NEW DELHI (AFP) — At least 26 students, half of them girls, and a school principal were killed in Kabul this week in a fresh uprising against the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan, travellers arriving here from the Afghan capital said today. The violent incidents from Sunday to Tuesday were the worst in Kabul since a Feb. 21-22 mass uprising against the Russians. A traveller, who said he witnessed the scene, said the Afghan army used M1-22 gunships to quell the uprising led by school and university students and supported by a section of Khalqis — supporters of the Communist party's Khalq faction — who are opposed to Afghan President Babrak Karmal.

The traveller, who asked not to be named, said at least 3,000 to 5,000 students took part in the street demonstrations.

Trouble started when one group of students, half of them girls, marched through the Kabul streets jeering at the Soviet and East European dignitaries who had come to attend the anniversary of the April revolution.

Trudeau: Gallon going up 12.5 cents

OTTAWA (CP) — Motorists could face gasoline price increases of about 2.75 cents a litre (12.5 cents a gallon) by the end of the year.

"It will depend on the price we negotiate with the producing provinces," Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday.

But he reiterated the government's promise to keep oil price increases this year below $4 a barrel, an increase of no more than 3.5 cents a litre (16 cents a gallon). The price of gasoline has already gone up about 0.75 cents a litre (3.5 cents a gallon) this year, which suggests that increases for the rest of 1980 will be no more than 2.75 cents a litre (12.5 cents a gallon). However, Trudeau refused to rule out the possibility of even higher increases during the next three years, including steep increases in the gasoline excise tax. His comments were bitterly denounced by opposition party leaders who charged the Liberals had abandoned an important election promise — not to increase the excise tax as the Progressive Conservative government had proposed in the budget which led to its defeat in December in Parliament and the Feb. 18 election which returned the Liberals to power. INCREASES LOOMING? Opposition Leader Joe Clark said in an interview there are major price increases for petroleum products on the horizon despite Liberal party posturing during the election campaign. "There was clearly an attempt to mislead Canadians during the election campaign," the former prime minister said.

St. Francois Nos rally

By NELSON WYATT LENNOXVILLE — Stand up and be counted — that's the message that came out of an enthusiastic rally last night here in support of the No option in the current sovereignty association campaign.

Six speakers from the local, provincial and federal levels, along with about 400 townsfolk, turned out for over two hours to thump the tub for national unity and spurn the idea presented by the Parti Quebecois and the Yes forces for a Quebec that is politically sovereign but economically tied to the rest of the country.

The evening probably was also an enrolment booster for Bishop's University as three of the keynote speakers were alumni of the local educational institution. Among those on the dais were Peter Blaikie, the national vice-president of the Progressive Conservative party; Reed Scowen, MNA for Notre Dame de Grace; Cowansville lawyer Peter Turner; Monique Gagnon-Tremblay, president of the St. Francois No Committee; Bruno Serge Boucher, president of the local No Committee Youth section; Sherbrooke MP Irene Pelletier; Baba Cowans, president of the Lennoxville No Committee and moderator Louise Robic.

The six speakers spoke on alleged deception by the Parti Quebecois in the presentation of their option through the question on the referendum ballot and how the actual goal of the Yes forces was to start the ball rolling for the eventual breakup of Canada. Scowen, a former member of the Pepin Roberts Task Force on Canadian unity, knocked those that contended that voting yes would put Quebec in a more powerful position with the rest of the country. "Being powerful is like being a lady," Scowen mocked. "If you have to say that you are one, you aren't." He, like No Committee leader Claude Ryan, disassociated himself from statements that described the PQ as a racist organization, instead summing them up as an "intolerant, ethnocentric and cynical organization. Scowen charged that the Pequistes had alienated the elderly and the women of the province — through Status of Women minister Lise Payette's remarks that the province's female population who didn't vote yes were uninformed domestics — and had adopted a cynical stance by wrapping themselves in the fleur de lis flag and asserting that anyone who opposed them was a traitor.

Vote for No means change, too — Ryan

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Ryan says political leaders outside Quebec would risk breaking up the country if they interpreted a no vote in the referendum as a vote against constitutional change. The Quebec Liberal leader said in a CBC television interview Wednesday that a no vote would mean not only to the Parti Quebecois proposal of sovereignty-association.

"If the rest of Canada could be foolish enough to imagine that ... we are saying no to any kind of constitutional change, they would do so at their own peril and at the peril of our country.

But Ryan added he would not interpret a no vote as an endorsement of his own party's constitutional proposals, a wide-ranging series of reforms outlined in the so-called beige paper. Supporters of the no side include people from all political parties, he said. Earlier in the day, Ryan said he would be willing to change some of his party's proposals if it could be shown they were unacceptable to most Quebecers. He did not elaborate.

Both Premier Rene Levesque and Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau criticized a suggestion Ryan made Tuesday that a federal-provincial agency be set up to collect Quebec income taxes for both levels of government.

Levesque said Ryan's idea would strip the Quebec government of its fiscal flexibility.

Although Ryan said the idea was not part of his campaign for the May 20 referendum, Parizeau took the opportunity to say the proposal would render Quebec ungovernable and that it was the most extraordinary suggestion by a Quebec politician since the Second World War.

A Gallup poll spokesman denied Wednesday an accusation by Quebec Premier Rene Levesque that the poll organization manipulated a public opinion survey on sovereignty-association.

Clara Hatton, vice-president and research director, said the Gallup "tries its damndest" to put the questions fairly and conducts a pre-test to doublecheck the wording. Levesque was complaining Wednesday about a Gallup poll that indicated a majority of Canadians outside Quebec would refuse to negotiate sovereignty-association if there was a yes vote in the May 20 referendum.

Referendum '80

19 DAYS TO GO

...mock budget in the works

MONTREAL (CP) — Strategists for the no side in the May 20 referendum are preparing a speculative budget for Quebec's first year as an independent state, a federalist campaign planner says.

Some observers consider that Parti Quebecois strategists blundered on the eve of the 1973 provincial election when they published a controversial hypothetical budget for the first year of independence.

Yamaska towns to sign river cleanup protocols

By MERRITT CLIFTON

FARNHAM — Sewage treatment agreements have been reached with five more Yamaska River communities, Claude Vallee of the Service de la Protection de l'environnement announced last night. St. Hyacinthe will sign a protocol worth about $20.5 million on Monday.

At the same time, Cowansville will adopt a protocol worth $5.5 million. Farnham's sewage treatment project will cost $4.5 million, Bromont's $1.2 million, and St. Rosalie's approximately $750,000. Quebec will pay 90 per cent of the costs for all five plants, while the communities will each pick up 10 per cent.

Spearheading the provincial river cleanup project, Vallee visited Farnham in response to the Front de Depollution de Yamaska's seven-point list of demands. The FDY's demands were issued March 21 at the height of a three-week stretch without drinkable tap water. They called for faster action on sewage treatment and river cleanup plans.

Fifty local environmentalists questioned and often challenged Vallee for nearly three hours. At one point, Vallee called for a glass of water. FDY member Jacqueline Chabot brought him water in a silver pitcher while others in the audience warned him not to drink it if it came from the Yamaska.

"The solution to Yamaska pollution cannot be purely technical," Vallee cautioned, "with water purification plants here, there and everywhere." He pointed out that the present generation of filtration plants, built from 15 to 25 years ago, all pump the screened out wastes right back into the Yamaska. Thus, "the clean water our new sewage treatment plants discharged will still be contaminated."

Vallee said alternative disposal systems are under study. "Technical fixes are not progress, merely stopgaps until we take responsibility." He repeatedly listed the many ways every Yamaska basin resident contributes to pollution, both at home and on the job.

In reaching sewage treatment agreements, Vallee suggested the government has "already most of what we can do. Not much can be done right now to reduce agricultural pollution," he believes, "most of which comes from fertilizer runoff." Some farmers, however, still dump manure directly into the river, and Vallee promised intensified efforts to catch them.

"Eighty-seven industrial plants pollute the Yamaska," Vallee added. Coronet Carpet was fined $5,000 for dumping 3,000 gallons of latex into the river last July.

"But we cannot crack down on just one industry," Vallee continued. Textile plants must modernize their waste disposal systems."

Dozens of textile factories still discharge dyes and fibres directly into the Yamaska. Acetone from a textile plant in Granby is blamed for causing the March pollution incident.

"Divided sewer systems are necessary," Vallee went on, "so that industrial wastes can be treated appropriately without overburdening septic facilities."

First on the scene

Lennoxville police were quick on the scene of an accident at the intersection of routes 143 and 147 south of Lennoxville last night. An unidentified pedestrian was struck by a car shortly before midnight and the cruiser answering the call had the victim's leg splinted by the time the ambulance arrived about 15 minutes later. And for those who worry about how much the local force costs, the Lennoxville men in blue took the opportunity to ask the ambulance drivers for a few blankets to replace those they've wrapped around hospital-bound patients in the past.

Arab gunmen free BBC London producer

LONDON (AP) — Arab gunmen holding the Iranian Embassy in London freed one of their non-Iranian hostages today, but still threatened to kill their 16 Iranian captives unless their demands are met. However, a deadline came and went and there was no word the threat was carried out.

The freed hostage was Chris Cramer, 32, a British Broadcasting Corp. producer who was applying for a visa when the embassy was taken over. Cramer, hunched over as though in pain, was led from the embassy by two policemen and taken to a hospital.

The three gunmen said they would blow up the embassy, themselves and all Iranians among their 20 hostages unless Iran's revolutionary regime freed 91 Arabs imprisoned in Khuzestan, Iran's oil province on the Iraqi border, by noon today (7 a.m. EDT).

Iranian Foreign Minister

Sadegh Ghotbzadeh told the gunmen by telephone that Iran would not meet their demands and that the 91 Arabs would be executed if the embassy staff came to any harm, the official reported.

MAY BE MORE

In addition to Cramer, the non-Iranian captives in the embassy included two other Britons and a Lebanese. But Iranian news agency Pars reported.

The gunman said in a telephone statement that the "British hostages, as well as all other non-Iranian hostages, would not be harmed."

This raised the possibility that more than four non-Iranians were in the embassy just before noon Wednesday when the three Arabs slipped in a back door and took over the mansion on a fashionable residential street a block from Hyde Park.

Cramer said Wednesday that in addition to the prisoner release, the Arabs demanded autonomy for oil-rich Khuzestan, where Arabs are the majority.

Hostages move to south Iran

TEHRAN (CP) — More of the U.S. hostages were reported transferred out of Tehran, this time to southern Iran, as part of the militants' continuing effort to foil another U.S. rescue attempt.

And in Hong Kong, the news magazine Asiaweek reported today the United States told Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh in advance that it was planning a mission to rescue the U.S. hostages in Tehran.

Justice Jean-Louis Pelouin said they could be entered in proof following a larger hearing when he ruled they had been made freely and voluntarily, without duress.

