LONDON, June 16—The National Rifle Association has finally decided not to allow the American team to use the screw wind guage in the competition at Wimbledon, except in the International match. The Volunteer Service Gazette regrets this decision and thinks if the Americans are beaten they will be able to claim that they were handicapped, because they were not allowed, like English riflemen, to use in preliminary contests exactly the same appliances used in the match. "However," says the Gazette, "there are not wanting signs that the Americans may give the English a sound beating."

Sir Stafford Northcote has informed John Bright that he will call attention in the House of Commons to portion of Mr. Bright's speech on Thursday night, in which he referred in severe terms to Tory obstruction in the House, saying, "Obstructionists" in alliance with "Irish Rebels" were doing their utmost to make it impossible for the House to do any work. Sir Stafford will point out that Mr. Bright committed a breach of privilege in using such language.

MARSEILLES, June 16—The aeronaut Jouis, accompanied by an actress and a merchant, departed in a balloon last evening to cross part of the Mediterranean. The balloon and occupants were picked up at sea.

PARIS, June 16—Challemel Lacour is about to go to Vichy for the benefit of his health. The Opposition papers assert that such a journey amounts practically to his retirement from the Ministry and that he fears to meet existing issues.

INNSBRUCK, June 16—Sabadina, who drove Overdank, the bomb manufacturer, across the frontier, is being tried here on a charge of high treason.

BERLIN, June 16—The Russian Government having asked the extradition of Krazewiski, the Polish author now residing at Leipsig, and three other Poles charged with giving information to the Revolutionary party regarding the movements of Russian troops, the German police in obedience to orders from the Government have arrested all the men.

The Government's Church Bill passed its second reading before the Committee of the Lower House by 13 to 8.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 16—The Marquis of Tseng, Chinese Ambassador, in an interview here said the French Government had not answered any of his letters on the Tonquin question for a year. Diplomatic relations between the two countries had been on the verge of being broken off, and were China a less conciliatory country they would have been broken off long ago. The Chinese Government has not allowed the French to go so far without giving them an opportunity of retiring gracefully from their untenable position. As far back as 1880 the Chinese Minister at Paris explained to the French Foreign Minister, M. De Freycinct, the relations which Tonquin as a part of Annam bore to China. M. De Freycinct, declared distinctly that the French Government had no intention whatever of doing anything in Tonquin. About the end of the same year rumors of a French expedition again cropped up and the Marquis clearly informed M. De Freycinct that China would not remain a passive spectator of another attempt to disturb the relations of her vassal. In one of his dispatches M. Gambetta wrote, "The suzerainty of China over Annam is only a matter of historical interest to us," implying his refusal to admit the existence of actual relationship. Being asked whether China was prepared to open the Red River to European commerce if France retired, the Marquis answered in the affirmative. The Emperor of China had already issued an edict authorizing the Red River to be opened. China will never, said the Marquis, recognize anything done by France in Annam. Since 1874 France was wantonly endeavoring to stir up discord. The statement of Challemel Lecour to the Chamber of Deputies, that the Annamites were ready to welcome the French soldiers with open arms to relieve them from their master was a grave error. The French are hated by the natives.

AMERICAN.

NEW YORK, June 16—Large quantities of war material are being purchased in this country by China and shipped via San Francisco to Canton. It is understood a large establishment at Ilion, N. Y., has one contract.

Dr. J. M. Schley, nephew of Congressman Flower, went to a private insane asylum at Amityville, L. I., to see a patient, and on protesting against the treatment she had received was terribly assaulted by John Lowden, the Superintendent of the Asylum, and six of his men. Dr. Schley has been laid up for a week.

During the trial of John Devoy yesterday, on a charge of libelling Auguste Belmont, the latter took the stand. Mr. Costello, counsel for Devoy, said he wanted to show that Belmont was not his name, when witness said Costello was a liar. Colonel Spencer, on the defendant's behalf, said the question as to Belmont's name had created some bad feeling and he was willing to give witness a chance to make a statement under oath regarding the matter. "Let him swear to his name, if he wishes," said Spencer. Belmont—"I will, you loafer." With flushed face and eyes filled with tears, witness said: "I was surprised into using an expression I should not have used, but which is true. Years ago, because I was a very young man and intrusted with great interests, from the moment I took an interest in politics the opposition pounced upon me with the most infamous lies, one of them by a man who is dead, whom I befriended and who came to me afterward and went upon his knees and begged my pardon; defaming my poor (long pause and tears) mother. I bear the name of my father and grandfather, of my poor mother, my poor mother, who is dead. I have been known by it all my life and was known by it where I was born, honorably born. I swear it. I wish I were twenty years younger and not holding a position of trust; no man should say anything different to me or he would regret it." The Judge, Jury and spectators were greatly affected.

NEW WINDSOR, June 16—A revolutionary celebration will take place here on the 22nd inst., at the site of the old log temple.

BUTTERFORD, N. C., June 16—There is great indignation here over the doings of the Mormons. Last evening seven women and three men who professed the faith were baptized in a creek. Several hundred persons, about half women, gathered to see the ceremony. The converts and four missionaries emerged from a small house near the creek about night, all being entirely naked. A murmur of surprise was followed by hisses, but the crowd did not interfere with the party. The rite was performed in the middle of the creek. After the ceremony, a committee of citizens waited on the Mormons and gave them notice to quit the county at once on pain of summarary punishment. Several women in the party are pretty and have borne good characters. The Mormons gave an assurance that they would leave to-day for Utah.

The Chicago Foot.

(From the Chicago Tribune.)

Young Smith called on Miss Higgenbottom a few nights ago, and got very wet on his way to the young lady's residence. After he arrived nothing would do but she must make a fire for him, and, in spite of his protestations, she soon had a roaring fire started.

Drawing near it, Mr. Smith poised one foot on the other in front of the blaze. For some moments not a word was spoken.

Presently the young lady gently remarked: "Mr. Smith, please take down the blower; I think the fire has a good start." Down came the feet, and Smith doesn't go there any more.

The Most Remarkable Carriage in the World.

(From the St. James Gazette.)

The carriage used by the Duke de Montpensier at the coronation of the Czar is probably the most remarkable specimen of the coach builders' art in the world. It was built more than a hundred years ago, and is constituted mainly of glass, the necessary metal framing being of richly chased silver. The interior is fitted in blue velvet, embroidered with the arms of Castile and Arragon; and beneath the hammercloth there is a musical box, which was designed to play as the carriage went forward, but which is now out of order and cannot be repaired. The carriage last appeared in public upon the occasion of King Alphonso's wedding; but it has figured at all the great state festivals at Madrid during the last three generations, and is regarded as almost a part of the Spanish regalia.

Did She Die?

NEW YORK, June 17—London specials say Mr. Gladstone shows signs of a recurrence of the symptoms which rendered his visit to Cannes necessary. The accused was held to await the result of Mrs. Smith's injuries. Its balsamic properties, immediately on application, lull the anguish, protect the exposed nerves from the air, give to the vessels the vigour necessary to heal the sore, and confer on the blood a purity which permits it to lay down healthy flesh in place of that destroyed. Holloway's Pills, simultaneously taken, greatly assist the Ointment's purifying and soothing power. Together these medicines act like a charm; no invalid, after a fair trial, has found them fail to relieve his pain, or completely cure his disease. The combined action of the Ointment and Pills, in all disorders, is all powerful and too irresistible to be withstood.

