Off-island anglos lack leadership, Quebec study says

By NELSON WYATT

MANSONVILLE — A report slated for release next month says Anglo Quebecers are dwindling in numbers and lacking the leadership necessary for the community to flourish.

The study, prepared for the provincial government's Conseil de la langue francaise, is the result of six months' intensive research by former Bishop's University professor Gary Caldwell. Its aim was to examine the socio-demographic evolution of off-island anglos to "allow them an overview of their present situation."

"English-speaking Quebec is, in effect, composed of two distinct realities: that of the metropolitan Montreal area, and that which is to be found elsewhere in Quebec," says Caldwell.

"It is the first — approximately 85 per cent of anglophone Quebec — which determines by its demographic and cultural predominance, the visage of anglophone Quebec. The "other" anglophone Quebec, owing to its dispersion, its small numbers and lack of institutional completeness, remains largely invisible and unknown to the research and literary community... if not to itself."

Using information culled from the 1971-76 census and data compiled in the province's schools between 1972 and 1978, the Caldwell study centred on two areas. One comprised the sub-divisions of the Montreal school administrative regions, except for Montreal proper, and the other was made up of the census divisions of Shefford, Brome, Missisquoi, Huntingdon, Argenteuil and Labelle. About 100 interviews were conducted to round out the survey.

So far, the study has been unveiled in New Richmond and Mansonville and the group plans to travel on to Inverness and Shawville prior to putting the finishing touches on it. All four towns were used as test models in the study.

After a detailed explanation of the methodology used and how the English population had fared in both a historical perspective and in the five-year period between 1971 and 1976, Caldwell told the group the anglo population had dipped by 0.9 per cent in Quebec. A curious fact that emerged however, was that while the enrolment decline in anglo schools was about 7.5 per cent, it was down by 17.3 per cent in the French schools.

Caldwell said that the English population had shown itself to be highly migratory and as a result was unstable. The only regions that were not in a state of decline are the North Shore and the lower St. Lawrence-Gaspe. The Townships locations of Sherbrooke, Lennoxville, Cowansville and Lac Brome were among about 15 municipalities that still showed sizable English populations. Aylmer came out with the highest concentration, with over 11,000 anglos.

Caldwell concluded by saying that his study had found a "contemporary absence of cultural traditions unique to this population. One does not find cultural elements which would be capable of maintaining or creating a sentiment of identity; a societal ideological core which would provide its adherents with the confidence necessary to participate in, and integrate itself in, its physical and social environment."

Caldwell said that, for the most part, the sense of identity did not extend beyond the borders of the person's own town and that cultural awareness stemmed from television piped in from Toronto or the United States.

"Without a living cultural tradition perpetuated by an indigenous elite, which could serve as a bridge between it and the wider French-speaking movement, the anglophone population is adrift," says Caldwell.

Though he knocked the educational system for not providing a stronger leadership role in the community and said that perhaps the reason that many anglos between 25 and 30 years old were not bilingual was because of the regionalization of high schools. Caldwell was optimistic.

MoT mulls airport lease

By CAROLE TREISER

SHERBROOKE — Transport Canada Minister Jean-Luc Pepin is likely to ask the Treasury Board for the okay to sign a 20-year lease on the proposed flight service station at the Sherbrooke Municipal Airport terminal, a ministry spokesman said yesterday.

"The minister is likely to follow the recommendation of the Ministry, but the Treasury Board will have to approve the lease as well," Charles Pratt said in a telephone interview from Ottawa. "We should have their decision some time in May."

The city scrapped plans to build the $200,000 station last summer, when the Clark government reversed the previous Liberal government's decision to approve the lease.

"We're hoping this government will realize their telecommunications people have to be moved into the terminal. From where they sit now, 3,000 feet from the terminal in a thicket of trees, they can't even see the runway," says Andre Collard, municipal administrator for the airport. Though the telecommunications workers are not air traffic controllers who direct take-offs and landings, they guide pilots towards and away from the airport.

Regardless of whether Sherbrooke gets the go-ahead to build a station at the terminal, it's safe to say the city will not be able to check off the whole of its shopping list for airport accessories until after Pepin is through taking stock and setting up shop.

Sherbrooke has been petitioning the government to install an instrument landing system for the past two years. The city says the ILS, an instrument that facilitates landings in poor visibility conditions, would entice more airlines to fly to the airport.

But Transport Canada says it's a case of the chicken and the egg. "There is no way we can recommend building an instrument landing system in Sherbrooke," says Pierre Champagne, Transport's regional director in charge of Quebec's airports. "There isn't enough traffic in Sherbrooke to warrant spending up to $1 million to install the ILS and an additional $250,000 a year to keep it up."

Jacques Montminy, a representative for Bar Harbor Air, Sherbrooke Airport's only client, insists Sherbrooke is considered taboo by most air carriers until the system is set up.

"Without the ILS, winter flights are cancelled left and right," he says. "Last winter we had to either cancel or divert 20 per cent of our flights."

He explains that the ILS gives the pilot his position relative to the runway and can guide him to within 200 feet of the ground when making his approach. The non-directional beam now used just points the pilot in a general direction and doesn't steer him clear of area mountains. As a result, he has to fly 700 feet above the ground when coming in for a landing.

"When there's poor visibility a pilot doesn't have much hope of seeing the runway at 700 feet," Montminy said. "He'll have to overshoot and take it again or head off to another airport. Usually he can't be bothered to try to land here more than twice and just heads off to Quebec City instead."

But it would seem that Sherbrooke's present navigational system is not what's keeping the airlines away. Firstly, the market here has only started to merit consideration and second, most of the small regional airlines have either gone bankrupt or

Parizeau walks fiscal tightrope

QUEBEC (CP) — The budget Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau releases today will try to convince Quebecers that their economy is in good hands, although there is a recession on the horizon.

With the referendum on sovereignty-association this spring and a possible provincial election in the fall, Parizeau must try to come up with some goodies as well, a trick that may require mirrors and a little sleight of hand.

Analysts say a United States recession they have been predicting for the last two years is likely to occur soon. The Levesque government would like to get its referendum and election out of the way at a time when the Quebec economy is doing relatively well, before the shock wave from the south hits.

Although he has held down government spending since the Parti Quebecois took power in 1976, Parizeau will not cut taxes dramatically because he wants to keep his deficit at a manageable level.

He says Quebec has higher tax rates than Ontario because Quebecers want the same services even though their province is poorer.

IS KEY ISSUE

One of the key issues in the referendum campaign will be whether sovereignty-association makes economic sense.

Parizeau is the most able spokesman for the Parti Quebecois in this area and if his previous efforts are any indication, he will probably mix imagination with sound financial management in his fourth budget to reassure the electorate.

The London-trained minister, with his fondness for dark blue pin-stripe suits, likes to joke that he is a member of the "bourgeois international."

Parizeau is a bit of an anomaly in a government that likes to style itself as social democratic. His tight grasp on the provincial purse strings has at times enraged the left wing of the Parti Quebecois.

In the referendum question, the Quebec government is seeking exclusive power to levy taxes. Parizeau argues that if the Quebec government collected all taxes paid in the province, it could do a better job than Ottawa.

It is doubtful, however, that he will present a budget projecting what Quebec would do with all that money. Parizeau tried that in the 1973 provincial election when he presented his budget for the first year of an independent Quebec.

BUCK DIPS TO 84 CENTS

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar continued to take it on the chin on North American money markets Monday, losing two-fifths of a cent against its U.S. counterpart.

The currency rose no higher than its previous close, reaching a peak of 84.41 cents U.S. in early morning trading, and closing at the day's low of 84.01.

Analysts said the downward activity continued to mirror the current interest rate gap between Canada and the United States.

And meanwhile, the Toronto stock market suffered another huge setback Monday as investors continued to watch its performance from the sidelines.

The TSE index of 300 selected stocks plummeted 57.30 points to 1830.80.

Levesque: ProCan ad is vicious

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque attacked his federalist opponents Monday for what he called vicious and unworthy campaign tactics.

Speaking before 1,500 University of Montreal students, the premier had harsh words for billboards put up by the federalist Pro-Canada group.

One set of billboards which proclaimed "Le Canada — J'y suis, j'y reste pour ma liberte (Canada — I'm here and I'm staying for my freedom)" were particularly underhanded, Levesque said, because they implied federalism was necessary to freedom in Quebec.

The premier said it was under the current federal system that French-Canadians were assimilated in Western Canada while Quebec continued to provide its English minority "with schools from kindergarten through to university."

Quebec doesn't need to learn "lessons in freedom from anybody."

Levesque also attacked other Pro-Canada billboards implying that Canada was necessary to Quebec's prosperity, listing Quebec's recent economic achievements, including the James Bay hydroelectric development project, as evidence to the contrary.

'AGAINST ALL CHANGE'

The provincial Liberals, he said, are "against all change, even the most useful and necessary change."

"Any living organism needs to change if it is ever to reach the size and capacity for which it exists. To be against change is to be against life."

Grits eliminate Roy in Frontenac

THETFORD MINES, Que. (CP) — The federal Liberals gained an extra Commons seat and shut out Social Credit again as Socred leader Fabien Roy lost to Leopold Corriveau Monday in a deferred election in Frontenac riding.

But Corriveau's majority of slightly more than 3,000 votes was a lot less than the Liberals had hoped for, and permitted Roy to claim moral victory against what he called their "infernal election machine."

For Social Credit — which saw its five sitting MPs defeated in the Feb. 18 general election — a moral victory in Frontenac was not enough. The party's future, even as a rural protest party in Quebec, is in doubt.

Still, Roy was trying to put on a brave face.

"Social Credit isn't dead, the doctrine is still there, more and more people believe in it," he said. Roy attributed the slide in his party's fortunes to its failure to recruit new blood in the 1970s.

Corriveau, 54, received his fifth mandate to represent this largely-rural riding south of Quebec City.

Tehran mob protests shah's latest move

TEHRAN (CP) — Thousands of Iranians surrounded the United States Embassy today chanting slogans against the deposed shah, President Jimmy Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Premier Menachen Begin.

The demonstration, called by several revolutionary groups to protest Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's flight to Egypt, began peacefully as well-organized groups marched into Ayatollah Taleghani Avenue in front of the embassy.

The demonstrators were also supporting the militant students holding about 50 U.S. diplomats hostage in the embassy.

