem "Preservation of Man" was read by Ann Wright.

An hour of fellowship with refreshments served by the Kinnear's Mills branch added to the enjoyment of the evening.

The oddsmakers were right — 1986 Canadian soccer team didn't score a goal

Tino Lettieri... Gave up two goals.

U.S.S.R. 2 Canada 0

By Grant Kerr

IRAPUATO, Mexico (CP)—The weary Canadian national soccer team left Irapuato Estadio with heads held high Monday despite failing to win a game or even score a goal in the World Cup soccer final.

Canada lost its third first-round match Tuesday, 2-0 to the Soviet Union.

"We have to look at it as a successful tournament, considering it was our first time in the World Cup," said forward Dale Mitchell of Vancouver.

"About the only thing I can be critical about is that we were too cautious. We showed too much respect to these teams.

"We didn't know what to expect, which is probably normal for someone who lacks international experience."

Mitchell was one of the better Canadians against the Soviets. He went the entire 90 minutes in hot, humid conditions.

DEPTH DECIDES IT

Canada played solidly for almost 60 minutes before the Soviets used two second-half substitutes to produce the victory.

Forward Oleg Blokhin scored on a superb pass from substitute Igor Belanov in the 59th minute against Canadian goalkeeper Tino Lettieri and substitute midfielder Alexandr Zavarov scored in the 75th minute.

The Soviets started nine players against Canada who had not played in the previous 1-1 tie against France.

"There's obviously method in their madness," said Canadian coach Tony Waiters. "Most of the teams from Europe and South America here can pick any 11 players from the roster of 22 and turn out an outstanding team."

Canada finished last in Group C with an 0-3 record. The Soviets and France tied for top spot with 2-0-1 records, with the Soviets awarded top spot on the basis of scoring more goals, 10 in three games.

The Soviets and France advanced to the second round of play. France defeated Hungary 3-0 Monday at Leon, leaving the Hungarians, 1-2, in a precarious position of waiting to see if they qualified for a wild-card berth.

Midfielder Paul James of Toronto said the World Cup final was a tremendous experience for all the Canadian players.

"To play against players like Michel Platini of France is something to remember," James said. "To feel that you can compete against them well is encouraging to us."

"I think we have done well, despite our record. Obviously we're a bit disappointed, but in the next four years we know we have to progress in the area of creating and scoring goals."

The only Canadian player who voiced negative comments was forward Branko Segota, who criticized Waiters for being used as a substitute in all three games.

Dale Mitchell... 'We showed too much respect'.

North and South Korea fighting over Olympics

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP)—A proposal involving diplomatic sleight-of-hand and a demand for open access to a normally secretive country was being polished Monday as Olympic officials prepared to deal with the question of where sports in the 1988 Games would be held.

Representatives of North Korean and South Korean Olympic committees gathered in Lausanne for the third meeting on the North's demand to share with the South the host duties of the Summer Games.

The sessions are scheduled today and Wednesday at the IOC's headquarters on Lake Geneva, and they are expected to be the most important yet in deciding whether the '88 Games will be hit by a political boycott.

Seoul, the South Korean capital, was awarded the Games in 1981, and the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee has said it will consider any "reasonable proposal" but never accept the co-host plan.

Sunday, in Paris, IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said events would be offered to the North, not by Seoul organizers but by the international committee.

"The truth is that South Korea will offer some events of the Seoul Games to the IOC, which will negotiate with North Korea," Samaranch said.

Sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, have said that such a plan might involve cycling, table tennis, archery and soccer.

By going through the IOC, the sources said, officials avoid the appearance of South Korea directly allowing events to be held in the Communist northern half of the divided peninsula.

"We will see clearly if there is a wish on their side (North Korea's) for a conclusion," Samaranch said.

In an interview last April, Samaranch said an agreement must be reached at these meetings or time would run out. If that happened, he said, North Korea would boycott the Games and perhaps take other Communist countries with it.

However, Samaranch is now hedging on that deadline.

While the meetings this week are of "capital importance," he said, the aim is to reach agreement in principle. A fourth meeting could be held later to work on details, and the full IOC would have to ratify it at its 91st General Assembly in October.

Meanwhile, Samaranch said, North Korea must be willing to open its borders "to all members of the Olympic family." That would come to about 25,000 people, including 10,000 journalists, he said in an interview on French television.

"What is important is the gesture of South Korea and the IOC in offering part of these Games to North Korea," he said.

NHL drug testing? Don't count on it yet

By Neil Stevens

TORONTO (CP)—The suggestion that mandatory drug tests become a way of life for National Hockey League players took a rough ride at a NHL Players Association meeting Monday.

Many player delegates emerged from the closed meeting to say they oppose drug testing, regardless of any accuracy safeguards experts might stipulate.

"If somebody wants to question my integrity, I would say, 'No,'" said Washington Capitals defenseman Rod Langway when asked if he favored tests for drug abuse. "I know I don't (do drugs)."

"We're afraid as it is. If we're at a party and drugs are around, we could be convicted. We're very scared of it. We have a great life and it only lasts a short time. Why ruin it? That's enough to keep you away (from drugs). I don't think we need drug testing."

During the NHL Stanley Cup final last month in Montreal, association executive director Alan Eagleson and NHL president John Ziegler held a news conference to announce they'd recommend the players and 21 team owners agree to a program of testing for drug abuse.

Eagleson said he was confident the association would approve some kind of program.

The issue arose in early May when the New York-based Sports Illustrated magazine carried a feature article saying some NHL players were abusing drugs.