A CHANCE FOR STUDENTS.

We notice by our exchanges that the offer of prizes made by a citizen of Quebec for the best and most complete essays relating to the statistics of certain Provinces before Confederation is not properly understood. There are three first prizes, no second or third prizes. Each prize is $25, and it is offered for the best statistical essay, in each case, covering the following periods : from first discovery to 1763 ; from 1763 to 1840 ; and from 1840 to 1850. The Provinces embraced are Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Quebec and Ontario. By the term statistics, the donor of the prizes means the history in numbers of those sections of country, the phrase being employed in its widest significance, and intended to cover everything of importance and usefulness with regard to the several subjects. The essays are to remain the property of the gentleman who offers the prizes.

We hope our young friends will go in for this competition. Already we hear of several persons who intend entering the lists, with a view of carrying the prizes away from Quebec. We should naturally like to see a local investigator come off first best.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

A stranger reading the account of the proceedings of the City Council, in Saturday's issue of the CHRONICLE, could scarcely avoid thinking that Quebec was governed by a set of thieves and plunderers. The language used by members towards each other, and the bandying about of charges foul enough to sink a ship, were simply disgraceful, and calculated to make the better class of our citizens, blush from very shame. It is a pity that our city fathers have not a higher sense of morality, a deeper love of honour and a nicer knowledge of the meaning of words, than they appear to possess. They might raise the tone of the Council. As it is, they lower it to the level of the pot-house, and if each individual member is to be believed, there is not a pure man in the whole body. This is shameful, and the leaders in this misconduct may well pause and call a halt, if they have any ambition to be looked upon as respectable men. It is amusing to hear one of their number saying that he "wouldn't give five cents for public opinion." VANDERBILT, with all his millions, found it difficult to take such a stand. He said once, in a moment of pique, that the "public might be damned, for all he cared," but he soon discovered that he owed that same public an humble apology, and he made it. Public opinion is a dangerous thing to trifle with. It can overtake the strongest man in any community and lay him low. It was public opinion which forced the Quebec City Council recently to withdraw their support from the WALBANK tender, it was public opinion which compelled the Council to re-open the question and to hand over the tenders to Messrs. SHANLY and PARENT, and through this same powerful public opinion the city will save sixty thousand dollars or more. Public opinion may not be worth "five cents" to some Councillors, but he will be a brave man who can stand up and defy it.

The Councillors ought to stop throwing Corporation mud at each other. The spectacle they create is not edifying. It is low, and undignified, and it gives the place a bad name abroad. We hope all the talk we have had about corruption, and the money which some persons are said to have made out of the Tasmanian bonds, Palais jobs, etc., etc., will cease. If there is truth in the dreadful stories let the charges be preferred in a manly fashion,—direct charges, not innuendos,—and let the guilty ones suffer. The "you're another," style of argument is not helpful. It only serves to heighten the moral degradation and disgrace of the Council in the eyes of the public. One cannot resist the temptation of thinking that the whole lot must be bad,—all tarred, as it were, with the same stick. This, we know, is not the case, but what other inference can any one take from the report of the proceedings of last Friday night ? As a matter of fact, the very recklessness of the charges is enough to make one shudder. On the one hand we hear of men bartering their self-respect and honor away for money, voting for or against a measure, not because it is good or bad, not because it is a benefit or a wrong to the city, but because a certain amount of cash is obtainable for the vote so given. On the other hand, we are told that members keep away from the Council, and abstain from voting, only because they cannot realize as much for their votes as they think they ought to have. The stories are so monstrous than we cannot pretend to believe them, much less entertain them for a moment, but such charges are made every day, and on last Friday evening the air about the Council room was full of them. The charges were very gross in themselves, but the tu quoque rejoinders did not help matters in the least. They rather aggravated the scene, and provoked angry demonstration. If the Council intend to pursue this course, they should hire the Music Hall for their meetings. There are some in our community, doubtless, who admire these friendly set-to's without gloves. But it would be better for the Council to make a change in their way of doing things, and to pursue a more gentlemanly plan of procedure."

Mr. VALLIERE should have made his charge and taken the responsibility on his own shoulders. The Mayor rightly ruled that he should do this, but it was soon shown that Mr. VALLIERE only wanted to hint at corruption, and he talked, and did nothing. But the stigma of the charges remain all the same. If there be anything in the story, it is a pity that it cannot be substantiated, and the guilty ones punished. As it is, no one is satisfied, and the Council is still besmirched by the scandal.

A Terrible Disaster in England.

178 Little Children Suffocated and Crushed to Death.

PAINFUL SCENES AND INCIDENTS.

LONDON, June 16—A terrible calamity, involving the death of 178 children, occurred in the town of Sunderland, in the county of Durham, this evening. From the details thus far received it appears an entertainment had been given in Victoria Hall by a conjuror, which was attended almost altogether by children, several thousand being in attendance. The accident occurred at the close of the performance. The body of the hall had been entirely cleared of its occupants when some 1,200 little ones came rushing down the stairs from the gallery at the top of the first flight of stairs. There was a door which opened only twenty inches, and thus but one child was permitted to pass through at a time. At this point, while a mass of children were pushing forward, one of them fell and was unable to rise owing to the others crowding on. The result was a great number were pushed down, trampled on and suffocated. The scene was terrible and no effort could stop the mad rush of affrighted children. They came on pell-mell, though strangely without much shouting. Soon 178 of them were knocked down and suffocated to death by the others trampling upon them. The greatest number of bodies, which were badly mangled from trampling were laid seven or eight deep. Many victims and others who were not killed had their clothing torn from their bodies, and this together with the bleeding bodies of the unfortunates shows the terrible nature of the struggle. The ages of 178 children known to have been killed ranged from 4 to 14 years. The excitement in the town when the news of the disaster spread was terrific. Great crowds of people rushed to the scene until at least 20,000 persons surrounded the hall. The feeling was so intense that the authrities ordered out the Sixty-eighth Infantry to preserve order. The work of getting out the bodies of the victims was begun immediately. They were laid out in the hall and the parents of those killed were admitted for the purpose of identifying the bodies of the children. The most heartrending scenes transpired while the work of identification was in progress. The mothers of the dead children constantly uttered piercing shrieks and many of them fainted on discovering the bodies of their little ones.

One of the persons who responded immediately to the call for help says many who volunteered to assist in rescuing the children sickened at the spectacle and fled horrified from the distressing scene. The rescuers' first efforts were directed towards reaching the children who were apparently alive, but so tightly were the victims jammed together that it was regarded as dangerous to drag them out of the helpless mass lest the effort would result in pulling off the limbs of living children as well as mutilating. They therefore proceeded steadily and systematically to lift off the topmost. A few of them who were beneath had survived and their moaning and low cries of pain could be distinctly heard amid the excitement and cries of the bereaved parents and friends.

A CHICAGO PANIC.

HEAVY FAILURES IN THE PROVISION TRADE.

CHICAGO, June 16—A season of extraordinary excitement prevailed on 'Change immediately after the opening this morning by the rumor that the firm of McGeoch, Evengham & Co., who for a long time were looked upon as the heaviest dealers in lard and other provisions on the Chicago Board, had failed. This was verified in a measure soon afterward by a member of the firm going about on the floor of the Exchange and notifying all with whom they were interested in the provision deal to close out. Something in the nature of a panic appeared to seize the provision corner and for a time interest in other trading was lost.

