

Realty market shaken by mass defection

A. E. LePAGE loses agents in move to Montreal Trust

By ANDY DODGE

YELLOW and black Montreal Trust "for sale" signs can be expected to sprout on more Westmount lawns in the coming year, competing with the more familiar A. E. LePage and Royal Trust emblems and sporting the very familiar names of longtime LePage agents.

This will be the result of a wholesale move last week by the majority of senior people of A. E. LePage's Westmount branch, many of whom were veterans of the old Westmount Realties which merged with LePage in 1973. The shake-up has also led to the resignation of the LePage branch manager, Eugene A. Zinay.

Disgruntled agents decided to move en masse to the newly established Montreal Trust Westmount office after the LePage head office refused to back down on a program to retain two percent of commissions (half from the agents themselves) for a national advertising campaign.

Parking responses weighed

A synopsis of the letters sent to city hall concerning the recent parking proposals "has been very carefully studied" by the city's administrative traffic committee, which is preparing a revised set of recommendations to send on to council, Mayor Donald MacCallum reported last week.

The recommendations have yet to be accepted by committee of council, he said, but "we hope to have some indication of where we are going" after council's committee meeting next Monday night.

A formal announcement of the next step might not be made until the next council meeting on May 5, however, and perhaps not even then.

"There doesn't seem to be a need for a public meeting as such," His Worship said, "but that hasn't been ruled out. Very considerable weight has been put on these letters and the response of the citizens."

The fact that the Toronto office did not consult with the local agents before making the move riled them enough that they began "shopping around" for other companies and found Montreal Trust ready and willing to accommodate them with new facilities, a new real estate branch and, it is reported, better commission splits than LePage was offering.

The numbers involved still are not clear. LePage officials claim that 16 of 29 agents were lost but some agents have sug-

Métro openings mean changes to Westmount bus routes

Significant changes in bus routes on St. Catherine street in Westmount will go into effect on April 28 as the Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission opens three new Métro stations just to the south and east of Westmount's border.

The Nos. 78 and 104 bus routes no longer will come into Westmount, but the street will become the new route of the No. 90 bus headed to and from Lachine.

The 103 bus will take up the old 104 route in Westmount, but will continue to serve most of Notre Dame de Grâce as it did before.

The breakdown is as follows: The 78 bus, which until now connected the Angrignon and Atwater Métro stations with Ville Emard, Côte St. Paul and western St. Henri, will run straight along St. James street to the Place d'Armes Métro station, rather than looping up to St. Catherine street.

When the Métro is closed after 1:30 am, the No. 106 bus will continue to run on St. Catherine street, connecting Westmount and LaSalle on the old 78 route.

The 90, which heretofore ran south on Atwater to St. Antoine street and St. James street into Lachine, now will go on St. Catherine street, de Maison-neuve boulevard, Upper Lachine road and onto its old St. James route.

The 103 will run west on St. Catherine street.

MacCallum to vote 'No'

Mayor Donald MacCallum does not feel he should become directly involved in the referendum campaign, he told THE EXAMINER last week, though he is not at all reticent on the subject.

"I am definitely going to vote 'No,'" he said, "because I am a Quebecer and I'm proud of it, I am a Canadian and I'm proud of it, and I think it's the best thing for Quebec to remain in Canada."

Mistaken wording last week:

WMA clarifies position on parking enforcement

Westmount's four-hour parking restriction should not be enforced until the by-law is amended, the Westmount Municipal Association said this week, clarifying its recommendations presented to city council last week.

What WMA President Hubert de La Beaumelle called an "unfortunate and erroneous" word — "while" — appeared in the written version of the first of the municipal body's recommendations to the city on how to deal with the parking problem.

The word made the recommendation appear to endorse the enforcement of the four-hour restriction during the time the parking policy is under consideration and the recommendation was reported as such in last week's EXAMINER.

In fact, Mr. de La Beaumelle said Tuesday, the WMA's position is: "We do not propose that the parking by-law be enforced overnight immediately. We propose that the present by-law be first amended to take care of the sticker system and possibly some of our other proposals and then be enforced."

The other 10 recommendations, as reported last week, outline how the WMA believes such a sticker system of parking could operate and make other suggestions on establishment and implementation of an overall parking policy.

Mr. de La Beaumelle added in his statement to THE EXAMINER Tuesday that he hoped the mistake "did not create too much confusion in the minds of your readers."

Returning officer set for vote

Political forces moved into high gear on Tuesday this week with the announcement of the date for the provincial referendum, and Westmount already has a returning officer and returning office ready for the May 20 voting day.

Jon G. Bradley was sworn in as the Westmount returning officer yesterday morning, replacing André Gascon who resigned the position last month. He is expected to establish his office at 4444 St. Catherine street west, corner Metcalfe avenue.

Mr. Bradley is an associate professor in McGill University's faculty of education and a resident of 601 Roslyn avenue.

Revision of the official provincial electoral list will begin a week from Monday, on April 28, and run through May 3. Canadian citizens who have been living in Quebec since May 20, 1979, and who will be 18 or over by May 20 this year, have the right to vote.

The official provincial enumeration was made last October, and applies to all elections and referenda held between then and next October. Thus, those who are qualified to vote and have been included on the list have nothing to worry about, but should check the enumeration list to assure their status and the correctness of the entry.

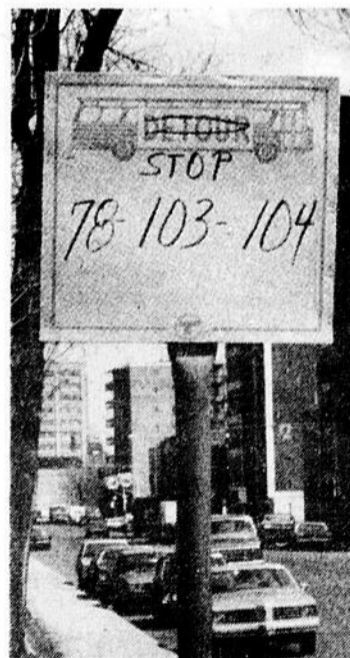

Officials have told THE EXAMINER there will be advance polling for the referendum on May 16 and 17. Thus, those who expect to be out of town on Referendum Day will be able to vote before the long holiday weekend.

The City of Westmount Recreation Department is planning a spring baseball program for boys in the Bantam and Pee Wee age categories, provided there is sufficient interest.

Instruction and exhibition games will be held at the Westmount Athletic Grounds on Saturday afternoons.

Three adult coaches with an abundance of baseball experience and knowledge have volunteered their services.

GARDEN DEBRIS AND TREE REMOVAL

Residents are advised that garden debris—grass cuttings and leaves—should be placed in containers near the household garbage or behind the sidewalk for removal by the City's refuse collectors. Tree cuttings should be bundled and tied securely. Such debris should never be placed on the sidewalk or street.

Residents should inform their contract gardeners that material will be received free of charge at the Municipal Yard.

The City does not have the facilities to dispose of private trees which have been cut down. Therefore, property owners are reminded that their contracts for the removal of trees should include provision for disposal of the trunks and branches. Trees which have been affected by Dutch elm disease should be destroyed and removed to dump sites to prevent the spread of the disease.

Residents who contravene or permit the contravention of the by-laws governing disposal of garden debris and trees are subject to fines.

Fire stats show 1979 both a good and bad year

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

It was both a good year and a bad year for Westmount's fire record depending on how one views the recently completed 1979 statistics.

On one side of the coin, both the number of fire calls and the number of fires in buildings were down from 1978.

On the other side of the coin, however, one fireman died in action and eight major fires pushed this city's estimated fire losses in monetary terms to $931,808, three times higher than the year before.

No matter how one flips the coin, however, it would seem to turn up on the winning side for the average citizen who could consider himself well-protected by the 65-man service which continued to respond to calls for many kinds of assistance.

The prevention and service-oriented brigade answered 1,073 calls, of which 195 were for fires in buildings compared with 1,139 calls in 1978, 202 for fires in buildings.

The total loss for 1979 of $931,000, up from a low $258,550 in 1978, compared more closely with losses in 1977 and 1976 of $639,200 and $645,300 respectively.

"These statistics should be a growing concern to the community," Chief Edward Martell said. "I would ask every citizen of Westmount to join with us to lower the fire incidence and make this decade a memorable one statistically as well as historically."

Although municipalities tend to view fire statistics in terms of dollar damage, as far as the average citizen is concerned, statistics may not always tell the whole story. Fire losses are estimated by the officer at the scene of the fire and may vary greatly depending on conditions. Reconstruction costs, in addition, have increased significantly over the past year.

Eight major fires

The eight major fires in 1979 actually accounted for $815,000, or 87 percent, of the fire loss figure. The 187 other fires in dwellings resulted in estimated losses of $116,000, a figure which fire officials consider more closely reflects the past year's record.

The relatively low fire damages recorded for these 187 fires would seem to indicate, according to Chief Martell, that the brigade's campaign for early detection and reporting of fires is making headway.

"Acknowledging that the modern fire department's primary function is the prevention of fire, with fire fighting being recognized as a vitally important secondary measure, significant advances have been made to further the knowledge of our citizens with regard to fire," he points out.

"We have been urging citizens for more than a year now to install smoke detectors and to report small fires before they get a chance to take hold," he said.

He pointed out the importance of early detection, citing two of the year's major fires, which had burnt for some time in vacant houses before firemen were called to the scene, gaining too much hold in the structure to be quickly extinguished. These two fires, one at 494 Elm avenue, another at 482 Mount Pleasant avenue where Fmn. Eric Hart died, accounted for $225,000 of the losses. Largest single fire loss was at 18 Weredale Park, 4026 Dorchester boulevard, $310,000.

All three major fires were considered to have originated in electrical wiring, making that the main cause of all fires investigated here in 1979.

Wiring main cause

Of 30 investigations carried out by the brigade's Fire Prevention Bureau, nine were directly attributed to faulty wiring, seven to arson, four to maliciousness, another four were termed accidental. Three were caused by smokers' material, two by children playing with matches and one by a defective fireplace chimney.

The brigade called for help from other mutual aid cities on 12 occasions in 1979 under its agreement with Hampstead, Outremont, Côte St. Luc, Town of Mt. Royal and St. Laurent. In return, Westmount firefighters answered 18 calls from these municipalities, six more than in 1978.

The ambulance, now in its fifth year of service, answered 304 calls, mainly for injured persons and those suffering cardiac and respiratory problems, a decrease of 19 calls over 1978. Special paramedic training was given to all ambulance crews.

Readers of THE EXAMINER who follow the brigade's calls through the regular column "Where Were They Going?" will already have noted that the brigade also helped residents with gas leaks, burst plumbing, floods and problems with electrical wiring, appliances and malfunctioning heating units. Other calls included bomb incidents, strange odors, internal fire alarms ringing and persons trapped in elevators and rooms.