Women wearing flowing black chadors and men marched in separate groups waving their fists and chanting in choruses. They shouted "The shah must come back — down with the shah, Carter, Begin and Sadat."

Some came in a holiday mood, laughing as a man wearing a Jimmy Carter mask and a tall red hat wandered through the crowd. Some took off his hat and patted him on the head or pretended to beat him with crutches.

Similar demonstrations were being held in other Iranian towns.

In Cairo, the shah is running a high fever and is likely to be operated on in a few days, President Anwar Sadat said today after visiting the ousted Iranian monarch in his hospital room.

In Washington, Carter administration officials said the U.S. urged the former Iranian ruler to stay in Panama, his home since Dec. 15, because of concern that his departure would worsen the hostage crisis.

Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, a leading Iranian revolutionary and former chief judge, said those among the U.S. hostages accused of spying will be put on trial and jailed if found guilty. He said the trials will take place after Iran's new parliament convenes.

Kennedy makes gains in NY primary

NEW YORK (AP) — New Yorkers voted today in one of the most important U.S. presidential primaries, with Senator Edward Kennedy saying he may finally gain an upset over President Carter — but vowing that defeat would not end his challenge for the Democratic nomination.

Ronald Reagan held the Republican lead in New York even before the votes were counted as he competed there and in the Connecticut primary with former UN ambassador George Bush.

Bush campaigned hard in Connecticut, where he spent his boyhood, in an effort to cut into Reagan's command of the Republican race.

Carter and Kennedy also were matched in Connecticut, but their real battleground was New York, a primary the challenger had described as a referendum on the course of the Democratic party.

VOTES AVAILABLE

New York Democrats were assigning 282 nominating votes, apportioned on the basis of the popular-vote shares in each of 39 congressional districts. Only California, with 306 delegates, has more say at the Democratic convention this summer, and its primary is more than two months away.

A poll Monday in The Daily News showed Carter the preferred candidate by a narrowed but still hefty margin. "I don't think we're going to win, but I don't think we're going to lose by 20 points, either," said Tom Southwick, spokesman for the Massachusetts senator.

New York Republicans voted on a mystery ballot, which listed delegate candidates but not their nomination preferences.

MONTREAL WORKERS ORDERED TO RETURN

QUEBEC (CP) — All parties in the Quebec national assembly joined late Monday night to vote unanimous approval of a law ending the 41-day strike by municipal blue-collar workers in Montreal.

Although the Parti Quebecois government had the backing of Liberal, Union Nationale and independent members, opposition members were also unanimous in criticizing the government for allowing the strike to continue so long.

In Montreal, workers were reported returning to their jobs shortly after midnight Monday night. It was expected it would take weeks to catch up on the backlog of work left undone during the strike.

The workers are responsible for clearing snow and collecting garbage in parts of the city. Others maintain the city's traffic signal system.

Labor Minister Pierre Marc Johnson said the government regretted it was forced to end the strike, but with the coming of spring, mountains of rotting garbage in the city posed a health hazard to Montrealers.

Liberal Leader Claude Ryan, who flew home from Halifax to take part in the debate, said the Parti Quebecois had "sinned by its slowness" in not acting earlier.

The law, which came into force one minute after midnight today, provides for fines up to $50,000 daily for the union if it defies the law.

Individual union members could be fined $100 a day for refusing to return to work and city officials can be fined as much as $10,000 daily if they don't go along with the law.

The law provides for selection of an arbitrator acceptable to both sides within 10 days.

Anglos lack leadership

"We suggest that the future of non-Montreal anglophone Quebec depends, in very large part, on the emergence of an elite capable of transcending its immediate and professional interests in order to arrive at a commitment and a consciousness; which commitment and consciousness will be capable of awakening in the anglo-Quebec population a determination to take its future into its own hands.

Such an elite, if it emerges, will be constituted from those who have managed a certain degree of integration in Quebec society in their immediate work world or local context.

"Failing such, anglophone Quebec outside of Montreal will either succumb to the pressure to emigrate or be reduced to the social impotence of localized and isolated groupings. The solution, we submit, is the emergence of an elite which is both locally based and the product of the historical context in which it finds itself.

"The goodwill, as well as the activity generated before, during and after the conference on cultural development held on June 16 in Lennoxville would suggest that the eventuality of such an elite is not to be dismissed."

After the lecture, a lively discussion period ensued between Caldwell, the audience and Michel Plourde, the president of the Conseil, for whom the report was prepared. It was noted that copies of the report would be available upon its release, but hackles were raised when it was stated that only a summary and not the complete report would be available in English. Plourde, whose 12-person group of representatives from various sectors of Quebec society makes recommendations to the government on the implementation of Law 101, explained that the bulk of the report was taken up with methodology and that since it was prepared for the government, it was done in the official language.

"We paid for it with our taxes," replied one member of the crowd, and when Plourde repeated that it was in conformation with Law 101, the man shot back, "if it wasn't for Law 101, you guys wouldn't have jobs."

While most of the discussion was concerned with further elaboration of the study, Plourde was encouraged to return to Quebec City with a request that all government documents be made available in both languages and that second language instruction in both systems be upgraded.

Plourde told The Record that he was leaving the Mansonville meeting — the second of four such gatherings to take place in the province before the tabling of the study — "quite impressed".

"Compared to the people we met in New Richmond on Saturday," he said, "the people here were more argumentative but also very sharp and to the point. They had many questions that they wanted raised and could back up what they said."

In his opening remarks, prior to introducing Caldwell, Plourde had said that the job of the Conseil was to "keep its eyes and ears open" and he concluded by saying that he would be returning to the provincial capital with a great deal of information and many recommendations from meetings such as this.

News in brief

Skater off scot-free

MONTREAL (CP) — A pintsized youngster on roller skates pulled off a $360 robbery under the noses of police Monday when he stole the purses of two workers at the downtown Quebec Liberal party headquarters.

Police called it a daring feat since the Montreal Urban Community police credit union is in the same downtown building.

The two victims, who recovered their purses emptied of cash but with identification and credit cards intact, said they were too upset by the incident to comment. They added they also were afraid other political parties might have a good laugh.

$11.4 million in silver heisted

LONDON (Reuter) — Police are looking for six gunmen and a bogus policeman who hijacked a truck-load of silver ingots worth 4.4 million pounds ($11.4 million) in Britain's biggest bullion robbery.

The gang took less than a minute Monday to ambush a trailer truck, which was directed off the road with its escorting vehicle by a man posing as a policeman conducting a traffic census in London's East End.

London bomber arrested

LONDON (AP) — A man, identified as an Italian national, was arrested Monday after a pre-dawn explosion and fire reduced the six-storey Italian consulate in London to a heap of smouldering rubble.

Two cars were seen speeding away after the spectacular blast at Eaton Place in the select Belgravia district. No injuries were reported.

Acadians would vote 'yes'

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — The New Brunswick Acadian Society has called on Quebecers to vote yes in the referendum on sovereignty-association, even if it doesn't agree with all of the Parti Quebecois's proposal.

Jean-Claude Leblanc, president of the Acadian rights group, said Monday that a no vote in the referendum would be interpreted as being in favor the status quo.

Violence in India imminent

NEW DELHI (AP) — Eastern India is in the throes of communal unrest that some local leaders say may explode in violence between the Assamese and Bengali communities.

On Monday, hundreds of members of the youth wing of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress party blocked road and rail communications between Assam and West Bengal states. They were demonstrating against the five-month-old Assam Movement, which they accused of attacks on Bengali refugees from Bangladesh and other non-Assamese.

Diplomats flee Chad

PARIS (AP) — About 220 Europeans and Americans, mostly diplomats, were evacuated Monday from the central African country of Chad after a third straight day of fighting ended hope that a ceasefire between rival Moslem factions might succeed.

Killer escapes

MONTREAL (CP) — Denis (Poker) Racine, serving a life sentence for murder, made a daring daylight escape from the city's main court house on Monday by holding a terrified court clerk as hostage.

Racine, 23, appearing in appeals court to seek a reduction of his sentence, jumped a railing and grabbed Emmanuelle Fraire, putting what appeared to be a letter opener to her throat, then using her as a shield to escape from the room.

Business survey says no

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Independent Business says a survey taken in January shows that 63 per cent of its Quebec members intend to vote no in the referendum on sovereignty-association.

The survey, released Monday, also said 31 per cent of the businessmen will vote yes, while the rest were undecided.

Tito still grave

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito's doctors gave no indication Monday that a new drug has helped combat his pneumonia.

The 87-year-old leader's team of eight doctors said his condition remains very grave and without significant change.

Palestinians call for strike

TEL AVIV (AP) — Palestinian leaders called Monday for a general strike to protest against the Israeli cabinet's decision to settle Jews in the occupied Arab city of Hebron for the first time in 50 years.

"There is no jail big enough for all of us," said Fahad Qawasmeh, the mayor of the Arab city of 50,000.

Ice-bound passengers wait

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — The 142 passengers aboard the ice-bound ferry Marine Atlantica say they are enjoying their surroundings the best way they can under the conditions. Many have been reading magazines and watching televison to pass the time.

"This is the first time for being stuck for me and it is quite an experience," Frank Pierpoint said in an interview Monday from the CN Marine ferry stuck in the ice for the second straight day off Sydney harbor.

Farnham mayor returns to fight water battle

By MERRITT CLIFTON

FARNHAM — Mayor Gilles Desrosiers, making up for lost time, has blasted the Quebec environmental service for inaction on the Yamaska River. Farnham has been without water for the past 25 days, due to heavy Yamaska pollution.

"Government action so far has been limited to pretty talk," Desrosiers said. "It's time for some concrete action," specifically designed to give Farnham water now. This might include financial aid in drilling a community artesian well or piping in water from the mountains. Quebec's $138 million Yamaska sewage treatment project will not substantially improve Farnham water quality before 1982.

Desrosiers was in Florida for the first two weeks of the present crisis. During his absence, the Front de depollution de la Yamaska took over leadership in confronting Quebec and the upstream municipalities contributing to the pollution situation. Desrosier's remarks endorse most of the FDY's public demands made at a town meeting Thursday night. In particular, Desrosiers and the FDY want more vigilant surveillance of Yamaska basin industry with a master list of products the various plants might be dumping.