The liabilities of McGeoch and Evengham are supposed to exceed two million. The failure is due to the refusal of Armor and others on whom McGeoch relied to aid him. They assert their ability to make a good showing.

The losses of six firms outside McGeoch, whose names have already been given, are estimated as follows :—John Ball & Co., $100,000 ; Ellis & Lightner, $60,000 : Tabor & Wilson, $40,000 ; Holly & Allen, $30,000 ; Crafts & Co., $30,000 ; Martin & Co., $10,000. An Indianapolis firm is reported to have been caught to the extent of $45,000, but no names are given.

TORONTO, June 17—The panic in Chicago caused great excitement amongst speculators here. Over $50,000 of Toronto money has crossed the line. It is rumored some Canadian Banks are heavily interested in the Chicago failures.

NOTES AND NEWS.

Death of Mr. Alexander LeMoine.

We regret sincerely to have to record today the decease of Mr. Alexander LeMoine, N. P., of this city, one of the best known and most highly esteemed of our citizens. Mr. LeMoine was attacked a day or two ago with a sudden illness, and on Saturday the last writes of the church were administered. Mr. LeMoine succombed about noon yesterday, at the age of 64 years. The deceased gentleman was a large property holder in Quebec and some years ago was a member of the City Council. He has always manifested a very deep interest in all matters concerning the city's welfare and other public affairs, and if we remember rightly, served some few years ago on the Citizens' Vigilance Committee. Mr. LeMoine leaves a large circle of relatives and friends in this city, by whom he will be deeply mourned. We sympathize sincerely with the sorrowing connections of the deceased, and trust that a searching enquiry will be held into the circumstances which it is alleged have robbed his family of their head and Quebec of one of its best citizens.

The Pharmaceutical Association.

ANNUAL MEETING.

At the annual meeting of the above Association, held on Tuesday last, after routine business the meeting proceeded to the election of eight members of Council and two auditors for the years 1883-4. Mr. F. C. Saunders and the Registrar, Mr. W. Ahern, were appointed scrutineers. They reported the following gentlemen elected :—Messrs. H. R. Gray, H. H. Sugden Evans, H. E. Jackson, Ed. Giroux, Sr., John Kerry, S. Lachance, J. A. Hart and C. J. Coveraton, who with the following gentlemen remaining in office comprise the Council for the ensuing year :—Messrs. A. Manson, J. D. L. Ambrose, W. E. Brunet, and R. McLeod.

After some discussion it was resolved to instruct the Council to make the following additions to schedule A of the Quebec Pharmacy Act of 1875 :—Croton oil, all poisonous preparations of mercury, hellebore, chloral-hydrate, croton-chloral, belladonna and its preparations, digitalis and its preparations, Indian hemp and its preparations and carbolic acid.

Messrs. Contant, Saunders, Mathie and Wight made suggestions with regard to increasing the interest in the annual meeting.

A great deal of enthusiasm was called forth by Mr. L. R. Baridon, who offered to present a gold medal to the gentleman who should obtain the highest number of marks in the major examination of 1884, provided any other druggist present would do the same for the best graduate of 1885. The challenge was accepted by Mr. H. R. Gray, of St. Lawrence street.

Mr. H. F. Jackson then offered to provide a similar medal for the best minor of 1884, Mr. S. Lachance also providing one for the best minor of 1885.—Montreal Star.

The Mountain Tragedy.

A SUNSTROKE—THE MOTHER OF THE DECEASED THROWS SOME LIGHT ON THE FACTS OF THE CASE.

MONTREAL, June 16—The mother of Arnold Wilkins arrived from Quebec this morning and proceeded to a friend's house, where she was waited upon by our reporter. After expressions of sympathy the following dialogue took place :—

"Could you, Mrs. Wilkins, assign any reason for the occurrence ?"

"Only one, a severe sunstroke that my son received last summer."

"In this country ?"

"No, in Europe, and he has been exceedingly nervous ever since he returned."

"Has he left Quebec very long !"

"Oh, no, only last Monday : he had been working for some weeks at his trade and was much liked by his employer and fellow workmen."

"Did he leave for any particular reason ?"

"I think not ; he grew restless, however, and wanted to get away. I persuaded him to stay at home all summer and rest, but he wished to be at work."

"Has he experienced any love trouble ?"

"None that I know of."

"He was a temperate man, I believe !"

"Certainly, he neither drank nor smoked." I think the excitement of the journey must have shattered his nerves beyond control."

"The letter found on him was written by a relative was it not ?"

"Yes, a cousin."

"What became of the envelope ?"

"I can explain that. Arnold received the letter before leaving home, read it to his sister and myself, and, throwing the envelope into the stove, placed the letter in his pocket."

Mrs. Wilkins naturally feels her bereavement keenly and was arranging for the funeral this afternoon, as she is anxious to get back to Quebec, her daughter there being prostrated with grief at the brother's tragic death.

Hudson Bay Company.

TORONTO, June 16 —The Globe has the following special cable this morning, dated ; London, June 15th—The report of the Hudson Bay Company was issued to-day. The Committe state that the decrease of revenue is largely due to the great decline in the price of furs. A falling off has recently occurred in sales of land; the loss which will ultimately revert from this cause will not prove large. The Committee will consider any practicable scheme which may be submitted for the joint management of the interest in the land with the Canadian Pacific and Canada North-West Land Companies.

Fifty Thousand Short.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 15—Col. Kennedy, city registrar, and a director of the Merchants' Bank here, is $50,000 short in his accounts. He has indulged in speculation, which has been going on for three years. Yesterday he refunded $13,000 to the Government, and all his real estate has been transferred to the Government for the balance. He has a large family, and will be dismissed from office. The matter is now the subject of investigation, but a disposition to hush it up is evinced.

AN OLD MERCHANT'S HONOR.

The Home of a Ruined Merchant Bought in for His Wife by his Creditors.

Some time since, the reader will remember, the well-known liquor house of Beecher, Ives & Co. failed because of the deadlock in bonded whiskey. It was one of the oldest and most respected houses in the "street," and one of the most conservative and successful as well. The suspension was as genuine and honest as it was sudden and surprising, and the firm found sympathizers in every one who knew them, creditors as well as customers. Great sympathy was especially felt for Mr. Ives, who, past the middle age, after a long and active and honorable business career found himself wrecked as his every asset was available. And here a little story can tell its own affecting details. Some years ago Mr. Ives founded a little house on the Sound, near Rye, N.Y. Humble and unpretentious at the start, it has been developed and beautified with years and prosperity, until it was one of the most charming as well as hospitable homes in the neighborhood. Those who are fortunate in possessing the acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. Ives (nee one of the Englishers of New Haven) know how worthily they adorned such a home of peace, plenty and contentment. It was suggested in the hey-day of prosperity to Mr. Ives that he should deed this homestead to his wife.

"No," said he ; "It will go to her if she survives me, and in the event of my failure in business I propose that my creditors shall get all in the liquidation of their claims. I am careful and conservative in business and prosperous beyond my expectations, and failure is not likely now."

When failure engulfed the old house in ruin like a ship in a maelstrom, the little ivy-embowered home at Rye, with its tree-covered lawn and hedges, was included in Mr Ives' assets. It was a terrible blow to the old gentleman, and he was reproached with not having followed years ago the friendly advice to put this property in his wife's name and thus save it from the creditors.

