Links Question Of Reparations With Her Debts

French Government Official Made It Plain that if France Has to Pay Her Inter-Allied Debts, so Germany Must Pay to the Limit—Pointed Out that Participation by Britain in Reply to Germany Would Have Implied that Question of Reparations Could Now Be Discussed by Germany Independently of Any Action by France and Belgium in the Ruhr.

(Associated Press Despatch)

PARIS, May 8.—The Franco-Belgian reply to the German note, one of the highest spokesmen for the French Government said last night, links the question of reparations with that of inter-allied debts.

France, out of the total of 130,000,000,000 gold marks fixed in 1921 by the Allies as Germany's indebtedness, demands her share of the scheduled payments of fifty billion gold marks, or twenty-six billion marks, to begin with as a minimum, and in addition such part of her share of the remaining eighty billion marks as will correspond to the sums asked of her in payment of the war debts to the United States and Great Britain. All this means that, if the United States or Great Britain, or a colony cancel debts owing them by France, the latter is ready to reduce to that extent her share of the eighty billion gold marks due from Germany, in addition to the fifty billion provided for in the scheduled payments, or in other words, she feels obligated to claim from Germany as much of the eighty billion marks balance as may be necessary to pay the Allies.

This authority did not say that France would not pay of Germany does not, but he made it plain that if France pays, so Germany must pay to the limit. He also emphasized the fact that France and Belgium cannot allow their special position in the Ruhr to be compromised by Allies whose interests are far less than their own.

He pointed out that participation by Great Britain in the reply to Germany would have implied that the question of reparations could now be discussed by Germany with all the Allies, independently of any action by France and Belgium in the Ruhr. This, it is said, would be a distinct encouragement of the resistance to that occupation and, in fact, would encourage Germany not to pay.

The Government spokesman confirmed the report that it was the intention of France and Belgium to intensify their pressure on Germany.

COUNSEL FOR PROSECUTION AT KRUPP COURT MARTIAL PROCEEDINGS MAKES DEMAND FOR PRISON SENTENCES

(Associated Press Despatch)

WERDEN, May 8.—Counsel for the prosecution at the Krupp Court martial proceedings, summing up his case this morning, demanded a prison sentence of fifteen years, in addition to a fine of one hundred million marks, for Baron Krupp von Bohlen, president of the works. The prosecution also asked that the sentence of ten years and a fine of one hundred million marks be imposed on each of the three directors present at the trial. For the two absent directors, counsel demanded a prison sentence of twenty years and the same fine. A severe penalty was recommended for Herr Mueller, the factory councilman. The prosecution contended that Mueller was the organizer of the attack on the French detachment.

Counsel based his demand for conviction on two principal points, first, the connection of the directors with the spread of propaganda against the French troops; second, the fact that they looked out of the factory windows upon the mob without taking any steps to stop the demonstration. The directors, counsel asserted, after taking a look at the excited workmen, went about their usual business instead of using their authority and influence to prevent a clash.

It is expected that the judgment of the court martial will be returned late this afternoon.

HE WOULD BE HELD ON HIS RETURN TO RUHR

(Associated Press Despatch)

WERDEN, May 8.—Baron Krupp von Bohlen, who is on trial before a French court martial in connection with the recent disturbances at the Krupp plant at Essen, admitted on the witness stand yesterday that he had been warned in Berlin immediately upon his return to the Ruhr he would be arrested as responsible for the workmen's attack on the French troops which resulted in the death of fourteen Germans.

"Knowing that I would be arrested," he said, "I came back to take my place on this bench. I could not desert my colleagues; I felt in duty bound to face the court martial."

The witness was cheered for this statement, but the demonstration in the court room was promptly checked by the military.

PAY TRIBUTE TO ITALY'S GREAT WAR HEROES

King and Queen Also Placed Wreaths on Tombs of King Victor Emmanuel 2nd and King Humbert.

(Associated Press Despatch)

ROME, May 8.—King George and Queen Mary this morning laid wreaths on the tombs of Italy's Unknown Soldier and of King Victor Emmanuel 2nd and King Humbert. Driving to the Pantheon, where the two former sovereigns are buried, the British rulers were received by the Minister of Public Instruction and by the veterans of the Italian war of Independence, who since the death of Victor Emmanuel 2nd, in 1878, have maintained a guard over the tomb. King George shook hands with the company and then, with Queen Mary, placed the wreaths beneath the British colors. From the Pantheon the Royal party drove to the monument of Victor Emmanuel 2nd, in Piazza Venezia. The sovereigns ascended the stair case and reverently laid a magnificent wreath on the burial place of the Unknown Soldier. Their Majesties were received by Italian veterans of the Great War.

Question Of Concerted Military Action Against Chinese Bandits Is Discussed

Situation Regarded as Seriously Affecting Continuance of Friendly Relations Between United States and China—Council of Ministers to Hold Meeting.

(Associated Press Despatch)

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The action of Chinese bandits of Shantung Province on Sunday in holding up an express train and capturing a number of foreigners, including nineteen from the United States, has created a situation regarded as seriously affecting the continuance of friendly relations between the United States and China. The situation is held by some officials as containing elements of still broader scope, possibly involving other governments in a similar entanglement with China.

Minister Schurman, at Peking, in an official report to Secretary Hughes, received yesterday, openly characterized the developments as "serious," and was immediately instructed by the State Department to press his inquiry, report the facts to Washington, and make strong representations to the Chinese Government.

The question of initiating a concerted military action against the bandits, in co-operation with the Peking Government, in the event the Chinese authorities proved impotent and no other effective way of attaining the early release of the prisoners, was discussed in official circles.

The council of ministers of the various governments represented in Peking is expected to meet today to discuss a course of action. Acting Secretary of War Davis, after a conference with Secretary Hughes, announced that the War Department was being informed of the situation and was ready to "back up" any plan approved by the Council of Ministers of the State Department.

ment. The United States has at present 35 officers and 888 men stationed at Tien Tsin under Brigadier General William D. Connor. The British have 31 officers and 944 men.

ROBBERS BECOMING VERY BOLD

(Associated Press Despatch) TORONTO, May 8.—Letters just received at the Presbyterian Foreign Mission offices in Toronto state that the unrest and general lawlessness prevalent in South China at the present time are making conditions deplorable and seriously hampering the activities of the mission stations.

Word received from the missionaries at Shek-Ki gives the information that the robbers are very bold. They are attacking and robbing the boats and the villages, carrying off men, women and children and frequently holding them captive until exorbitant ransoms have been paid. In the same city the only storekeepers able to do business were the coffin makers, idol makers and sellers of incense, the others hiding their goods away for fear of looting.

In the city of Liu-Hau the girls' school was temporarily closed because of the attacks on the town by the robbers. In some parts of the country the robbers were reported to be in full control.

Combines Bill Brought About Some Sharp Debating In House Of Commons—Bill Was Severely Criticized By Conservatives

Bill Was Given Second Reading and Discussed in Committee—Criticized by Conservatives, and a Number of Amendments Were Suggested by Two Liberal Speakers—The Premier and the Minister of Labor and Other Liberals Spoke in Its Defence.

(Associated Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, May 8.—Second reading of the Combines Bill brought some sharp debating in the House of Commons yesterday. "The legislation," explained Premier King, "does not seek in any way to restrict just combinations or agreement between business and industrial houses and firms, but it does seek to protect the public against the possible ill-effect of these combinations." It was directed against the combine that operated to the detriment of the public. Conservatives warmly criticized the bill. Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, opposition leader, described the bill as a measure not to get concrete results, but one for avoiding them.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, of Vancouver Centre, opposed it because it was "inquisitorial." It would "harass business without serving any useful purpose."

Hon. Dr. Manion thought Canada had too many laws. Laws were being enacted by Federal, Provincial and municipal authorities to the point that statute books were cluttered up with regulations of which the average person had no knowledge. Some criticism of the bill also came from Liberal ranks. H. Marler, of Montreal, doubted if the bill, as worded, would carry out the purpose intended. P. F. Casgrain, of Charlevoix-Montmorency, suggested a number of amendments. Unless amended, he thought, the bill would fail in its objects. W. E. Carroll, of Cape Breton, on the other hand, declared that "when capital combines to get the last cent from the consumer, it should be declared criminal."

The debate was adjourned shortly before midnight on the motion of Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor. A motion that Thursday of this week, Ascension Day, be a holiday, was carried.

TODAY IN PARLIAMENT

In the House of Commons today the debate on the Combines Bill will be resumed by the Minister of Labor, Hon. James Murdock. If time permits, the House will go into committee of supply on the estimates of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. The Senate will meet at three o'clock.

IN THE SENATE (Associated Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, May 8.—In the Senate last night, the Hon. Lorne Webster, Montreal, drew attention to the "disloyal statements" made at Socialist gatherings at Calgary and Sydney.

Senator Dandurand said he would bring these to the attention of his colleagues.