Perron described Bolduc

as visibly shaken during questioning the afternoon of August 5, 1978, at the Chatelaine du Lac motel, a few hundred feet from the scene of the tragedy. Bolduc admitted he owned the 1956 model GMC coach.

He also admitted the left front brake on the unit had jammed the morning of August 4 and was repaired by replacing a booster. He claimed to have examined it again that afternoon to make sure it was ready for the trip to Eastman.

Constable Perron, in reply to a single question by the defence, confirmed Bolduc did not have a manual for the bus when he was questioned on its maintenance.

Trial: Bolduc knew of hand-brake failure

By JOHN McCAGHEY
GRANBY — Gilles Bolduc, owner of the bus which claimed 41 lives two years ago this August, was aware the hand-brake was not in working order. The Crown closed its proof in the trial here yesterday with the testimony of QPF constable Alain Perron who produced two declarations signed by the accused.

Perron told defence lawyer Raynald Frechette Bolduc had not been informed of his rights as it was a routine interview following a highway accident. "We hadn't found the bus at that time," he explained.

Perron reported Bolduc told him he had purchased the bus from Les Autobus Lessard about ten months previously for $12,000 and it had been maintained by his brother-in-law Denis Martel and himself.

He also admitted the left front brake on the unit had jammed the morning of August 4 and was repaired by replacing a booster. He claimed to have examined it again that afternoon to make sure it was ready for the trip to Eastman.

after the purchase. Since several of the moving parts had caught fire, he decided to dismantle the hand-brake until replacement parts arrived. He said he had contacted General Motors on several occasions but had not been able to get the parts. He stated the coach had gone 15,000 miles from the day he bought it and carried insurance for $1 million.

POLICE, HYDRO SEEK WIRE BOMBER

By MERRITT CLIFTON
FARNHAM CENTRE — Police are still looking for the unidentified pilot who knocked down 500 feet of power line Wednesday leaving about 4,000 homes without electricity from 7 a.m. until shortly after 12.

The pilot had just swooped down for his first crop dusting pass at an apple orchard owned by Richard Cote, when his landing gear clipped the wires that serve Brigham, East Farnham, and Cowansville west of St. Joseph street. "I don't know how he kept going," said Cote. Usually, collisions with power lines are instantly fatal.

After recovery and presumable safe landing the pilot filed no report of the incident, nor were there any eyewitnesses. "I didn't actually see it," Cote claimed, "because of course those boys come pretty early, but I was in the kitchen as my radio went dead." Neighbouring farmer Lionel Vachon heard the plane, but saw nothing which would fill a description from.

It said that although no details were provided about the operation being prepared, the message clearly indicated that it would be carried out before May 17.

against the sovereignty association camp on the economic front, saying that repatriating federal tax payments to Quebec would prove more beneficial for the rest of the country because it would bring back $3.6 billion in expenses — about $2,400 per family — along with a return of $10 billion in provincial tax outflow.

Monique Gagnon-Tremblay began the strongest assertion of the night that the Yes committee was more dedicated to outright separation from the rest of the country than a form of economic association. She brought out a parade of quotes from PQ government ministers to back up her claim and a document drawn up by independentist Doris Lussier at a PQ colloque in 1978 that outlined the steps taken by the PQ in the referendum as being the first moves towards eventual sovereignty.

He went on to point out that though Premier Rene Levesque had promised to do away with duplicated services between the provincial and federal levels, he also said he would absorb the 135,000 civil servants currently employed in Quebec by the federal government. "If he's going to eliminate the duplicated services, what's he going to do with all those civil servants?" Scowen asked.

Blaikie denied that he had mentioned the PQ in that part of his speech and said that the Journal de Montreal and some radio stations had taken him out of context.

Blaikie stressed a look to the future in his speech and pointed out that both the anglos and the francophones in the province had evolved considerably in the last 25 years. He said that the economic elite was no longer the domain of the English Quebecer and said that francophones had made great strides in entering into the corporate hierarchies.

Blaikie, co-president of the No Committee in Jacques Cartier riding in Montreal, began his talk by clarifying a statement attributed to him during a speech earlier this week. The Journal de Montreal had him comparing the PQ to the Nazi party while addressing some 1,500 West-island anglophones Tuesday, while in fact, he had discussed a Gazette article that suggested some West Island anglos were concerned about showing their allegiance to the No forces. Blaikie had noted in his address that such fears were the biggest opening day catch from the Yamaska this fishing season — a five pound cast iron stove burner, hooked at Rainville.

Vallee and Iberville MNA Jacques Beausejour had some specific promises and cost figures for the many Farnham residents present. A proposed new filtration system is under study, they reported. This would include building a new city water intake upstream of the Domco industrial park. Present intake is just below the Domco drainpipe. The new intake would be in place by 1981 and a new filtration plant could be built by 1983.

After the meeting, Vallee also had news for the Sherbrooke area. "We are meeting with Magog on May 8, to discuss cleanup there," he stated. "We have solved the pollution problem at Deauville and George Bay. On the Magog River, we have reached agreements with East Angus and Sherbrooke but we have not yet agreed with Sherbrooke on the St. Francis River cleanup. We will be meeting with the St. Francis River villages after May 20."

Vallee granted that neither project would help Farnham this year. "This summer there will be no water left in the river," he said (due to winter drought). Farnham consequently faces another three to six months of trucking water in from the Richelieu.

Meanwhile, Farnham's aqueduct construction plan will cost $50,000 just for new piping. The town would pay about $4,000, and residents will each be assessed about $30 per year.

Vallee finally called for more organizations like the FDY to form, all over Quebec. Such organizations he believes, could help put pressure on lax officials and also help raise environmental consciousness. Master of ceremonies Roch Vaillancourt met Vallee's call by announcing formation of a new FDY chapter in St. Hyacinthe. The FDY has also planned chapters for Brigham and Cowansville, where individual members are already active. Prospective members may call FDY president Rene Dubois at 293-4290.

After the meeting, Vallee also had news for the Sherbrooke area. "We are meeting with Magog on May 8, to discuss cleanup there," he stated. "We have solved the pollution problem at Deauville and George Bay. On the Magog River, we have reached agreements with East Angus and Sherbrooke but we have not yet agreed with Sherbrooke on the St. Francis River cleanup. We will be meeting with the St. Francis River villages after May 20."

Mappin's hit for $100 G's.

SHERBROOKE (CAT) — Robbers escaped unnoticed from Mappin's at the Carrefour de l'Estrie Tuesday night with $100,000 in jewels. Police say they suspect two men broke through the store's back door and managed to silence the burglar alarm. They helped themselves to gold necklaces, bracelets and Seiko watches in the display cases but left the store safe untouched.

So far, the police doesn't have any suspects.

CLSC rejection funded

By CAROLE TREISER

Though the province said thumbs down last week to creating a health and social services clinic (CLSC) in Stanstead, it will give the region's volunteer workers money to help the elderly and the handicapped.

"I haven't been told how much money will be available, but something will be coming," Albert Painchaud, director of the Sherbrooke region Conseil Regional de la sante et services sociaux, said yesterday.

Painchaud, who supported the Stanstead-Rock Island-Beebe citizens' group that lobbied for a CLSC said getting the area's volunteers on the government's roster is a start towards developing CLSC services. "We hope that over a few years the government will increase the amount it is willing to spend in the area, so that we can gradually organize a CLSC."

The director will be in Stanstead tonight to discuss the government allocation with the citizens' group and volunteer workers.

Neither Painchaud nor spokesmen at the Ministry of Social Affairs could give specific reasons why the border region wasn't included in the list of a dozen areas in Quebec which will each be given $60,000 to develop a CLSC. A rejection report is still being formulated.

One Ministry spokesman did say, however, "We have a limited budget and there are areas in the province that are in greater need of a social services centre than Stanstead."

Stanstead has no community services whatsoever, but its residents have access to a centre for the elderly and a hospital in Magog. But as pointed out in the report the Stanstead citizens' group presented to the CRSSS when it asked for a CLSC, residents who don't have cars spend $16 for a taxi ride to Magog or $100 for a trip in an ambulance. The Voyageur bus passes through town just once a day.

Consequently, the group says, residents, especially the young, the elderly, the handicapped and a large number of patients with chronic respiratory and circulatory problems are suffering from the lack of services in the immediate area.

"There are only two doctors in the region and one travelling nurse who stops in once a week," says Jo Defosses, a representative of the group. "It's just not enough."

Apart from medical services, the report says Stanstead's elderly have the same right to in-home care and meals on wheels, as do the elderly in urban centres. Juvenile delinquency, it reports, is rising steadily in this region because there are no youth centres to provide activities for adolescents.

The groups' plea for social services is echoed in the Townships Atlas, published recently by the University of Sherbrooke's geography department. According to the atlas, there is a high concentration of senior citizens and mentally or physically handicapped in the area which doesn't have access to needed facilities.

"We wonder why the government has not looked into this problem," the atlas authors write.

Water plant incomplete after a decade

By MERRITT CLIFTON
COWANSVILLE — "I took a bath at my hotel," a Montreal visitor complains, "and I don't know if I was dirtier before or after. The water came out grey and left a scum on my skin."

Cowansville water is officially safe for drinking and bathing, but restaurants don't serve the traditional pre-meal glass of water. Those requesting water are warned against it. Most large businesses provide water to employees from other sources: bottled water at the Bank of Montreal, for instance, or a special artesian well at Union Carbide. Private citizens often line up to draw drinking water from a natural spring in Sweetburg, preferring clean taste with a high coliform bacteria count over pure but foul tasting tapwater.

10 years after construction started, the Cowansville water treatment plant still isn't performing up to design specifications. "This place was never finished," plant manager Richard Poquette explains. "It would take $3 million to get complete filtration."

Located below the Cowansville reservoir on Desourdy Avenue, the water treatment plant began as part of former mayor Roland Desourdy's scheme to cityfy Brome-Missisquoi. Cowansville's population is now 12,000 and stable, after an abrupt growth-surge under Desourdy. The water treatment plant could hold equipment serving 50,000, Poquette says. "Construction costs so much these days, they were looking ahead 40 or 50 years," he speculates.

The plant at present offers only the most elementary form of water filtration, a battery of two revolving cylinders that sluice incoming Yamaska River water through tight screens to remove large particles. Particles are then washed back into the river through a drain. The rest settles for about a day in a pair of holding tanks, receives chlorination, and without further treatment is pumped to water customers.

"These cylinders cost $60,000 apiece 10 years ago," Poquette declares. "They are made in West Germany. They now cost $300,000 each." Behind the two operating cylinders stand empty bays for three more, that will likely never be needed. Meanwhile Cowansville lacks a sand-filtering system. One sand-tank was constructed, but never used. Two others must be built before it could be used effectively. This sand-filtering system would be a larger version of the filtration unit serving most swimming pools. Pumped current and backwash percolate through alternating layers of clean sand and activated charcoal, removing both foreign matter and micro-organisms.