"No," said Mr. Ives ; "I am not sorry I did not put the property in my wife's name then and thus save it, for I want everything I have to go to my creditors. My children can take care of themselves, while I can always provide for my wife and myself."

Well, the other day the little home was sold by order of the crediters—and bought in by them and then presented to the good wife who had borne the sacrifice without a murmur, glad to make it in her husband's behalf, and whose heroism was thus so nobly rewarded. So quietly was the transaction conducted that nothing has been "said of it in the papers.' It only remains to add that the man who was foremost in the move was Mr. James G. Breslin, the well-known hotel proprietor, and, further, through the forbearance and aid of the creditors, it is likely that at no distant day the house will be able to get out of its present difficulties. In these days of mercantile chicanery such a history as we have described reads like a romance, but shows that after all there is some reward in this world for honesty and honor. —New York Journal.

HEALTH MATTERS.

WHO IS LIABLE FOR DEFECTIVE HOUSE DRAINAGE ?

In view of the fact that the officials of the Health Department are at present examining into the sanitary condition of the dwelling-houses in many parts of the city, it might be interesting to know what is the opinion of the English Courts as to the liability of landlords in this connection, as expressed in a recent judgment. The following is from the Manchester Guardian ;—

"In the City of London Court yesterday, before Mr. Commissioner Kerr, a case of importance respecting the liability of landlords for pecuniary damages for defective house drainage was heard. The plaintiff was Mr. Benjamin Cook, builders' contractor, who sued the defendant, Mrs. Elvin, a widow, to recover the sum of £4 16s. 6d., rent due for a dwelling-house in Lucretia Road. In answer she filed a counter-claim for £10 damages—first, for breach of contract by which she agreed to pay an increased rental of £4 a year on condition that the house was made habitable ; and, secondly, for illness and loss incurred through the bad state of the drains. Defendant deposed that she had lived in the house in question for eleven years, but at length was compelled to leave owing to the stench which sometimes emanated from the drains. The soil in one place oozed through the floor. Her lodgers, and even her son, left the house because of the nuisance. Three witnesses who had lived in the house were called in corroboration. Mr. Dod urged that the landlord had done all that was required of him under the contract, and that the illness alleged had not been proved to have arisen from the drains. His Honor—The defendant and her witnesses say so. A house with the soil oozing through the floor cannot be wholesome. I must find for the defendant, both upon the amount claimed and also for the counter-claim. I would have given her a great deal more had I been asked, because no one can calculate the injury to health at the time and in the future from living in an insanitary habitation. Mr. Wetherfield—I ask for costs on the higher scale. His Honor—Certainly. It is high time that landlords were taught that property has its duties as well as its rights."

Albani has reappeared at Covent Garden in what the London papers describe as a "well-nigh perfect" performance of "Rigolette." Gilda is one of her greatest roles, and the Londoners think that her transatlantic journey has actually improved her voice. Ravelli was the Duke, and Devoyod, a French artist new to London, made a great success as the jester.

Guiteau's Curse.

The Prophecy of Garfield's Murderer and Its Alleged Fulfilment.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Traveller telegraphs under date of June 11, as follows : "Michael Sheahan, one of the jurors on the Guiteau trial, was locked up at the seventh precinct station, yesterday, for insanity. Ever since the Guiteau trial his friends have noticed strangeness in his manner, and it seemed as if Guiteau's prophecy of evil to befall all those connected with his conviction had produced a deep effect upon his mind. Finely he became so nervous that he was unable to sleep at all. About 12 o'clock Sunday night he became a raving maniac.

The death of District Attorney Corkhill's wife was the first event which could be called a fulfilment of Guiteau's prophecy.

Juror Hubb's wife died.

Sargeon General Barnes, an important witness, died.

Judge Porter's health is said to be wretched.

Marshal Henry, Bailiff Stahl, Detective McElfresh, Jail Wagon-Guard Perry Carson, and the driver, James Leonard, were dismissed from the service.

Dr. Noble Young, an important expert witness, died.

Rev. Dr. Hicks has been libelled.

Dr. Gray, another expert, was shot in Utica asylum.

Dr. McDonald has been or is the subject of an investigation in connection with his administration of Ward's Island, N.Y.

And it might be added that Dr. Bliss is in a state of worriment, and claims that he lost $25,000 by undertaking the late President's case.

Wanted a Position.

AN APPLICATION FOR A SITUATION IN A CIRCUS.

After the performance was over at the show, a young man called on Chiarini and said he wanted to see him on private business. The old veteran took him into his office and received him with his usual politeness.

"I came all the way from Carson to see the show, and now I'd like to join," said the young man.

"Oh, I see," said the showman, "you are a well-informed, healthy-looking young fellow, and I'd like to encourage such as you." The youth's face brightened.

"You don't chew, smoke, or drink, I hope ?"

"Oh, no, honour bright—except soda and beer.

"You must leave off these bad habits ; they weaken the muscles and paralize the nerves. You can soon stop drinking, but your salary will not be large until you have overcome these little tendencies. A little lemonade is all the performers' drink. Call at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning, and I will see what I can do. You mustn't expect over $50 a week, though, at first. We never pay high salaries until we know just what a man can do."

The delighted Carsonite went away, and this morning was on hand.

Chiarini took him to a tent where three hundred Bengal tigers were caged. Handing a curry-comb and a pair of shears, he remarked :

"Your duties will be comparatively light at first. You will go into the cage and curry the animals down every morning and about once a week cut their claws ; keep 'em down pretty short, so that when they attack the tiger-tamer, Mr. Wilson, they won't lacerate him much. Sometimes, but not more than once a month, you may have occasion to file their teeth. You must throw the animal on his back, and hold his head between your knees. If he acts rough, belt him on the nose a few times. Keep belting him until he quiets down."

"Haven't you got a vacancy in the art departments ?" asked the young man from Carson.

"Is art your line ?" inquired Chiarini.

"Yes," drawled the young man. "In the shows that I've always run with I used to paint the red stripes on the zebras. I—I killed so many tigers keepin' 'em straight that the boss wouldn't let me handle 'em. He said I used 'em too rough."

Chiarini swears that the terror from Carson shall have the first vacancy.

The following from an English weekly reveals the probable source of Gilbert's inspiration in marrying the Queen of the Fairies in "Iolanthe" to the sentry in the guards: "The other day, as the grenadier on guard at Somerset House, London, was standing in the gateway, a lady of certain age, but still attractive and richly robed, accosted him with handsome eulogies of his martial figure and warm approval of the style in which he protected his Queen and country in the great dynamite crisis. Private Thomas Atkins was naturally surprised at this ; but his surprise grew when the lady offered him her hand as a reward for his valiant vigilance. The tender was lit orally made, and took point from the £50 note the fair enthusiast reached forth. Before the flattered sentinel could act on this strange proposal the policeman on duty interposed with a brutal command to move on and not annoy the sentry. The lady obeyed with graceful courtesies, and wafting kisses at the grenadier till she turned the corner out of sight. Every afternoon this then unknown spinster presented herself and went through the same form, minus the £50 note. She simply entered the gateway, stood opposite the sentry, regarded him with an expression of rapture, addressed him with gestures of ecstasy, assured him of undying attachment, and then passed away, flinging back sweet kisses from her finger nails. As the sentry was changed every day the lady's passion was clearly regimental rather than individual. It has since been found that she is of high family connection, the sister of a gentleman well known in society, who died recently, leaving her a large fortune. She is allowed to pursue her harmless passion, and a crowd assembles daily to see the transit of Venus across the march of Mars."