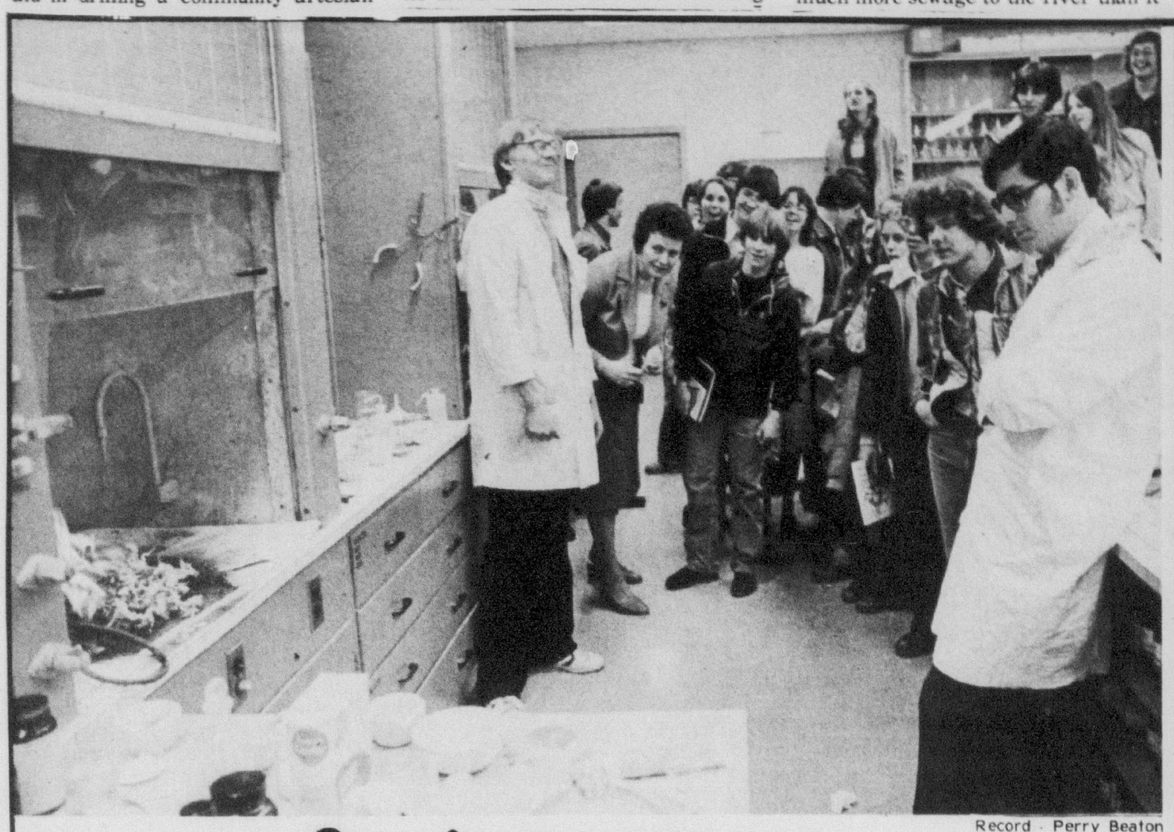

But Desrosiers points out that industrial wastes are far from the whole Yamaska problem.

"Last year's Coronet Carpet latex incident rests in local memory," he said, "while residents missed the importance of septic wastes. The towns of Cowansville and Granby contribute much more sewage to the river than it is capable of absorbing, despite the assurances of Granby mayor Paul Trepanier."

Desrosiers believes Farnham residents unfairly bear the brunt of the Yamaska's pollution problems unfairly. "Farnham is penalized twice," he said. "Once because drinking water isn't available from household taps, and once again because water must be imported by truck from the St-Jean-Iberville area." This costs taxpayers $350 per day while causing everyone the inconvenience of having to collect drinking water in small jugs at the fire house. Resisting the inconvenience and ignoring official advice, many residents seem to be drinking tapwater anyway. Consumption from the tank truck is only about a quarter of what experts think it should be.

Farnham can do nothing by itself to curb the flow of sewage from upstream. Desrosiers argues that the town also cannot act unilaterally against polluting local industries. "We have a reputation in Farnham for accommodating industry which provides our economy. What industry would come here if handicapped by regulations not also applied elsewhere?"

At the same time, Desrosiers argues that Farnham citizens should not bear the costs of cleaning up after industry alone. "Why should our taxpayers have to pay unreasonably to ensure themselves of getting drinking water?" he asked. "The continuing situation here in Farnham is intolerable with multiple catastrophies depriving our population."

Squirmy worms

Paul Hunt, above left, better known for his activities with the Gaiters men's basketball team, looks quite pleased with himself as a seemingly harmless looking pile of powder, when set aflame, turns into a squirming mass of green-grey worms. Hunt and his fellow science students were participating in the annual Bishop's Science Fair held over the weekend.

At right, students were demonstrating that certain chemical reactions could give off no heat, but a lot of light.

MAGOG TAXES HIKED

MAGOG (JKH) — Magogites will pay 20 per cent more this year in municipal taxes, City Treasurer Yves Langlois said Friday. The 20 per cent hike will help to finance the city's deficit, up to $131,069 this year, compared to the anticipated $64,670. Although the provincial government has abolished the school tax, Magog residents will be paying their second of two tax bills in July of this year.

"We have done more public works this season," claimed Langlois. "We repaired sewage pipes and drains, for example."

Another big loss of revenue was occasioned by the government abolition of the tenant tax, a whopping $250,000.

"Bill 57 was not very good to us," said Langlois. "We have written to the Minister of Municipal Affairs, Guy Tardif, but as yet we've no reply."

Bill 57 is the Municipal Affairs Ministry's fiscal reform law which came into effect in January.

Ottawa, Quebec neglect airport

been eaten up by Quebecair in the past few years.

"We couldn't possibly service Sherbrooke. Our aircraft are too large," Air Canada spokesman Jean-Pierre Ranger says. "Besides, we only serve the major centres and the outlying regions. But if we had a different policy, I doubt whether the lack of an ILS would influence our decision to service you or not."

Quebecair's Jean-Marie Pelletier agrees. "Sure we like to service airports that have an ILS, but we don't always get the chance. We've been flying to Schefferville for the past 25 years and their system is as antiquated as Sherbrooke's."

Pelletier says Quebecair is considering Sherbrooke in a regional service plan they are presently studying which will link Quebec's medium-sized urban centres. If the service is started, Sherbrooke will be included; if it's scrapped, so is Sherbrooke, the airline rep said. "The ILS just doesn't figure into the question."

Similar responses to the ILS question were given by representatives of Air Atonabee, Pilgrim Airways, Nord-Air, and Quebec Aviation.

Besides Bar Harbor, pilots seem to be the only group to vehemently protest antiquated equipment. But the protest appears to be much stronger in the United States.

"Some American charter pilots refuse to fly to airports that only use the non-directional beam," says Steve Wodjylak, a Philadelphia pilot who recently flew into Sherbrooke on a private jet. "But we don't have the same problem getting new systems installed. Our government realizes it's worth every penny and as a result we have airports smaller than Sherbrooke's that are far better equipped."

There's a glimmer of hope that if Transport Canada continues to refuse to give Sherbrooke the ILS, they might agree to installing half the system.

"With a localizer and a DME, pilots could pinpoint the direction they're flying in. They wouldn't be able to measure their descent slope, but it's possible that the localizer alone would decrease the descent ceiling," civil aviation inspector Bert Salvador said.

The difference in cost between installing half the ILS and the complete system are staggering. Setting up half the system would only cost about $150,000 and just $25,000 a year to keep up.

Another solution also is in the works. Pierre Champagne says a microwave landing system that does the job of an ILS is currently being tested. The MLS is made of solid-state components which are relatively cheap to replace, is easy to install, doesn't need much servicing and is on the whole a cheaper proposition.

"The government and the International Civil Aviation Organization should give the MLS its approval within the next few years and it should be marketable within six years," Champagne said. "We see it as the answer to servicing all these small regional airports."

Sherbrooke Airport administrator Collard says he'll be happy with what ever the government gives him and hinted that he's asking for the big cheese just to make sure he gets a slice of it. "In negotiations sometimes you have to demand a lot to make sure you end up with something," he said.

But if Sherbrooke could muster up the political clout, it wouldn't have to settle for second best. When Three Rivers was nothing more than a hump in a mud bank, local MP and Transport Minister Leon Balcer had a fancy airport built to accommodate his trips home from Ottawa.

Megantic-Compton-Stanstead MP Claude Tessier says he'll do what he can to push Sherbrooke's case with Pepin. But if he doesn't consider the region's development a priority, Tessier isn't likely to have much luck.

"The issue isn't so much the ILS; it's whether or not Sherbrooke as a whole is given priority over other airports," he says.

Champagne agrees. Part of the reason he refuses to consider installing an ILS in Sherbrooke is because reps from all the other regional airports in Quebec would claw the finish off his wood panelling.

But if Sherbrooke is treated royally as the Queen of the fast-developing Townships she would have carte blanche. She'd no longer have to grapple with the feds for petty funds to clear the runway of brush in the summer and snow in the winter.

Sunday symposium shows Levesque, anglos can get along

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque and members of his Parti Quebecois cabinet demonstrated Sunday that they can discuss sovereignty-association with a relaxed, often supportive English-speaking audience in this city.

This was a first for the party in its 12-year existence and was further evidence that the PQ option has gained a slim but firm foothold among Quebec's English-speaking voters. An optimistic assessment would put it at about 15 per cent of that group.

Levesque capped the all-day symposium, sponsored by the Committee of Anglophones for Sovereignty-Association, with a promise to do away with the most vexing aspects — for the English — of his government's language legislation once Quebec becomes independent.

He did not specify which aspects of the law he was referring to, but probably had in mind the prohibition against English-language signs for commercial establishments, restrictive criteria for admission to English schools and possibly the requirement for small-and medium-sized firms to use more French internally.

Two groups in particular responded favorably to the speeches by the premier and six cabinet ministers. These were the students and teachers from various English-language educational institutions.

A clue to why these people favor the PQ and its referendum proposal came during the question-and-answer exchanges.

For example, Consumer Affairs Minister Guy Joron was given a warm round of applause after rebutting a critic who challenged the advisability and fairness of using nationalization as an instrument of economic policy or national liberation for Quebec.