Sixty-five false alarms were reported in 1979.

A decrease from 1978 in the number of building inspections from 1,781 to 1,386 is directly attributable to a reduction in staff to one man in the Fire Prevention Bureau. In 1976, a staff of three carried out 2,674 inspections.

Despite the cuts, the department continued to provide its Junior Firefighters Course as well as lectures and distribution of literature.

Senior Westmount fire officials were again called on to give courses in other municipalities on fire and arson investigations and officership, two such courses being given in Vermont to the Chittenden County Regional Fire School and the North County International Fire School by Deputy Chief William Timmons.

Long-time teacher:

Funeral this morning for Ernest A. Hutchison

Funeral services will be held this morning at 11 o'clock from D. A. Collins Chapel, 5610 Sherbrooke street west, for Ernest A. Hutchison, a teacher in Westmount schools for almost 30 years.

Mr. Hutchison collapsed while attending services at Westmount Park United Church Sunday and died shortly after being admitted to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital.

Despite his long association with Westmount schools, Mr. Hutchison will also be remembered by graduates of Verdun High School, not only for his teaching but for his coaching of their football and hockey teams from 1932 to 1939.

Mr. Hutchison joined the staff of Westmount Junior High School in 1940 and later went on to Westmount High School where he was head of the French department at the time of his retirement in 1969. During his 11 years in "retirement," he taught in various private schools.

Thousands of Westmount boys and girls were taught by him over his 29 years here. He made demands on their intellectual talents and expected them to "deliver." If they did not, they invariably had to put in extra time to "measure up," but instead of detaining them after school, Mr. Hutchison invited them to appear in the morning before regular classes began, "à huit heures, s'il vous plait!" His "huit heures" became a part of life at WHS.

He received respect from all sides during his career: from colleagues for his loyalty to his profession, from children for his skill in the classroom and from his friends and loved ones for his affection, good humor and integrity.

A good friend this week noted that years ago a tribute to a teacher read: "He taught Latin, and more than Latin," and that for Ernest Hutchison a final tribute might well read: "He taught French, and more than French."

He is survived by his wife, the former Alice Brown, a resident of Grey avenue, son Bruce and granddaughters Ann and Lora.

Meeting set

The Quebec Union Municipalities will be holding its annual convention at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel April 29 to May 1, while the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities will meet in Halifax between June 8 and 11. Mayor Donald MacCallum said he plans to attend both meetings, perhaps accompanied by some city council members and senior staff.

We Say

Our twin, Rimouski

HIS Worship Mayor MacCallum's remarks at last week's city council meeting concerning media coverage of the annual Westmount-Rimouski Pee-wee hockey match and attendant visitation between the twin cities are noteworthy.

We cannot speak for other newspapers and for broadcasters here and in the lower St. Lawrence, but it should be stated that we share Mr. MacCallum's view that, particularly in these pre-referendum days, any event such as this—a get-together of people, and notably young people, representing Anglophone and Francophone communities—is very important.

It is just possible that if such interchanges were more frequent, between Westmount and Rimouski and between other paired municipalities of the two great Canadian cultures, the ideas which have led to the impending referendum would not be before us.

Instead, we might have more understanding of one another and, more important, not harbor the misconceptions which endanger the nation.

The pro-mayor, Ald. Gallery, reported that Mayor Philippe Michaud of Rimouski has invited not only the young hockey players of Westmount but their parents to travel down river next year on the next return engagement and Mr. Gallery is responding by investigating a group transportation plan to make the visit all the more attractive.

This speaks well of official confidence that, whatever happens in the province politically, the good relations will continue between the twins. We applaud both the broadened arrangements and the attitudes motivating them.

This has been our supportive stance from the beginning, when the twinning took place in Centennial year and the annual hockey engagements began, during the mayoralty of Mr. Michael Tucker. A glance back through the files will show a very considerable amount of newspaper and editorial backing given by THE WESTMOUNT EXAMINER down through the years.

Unfortunately, we must sadly note that the local newspaper of Rimouski has not seen all of this in the same light. Its coverage has been scant to nil, year after year, and we somehow doubt that the good citizens of Rimouski have much knowledge at all of this annual event, whether it takes place here or in their hometown. Our attempts to exchange photos with L'Echo have been rebuffed and the exchange of copies of our papers begun in 1968 just recently was terminated by our Rimouski contemporary.

In short, there does not appear to be much popular interest, let alone enthusiasm, for its special relationship with Westmount in the Lower St. Lawrence centre. And that saddens us.

We must truthfully add that among the general public of Westmount there is little more excitement demonstrated. The week before the match here this year, we gave over half a page to stories and picture to promote the visit and game; yet, in the event the audience consisted of little more than proud local parents, some friends and the two official parties.

Mayor MacCallum took us to task publicly for "only a paragraph, and that on the back page," in our following issue. When we pointed out to him later that the "paragraph" was in fact a fairly complete summary of what happened and comprised the caption on a three-column photo (in which he appeared) he felt that this was not nearly enough and questioned THE EXAMINER's news judgment.

It is not uncommon for readers with special interests to question the news play and treatment of their newspapers. In this instance, we have no apology to make. Our job is to serve first what appear to be the chief interests of our readers.

The page one stories that week, which in our view precluded pre-empting by the Peewee hockey game and visit, included a court judgment on Weredale House; the mayor's own rebuttal of the previous week's appraisal of this year's local tax bills; formation of a "No" committee here; the murder of Mr. Ralph Ordower in Alexis Nihon Plaza, and the death of Mr. Allan Bronfman.

Besides, there was little more to be said about the Rimouski exchange which had not already been anticipated in the previous week's issue.

Our suggestion to His Worship, and to Mayor Michaud of Rimouski: find the means to make this event more frequent than annual and to popularize it. We'll report fully, freely and prominently anything they can come up with. And if any citizen has anything beyond a tired ho-hum to offer, we'll promote that, too.

Realties realities

WHEN any local institution has a problem, it is one for the whole community.

No matter that it is a commercial undertaking. All the more reason for concern in that business is the motor of any city.

When word broke into the open last week that A. E. LePage (Quebec) Inc.'s local branch (until recently, rather, the headquarters of the long-established, respected and highly successful Westmount Realities Inc.) had internal problems, it was a shock to the many who through the years have dealt with the firm and its large, knowledgeable staff.

From the outside it is very difficult to determine exactly what has been going on. It is the essence of private enterprise that such things are essentially private. And though we have many friends in the local company, the story at this writing has not been fully pieced together.

This much we know: a number of senior people have either resigned or are leaving for what they perceive as good and sufficient reason—but even there, they likewise could be the victims of little more than poor communications and misunderstanding, on their part or on that of management.

Likewise, the coincidental establishment of another realty firm's new office in Westmount may have complicated the situation.

The Toronto-based LePage firm may have had good reason to replace with its own name the distinguished "Westmount Realities" identification of this essentially local enterprise after taking it over several years ago. We are instinctively suspicious of take-overs, absentee ownerships and the ways of "big" business setting out to reform the old and tried with business-school theory and remote control. The sure touch of local experience and instinct, demonstrated through the years by members of the Mills family who built Westmount Realities to become LePage's reputedly top division, seems to have been lost somewhere.

The realties business is, more than almost any other undertaking, people. People never can be taken for granted. Specially if they are keen, competitive thrusters. If that is what has happened here it is sad, for both the large and talented staff of people built up over

A great spring flower show

SPRING, whatever the state of the weather, comes to Westmount each year with the opening of the spring flower show.

As if to match the easy winter and early start of warmer temperatures and clear, dry streets, this year's flower show which opened in the Westmount Park conservatories last week seems to have outdone all its predecessors.

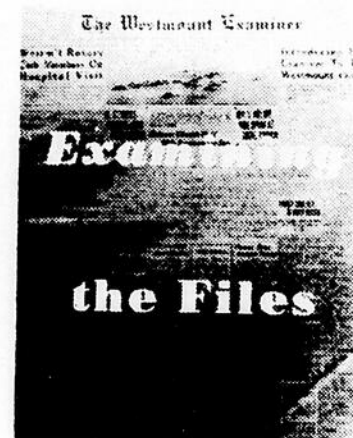

It is a truly magnificent effort by the parks department staff. Both the flowers and the settings are pure joy.

Every once in a while, someone gets the notion that Westmount's botanical effort is too much of a luxury which might be an easy spot to wield the economy axe. But by the time early April rolls around, money-saving gives way to admiration—and our flowers are relieved for yet another year.

This may be seasonal enthusiasm, but one of the important things which a city like Westmount can bring to urban life is this uncommon touch of nature and beauty. We feel that if a referendum were to be held right now on a proposition to do away with the municipal flower effort, there would be a resounding "Non!"

the years in the Greene avenue establishment as well as for the company. The real estate business has been booming recently as it never has before. Companies and staffs have been enjoying great prosperity, which could easily blind them to basic business realities.

From a neutral corner, our sympathies lie with both parties along with our hope that all concerned will quickly readjust from their respective difficulties.

"Tramways service was delayed when one of the large elm trees opposite the Church of the Ascension was blown down on Sherbrooke street directly across the car tracks, bringing down the overhead wires and blocking traffic. This tree had formerly received treatment at the hands of a tree surgeon but the strong wind caused it to snap off close to the ground and an inspection of the butt revealed that there was very little sound wood left. No one was injured, beyond having to wait or walk for a street car."

"Westmount will have 10-storey apartment buildings, bachelor apartments and additional commercial thoroughfares by virtue of building by-law changes ratified by the council on Wednesday. In certain districts the new building code will allow the construction of 10-storey buildings of 125 feet in height. Previously building heights in Westmount were limited to six storeys or 75 feet. Small dwelling units will be allowed in Westmount in newly constructed apartment buildings only and the amendments modify the restrictions on Sherbrooke street from the east city limits to Greene avenue to allow business offices and bank offices in new buildings only."

"Now that Westmount and Montreal have reached agreement on sharing the costs of the Métro, a subway extension through Westmount may have moved a little closer. Mayor Jean Drapeau, in an interview on CJAD, disclosed that an extension westward of the subway, beyond Atwater for the east-west line, might come 'sooner than some people think.' Mayor Drapeau reported that the extension would depend 'on the success of the lines under construction.'"

"Addressing the Quebec Community Newspapers Association annual meeting at Mont Gabriel on Saturday, Jacques-Yvan Morin, leader of the Parti Québécois official opposition in the Quebec National Assembly, said he would like to have an English-speaking PQ candidate running in Westmount and other Anglophone constituencies in the next general elections. He said the PQ would guarantee the rights of minorities in the province-state and condemned the present Liberal government with respect to Bill 22 which, he said, satisfies neither French nor English citizens. He forecast eventual victory for his party as the only alternative to the present régime."