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 15th, 1880.

GENTLEMEN—Having been a sufferer for a long time from nervous prostration and general debility, I was advised to try Hop Bitters. I have taken one bottle, and I have been rapidly getting better ever since, and I think it the best medicine I ever used. I am now gaining strength and appetite, which was all gone, and I was in despair until I tried your Bitters. I am now well, able to go about and do my own work. Before taking it, I was completely prostrated MRS. MARY STUART.

Experienced fine weather all the passage; met some floe ice and some heavy bergs in latitude 53.50 N, long 50.30 W, extending about 40 miles towards Belle Isle, then had clear water up to the Island, say, for 150 miles saw 2 bergs only and a little field ice, off the Island. Passed Belle Isle light on Saturday, the 9th June; exchanged signals with the lighthouse keeper, who wished to be reported "all well." Found the Straits on the North Shore clear of ice, till within 15 miles of Point Amour. At 11 a m 9th June, Point Amour abeam, spoke the sealing ss "Hector," bound to St. John's, Nfld., from whom I enquired how the ice in the Gulf was, and how far it extended to the westward; he reported "about 25 miles from Point Amour." Experienced fine clear weather from Cape Whittle; passed 2 steamers bound up and 12 sailing vessels, all heading towards Quebec, between Heath Point and Cape Chatte.—The pilot, Mr. A. S. S. "Ontario," June 17, 1883.

(To the Editor of the Morning Chronicle.)

DEAR SIR,—As there are few voyages so remarkable as the two which I have gone across the Atlantic from Liverpool to Quebec, it may be interesting to your readers to hear something of them.

Last year I started with a small private party of twenty-one persons coming to settle in Canada, sailing in the "Peruvian" of the Allan line from Liverpool on the 27th of April. The story of how we got into the ice, stayed there for ten days, and at last got free and were towed into Quebec minus a screw at the end of a four weeks voyage, has already been told to your readers, so I will not go over again the hopes and fears, the anxious days and nights, both of those on shore and those on sea; it is enough to say that we were very thankful indeed to see the green dotted banks of the St. Lawrence, and to feel the warm sunshine of Canada.

On the 1st of June, nearly three weeks ago, just one month later than last year, I again started from Liverpool with a party of forty-two in the Dominion line steamer "Ontario," and although I must confess my heart sank a little when I heard we were going by Belle Isle, still we could hardly imagine fields of ice in the middle of June, as we looked forward to a pleasant voyage. And indeed we were not altogether disappointed, for we had fine weather and a calm sea. Before we reached Belle Isle we passed through fields of floating pieces of ice, but thinking this was but a remnant of the spring ice, we pushed on up the Straits. Gradually the ice began to thicken as we were drawn on, as if the sirens of old wooed us from the Gulf, or as one of the passengers likened it, a young man courting his love, whose bonds got stronger and stronger till he cannot turn back; thus we went on each hour more slowly till on Sunday evening, the 10th, we came to a standstill, and the "Ontario" as if weary with her toil laid her head on an immense icy pillow and went to rest for the night. In the morning we could not move either backwards or forwards, and we remained in the same position during Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, now and then making attempts to move on. The passengers kept up their spirits wonderfully, and the days passed away very pleasantly with services on deck and with readings, songs and charades. There were many Swedes on board who were quiet, well-behaved people, and such as we could welcome to our country. Having Moody and Sankey's hymns in Swedish they often joined with us in the well-known tunes with their sweet voices. On Thursday afternoon streaks of water began to show themselves in the ice, and with a few more determined efforts, the mass of ice in front which had been softened by the rain, fog and sun of the three previous days gave way at last, and we moved slowly out of our nest, or as some called it, "the dust heap." The caution and care of Captain McAuley and the good nature of the passengers made everything go very happily during the whole voyage, so that we hardly felt our imprisonment, and some even said they wouldn't mind staying a little longer in the ice. So we continued our journey thankfully, and on the day before we arrived at Quebec the passengers both steerage and cabin gave an address to the captain to show their esteem for him both as a man and as a captain who had brought them through so much difficulty. So, farewell Belle Isle! Some of us express the intention of "not going there any more," and others hope the Canadian Government will find some way of giving notice to ships, as to where the ice lies and where it is thickest.

Yours faithfully,
WM. HUGH WOOD,
Curate of St. Jude's, Kensal Green,

He Was Invited to Call.

(From the Texas Siftings.)

A stranger stepped in to Mose Schaumberg's ready-made clothing emporium a few days ago.

"Vant to see some banta—genevine Scoteh tweeds?" said Mose, as he rubbed his hands and smiled, when he noticed the stranger opening a large pocketbook.

The stranger took a long list out of his pocketbook, and after consulting it, said:

"Let us begin on summer overcoats."

"Dot stock of summer overgoats vas so goot as vas not in dis state pefore. I sells dose goots cheap. I makes not a halaf a tollar brofits on dose overgoats."

The stranger allowed Mose to show him about forty-five overcoats. Then he said that he would look at shirts. Then it was hats he seemed to want—straw hats and felt hats, hats high and low hats, were exhibited, and all offered at "thirdy ber cent. pelow cost," but the stranger, without buying anything, passed on to a shelf full of linen and flannel underwear. Mose scattered everything off the shelf on to the counter, and the stranger made a close examination of every article, but ordered nothing.

"Mine vrient," said Mose, "vot you pelieve you vants? Do you vants nodings, or do you dake me for a lunatic asylums? I shows you all dose goots vat vas genevine, und you nodings pay. Maby you vants some umprellas to look at, as you looks to have not sense to come out of the rain already. Vat is dot racket you got mit you, anyhow?"

The stranger showed Mose the list he held in his hand and asked:

"Is that your advertisement?"

"Yes; dot vas so."

"Got all the Goods described there, have you?"

"All dose goots vas genevine imborted, so hellup me gracious!"

"Don't you say at the bottom of that advertisement, 'No trouble to show goods, call and examine our stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere?'"

"Yes, I say dot."

"Well, I always purchase elsewhere, but as I was waiting for the train, I thought I'd kill time by accepting your invitation to call and examine your stock and prices. You have not shown me your stock of linen dusters yet."

"Yacob! Yacob! bring me dot six-shooter right away."

Didn't Feel Well.

The Evil Effects of a Too Sudden Reformation.

"I don't feel well, doctor," exclaimed the tall man, who looked a little pale. "I think something's gone wrong with my innards or my head."

"I guess it's only the spring fever," smiled the doctor. "I don't think there's much out of the way with you. Where do you feel badly?"

"In my stomick," replied the tall man, somewhat reassured by the doctor's manner. "And I'm pretty nervous. Have been ever since I come East."

"Where do you belong?" asked the doctor, examining the patient's tongue.

"I come from Mountana," said the tall man.

"Do you smoke?"

"I was a powerful smoker, but they told me to quit, so I knocked off about a month ago."

"Drink?"

"I think that's where the trouble is. I was well onto that habit, but the doctor told me I'd got to give it up, and I've been breaking off gradually."

"Couldn't you give it up all at once!" asked the doctor, gravely.

"They told me I'd better not. Said it might kill me, so I've been tapering off, and I think I am tapering too fast. It I drank more it would be better for me."

"How much do you drink now?"

"Yesterday I had a quart of yitriol, and to-day I've stowed about a pint of prussic acid. Perhaps I ought to take more?"