Cowansville also has postponed indefinitely plans to install a 5,000-volt ozone shock system. The huge room it would occupy stands vacant. "This works just like lightning bolts hitting the water in a natural lake," Poquette describes. "The electricity would burn all of the color out of the water."

Only the chlorine treatment modifies water color now. "The amount of chlorine we add varies depending on the color of the water," Poquette says. "Some days we add a lot and some days not so much. We do not like to use a lot because chlorine is very dangerous stuff. Just one pipe leak," (in the chlorination measuring room), "and we'd be dead if standing anywhere within 10 feet."

While water purification systems are incomplete, Cowansville can pump more than twice as much as the city ever needs. The three main pumps either idle or work at low capacity most of the day, handling an average of 2,400 gallons per minute between them. Only one pump operates at night, unless a fire causes hydrants to be opened. Then the reserve pumps come on, both maintaining adequate water pressure to hoses and filling normal residential needs elsewhere. The pumps are normally powered by electricity. The plant transformer draws a 1,300-volt load, reducing it down to the 550 volts needed. In case of electrical failure, a diesel generator can keep one of the three pumps going.

Present Cowansville water consumption is about 1.25 million gallons per day and present equipment could supply 2 million without strain. 300,000 gallons are held in a 15-foot-deep tank at the water treatment plant itself, 1 million in a secondary storage tank. Normal storage level is 14 feet and at 15 feet, the fill-gates close automatically to prevent flooding.

Water enters the Cowansville mains at 105 pounds of pressure per square inch, dwindling to 60-80 pounds at Union Carbide where tapwater is used in manufacturing. The Cowansville plant also supplies the medium security prison just beyond town. It has about 400 inmates and 300 other people who work there," Poquette believes. "They take a lot of water. Their bill is about $60,000 a year."

Poquette maintains the anti-pollution watch himself by day and at night the plant is unmanned. The control-room alarm system connects with the police station where in event of emergency, the night dispatcher calls Poquette. Cowansville water has been pronounced unfit for human consumption occasionally, as last June following the West Brome train derailment. Ethyl hexanol leaking from a ruptured tank-car and some 13 tons of dead fish kept Cowansville taps off for days.

The water treatment plant also shut down this spring, due to inexplicable frothing at taps. But most Cowansville water pollution is non-toxic.

Only West Brome, with a population of about 200 discharges sewage into the Yamaska above Cowansville. Above Cowansville, the Yamaska receives no industrial discharges although some manure enters from field runoff during April and May. The amount is relatively little compared to the Granby and Adamsville forks.

Cowansville's primary water pollution problem is silting. The city reservoir is an artificial lake. A dam constructed about 13 years ago flooded several square miles of former fields and woodlots, without the clean gravel base of natural lakes. The land was cleared of vegetation that might rot and pollute the water, but without grass and trees to hold the topsoil down, it tends to float up with the current. New silt, meanwhile, arriving constantly from upstream quarries and logging sites, will pile up behind the dam, creating an unwelcome delta. Right now prevailing currents push much of the silt toward the Cowansville beach, to one side of the dam, and toward the city water intake. This shallow harbour area will become a mudflat toward the end of the century if no action is taken.

Silting will be reduced when the current entering the reservoir eats down to bedrock, but because the reservoir occupies what was a lowland swamp following the most recent ice-age, bedrock is deep. Before it emerges, silt backwash might permanently bury it deeper. Natural lakes rarely last long in geological terms, artificial lakes have an average lifespan of about 50 years without frequent dredging.

Itchy fingers

Now that the Iran-U.S. situation has gone from bad to worse, a favorite, if futile exercise of many in both nations has been to imagine ways to retaliate.

In bars from Newport to Key West, American patriots have been heard to suggest nuking the fuzzy-haired bastards, while there's always a wild-eyed crowd outside the American embassy in Tehran screaming for the heads of Carter, the shah and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat for having given him shelter.

The newest scenario calls for an Iranian blockade of the Gulf of Oman. This means oil and that means war. The Soviets are loving every minute of it, gloating as those wild-eyed mullahs tear into satanic America. Any troubles in their interest and they're making sure Fidel Castro, their man in Havana, is jumping in with both feet to offer the services of the non-aligned nations in this great struggle.

We must tread so lightly. Most of us agree the shah was a pig and deserves to die many times over. Some feel the U.S. was remiss in not turning the old gent over to the tender mercies of the revolutionaries; after all, they can only shoot him once. But many feel the Iranians have displayed just how crazy they are with taking and keeping of diplomatic hostages. The concern is well-founded. The precedent is now there and international diplomacy has fallen on dark times.

Nothing shows this better than the resignation of Cyrus Vance. In stepping down Mr. Vance has signalled capitulation of the U.S. detente supporters. Yet Mr. Carter had no real choice, either. The polls which govern America more effectively than any government dictated strong action, and the modern version of Decatur's 19th-century cutting-out expedition in Tripoli harbor was the fastest answer. If it had worked as well as the Germans at Entebbe, the world would have cheered; everyone loves a winner.

But it didn't. Iran and all the other small faces are happy because the Great U.S. had its nose rubbed in it.

Will the U.S. mine Iran's ports? Will Marine commandoes sabotage Iran's oilfields at the risk of permanently alienating her European and Japanese allies? Will Iran put the hostages on trial for spying? Who knows?

Iran is connected to Afghanistan, which borders the Soviet Union, possibly the most imperialistic power of this century. The Russians can afford to play a waiting game, but they just love to meddle, so it's hard to imagine they won't get involved somehow, and sure as God made little apples their catspaw will be Cuba.

If we all had any sense, we'd be out in the hills, building an energy-efficient house and learning how to grow vegetables and raise pigs. War's just an itchy trigger finger away.

Go check

There are glaring errors and omissions in the voters' lists. There is nothing to suggest they were deliberately made, nor is there any proof they weren't. But this is reason enough that every eligible referendum voter amongst us go out to check the list for him or herself.

If we were a government holding a national plebiscite on a subject as touchy as the independence of Quebec, we would take great pains to ensure the accuracy of the voters' list, especially if it was our aim to make that voters' list permanent.

The Levesque government obviously has not taken those pains. The blunders in this latest list are inexcusable, especially when one considers the enumerators were prepared to vouch for the correctness of their lists when they sent them in.

At this late date, the chief returning officer's explanation that proofreading errors are at fault is unacceptable. There are simply too many chances to catch these mistakes over the last six months.

Are they intentional? It's doubtful; the range of error encompasses both political leanings and intentional mistakes would presuppose knowledge of four million voters. Besides, deliberate attempts to sabotage the list would be known to too many people who might be inclined to talk.

But the careless and haphazard way these documents were prepared can only lead one to believe the system has broken down. What assurances are there that polls have not been left out? What guarantees can the chief returning officer give us that corrections will be any better treated than the original entries?

If this is Quebec's much-touted permanent voters' list, we're all in big trouble. Get out there, check your list and make sure every letter is correct. You have until 8 p.m. Saturday and the list of revision offices was in yesterday's Record.

Editor:

For the past year I have had the dubious privilege of serving as the Parent Representative on the Lennoxville District School Board. This period has seen a prolonged discussion between the local school boards and the Eastern Townships Association of Teachers. Although these talks were recently broken off, the E.T.A.T. has rejected both strike and work-to-rule action. During this ongoing difficulty the public has been "informed" by two advertisements placed by the protagonists, numerous articles and an editorial in the Record. Furthermore, the Boards' Joint Negotiating Committee (J.N.C.) has circulated to parents and teachers a document which purports to give an accurate picture of the dispute. As a Parent Representative to the Board and as an observer at the negotiations, I have a different view than most people of this dispute. Several points perhaps need to be stressed.

1) In the discussion of the protocol agreement that went on for over a year the J.N.C. argued that no negotiations were to take place at the expense of the taxpayer (i.e., the teachers were to spend the day in school and then come to the negotiation table in the evenings). When the provincial strike occurred (i.e., the teachers were now paying for their negotiations by not working) and the teachers were available and willing to negotiate locally, the J.N.C. argued that no negotiations could take place until a protocol agreement was signed. Thereby they frittered away an excellent opportunity to negotiate some of the local items. To many teachers this appeared a deliberate waste of time. The J.N.C. would probably reply that to obtain assent from all the boards took time, that the boards' employees (i.e., administrators) had other work which must be looked after, and that the union had not yet submitted a complete set of demands.

2) After the protocol had been signed (each pays half the cost of replacing the teachers released to negotiate) and the Union had deposited its full set of demands, the J.N.C. asked for a caucus session of about 20 hours to study the demands and prepare counter offers. After the resumption of negotiation sessions it was apparent that the J.N.C. did not intend to negotiate certain items under any circumstances. Although the union had indicated a willingness to modify some of its demands, the board refused to soften its position even slightly. At this point the union declared an impasse. Perhaps, from their point of view it was foolish to waste money in negotiations where there was no softening of position on the part of the Boards' negotiators. What is clear to me is that the J.N.C. was stalling. One of the reasons would not doubt be that the Boards felt it was absolutely essential that when they made a reasonable offer it would be accepted. What I fear is happening is that this stalling has led to an increased hardening of opinion among the teachers which will only result in greater inflexibility at any future negotiating sessions. The teachers of the E.T.A.T. are some of the most conservative teachers in the Province and beyond. Thus their vote not to strike and not to work to rule must not be interpreted as a sign of satisfaction with the behaviour of the board. After a lengthy provincial strike most teachers simply cannot afford to strike nor do they apparently want to jeopardize the academic standing of their students at this critical point in the school year.

Before the current situation deteriorates into a complete breakdown in communication which could then spill over into the Autumn, 1980 term, I call upon the Joint Negotiation Committee (i.e., Mrs. Knapp, Board Administrators, et al.) to live up to their responsibility as educators. For the good of the children and the teachers I ask them to demonstrate some flexibility in their counter offers. One year of labor unrest in the schools is surely enough.

I have made my position clear to Mrs. Knapp over the telephone, but I felt that the parents whom I represent should also be publicly informed of the position I have taken.

Clear initiative needed

Editor:

The following is the English translation of a letter, that I wrote to Premier Rene Levesque:

Dear Mr. Premier:

I find it humiliating to have the unpleasant task of writing to you concerning the nomination by the Quebec government of the president, the four vice presidents and the fourteen members of the board of directors of the new Commission de la Sante et de la Securite du travail. In effect, it would seem that all of the persons named to this Commission are French Canadian Quebecers.

It would be only normal and normal that nominations to such a governmental institution reflect the general composition of the population of Quebec. If these nominations would have reflected this composition, at least three or four non-French Canadian Quebecers would have been named to this Commission. Non-French Canadian Quebecers make up almost 20 per cent of the Quebec population and they number about one million people. For many years, these Quebecers have not been adequately represented in Quebec agencies and institutions, including those in the public and parapublic sectors.

It would be desirable for the state to take clear initiatives as well as to set an example to show that all Quebecers are on an equal footing, not only in law, but also, in fact. Non-French Canadian Quebecers are interested in what their government does more than in what members of the government may say from time to time.