Any reply by the ministers to questions dealing with economic management was applauded by part of the audience which obviously felt that the business leadership of Montreal's English-speaking community has outlasted its usefulness and effectiveness.

The teachers present seemed to favor an end to the linguistic and cultural tensions that have gripped Montreal for the last 10 years or so, and showed an eagerness for a period of peace and stability.

These tensions have produced a sizable exodus among the English-speaking populace, with a corresponding drop in school enrolments.

For these and many other English-speaking academics, the federalist option offers no guarantee that harmony will eventually be restored between French and English in Quebec. For many of them, sovereignty-association appears to be more promising in this regard.

They are concerned with the survival of Montreal's English community on which their professional future depends. Teachers in junior colleges and high schools do not have skills in demand in other provinces where enrolments are also dropping. They have a vested interest, therefore, in ending the OttawaQuebec confrontation over the constitution and the province's place in Canada.

FAVOR CHANGE

Anti-business attitudes are more prominent among students, who have little sympathy for the ideals that still prevail in the English community of Montreal.

Apart from a natural desire to come to terms with the French majority in Quebec, there is also a tendency among them to use sovereignty-association as a lever with which to overthrow the establishment and bring about a more rapid rate of social change.

The organizers of the meeting were apparently taken aback at the success of the friendly encounter between the PQ cabinet and English-speaking voters.

However, the committee has been a fringe group in Quebec politics with little influence except within a rather narrow circle of campus radicals. It is led by Henry Milner, a political science teacher at Vanier College in Montreal.

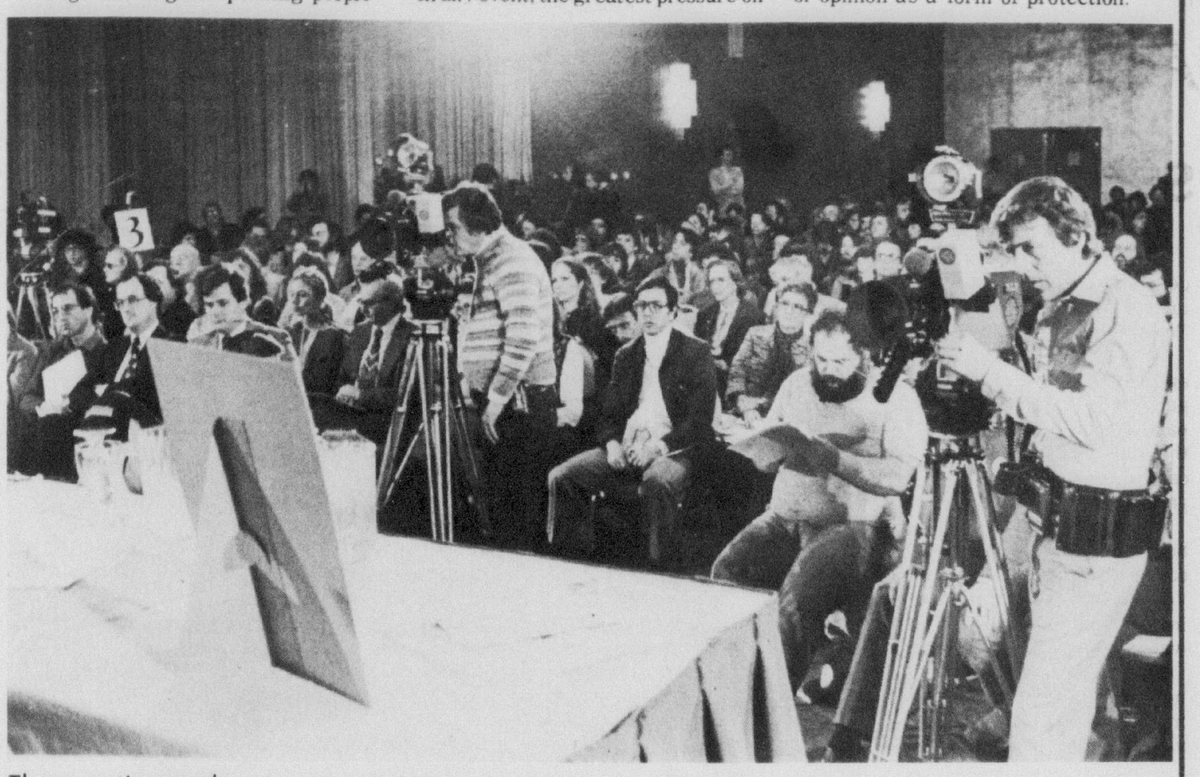

He and others in his group believe sovereignty-association is the thin edge of the wedge that will eventually bring socialism to Quebec. Such expectations are not supported by anything in the Parti Quebecois program.

The committee's credibility has been undermined in the past by its members' refusal to participate in PQ policy conventions and to take an open stand on questions of interest to English-speaking people in the province. Its uncritical acceptance of government policies have seriously limited the movement's expansion.

However, the fact that it has been able to get the premier and six cabinet ministers to participate in an all-day meeting with English-speaking people shows it has the ear of the government. Its influence may spread considerably if it becomes the unofficial agent for the distribution of grants for English language cultural activities in Montreal and elsewhere in the province.

In any event, the greatest pressure on political attitudes now comes from the distinct possibility that the Parti Quebecois may win the referendum.

The English community is becoming worried about being too one-sided in its attitudes and now welcomes diversity of opinion as a form of protection.

The question-and-answer period brought warm applause to several responses offered by PQ ministers.

Referendum'80

Holier than thou

The weekend conference in Montreal sponsored by the Committee of Anglophones for Sovereignty-Association was a most interesting social exercise. It brought together some very diverse elements of English Quebec, elements which, if left to their own devices, would cheerfully have cut each others' throats.

We would not call the day productive. There was very little said of importance, and what was said has been said before. The only hard news to come out of the Sheraton Mount Royal Hotel was from the lips of Premier Levesque, who hinted that freedom of choice in education could be reinstated once Quebec achieved independence.

The premier prefaced his hints by saying it was a commitment, and despite many, many reports to the contrary, Mr. Levesque has never broken a promise. But independence is a pretty high price to pay for the repeal of Bill 101, and he never said the law would be repealed. In other words, it was no big deal and it cost him nothing. All it did was get him headlines to drown out whatever Liberal Leader Claude Ryan was saying to the Italian community.

Otherwise, Sunday's experience was deadening. There was no real dialogue; the ministers spoke, a few questions were posed and the answers tended to be both empty and long-winded. There was something disconcerting about watching so many supposedly intelligent people sitting there applauding the endless anti-federal message without asking even the most basic questions. In truth, the ministers glossed over all the tricky parts of Sov-Ass, and this motley collection of anglophones was even more complacent than a similar meeting would be in even the most heavily pequiste Montreal ridings.

Without getting into a ridiculous name-calling game over who's a traitor and who isn't, we would say the general atmosphere of Sunday's meeting reflects a basic truth in a situation like that engendered by CASA.

The unquestioning fashion in which the majority of the audience accepted the words of the PQ ministers and the SovAss line reflects the individual righteousness of many present.

They were like so many born-again Christians, full of evangelical fervor for the Sov-Ass message with all its contradictions and soft spots. The general message was that the true believers are saved by their faith, even if that faith happens to be blind. And the premier knew so well how to stroke the feelings of vanity and self-importance so prevalent among the crowd, telling them that an anglo vote for SovAss is an act of courage and a vote for the future of Quebec, proof that Quebecers and Quebecois can act in concert.

Yes, the day was a media event. Yes, we contributed to the importance of that event by being there. But the avowed intentions of people like Kevin Drummond and CASA to vote yes are a sign that perhaps the forces of No ought to be calling meetings and inviting speakers as well. A May referendum such as the PQ is now hinting isn't very far off, and let's just say it's looking better for a Yes than it is for a No.

Letters

Editor:

We were distressed to learn from some of our Legion members in the Sherbrooke area that Thursday, March 6th, of the Record on the editorial page, carried a statement that the Legion had asked its members to vote "yes" in the Referendum and then went on to state that we had sent a letter to all members. in order to set the record straight, if this has not already been done, enclosed please find copies of the letter sent to every Legion member in the province of Quebec, which clearly states our position on the issue of the Referendum and it is a most emphatic "No."

We are certain that an honest mistake was made in this case and would hope that a sincere retraction of the erroneous report be made in your paper. Trusting that you will see fit to correct the error and send us a copy of the issue which will set the record straight.

J. McCORMACK
Co-Chairman
Action-Canadian-Unity Committee

The following is an open letter to all the Members of Quebec Command of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Dear Comrades:

"There are crucial moments in the history of peoples as there are in the lives of individuals". This is a direct quotation from the introductory paragraphs of the White Paper on Sovereignty Association "Quebec-Canada: A New Deal" published in November 1979, by the Government of Quebec. The words underline the importance of the question which each of us will be called upon to answer with a simple "yes" or "no" in the coming referendum.

The avowed aim of the Government is to separate Quebec from Canada. To this end Quebecers will be asked to give the Government a mandate to negotiate the terms of the sovereignty association with the rest of Canada spelled out in the White Paper, and thus to take the first step towards its objective. Let there be no mistake, sovereignty association means separation. The words are different but their intent is the same.

The Legion as the representative of those, who, in time of war went to the defence of our Country to protect our rights and liberties, cannot stand idly by and allow events to take their course. Our very raison d'etre obliges us to resist any attempt to tear Canada apart. The Legion therefore vigorously opposes giving the Government the mandate it seeks and calls upon its members to say NO to the question in the coming referendum. This, comrade, will honour the sacrifice of those who are no longer with us.

A majority "yes" vote will not necessarily lead to separation. But we must not deceive ourselves as to the significance which will be attached to such a result. The supporters of independence will look upon it as a victory and as a giant step forward towards separation, and it will encourage them in the pursuit of their objective. We must recognize the gravity of the threat to the unity of our Country and must realize that a "yes" vote will be interpreted by many inside and outside of Quebec as an endorsement of separation.

The Legion opposes the separation of Quebec; but that does not mean that the Legion supports or accepts the status quo. On the contrary the Legion believes that important modifications should be made in the Canadian Constitution. For example, the Quebec Command submitted a brief to the Pepin-Robarts Commission containing the following recommendations:

1. That the Canadian Parliament adopt a new constitution modelled on the British North America Act, including "The Declaration of Human Rights", "The Official Languages Act", and a "Formula for Constitutional Amendment".