ALL RUSSIAN EXPORTS TO GREAT BRITAIN STOPPED

(Associated Press Despatch) MOSCOW, May 8.—According to reports from Petrograd, all exports to Great Britain have been stopped. Apparently this step has been taken by the Government because of the British note, reported to be on its way, which might result in breaking off relations.

COUNCIL MEETING ENLIVENED BY DISCUSSIONS; MANY MATTERS UP FOR CONSIDERATION LAST NIGHT

Aldermen Fortier and Bourque Insist that East Ward Is Not Getting Its Proper Share of the Paving Allotment—Majority Vote in Favor of Daylight Saving—Council to Present a By-Law for Monument to Sherbrooke's Soldiers—Mr. J. Masse Succeeds Mr. Weston Parry as Dairy Inspector—Merely a Question of Economy—Trees to Be Planted on Streets.

THE City of Sherbrooke will officially adopt "daylight saving" for the period beginning May 13th and ending September 2nd, in accordance with a motion passed by a majority vote of 7 to 2 in the Council Chambers last night.

The motion was introduced by Ald. A. Trudeau at the close of a lengthy session, and was seconded by Ald. F. Houllahan. Ald. Fortier voted against the motion on principle, while Ald. Langis wanted the council to await the action of the Montreal Council and be guided by their action. This suggestion being turned down, he accordingly voted against the motion to make the measure effective May 13th.

while Ald. Langis wanted the council were united in opposing the change of hour, they made amends for this pacific demonstration by an interesting verbal battle relative to the rights of the East Ward in securing a fair share of the paving programme.

Ald. Langis presented the decisions reached at a special meeting earlier in the afternoon and included $21,000 for the paving of the East Ward section. Aids. Fortier and Bourque refused to accept this and held that the members of the ward involved should have been given an opportunity of discussing the matter with the roads committee. The East Ward representatives asked that Council street be paved first in preference to Bowen Street as outlined in the committee's report. The matter was finally held in abeyance in order to allow the East Ward representatives to study the situation in detail.

Ball Club Asks For Grant.

Soldiers' Monument.

Motion of a by-law not to exceed $25,000 was introduced for the purpose of raising funds for the Sherbrooke Soldiers' Monument. At a meeting of the committee, held earlier in the afternoon, it was considered more equitable to distribute the cost uniformly among the ratepayers, and at the same time eliminate a large amount of work.

There was a complete attendance of the aldermen at last night's session, and following the reading of the minutes, the letters and petitions were up for consideration. Among the letters the following were considered:

Complaints Are Considered.

Messrs. Echenberg Brothers complained of the bad state of the sidewalk opposite their store on Wellington Street, and the matter was referred to the road department for attention.

The Department of Municipal Affairs at Quebec wrote to the city asking for an explanation of what they termed a private sale of debentures made without the necessary authorization and contrary to law. The matter was passed on the finance committee.

The Union of the Municipalities of the Province of Quebec, which held its annual convention in Sherbrooke last year, will go to Anticosti this summer, and an invitation to the city's representatives was duly received. The expense of $75 was considered prohibitive.

An invitation to the Mayor and Aldermen to visit the Sacred Heart Hospital was received from the Mother Superior, and was duly accepted. Arrangements will be made to visit the No. 5 West Ward Fire Station at the same time.

Letter From School Board.

A letter was received from Messrs. Fraser, Rugg and Mignault on behalf of the Protestant School Board Commissioners exploring the fact that the amount receivable from taxation had not been paid, and threatening legal action to secure same.

Ald. Langis:—"Let them go ahead and sue, they will not get it any sooner."

Ald. Skinner:—"Let them sue, they won't, don't you worry."

Mayor Morris:—"The situation is there and we must face it."

The secretary advised that an amount had since been paid and the matter was considered as filed. A complaint from Mr. H. Masson relative to his inability to secure a license from the police department was referred to the police committee.

A list of the creditors and secured debts of the L. R. Steel Company was obtained from the receiver and duly filed. A request was received from the Association de la Jeunesse Catholique asking for the use of the auditorium for their sessions on June 30th and July 1st. This was referred to the City Hall Committee.

E. Le Danois, French representative on the International Deep Sea Fisheries Commission, in session at Toronto.

que asking for the use of the auditorium for their sessions on June 30th and July 1st. This was referred to the City Hall Committee.

The E. T. Construction Company asked for permission to erect a building on Margot Street, on city property, to use same as a garage for the benefit of the residents of that street.

Ball Club Asks For Grant.

A petition was received from the Sherbrooke Baseball Club asking for a grant of $500 to help cover last year's deficit of $2,000. Mr. E. J. Page briefly addressed the meeting and observed that the city had received something like $2,000 in amusement tax last season and suggested that the return of $500 of this amount to meet the deficit would be only reasonable in view of the extenuating circumstances. Mr. Leoni Lacombe expressed himself in the same manner, and the request was turned over to the Finance Committee.

Ald. Crepeau:—"The games are played at the Exhibition Grounds. The city gives the exhibition a grant of $8,000 a year, yet they charge the Baseball Club about $1,000 per annum. I would suggest that we give the Exhibition people $7,500 and the Baseball Club $500."

Ald. Langis:—"That is a small way of financing."

Aids. Teteault and Crepeau held a brief discussion relative to funds. The former insisted that the matter was one to be discussed by the committee, while the latter persisted in asking whether there was any money actually available.

Mayor Morris:—"Personally speaking, I feel the Council should do something for the younger people. It is a healthy sport, and I am sure the members will give it their careful consideration."

Ald. Langis:—"Ald. Crepeau says we have no money. We would not like to have this spread around. We have a certain amount of money in different funds, advertising, etc."

Mayor Morris:—"Metaphorically speaking we have no funds. A city is always hard up."

Ald. Crepeau:—"As soon as I want $5 for the city hall committee I am told there is no money."

Finance Committee Report.

Following a report of the by-laws which were recently voted upon, the finance committee, through its chairman, Ald. J. S. Tetreault, presented the following report:

Validators:—"The president and Ald. Skinner are requested to inter- (Continued on page 5.)

He passed away on Monday from pneumonia, following flu, after an illness of thirteen days. He was only twenty-one years old.

Cocoon Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulisified cocoon oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulisified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulisified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulisified in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure you get Mulisified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

Piles

are usually due to straining when constipated.

Nujol being a lubricant keeps the food waste soft and therefore prevents straining. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it not only soothes the suffering of piles but relieves the irritation, brings comfort and helps to remove them.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

I surely do appreciate the good they have done for me."

PRESENTATION TO MR. CONNELLY AT RICHMOND

Was Guest of Honor at Banquet—Donation Sent to Mansenville—Other General News.

RICHMOND, QUE., May 8.—On Tuesday evening, May 1st, Superintendent C. J. Connelly, of the Grand Trunk, was the recipient of a splendid testimonial and banquet on the occasion of his departure to take up work in another district. Upwards of one hundred and fifty friends, chiefs of departments and employees, gathered at the Brunswick Hotel here, where "Mine Host Ben Cadieux," served a sumptuous banquet. The proceedings were enlivened by a musical programme rendered by a special orchestra interspersed with recitations and the usual community songs.

In the name of over five hundred officers and employees, Trainmaster H. M. Gain made the formal presentation to the guest of the evening of a magnificent cabinet of sterling silver. There was loud cheering as Messrs. Breau and Walker carried the cabinet to the table, where it was duly presented to Mr. Connelly. Mr. Gain said in part: "The redistribution of territory necessitated by the creation of the new C. N. Railway System, causes the removal to another district of one who has long been identified with railway operations in this section. A career of over twenty years in our midst cannot be detailed in the short time I have at my disposal; much less could I summarize the wonderful development which has taken place on the Canadian Railway world in that time, the latest phase of which is the creation of the Canadian National Railway System, suffice it to say that our honored guest tonight has been identified for years with our progress. He is being well cared for by Mrs. Clark, who has had considerable experience in that line.

Mrs. P. McDonough, of Sherbrooke, was in town one day recently.

Church activities for the week are: St. Anne's, Monday, 3 p.m. a meeting of Women's Auxiliary at 7.30 p.m., a meeting of the Kinship Daughters, Thursday, Ascension Day, Holy Communion at 10 a.m., Friday 8 p.m. Choir practice, Methodist: Wednesday, 8 p.m., Young People of the Church will present "Mrs. Briggs of the Poultry Yard."

The presentation is under the personal direction of Mrs. Merritt. Music by an orchestra. Chalmers' Church: Monday, 7 p.m., Teachers' meeting in Manse, Wednesday, 7 p.m., C. G. R. meeting, Friday, 7 p.m., C. G. R. Ringers, 8 p.m., a stereopticon lecture will be given in the Church, "Across Canada." The slides are all prized and very beautiful. Wednesday afternoon at 3 p.m., the W.M.S. will meet at St. Andrew's Church, Upper Melbourne.