Makes big enamel murals

By JOAN CAPREOL

SHANGHAI-born Joyce Rose is an enamelist who has executed a number of huge, spectacular murals for public and private buildings.

The artist is noted for a 12 by 9 foot, enamel and copper composition The Jerusalem Mural which hangs in the Montreal headquarters of the Canadian Jewish Congress. It was reproduced as a poster for El Al Israel Airlines.

"I wanted the white bird with the black beak, battling against the dark cloud in the sky to project something of Jerusalem's plight throughout history," said Mrs. Rose. "It is the drama which has always loomed over Jerusalem."

Mrs. Rose has grey eyes which change to blue or green depending on the color she is wearing. She is attractive, slim and soft-spoken with an English accent.

Last year Joyce Rose produced a 16 by 8 foot mural for the hall of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue. The inscription from Job reads: "For there is hope unto a tree if it be cut down that it sprout again and that the tender branch thereof will not cease."

Mrs. Rose described this mural thus: "There is a big tree — the life of a person. It is to one side — the way we are influenced and swayed in our youth. The trunk is strong, with knobles — tensions, etc., and then branches out and it is a tree renewing itself. There is a cloud that runs through which represents the clouds that go through our lives. The tree is reality. The flower garden below is fantasy. The colors are sometimes unreal, hardly any green in the leaves and stems, very colorful and different colors to the tree. On the right side fantasy and reality are reaching out for one another."

Two PSBGM commissions

Mrs. Rose was commissioned to do two murals for the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal. One was a fable for the children; the other, the four seasons.

At the moment Mrs. Rose is working on two themes — Persona and Flora — sun flowers, poppies and fantasy flowers — for two exhibitions she is holding in the autumn. The shows are at Galerie Dresdnere in Toronto beginning Sept. 24 and at Galerie Libre on Crescent street in Montreal starting Nov. 3.

Mrs. Rose puts many layers of very thin copper on enamel of many transparent colors. The base is thick copper. "It takes a long time," she said. "It is very exacting work. I take a large sheet, do my design, fill in the color, leave the background in natural copper and fire it with a torch. One firing is involved. The natural copper oxidizes in areas.

"In exploring the medium I have experimented with and discovered new techniques. The tactile metal — copper — which I use in its natural or oxidized state in contrast to the brilliance of enamel, has a quality which cannot be achieved in any other medium."

Her work has been described as an adventure in art — light reflected in bays of enamel, beaches of copper and ponds of silver. She has not only mastered the complex challenges of her medium, but in so doing has reached new vistas of achievement.

Studio in basement

Mrs. Rose has a studio in the basement of her colorful Westmount home. She has had numerous North American exhibitions and has participated in many group shows. "It is a very solitary, full-time occupation," remarked Mrs. Rose. "There is no one doing such large works in enamel in Canada so I do have to find stimulation in other areas such as exhibitions, theatre, music."

Mrs. Rose, who has done enamel work for 22 years, taught the subject for 10 years at the Saidye Bronfman Centre but gave it up this year. She has held shows of sculpture and jewelry during her career as an artist.

In the dining room and stairwell of her home are two stunning tapestries she has made. They are collages of materials stitched with found objects — buttons, chains, buckles, feathers, etc. In the dining room there is also a painting in the Limoges technique in blue and white. "People think it shows a Chinese influence," she said. "I put that down to my background in China."

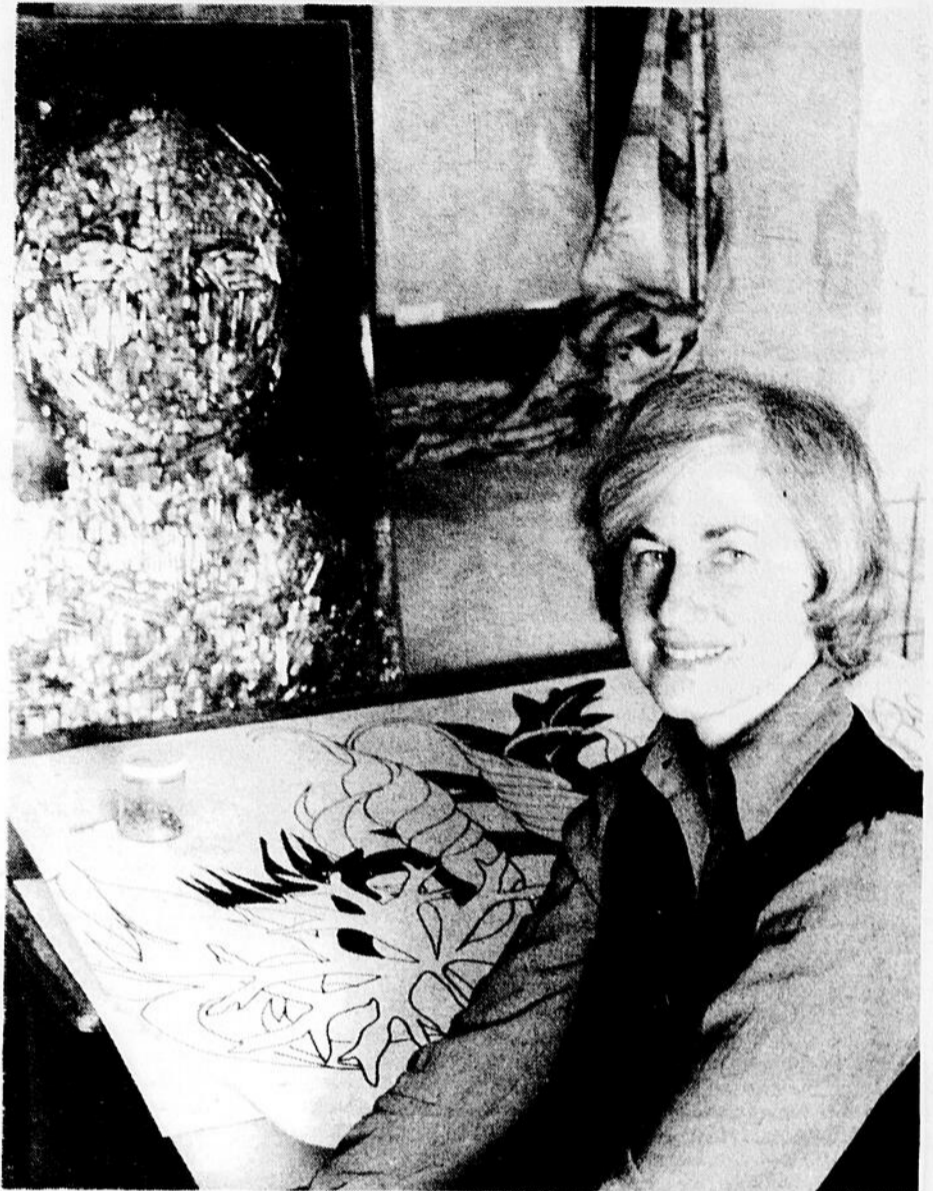

The Rose house is filled with objects that she and her husband, Alan, have picked up from different countries. "We share this love of art," remarked Mrs. Rose.

Mrs. Rose was brought up and educated in an English school in the French settlement of the international city of Shanghai. Her late father, Maurice Dangoor, was a member of the stock exchange. The family settled in England in 1947. Her mother, Sybil, lives in London as do her older sister, Renée, and her brother, Eddie, an insurance broker.

Mrs. Rose took art lessons in London. She met her English husband, Alan Henry Rose, there and married him in 1952. They lived in South Africa for three years. She studied under the internationally known enamelist Vera Ronen.

nada in 1957. Mr. Rose is executive vice-president of the Canadian Jewish Congress and took over from the late Saul Hayes six years ago.

Mrs. Rose has travelled extensively, first with her parents to India and Israel and with her husband to France, Greece and Holland. Once a year they go to New York to see relatives and visit the theatre and art galleries.

Mrs. Rose hasn't been back to China. She would like to go to the countryside at Lushan where she used to spend summer holidays as a child. "There are beautiful mountains," she said. "We picked chestnuts from the trees. The air is so clear."

Mrs. Rose plays tennis and swims. The couple have a cottage on a lake in Vermont.

The artist does water colors.

"I'd like to have a show of water colors some day," she said wistfully. "I find that enamel work is so time consuming."

Cut the traffic on Clarke avenue

A copy of the following letter has been sent to THE EXAMINER:

The Office of the Mayor, City of Westmount.

Dear Sir,

As a resident of Clarke avenue over the past nine years, I am writing to you to complain about the intolerable increase in traffic on the street in the recent past.

Whether this is due to the spate of office building construction in the Dorchester area, the blocking off of de Maisonneuve boulevard at Westmount Park, the alterations to Greene avenue or a combination of all three, the fact of the matter is that line-ups of cars a quarter of a block long (at peak periods often extending from the Sherbrooke street traffic lights south to de Maisonneuve) are now common — and not just at rush hours, but from 2:30 in the afternoon to 6 o'clock at night.

The steady stream of cars and the occasional tractor trailer continues from 7:30 to 9 in the morning as well. I will say nothing of those cars (predominantly taxis who use the street as an habitual route) whose drivers speed regularly to "beat the light" at the corner of Sherbrooke and Côte St. Antoine.

The point is, something must be done to decrease the noise and nuisance of car traffic in the area — not to mention the danger such traffic poses to the school children attending school on the street. (School zone speed warnings should be painted on the street. This at least should be done.)

As a general rule, my feeling is that your office has not paid nearly enough attention to the principle that residential neighborhoods have a right to be protected from the automobile.

There is a solution, only it is one that takes some imagination and political will. That is to protect the entire area between St. Catherine and Sherbrooke west of Atwater and east of Victoria with a traffic maze of one-way streets similar to the one that protects the area between College and Bloor west of Spadina in downtown Toronto. Failing that, Clarke avenue at least should be broken up by means of one way streets (one way south from de Maisonneuve to St. Catherine, one way north from de Maisonneuve to Sherbrooke.) This would prevent the street from being used as a major north-south artery.

Nothing would please the residents of Clarke avenue more, I can assure you. I feel the residents of de Maisonneuve, of Metcalfe and Melville, and of Dorchester would agree, as they would stand to benefit as well. The north-south arteries between Dorchester and Sherbrooke ought to be Atwater and Victoria — not the intervening residential streets.

Drummond playing into PQ's hands

Sir: The press recently quoted former provincial minister Kevin Drummond that his family only settled in Quebec in the 1840s.

Unless made "tongue in cheek," such a remark simply plays into the hands of those whose identification of true "Quebecois" or "Quebecers" is so restricted.

My own family of Scottish-English origin (except for a French Canadian great grandmother) settled in Lachute and Berthierville between 1830 and 1840. Others came to Montreal in 1860 and finally to Westmount in 1906.