Furthermore, Great Britain should simultaneously renounce any jurisdiction over the Canadian constitution;

2. that a more widespread use of French be promoted across Canada. Canadians should have access across Canada to an education in the official language of their choice. The ideal would be for each Canadian to speak both official languages and in this manner be able to live, to work and to feel at home throughout the country;

3. that everyone should have the right to be heard and judged in the courts in the official language of his choice.

But constitutional changes and reforms, particularly those which give to the Provinces autonomy in those fields which are properly within their jurisdiction, can only come about as the result of processes which will necessarily be long and difficult and which will demand the concerted effort and understanding of all Canadians. It is inconceivable that at this crucial moment in the history of Canada Quebecers should withdraw within the boundaries of Quebec.

Quebec is our Province, Canada is our Country. We will abandon neither the one nor the other. Canada belongs to Quebecers and to all Canadians. We inherited a land from our forefathers; we must hold it intact for our children. The Legion therefore asks you to keep Canada together and to oppose any formula which in any way seeks to divide our Country.

When the challenge posed by the referendum has been met we must all work together as Quebecers and Canadians to ensure that our Canada will be a true and living federation.

Carter chief of staff's night life under investigation

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — There's abundant evidence that Jimmy Carter's chief of staff, Hamilton Jordan, and other swingers on the White House staff have attended wild parties that hardly fit the high moral standards set by the Baptist Sunday School teachers in the oval office.

Witnesses have placed the fun-loving Jordan at parties in such widespread places as New York City, Los Angeles, Washington, D.C., and Orlando, Fla. He has been accused of pinching girls, spitting liqueur at them and soliciting their favors.

A special prosecutor, Arthur Christy, has also been assigned to determine whether Jordan partook of drugs at any of these parties. Christy has asked both Jordan and his accusers to submit to lie detector tests. The prosecutor wants the lie tests administered before he starts presenting testimony to a grand jury later this month.

Christy is reportedly focusing his efforts almost entirely on charges that Jordan snorted cocaine at the Studio 54 discotheque in New York City on June 27, 1978. The charges originated with attorneys for Steve Rubell and Ian Schrager, co-owners of the night spot.

Testimony by Rubell and Schrager has been suspected from the start, inasmuch as the accusations against Jordan were made after they had been indicted on income tax evasion charges. They have since pleaded guilty and are serving prison terms.

Their story was supported in part by Barry M Landau, a New York public relations man, who swore that Jordan asked him where he could get some cocaine at Studio 545 on the night in question.

Landau also turned over a cryptic personal memo referring to the incident. The note says, "Ham. 54... C". He told the prosecutor that the "C" was shorthand for cocaine.

Christy and his staff have interrogated Landau on four separate occasions, totalling more than 20 hours. The grilling was often hostile. Christy had Landau draw a map of the Studio 54 premises and show where he and Jordan were standing at the time of the alleged conversation Christy also took Landau to the discotheque to pinpoint the exact location.

The prosecutor reminded Landau several times that the penalty for perjury is a stiff prison term and fine, and then asked whether he wanted to change his story. Christy's tactics convinced Landau that he, not Jordan, is the target of the investigation.

Sources close to the investigation have told my associate Gary Cohn that Landau, nevertheless, has struck to his story.

Some sources say that Christy is not pursuing allegations that Jordan also used cocaine at a Beverley Hills party in October, 1977. The White House chief of staff has not been accused of specific drug use at Washington and Orlando parties. He has vigorously denied using illegal drugs.

The White House is understandably alarmed at the potential for embarrassment from the grand jury investigation. In addition to Jordan, Carter's campaign director Tim Kraft and fund-raiser Evan Dobelle are expected to be called before the grand jury to tell what they know about the Studio 54 party. They allegedly were present.

The prospect of Carter intimates being hauled before a grand jury is discomfiting enough in the middle of the re-election campaign. After all, it's not as if this were the first drug-related scandal in the Carter inner circle.

Dr. Peter Bourne was forced to resign as the president's drug adviser in July, 1978 — a month after the Studio 54 bash — for writing a phony prescription for a White House aide. I reported that he had snorted cocaine at a party thrown by NORML, the marijuana-legalization lobby. And when he resigned, Bourne stated that other White House aides used both marijuana and cocaine.

Footnote: Christy refused to discuss his investigation. Jordan failed to return our calls, and his lawyer refused comment.

KENNEDY PROBE — While its Abscam and Brilab scandals have been making headlines, the FBI is quietly digging into another explosive assignment — the assassination of President John Kennedy.

The House Assassination Committee turned over to the bureau its findings that Kennedy was probably killed as the result of a conspiracy, contrary to the conclusion of the Warren Commission 16 years ago.

FBI agents have been talking to former committee aides, seeking guidance for use of the committee files in the National Archives. Agents have also asked the authors of some of the committee studies for the location of documents cited in footnotes.

And the bureau has consulted the Central Intelligence Agency on ways of retesting the controversial acoustical evidence suggesting that a fourth shot was fired at Kennedy that day in Dallas.

WATCH ON WASTE — Jimmy Carter's budget-cutting scissors prove strangely dull when they go after his old military service — nuclear submarines. He has asked Congress for $2.6 million to fix up a berth at the Washington Navy Yard for the Nautilus, the nation's first nuclear sub — even though the city fathers of Groton, Conn., where the Nautilus was built, have offered the historic sub retirement quarters at no cost to the taxpayers.

Footnote: The bloated federal budget, according to most economists, is the biggest cause of inflation. Help control it by sending examples of government extravagance to Jack Anderson's Watch on Waste — P.O. Box 2300, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Nanaimo boom slow coming

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — Like embarrassed guests who arrive early and find their hostess still soaking in the bathtub, the national department stores have landed with a thud on Nanaimo's doorstep.

This Vancouver Island community of 44,400 is confidently looking forward to an economic boom that will bring free-spending workers flocking into shops and malls. The trouble is that the shopping malls arrived well before the boom.

Already the city has 16 square feet of retail space per person, four times the national average. And two more major shopping centres are coming.

Local market analysts calculate, on the basis that stores nationally need annual sales of $380 a square foot to break even, that a Nanaimo family of four will have to spend $19,200 a year in the stores for everyone to avoid losses. That spending would be over and above the family's expenditure on rent, fuel, insurance and similar costs.

FEELING PINCH

City statistics show more than 2.2 million square feet of existing, planned or proposed shopping-centre space. That total, which excludes independent stores represents more than 50 square feet for each city resident and more than 35 for the 61,900 in the primary trading area.

Advertising salesmen who have to pry money out of the older downtown merchants report that "local merchants don't have two cents to rub together."

At least one bank branch manager is tightening credit, guarding against a possible epidemic of small-business failures.

In an interview, Mayor Frank Ney said the rush of shoppingcentre developers was clearly "overkill."

City council debated whether to delay some projects but decided on a 5-to-4 vote to welcome everyone and let the free market sort things out.

Ney, who voted with the minority, said the smaller stores are his concern since "the big majors will survive."

The mayor, however, emphatically refuses to take an "I told you so" attitude. "Now that the decision has been made, I don't want to look at things negatively," he said. "I want to look at things positively."

FUTURE PROMISING

And, he continued, there is plenty of room in Nanaimo for positive thinking.

The city, indeed, has a broad base of existing and potential economic activity:

—A pulp mill provides a $30-million annual payroll, with many workers getting $24,000. Several sawmills are operating and large new forest-products plants are scheduled to accompany development of the Duke Point harbor and industrial park.

—Some 400 commercial fishermen are enjoying high revenues. The marine-oriented city, which has one boat for every three people, welcomed a new fish processing plant in 1979 and will get another this year.

—Massive coal developments in the interior of Vancouver Island should provide an economic boost later this decade.

—Nanaimo's role as a port is expected to mushroom as Duke Point is developed and as facilities across the strait in Vancouver become jammed.

Aggressive investor stresses gains not risk

Choosing between aggressive and defensive posturing is a necessary first step toward a sound investment career, says a Toronto investment firm.

Canadian Business Service says an aggressive investor is one who will stress gains even to the point where he risks losing part of his capital. A defensive investor, on the other hand, will emphasize preserving capital, even at the cost of foregoing easy gains.

Assessing stocks can be tricky, however, because most won't fall neatly into one camp or the other, the firm says.

In a recent report, it defined nine areas an investor can look for in a stock to determine whether it is the right investment for him.

They are quality and risk, volatility, margin and leverage, liquidity, seniority, maturity, location, industry patterns and diversification.

—Quality and risk: Generally, the higher the quality of the stock, the lower the risk and therefore the more defensive.

CAN BE MISLEADING

But the quality and risk factor alone can be misleading, Canadian Business Service says. For example, high-quality firms involved in speculative activity such as resource exploration may be more aggressive than stable firms which are rated average.

—Volatility: It's simple to judge by volatility, though. The more volatile a security is, the more aggressive it is, the firm says.

—Margin and leverage: Buying stocks on margin — that is, with borrowed funds — is more aggressive than buying them outright. And buying into a company that is highly leveraged — one that has a huge long-term debt, for example — is a more aggressive investment than one with fewer fixed obligations.

—Liquidity: A security with a high degree of liquidity is one that is easily cashable or actively traded. This factor is of growing importance because of inflation, the investment firm says.

COULD BE RISKY

—Location: Other things being equal, foreign investments are more aggressive than domestic ones. "Foreign securites are influenced by all sorts of factors that never make it into local newspapers," Canadian Business Service says.

—Industry patterns: Utility, financial and consumer products companies usually tend to be more defensive than resource and manufacturing companies, for example, which are affected by cyclical factors.

—Diversification: A more diversified company is generally less aggressive than one that concentrates in a single area, the investment firm says. But watch out for companies that diversify into a variety of risky areas.

But Canadian Business Service warns that trying to rate a stock on a scale for each of these nine factors could induce a false sense of security.

It recommends that investors determine how aggressive or defensive they want to be over the years and weigh the nine factors constantly to be aware of any changes in them.

Bedford discusses immersion

School news

Third grade parents and their children will decide on whether or not the District of Bedford School Board will offer an immersion course in French next year. The course requested by the District Parents Committee for grades 4, 5 and 6 as part of an over-all improvement in French instruction will be 80 per cent French (total immersion) and held in one central location: either in Granby or Knowlton.