Mr. Ernest Gill, who has been for some years in the employ of Paul R. Krass, plumber and tinsmith in Melbourne, has bought out Mr. Krass's business, and will continue to carry it on in the old stand at the corner of Main and Bridge streets, Melbourne.

A very important change in the management of the Grand Trunk seems to be evidenced by the transfer to Richmond from Portland, Maine, of Superintendent McNaughton and staff. This brings to town a number of desirable men and families who are gradually getting settled as well as they can under the circumstances. Houses are scarce and several of the married men of the staff are taking rooms in private houses and meals at hotels and restaurants until they can secure better quarters to which to move their families. Considerable alterations are being made in the Grand Trunk Station and office building with a view to providing accommodation for the extra staff which will operate from here in future.

The Richmond and Melbourne Branch of the Red Cross convened in the office of P. C. Duboyce, N.P., president of the local organization on Thursday afternoon in special session with a representative number of members in attendance. The sum of $100 was voted towards the alleviation of the distressing conditions that have arisen in Mansenville. The motion to do so was made by Miss A. M. Innon, secretary until the great Canadian National Railway System. I go to another district accompanied by your good wishes and a hearty appreciation of our past happy relations. For my part, I shall always have a warm place in my heart for the men of the second and third districts, and in my new office, the latch-string will be always out, and the light in the window will be always burning for the friends I am leaving here."

Mayor John Hayes replying to the toast of the Town of Richmond, made happy allusions to his own experience and that of the men with Mr. Connelly, as a railway official, who seemed to always have at heart the best interests of the men, as well as those of the Company. The relations between the municipal authorities and those of the Grand Trunk were always most cordial, thanks to the spirit of mutual understanding and mutual interest. Dr. Hayes said: "We feel that while the Grand Trunk Railway might possibly be able to get along without Richmond, though we doubt it, it is certain that Richmond could not get along without the Grand Trunk. Mr. Connelly brings to his new sphere of labor a ripe experience of many years, a capacity for work second to none, and a determination to achieve success which is inspiring, and these are the elements which in both officers and men will bring about the best results."

Mr. A. A. Paradis, of Victoriaville, addressed the assembly in French, placing stress on Mr. Connelly's considerate treatment of the shippers and industrial organizations, and of his fellow French-Canadian citizens.

Interpersed with the speeches were several sketchy recitations by Entertainer Rice, of Montreal, whose rollicking songs and stories created much amusement and enthusiasm, notably the story of a baseball game St. Cesaire vs. St. Polycarpe.

Short speeches were made by noon, May 9th. Delegates arriving in time for dinner are invited to call or telephone or write to Mr. L. S. Roy's office in Pope's Hotel so that they may be entertained at the expense of the different members. Dinner will be served at 12 o'clock standard time. Miss Roach, of Macdonald College, will be in attendance and address the gathering on topics of interest. Refreshments will be served to delegates and members only of this organization in the afternoon. The public is cordially invited to attend these sessions.

Sportsmen Organize to Block Forest Fires

"Kill the Forest and You Kill All" is the warning being sent to sportsmen in many parts of Canada this month by the Canadian Forestry Association, of Ottawa, a voluntary society of 13,000 forest engineers, sportsmen, editors, farmers, lumbermen, pulp and paper executives, clergymen and other classes.

Last year Canada experienced 5,000 forest fires, nearly all caused by persons who receive the maximum benefits from the use of the forest. So severe has been the national loss from careless humans that Quebec has closed her forest areas to all travellers throughout the entire outing season unless they first obtain a permit from a public official such as a fire ranger.

The experienced sportsman has long since learned that a camp fire, or cooking fire, is never safe in a forest unless placed on rocks or gravel and built as small as possible. He also knows that to extinguish the fire completely requires two or three pans or pails of water and a shovel or two of earth, and that no fire should be abandoned while there is the sign of smoke or fire.

The driving out of game birds and animals and the wholesale destruction of the haunts of game fish has proceeded at such a rate that all the sportsmen's organizations from coast to coast are making special provision this year to enlist every outdoorsman in a fire preventive campaign.

The lighted cigarette requires particular attention for it carries fire a long time after being thrown away and has destroyed many hundreds of miles of forest that cannot be replaced for a century or more. Some Canadian forest owners prohibit the use of cigarettes by their woodsmen. Cigars, not so commonly used, are equally a forest foe when strict precautions are not taken.

THE FALLING FORESTS

The logger's axe accounts for just one-tenth of the logs that fall in our Canadian forests each year. Nine-tenths of the slaughter of forests is due to the Fire Fiend.

And eight out of every ten forest fires are set by human hands. The common cause are unextinguished camp fires, lighted tobacco and matches, prospector's fires and those due to land clearing.

So potent are these apparently trifling sources of conflagration that many experienced fire rangers and forest engineers and woodsmen never smoke while on the trail and reserve their "pipe" for after luncheon or supper.

Speaking to the sportsmen of Canada, James Oliver Curwood, said: "We are and have been a breed of destroyers and monumental egoists. In the blindness of self-conceit we have reaped but we have not sown. In the United States and Canada we are feeling the effects of an appalling devastation. The story of our outraged forests and wild life is a tragedy of desecration, of money lust, of personal selfishness and stupidity."

And so the sportsmen of Canada are banding to lift the onus of vandalism from the head of the user of the forests.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS New Limited Trains Between Montreal and Toronto.

The Canadian National announces two new limited night trains will operate between Montreal and Toronto commencing Sunday, May 13th.

Already the Canadian National trains between Toronto and Montreal are taxed to capacity and the introduction of the new ones will eliminate any congestion which naturally would result from the opening of navigation on the St. Lawrence route.

Apart from providing additional accommodation for passengers, the new night limited train to Toronto will prove to be a boon to travellers who must regulate their arrival in the two cities according to the daylight saving clock.

One train will leave Montreal at 9.30 o'clock, Standard time, or 10.30 o'clock daylight saving time and will arrive in Toronto at 6.20 a.m. Standard time, 7.20 o'clock daylight saving time. The train from Toronto will leave for Montreal at 9.45 p.m. Standard time, or one hour later on daylight saving time, and will arrive in Montreal at 6.45 in the morning, Standard time (7.45 a.m. daylight saving time). This service will provide an additional fast train over the well known double track route between the two important Canadian cities.

The Canadian National Railways will have six trains operating nightly between the two cities. Two other trains leave Montreal at 7.30 and 11 o'clock in the evening daily, arriving at Toronto respectively at 6 and 7.30 o'clock. Standard time, in the morning; while leaving from Toronto are two more trains, one at 8.30 and the other at 11.00 o'clock at night reaching Montreal the next morning at 7 o'clock and 7.30 Standard time. The equipment of all six trains is of the most modern type and the locomotives hauling these trains the largest in Canada.

Uncle Jim's Letter

Dear Corner Family:—The corner looks as if the mailman or the corner family had forgotten Uncle Jim, but it is because I am away out in the country and the mail is a little slow in reaching me. It will be all right after a few days when we get everything settled. I know the boys and girls are working hard now, so they will not feel afraid of the examinations when they come along. I hope the corner folk will hold their own in the different examinations, and that they will receive nice prizes. I have some books now that I won when going to school many years ago and I treasure them very much. I have a little story about Mr. Hop-Toad which I will tell you tomorrow, and will try to find interesting things to write about. I will surely tell you about the little garden I am going to make, and hope to hear that many of the cousins are working again this summer for the School Fairs. It is a fine way to become a good farmer, of which there must be many if Canada is to become the greatest agricultural country in the world. Will write again tomorrow. Good-night, UNCLE JIM.

I will be glad to be able to go out and pick flowers. I have seen a robin, a blackbird and a bluebird; robins are my favorite birds, but I like them all. I enjoyed the little piece about the bird in last night's corner. We received word last evening that one of our first cousins died in the Sherbrooke Hospital. His name was Elmer Harrison. Beauty Smiles and all the world seems bright. As Shakespeare says, "Beauty! 'Tis the sun that maketh all things shine". And of all the attributes to beauty, a fresh, radiant skin exerts the greatest charm. The first essential of a beautiful complexion is a soap that really cleans and at the same time preserves the smooth, satin texture of the skin. PEERLESS ERASMIC SOAP is a beauty delight. It keeps the skin like a garden of roses and imparts its own entrancing perfume to add the final touch of fascination to a flawless complexion. LATEST GERMAN OFFER.

France and Belgium lost little time in branding the latest German reparations proposals as "useless," while the British and Italian Governments have signified their intentions of expressing their disapproval of Germany's new offer.

Discussing the Berlin proposal, the Boston Transcript says: "Berlin proposes that the sum total of her obligations in cash and kind under the Versailles Treaty be set at thirty billion gold marks, a sum which is less by a good deal than M. Poincare and his Government have been demanding, but which is nevertheless a greater sum than most German statesmen would have dared to offer."

"The note renews Berlin's previous offer of a ninety-nine year non-aggression compact. Some such compact—provided they could believe that it would be carried out in letter and in spirit—should be welcomed by the French people, who still live under the shadow of 1914 and 1870, and who still remember many other invasions from across the Rhine."