A generalized policy that would promote the integration of non-French Canadians into Quebec institutions and agencies would be one of the ways to respect pluralism and have the two solitudes converge, if not blend.

Girls, don't knock it — it's one of the oldest, most valuable professions in the world.

I know. I worked at it for a great many years — interspersed with various other occupations to help stretch out the budget — but listen to this, girls — my husband was always the "head of the house". 44 years of it — If behind his back I manoeuvred some changes, he never knew it. When we were married, I made up my mind, that he would have the best home I could make him, with materials available and we were proud of it, always.

When the children came along, we enjoyed them together — but I never asked him to do any of the "changing"; that was my dept. and I carried through. Feeding time came about the natural way, so no help was required.

We always had time for a little lovemaking — no matter how violent the dispute — and boy we did have them — we never went to bed angry — a kiss goodnight and all was forgiven.

There is a time for everything. If I had advice to offer — marry for love — but be sure it is love — if you can't fear the thought of using his toothbrush (if necessary) — and married life is that intimate at times, then he is not the right one for you.

Have your children while you are young and in love or else could you bear it? — a pack of snotty-nosed, wet-behind, hungry, bawling kids at your heels continually — never a moment to sit for a minute — no TV in my days with soap operas to ease the strain.

But do you know it was all worth it and I feel sorry for the girls who "put off" having a family and choose a career instead, that could have come later when the children were grown and gone, and they were desperately trying to fill their days.

If we are ever going to pull our Canada together again, it has to start here in the home and it better start right now, when the present generation, puts its shoulder to the wheel.

U.S. to withdraw from Europe?

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON -- The popular wisdom in Washington is that the United States must depend on its allies in Western Europe to help achieve American goals -- whether it involves a boycott of the Moscow Olympics or sanctions against Iran.

For this reason, the Pentagon has kept tight security wraps on a potentially explosive strategy report that advocates an almost total U.S. withdrawal from Europe as a move that offers "the best prospects for the future."

What lends the report weight is its authorship by two of the Defense Department's best and brightest -- Adm. Henry Train, head of the U.S. Atlantic Command, and former Deputy Defense Secretary Robert Ellsworth. Train's duties include command of NATO's Southern European naval strike and support forces.

The secret, 35-page report spells out the authors' recommendation that the United States drastically decrease its NATO commitments in the interests of national security. In a nutshell, Train and Ellsworth suggest that our European allies simply cannot be depended upon.

The report is not regarded as a crackpot commentary by any means. Pentagon sources told my associate Dale Van Atta that the report offers "very viable" alternatives to present U.S. policy. How many top Defense Department strategists share the authors' views is not known.

Train and Ellsworth acknowledge that Western Europe has top priority in U.S. defense thinking, over Asia and the Middle East. But they note the difficulties involved in this long-accepted priority.

-- There has been, they report, a steady "decomposition, erosion and destabilization of political will in Europe and of the European defense posture."

-- There will be "continuing congressional and public desire to cut U.S. military presence abroad."

-- There exists "an unhealthy (if unavoidable) dependency by Europe on the U.S. for Europe's military security ... (which) tends to further erode European will."

The authors of the secret report are convinced that the last-named difficulty is the most serious. They note "growing European frustration with having to pay, economically and politically for a security guarantee from the United States."

Train and Ellsworth then argue that "a reallocation of resources and restructured defense of NATO Europe offers the best prospects for the future."

America's long-term strategy, they suggest, should aim for "an autonomous European defense and deterrent capability."

In other words, our best bet would be to force Western Europe to fend for itself, instead of depending on Uncle Sam's protective umbrella.

In terms that might irritate our European allies, the Pentagon report observes that the recommended U.S. pullout "recognizes that the Europeans today are basically irresponsible and impotent in foreign policy and security terms, (and) that their impotence is due in no small measure to their dependency on the U.S. for their military security."

The authors recommend that the United States withdraw all but a "small U.S. force" from Europe, making up for this pullout by a promise of quick military backup in the event of a Soviet attack. This would free the limited American military strength for use elsewhere in the world, encourage a credible European nuclear deterrent -- and, of course, be popular with budget-cutters at home.

The possibility that the Russians would "react aggressively" if the United States pulled out, or that the Western European nations might "run to Moscow," were discounted by Train and Ellsworth as unlikely.

RED TAPE RIGIDITY: While thousands of militant Iranians are allowed to stay in the United States because of their status as students, a 24-year-old Japanese woman is being denied her dream of attending college here because of inflexible government red tape.

Yuko Hori saved up money from her secretarial job in Tokyo to enroll in an American university. Accepted by Ellsworth Community College in Iowa, she changed her mind about going to that school and chose Lake Region College at Devil's Lake, N.D., instead.

An inexperienced official at the 500-student Lake Region College told her that her acceptance by the first school would allow Yuko to complete her studies at Lake Region on a student's status. She was advised to come to the United States on a 90-day tourist visa, enroll at Lake Region and then straighten things out.

But though she was doing well at the North Dakota school, and was popular in the small community, her U.S. college career has been blown away by immigration bureaucrats who ordered her to leave the country when her tourist visa expired. Friends put her in touch with an attorney versed in immigration law, but he holds out scant hope of winning an appeal from the immigration ruling.

Footnote: Lake Region College refunded Yuko's $600 tuition and the money she had spent for room and board.

WATCH ON WASTE: One of the things that infuriates someone who challenges a member of Congress is the cut-rate TV and radio studio available to an incumbent -- with a taxpayer subsidy. A 20-minute videotape sets the congressman back $35, while a five-minute radio spot is $150. Congress appropriated about $550,000 for the studio's services this year.

Job market crisis solution sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress and the Business Council on National Issues have quietly worked out a proposal to establish a joint non-profit agency to head off a job market crisis both parties say is fast approaching.

During months of behind-the-scenes talks, the two organizations have agreed they are willing to collaborate in creation of an agency, a national manpower board, whose prime aim would be advising federal and provincial governments on labor market matters.

They say the labor market crisis is this: At the same time that almost one million Canadians are unemployed, industries across the country are facing severe shortages of skilled workers. The country's schools and government-run manpower programs were failing and needed direction from those who know a lot about the labor market — employers and unions.

PROPOSAL NOT PUBLIC

Neither the labor congress, an Ottawa-based union umbrella representing about 2.3 million workers, nor the business council, a Toronto-based lobby group representing dozens of corporations, have yet announced the proposal publicly, although they have worked out details including an estimated cost of $1.2 million to run the agency in its first year.

The two reasons for keeping the proposal out of the public arena is that provincial governments are being canvassed for reaction and that the congress has yet to get approval for the plan from its rank-and-file membership.

Low hog prices hurt producers

OTTAWA (CP) — Hog producers, already losing between $40 and $50 on every pig they send to market, are wondering whether prices will keep dropping or improve slightly.

Meanwhile, grocery shoppers are enjoying pork prices that are at their lowest level in years and are helping to pull down the cost of beef and poultry.

Thanks to lower meat prices, the increase in food costs now is running about eight per cent a year, below the overall annual inflation rate of 9.4 per cent.

Many farmers see little chance of better prices for at least several months as the current oversupply of hogs in North America is consumed at dinner tables or exported and farmers cut back production.

However, an agriculture department report suggests there may be a small price increase during the summer and fall if there is a cut in production.

The low prices, plus high interest rates and increased operating costs, are putting hog producers in a tight squeeze and many are hoping for an early stabilization payment from the federal government to help tide them over.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan had hoped to announce details of the payment by the end of April but it now appears the earliest the announcement could be made is mid-May. And it could be as late as July.

ADS SHOW PROMISES BC ECONOMIC TURN

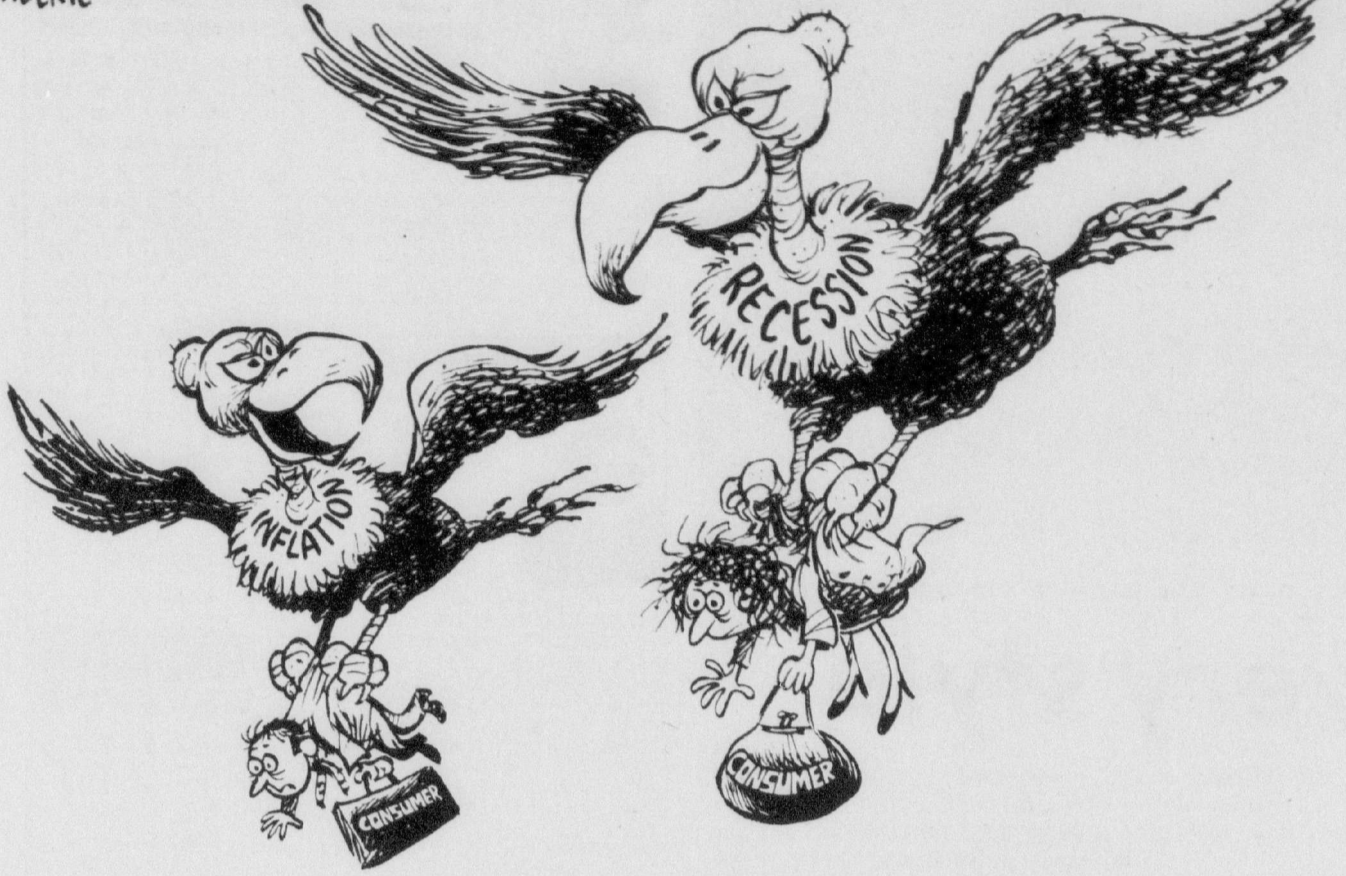

VANCOUVER (CP) — A sharp upturn in the number of career opportunities advertisements in metropolitan Vancouver's daily newspapers is being interpreted by some businessmen as a good indication that British Columbia's economy is buoyant.