The school board will consult these parents in four meetings throughout the district, each meeting be the responsibility of the local school's principal. The meeting at Knowlton Academy will be on March 27, at Heroes' Memorial on March 26, and at Parkview in Granby on March 31. Meeting has already been held at Butler Elementary for Clarenceville, Stanbridge East, Farnham last night. All meetings will be held at 8 p.m. The meetings are open to the public, especially those who may have opted for French immersion in other schools, but are still eligible to attend a District of Bedford School.

District of Bedford parents committee chairman Brian Timmins urges all interested parents and taxpayers to attend these local meetings. "The future of our English school system will be bleak if we continue to turn out grade school students who cannot communicate in French as well as in English. This proposed immersion program is only a start, but once started it can easily be expanded to meet the need; on the other hand if it dies due to lack of interest, or a confusing presentation, the best alternative for English speaking children may well be the French school system; and I say this having just attended a parents committee meeting at which the school board rejected any significant changes to our present French core program," he said.

The parents committee meeting of March 18, although poorly attended, did concern itself with the proposed French immersion program, as well as new and extremely popular French core program now being used by the Lennoxville school board. The program will not be considered by the District of Bedford in the near future however. Also rejected by the chief administrator was the Townshippers plea for assurance that our English speaking elementary students be functionally bilingual upon graduation. The director general pointed out that it was impossible to guarantee anyone that they would pass any given course, much less French.

The meeting ended on a discussion as to whether or not parents at Knowlton Academy would be told that the central immersion program might be located at their school. The director general said that they should not be told, and that for their own computerized calculations only Parkview in Granby would be revealed as a possible location. The parents did not agree because they felt that many Knowlton and Mansonville parents would decide on immersion only if they did not have to travel excessively. The debate was unresolved, and the meeting adjourned at 10:30 p.m. The next regular meeting of the parents committee April 15 at 8 p.m. at Cowansville (Heroes' Memorial).

Ann Landers

In-law hostility requires insight

Dear Ann Landers: I cried all night out of anger and frustration. It's hard to believe the world has become so cruel and hard-hearted.

My husband and I heard some loud meowing and traced it to the roof of our two-storey garden apartment. It was 7 p.m. and bitter cold -- about 15 degrees. We called the superintendent of the building and asked for a ladder -- said we would do the climbing. Suddenly, he didn't have a ladder. We called the local police. They said it wasn't their job. Next we tried the fire department. "We are supposed to take care of fires. Call the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals." So we did and were told, "It's a bad night. We have only one person here to 'mind the store'."

We tried the two local newspapers. They weren't interested. Finally, out of desperation, we called City Hall. They said, "You gotta be kidding." Ann, this cat had crying kittens on the ground below and was screaming bloody murder for help. What else could we have done? — Joanne In Yonkers

Dear Jo: You could have borrowed a ladder from the fire department and rescued the cat yourselves. Or offered to "mind the store" while the Humane Society person came out and did his duty. Too often people wear themselves out looking for a helping hand when they've got the best one right at the end of their own sleeve.

CONFIDENTIAL to Feeling Better Now That I've Given You a Piece of My Mind: I'm glad I could be of service, but I don't think you should have given me the last piece. You came across as a small-minded, nose-in-the-air bigot with a lot to learn about priorities, values and man's inhumanity to man.

Health

BY LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

He can't build muscles

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 16-year-old male, I'm 5 feet 7 and weigh 140 pounds. About a year ago I went on a barbell exercise program and have been exercising regularly for about an hour on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. My problem is that I cannot build muscle. Also I'm trying to lose some weight and cannot succeed. I thought it might be due to an inadequate diet but I wasn't sure. I eat mostly carbohydrates and I try to eat a correct diet but it doesn't seem to help. Can you give me any advice?

DEAR READER — The two most important aspects of building muscle are the type of exercises and manner in which you do them and the kind of diet that you eat.

You should be able to develop muscles on an exercise program three days a week provided it's properly designed. The right exercises, of course, are strength exercises, which include barbells or any of the other devices available in many health clubs and gymnasiums that you can use to contract the muscles against resistance.

Some enthusiasts do too much exercise when they're trying to grow muscles. Exercise does use calories and the individual who is doing weight training to develop arm muscles and then spends an excessive amount of time running may burn up the calories that he needs to help build the muscles.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. It will give you some helpful information on the types of exercise programs needed and how the diet influences your progress. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Regarding your diet, it should be planned in such a way to give you at least 100 grams of good quality protein a day during the time that you're trying to grow muscles. It also should contain enough calories so that you won't use up that protein simply as fuel. A reasonable amount of the protein ought to be available for new muscle building.

That does not mean that you need a lot of protein supplements or special foods that are sometimes advocated. You can get that amount of good quality protein from lean red meat, poultry or fish. And you can also get a lot of good protein from good fortified skim milk.

I presume that when you say you want to lose weight that you mean you want to get rid of some excess fat that's in places where you don't want it. The calories from that fat can be used as a source of energy. The fat itself can't be converted to protein but since the fat will be used for energy, it spares the protein in your diet, making the protein available for building muscles.

While you're trying to build your muscles if you eat enough calories it's certainly all right for you to develop other exercise programs as well. In fact, I usually favor a well-rounded exercise program that includes strength exercises, flexibility exercises and endurance exercises. That way not only will you develop good muscles but you'll develop a good heart and lungs and a healthy, flexible body.

Handicapped integration successful

MONTREAL (CP) — Diane Brooks, principal of Keith school in suburban LaSalle, is well aware that handicapped students who attend ordinary schools can have a hard time adjusting.

She tells of watching one of her physically handicapped students deal with changing her own diaper.

"At least twice a day, the child wheels her wheelchair into the washroom, flings herself onto the floor, crawls to the toilet and then crawls back again.

"It's a miserable, exhausting procedure, but it doesn't seem to bother her.

"If these children are prepared to make the necessary struggle and adjustment to fit into regular schools, why shouldn't we do everything we can to receive them?"

Keith is one of several Montreal-area schools which recently decided to accept several physically handicapped children previously enrolled in special schools.

IT'S A SUCCESS

Ms. Brooks calls the program at her school a complete success.

Jean Mutter has seen the difference the program has made in her daughter Denise, who has become friendly with Krissy Daunoravicius, 14, a victim of cerebral palsy who cannot talk.

"I've thought a lot about their friendship, and I don't know what it was that drew them together," Mrs. Mutter said.

"At any rate, they're inseparable and I'm very sure the'll be close for the rest of their lives. It's no longer anything to do with Krissy's handicap. It's just a special friendship.

CLSC to hold info meeting

The CLSC Windsor-Richmond invites the Richmond population and that of the surrounding areas to a special information meeting to discuss the plans for setting up a volunteer action committee in Richmond. This will be held on Tuesday, April 1, at 6:30 p.m. at the CLSC Windsor-Richmond, 110 Barlow Street, Richmond.

An audio-visual presentation will be followed by a discussion of the volunteer services that are now offered in the area. There will also be a discussion of the needs and problems that could be solved by this volunteer service. Following this, there will be a presentation of the plan to set up a volunteer action committee in Richmond: its purpose, its tasks, how it will work, the stages to be reached for its implementation. People from the "Carrefour d'Entraide Communautaire de Windsor" will be present to prove that these volunteer actions can be accomplished in this area and that there are personal benefits that derive from this for the volunteers.

The community organizer of the CLSC has met several persons to submit this new project and obtain comments. This committee would promote and co-ordinate the volunteer action in our area, answer certain particular problems such as solitude and isolation, bring moral support to all experiencing difficult times, and also facilitate the home maintenance program for older persons. The CLSC Windsor-Richmond will provide the technical help and the material facilities to this committee.

All persons wanting to obtain more information, please contact Roger Gobeil at the CLSC Windsor-Richmond at 826-3781.

Legion Ladies Aux. Branch 10

SHERBROOKE — On March 17, the Ladies' Aux. Col. J.S. Bourque Branch 10 held their regular monthly meeting in the Legion Hall, conducted by the President, Mrs. Kerr and opened in the usual manner.

The Secretary, Mrs. Distefano, read the minutes of the last general meeting and Exec. meeting, which were approved by all present.

The roll call was read by the Vice-President, Mrs. E. Aube, with ten members responding. Due to the absence of the Treasurer, Mrs. Fuller, her report was read by Wendy Gill with a fair balance on hand.

The President thanked the girls who worked at the St. Patrick's party and served supper, also those who helped decorate for the occasion.

Coming events are as follows: March 29, Roy McNab Memorial Dart Tournament; April 12, Paton Mill Banquet at 6 p.m.; April 14, Ladies' Aux. Exec. meeting; April 21, Ladies' Aux. Gen. meeting; April 23, Bowling Banquet; April 26, Ladies' Aux. Spring Supper, 5 to 7 p.m.; April 28, Senior Branch Gen. meeting; April 29, Bowling Banquet; May 3, Mother's Day dance; May 5, Ladies' Aux. Exec. meeting.

Members are asked to bring in food and items for the food table and fancy work at our spring supper.

Tickets may be purchased at the bar for this supper on April 26.

Due to the weather conditions, there were not many out at this meeting. Members are reminded that workers will be needed and greatly appreciated for helping at some of those functions.

Being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

Next general meeting on April 21st.

ANAF Card Party

LENNOXVILLE (MD) — On March 19, the regular card party was held at the Hut, with twenty-two tables playing. It was nice to see some of the ones who had been sick, able to be back, especially Mayotta Taylor.

First prize won by Helen Jones, score of 6940, second went to Muriel Prescott, score of 6300; Consolation score of 2380 was taken by Doris Gray.

Beth Cullen had her name down five times winning a bid of nine hearts. Fred Walker, Dot McCourt, Mary Majury, Mildred McVetty and Ada Neeley had their names down three times taking a trick with four of spades, so cut cards to see who would win, and Fred Walker was the lucky one.

Door prizes were then drawn, these being looked after by Noel Humphries. The lucky winners were Idell Robinson, Loyola Couture, Helen Jones, Arthur Morin, Ellean Palmer and Beth Cullen. An error in last week's write-up was first prize score of 6520 won by Albert Gray, second won by Howard Neeley, score of 6420.