"The proposals as a whole mark a distinct step forward. They should at least constitute a basis for discussion between Germany and her principal creditors."

HOUSEWIVES BOYCOTT SUGAR.

The boycott organized by housewives in various districts, both in Canada and the United States, against sugar to protect themselves from speculators who have recently forced the price skyward has apparently proved very successful.

Mayor Hyman, of New York, in a proclamation endorsing the boycott, says: "Every cent sugar drops means $100,000,000 to the people of the country."

"Evidence before the Senate Finance Committee when the present tariff law was under discussion showed that the investment of American sugar producers in Cuba amounted to over a billion dollars. There is also a very large amount of Canadian capital invested in Cuban sugar."

***** PRESS COMMENT *****

TIGHTENS UP PROHIBITION MACHINERY (Christian Science Monitor.)

The decision, while conceding a privilege to American ships which it was not believed the court could see its way to grant under the law, in fact tightens up the whole prohibition machinery and makes the practical code more nearly possible. It is axiomatic that if liquor cargoes can be kept, absolutely, at a distance of three miles from shore, a present source of contraband supplies will be destroyed. There is now, in the light of the court's decision, no reason why the full power of the Government, so far as is necessary, should not be devoted to the support of law-enforcing agencies.

HOME WORK ABOLISHED. (Windsor Border Cities Star.)

The Windsor Board of Education has taken a forward step in the abolition of home work for the children. That home work, which means that children who spend all day in school must spend their evenings in arduous study, is an evil, has long been admitted. But it was deemed a necessary evil. Abolition of home work should also be a spur to the efficiency of our teachers. A teacher who gets behind in her schedule, when examination time approaches, is apt to give out a good deal of home work. Unable to do this, teachers will be apt to do better and more efficient work in the class rooms.

WAR COSTS OF FRANCE AND GERMANY. (Boston Transcript.)

Though her total loss in lives is somewhat larger than that of France, Germany has not suffered as much proportionately to her population as her chief antagonist. With a population in 1914 of upwards of 65,000,000, and with annual surplus population of many hundreds of thousands, she was in a better position to stand a loss of one million, eight hundred thousand than France, with a population less than forty millions, and a birth rate virtually stationary, could spare the loss of 1,385,300 able-bodied males. Though one of the victors in that struggle, France has had to pay more generously than any other of the principal Powers in that most valuable carnage of all, the lives of her citizens.

THE FOREIGN BORN CITIZENS. (Ottawa Journal.)

The man from foreign parts who becomes a citizen here ought to be welcomed if he attends political meetings and takes an interest in public affairs. If he neglects to do so we might very well busy ourselves in reminding him that it is his privilege to do so, and if, when he attempts to make a speech he uses imperfect English, he at least shows that he is trying to master the language of the country and has made a progress that deserves to be commended. Not long ago a number of foreigners on their way back to Europe complained at the Canadian port from which they were sailing, that they had lived eleven years in the west and that no interest had been taken in them and no efforts made to accept them as Canadian people.

CRITICIZE THE 'CALL TO BAR' OF MR. BECK

Claim Mr. Beck Has Never Passed Examination for Admission to British Bar.

(Associated Press Despatch) LONDON, May 8.—Considerable agitation has been aroused around the Inns of court by the benchers of Gray's Inn, "calling to the bar" James M. Beck, former solicitor general of the United States. Mr. Beck is an honorary member of Gray's Inn. Under British legal organization lawyers are divided into two branches, barristers and solicitors, and only the former are allowed to appear in courts and argue cases. Numerous lawyers are writing to the newspapers complaining that Mr. Beck is to argue a Canadian case before the judicial committee of the Privy Council, although he has never passed the examination for admission to the British bar, never eaten dinner in one of the Inns' courts, which is considered a sacred part of the tuition of legal aspirants, and particularly because he is a solicitor as well as a barrister.

Some writers declare this is favoritism against the colonies because lawyers of those Australian states which do not classify lawyers are not permitted to argue cases in British courts, as only barristers untainted by solicitors work have that right. Another grievance is permitting a foreigner, who technically is unqualified for the work, "to take the bread out of the mouths of Englishmen," as without this special privilege given Mr. Beck some eminent British lawyer would reap the good fees presumably attached to this particular case.

LABOR LEADERS ISSUE REPLY TO MR. CHURCHILL

Indignant Denials Regarding Unfitness of Labor to Govern Country.

(Associated Press Despatch) LONDON, May 8.—Winston Churchill's warning in a speech last week against the menace of socialism resulted in Labor leaders devoting the week-end to speeches making indignant denials of the unfitness of labor to govern the country.

J. H. Thomas, M.P., speaking at Deberry, declared that the Empire would not be less secure under a labor government than under government by either of the old parties. Labor wanted a revolution of thought rather than a bloody upheaval.

J. R. Clynes, M.P., at Rochdale, said that any danger to the country would not come from Labor, but from the Tory reactionaries who refused to deal with problems that pressed hard on the working classes.

The leader of the Labor party, Ramsay MacDonald, speaking at Neath and also at Port Talbot, declared that the Labor party was making good. If Labor, he said, govern as badly as other people did, it would not be fit to govern, but if Labor was not fit to govern he did not know who was.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL RANEY HANDS IN RESIGNATION

Drury Government Has Not Yet Determined What Action It Will Take.

(Associated Press Despatch) TORONTO, May 8.—The action that the Government is to take upon Hon. Mr. Raney's resignation from the post of attorney-general has not yet been determined. When spoken to on Sunday night at his home at Crown Hill, Hon. Mr. Drury stated that the matter was so far a purely private matter between the attorney-general and himself, and that he had not yet decided upon the course he was to follow.

"Mr. Raney," Hon. Mr. Drury said, "placed a letter in my hands stating his desire to retire from public life and offering to give me his resignation either now or to stay until after the election. I have not yet decided what course I shall take."

"Lou - Lou"

A Brilliant and Dramatic Novel of the South Sea (BY H. BEDFORD-JONES)

As he passed from dark shop to dark shop, he heard his name called—in a woman's voice.

Startled, he turned around. He had passed beyond the bazaars. The nearest house was one that had been recently whitewashed, and looked unusually clean and sweet.

"Mr. Fortesque!" repeated the voice in languid accents. "Come inside, for I wish to speak with you."

Fortesque could see no one. The voice had come from this house, however. Mechanically, he entered.

Astonishment was upon him at hearing a voice, a voice of his own kind, in this place; he did not pause to reflect, nor would reflection have done him much good. Behind him, out in the street, a gaping palm-wine vendor saw him enter that house, and in five minutes all Sibuko knew that Tuan Fortesque was in that house of Cerise.

"I am so glad to meet you, Mr. Fortesque!" she said. "I have not had the opportunity of presenting myself at the palace, so far, but hope to do so soon. I am Cerise Delajoie."

Fortesque shook hands.

"I did not know there was anyone else here—" he began, and she laughed.

"I had heard of you, monsieur. I saw you passing and committed an indiscretion, I had a purpose in wishing to see you."

Fortesque was not a fool by any means, but in this instance he had every excuse for being a fool. He had never heard of Cerise, and she had never better men than he.

"The Sultana apparently does not yet know that I am here," she said. "You see, I came only recently."

In this, Cerise was very much mistaken. Lou-Lou knew all about her, and in some detail.

Cerise went on to inform him that she was here on philanthropic errands.

"I am interested in the Orphanage at Saigon," she said. "If I can persuade the Sultana to help me in the work, it is very possible that much may be effected here."

"You'll not need my help," Fortesque declared. "You'll find Lou-Lou only too glad to do anything possible that will help her people. I am sure that she'll be delighted to learn that you are here."

A sardonic gleam flickered in her eye, and was gone.

"I hope so, monsieur. But you must allow me to offer you a little refreshment."

"Nothing, thank you," protested Fortesque.

"Ah, but this is something that I made with my own hands! It is a pistachio sherbet, which I invented myself; and it is a great pleasure—" A native woman brought in two silver goblets filled with a greenish sherbet.

"You must try my sherbet—" began Cerise, then there came a sudden interruption.

A shrill cry from the servant was echoed by a crash at the door of the house.

The startled Fortesque looked up, incredulous, to see Lou-Lou standing at the threshold of the room and gazing upon the scene intently before her.

Fortesque had never imagined that any woman could look so furious as did Lou-Lou in this amazing moment; yet this fury but intensified her beauty a thousandfold.

Her lapis eyes were dilated and black with anger, the gold flakes lending to them an iridescent sparkle.

A flush suffused her delicately carved features, lending them a passionate strength; her clenched hands were trembling, her bosom was rising and falling sharply beneath the gold-spangled silken robe.

Behind her, now, appeared palace guards, with bared weapons.

"What are you doing in this house, talking with this poupee du diable?" she broke out.