We are not exactly newcomers; and we all speak French.

This is, of course, true of many "Anglophone" families.

Unity and the throne speech

The reading of the throne speech by Governor-General Edward Schreyer on Monday marked the opening of Canada's 32nd Parliament. The speech outlined the priorities of the government in the first session of the new parliament.

One of its underlying themes was the future of Canada and the upcoming Quebec referendum. The government will work to defeat the referendum on sovereignty-association and will interpret a "No" vote as a directive to rebuild Canadian federation.

The federal government has made a strong appeal to the people of Quebec and to the people in the rest of Canada to work together toward a new federalism. It has called on all Quebecers to affirm their will and their right to be fully Canadian.

In the course of the next two weeks, cabinet ministers and members of Parliament from Quebec will use their allotted speaking time during the throne speech debate to counter the arguments which have been forthcoming from the Parti Québécois in recent weeks.

We feel it is extremely important for all people living in Quebec and, indeed, in Canada to hear the whole story rather than facts and figures which give a distorted view of Quebec's situation within the present federal framework.

As Quebecers we are firmly committed to helping our provincial colleagues to dispell the myths which are being perpetuated by the "Yes" forces and will use the five weeks ahead to our maximum advantage.

Volunteers required

You now know the date. It is not that far off. Much has to be done. Little time is left.

The "No" committee in the Westmount riding is well structured and operating in fine tune. Volunteers are required, though. Remember that we who believe in Canada have to turn out every possible voter we can. In a referendum a single vote truly counts.

What are you doing for Canada? Would you like to help us keep Canada together? The poll captains and other key organizers are in place and working well. But every poll captain needs volunteers to help turn out the vote. Drop by our campaign offices at 4150 St. Catherine, at Greene, or give us a call at 937-3501. Canada needs you.

The official campaign will see me travelling throughout the province speaking, attending rallies, main-streering, etc., as the "No" umbrella committee uses my talents to urge Quebecers to remain within confederation. Initially, I have been booked into Waterloo and Richmond in the Eastern Townships, Verdun, Quebec City, and a series of speeches on the South Shore. This is my schedule to this Sunday.

Westmount chairman Bernard Côté, and organizer Daniel Ryan don't expect that you will be able to give 24 hours a day to our referendum effort. We are hoping, however, that you will be able to give a few hours every week between now and referendum day. Won't you join us?

Call the committee room at 937-3501.

Superior Court dog bite ruling expected April 25

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

It is now the turn of a Superior Court judge to decide whether or not a Westmount dog owner is guilty of infringement of a Westmount municipal by-law when his German shepherd allegedly bit a 12-year-old boy in a laneway a year ago.

Little new evidence was brought out Friday, however, in a new trial before Superior Court Judge Maurice Archambault as Peter Masella, 5 Springfield avenue, appealed the guilty verdict brought against him Dec. 12 by Westmount Municipal Court Judge George Gould.

The appeal judgment, expected April 25, would then permit a second charge against Mr. Masella to proceed in Westmount Municipal Court.

The case, which has been before the courts since the summer, centres around whether the dog and boy, Robert Gervais, 427 Mount Stephen avenue, were on the Masella property or in the public lane between Metcalfe avenue and Springfield at the time of the biting last April 21.

The action was brought by the boy's father, P. André Gervais, Westmount alderman and commissioner of public safety.

Not at the scene

In the new trial, the defence attempted to table evidence from a police officer. It was disallowed by Judge Archambault, however, since the officer, who had been subpoenaed and appeared in court on his day-off, had not been at the scene at the time of the incident nor was he the officer who had arrived moments later with the police ambulance and had prepared the police report.

The only other testimony concerned an alleged dispute between the Masellas and a neighbor, Beaugrand Vaillancourt, 424 Metcalfe avenue, who is considered to be the plaintiff's star witness. Mrs. Masella testified that Mr. Vaillancourt did not like the dog and had previously warned her not to let the dog bite his grandchildren.

Mr. Vaillancourt, an "independent" witness, testified Friday that he had seen the dog attack the boy while he was in his backyard painting and that both boy and dog had been in the laneway. At the judge's request, Mr. Vaillancourt drew a diagram of the laneway and property in question, placing the position of the boy and the dog close to the centre of the laneway.

Both Mrs. Masella and defence witness Serge Meunier, a friend of the family, testified that the incident had taken place on the Masella property.

By-law wording

By-law 535, section 8, under which Mr. Masella is charged, states: "If any dog shall bite any person other than its keeper or a member of its keeper's household, and while not on the

Ransacked

A house on Upper Roslyn avenue was broken into and ransacked sometime between Friday and Sunday while the residents were away, police report. A neighbor discovered that the rear basement window had been broken and notified the owner's son who lives nearby. The son verified that the house had been searched and that a television set was missing.

Rode off

A 50-year-old secretary reported having her purse stolen Monday as she sat at the bar at the Jockey Club in Westmount Square between 4:15 and 5:30 pm. Total value of the theft, including $67 cash in the purse, was $90, police said.

keeper's premises, such dog shall be deemed to have infringed this by-law."

Alexander Doehler, 446 Mount Stephen, the 12-year-old friend of the bitten boy, who was with him at the time, testified again at the new trial and drew laughter from the court when asked during cross-examination whether the dog was on the Masella property.

"Do they own any of the lane?" the boy asked. He said that Robert "backed off and backed off and was in the middle of the lane" when bitten.

The dog is reported to have bitten Robert first on the cheek and then on his arm, the second bite constituting a second incident according to a previous ruling by Judge Gould. If the dog is found to have infringed the by-law in both incidents, he could be ordered destroyed under section 16 of the same by-law.

Mayors want MUC to run arts council

Several suburban mayors are anxious to have the Montreal Arts Council brought under the jurisdiction of the Montreal Urban Community, Mayor Donald MacCallum reported to city council last week, in order to have the council controlled by all those who contribute to its welfare.

The council, which subsidizes creative arts programs, has been funded until recently by a portion of the sales tax revenue accruing to municipalities in the MUC, though now, with the fiscal reform measures, that tax source has dried up and funding is under review.

Until now it was a City of Montreal department, he said, despite the broader tax base. It has been suggested that the council now receive a portion of the municipal levies based on provincial installations on the island. Mayor MacCallum and others feel that such a funding source should require participation by all contributors to the project, hence MUC control.

The concern, which he suggested may cause another "confrontation" with Montreal, was one of several discussed by suburban mayors at recent meetings, the mayor reported.

A snag has developed in plans for printing of bilingual traffic tickets for the island, he said, because of under-representation by suburban mayors at a recent meeting of the public security council.

Mayor Yves Ryan, who is chairman of the security council, will have to continue bringing up the subject at future meetings but even if the tickets were changed, it would be several months before the tickets hit the streets, despite the recent Supreme Court ruling on the language of the courts.

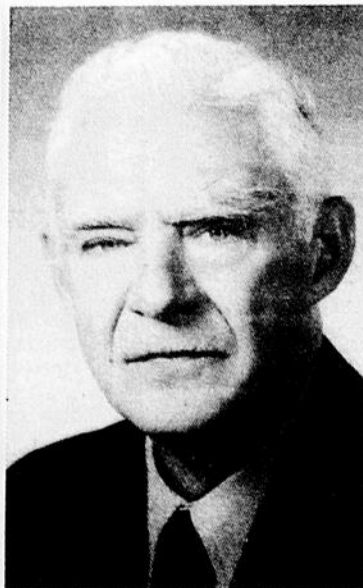

Another snag involves plans to expropriate west island buses for their integration into a broad-based MUC Transit Commission network, for which west island taxpayers already are paying.

Once the law is approved by the MUC (which has not yet happened) it must be approved by the Quebec authorities and that probably will not happen until after the referendum, His Worship suggested.

Mayor MacCallum will be serving on an evaluation committee set up this year by the conference of mayors, one of six new committees the conference has established. (The mayor is vice-president of the conference, as well.) Now, he says, every suburban mayor serves on at least one committee.

Other items the mayors have been discussing include Quebec's Bill 157 which severely restricts spot-zoning measures in municipalities. Westmount already has launched its own study of the proposed law.

"There's a lot more," Mayor MacCallum said at the end of his list of items, "but it's not very important."

ENGINEERING FELLOWS: Two Westmount engineers, William A. Deveraux, left, 4998 de Maisonneuve boulevard, and Donald C. MacCallum, 4300 de Maisonneuve, were honored recently by the Engineering Institute of Canada when they were elected fellows of the institute. Established in 1887, the Engineering Institute of Canada works for the creation, exchange and dissemination of engineering information. Its grade of fellow is the highest it can bestow, with some 20 being elected annually. Mr. Deveraux is manager of the professional affairs division of Montreal Engineering Company, working to upgrade the technical expertise of the company's engineering services. He has been active in the community with the YMCA, the Rotary Club of Montreal, Montreal General Hospital and Mount Royal United Church. Mr. MacCallum, mayor of Westmount since 1975, is co-founder and director of Peto MacCallum Ltd. and co-founder, past-president, chairman and director of Racey, MacCallum and Associates Limited and RMB Technical Services Ltd.

Two weeks remain to pay round two of 1980 tax bill

Westmount taxpayers have two weeks left to pay the second installment of their 1980 municipal taxes, which are due by May 1.

Citizens should not expect this bill to be the last, however, as another bill for 86 cents per $100 of their 1980 valuation will be issued on July 1, payable by Aug. 1.

Water tax bills will also be issued in July, and a relatively small school tax bill can be expected in the fall.

Appeals of the 1980 property valuation cannot be made until the third and final municipal bill is issued, city officials noted this week.

Because of the "fiscal reform" measures brought down by the provincial government late last year, it seems the present 1980 valuation roll is unofficial, and a new one will be deposited in time for the third bill.

That third bill will contain a clause noting the "official" assessment (expected to be unchanged from the present one) as well as factors which relate that assessment to the considered actual value of the property. Under Bill 57, the property-owner will have the right to appeal the valuation on the basis of those factors. The procedure will be described on the back of the notice of assessment.

Taxpayers will have 60 days in which to appeal the valuation.

The change means that no appeals can be made now, on the basis of the "unofficial" roll. Apparently no inquiries have been made at city hall about the appeal procedure, in any event.

The city will be issuing two business tax bills this year, officials note further. The first one will be issued May 1, taxing businesses at 10 percent of their annual rental value, the same rate as last year. Then in July the city will issue an additional tax bill for another two percent of the annual rental value, approved by council last month.

The confusing tax system for 1980 will apply for the one year only, officials promise (barring more extensive amendments). Next year, the original 1981 valuation roll will be the "official" one, the appeal procedure will revert to its old form and only one business tax bill will be issued.