Another card party will be held on March 26 at 2 p.m.

Would you please see Ruby Berry for food as it takes a lot to feed around ninety people. Ruby thanked those who came and brought food that she had not asked. Also thanks to all who help in any way.

We had been thinking of the Coutures enjoying the sunshine etc. in Florida and then find out they have been home, also in hospital, with pneumonia.

A card was signed for Mrs. Rebecca Chute who also has been in hospital.

She sold her first mobil in 1950 and has worked hard in that medium ever since. Miss Eyre has exhibited in many places in both Canada and the U.S.A. She has received commissions from McGill and St. George's School, as well as from many private individuals.

Pierre Tetreault: Lives in Montreal, but is well known as an artist in the Sutton area. Among his many accomplishments is receiving a Canadian Council Grant, which allowed him to spend two years in Japan, where he studied Lithography. He returned with much interesting work based on Japanese methods and techniques. He has exhibited in Montreal, Sherbrooke, Ottawa, and has recently completed a show in Toronto.

Arts Sutton Gallery is located in the old Ave Maria School, just off Main Street in Sutton.

This was followed by a Lenten Meditation. The reading was from Matt. 6:19-34, which was read in unison. Mrs. MacDonald closed devotion period with prayer.

The roll call was responded to by six members. Minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. J.E. Macdonald, and the Treasurer's report given by Mrs. A.W. Murray, due to the absence of the treasurer. Both were approved.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

South covered West's queen of diamonds with dummy's king. East took his ace and led back the queen of hearts. South's king bit the dust and a heart was returned to East's jack. East played his ace of diamonds. South ruffed but the defense had three tricks in and were still sure of a club trick.

South criticized North's three-spade bid. He asked why North hadn't just taken away all value of his diamond honors. North felt that the game bid was a good one. It would have been a cinch if East had held the ace of hearts instead of West and it was just unfortunate that one club discard on a good diamond hadn't been worth anything.

In all this discussion no one saw that Souh could and should have made the game against all those misfortunes.

All he had to do would be to play a low diamond from dummy at trick one.

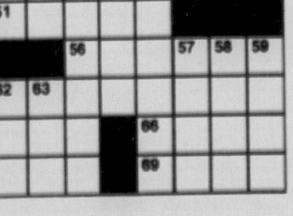

That would have left East right between a rock and a hard place. He could play his ace of diamonds and shift to a heart. The defense could score the first three tricks but then South would get two club discards instead of one, or East could duck. Now South could set up one of dummy's diamonds for a heart discard and would only lose one heart.

CAREER COUNSELOR Dodie Gadient poses at the wheel of the motor home that took her across the country to interview everyone from sailor to sheriff to silversmith.

Trip eases decisions

MESA, Ariz. (NEA) - There are some things you just can't learn from a book.

That's why Dodie Gadient decided that if she was going to be a good career counselor, she ought to get her information firsthand.

So, she set out in her motor home on a six-month journey across the country, stopping along the way to interview loggers, fishermen, merchants and horse trainers.

"I got tired of advising people about careers out of a book," says Miss Gadient, who coordinates on-the-job experiences for students at two local high schools.

"I felt I needed to get out. Instead of reading about oystermen, I wanted to get information from the horse's mouth."

Equipped with camera and tape recorder, she interviewed workers about their occupations. She also probed their lifestyles, their values, their satisfactions and their frustrations.

Miss Gadient stresses that she learned more about the people she interviewed than how they earn their livings.

"People pay a price for fame and success," she says, recalling that she met many people to whom money meant less than happiness.

One of her strongest memories is of a former marketing executive who quit his $65,000-a-year job to live in the small town of Ouray, Colo, where he runs the corner drugstore.

"He found the money was not worth the price he had to pay for his and his family's happiness," she recalls.

Sometimes her visits lasted an afternoon. Sometimes they lasted a few days.

She often carried her interviews into the evening, visiting her subjects and their families at home, over a meal or tea.

"I was getting more perspective on their lives this way," she notes.

In Oregon and Washington she talked to crew members of merchant ships. In Colorado she interviewed a sheriff, a silversmith and a store owner.

In Durango, Colo., Miss Gadient was advised to mount a black horse if she really wanted to find out about cattle ranching.

"I was told, 'If you want to learn about cattle, you've got to get run over by a few,' " she says, laughing.

An experienced rider, she proceeded to help the cattlemen sort younger calves from the herd.

Miss Gadient's travels next took her to Kansas, where she talked to farmers. Then it was on to Saginaw, Mich., to interview an executive responsible for more than 10,000 workers in an assembly plant.

At Chesapeake Bay, Miss Gadient learned how oyster fishermen do their jobs.

And in Kentucky, she interviewed the managers and grooms at two of the state's famous thoroughbred breeding farms. She saw Seattle Slew at Spendthrift Farms and Forego at the John Ward Jr. Farm.

There was another bonus from that part of the trip: She has a standing offer of a job as a groom.

Almost always alone except for a Doberman pinscher that died during her travels, Miss Gadient got to know one occupational group very well. She kept in contact with truckers via her CB.

"A single gal alone is much safer if she runs with the truckers," she says.

Don't let hot water go down the drain

Heating water consumes 20 cents of the average household's energy dollar. Here are some tips for reducing the money going down your drain in the form of hot water.

— Start with your hot-water storage tank. Touch it. If it feels warm, it probably needs more insulation. That alone can cut your energy bill by as much as $20 a year.

Insulation is especially important if your hot-water heater is located in an unheated area of your home. If it is situated in a heated area, the warmth it gives off serves the useful purpose of reducing some of the load on your central heating system; in this case you might benefit from insulating the tank only for the part of the year when you do not need the heat.

The easiest way to insulate your hot-water tank is with one of the kits sold for about $25 at most hardware stores. Take care not to block the air vents; that can be dangerous.

— Also try to insulate the pipes running from your hot-water tank to your faucets. Top priority should go to those passing through unheated areas such as attics and those leading to faucets farthest from the tank.

Check for leaks before insulating heater or pipes. And remember to call the plumber as soon as you notice even a tiny leak. You can seal it temporarily with plastic electrical tape.

— Now check the temperature of the water in your tank. Chances are it is between 140 degrees and 180 degrees.

If you do not have a dishwasher, turn your water heater down to 120 degrees. That is plenty hot for all household uses. The Energy Department says that reducing the temperature setting from 140 to 120 can cut by 18 percent the amount of fuel you use to heat water.

If you do have a dishwasher, set your water heater at 140 degrees. Some dishwashers operate effectively at lower temperatures, however, so you might try turning your heater down a bit more to see how your appliance performs.

— If you will be away from home for some time, you might wish to turn your water heater down or off ("pilot" for gas heaters). It should take no more than two hours for the water to heat up again.

— Have your water-heating system serviced and de-limed annually.

— Ask the service person to show you how to drain a bucket of water from the bottom of your hot-water tank to remove sediment. That build-up can cost fuel by insulating the tank water from the heat source. This process should be repeated twice a year for older heaters and six times a year for newer ones.

— Check each faucet in your home for drips. Have them repaired promptly. One drop of water per second will fill up a bathtub in little more than a day.

Many dripping faucets are the result of a simple carelessness. Remind each member of the family to turn off faucets tightly after use.

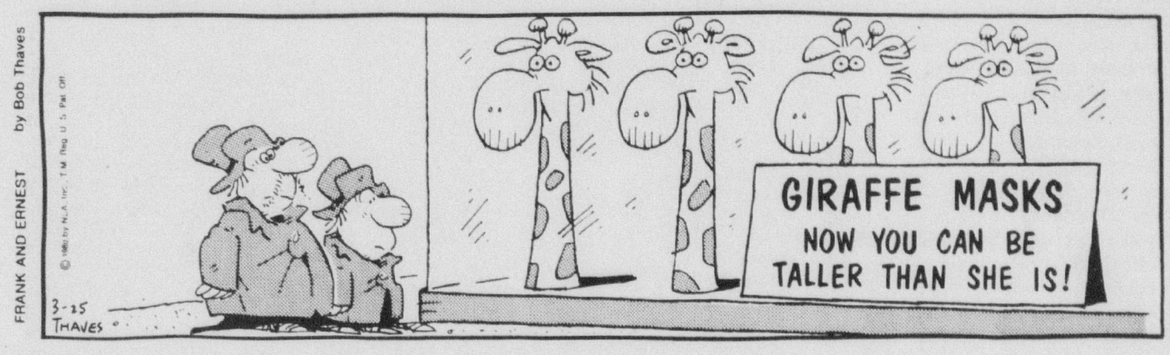

— Consider installing aerators on sink faucets to reduce water flow. Also check into water-restricting shower heads; the Energy Department estimates that the average family could save about $24 a year by reducing the flow of water through the shower head from 8 gallons per minute to 3 gallons per minute.

— You can get extra duty out of that warm water by hanging clothing in the bathroom while showering to steam out wrinkles. If you shower in the bathtub, put in the stopper and allow the water to accumulate; after showering, open the bathroom door and let the water stand, heating and humidifying your home, until it reaches room temperature.

Township artists hold exhibition

SUTTON (KT) — A highly successful exhibition was held at Arts Sutton on March 15 and 16, when the work of Mirielle LeMaitre Morency and Rhonda Cleave-Price was shown with gratifying results for both.

Mirielle LeMaitre Morency lives in Brome, Que., where she has been seriously involved in painting for ten years or more.

She studied under Leon Plomteux in oils for several years and then changed to water colours under Tabbia Plomteux.

Rhonda Cleave-Price, who also lives in Brome, is a former Montrealer. Her studies included Arts courses at McGill and at the School of Art Designs of the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts. She worked as a graphics designer in Montreal and at present is concentrating on pen and ink sketches and water colour paintings. In this exhibition, Rhonda presented some of her series of the Eastern Townships.

World Day of Prayer

DANVILLE (JE) — The World Day of Prayer was held in St. Augustine's Anglican Church, Danville, on Friday, March 7, at 7:30 p.m. Mrs. Marjorie Barlow welcomed the congregation and made announcements at appropriate times throughout the service. Those taking part were Rosemary McCulloch, Myra Whitham (Anglican), Mrs. John Lundeborg (Advent Christian), Janet Element, Miss Julia Goggin (English Catholic), Marion Sutherland, Letty Sonneveld (United), Linda Lodge (Presbyterian), and Huguette Beauchesne, Janine Hamel, and Pauline Pellerin (French Catholic).