"Why—this lady was asking me to use my influence with you to assist her—"

"Ah!" said Lou-Lou, and the word stung like a whip. "Ah! I heard that you had entered this house; and I did not believe it. But now—what a touching scene I broke in upon!" Her eyes went suddenly to Cerise.

"You wanton!" she said softly. "You—"

One must regretfully admit that the Sultana Lou-Lou did not use the polite euphemisms of society.

Still Cerise said nothing at all. Her eyes, pathetically large and helpless, were fascinated by those of Lou-Lou.

"Look here!" exclaimed Fortesque, shocked by the impolite terms. "You're away off the track, Lou-Lou! Mademoiselle Delajoie is engaged in charitable work for an orphanage in Saigon, and wants to start one here—"

He paused, a little aghast. Despite her fury, Lou-Lou bit her lip. The brown men behind her, most of whom understood English, went into a broad grin at the words.

"Mr. Fortesque, please go back to the palace!" said Lou-Lou.

"Eh? What do you mean to do?" The lapis eyes met his very calmly. "I? Nothing. I shall remain and speak with Miss Cerise for a moment, that is all." The Sultana picked out one of her guards who spoke English very well. "Go with Tuan Fortesque, and tell him all about this woman—how Rais Hamed brought her here, and so forth. Are you going, sir?"

Fortesque frowned at her, hesitating.

"If you are not, she continued icily. "I shall order my men to take you."

This was a new Lou-Lou, and one not to be defied lightly. In her face he found no kindness, nothing but a very chilly resolution.

Fortesque bowed and departed, and the brown guard fell in at his elbow. The door closed behind them.

"So you are Cerise? I have heard of you, and now I am glad to have seen you."

Lou-Lou took the seat which Cerise herself had recently vacated. Her glance fell upon the table.

"What an admirable sherbet! It looks really cool and delightful! Come, sit down with me—I shall partake of your hospitality."

Lou-Lou tasted the sherbet.

W.C.T.U. HELLD MEETING AT COWANSVILLE

Reports Presented — Women's Institute Held Session—Other General News.

Cowansville, Que., May 8.—The monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. W. G. Brown on Friday afternoon, May 4th. After devotional exercises, the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The treasurer reported that all county and provincial dues and space in report had been paid, and that a spray of flowers had been provided in memory of the late Mr. W. H. Macfarlane. A letter has been received from Mrs. Macfarlane thanking the Union for their kindness and sympathy at the time of her husband's death. A report of the year's work has been prepared and sent to the county corresponding secretary.

Delegates were appointed to the county convention to be held in Waterloo on May 29th and 30th, and it is hoped as many of the members as possible will be able to go for part of the meetings at least. Mrs. Geogge, provincial president, and Rev. I. W. Pigeon, of Granby, will be the speakers.

Mrs. Drake reported that a number of essays had been received from pupils of the academy, and these will be judged as soon as possible and prizes awarded.

It was moved and carried that Mrs. Carr be "birthday superintendent," the funds from this department to be used as a flower and fruit fund. It was decided to take a subscription among the members for the Mansenville relief fund. Please hand your subscription to Mrs. Clinton Dunham.

Extracts from a pamphlet on the Quebec liquor situation were read.

Women's Institute Meeting.

The Women's Institute was very hospitably entertained by Mrs. Bruce Miner on Saturday afternoon, May 5th. The president, Mrs. D. A. Rodger, presided, and the minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Vilas. The programme committee reported having met and outlined the following programme:

May paper on flowers and shrubs that are easily grown.

June, a day with Penneyson, roll call favorable quotations from his works.

July, report of provincial convention, roll call, saving steps.

September, report of federal convention by Mrs. Beach, roll call, pickles and preserves.

October, paper or address on education and better schools.

November, our country resources, roll call, suggestions for Christmas gifts.

December, Canadian women of note.

January, travels in Canada, roll call, views of Canada accompanied by descriptions.

February, history and legends of Quebec roll call, personal or family reminiscences.

March, household economics, roll call, housewives ideas.

April, annual meeting.

A most interesting talk on the subject for the day was given by Mrs. C. J. McQuat, who divided the subject into three parts, shrubs, perennials and annuals. The first thing to do in any attempt at gardening, said the speaker, was proper preparation of the soil. In places where the soil was sour an application of lime would be necessary, as no amount of fertilizer would have the desired effect.

A few shrubs, many of which may be useful as well as ornamental, will enhance the commercial value of any property out of all proportion to the amount expended, and should be considered in the light of an investment. Some of the perennials mentioned were peonies, columbine, sweet william and pinks, all of which are hardy and will give pleasure year after year in return for a small amount of labor and expense, said the speaker.

In speaking of annuals, Mrs. McQuat strongly recommended starting a fern in the house for early bloom, and those planted in the garden will greatly extend the blossoming period, and her closing word was a suggestion that the garden be made a family affair, and to let everyone have a share in it. "To think is well; to plan is wise; to act is wiser; to accomplish is gain."

The roll call was responded to with selections of prose and poetry on "Spring," and included a quotation from "The Vision of Sir Launfal" by Lowell, beginning with the words, "And what is so rare as a word in June?" Another was a statement by Mr. Louis Terrill, president of the Quebec Society for the Protection of birds, that the song birds are at last returning to their old haunts, but three weeks later than last year. At this time last spring Mr. Terrill says there were as many as fifteen more varieties of birds than have been seen this year. Another reading which was most interesting was an appeal to the women to spend as much time as possible in the sunshine and open air, which were recommended as the best spring tonics in the world.

A vote of sympathy was tendered Mrs. Rodger on account of the death of her cousin, Mr. Boright, of Mansenville. Mrs. Rodger reported that the appeal for supplies for the fever sufferers had been very generous, and that boxes of food would be sent as often as required. Mrs. Beach and Mrs. McQuat brought a number of slips and plants to the meeting, which they generously distributed. Refreshments were served by the hostess, after which a selection on the Victrola was listened to with pleasure.

Donations for Mansenville.

Mrs. Rodger wishes to acknowledge the receipt of the following articles from the citizens of Cowansville and Sweetsburg for the Mansenville relief committee: 68 night gowns, 26 sheets, 63 pillow slips, 44 towels, 6 blankets, 4 quilts, 4 pillows

ISHMAELITES OF TO-DAY KEEP WORLD DISTURBED

Gen. Semnoff

Ede Valera addressing a Meeting

Jim Larkin

Wm. D. Haywood

W. Z. Foster

APPEARING and disappearing through the ferment of the present condition of the world are strange, disturbing figures—De Valera, Haywood, Semnoff, Foster, Larkin, the rebels of the day. They are of every type, follow varying ideals, are unconscious, probably, of brotherhood; yet they have this in common, that they oppose whatever is established; and pain and sorrow follow in their footsteps. Nevertheless, if we believe that human culture is passing on to anything but chaos, we must believe that such men have their function, in this, if in nothing else, that they prepare the way for a new creation.

It is characteristic of them that they are most to the fore in times of upheaval; with the appearance of order, of settlement, they tend to disappear.

Wm. D. Haywood, ex-leader of the Industrial Workers of the World, is the supreme example of such a man. In the welter of industrial unrest for twenty years before the great war he was regarded as "the greatest menace to society now living." In his earlier and milder days as a mere labor leader, the great Coeur D'Alene strike which he engineered as secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, was carried on with unbelievable brutality, both by the strikers and, as always happens, by the forces opposed to them.

This was but a beginning. In 1905 he was accused of planning the Finnish murder of Governor Steunenburg. In 1913, with his expulsion from the Socialist Party, and the formation of the I.W.W., he left behind even the extremists of organized labor. In 1918 he was condemned to twenty years' imprisonment for sedition, and fled to Russia.

Then followed his one opportunity for constructive work. The Soviet leaders placed at his absolute disposal a complete equipment of mines and factories. He was to bring 4,800 workers from America and form his community. The result? Flat failure! To-day, it is said, he sits in a dirty Moscow hotel, a lonely, forgotten figure, repudiated by Russia, afraid to return to America.

It is not always, however, that we get so perfect an example of the type. Wm. Z. Foster is, for example, of quite another order. None the less, he represents that force which has, for years, been attempting, without much success so far, to dominate American labor—the radical element. Formerly (and perhaps at present) an I.W.W., he works, under a cloak of apparent sanity and moderation, to one end—the day when labor, united under radical, perhaps red, leadership, can dictate to the nation. Here again we see the strange fate of all his class in the fact that the great steel strike, his supreme effort at organization, failed.

Let us consider a being from another world—that of Haywood or Foster, that wild Cossack Zeman, Semnoff—a rebel against rebels. Discount as we may ninety per cent. of the atrocities of his red fury in Siberia, still we have before us a destroyer, the leader of a half-savage tribe suddenly placed in power. With the advent of the civilized troops of Europeans, he passes from the stage, denounced as a traitor by Kolchak, repudiated by his former supporters, the astute Japanese.