Career ads took their usual pre-Christmas dive in mid-December, but now newspaper pages have burgeoned with ads for middle and senior management positions. Management consultants say an increase in hiring at this level is usually a good indication of the strength of the economy.

"Yes, I'd say it's a sign of improvement in the B.C. economy," said Phil Barter, senior partner with Price Waterhouse Associates of Vancouver.

"The career opportunity ads are largely for middle management positions — financial analysts, planners, designers, production engineers — and this would indicate that some expansion plans are being dusted off."

Japan calm despite inflation

TOKYO (CP) — In a world where once-proud economies have been humbled by inflation, ravaged by soaring oil prices and humiliated by high unemployment, Japan seems on the surface to be an island of calm.

Planners confidently expect 4.8 per cent real growth this year, with 4.7-per cent increases in consumer prices and about two-per-cent unemployment.

That performance, only slightly behind last year's, will come despite a lack of resources that is in startling contrast to Canada's resource wealth.

Japan's 115 million people, in fact, rely on imports for 99 per cent of their oil; 66 per cent of timber needs; 96 per cent of wheat; 97 per cent of soybeans; 67 per cent of coal; 99 per cent of iron; 71 per cent of lead; and 91 per cent of copper.

"We have no natural resources, we have only our head," said Ryuko Wada, assistant director of financial affairs for the Keidanren industrial association.

"The Japanese economy, even in the future, will never be well balanced."

PUSH PRODUCTIVITY
In recent interviews, Wada and other economic figures agreed that one key to Japan's economic survival has been a social consensus that productivity increases must keep ahead of wage and other cost rises.

Instead of arguing for hours over how to divide a pie, the Japanese, it seems, would rather spend that time baking more pies.

"You North American and European people have much more interest in income distribution, while we Japanese people are more interested in expanding the economy," Wada said.

Tsuneo Unno, co-ordination director for the government's economic planning agency, said productivity gains last year were 12 per cent, while overall wage increases were between seven and eight per cent.

The result of such attitudes and statistics, Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira said in an interview, is that Japan has no serious domestic cause of inflation.

"Our inflation, whatever we have, is not because of intestinal troubles but just minor scars or lesions on the surface of our body, lesions received from outside."

During the 1970s, Ohira said, Japan's oil costs rose 1,500 per cent but consumer prices increased only 230 per cent in the decade.

There may, however, be a limit to what Japan can absorb.

Last year's sharp oil-price increases, said Unno, have left the country extremely vulnerable to another "oil shock."

If another period of sharp increases comes soon, he said, the government will need to take stimulative measures to prevent recession — but because of heavy budget deficits it has virtually no elbow room for such action.

Burdened by politically-sensitive subsidies to rice growers and the national railway system, the Japanese budget relies on borrowing for an extremely high 40 per cent of revenues.

Its 1979 public debt, Unno said, exceeded the combined total of the United States, Britain, West Germany and France.

Personal income taxes are low — 2.2 per cent a year for a married father of two earning $14,000. And a proposal to increase corporate tax to 42 per cent from 40 was squashed by big-business pressure.

Committed to reducing government deficits, Ohira has also called for "a Japanese-style welfare society" with increased benefits for workers.

And, he said in the interview, he also feels a responsibility to the international economy:

"Since we account for 10 per cent of the world economy, any weakening of the Japanese economy or loss of momentum of the Japanese economic advance would adversely influence the world."

NOW THE GOWER-MOBILE

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto inventor John Gower could become as famous as Henry Ford if his Gower-mobile — a car that will travel 113 kilometres an hour, go 28 kilometres on a litre of gasoline and sell for $3,000 — catches on.

Gower, who helped design the vehicles used by U.S. astronauts on the moon, is back at the drawing board with a car that he hopes to start producing later this year.

The Gower-mobile is a fourpassenger, two-metre-long vehicle that has no springs, shocks or bumpers.

"The tires are the key to the suspension," he says. "The tires will be the suspension. The designed pressure will provide a very smooth ride."

The tires will also serve as bumpers, with spares partially recessed in the nose and trunk.

WEIGHT IS KEY
"The lightness of it is the secret to the mileage," he says. The car will be constructed of tempered steel, glass fibre and various other materials, including graphite.

Consumer protection, make it work for you.

The new Consumer Protection Act is designed to work for you.

Find out about...

- Contracts, what details must be included?
- Warranties, who is responsible for what?
- Car repairs, do you have an estimate?
- Shopping at home, what is your protection?
- Credit, how much will it cost you?
- Leased services, when can they be cancelled?

All of these subjects and more are covered in the consumer guide to the new Consumer Protection Act. It's important that you know your rights and responsibilities.

Every time you make a purchase or agree to a service, both you and the seller accept certain conditions. The new Consumer Protection Act sets out standards and responsibilities covering such transactions. Be sure to look for your copy of the guide in this Friday's Record. Keep it for future reference. It can help you to get full value for your money.

Ann Landers

Ann says don't see girl, age 13

Dear Ann Landers: After so many years of reading your column I never thought I would be writing a letter of my own. But I am in need of help and have faith in what you say.

A year ago I was separated from my wife. The split was her idea. She has no intention of returning to me. We have a four-year-old daughter I miss a lot. When my wife left I was lost and unable to cope with life. I even contemplated suicide. Then I was introduced to a nice girl. She saw how desperate I was and gave me good advice. She even suggested that I fight for my child - something I had never thought of before. Without her I wouldn't have made it through the months of suffering. I love this girl and want her to move in with me. My problem is that I am 27 and she is 13. I know this sounds young, but she is very mature for her age. Her mother knows of me - but not her father.

We both want to tell the world that we love each other. Please give me some advice. — Shorty

Dear Shorty: I don't know what you are short of, but I have a feeling you could be short of an important part of your anatomy if this girl's father ever finds out about you.

My advice is stop seeing her before you get arrested for contributing to the delinquency of a minor, and get some counseling. You sure do need it, Bub.

Dear Ann Landers:

Add me to the list of people who start out saying, "I never thought I'd write to you for advice but here I am". The problem is my husband. He has a habit that is about to drive me nuts.

Barney leaves for work at 11:15 p.m. He's on the late shift at the steel mill. When he walks out the door he says the same dumb thing every night. "So long, Bertie. Go to bed."

Where else does he think I would be going at that hour? Whenever he says it, I feel like kicking him in the shins. How can I get him to break the habit without making a big deal out of it? I'd hate for him to know how he gets to me.

Bugged in Pennsylvania

Dear Bugged:

Instead of trying to get Barney to break the habit, why not have a little fun and reduce the irritability at the same time? Give him a different answer every night - and the wackier the better.

Sample: "Don't be silly, dear. I'm not going to bed - I'm going to the Elks Club and join the boys for a few hours of poker." "Oh, I forgot to tell you, I'm leaving for California tonight. I have a date with Cary Grant."

Dear Ann Landers: We are a group of dedicated people who make our living typesetting for a newspaper. Several times you have made references to mistakes and have blamed us. We are tired of people stopping us on the street and criticizing us for mistakes in the paper. You have helped to perpetuate this fallacy.

Typesetters DO make typographical errors. But people don't realize that after the material is typed it is sent to a proofreader. That person is responsible for finding mistakes and sending it back to the typesetters for correction. The copy should be perfect when it appears in print. (P.S. What fool would put 13 cups of lemon juice in a lemon meringue pie, anyway?) — Tiffed In Springdale, Ark.

Dear Ark: My editor says you are right on. He also says computers are doing most of the typesetting these days, and the typesetter never sees the copy, so mea culpa to you and your unjustly maligned brothers and sisters.

Social notes

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Berickoff of Ottawa, Ont., are happy to announce the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Christine, to Richard C. Henderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Henderson of Blenheim, Ont. The marriage has been arranged to take place in September.

Christening

The christening of Kenneth Wayne, son of Wayne and Jeannie Moulton of Clairmont, Alberta, took place on Sunday, April 27, in the Hatley United Church, with Rev. Douglas Warren officiating.

Following the ceremony, grandparents, Archie and Vivian Moulton of North Hatley entertained at a luncheon for close relatives and friends.

The centerpiece was a lovely christening cake made and decorated by Beatrice Schoolcraft of Ayer's Cliff, a close family friend.

The guests included Madelene McClary of Hatley, Marjorie Rick of Lennoxville, Bill Wyman of Ayer's Cliff, Valerie, Angela and Catherine Locke, of Hatley.