1. Begin to dial as soon as you hear the dial tone. You will note that the tone is slightly different from the one you are used to.
2. Dial the number right through without pausing between digits. If the number is not dialed in full within a definite period of time, the equipment will cancel the call. In that case, it will necessary to hang up and dial again.

OFF TO QUEBEC: Roslyn School grade 6 students prepared to board buses early Monday morning to start a two-day visit to Quebec City. The 70 pupils stayed at "pensions" in the old lower town part of the city and their tour, conducted primarily in French, included visits to the Citadel, the Plains of Abraham, the National Assembly, Ste. Anne de Beaupré and Montmorency Falls. Teachers, students and parent-supervisors returned home Tuesday evening, weary but enthusiastic.

Many of them can find help at N.D.G.'s Forward House, which provides residential, vocational and social programs to help these former patients relearn life management skills and to reintegrate them into the community.

Forward House opened in 1957 and since then the flood of referrals from French and English hospitals has steadily grown while financial resources have failed to keep pace, leading to serious deficits in the past two years while during last year alone they helped over 500 individuals.

To ease their financial difficulties, Forward House is conducting a fund-raising campaign until the end of the month. Their goal is $40,000.

Canada Week celebrations in Quebec this year will be aimed at the youngsters, if a recent Canada Week committee press conference is any indication. Although Canada Week will be celebrated officially June 25 to July 1, children from 5 to 15 across the province are being asked to submit by May 15 drawings, stories (fiction or non-fiction) or poems on the theme "Canada, it's you and me" which will be judged by a jury of prominent Quebecers. The contest was announced at the press conference and guests were treated to a presentation of excerpts from a play by children and teens from a group called Children's Creations. The group will be performing the entire production at Place des Arts May 27 and 28.

WHS fighting again to save career advisor

Westmount High School committee members and WHS teaching staff are encountering a case of déjà vu as the career advisor program, which they fought to save at the end of last year, is again being threatened by Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal budget cuts.

At Tuesday evening's WHS committee meeting, parents, PSBGM Commissioner Joan Rothman and representatives of teachers and students agreed that the position of career advisor should be saved. The post is currently held by Dwight Kennedy.

Last June, parents and teachers persuaded the board to retain the position but they were unable to keep career advisor Vincent Milardo because of seniority regulations. Mr. Milardo took a position in Vancouver.

Mrs. Rothman explained to the committee that this year the commissioners were asked to submit to the PSBGM officers a list of positions that could possibly be eliminated in order to save money.

Among the ones that were chosen by the administration was the career advisor post at WHS. Mrs. Rothman said that the board decided to keep these positions only at the three comprehensive high schools in the system.

WHS teachers have already drafted a letter to the commissioners arguing that Westmount High is a large school and has as diverse a student population as a comprehensive high school, that the course is heavily used by the students, and that, therefore, the position should be retained. Teacher representative Ken Cooke said also that the need for the program might have increased since last year.

Student representative Bob Hazen told the committee that Mr. Kennedy has worked enthusiastically with the students and has established a work-study program. Mr. Hazen said that Mr. Kennedy should be retained as well as the position, adding that if he left it would be "a waste of a year."

Mrs. Rothman, who supports retention of the program, said that a wide range of students use these services. She said that in a time when business is complaining that they do not have enough qualified persons coming from schools, "we have evolved something that is au point for the future needs of the country."

The WHS committee will also be supporting the retention of the PSBGM parent animator whose position has also been threatened by the budget cuts.

Moral, religious education topic on Saturday

A conference for parents, teachers and administrators on moral and religious education will be held Saturday, April 19, at Westmount High School.

The day-long conference, titled "Why moral and religious education?" is being organized by the central parents' committee of the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal.

Workshops will be led by PSBGM teachers and resource persons from McGill University on topics such as: children's perceptions of God and religion, helping children clarify values and the contents of elementary and high school curricula.

Parents interested in attending may register in advance by calling 482-6000, local 417.

Among members of the jury for the competition is Westmount journalist Gretta Chambers. Others are actor Emile Genest, caricaturist Robert Lapalme, children's book author Tante Lucille, Quebec City Mayor Jean Pelletier and Canada Post consulting committee member Jean-Yves Pelletier.

This is the first such assignment for Mrs. Chambers, who says she is interested in children's writing at anytime but particularly at this point in the history of Quebec and Canada.

She is looking forward to seeing the sensibilities of the children to the subject and the feeling behind what they say. She's not sure how many submissions there will be or from which segment of the population they will come.

The job, she says, "is one of the few things that you get asked to do that you look forward to doing."

First prizes will be trips to Saskatchewan, which has been twinned with Quebec for this year's celebrations and second prizes will be trips to regions in Quebec other than where the winners live. Many smaller prizes will also be given.

Children will participate in their age category: either five to 10 years or 11 to 15 years. Youngsters wishing to participate can get more details from their school principal.

Contributions keep coming

Fund-raisers at the Westmount YMCA say they have done their bit to raise the $16,000 targetted for Campaign '80 and that the rest is up to Westmount citizens.

Some $9,000 has been raised since the campaign began March 10 and contributions are still coming in.

"It's up to the people who have been approached now. The canvassers have done a superb job and everyone listed has been contacted," said campaign chairman Glenda Scott.

This is the first time the Westmount Y campaign has been headed and run by ladies and Mrs. Scott believes they do a more thorough job than their husbands.

"The ladies have got more time than the corporate man who is flying around the country all the time. And they've made it a more personal, face-to-face campaign," said Mrs. Scott.

The fund-raising committee expects to publish the final tally of the campaign by early summer and tax-deductible receipts for all contributions will be mailed shortly.

Starving half a kingdom
all part of 'enrichment'

By RICK KERRIGAN

A group of Roslyn School students last week acted as rulers of a small kingdom and starved half the population under their administration because of agricultural mismanagement.

The students were promptly impeached, thrown out of office and declared national finks. Luckily, the kingdom existed only on a magnetic disk and within the solid state circuitry of a computer.

The students responsible for this calamity were participants in the noon-hour Roslyn enrichment program, at which the computer exercise is but one course. The instructor at this session was Robert Jones, a Roslyn parent and director of education media at McGill's faculty of education.

Parents like Prof. Jones are the backbone of the courses. The program was organized last fall by parents and all the instructors and contributors to the courses are parents who volunteer their expertise.

Computers, of course, are only one area of knowledge that can be contributed by the Roslyn community. Other subjects covered this year have been literature, art, anatomy, design, library skills, astronomy, finance, engines and photography.

The classes are divided by age, such as grades 1 to 3, 3 to 6 and 4 to 6. It was a group of students in the latter age group that drove the above-mentioned country into social and political chaos in Prof. Jones' computer class.

Better entrepreneurs

The students did somewhat better as entrepreneurs than as politicians in a computer game called "Lemonade Stand." The computer provides certain fixed costs and reveals the weather conditions for the day. The students decide what price to charge for their lemonade and how much to make.

After each day's business a financial statement for each stand is displayed on the video screen of the computer. Had it not been for a string of sunny days, some of the students would have had a quick lesson in bankruptcy.

Prof. Jones admits that the students see the computer in terms of the games it supplies and not as a useful tool. They do become familiar with the operations of the hardware, however, and this may be enough to stimulate further interest in later years.

"Lots of kids have used computer toys," he says, "this is just a step up from them."

Pam Slaughter, a member of the Roslyn enrichment committee says the program is designed to give the children a taste of various skills and activities and says there is nothing like the program elsewhere in Quebec for this level of students.

"I feel there is a large desire for more diversified learning," she says. To prove the point, she says that although the program just started in the fall there have been up to twice as many kids applying than could be accommodated. The selection process came down to drawing applications at random from a pile in the middle of a table.

Mrs. Slaughter and co-organizer Gail Jarislawsky would like to see the program expand, but for this volunteer parents are the key. The women say, however, that they have not been turned down by any parents they have approached and have found a high degree of enthusiasm among the volunteers. Their husbands gave sessions in anatomy and finance, respectively.

While there are no such courses offered by the education system in Quebec, the women note that Roslyn principal Barbara McKnight has been very supportive of the program and the regular teachers have been co-operative in giving up their classrooms at lunchtime for the sessions.

In addition to providing students with an enriched learning experience, the classes also are a place where children with similar interests can meet.

Exchange meeting

Another aspect of the Roslyn School enrichment program is a French-language student exchange program.

Roslyn parents interested in this exchange are invited to attend a meeting Monday, April 21, from 3 to 7 pm in the school's library and science room.

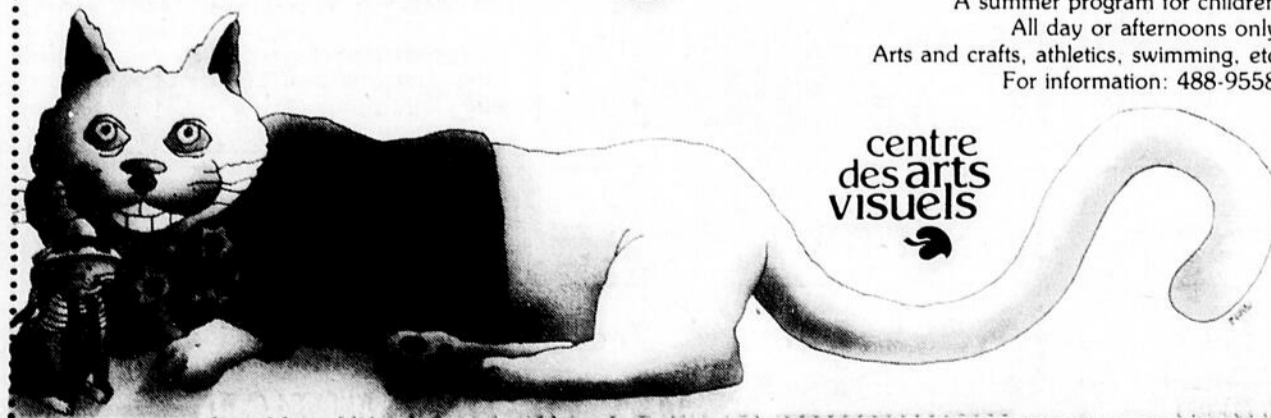

Doreen Richter of the Quebec Student Inter-Exchange Program will be present to show a film on exchange programs and answer questions.

gested 21 or 22 actually moved. What is clear, however, is that some of the best-known names in local real estate circles have moved from the more venerable Westmount Realities building at 1367 Greene avenue to the new Westmount Premier building, 4150 St. Catherine street west—less than two blocks away.

In fourth-floor office

The agents now are squeezed into a fourth-floor office, but the company plans to build a storefront headquarters where the Westmount 'No' committee for the May 20 referendum now is located.

Ironically, many agents were moving out of the LePage premises on Friday even while the company was holding a banquet downtown to honor the Westmount branch as the top LePage unit in Canada for 1979.