But we of the west have no need to turn to Siberia. What of that distressful isle where rapine and murder have stalked so long? Consider the case of James Larkin, recently released from jail in the United States and refused admission to Ireland by its government. He is apparently a two-fisted fighting man. There is a sort of ferocious humor about him which was, according to eye-witness, reflected in his great Dublin strike of 1913. It is said that when he was on the platform at a meeting in Chicago one of the audience became obstreperous. "Jim" took one flying leap into the pit and pummeled him until "Mrs. Jim" called him off, grinning. If, indeed, he possesses "the head of a child and a heart of gold," we fear that is the kind of spankable small boy who breaks our windows. Let us never forget his own words: "I have served under one flag all my days—I am a servant of the red flag!"

Now, with some show of order appearing in Ireland, he passes with the others of this strange company of exiles.

There remains one extraordinary figure, a figure differing so much from any of the others that one hesitates to class him amongst them. There is no stranger story than that of de Valera, the schoolmaster, the philosophical professor of mathematics, who suddenly proved his ability as a military leader in the Easter rebellion of 1916, and now forms almost the sole obstacle of importance to the peace of Ireland. Here is a man of exact intellect, of real constructive ability who, when the Irish Free State was formed, linked himself once for all with the forces of destruction. Why? Perhaps the wild personal animus which this half-Spaniard, half-Irish-American has always displayed against England gives a sufficient answer. Perhaps we must turn to that strange fanatical quality of the Celt which has ever sacrificed a thing for a word.

So they pass before us, they and their like throughout the world—a variegated band of the sons of Ishmael. Yet may it not be that they form the anvil of lawlessness on which the hammer of the law is beating out a new world.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA CURES LORD HAMILTON'S WARTS

Noted Author Adored the Lovely Princess Who Worked Miracle For Him When a Boy.

NOT every loyal subject has his warts charmed away by the Queen of England. Yet it is in this human role that Queen Alexandra, the Queen Mother, is shown in a recollection of Lord Ernest Hamilton in his new book, "Forty Years On," which is the fruit of many years of travel and a mind that has seen and heard much in English social and political life. One of Lord Ernest's most interesting stories is this about Queen Alexandra, who, as Princess of Wales, visited the author's father at Dublin Castle in 1867:

"My small, and probably dirty, hands were at that time badly disfigured by a number of warts. The application of caustic to these warts had turned them brown, which cannot have added to their attractiveness."

"H. R. H. took the most solicitous interest in my complaint, and examined my repulsive little hands with the tenderest care. After listening to a recital of my woes—for my warts were a source of great shame and distress to me—she promised that she would charm them away for me. A certain rite was gone through, to the best of my recollection with hazel twigs, but, be that as it may, the fact remains that from that day on my warts began to disappear and have never shown any tendency to return. It is not to be wondered at that I worshipped with a lasting adoration the lovely Princess who had worked this Hans Andersen miracle on me."

Fourteen years later the Queen remembered the incident and inquired about the warts. The cure was permanent.

Bearding the Lion Was Ever Fallon's Way

Once Gave an Ocular Food Demonstration of Student's Food to Proud Clerical Principal.

By W. L. E.

NO one, whether co-religionist or not, will ever charge Bishop Fallon of London with lacking either in candor or courage. And neither of these qualities are acquired. They are native to his being, and in his school and college days made him a leader in sports—and even in modified forms of rebellion.

On one occasion in his college an outbreak of dissatisfaction developed over the quality of food supplied. Protest followed protest; but without bringing satisfactory improvement.

Fallon, who was the leader in the protesting movement—as he was in nearly every other movement—finally decided to "beard the lion in his den." In other words, he decided to jump over the shoulders of intervening subordinate officials, face the clerical principal of the college, and give him an ocular demonstration of the kind of food with which the student body was served.

Accordingly, one day while dinner was being served, he grabbed his plate, forced his way into the presence of the principal, and, placing the plate with its contents under the latter's nose as he sat at his desk, remarked:

"There, sir, do you think that is the kind of stuff with which to feed human beings?"

Naturally, the head of the institution was shocked by the unceremonious demonstration. But he was both impressed and convinced. Henceforward the quality of food served was up to the standard demanded.

GULPED CATERPILLAR TO SAVE FAMILY DINNER

DOCTOR COOK, the discredited Arctic explorer, whose wife has so recently secured a divorce from him, tells the following story.

"Sacrifices," said he, "are always being made. Men, in order to succeed, sacrifice pleasure, their honor, their youth. These sacrifices excite no remark. But any sacrifice of the stomach arouses wonder and awe."

Women have sacrificed, for instance, much to enter society. I've heard of many of their sacrifices, and yet there's only one that I remember vividly.

A woman newly rich was invited to an aristocratic dinner party. During the course of fowl and salad she noticed with dismay a fat, furry caterpillar on her topmost leaf of lettuce. Glancing up, she met her aristocratic hostess's eye. The hostess, too, had seen the caterpillar. Her gaze implored the guest to save the dinner from catastrophe.

The guest gave her hostess a reassuring smile. Then she doubled a lettuce leaf around the caterpillar and calmly swallowed it. The look of awe and gratitude that her hostess gave her was an assurance that her footing in society was at last firmly established.

"Do you think," she said to her daughter afterward, "that I'd lose a chance of establishing the family socially for a little thing like a caterpillar?"

Ten Seconds To Blot Out London By Air Attack, Blatchford Warns

LONDON could be wiped out in seconds. England is no longer a first-class power. She is not even a second-class power. A total expenditure of 23 millions next year and a capital expenditure of 15 millions could not regain for her an equality in the air with France.

England has been rudely jolted awake this week by Robert Blatchford's clarion voice of warning again. Viscount Grey himself adds weight to Blatchford's exposure of Britain's defencelessness. He has just said that he wished it were more usually recognized that "our security, under modern conditions, depends on friendship with France to a degree never before known."

At seventy-two, the prophet "Nunquam" proves again that his sword, which is his pen, has not gathered rust. England listens to "Nunquam" as Blatchford used to sign himself when he wrote "Merrie England" and warned England of the Germans' intentions in the Daily Mail long before the war.

The great German scheme of building up an air force in co-operation with Russia, exposed by France, is considered by Mr. Blatchford in his warning article, "Again, Wake Up England!" in the Sunday Chronicle.

The French know, he points out, that the real enemy is Germany.

The French have just discovered and exposed a great scheme for working (chiefly with German aircraft and German pilots) a 3,000 miles air route in Russia, running from Stockholm, through Petrograd, Moscow and Nizhni-Novgorod to Tiflis, with a prospective extension to Odessa. The potentialities of such an agreement are alarming. The use of this air route by German pilots and German machines will give Germany the equipment and the training for the "next war."

"Here Germany will have all that Major Cobett-Smith wishes us to provide for ourselves. Aircraft, large and small, trained pilots, air harbors, alighting grounds; everything in such readiness that at an hour's notice the Germans can mobilize great war fleets of fighting planes and bombers, and, as we know, they have already the means for making the deadliest of poison gases.

"No country can stop such a scheme without going to war with Russia."

Facts about poison gas potentialities have been furnished to Mr. Blatchford. Prussic acid, the 100 per cent. power gas, and an arsenical hydrogen gas can be made in millions of tons. The inventor of this deadly hydrogen gas, Gehlen by name, was killed by a single bubble.

Such a gas, dropped in bombs on London or Glasgow, could wipe out these cities in ten seconds. Not that all the inhabitants would be killed in one raid, but so many people would be blotted out that the city would be shattered and disorganized.

Airplanes, since the war, have been perfected incalculably. They can now travel from 100 to 200 miles an hour. "But they are only yet in the rocket stage," says Blatchford; "the fast expresses are coming. The Germans are talking of huge all-metal aircrafts, which, flying high in thin air, will carry tons of bombs at a speed of three or four miles a minute, with a range of thousands of miles."

Blatchford tells of the sacrificing of the great governmental air station at Barlow, in Yorkshire, where the giant airship, R-39, was two-thirds completed when the government was struck with economic paralysis. All the metal frames, girders and rings of the R-39 were sold cheap—to the Germans—and are now in Germany.

Like Philip Snowden, Blatchford is the product of suffering. For the benefit of his friends who could not explain his "heresies," he explained: "As a child I suffered and saw and felt as only a sensitive and sympathetic child could feel. And I never forgot. . . . What a simple answer it is. Bitter experience and deep and passionate pity."

His parents were poor actors, and he had not education. At twenty he tramped to London. Bereft of means, he "went for a soldier." He devoted his leisure to self-education. Then, at thirty-four, he entered journalism, which proved his true metier. Nine years ago he retired to the country, where, he says, "I am of no practical use, except as a watch-dog to utter my warning bark of 'Wake up, England.'"

Not the Last Call

NEIGHBOR: "Bertie, your mother is calling you."

Bertie: "Yes'm, I know it; but I fancy she don't want me very bad."

Neighbor: "She has called you seven times already."