"Great heavens, man, what do you take that for?" demanded the almost petrified doctor.

"Why, you see, I'm tapering off from Mountana whiskey, and them was the lightest I could find. What do you expect a man to take, poison?"

And when he went away he wasn't half as nervous as the doctor he left behind him.

"Come, Samivel, put oop dose shutters already. Ve moost close our store chust like odder beoples, on Saturday afternoon, to give our workmen a little fresh air, eh? But, Samivel, when you gets oop de shutters, lock the doors and exercise the poys until after the sunset goes down. Ve moost not let the poor fellows get sunstrike, Samivel."

The Fee of the Dioscuri.

Loud the midnight revel roared
In the home of Cranon's lord.
Lyres were ringing, flutes were shrilling,
Foamed in flower-wreathed bowls the glowing wine.
Torches flashes through the hall
Lit the armor on the wall—
Stout Chalcidian blades and lances,
Shield and helm and cuirsas ranged in line.

In the midst, in princely pride,
With his kinsmen at his side,
Lay proud Scopas, lord of Cranon,
On Milesian purples couched at ease,
Then, with half-uplifted hand,
Scarcely deigning to command,
All the banquet's din he silenced,
Beckoning to the bard Simonides.

He, the swan of Dorian song,
With the common feasters' throng
Lay, not wholly mingling, silent,
Musing great thought in his poet heart.
Slowly, at the chief's command,
Near the throne he took his stand,
As who wakes from dreams of heaven,
On dull earth to play a mere man's part.

Glancing half in scorn the while,
Scopas smiled a prince's smile;
"Here we now how lyres of Ceos
Skill to celebrate Thessalian deeds!
Grudge me not thy choicest lay,
What! a poet still, mew say,
Graces his foe. If gold thou cravest,
Gold have I for fifty Homers' needs!

"Sing my war"; my victories,"
Then he ceased. Simonides
Wreathed his brow with bays, and lightly
Ran his hand in prelude through the chords.
And he chanted how in fight
Scopas tamed Larissa's might;
Quelled Tolcas; ravaged Temps;
Tribute laid on vanquished Pherse's lords.

Now a nobler music flows,
For to worthier thence he rose—
Dwelt no more on man's mean triumphs—
Gods and heroes claim his praises now!
"Thus," he cries, "in earlier days
Castor stemmed the yielding frays!
Polydences in Therapnæ
Thus with plumes of triumphs decked his brow!"

Then in melting strains he told
All that sweetest tale of old—
Of the twins, the Dioscuri,
Castor, Polydeuces; how in strife
Castor fell; and at his grave
Deathless Polydeuces grave,
To restore his mortal brother,
Freely, half his own immortal life:

How the prison bonds of hell
From reviving Castor fell;
And, thenceforth, the Twins alternate
Life in Heaven and death in Hades share:
How their hero spirits reign,
Worshipped in Olymphia's fane;
And their Twin Star o'er the Ægean
Gleaming grants the storm-vext seaman's prayer.

Breathless hung the sobered throng
On the magic of the song,
Only Cranon's loud ungracious
Deemed his praise by praise of other marred,
"Friend," he sneers, "take half thy fee;
Half thy song was given to me:
Let thy Twins, thy Dioscuri,
Pay, themselves, their share of thy reward."

At the brutal prince's jest
Each sleek courtier smiled his best.
But a voice came: "Celan stranger,
At the door two horsemen ask for thee."
Even as he left the hall
Down it crashed upon them all:
All but him. That Voice had saved him.
Thus the Dioscuri paid their fee.

The Bobolink.

Let us see how the poet who wrote the memorable lines, "To a Water-fowl," William Cullen Bryant, attempted to render into words the song of "Robert of Lincoln."

ROBERT OF LINCOLN.

"Merrily swinging on brier and weed
Near to the nest of his little dame,
Over the mountain side or mead,
Robert of Lincoln is telling his name:
Bob-o'-link, bob-o'-link,
Spink, spank, spink;
Snug and safe is that nest of ours,
Hidden among the summer flowers.
Chee, chee, chee.

Robert of Lincoln is gayly drest,
Wearing a bright black wedding coat,
White are his shoulders and white his crest,
Hear him call in his merry note:
Bob-o'-link, bob-o'-link,
Spink, spank, spink,
Look what a nice new coat is mine,
Sure there was never a bird so fine.
Chee, chee, chee.

Robert of Lincoln's Quaker wife,
Pretty and quiet, with plain brown wings,
Passing at home a patient life,
Broods in the grass while her husband sings:
Bob-o'-link, bob-o'-link,
Spink, spank, spink;

I quite agreed with the author of "BIRDS AND POETS," when he says that "no other song-bird expresses so much self consciousness and vanity, and comes so near being an ornithological coxcomb."

He generally arrives about 16th May—spends about a week or ten days, desporting himself gaily in our meadows until his little "Quaker wife" arrives: the grande demande having been made, and the suitor accepted, bird-nesting business in fact, begins. In August and September, the young folks being full grown, prepare for the autumn migration and steer for the rice-fields of Virginia, to be slaughtered by myriads and eaten; the males have doffed their brilliant black and white dominos and assumed the sober tints of the females and young birds.

A practical ornithologist, Wilson Flagg, has written what Burroughs thinks, "by far the best poem of the bobolink, much more in the mood and spirit of the actual song than Bryant's poem":

THE O'LINCOLN FAMILY.

A flock of merry singing-birds were sporting in the grove:
Some were warbling cheerily, and some were making love:
There were Bobolincon, Wadolincon, Winteseeble, Conquedle,—
A livelier set was never led by tabor, pipe, or fiddle,—
Crying, "Phew, shew, Wadolincon, see, see, Bobolincon,
Down among the tickelops, hiding in the butter cups!
I know the saucy chap, I see his shining cap
Bobbing in the clover there—see, see, see!
Up flies Bobolincon, perching on an apple-tree,
Startled by his rival's song, quickened by his raillery,
Soon he spies the rogue afloat, curveting in the air,
And merrily he turns about, and warns him to beware!
'Tis you that would a-wooing go, down among the rushes O!
But wait a week, till flowers are cheery,—wait a week, and ere you marry,
Be sure of a house wherein to tarry!
Wadolink, Whiskodink, Tom Denny, wait, wait, wait."!

Every one 's a funny fellow; every one 's a little mellow;
Follow, follow, follow, follow, o'er the hill and in the hollow!—
Merrily, merrily, then they hie; now they rise and now they fly;
They cross and turn, and in and out, and down in the middle, and wheel about,—
With a "Phew, shew, Wodolincon! listen to me, Bobolincon!—
Happy 's the wooing that 's speedily doing, that 's speedily doing,
That 's merry and over with the bloom of the clover!
Bobolincon, Wodolincon, Winteseeble, follow, follow me!"

And now, my young friends, you see how famous the poets have made your rollicking old acquaintance, who, under the well known denomination Le Gog u. cheers with his marvellous bubbling, inimitable mad music so many Canadian homes, in and out of the city of Quebec.

* N. B.—My last ought to have been stated from St. Joseph and not from "St. Marie, Beauce." The antique Norman plough worked with wheels has disappeared from St. Marie, where prevail modern ideas in agriculture and progress.