The somewhat bittersweet award pinpointed the problem: the honored LePage agents felt they deserved more than passing notice in major policy decisions of the company.

"We just became another number in their massive organization," one agent told THE EXAMINER, for example. "They absolutely totally ignored us."

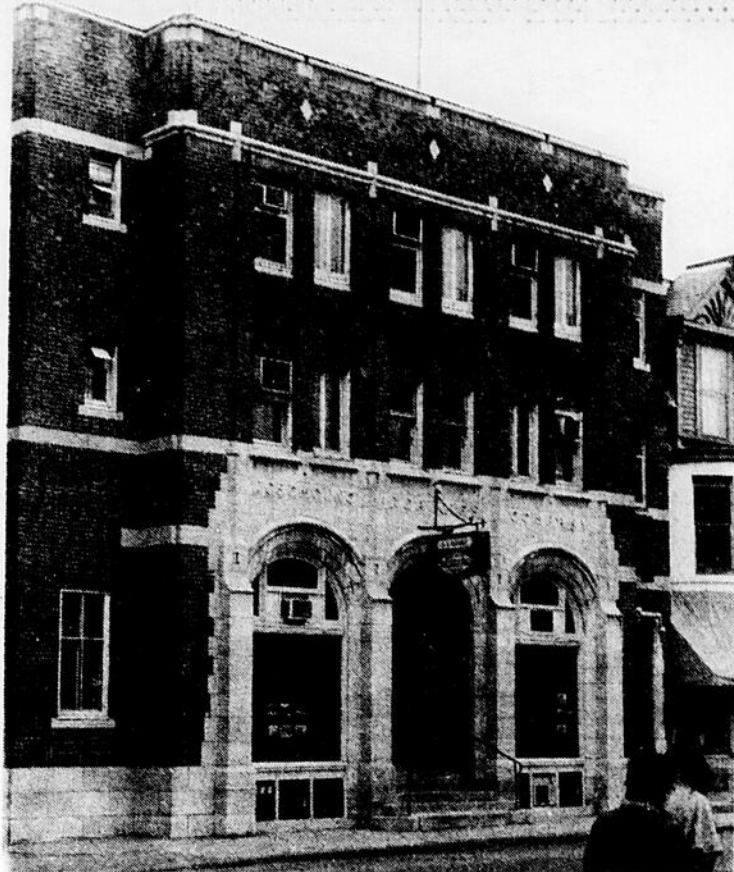

The mass resignations, which started on Wednesday last week, produced something of a panic in the main Quebec office of LePage. Pressure was put on branch manager Zinay to the point that he, too, submitted his resignation later the same day.

He has not joined the move to Montreal Trust, however, and the new branch is being run for the time being by Rod Quesnel, whose Beaconsfield branch of Montreal Trust holds the same honor for that company—the best in Canada.

Mr. Quesnel has also served as president of the Montreal Real Estate Board.

Thirteen agents remain

LePage's Westmount branch is being run for the time being

The exterior of the A. E. LePage office on Greene avenue still contains vestiges of the old Westmount Realities, which merged with LePage in 1973. LePage intends to keep the sign to defend its rights to the name and crest of Westmount Realities.

by Paul Robert, vice-president and residential manager for Region 1, which includes all LePage branches from Westmount to the Ontario border. The branch still has 13 of its original agents, Mr. Robert reports, and is receiving new applications even now.

Beverly Baily, president of A. E. LePage (Quebec) Inc. and former president of Westmount Realities, suggested last week that the branch had been "raided" by Montreal Trust, which he felt had exploited the disagreement between the agents and the company.

The charge was denied by Montreal Trust's residential manager, Louis Thibault, who said the agents had approached them, rather than vice versa.

The agents agreed with this claim, noting that they had formed a committee to inquire about employment in other agencies. Montreal Trust was not the only company they approached, but it was in the process of opening a Westmount real estate office when the agents arrived on the doorstep. "It's just coincidence the agents came by," Mr. Thibault claimed.

The story behind the move shows that the agents, often depicted as fiercely independent and competitive even within the same agency, have been working together for the past three months or more, since they first learned of the national advertising scheme.

Planned for some time

That scheme has been in the works at LePage even longer, however. In fact, for several years a prairie-province affiliate of LePage, Melton Realities, has been taking a small percentage of the realtor's commission to pay for regional television dential companies, to the regional managers and the branch managers.

"We went as far as we could," Mr. Baily offered. "We received no comments and no objections."

Finally, he said, the company established the program and prepared a package to present to the residential agents. In early February the Westmount salespeople were invited to a session to view the ads and to learn of the program.

The agents responded with a joint letter expressing their dissatisfaction with the scheme, and on March 3 Residential President George J. Cormack came from Toronto to meet with the group. Apparently he did not back down on the national advertising scheme, however and, after repeated attempts to have their voices heard, the Westmount con-

FIX-UP DOLLAR SENSE

In most decisions in life there is often a choice available. A home improvement project is no exception. If the question is how to best use your improvement dollar, keep in mind the eventual resale of your home. The national average length of home ownership is seven years. It's what a buyer sees, not what you tell him, that makes the difference.

Which do you think would add more to the visual value of a home—new insulation or a new kitchen? Unless the insulation is really on its last legs, a new kitchen is a better investment. A buyer can see a new kitchen or remodeled bathroom, an exterior paint job, but will he see the insulation behind the walls and in the attic?

Of course, it's always nice to do both but, if you have a choice, spend your money where it will be seen the most. It will make your house more attractive and more salable when the time comes.

LEPAGE . . .

gent set up a committee to look for offers from other companies.

"It was a very good opportunity for other realtors to show what they have to offer," Mr. Thibault commented, insisting that LePage's claim to be the only major company in Canada devoted exclusively to real estate (as Mr. Baily continues to emphasize) does not really make it better. "We surprised the agents favorably."

Didn't change minds

Once the agents became convinced that a move to Montreal Trust was worthwhile, nothing that LePage could offer appears to have been able to change their minds.

Though Mr. Baily invited them to a meeting on April 2, and though Mr. Cormack mailed a lengthy letter of explanation to them on April 7, it appears that by then the die had been cast. Some concessions were offered, but the realtors, still feeling insulted, were unwilling to bend.

"By then it was a matter of principle," one reported.

Some agents have said they would not have moved had it not been for the others:

"It's a family that was here (on Greene avenue) and a family that's taking up a new residence," one agent said in terms so familiar to the business.

"It became a matter of loyalty to the rest of your colleagues," said another.

There had been thoughts, one said, of forming a new company independent of LePage, but this appears to have been dropped when Montreal Trust made its offer.

Still, all agreed that the move was a personal decision for each of them, and in fact some of the better-known agents stayed behind.

No special provisions

For his part, Mr. Thibault claimed the offer included no special provisions, though the company had been willing to set up offices, telephones and equipment to the realtors' specifications.

For the first year the agents will be given a bonus based on their sales records of the past year in order to fit them into earnings brackets which Montreal Trust can then use for future incentive programs.

"What they saw was, yes, we are human," Mr. Thibault argued. "We like to believe we are different."

"We are not after one piece of residual business of LePage," he went on, though this week at least one LePage "for sale" sign carried the name of an ex-agent who has moved to Montreal Trust.

Mr. Baily agreed that his company had been hurt by the mass shift, but feels "there is no question of closing the branch down." He said the problem had been one of time and communication—the fact that LePage could not respond to the Westmount branch's objections until it knew the effects in other regions of the country.

(Vancouver is reported to be dissatisfied with the scheme as well, and might take legal action on the basis of realtors' contracts. A branch there is said to be looking closely at the Westmount move, as well. "There's always a problem in B.C.," one LePage official shrugged.)

More than money

Mr. Baily, in the aftermath of the resignations, suggested last week that "there's more to it than just the money," noting that on a $40,000 realtor's income the advertising program would cost only $800. Various factors which might have played on the minds of the realtors, he suggested, were the loss of local identity of the former Westmount Realities and, perhaps, the francization program within the Quebec organization.

"It's a bitterness I can't understand," he concluded.

What will happen now that the shift has taken place? Only

Water tax will rise

Water tax rates will be going up slightly this year, Mayor Donald MacCallum suggested last week, though the extent of the increase is difficult to determine for most homeowners.

Citizens were taxed last year at a rate of $1.017 per $100 in annual rental value, but the rate applied only for an eight-month period; thus, the annual rate last year was $1.5255.

This year, it will jump more than 11 cents to $1.6371, based on a recent decision by the Quebec Municipal Commission.

A homeowner with an annual rental value of, say, $5,000, might have paid a water tax bill of $50.85 last year, covering the period from May to December. That bill would jump to $81.86 this time, covering the calendar year 1980.

Mayor MacCallum said he had no ideas how the rental values compare between the two years, however, since the city does not keep a rental value roll on hand (citizens are taxed directly by the City of Montreal, which supplies Westmount's water).

He could say only that the municipal commission set the price of water to Westmount this year at $919,864, up 8.2 percent from last year, and the total annual rental value for Westmount this year is $53,049,833. The applied value raises $868,479; the rest is obtained by charges on water meters in some local facilities.

time, and perhaps some quarreling over present contracts taken out by agents in the name of LePage, will tell.

Mr. Thibault maintains that his company is "a firm believer in MLS," suggesting that the Multiple Listing Service might find its way into Westmount now that more than two companies—LePage and Royal Trust—will dominate the Westmount market.

The end result might be to open up the entire Westmount market, provided LePage can maintain its stature with a newer set of agents.

Few people argue that the local market is turning around now from recent record highs, and most agree that the shift came at an opportune time as old listings had been largely depleted and new ones were just arriving (see last week's EXAMINER). One ex-LePage agent, for example, said she had no listings at present, so was in a good position to make the shift.

The new Montreal Trust agents say they will be spending a great deal of time in the coming week notifying their former and present clients of the switch.

BEANSTALK GETAWAY: Stephanie McLean and Eric Goulem make a quick getaway from the giant, played by guest actor Donald McManus, in this scene from the Children's Theatre production of "Jack and the Beanstalk" being presented at Saturday matinees April 19 and 29 and May 3. For years a popular attraction at Westmount's Victoria Hall, the Children's Theatre, under directors Dorothy Davis and Violet Walters, this season moved their productions to the F. C. Smith Auditorium on the Loyola campus of Concordia University.

Refugees being settled

A "boat people" family sponsored by the congregation of Dominion-Douglas Church has been living on Claremont avenue south of Sherbrooke street for the past six weeks, and the six persons are gradually getting accustomed to life in their new surroundings.

The congregation has dubbed the sponsorship "Operation Jericho," referring to the road on which the Good Samaritan was travelling in the well-known Christian parable, reports John Lehnert, 622 Grosvenor avenue.