A section from the Children-Family service was read by Brian Gillim, Christy Miller, Judith Lundeborg, Janice Element, Lorraine Lodge with Jean Yves Hamel and Julie Perrault reading the French parts. A choir of fourteen children sang four selections under the direction of Mrs. Grace Hyam.

Mr. John Millen acted as organist for the singing of the hymns, "All People that on Earth do Dwell", "Fairest Lord Jesus", and "Praise my Soul, the King of Heaven", parts of which were sung in English, and then in French. During the offering, Mrs. June Lodge sang a solo - "Taneous Angelicus". Miss Moorhead closed the service with the Benediction in both languages.

Refreshments were served to those who had assisted in the service, in the church hall.

Your Birthday

March 26, 1980

You can look for your social circle to expand this coming year as you begin to meet a lot of new people. One word of caution: Before mixing new pals with business, make sure you know all about them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) There isn't anything wrong with your work today, yet nothing you do seems to please you. Because of this you may never complete what you set out to do. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone today isn't as honest as you think about a situation in which you're both involved. Watch out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Pacts or agreements made today have small chance of fulfilling themselves, because either you or others involved may have little intention of keeping promises made.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) So long as confusion abounds, especially in financial areas, don't do anything. Someone could get you to agree on something that's not in your best interests.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could be your own worst enemy today by indulging your slightest whims because you think you're being deprived or neglected. It's not true.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Situations revolving around the family today could be exceptionally confusing and complicated. Make sure you're not the major contributor to the problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Having a defeatist outlook will cause you to see things negatively today. Before you throw in the towel, at least give things a try.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Unrealistic goals could be your undoing today. Make sure you don't confuse what you can afford with what you wish to attain.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have the ability to accomplish your goals today, but it could be difficult to coordinate your plans because you don't believe it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You could lose something you had right at your fingertips because you have a tendency to believe your own daydreams and to be led off the track.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb 19) A lot of needless tension could be created today by being too possessive or jealous concerning some friends. This is not your style.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unfortunately, you could have considerable faith in the wrong person when making an alliance to get a job done. Chances are he or she will let you down.

ALMON JOINS INFIELDERS' BATTLE

By TERRY SCOTT

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (CP) — A shock was the first thing that awaited infielder Bill Almon when he arrived at the spring training camp of Montreal Expos after an off-season National League baseball trade from San Diego Padres.

"I really didn't know the Expos had that many infielders in camp," he said.

"I didn't know their roster that well, so I was surprised to see so many battling for infield spots. But I thought, 'They traded for me, so I'm just going to go out there and play the way I know how and enjoy myself.' "

The release of infielder Jim Mason by the Expos last week appears to have solidified a spot for Almon on the roster, and the 27-year-old resident of Warwick, R.I., is eager to make the most of the opportunity.

"When I first learned of the trade to Montreal, I was ecstatic," said Almon, obtained with outfielder Dan Briggs for second baseman Dave Cash.

"I'd always heard players say they had a feeling of rejection when they were traded, but it wasn't like that for me at all. San Diego wasn't the best place for me careerwise. We weren't contenders, and getting traded to one was more than I'd hoped for."

In his rookie season with the Padres in 1977, Almon batted .261, stole 20 bases and appeared to have a lock on the shortstop position. But the next year he lost the job to Ozzie Smith and became a utility man for most of the last two seasons.

"There weren't any real reasons I was taken out of the lineup," said Almon. "At least they never gave me a sound reason. That was another factor why I wanted to be traded. I felt I wasn't being used properly."

Although Almon would prefer to play his natural shortstop position, he admitted that "I really want to play badly, so I'll play anywhere."

Folk launches quest for Silver Broom

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — After seven years of frustration, Canada got off on the right track Monday in its bid to win the men's world curling championship.

Rick Folk took an easy 7-2 win over defending champion Kristian Soerum of Norway in the opening round.

In the second round Monday night, the Saskatoon skip struggled against Jurg Tanner of Switzerland but came through with clutch shots to win 7-6 for a share of first place in the round-robin portion of the 10-country tournament.

Tanner, 25, aggravated a hip injury in the seventh end and pulled himself out of the game in the eighth. With Switzerland playing short-handed, the Saskatchewan rink came up with two points in the eighth end, thanks to an open draw to the eight-foot circle by Folk, to take a 7-5 lead.

Switzerland got one back in the ninth but ran out of rocks in the 10th.

"We got a little careless in the fifth end, allowing Switzerland to score three points," said Canada's third Ron Mills. "We missed two back-to-back takeouts which put us behind at the time.

"But we got two key points in the sixth end which gave us a 5-4 lead and we played better after that."

Folk, who won the Canadian title earlier this month in Calgary, shares the lead with Italy's Giuseppe Dal Molin and Franz Engler of West Germany, all with 2-0 records.

LAST WON IN 1972

Canada, which last won the Air Canada Silver Broom trophy in 1972 when Orest Meleschuk finished first, stole single points in each of the first three ends on the way to victory over a struggling Norwegian rink in the first round at the Moncton Coliseum.

Soerum couldn't do anything right against Folk, who curled 88 per cent.

Leafs ruin Capitals' bid to move up

TORONTO (CP) — In a game that meant so much to Washington, the Capitals came up with one of their poorer efforts of the National Hockey League season Monday night.

Washington, in a drive for a playoff spot for the first time in its NHL history, entered Maple Leafs Gardens tied with Detroit Red Wings and Vancouver Canucks for 15th over-all spot in the standings.

The final score, 6-1 for the Maple Leafs, actually flattered the Capitals' play. The Leafs roamed at will from the opening minute and except for the brilliant play of goaltender Wayne Stephenson, who faced 45 drives, the score could have reached double digits.

The loss, their seventh consecutive on the road did not get Washington coach Gary Green down.

"We've worked so damn hard to get this far it would seem a shame if we were to flush it all down the toilet," he said. "Right now we're looking at a six-game season and I feel we've got to win four to be able to get into the playoffs."

In the only other NHL game Monday, Larry Patey scored two goals to lead St. Louis Blues to a 7-5 win over Hartford Whalers. The victory allowed St. Louis to remain three points ahead of the Leafs in the fight for 10th spot in the over-all standings and guaranteed the club of a playoff spot for the first time since the 1976-77 season.

Assault on referee

McNeil spurred Rocket on

TORONTO (CP) — Rocket Richard has finally named the culprit behind his celebrated assault on Hugh McLean, a National Hockey League referee, in a New York hotel lobby 25 years ago.

The Rocket, whose firebrand hockey achievements with Montreal were often overshadowed by a reputation for getting into trouble, agreed with referee Red Storey during the weekend that Gerry McNeil, a mild-mannered Canadiens goaltender of that era, was to blame for that incident.

The Hockey Hall of Famer was fined $500 by Clarence Campbell, then president of the National Hockey League, for conduct prejudicial to the sport.

Storey, who made it to the hall of fame as an official, said following a Toronto-Montreal old-timers game that the most explosive scorer in NHL history got undeserved bad press from the incident in which Richard grabbed McLean by the throat.

McNeil and Richard were leaving the hotel to attend Mass when they saw McLean in the lobby. McLean had refereed a game the previous night in Montreal where Richard had served 20 minutes in penalties and paid a $75 fine.

Langway injury not so serious

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens defenceman Rod Langway suffered cartilage damage, but not a broken nose as earlier believed, in a National Hockey League game Saturday against Hartford Whalers, it was announced Monday.

"That's the best news I've heard in a month," coach Claude Ruel said in New York, where Montreal defeated the Rangers 6-1 Sunday.

McLean to leave New Westminster

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Ernie (Punch) McLean, the controversial coach who built a hockey empire but saw it crumble this season after key players were suspended for violence on the ice, is leaving the Western Hockey League's New Westminster Bruins.

"I've worn out my welcome," McLean said Monday. "I will not be in New Westminster next year. We built a dynasty here but it's now time to move on."

Louisville takes NCAA crown

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Darrell Griffith raced to the basket, soared high in the air as the buzzer sounded and pounded the backboard repeatedly with both fists, finishing off his finest moment with typical flare.

"This makes it all worthwhile," said Griffith, the all-American guard whose 23 points and poise down the stretch helped Louisville beat UCLA 59-54 Monday night for the school's first national U.S. college basketball championship.

"This is the one I wanted," he added. "Four years ago, when I came to Louisville, I said that before I leave we would have a championship. Now I feel I've upheld that commitment."

It was a commitment he shared with Denny Crum, who took over as coach of the Cardinals nine years ago. Although his teams won more than 24 games per season and were always highly ranked, they never won the U.S. title.

Louisville scored the last nine points of the game, forced mistakes with pressure defence and held UCLA scoreless for the final 4:32 to overcome a 54-50 deficit.

"We missed shots and turned the ball over at crucial times," said Larry Brown, the first-year coach who brought UCLA back from an 8-6 start to within one game of its 11th national title.

Roger leads Expos past Rangers

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Steve Rogers yielded three hits in six shutout innings as Montreal Expos defeated Texas Rangers 5-1. Rogers aided his own cause when he squeezed home a run with a bunt — something the Expos had problems doing all last season.

Former Expo Tony Perez slugged a three-run, first-inning homer against his former Cincinnati team-mates as Boston Red Sox took a 12-8 slugfest from the Reds.

In other Grapefruit League games Monday, New York Mets downed Minnesota Twins 6-4, Pittsburgh Pirates doubled Toronto Blue Jays 6-3, Baltimore Orioles dumped Kansas City Royals 6-3, New York Yankees edged Atlanta Braves 3-2, Seattle Mariners defeated Milwaukee Brewers 9-5, Chicago Cubs nipped San Diego Padres 6-5, Cleveland Indians turned back California Angels 6-2, San Diego Padres rallied to defeat Oakland A's 3-2 and Chicago White Sox trimmed St. Louis Cardinals 5-1.

SKELETON AND COMPUTER make an unlikely teaching team for medical students at Indiana's University of Evansville. The computer poses questions that students answer by typing at video terminal keyboards. Correct responses win the computer's praise, while errors bring on some constructive criticism. "Don't you know your footbone from your skull? Come on, Mary Anne, you can do better than that, " is a typical scolding from the IBM computer.