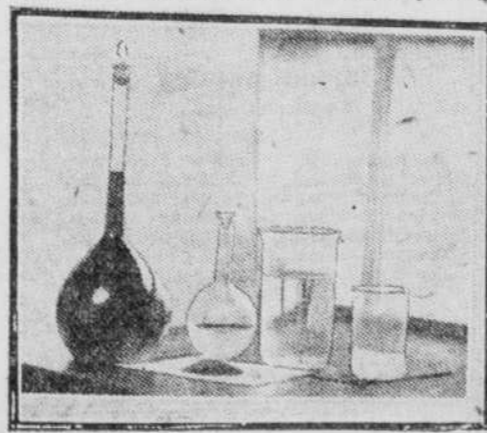

Bertie: "Yes, I know; but she hasn't called 'Albert' yet."—Pearson's Weekly.

NEW ELEMENT DISCOVERED IN SAND

Director of Research at British Museum Extracts Valuable Cinnamon-Colored Powder From New Zealand Sand.

TO Dr. Alexander Scott, F.R.S., the Director of Research at the British Museum, has fallen the great distinction of discovering a new element—Hafnium. The story of the discovery goes back to the year 1913, when Dr. Scott first began an analysis of a black sand brought from New Zealand; this he discovered to contain a small quantity of a quite "new oxide."

After putting this on one side for more urgent matters, the discovery by two Danes of a new unknown element induced Dr. Scott to resume his experiments. From the black sand was extracted a cream-colored sand, which still further split up to yield the new element. The latter is a cinnamon-colored powder, which may, it is thought, prove of great value in the making of incandescent lights and other objects. It has been named Hafnium, after Hafnia, Copenhagen.

The Wrong Man

A MAN going by the Scottish night mail from London to Carlisle tipped the guard to arouse him at the latter place, should he be asleep.

"If you find it a difficult matter, bundle me out bag and baggage," he remarked. "I shall not be offended."

His mind at ease, the traveler made himself comfortable, fell asleep, and woke up—just as the train was entering Edinburgh. In a rage, he sought the guard, and gave him a piece of his mind.

"Man," said the latter, "ye can fairly swear but ye can't swear like the man I pitched out at Carlisle!"—Pearson's Weekly.

HANDS OFF LIBERTY, TOMMY FIRMLY OBJECTS

LIEUT.-COL. R. ROSS NAPIER, supervisor of government agencies for the province of British Columbia, tells a good one on himself when he was chief assistant provost marshal of Canada.

It was in 1919, and he was in Winnipeg on the occasion of the return of a local battalion from Europe. A veteran of the unit who had been invalided home some time before was at the station awaiting the arrival of his old comrades. He had commenced his celebration some hours before with more enthusiasm than good judgment, and the colonel attempted to persuade him to go home.

Tommy objected to this interference with his personal liberty and indignantly demanded: "Jush who are you to order me 'round'?"

Turning back the lapel of his coat, Col. Napier displayed the gold badge of his office.

Instantly the old soldier came to attention. He swayed back and forth unsteadily, while he gazed with bulging and bleary eyes at the little piece of shining metal. Then to himself he muttered:

"A gol' badge! A gol' badge! A nickel badge can get y' thirty days C.B., but a gol' badge—shot at dawn, by crapes!"

MOTHER: "Johnny, you can't go in swimming on a full stomach."

Johnny: "If you'll only let me go, mum, I'll swim on my back."—Pearson's Weekly.

INDIANS CLASH WITH YANKS IN NEXT SERIES

New York Giants Maintained Their Lead in the National League.

(Associated Press Despatch) NEW YORK, May 8.—New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians were scheduled to meet today at Cleveland in the first crucial series of the 1923 American League race, with Detroit, with whom Cleveland is tied for second place, battled the Senators at home.

By the equally good slab work and hitting of Pitcher Uhl, the Indians downed St. Louis by 12 to 3, and Detroit crept up within a half game of the Yankees by beating Chicago by 8 to 4. Manager Cobb got a home run with two on, and Hooper with one on.

The New Giants kept their four game margin ahead of Pittsburgh in the National League by defeating Philadelphia in a game that was made interesting by Casey Stengel, Giant outfielder, who resented with his fists two offerings of the Quaker pitcher, lefty Weintert, that Casey said were "bean balls." Both players were banished from the contest after their fight. The score was 13 to 8.

Babe Adams tightened in the pinches and the Pirates trampled St. Louis by 11 to 4. Charlie Grimm, Pirate first sacker, maintained his batting record, getting three safeties and now has hit in all of the twenty contests in which his team has participated this season.

Brooklyn won a delirious game from Boston by 12 to 11, in ten innings. Both teams used thirty-five players, and ten fielding errors were made.

Chicago and Cincinnati in the National, New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Boston in the American were not scheduled to play.

ADMITS THAT PROTEST NOTE SENT TO MOSCOW

Government Spokesman Did Not Disclose Contents of Note Sent by Great Britain.

(Associated Press Despatch) LONDON, May 8.—The Government spokesman, answering questions in the House of Commons yesterday, said that a diplomatic note of protest has been sent to Moscow. He did not disclose its contents and declined to say when it will be made public.

The Daily Herald, the Labor organ of London, reported on Saturday that there was good reason to believe the Government had decided to send a stern note to Moscow complaining of Russia's treatment of priests, the seizure of British travelers, the tone of the communications to the British agent at Moscow and alleged breaches of the trade agreement.

The note, according to the Herald, was not couched in ordinary diplomatic terms, but appeared to be "deliberately calculated to force a quarrel and compel a rupture of both political and commercial relations."

A STRONGLY WORDED COMPLAINT.
(Associated Press Despatch) LONDON, May 8.—The British note to Russia, which Ronald McNeill, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons had been sent to Moscow, is unofficially reported to be strongly worded complaint against the discourteous treatment accorded the British protest in the Zepiak case, the seizure of the British trawler James Johnson, off the Murman coast, disregarding the recognized three mile limit and the brusque treatment given the British agent at Moscow.

Members of the House, however, were unable to draw much information from McNeill. The Under-Secretary said he understood the Soviet commissary of justice was considering cancellation of the verdict against the captain and crew of the vessel, and was making arrangements for the immediate return of the crew. The Government spokesman said he was not informed as to the captain who is believed to be still detained. Mr. McNeill intimated that he might make a further statement next week.

Meanwhile the British Communists have taken a hand in the campaign against what Labor believes to be the imminent cancellation of the trade agreement with Russia. The communists have issued a manifesto calling for the organization of councils of action, "to prevent the closing of the headquarters of the Russian trade delegation in London."

Such action, the manifesto asserts, would be "the first step to war," adding that the British Government is leading "a capitalist offensive against the workers' republic of Russia as they hate the Russian workers as they hate you, for they know the growth of trade with Russia means the strengthening of the workers' movement throughout the world."

The Independent Labor party is organizing a demonstration to be held in Trafalgar Square next Sunday at which several members of parliament are said to have promised to speak.

Whether the British note has reached Moscow is unknown.

knock out over Jack Clifford, St. Paul, last night, when the latter was forced to stop after the eighth round because of a bad cut over the left eye.

Bobby Ward, of St. Paul, won a technical knock out in the third round from Johnny Lewis, of Toledo. They are lightweight.

DISCUSSES THE CONDITIONS IN RUSSIA TODAY

Thousands and Thousands of Homeless Children Living in Abandoned Houses and Cellars.

(Associated Press Despatch) QUEBEC, May 8.—Among the passengers on the steamer Minnedosa from Cherbourg, Southampton and Antwerp yesterday was the Rev. F. Komlosy, M.C., who is coming to this country in the interests of the Russian Relief and Reconstruction Fund, registered under the War Charities Act of 1916.

In an interview here, Mr. Komlosy said: "An appeal on behalf of Russia is at once associated with the starving masses whose sufferings have been so terrible that even yesterday the rigors of the famine have not abated, but in spite of all that the famine is not the worst feature of Russia's agony. Allied reports of Bolshevism, as well as reports from independent circles are making very apparent the condition of moral decay beyond anything that has ever happened in the world's history."

"I will quote an extract from a Bolshevik newspaper to prove what I am telling you."
"There are thousands and thousands of homeless children in Moscow living in abandoned houses and cellars, gangs of them from ten years and upwards congregating together as beggars, thieves, prostitutes swarming the streets."
"The condition of these children had been wondered at" said Mr. Komlosy, "when the Soviet Government itself has approved the establishment of the 'komsomol' or union of young people, which consists of youths and girls deprived by systematic outrage in the last few years."

PRISONERS ROUGHLY TREATED

(Associated Press Despatch) TIEN TSIN, May 8.—Messrs. Day and Jacobsen, and Miss Coralti, three of the foreigners who escaped from the bandits who raided the Peking express at Suchow early Sunday, arrived here this morning. They said that Miss Lucy T. Aldrich, sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller Jr., her companion, Miss Minnie McFadden, and Miss Schoenberg had stepped in Tsinanfu, where they were admitted to a hospital suffering from shock. Their feet were cut and bruised. Mr. Day said that the bandits split the captives into separate parties after forcing them to leave the train. The prisoners, guarded heavily, were brutally hurried into the hilly country, which is the stronghold of the bandits.