The Van family includes two parents of Chinese origin who ran a pastry shop in the Cholon district of Vietnam. Two sons, aged 18 and 20, are in the provincially-run Centres d'Orientation et Familiarization pour Immigrants (COFIs), and two daughters, aged 13 and 15, are in classes d'accueil in Montreal schools.

The sponsors are finding some difficulty communicating with the family, since they must rely on volunteer translators, and even then differences of dialects are inhibiting free conversation.

"The whole thing at the moment is in pretty good shape," Mr. Lehnert says proudly, however. "A lot of friendship is developing between the church and the people."

Local couple 'adopts' child

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Chipman, 753 Upper Lansdowne avenue, have joined Foster Parents Plan of Canada and will make a monthly contribution to "adopt" eight-year-old Alexandra Villamar of Ecuador.

The $19 a month provides the family with free medical and dental care, free prescriptions, the sustained guidance and counselling of social workers and the benefits of many special programs.

The Villamar family consists of the parents and four children. Father is a laborer and the family income is $78.57. Their two-room house is made of cane with a wooden floor and zinc roof. There are two beds, a table, chairs, kerosene stove and some kitchen utensils.

Tudors augmented for final concert

The Tudor Singers have been treating Montrealers to some fine vocal, musical performances during the past few months. Now, they are loosening their larynxes for their final concert of the season to be held Monday, April 21, at 8:30 pm in Pollack Hall, 555 Sherbrooke street west. They will be joined on stage by the Vancouver Chamber Choir, which comprise 35 voices so there should be some powerful singing reverberating through the hall. The combined choirs will perform two of Bach's motets with the Tudor's director Wayne Riddell conducting one and the Vancouver choir's Jon Washburn conducting the other. The motets were written in eight parts for two choirs. Tickets for the concert are available at International Music, Mansfield Book Mart and at the door on the night of the concert. The Tudor Singers will be touring Europe this summer.

Camerata concert

Another familiar Montreal group, Musica Camerata Montreal, will be performing Saturday, April 19, at 5:00 pm at the Citadelle, 2085 Drummond street. The concert is free and works by Beethoven, Paderewski and Schumann will be featured.

Happy birthday, Otto

This year is the 100th birthday of Ottorino Respighi, bless his little tuning fork. Since Otto didn't live long enough to celebrate this momentous occasion, the Italian Cultural Institute of Montreal and the Music department of Concordia University will present in commemoration a recital of Respighi songs sung by soprano Pauline Vaillancourt and accompanied by pianist Jean-Eudes Vaillancourt tonight, 8:30, in the Loyola Chapel, 7141 Sherbrooke west. Dr. Wolfgang Bottenberg will present a short survey of Respighi's personality and musical style. The composer is known primarily for his orchestral works but this concert is being staged to renew interest "in the much wider range of his creative output." Ottorino Respighi: with a name like that even I could have been a musician. Admission to the concert is free.

Weekend music from U de Q

Le Studio de Musique Ancienne de Montréal will be presenting a concert of music of northern Germany Sunday, April 20, at 8:30 pm at the Université du Québec, 1455 St. Denis street. Music by Tunder, Bruhns, Bach, Buxtehude and Telemann will be featured. Tickets are available at Archambault's, International Music and at the door.

Tonight, 8:30, U de Q student soprano Ghislaine Beaudet will give a recital of works by Handel, Schubert, Chausson, Massenet, Ravel and Barber. Student flutists Manon Lessard and Jocelyne Beaudoin will perform a variety of works Friday, April 18, at 8:00 pm and 9:00 pm respectively. These concerts will take place in the Pavillon Judith Jasmin, 1435 St. Denis. Admission is free.

Chancel Players present 'Crucible'

"The Crucible" by Arthur Miller is being presented by the Chancel Players tonight, Friday and Saturday at 8 o'clock in Cheney Hall, of the Erskine and American Church, 3407 du Musée. The play is based on the Salem witch trials of 1692 and it will be presented in the round to increase audience involvement. The actors are students of the Studio Theatre Workshop.

Theatre for kids on Saturdays

"Le cas rare de Carat" has been entertaining kids at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts every weekend since the beginning of the month and will continue April 19 and 26, at 2:30 pm. The play is about a sensitive and generous raccoon who leaves his little world "to follow a stranger on a long voyage through the corridors of time." My information says the animals are raccoons but the photos I have seen seem to portray rats. You'd better go see for yourself.

Canadian artists at Concordia

Concordia University is having an impressive display of Canadian painting and drawing until April 29 at their galleries, 1455 de Maisonneuve west. Works by Casson, Colville, De-Tonnancourt, Ferron, Milne,

The Westmount Examiner, Thursday, April 17, 1980 - 19

Humphrey, Kurelek, Shadbolt and Pellan will be on display along with paintings and sculptures by some well-known members of the fine arts faculty such as Yves Gaucher and John Ivor Smith. In one gallery will be the "Theatre People" drawings of Grant Macdonald. The drawings were done in London and New York between 1937 and 1952 and were originally used as theatre review illustrations in the London Daily Telegraph and the New York Herald Tribune. Also on exhibit will be sculptures from North and South America and Africa.

Antique seminar

A seminar on antiques will be given by Joyce Yahouda for the Saidye Bronfman Centre department of continuing education Sunday, April 27, 10:00 am to 3:30 pm. The following Sunday, she will give a seminar on Art Nouveau and Art Deco. For more information call the SBC at 739-2311.

Silk, jewelry in show

The Galerie des Artisans du meuble québécois will be exhibiting the jewelry of Gilbert Rheme and the painted silk of Béatrice Pochot and L'Atelier du Cameleon today until May 18. I have the impression that this exhibit is an interesting cross between art, fashion and craft. The gallery is at 88 St. Paul street west.

This show isn't cancelled

If you're stamping around Pointe Claire this weekend, why not drop into the Fairview shopping centre auditorium and see the Lakeshore Stamp Club annual exhibition. It is open from noon to 9:30 pm Friday, 9:30 am to 5:00 pm Saturday and 11:00 am to 5:00 pm Sunday. There are trophies and awards for different categories such as Canada, British Commonwealth, foreign, topical and junior. The topical exhibits are usually the most interesting. It is astounding the number of stamps that have been issued on any particular subject or which contain a similar object such as a lighthouse or a bicycle. There will be stamps for sale, lots of free information and free stamps (while supplies last) for kids who are accompanied by adults.

Selwyn House's 'Earnest' has all-boy cast Tuesday

Members of the Selwyn House School graduating class will present an adaptation of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" on Tuesday, April 22.

The play will be presented in the school gymnasium, 95 Côte St. Antoine road, at 8 pm.

The project was initiated in January by the producer, Clive Spiegel, 250 Clarke avenue, who also creates the role of the viscount of Victorian vivacity, Lady Bracknell. Directing the production is Duncan Baird of Notre Dame de Grâce, who is also in charge of lighting.

One of the lead roles, that of Algernon Moncrieff, will be played by Michael Dungan, 422 Wood avenue, while another lead role, John Worthing, JP, will be portrayed by Ali T. Ar-gun of Town of Mount Royal.

The role of Lane the manser-vant will be played by Christopher Creighton, 437 Argyle avenue, while Lawrence Hsu, 44 Anwoth road, will take the part of Merriman the butler.

Other local students playing major roles include Stephen Kohner of N.D.G. as Cecily Cardew, Glenn Fong of Snowdon as the unforgettable Hon. Gwendolen Fairfax and rounding out the cast is David Daly, 10 Parkman Place, in the role of the indomitable Miss Prism, the governess.

Professional companies, including the Centaur and Phoenix Theatres and Théâtre du Nouveau Monde, have been of help to the students by supplying them with many of the ornate costumes for the show.

The evening should prove to be one of fun for the entire family as the boys will create the roles of the farcical females in this adaptation of Wilde's clever comedy. Tickets will be available at the door.

STOP worried about ecology course focus

STOP, the non-profit citizens' organization headquartered at 1361 Greene avenue, says it supports implementation of an ecology course for grade 7 students but is concerned that it be made relevant to the urban environment.

The proposed course, recommended in both the green and white papers on primary and secondary education, would see students discuss food chains and cycles of nature, learn identification of trees and take field trips.

These types of activities and discussions are fine, says Bruce Walker, research co-ordinator of STOP, but lack relevance to the urban environment.

He says a tour of a local supermarket could be an equally beneficial part of the course which would expose students to issues such as detergent phosphates, food additives, returnable and non-returnable containers and overpackaging.

Environmental education has always been a priority for STOP and they have a wide variety of education materials available to teachers, parents and students in the resource center on Greene avenue.

WHS play cancelled
but grad plans proceed

By KRISTIAN GRAVENOR

The major news at West-mount High School this week was disappointing as the annual school play was cancelled.

Students were to have presented Thornton Wilder's classic "Our Town," but producer J. M. Guinty declared it would be impossible to have the production this spring because of lack of time and heavy involvement of cast members in other activities such as the recent Purple and White Revue and last evening's fashion show.

With June exams around the corner, it was considered almost impossible to make a respectable production in the given time with the given conditions.

One of the groups affected by the decision is the Vox Ducum yearbook, which loses its potential profit from the venture and will need other sources to help make payments on the yearbook.

Grads seek money

The grad committee is also in dire need of cash as the final days are approaching before the deadline for fund-raising for Crepeau moves

Daniel Crépeau, director of the south region of the Montreal Urban Community Police, the region which includes West-mount, has been promoted to director of human resources for the force. The appointment took effect April 5.

Crossing is safe
city tells WHS

The City of Westmount, despite requests from the teachers at Westmount High School, will not provide any extra school zone or crosswalk warnings on St. Catherine street near the school.

WHS committee teacher representative Ken Cooke told parents at Tuesday evening's committee meeting that he received a letter from the city which said they considered the area safe.
Mr. Cooke said he had no further information to give the city to change the decision.

"We can't prove it's unsafe," he said, "until somebody gets killed."

The teachers have been concerned that students crossing in the middle of the block between Redfern and Clarke avenues should be protected by a mid-block crosswalk, a flashing light, or, at least, additional school zone warning signs. They admit that there is ample crossing protection at each end of the block.

The problem stems from students (and teachers) crossing the street to the cafeteria in the building opposite the school.
The teachers maintain that the students are not likely to cross at the end of the blocks to reach their destination in the middle.

Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal commissioner for Westmount Joan Rothman recommended that the teachers maintain pressure on the city for the crossing and that a safety program be conducted in the school.

She said that the school will have more success in getting the extra signals if the city sees that the by-laws are being observed.

Police check
phoney order

Police are investigating a case of fraud involving a phoney postal money order cashed at the Bank of Nova Scotia branch at the corner of Greene avenue and Sherbrooke street.

Someone apparently entered the bank March 22, presenting the money order for $120 and providing identification which the bank considered legitimate.
After the money order had passed through all the banking channels, it was returned to the bank last week as a phoney document.