TARS PLAYERS

Eagleson and Ziegler said in Montreal that they were making their recommendation because the allegation, not accompanied by any players' names, had tarred all NHL players.

Bobby Smith of Montreal Canadiens disagrees.

"I think the policy as it stands now is pretty darn tough — use drugs and you're out of the game," Smith said as he left the meeting room. "I don't feel (the magazine article) puts a shadow over all the players at all.

"We have a much tougher stance in hockey than other sports and I feel that's enough."

Eagleson says the issue is not dead, but will be discussed again. "We're talking about players' careers so we don't want to rush into something we don't know enough about," he said.

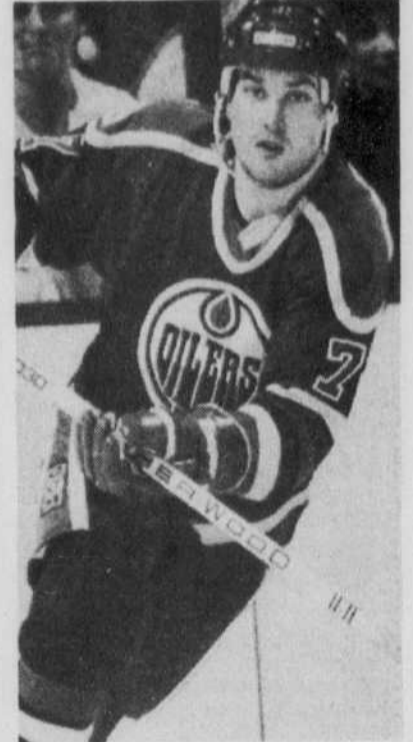

"Everybody is going to have a different opinion on it," association president Bryan Trottier of New York Islanders said of drug testing. "Until all the questions are answered, we don't have to make an issue of it."

The players have meetings scheduled next month and again in August as they work towards a new agreement with owners to replace the current pact which expires Sept. 15.

The major issue in bargaining talks is greater freedom of movement. As things stand now, a player is unable to gain free agency, without his previous employer requiring significant compensation, until age 33.

Such are the compensation provisions today that not a single free agent has skipped teams in the last four years.

Tonight, the NHL presents its major awards (CBC, 8 p.m. EDT) and introduces the 1985-86 all-star team as selected by the Professional Hockey Writers' Association.

Paul Coffey... First team all-star again.

Bombers down Eskimos

WINNIPEG (CP) — Norm an Gibbs threw for one touchdown and cornerback Roy Bennett returned an interception 35 yards for a second as Winnipeg Blue Bombers defeated Edmonton Eskimos 22-7 in a wet CFL exhibition game Monday.

An announced crowd of 21,526 suffered through pouring rain and an often badly played football game as the Bombers improved their exhibition record to two wins against no losses. It was Edmonton's first exhibition contest.

Gibbs, a third-year professional fighting for a backup position behind starters Tom Clements and John Hufnagel, threw an eight-yard touchdown pass to Jerry Davis in the second quarter.

The Bombers first touchdown came when Bennett stepped in front of Eskimo starter Matt Duni-gan's pass on the 35 yard line then scampered unmolsted into the Edmonton end zone.

Homer Jordan, obtained during the offseason in a trade with Saskatchewan Roughriders, played most of the second half and engineered Winnipeg's final touchdown. He took over the ball on the Edmonton 42 and marched the team down the field, then gave the ball to veteran James Sykes for a one-yard plunge.

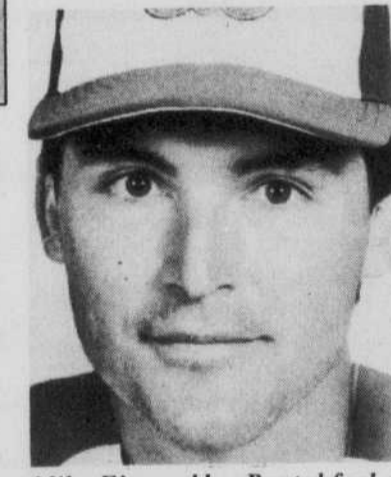

Trevor Kennerd converted all three touchdowns and added a 45-yard single.

Eskimo kicker Tom Dixon booted a 17-yard field goal, then added signals of 60, 39, 35 and 40 yards.

Winnipeg opened the exhibition season with a 35-10 defeat of Montreal Saturday in St. John, N.B.

Alan Eagleson remains confident.

Mike Fitzgerald... Bunted foul on his own impulse.

O'Sullivan's hand hurt in first pro loss

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian welterweight boxer Shawn O'Sullivan, who suffered his first loss as a professional Sunday, says he injured his hand during the first round of his bout against Simon Brown of Washington, D.C.

Brown improved his record to 23-1 by stopping O'Sullivan on a technical knockout at 2:37 of the third round of the scheduled 10-rounder. It was O'Sullivan's first loss in 12 professional bouts.

"I hurt my hand pretty badly, but I don't think it's fractured," O'Sullivan said Monday night. "It's an old problem but it didn't affect my training."

"The injury took my whole right hand away. If I hadn't hurt my hand it could possibly have been a different fight, but you really don't know about those things."

Peter Wylie, O'Sullivan's trainer, said the Toronto fighter had not wanted to disclose the injury after the fight Sunday.

"Shawn didn't mention anything about the hand in the press conference after the fight because he didn't want to use the injury as an excuse," Wylie said. "He suffered a swollen knuckle on his right hand, an injury he's had before."

"But the hand was completely healed for this fight. The injured hand may have influenced the outcome of the fight; I just don't know for sure. I do know Shawn was attacking in the first round and landing well. Then he started backing up, which was completely contrary to our game plan."