Help wanted here! Things are going wrong again! Our crop is cut short by the late spring; the rats have eaten up our rollers; our supply of blank paper is exhausted; our mill grindeth not; the grass taketh the watermelon patch; our corn-shellers don't sell worth a cent; our cattle are lying out; fish won't bite; the mail routes to Mud creek and Douglass are no more. Yet, we refuse to ask our subscribers for a cent, even if the "devil" has struck for higher wages. We only mention these things to show what a newspaper man can take—Coffee County, Ga., Gazette.

The audience proved their delight by enthusiastic encores on each appearance of the artists.

The presentation was made by the Rector in behalf of the members of the guild, and Mr. Rawson, who was quite overcome by this unexpected token of friendship, replied in a most feeling manner. Mr. Rawson was also the recipient of a handsome pocket-book.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE—On Saturday morning a man named Louis Larochelle, of Montreal, was arrested in the horrors. He was searched and locked up in a cell in No. 4 station, St. Paul street. When the police returned shortly afterwards to visit him, they found that he had cut his throat with a small pen knife which by some means or other he had concealed from the police, when locked up. A doctor was immediately called, who ordered his removal to the hospital. It is not anticipated that any serious results will follow.

THE FRONTISPIECE for the July number of Harper's Magazine is an exquisitely beautiful engraving from Mr. F. S. Church's picture, "A Witch's Daughter." The number is very rich in illustrations, and its Table of Contents presents very strong literary attractions. The opening article of the number is an interesting description of Hampstead Heath, the most picturesque of the suburbs of London, by William H. Reiding, with thirteen striking illustrations from drawings by Robt. W. Macbeth and E. F. Brewtnall. Alexander F. Oakey contributes a brief article explaining what is meant by "Conventional Art," with fourteen pictures illustrating the subject. A second paper on "The Romanoffs" is contributed by H. Sutherland Edwards, devoted to the reign of the late Emperor Alexander II. The article is illustrated by portraits of Alexander II, Alexander III, the present Empress, and the Heir-apparent. An admirable paper on Cincinnati is contributed by Olive Logan, with twenty illustrations from drawings by our best artists. Colonel Higginson's eighth chapter of American History is entitled "The Second Generation of Englishmen in America," an exposition of the American Colonies at the middle of the seventeenth century, with effective illustrations from drawings by Howard Pyle and old portraits. An entertaining article on Chatterton is contributed by John Ingram, who has given much study to the subject, with some beautiful illustrations by Alfred Fredericks. Rosina Emmet contributes a spirited illustration for a song by Robert Browning. The fiction of the number is of an attractive and popular kind, consisting of the third part of "A Castle in Spain," with five illustrations by Abbey; "Born to Good Luck," a short story, by Charles Reade: "Quite Private," a lively dramatic sketch, by Mrs. D. H. R. Goodale; and a humorous sketch, entitled "Aunt Maria and the Autophone," William L. Stone contributes a paper entitled "The Declaration of Independence in a New Light," disclosing some novel facts connected with the passage of the original resolution, and the subsequent signing of the instrument known as "The Declaration." George Cary Eggleston treats the subject of the Education of Women from a practical point of view, urging that a woman is of more value as a woman than as a scholar, and that her education should prepare her first for the homely duties and responsibilities that must devolve upon her, whatever else that education may include. Wong Chin Foo, the editor of The Chinese American, contributes an interesting article, entitled "Political Honors in China," which will commend itself to all readers interested in the improvement of our civil service. Poems are contributed by F. D. Morice and Jenny P. Bigelow. Mr. George William Curtis, in the Editor's Easy Chair, gives some important suggestions to committees having in charge the designs for Centennial monuments; comments on the memoir of General John A. Dix by his son; notices the important work being accomplished by the Society of Decorative Art: gives an interesting view of John Very as a poet; and, reminding us that this is the Luther memorial year, contracts the conduct of that reformer with the policy of those who adopt the easier maxim, "to let well enough alone." The other Editorial Departments are as timely and interesting as usual, and the Editor's Drawer is especially good.

Queen Victoria's Family and Reign

(Boston Traveller.)

The following is believed to be a strictly correct statement of the ancestors and predecessors of the Great Queen who has reigned in her leading dominions in order to bring about the existing British Royal Family, beginning with William the First, commonly called "The Conqueror." Victoria I., Queen Regnant of the United Kingdom and Great Britain and Ireland. Empress of India, etc., etc.. was the daughter and only child of Edward, Duke of Kent, fourth son of George III., who was son of Frederick, Prince of Wales, who was the son of George II., who was the son of George I., who was son of the Electress Sophia (by Ernest Augustus, Elector of Hanover,) who was daughter of Elizabeth Steward, (by Frederick V., Elector Palatine and "Winter King" of Bohemia,) who was daughter of James I., (VI of Scotland,) who was son of Mary, Queen of Scots, (by Henry Stewart, Lord Darnley,) who was daughter of James V., who was son of Margaret Tudor, (daughter of Henry VIII and Elizabeth Plantagenet, that Queen Consort being daughter of Edward IV.,) and Edward IV. was son of Richard, Duke of York, who was son of Anne Mortimer, (by Richard Plantagenet, Earl of Cambridge, son of Edmund Duke of York, fifth son of Edward III.,) who was daughter of Roger, Earl of March who was son of Philippa, (by Edmund, Earl of March,) who was daughter of Lionel, Duke of Clarence, who was third son of Edward III., who was son of Edward II., who was son of Edward I., who was son of Henry III., who was son of John, who was son of Henry II., who was son of Matilda, (by Geoffrey Plantagenet, Count of Anjou,) who was daughter of Henry I., (by Matilda of Scotland, sister of Edgar Atheling, and therefore of the Saxon blood Royal,) who was son of William the Conqueror. Any one who is curious concerning English (and British) Kings must have been surprised on noticing the comparatively small number of English royal ancestors Queen Victoria has, even when her Scottish ancestors are included. Most persons confound ancestors and predecessors. Macaulay placed the matter right on a conversation with the Queen. Under the date of March 9th, 1850, he wrote in his Diary: "To dinner at the palace. The Queen was most gracious to me. She talked much about my book, and owned that she had nothing to say for her poor ancestor, James the Second. Not Your Majesty's ancestor,' said I; "Your Majesty's predecessor.' I hope this was not an uncourtly correction. I meant it as a compliment and she seemed to take it so." Leaving aside members of her own immediate line, the following English (or British) sovereigns are not of Queen Victoria's ancestors: Anne, William III., Mary II., James II., Charles II., Charles I., Elizabeth, Mary I., Edward VI., Henry VIII., Edward V., Richard III., Richard I., Stephen, and William II. Of the other English sovereigns who were ancestors of the present sovereign are William I., Henry I., Henry II., John, Henry III., the first four Edwards and Henry VII. James I. was of her ancestors, but he was a Scottishman. We must call Elizabeth Stewart her first English ancestor, though her father was of Scotland, and so in one sense was the daughter, who was in her seventh year when her father became King of England. Some of the older English Kings were ancestors of Queen Victoria because of marriages between English Princes and Princesses of other countries, a notable instance of which was the union of Henry I, of England and Matilda, of Scotland. There was indirect connections formed, too, we think by marriages that were not very prominent. It would be difficult, indeed, to follow out all the bearings of all royal marriages, even in England. It has been said that most Englishmen do not go farther back than the birth of Sophia, Electress of Hanover, (1630), on whom the English crown was settled more than seventy years later, before she was a granddaughter of James I., and a Protestant, or Nothingarian. They regard her, we are told, as being Foundress of the Reigning Family, as Conqueror of the Throne, or as having brought it into the family, which is the same thing that was meant when William I. was regarded as Conqueror. As Blackstone tells us, "What we call purchase, perquisitio, the feudists called conquisitio, both denoting any means of acquiring an estate out of the common course of inheritance. And this is still the proper phrase in the law of Scotland, as it was among the Norman jurists, who styled the first purchaser (that is, him who brought the estate into the family which at present owns it) the conqueror or conqueror, which seems to be all that was meant by the appelation that was given to William the Norman." The English, we see, always have adhered to the same line, they have managed to combine prescription and revolution in a manner unknown to any other people. Returning with William I. there always has been a member of the Conqueror's house on the throne, and Queen Victoria, reigns in the twenty-fifth generation since the day of the conquest. The last evolution in England is generally supposed to have closed in 1649, but we should be inclined to say that it closed, either in 1701, on the passage of the Act of Settlement, which called the House of Hanover to the English throne, or in 1714, when that Act went into effect through the ascension of George I. to that throne, he being son of the Electress Sophia, who had died some weeks before the death of Queen Anne. There were many more "legitimate" claimants to the throne, when it was settled upon the Electress Sophia and her descendants, by Parliament; but the Act of Settlement has been maintained, so that Queen Victoria is not only a constitutional sovereign, but she the best representative of the idea of constitutional government known among monarchs. She is the embodiment of the principle of constitutional monarchy, and she is thoroughly faithful to that principle, as good a sovereign as she is a woman—which is saying all that can be said—a combination of the highest claims to consideration that can be found among the rulers of the world, and of which the English are properly proud. If they do look upon her as the express representative of the Foundress of the line of which she is the head, it is evidence of their sense, and of their just appreciation of the position held by their country in the modern world, which may be said to date from the birth-time of the Electress Sophia, who would have been Queen of Great Britain had she lived about fifty-five days longer before finding her easy parting hour. There was something striking in her death. On the 8th of June, 1814—being in her 84th year (her birth took place on the 13th October, 1630, at the Hague)—she began her usual walk at Herenhausen, as the sun declined, attended by her grand-daughter-in-law, the Princess Caroline. A hasty summer-shower commenced, the sunshining. Throwing the train of her open robe over her head for shelter, the aged lady hurried forward. "Is not your Royal Highness walking too quickly?" asked Caroline. "I believe I am," said the Electress, and sank down. Though the Princess caught her as she fell, she found her dead. It was an enviable passage to the world of shades from the world of shadows.