Seasonal show

Those harbingers of spring, birds and flowers, are the central figures in a collection of textiles, sculptures, weavings and prints assembled for an exhibition at the Galerie des 5 Continents in the Old Post Office, 1304 Greene avenue.

the annual graduation festivities.

The price of a ticket to the grad, which will be held at the Sheraton-Mount Royal Hotel downtown, is tentatively set at $15 but the graduating class will have to make some sacrifices to get them at this price.

The grads will do some fundraising by selling lightbulbs for the benefit of the festivities.
Organizers hope to raise $12 from each of the some 300 graduating students in this manner.

Last night's annual WHS fashion show early this week held promise of being a great success. Those at the school who are inclined to take part in a fashion display were to be out in full force as the show is a big event in the annual scheme of things at the school.

 Catherine street from Atwater avenue, heading straight past Victoria avenue onto Claremont. It will use the present 104 route up to Côte St. Antoine road, take Côte road to Girouard avenue and turn north, adopting its old route on Monkland avenue, Grand boulevard and Côte St. Luc road.
 On its return trip, it will come south on Girouard to N.D.G. avenue and run south on Claremont to St. Catherine street.

Down to St. James

The 104, meanwhile, will come south on Cavendish boulevard (its present route), but go straight past Sherbrooke street to St. James street. It will veer off the St. James route to Upper Lachine road, then head south on Girouard back to St. James street and go on to the Lionel-Groulx Métro terminus.

No other Westmount bus routes are affected by the change, including the Sherbrooke street buses (24, 102 and 105) and the No. 124 bus which passes through upper Westmount and travels into St. Henri.

Some of those routes and even those which changed this month will be changed next year, when the Vendôme Metro station opens on de Maisonneuve just west of Westmount. Officials could not be specific about the exact date or even month that station will open.

The bus changes mark the opening of three new stations on the No. 2 Métro line. Georges Vanier and Lucien l'Allier stops will connect the Bonaventure station with Line No. 1 at Lionel Groulx station. Line 2 will then continue to a terminus at the Place St. Henri station, located at the corner of St. James and St. Ferdinand streets, just south of Westmount.

The new stations will open at 5 pm on Monday, April 28, and access to the Métro from the new stations will be free until midnight that day to celebrate the event.

Extension of the No. 2 line means that Westmounters will have easier access to the line from Atwater station, one stop east of the Lionel-Groulx interchange. Métro riders no longer will have to travel all the way to the Berri-de-Montigny interchange to connect with the No. 2 line stations serving Old Mont-

Soccer, softball volunteers sought

By ANDREW MORGAN

Tomorrow, Friday, is the final day for local youngsters to register for the boys' and girls' soccer and softball programs of the Westmount recreation department.

Games will begin in early May and further information is available from either John Garland or Bob Aiken at the recreation department, 932-4293.

Volunteers are needed in both programs and anyone interested should also contact the recreation department office in the artificial ice rink.

For soccer, volunteers should be at least 16 years old and knowledgeable in the game, although previous experience in coaching and officiating is not necessary.

In girls' softball, anyone over 16 is most welcome to register as a coach or umpire and, as in soccer, no previous experience is needed.

The procedure is the same for boys' softball but those interested need only be 14 years of age. Fathers, too, are invited to volunteer but they should keep in mind that all games begin at 3:45 pm.

Both of these programs are essentially run by volunteers and they could not succeed without the continuing help of these people whose only reward is the satisfaction of seeing the participants improve their skills in the game.

Two baseball programs open to local boys

Westmount boys will have two opportunities to play baseball during the spring.

Those who would like to participate in 'AA' baseball, an intermunicipal program within the Lac St. Louis region, are invited to join the Côte St. Luc team, which comprises youth from Côte St. Luc, Hampstead, Montreal West, Ville St. Pierre and Westmount.

The city, meanwhile, will offer instructional baseball (in addition to the regular softball program) and exhibition games at the Westmount Athletic Grounds on Saturday afternoon. Boys aged 11 to 15 (pee-wee and bantam) are eligible to play.

'AA' teams are being established at the pee-wee, bantam and midget levels. For pee-wee age youngsters (born in 1967 and 1968), this will be their first opportunity in several years to participate in inter-city baseball.

Registration for the Westmount program is open-ended, but youth should sign up as soon as possible in the recreation department office at the artificial ice rink.

Tryouts for the 'AA' program are held every Tuesday night at Wagar High School, beginning at 6 pm. Further information is available from the Côte St. Luc recreation department, 489-9771.

Many face renewal of passes

Renewal of Westmount recreation passes will require updated photographs, proof of residence and all other information which citizens needed to obtain their original passes, recreation department officials point out.

This word comes at a time when most Westmounters, who obtained their passes when the new type were first issued two years ago this spring, are preparing to have them renewed.

The expiry date, which varies from person to person, is printed in the lower right-hand corner of the card.

The passes are required for use of all Westmount's recreation facilities, including especially the tennis courts, swimming pool and skating rinks.

Since so many passes are coming up for renewal this spring, officials plead for toleration; it will take about a week for the passes to be processed and mailed back to citizens. All passes will be issued by mail.

Renewal application kits can be obtained at the recreation department office, 4675 St. Catherine street west. Applications will not be mailed to citizens, but the processed cards will be mailed to them once they are completed.

Unity seeks volunteers

The Unity Boys' and Girls' Club is urgently looking for persons to volunteer their services to work in their community centre at 1090 Greene avenue.

The effort would give excellent experience to young people going on in the field of social studies or community work and organizers are also looking for persons with special skills in crafts and sports who would like to spend a few hours a week working with the youngsters and teenagers at the centre.

Further information on becoming a Unity volunteer is available by calling Lillian Rouben on weekdays at 931-6202.

Drop-in at YMCA Fridays

A Friday evening drop-in program at the Westmount YMCA is open for teenagers between age 12 and 15.

From 7 to 10 pm each Friday the Y offers volleyball, gymnastics, swimming, floor hockey, Risk, lounging and other activities. Admission is 75 cents.

Further information on the program is available from Kim Rogerson at 933-3916.

Vandalism

We have now started a campaign to prevent vandalism in our community. We have a beautiful district—let's keep it that way.

The parks, for instance, are for everyone to enjoy. When children go to the park to play and find swings torn down, or when benches are broken, it's a disgrace to our community. Soon the spring flowers will be in bloom. They should not be picked from the parks or someone else's property.

Our police patrols have been advised to pay particular attention to city properties, parks, recreation areas, schools, business establishments and residences during the anti-vandalism campaign April 20 to June 14.

Last spring and summer a lot of damage was caused in Westmount, specially in King George and Westmount parks. We hope this year we won't have that kind of problem. I am led to believe that youths from this district were not the instigators of those unhappy incidents. It appears that youths from other areas are coming in here and, as they have nothing better to do, they loiter in parks, break things and cause trouble.

You will be helping your community by protecting property rather than by destroying it.

Fireman hurt in Outremont

Westmount Fireman David Cobb injured his shoulder fighting a four-hour blaze in a three-storey building in Outremont Friday when the Westmount Fire Brigade responded to a call for mutual aid assistance at 10:43 am.

The local firefighter was taken to Reddy Memorial Hospital at 5:03 pm after he returned to the station. He was treated for a swollen shoulder, a result of falling debris, and was relieved from duty until Tuesday evening.

The stubborn fire, which broke out in an old building housing a medical centre and stores at the corner of Laurier boulevard and Hutchison street, was battled by 75 firemen from six mutual aid cities.

Feds have failed area Dupras tells Rotarians

The federal government has failed Montreal badly in effort and support for the economic well-being of Canada's premier metropolitan area.

This is the opinion, backed by instances and figures, of Claude Dupras, the local engineer who has worked on a number of federal projects and was the Progressive Conservative candidate in St. Henri-Westmount in February's general election.

Mr. Dupras was last Wednesday's speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of The Rotary Club of Westmount in Victoria Hall.

Both Toronto and Vancouver have been better treated than Montreal in recent years in undertakings which have a lasting benefit to the localities, he said. It is capital projects which are needed; transfer payments, he explained, go into consumption and leave no lasting impact.

He deplored the fact that there was no standing caucus of members of Parliament from Montreal island to consider the area's needs and press the government for appropriate action. MPs in other parts of the country have, he said, used this combined approach to great effect.

Foremost need, Mr. Dupras asserted, was an industrial strategy for Montreal. This was specially urgent in view of the general trend of undertakings from the east. With the movement westward of manufacturing and other enterprises there has been a corresponding net loss of population resulting, he said, in 1979 in the metropolitan area falling behind Toronto for the first time.

Brian Fripp introduced and Robert Layton thanked the speaker. President Stuart Ferguson was in the chair.

Police to clamp down on vandalism wave

Police in Westmount hope to thwart a sudden outbreak of vandalism by launching an eight-week program Sunday in a special effort to prevent the vandalism that plagued this community's parks and streets last spring and resulted in the city having to hire guards with dogs to bolster security.

Said local Police Director Gabriel Ayotte this week: "I ask every citizen to be involved in our program to reduce vandalism. We would like to be informed if anyone sees groups of youths or kids throwing rocks or playing ball near windows in park areas."

He said there were 25 acts of vandalism reported to police from all of Station 23's territory during the last week, compared with a four-year average of 9.1 cases a week.

"It's very, very bad," he added. "It is especially important that we start this program quickly and that we have the support of the citizens. We cannot do it all alone."

The high number of vandalism acts during the past week included broken windows and damage to a mailbox and to cars.

A postal employee reported to police Saturday at 9 am that the chute of a post box in front of 4400 Montrose avenue had been damaged.

A resident of an apartment building on Academy road informed police that she had seen three boys tear a radio antenna off a 1976 Dodge Aspen parked opposite 50 Academy road Saturday at 12:25 am while she was on her balcony. They ran away, however, before police arrived.

Sgt.-Det. William Jones noticed last Wednesday as he patrolled that a window in the bus shelter at the corner of Redfern avenue and St. Catherine street had been broken at about 3:16 pm.

Two other cases of broken windows were reported as well. One was a large window measuring 60 by 36 inches at Dawson College, discovered by the CEGEP watchman Monday at 12:37 am. The window was broken by a rock, causing $250 damage.

In another incident, a window in an apartment building at 1102 Greene avenue was broken by young people throwing a rock on Sunday at 3 am resulting in damage of $150.

Dir. Ayotte said that other common acts of vandalism include scratches to vehicles and damage in parks. "The public property belongs to everybody. It's theirs. They should be on the lookout to help protect it."

Cleaned out

A coin-operated laundry machine in an apartment building at 335 Clarke avenue was broken into last Wednesday resulting in $50 damage to the machine, although the exact amount of money taken is not known, according to police.