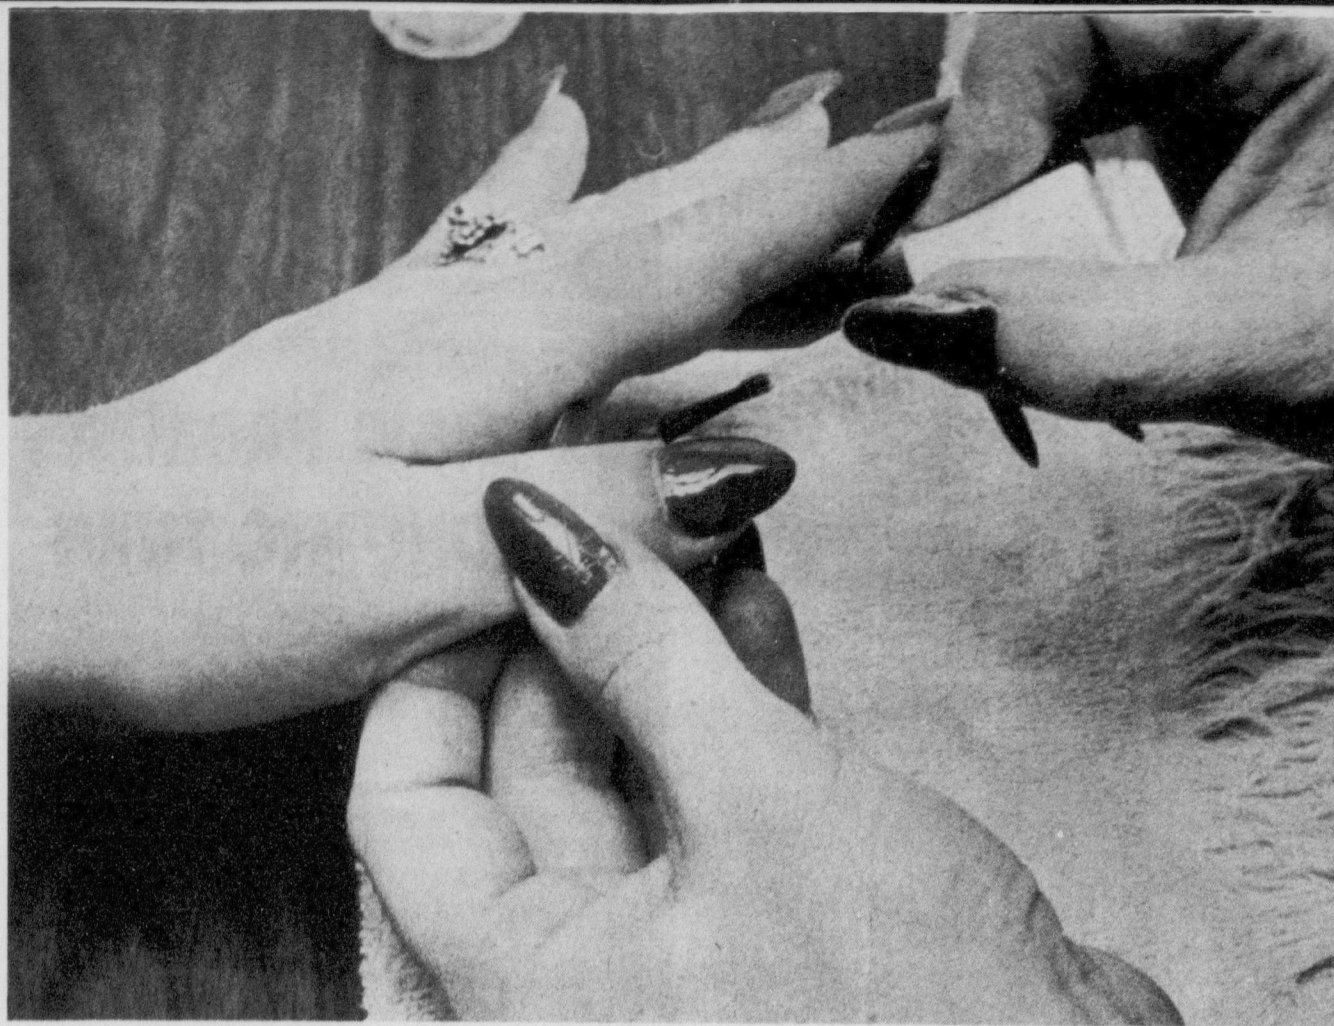

35th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Dustin of Cowansville were given a surprise buffet supper party in honour of their 35th wedding anniversary at the home of their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, in Libbytown.

The Dustins had been guests of their cousins, Frank and Kay Smith, for the day and, with them had attended the sugar on snow party at Clifford Curtis' sugarbush. Upon their return they discovered that Frank and Kay's family had arrived from Brossard, Georgeville and Sherbrooke bringing with them delicious food including a wedding cake shaped as the number 35.

Gladys Smith and Randolph Dustin were married on April 21, 1945, at St. James' Anglican Church, Hatley, by the Rev. Belford. Their attendants were the late Elsie Smith, sister of the bride, and Frank Smith. Thus it is fitting that they should have celebrated their 35th anniversary at Frank's home and that the party should have been given by the Smith family, namely: Ruby Smith Buelow and fiancée, Michael Crooks, Brossard; Russell Smith and fiancée, Chantal Prefontaine, Sherbrooke; and Cecil Smith of this place. Other guests were Alvin Smith, Lloyd and Barbara Smith and Bruce Burrows.

Gladys and Randolph both have many friends in their community who extend best wishes to them.

Although they take a bit of getting used to, Louise's nails are popular among young and old.

Nails for every style

By PAT TRACY

LENOXVILLE — Nail biters, rejoice. Say farewell to those terrible tasting liquids and the cotton gloves designed to stop the habit. Louise of the Nail Shop will come to your rescue with long, luxurious nails with a minimum of fuss and bother.

In less than two hours, Louise can convert short, ragged, split nails to a custom length with the help of her own special paste and a little fancy handiwork. The material is so hard that even the strongest teeth can't bite through it. And, because she uses a different formula than conventional nail makers, the new nails do not need polish.

The shop has been located in Louise's Belvidere Street apartment for the past two months, but she hopes to move into a bigger location by early May.

Customers range from 16-year-old students to a 72-year-old woman who "just wanted to do something special for herself".

Surprisingly, most of her customers are not affluent women wanting long nails, but nail biters. Some of her customers are men. Often, the biters only want the nails until theirs grow out.

"When they find how long their own nails are," says Louise, "They are less tempted to bite them."

Contrary to popular thought, the process is quick and painless. A liquid is applied to the natural nail to act as a cement and mixer for the paste. Acrylic powder goes on next and it is mixed and molded over a form at the end of the nail. This process is repeated until all ten nails dry.

After the form is removed, the new nail is smoothed and filed to the desired shape and length. Polish is extra.

Nothing good lasts forever and the false nails grow out after a few weeks. A quick trip back to the Nail Shop and $10. Later, they are as good as new. There are breaks for the customer - for every new customer they bring in, Louise offers a free filling.

Although Louise has had no formal training in the nail-making business, she sat and watched for seven years as a manicurist pasted and filed her nails. After deciding it wasn't that difficult, she practiced on herself and her willing friends until she had perfected the art. She works quickly and, with the help of a machine, even pushing back damaged cuticles is painless.

The Nail Shop is located at 69 Belvidere in Lennoxville, but an appointment must be made by calling 565-0916.

PIPING HOT DELICIOUS BREAD MADE FROM BEER! Can you think of anything nicer? Here's a great recipe for a simple, no fuss, no bother, loaf of bread. BEER BREAD: 3 cups self-raising flour, 1 tbsp. sugar, 12oz beer, 1 egg white, 2 tbsp. sesame seeds. Pre-heat oven to 350. Butter 9 x 5 loaf pan. Combine flour & sugar, stir in beer; batter will be very thick. Spoon batter into pan and place in oven. After 30 minutes brush with egg white and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Total cooking time 65-70 minutes.

SPRING HAS FINALLY ARRIVED so you can put away your snow shovels and get out your gardening tools. But while gardening is a lot more enjoyable than shovelling snow, it can be just as tiring. Obituary
MRS. ALFRED H. WADE of St. Armand
On Wednesday, April 16, 1980, the death of Mrs. Alfred Wade (nee Mildred Seale) occurred at the Chase Home in Mystic where she had been a patient for the past three weeks. During the past few years she had been hospitalized several times, having been a patient in the Brome-Missisquoi Hospital since January 4, until going to the Chase Home in March. Mrs. Wade was the only daughter of the late Albert Seale and his wife Fernore Shonyo of Granby. On August 16, 1922, she was married to Alfred H. Wade who predeceased her on September 25, 1966. They resided in Granby until 1947, when they moved to Verdun, residing there until 1959, when they came to St. Armand. She was a faithful member of the Philipsburg United Church and the United Church Women, never missing a Service or meeting while health permitted, ever ready to help in all phases of church work, until, due to ill health which she bore with supreme courage during the past years, she had to relinquish many of her activities. Left to mourn her passing are her son Gordon S. Wade of St. Armand, daughter-in-law, Barbara and a grandson, Peter, three brothers, Luttrell Seale of Bruce Crossing, Michigan, Douglas Seale of St. Lambert and Lawrence Seale of Bernardino, California. The funeral service was held from the Dion Funeral Home in Bedford to the Philipsburg United Church on Saturday, April 19 at 2 p.m. with Rev. Keith Eddy officiating. Two favourite hymns of the deceased were sung, "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind", and "The Lord is my Shepherd", with Mrs. E.H. Naylor as organist. Burial took place in the Pinewood Cemetery in Granby, beside her parents and husband. Friends and relatives attending were from Michigan, Concord, Mass., St. Lambert, Montreal, Granby, Cowansville, Ville LaSalle, Chomedey, Bedford and Stanbridge East, with large numbers from the Philipsburg and St. Armand area.

Obituaries

LILA MANZIE MERCHANT of Grand Caspédia

Relatives and friends in the community of Grand Caspédia, Que., and surrounding area were saddened to learn of the passing of Lila Manzie Merchant on Monday, April 7, 1980, after a lingering illness at the Hospitalier Baie des Chaleurs, Maria, Que.

The deceased was born November 11, 1913, daughter of the late Richard Best and Alice Harrison, who predeceased her several years ago. She spent most of her life in this area and was well known as a loving wife, mother, friend and neighbour. She was a very quiet person and always recognized the good qualities in others.

She is survived by her husband, George, two daughters: Joyce (Mrs. James Brash), New Richmond, Que., and Linda (Mrs. Jack Carroll), St. Jules, Que., one son, Cecil, Sudbury, Ont.; three sisters Amy (Mrs. Fred Barter), Leona (Mrs. Ernest Lawlis), Grand Caspédia, Que., Jean (Mrs. Ralph Hayes), Ajax, Ont., one brother Clem, Calgary, Alta. A second brother, Lawrence, Port Perry, Ont., predeceased her in January, 1980.

Funeral arrangements were under the direction of Thibodeau Funeral Salon where the remains rested. The service, held in St. Andrew's United Church, was conducted by Rev. Oliver Carmichael, who chose passages of Scripture suitable for the occasion and spoke comforting words to the bereaved in the loss of a beloved wife and mother. Hymns sung were — "Just As I Am" and "Abide With Me". The choir rendered a favorite of the deceased, "Amazing Grace". Mrs. Gwen Harrison was organist. The pallbearers were Warren Gilker, Lorne Cahill, Howie MacWhirter, George Duthie, Roddy Coull and Johnnie Milligan.

Interment in the United Church Cemetery, Black Cape, Que.

The many floral tributes, memorial donations to the Cancer Society, United Church Memorial Fund, Robertson-Holmes Memorial, etc., and the numerous sympathy cards, attested to the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

The community joins in extending sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and other relatives in this time of sorrow.

And the dark things shall be plain.

SHIRLEY EDITH BRAY of Lennoxville

The death of Shirley Edith Bray (nee Page) occurred at the Sherbrooke Hospital on April 12, 1980, following a heart attack. She had been hospitalized for five weeks.

Shirley was born in Sherbrooke, Que., on Jan. 20, 1905, daughter of the late Thomas F. Page and the late Elizabeth (Roster) Page. She was predeceased by one sister (Amy), Mrs. Reg. Soper, and three brothers, George, overseas while serving with the R.C.A., Lloyd in 1977, and Fred in 1979.

On October 10, 1927, she was united in marriage to Alton William Bray. Of this union six children were born, Lawrence, Norma, Ronald (who died as an infant), Patricia, Rodney and Gary.