A Delicacy at London Breakfasts.

(From the St. James's Gazette.)

Plovers' eggs have not been so plentiful this season (in consequence of the backwardness of the spring) as in some former years, and at some fashionable breakfasts these delicacies are said to have cost £1 per dozen! It is a curious fact that the eggs of the "green-crested lapwing" have from the earliest times commanded what may be called a fancy price; while the finest eggs of our domestic fowls may be purchased for eighteen pence a dozen, plovers' eggs will be charged on some days quite as many shillings. Enormous quantities of these eggs are consumed during the London season, or so long as they can be procured, either at home or abroad, and instances are not wanting in which, when the eggs of the peewit are not obtainable, the eggs of other birds are sold as the real article.

A very large business is carried on in plovers' eggs from early in March to the middle of June; and so great has become the demand that the most distant fields are searched in order to add to the supply. Formerly enough for London used to be got in the counties of Kent, Essex, and Norfolk; now they are brought from distant parts of Scotland, as well as from Ireland and from Holland. There are generally four eggs in a plover's nest, and in some seasons as many as seven hundred nests have been despoiled in a district; and the stock of birds must really be numerous that can keep up, season after season, such a supply of eggs as we know is required in London alone.

Dear old Winter has been sticking to Spring closer than a man who wants to borrow a quarter.

By the laws of Denmark a drunken person unable to walk is taken to the station or to his home in a close carriage, at the expense of the house that sold him his liquor. This is an improvement on the American plan of clubbing the man on the feet until he gets up, and then pounding him on the head all the way to the station house, and making him pay for the club, if it breaks.—Burlington Hawkeye.

It appears that the Marquis of Lansdowne, the new governor-general of Canada, was to have succeeded Lord Aberdare as president of the Royal Geographical Society, and at the late annual meeting of the society Sir Henry Rawlinson remarked that on more than one occasion when the society had elected a distinguished man for its president her Majesty's Government had straightway fixed upon that person to fill some important and distant appointment. It was so when they elected the Marquis of Ripon as their president; and again in the case of Lord Dufferin and of Lord Northbrook.

It is often asked "Why does my doctor recommend Cadbury's Cocoa Essence?" The reason is that being absolutely genuine, and concentrated by the removal of the superfluous fat, it contains four times the amount of nitrogenous or flesh-forming constituents of the average of other Cocoas which are mixed with sugar and starch. Beware of imitations, which are often pushed by shop-keepers for the extra profit in26Lmd&w

The New York Herald, which, by the way, is not given to saying flattering things of Englishmen generally, pays a tribute to the good sense of one of that nationality in the following:—"The other evening there happened to be sitting in a Madison-avenue car a number of men of noticeable different nationalities. An unmistakable Englishman calmly waited until the car came to a dead standstill before he composedly left even the door. The German suddenly rose with with a bounce, bolted for the door, and, on the steps, called for the car to stop. An Irishman strongly broke his way through a crowd and bumped against a fellow-countryman who was trying to get on the car. An American swung himself off while the car was in rapid motion, had to run a half dozen steps to catch up to himself, and swore because he got off a block too soon."

The most successful physicians of the present day prescribe little or no medicine. It is demonstrated that nature can be best assisted by the use of wholesome, nutritious and digestable food, and as such "JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF" has attained its unprecedented popularity. The British Government Analyst has pronounced it a perfect food. The Queen's physician prescribes it and scientists everywhere have titled it "a boon to the age," while hundreds of thousands can attribute their increased mental and physical energy to its vital merits. CONSUMPTION.

From H. B. Smith, Esq., a prominent Merchant of Buctouche, Kent County, N.B., under date June 8th, 1877:—

Dear Sir,—I have suffered for some years past with Couch from Affection of the Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Weakness of the Chest, and Want of Appetite, and have tried many so-called remedies but without any effect whatever until I commenced using ROBINSON'S PHOSPHORIZED EMULSION. I have now taken 8 bottles, and find this quite equal to what it is represented to be, for it has WORKED LIKE A CHARM, and I can cordially recommend it to all who are affected as I have been, as I feel it is going to make a perfect cure of me. I still continue it, and I must say I never took anything equal to it. If you wish to make any use of this for the benefit of yourself and the world at large you can do so, for I think it should be known.

I remain, yours truly,

LOSS OF APPETITE IN HORSES.

Horses lose their appetite from various causes, but most frequently by the approach of some disease, this circumstance ought not to be overlooked by those who own horses, but should be immediately attended to as by so doing the disease may be checked, and the life of the horse saved. To do which we are positive there is nothing equal to "Harley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;" it purifies the blood, corrects all derangements of the digestive organs, and as a necessary consequence the appetite is restored, the skin becomes soft, and the coat assumes a soft and shining appearance.

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop & Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, is like itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of advanced pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs (when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected), colds, laryngitis, and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption, it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreadful scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant wear and tear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung membrane. The phosphorous, lime and soda, in combination with it, are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphite supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as in strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, and sold by all druggists.