"If a prisoner lagged he was prodded with a rifle butt," said Mr. Day. "We had to take the roughest paths. It was useless to protest and strict silence was enforced. Any speaking was mercilessly hit. I was struck on the forehead with a Mauser for talking to my neighbor."

The lair of the bandits, Day continued, was a village in the hills circled by a stone compound. Within an hour or two after the arrival of the prisoners, soldiers appeared outside the town, and soon a lively engagement was in progress.

The brigands' chieftain persuaded Day to take a note to the commander of the military forces informing him that if the fire did not stop the captives would be shot. Day had a harrowing experience in making his way across the open ground to the troops, as he was fired on by both the military and the bandits, some of the latter being ignorant of his mission.

Day delivered his message, whereupon the commander of the troops ordered them to cease firing, but the forces did not withdraw. Remaining with the military, Day started a search for some of the other prisoners, and came upon Miss Schoenberg, sitting on a boulder, exhausted. She, like the others, had escaped when dispatched as a messenger.

Jacobsen, however, knocked out his guard with a large stone and ran off.

Miss Schoenberg said her party had been fired on by the soldiers and one of the Chinese captives was killed instantly.

The Tsuchuan of Shantung has sent reinforcements to the scene and the British, French and Belgian consuls from Nanking have also gone to Lincheng.

The strength of the bandits was estimated at between two and three thousand men. It is said that the troops had been trying to round them up for several days, and that a pitched battle had been under way for hours before the train was wrecked.

The brigands retreated across the railway line, and it is believed that they then conceived the idea of holding up the train.

MANY ATTEND FUNERAL OF MR. WM. OLIVER

Men of All Walks in Attendance at Funeral Held at Mansenville Yesterday.

(Special to The Record.) MANSENVILLE, Que., May 8.—MEMBERS of the Provincial and Federal Governments were in attendance at Mansenville yesterday to pay a parting tribute to the late William Robert Oliver, member for Brome County in the Provincial Legislature, who passed away on Friday afternoon, May 4th, a victim of the typhoid epidemic which has been raging throughout the community for the past three months.

The funeral was an impressive one, and was one of the largest held in the Mansenville district, representing, as it did, the high esteem in which the deceased was held throughout the entire community. The services were conducted at the residence by Capt. the Rev. A. E. Hagar, of Knowlton, while Mr. A. R. McMaster, M.P. for Brome, spoke briefly, eulogizing the splendid work of the late Mr. Oliver and commenting upon his love for children, his spirit of self-denial and his service to the community.

The bearers were as follows: Dr. George Oliver, Montreal; Mr. Harry Campbell, Farnham; Mr. Wm. Oliver, Mansenville; Mr. Henry Bower, Granby; Mr. A. H. Oliver, Ottawa.

The floral tributes were beautiful and were received from all sections of the province. Among those present at the funeral were Mr. A. R. McMaster, M.P. for Brome County; Mr. W. F. Kay, of Phillipsburg, M.P. for Missisquoi County; the Hon. W. F. Vilas, of Cowansville; the Hon. Jacob Nicol, K.C., Provincial Treasurer; Capt. Dan P. Gilmour of Montreal; Col. Ralph F. The deceased, a bachelor, leaves to mourn his loss three sisters and two brothers, Miss M. J. Oliver, Mrs. Teel and Mrs. W. H. Boright, all of Mansenville; Dr. A. H. Oliver, of Granby, and Mr. C. J. Oliver, of Mansenville. Interment was held in the Mansenville Cemetery.

LATE WILLIAM NELSON BO-RIGHT

The funeral of the late William Nelson Boright, also a victim of the typhoid epidemic, was held at Mansenville on April 27th. The deceased, a young man just a month short of twenty-seven years of age, had a most promising future and was probably the most outstanding young man of the entire community. He was educated at Stanstead College, Boston and McGill University, and was very successful in his studies. He was a member of the Phi-Yamma Delta of Boston, a member of the Mansenville Masonic Lodge and a member of the Royal Arcanum, Montreal. He was ill for about three weeks, and a distressing feature associated with his illness and untimely death is the fact that his mother was stricken at the same time and was unable to see her boy before he passed away.

The service was held at the residence, the Rev. F. B. Allnutt officiating. The bearers were Messrs. Robert Boright, Frank Jenne, Reid Jenne, all of Sutton; Dr. A. H. Oliver, Granby, and Dr. G. W. Rummels, of Granby.

Many and beautiful floral tributes testified to the esteem in which the late Mr. Boright was held. The interment was held in the Mansenville cemetery. The deceased leaves to mourn his loss his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Boright, and one sister, Beatrice (Mrs. J. C. Reilly) of Ottawa.

PAUL GAGNE BURIED

The funeral of the late Paul Gagne, the last victim of the typhoid epidemic, was held yesterday morning, and a large number of the members of the community turned out to pay their final respects to the deceased who met such an untimely death. He was only nineteen years of age and was very well known through the community. The interment was held in the Catholic cemetery, Mansenville.

MUCH COMMENT IS CAUSED BY WAR PICTURE

Sir William Orphen Says that He Painted Picture in All Seriousness and Humility.

(Associated Press Despatch.) LONDON, May 8.—The large section of the British public which looks with avidity to the Royal Academy for pictures "with a story" has been intrigued by Sir William Orphen's arresting canvas "The Unknown British Soldiers in France."

The picture represented a coffin, decked with the Union Jack and guarded by two ghost-like comrades, fur helmets and boots, over which he makes hover two cherubs made in conventional attitude.

The background is the magnificent mirror hall at Versailles, where the peace treaty was signed, and cavalry is outlined in the distance through the vista.

What induced Sir William to conceive this work, which was painted under agreement for the British Imperial War Museum, has been the subject of much critical gossip, especially as regards the fat cherubs, which contrast strangely with the corpse-like warriors below.

One critic objected to the "irritating sentiment and accessories," another declares the picture is "almost flippant in spirit and out of keeping with its sacred significance."

A third critic spoke of "ironical and satirical intentions," while others took similar lines of comment. Sir William Orphen in reply has explained that it had been arranged that he should group in Mirror Hall "the two score of politicians, generals, admirals, who won the war."

"And then," Sir William added, "I just could not go on. It all seemed so unimportant, somehow, beyond reality as I had seen it and felt it when working with the armies, so I rubbed out all the statesmen, admirals and generals and painted the picture as it now is."

Sir William added that he had satirized nobody, and that he did not intend to set any problem.

"I painted the picture in all seriousness and humility," he added.

FIFTY PERSONS WERE OVERCOME BY THE SMOKE

Short Circuit Started Fire in New York Subway—Some of Passengers Became Excited.

(Associated Press Despatch) NEW YORK, May 8.—Fifty persons were overcome by smoke during last night's rush hour when a short circuit started a fire in the East Side Subway of the Interborough Company at 68th Street and Lexington Avenue. Five of this number were made seriously ill and were taken to hospitals. The others were able to go home after emergency treatment.

Passengers of a ten car train became excited when smoke from the short circuit filled the cars. Many of them smashed windows and fought their way to emergency exits, although the majority waited until the station at 68th Street was reached, where thirty were removed by ambulance surgeons and police. At 68th street twenty more were found to be overcome by the smoke and they, too, were taken into the air.

NEWFOUNDLAND ELECTION IS A CLOSE AFFAIR

Government and Opposition on Even Terms, with Sixteen Districts Yet to Be Heard from.

(Associated Press Despatch) ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 8.—With twenty of the thirty-six seats in the Newfoundland Assembly heard from late last night, Premier Squires' party and the opposition were in a tie. Each party had elected ten followers in the count so far of the vote cast in last Thursday's general election.

The Government gained a seat in St. George's district, where Downey Government, was elected over MacDonnell, Opposition, but lost one in Burin. The latter district, which formerly was represented by two followers of the Government, split this year. Harris, Opposition, and Foote, Government, were returned.

The incomplete report in Trinity and Bonavista, indicated last night that each would return three Government members.

FEAR A TIMBER FAMINE AT NO DISTANT DATE

Results of Such a Famine Would Be More Disastrous for United Kingdom Than for Any Other Country.

(Associated Press Despatch) LONDON, May 8.—A report just issued by the Forestry Commissioners says the measures which are being adopted by various foreign countries indicate the existence of widespread apprehension of a timber famine at a no distant date, and also expresses the opinion that the results of such a famine would be more disastrous for the United Kingdom than for any other country.

The demand, continues the report, is constantly increasing and virgin forests are being worked out far more rapidly than was expected and added: "There can be little doubt that the government will in the near future have to choose between a resumption of the fuel planting programme adopted by parliament and taking a risk which no other country is prepared to take."