During her lifetime she had been active in church work, President of Mother's Auxiliary for Cubs and Scouts, and also the I.O.D.E.

Left to mourn her passing is her beloved husband Alton, and her loving children, Lawrence and his wife Barbara, Norma and husband George, Patricia and husband Art, Rodney and wife Marilyn, and Gary and wife Judy. She is also survived by 11 grandchildren, Janna, Jodi and Chris Bray, Mark Purvis, Cathy, Kevin and Steven Lessard, Donna and Jeffrey Bray and Michael and Kirstin Bray. She also leaves to mourn, three sisters, Muriel, Mrs. Harold Phillips, Ethel, Mrs. Cecil Shufelt, Evelyn, Mrs. Fred Turk, a brother Robert Paige, also survived by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Doris Davidson and brother-in-law Arnold Bray, several nieces and nephews.

The funeral service was held at St. George's Anglican Church, Lennoxville, on Monday, April 14th at 2:00 p.m. with Bishop T. Matthews officiating.

The bearers were her five grandsons, Chris Bray, Jeff Bray, Kevin and Steven Lessard and Mark Purvis and two nephews Gordon Davidson and Brian Page.

Interment took place in the Malvern Cemetery, Lennoxville.

The beautiful floral tributes and donations to the Canadian Heart Fund bore silent witness to her esteem.

I cannot say and I will not say
That she is dead, she is just away
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,
She has wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming, how very fair
It needs must be, since she lingers there.

Quebec Lodge seeks support

Continued community support is needed to take Quebec Lodge successfully through this summer season.

Threatened with closure due to last year's high operating deficit, the Anglican Church camp at Lake Massawippi will reopen on June 29. Several petitions signed by hundreds of people had asked that the camp continue and 20 people bonded themselves to a sum of money towards any deficit that might arise from this year's camp operation. Bishop Allen Goodings and the Executive Committee of Synod thus postponed the decision to close the camp until next year when the situation will be restudied.

"It means, however, that Quebec Lodge must operate on a tight budget and a modest camping programme," Canon Mervyn Awcock, Chairman of the Quebec Lodge Board, reports.

The camp will be under the directorship of Rev. Richard Salt. On May 3 volunteers are needed to help prepare the camp for the summer. Anyone able to help is asked to call Rev. Salt at 562-6745.

Canon Awcock points out there are four ways the community can continue helping the camp: Encourage children to attend Quebec Lodge this summer; encourage young adults to help operate the camp during the June 29-August 9 season; help prepare the site on one of the working days, May 3, May 24 and June 7; send financial assistance to Church House to help reduce the mortgage which remains on Meade Lodge.

Camp brochures are available by writing Quebec Lodge, c/o St. George's Church, 86 Queen St., Lennoxville, Que., J1M 1J4. "We have been greatly encouraged by the offers to help made by so many people, and it is a source of encouragement to the new camp director, the Rev. Richard Salt, and to myself," Canon Awcock adds.

Local Mormons move facilities

Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, usually called "Mormons", have been attending their meetings and activities for a number of years at 1467 Denault Street in Sherbrooke. Now they are moving to their newly purchased meeting house at 9 Clough Street in Lennoxville. The growing membership in and around the area is the reason for the move. The membership and others are invited to attend our meetings in our new location starting Sunday, May 4. Services will be given in both French and English.

This facility, enhanced by beautiful grounds, will remain untouched and will accommodate the present membership. When the growth of our membership exceeds the capacities, the church will look for proper grounds elsewhere to erect its own church building, including chapel, recreation hall, and classrooms, thereby allowing the many programs to be given to its members.

Anglican conference to be held

NORTH HATLEY (BVS) — The spring conference of the Anglican Church Quebec Diocesan Council for Social Service (DCSS) will be held May 8 to May 10 at the North Hatley Community Centre.

Highlights will be speeches and discussions on the right to work, the bioethics of death and dying, and racism.

Billets will be provided in the area and meals will be catered by local groups. Reservations and further information is available from Mrs. Mary Ward, who is in charge of the event, by calling 837-2700 or writing Box 344, Waterville, Que. JOB 3HO.

Registration opens at 10 a.m. on Thurs., May 8 followed by a meeting of DCSS members. Bible study will be held for an hour after lunch. During the afternoon and evening, Rev. Carl Major of the National Church will speak on the Ten Days for World Development program, with the theme being The Right to Work.

On Friday after Eucharist at St. Barnabas Church, Graham Moodie will speak on the bioethics of death and dying. The same subject will be discussed that afternoon in group sessions.

That evening visits will be made to terminal patients. A speech will also be given by Hospital Chaplain Canon Robert Jervis-Read. Following the Saturday morning church service, group reports will be heard. In the afternoon a DCSS meeting will complete the three-day event.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag
The bidding needs some explanation. Although most players have been taught not to open one notrump with a five-card major, many experts disagree. Whenever you open the bidding you should be prepared for your partner's response. If you open the bidding one heart with a hand similar to North's, you may find yourself with no accurate rebid.

For example, if you open one heart and partner responds one spade any rebid you now make will distort either your point count or distribution. Accordingly most experts open one notrump when holding five hearts and 16 to 18 high-card points and notrump distribution. Because of the choice of opening bids, South not North became declarer in the heart game. West dutifully led his partner's suit and East won the king. At the second trick East cashed his spade ace and South made a fine play by dropping his jack.

The jack and nine were equals after the lead of the spade 10. Declarer was trying to make it appear that West had the nine of spades. If East could be talked out of continuing spades South would easily make his game.

Dummy's diamond loser would be discarded on the established nine of spades after trumps were drawn. Otherwise, declarer would have to hope that the ace of diamonds was with West and not East. However, South was reasonably sure East had the diamond ace because of his overcall.

After some thought East played a killing third round of spades. West trumped and dummy overruffed. Declarer now had to go down.

South congratulated East for his expert defense and asked him how he "knew" who had the spade nine. East said his play was based on partnership trust.

If West had originally held the 10-nine-six of spades, he should have laid the nine of spades at the second trick upon seeing South's jack. When he failed to show the "case" spade, East played declarer for it.

Card parties

WINDSOR — Lower Windsor Ladies Aid held a 500 card party at the home of J.G. Langlois, on Saturday evening, April 26, when cards were played at fifteen tables.

Prizes for high score for the ladies was won by Eva Beaton, with second high held by Joyce MacDonald. Berthe Caron had low score. For the gents, J.G. Langlois held high score; Alberic Montigny, second, and Robert McCourt, low. The floating prize for the nine of spades bid was won by Dot McCourt on a cut with Osborne Wilkins. Both had their names down three times.

Door prizes were claimed by Osborne Wilkins, Gertrude Watson, Mrs. E. Fredette, Mrs. A. Montigny, Raoul Depault and Irene Farquhar. Three articles were used as prizes for a drawing. The quilt was won by B.S. Sage (Bob), while Mrs. F. Upton claimed the mugs and the pillow slips went to Stuart Nutbrown.

Lunch was served by the members. The next and final card party will be on Saturday, May 17.

CHERRY RIVER — "Hands Across the Border" Chapter No. 156 of North American Family Campers Assoc. held their final card party on April 26 at the home of Earl and Margerite Hornett in Cherry River.

There were eight tables of 500 with prizes awarded as follows: Ladies high: Evelyn Brier, consolation went to Isobel Nelson. The men's high was won by Donnie Buzzell and the consolation by Leonard Young.

The 9-no-Trump prize was taken by Michael Bouvier and the door prizes were claimed by Edith Catchpugh and Lewis McHarg.

Hanson Thwaites' name was inadvertently omitted as winning a door prize at the last card party.

The Vice-President, Earl Hornett thanked everyone for coming and we look forward to starting again in the fall.

SUTTON — The A.C.W. of Grace Anglican Church sponsored a 500 card party in the Parish Hall on Friday evening, April 25, with 43 present.

Cards were played at ten tables, the lucky winners being: Ladies (1) Mrs. P. Piette, (2) Mrs. J. Elie, (3)

Mrs. V. Boucher; Gents (1) Walter Miltimore, (2) Wade Vincent, (3) George Curmie.

The door prizes were claimed by Mrs. M. Paul, Mrs. Ares James Robertson, Mrs. H. Bresee, Real Beaulac and Victor Boucher. Lunch was served by the Committee.

The last card party until fall, will be on Friday, May 23rd. Everyone welcome.

A new way to detect Unemployment Insurance abuse.

Most people getting unemployment insurance play by the rules. But some people don't seem to know that they can't take a job and collect benefits without telling us they're working. That's why employers are being asked to send us the starting date and Social Insurance Number or extracts from computer payroll tapes for each employee they hire or rehire. This information is cross-checked with the Social Insurance Numbers of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface. After investigation, anyone found receiving benefits to which they are not entitled will have to repay them.

Why better control is needed.

Last year, Unemployment Insurance paid out $4 billion to help people between jobs. This included overpayments to people who took a new job while still receiving UI benefits, but failed to report their earnings.

When people collect unemployment insurance benefits they're not entitled to, overpayments result. It may be an honest mistake. Some people forget or don't understand they must tell Unemployment Insurance and report their total earnings when they start a new job. In that case, repayment is all that is required. But, a penalty or prosecution may follow when the new system detects people wrongly collecting benefits.

Social Insurance Numbers of newly-hired employees are now being cross-checked with those of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface.

If you are collecting unemployment insurance benefits and start a new job, please say so on your UI claimant report card.

Fairer for everyone.

The money you and your employer pay as unemployment insurance premiums should be used as efficiently and fairly as possible. The new program, called 'Report on Hirings', is helping us to carry out that responsibility more effectively.

Helping Circle meets

ROCK ISLAND (DB) - The members of the Helping Circle met on Tuesday evening, April 15, at the home of Mrs. Mildred Wheelock, Rock Island, when ten members answered the roll call. The president, Mrs. Madelyn Curtis opened the meeting with two readings, "Spring, a new beginning", and "Prayer for Spring". The Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. Mrs. Doris Hartley was welcomed as a new member. The minutes of the last meeting were read and accepted. Due to the absence of the treasurer, no report was given. A report was given of the progress of the articles made at the workshop. Mrs. Ruth Putney for sunshine committee, reported a silk flower arrangement taken to a sick member. The next meeting will be on May 20 at the home of Mrs. Mildred Lawton, Derby Line, Vt. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, followed by a social time, bringing a pleasant evening to a close.

CHOSEN CHILD
We wanted a little child
All of our own
Someone to love
And to call our own.

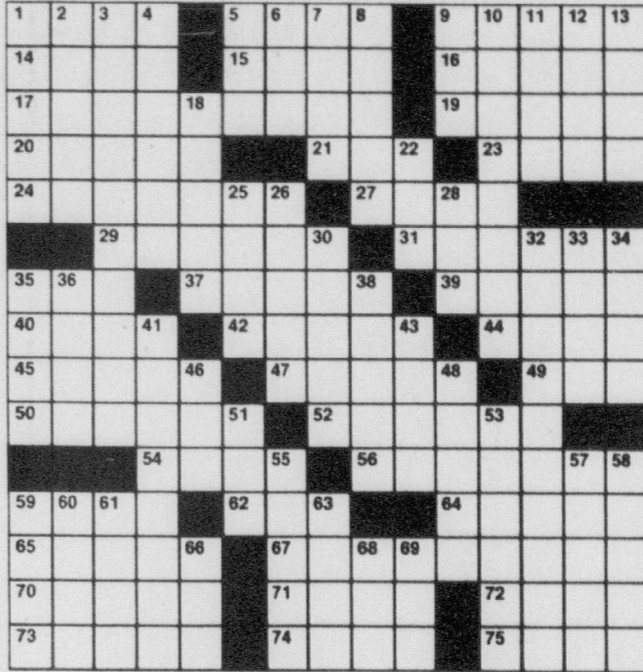

So here is our chosen wee boy
He is our pride and our joy
He jumps and he prances
He sings and he dances
He's just like a lovely new toy.

Now we knew he had come here to stay
We guided him while he did play
And mid laughter and tears
All through the years.
We cherished each lovely day.

Too soon he had grown to a lad
He was not too good or too bad.
He received a few spanks
For his naughty little pranks.
He made us both angry and glad.

Now all too soon he has grown
Today he's a man, on his own.
He will now take a wife
To share in his life.
He's just been with us for a loan.

We'll have to do well at IHF tourney — Eagleson

TORONTO (CP) — The decision to cancel the 1980 Canada Cup international hockey tournament should be followed by a determined effort to make a good showing at the world championships in Sweden next year, says Alan Eagleson, the lawyer and player agent who represents Canada in international hockey talks.

It was an expensive decision but there was little doubt which way it would go. Hockey Canada announced Wednesday it had cancelled the Canada Cup tournament and Lou Lefaive, the organization's president, said the move would cost Hockey Canada $600,000 in revenues.

The National Hockey League players who would have made up Canada's entry in the six-country tournament also gave up from $1.2 million to $1.5 million which would have gone into their players' association pension fund.

On top of all that, the International Ice Hockey Federation, will likely sue Hockey Canada for the cancellation.

"The only way we can get our credibility back with the IHF is to get as good a team as we can to play in Sweden in 1981," said Eagleson.

He said he had hoped the federal government would have made a stand on the Olympic boycott issue long ago — so preliminary steps in planning for the Canada Cup would not have been taken.

"The only thing the Soviets understand is a quick, attention-getting sledgehammer right between the eyes," said Eagleson. "There's no sense fiddling around."

In Montreal, a Soviet diplomat said Canada is the real loser in the cancellation. "The Soviet Union will survive," said Dr. Victor Mikheev, press attache at the Soviet embassy in Ottawa. "We are upset for Canada, though. They are losing a lot."

The federal government announced earlier this month it was supporting a call by the United States for a boycott of the Summer Olympics in Moscow in August in response to Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. The Canadian Olympic Association decided last week to back the government.

With amateur athletes denied the trip to Moscow, public opinion was dead set against an invitation going out from Hockey Canada for the Russians to skate into Canadian arenas in September.

Eagleson met with IIHF directors in Europe last week.

Bibby, Garner stop Expos

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Disharmony hit The Family, but Pittsburgh Pirates continued their hottest start since 1963.

Before Wednesday night's game with Montreal Expos, the Pirates learned pitcher Bert Blyleven had quit the team after complaining he'd been relieved too early and too often by manager Chuck Tanner.

But the Pirates went on to blank Montreal 5-0 with the aid of two homers by Phil Garner, celebrating his 31st birthday, and the six-hit pitching of Jim Bibby, 3-0.

"We had a meeting with Chuck before the game," said Garner. "He explained the situation and we said: 'Time to play ball. Let's go.'"

Garner's two-run homer helped chase Montreal starting pitcher Bill Lee early in the game, and Garner also hit a solo homer off reliever Fred Norman.

Bill Robinson added another homer as the Pirates improved their record to 11-5, best start by a Pittsburgh team since 1963.

"We had to face Bill Lee tonight and we couldn't worry about what Bert is doing," said Garner. "Bert's got to get himself together. 'I'm sure if he changes his mind we'll accept him back.'"

It was Pittsburgh's fourth victory in five meetings this season with the struggling Expos, who slipped to 6-10 on the year. Lee fell to 0-3.

Montreal outfielder Ellis Valentine had to leave the game after three innings due to a knee strain he sustained sliding into base the night before.

In other NL games yesterday, J.R. Richard's arm and Joe Morgan's bat led Houston Astros to a 5-1 victory over Cincinnati Reds (Morgan's former teammates), New York Mets shut out Philadelphia Phillies 2-0, St. Louis Cardinals whipped Chicago Cubs 8-2, San Diego Padres edged Atlanta Braves 2-1 and Los Angeles Dodgers got by San Francisco Giants 4-3.

In the American League, Detroit Tigers edged Texas Rangers 5-4, Kansas City Royals blanked Toronto Blue Jays 3-0, California Angels defeated Oakland A's 2-1, Chicago White Sox nipped Boston Red Sox 2-1, Minnesota Twins walloped Seattle Mariners 10-3 and Baltimore Orioles defeated New York Yankees 7-4. The Milwaukee-Cleveland contest was cancelled by a heavy fog.

Blyleven wants out
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Winless pitcher Bert Blyleven, displeased with the way manager Chuck Tanner has used him, is quitting Pittsburgh Pirates, team vice-president Pete Peterson said Wednesday. "He has asked me to try to trade him, which I will try to do," said Peterson. "Until I can trade him, he will not pitch for the Pirates any further."

ROSIE BOUNCED CHEQUE?

NEW YORK — The face seemed familiar to Manhattan camera shop owner Norman Vershay. It turned out to be none other than Rosie Ruiz, stripped Tuesday of her undeserved Boston Marathon title.

Vershay has taken out a summons charging that Ruiz passed him a bad cheque last November 25 for some films she had processed.

Vershay claims he has been hot on the trail of the fleet footed Ruiz ever since. He said that when she gave him the cheque, she identified herself as an employee of I.D. Normuru securities, but that firm told him later that she hadn't been with it for over a year.

He added that he tried to reach her at her home but found she was not listed at the address and telephone number she had supplied.

WBC bout site now in doubt

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The Brazilian government said Wednesday that the scheduled match between Larry Holmes and Muhammad Ali for the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship in Rio de Janeiro cannot be held without the approval of the Brazilian Central Bank, and that the bank has not yet even been contacted.

And Brazil, which is facing its worst balance-of-payments deficit in history, has enacted strict rules concerning the movement of foreign currency. The central bank must approve all foreign currency payments.

There were reports that government tax authorities were not consulted in advance about the fight and that an Ali-Holmes match might run into problems with Brazilian income tax and hard currency-remittance regulations.

This was another complication for organizers of the bout, who had announced earlier that the $12 million fight would be held July 11 in Rio's Maracana soccer stadium, which can hold 200,000 fans.

Earlier, the Rio de Janeiro state agency which administers the publicly-owned stadium had said the fight would not be allowed because the ring and ringside seats would damage the soccer field.

Sabres say they're ready for Smith's stick swipes

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — Scotty Bowman's Buffalo Sabres may bring a page from history to life tonight. Theodore Roosevelt, sworn in as the 26th president of the United States here in 1901 after the assassination of William McKinley a few blocks away, had some renowned words of advice: "Walk softly and carry a big stick."

Coach Bowman objected to the big stick wielded by goaltender Billy Smith of New York in the Islanders' 4-1 victory in the first game of a best-of-seven National Hockey League semifinal series Tuesday night.

Bowman said Wednesday that the Sabres will retaliate, if necessary, in the second game tonight. Despite Smith's big stick, Bowman did not appear to believe that the goalie walks nearly quietly enough.

"(Richard) Martin wasn't even in the crease — he was three feet from the goal, and Smith used his stick on him," Bowman said of an incident in the first game. "Martin gave him a little pick back. GOT THE PENALTY. The referee saw the second shot, so we got the penalty. 'If it happens again, then we'll send somebody at him right then, to have it out then and there." Bowman's hard line has possible dividends. "He might lose his cool a little, and that would help us," Bowman said of Smith. "I'm sure they'd rather he stay cool. 'Sometimes, you know, these guys think they have a reputation to live up to.' Smith is known for a fuse that burns quickly when any opposing player nears his net.

New York coach Al Arbour could cool out the confrontation by switching to Glenn Resch in the second game, resting Smith for the third at Uniondale, N.Y., Saturday night.

The Sabres, who have alternated goaltenders Don Edwards and Bob Sauve, are expected to go with Sauve tonight.

The Sabres now must battle back for a split in the first two games of the series, a position that Bowman and associate coach Roger Neilson agreed puts pressure on the club.

Sonmor: Stars set for Flyers' roughstuff

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Minnesota North Stars have delivered a no-nonsense message to Philadelphia Flyers. "We had to let the Flyers know that we're going to make as many authoritative takeouts as they will," Minnesota coach Glen Sonmor said of his team's aggressive play. "We want them to know we're going to stand up to them, that if they want some hassles, we'll be in the front row waiting."

The North Stars didn't wait for the Flyers on Tuesday. Minnesota dominated Philadelphia for a 6-5 victory in the free-wheeling opening game of their best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final playoff series.

Minnesota, in Stanley Cup competition for the second time in the last seven seasons, is enjoying the experience.

"We beat the world champions (Montreal Canadiens), and they know how to play in the Stanley Cup," said left winger Steve Christoff. "Now we've come to Philadelphia and won. That's given us confidence."

Christoff, member of the Cinderella U.S. hockey team that won the Olympic gold medal in February, has set a playoff record of eight goals by a rookie. He had two goals and an assist Tuesday.

"It's like a dream," he said. "But with the excitement and all the scoring chances I'm getting, it's not tough to get up for the games."

That seemed to be one of the Flyers' problems Tuesday night, their first game in a week since they won their quarter-final series against New York Rangers. Goalie Pete Peeters seemed to lack his usual concentration and the Flyers

Jabbar show knocks out Sonics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar came up with a spectacular performance, even for him, Wednesday night as he scored 38 points to lead Los Angeles Lakers to the National Basketball Association championship series with a 111-105 victory over Seattle SuperSonics.

The Lakers eliminated the defending NBA champion Sonics in five games in the best-of-seven Western Conference final and will meet Eastern Conference winners Philadelphia in the opener of the championship series here Sunday afternoon.

The Lakers trailed through much of the second half before going ahead to stay on of Abdul-Jabbar's patented skyhooks with 3:13 remaining. That made the score 99-98 and Los Angeles was off and running into the championship series.

First-year Los Angeles coach Paul Westhead praised his seven-foot, two-inch centre. "From the beginning, Kareem decided this was the Lakers' season, and he has singlehandedly led us that way. If you're a fast-break team, falling behind is not a threat."
