

THE WEATHER

The province will remain under the influence of a major low pressure system for the next few days. Cloud will be over all regions and precipitation will be in the form of showers or rain. There will be a few local sunny periods but they will be short lived and miserable weather will prevail.

Today cloudy with a few clear periods. Friday overcast with showers changing to rain during the day. Winds easterly moderate. High today 13 to 15. Low tonight 5 to 7. High Friday near 16.

Chretien hedges growth forecasts

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien drew back from two of his economic predictions Wednesday, saying the country may fall short of the $4 billion trade surplus and the four-per-cent growth rate he has been forecasting.

Speaking to reporters at an impromptu news conference, Chretien said the government plans no change in its economic policy, but there could be day-to-day modification in its tactics to defend the dollar on world currency markets. He said such flexibility is necessary to stay a few steps ahead of currency traders and international speculators.

Chretien said the government is concerned about the low international value of the Canadian dollar which closed Wednesday at 84.50 cents U.S., but repeated that no drastic move—such as the imposition of exchange controls or the seeking of a loan from the International Monetary Fund—is being contemplated.

Any major change in economic policy would have to come as part of a new budget, which Chretien has promised to introduce before the end of the year.

He refused to give a precise budget date because he wishes to consult with the provinces and watch for trends in the monthly economic indicators, such as the unemployment rate, inflation rate and trade balance, in the next month or two before making a decision.

Chretien said the budget could contain a revised estimate of the country's economic growth for the year if the growth in the country's output for the third quarter of the year does not meet his expectations.

He said he might also be forced to revise his estimate of the government's cash requirements. Chretien has promised the government's year-end requirement will not exceed $12 billion, but Opposition leader Joe Clark has said the deficit may run as high as $18 billion.

Chretien defended the government's use of $4.3 billion of its official reserves so far this year to defend the Canadian dollar on world currency market. Chretien said people have the mistaken impression the government is using up dollars from the treasury when it dips into its foreign reserves.

English-speaking Quebecers and immigrants invariably fall into the pro-federalist categories in opinion polls.

Lavoie, member of the national assembly for Laval, said the electoral law limits the enumerator to ask only the name, age, address and occupation of the resident.

Only the revision committee, which sits two weeks later, can determine the right of a resident to vote, he said.

Lavoie quoted the PQ manual as instructing enumerators to ask, among other things, to see the person's citizenship card if he or she is not born here, to ask where he or she was baptized, and to verify their knowledge of English or French.

"The law forbids enumerators from playing a political role," he said. "Enumerators have to swear, among other things, that they will not carry on any political activity. This sort of thing gives me goose pimples."

A spokesman for PQ headquarters here confirmed that PQ-appointed enumerators in the Montreal region were given the manual before the swearing-in "for their instruction."

"After the swearing-in they no longer used it," said Marielle Seguin.

TO TAKE ACTION

Lavoie said that the manual was given to enumerators after the swearing-in. "As soon as we have enough complaints, from citizens and Liberal enumerators, we'll initiate legal action."

Grits cry foul play in census

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Liberal party accused the governing Parti Quebecois Wednesday of unfair practices while enumerating ethnic residents during the current provincial voter count.

Liberal house leader Jean-

Noel Lavoie produced an instruction manual at a news conference which he says was given to enumerators, telling them to try and find out the elector's citizenship, knowledge of French or English and qualifications. Lavoie said the voting list compiled from the enumeration, which ends today, could be used for the referendum on Quebec independence, expected next year.

"With the polls we have now, the PQ might think some ethnics and English would vote against independence."

Enumerators miss thousands

Would-be voters in villages and rural areas report they have not been visited by an enumerator, but according to the Electoral Act, enumerators are not required to go from house to house except in the cities and towns.

The four-day enumeration—billed as the most complete and impartial census ever to be taken in Quebec—was heralded by a $500,000 ad campaign instructing people to be at home from Oct. 2-5 so they could be listed.

Results of the enumeration will be used to compile a master voting list to be used in all future Quebec polls—including the referendum on independence slated for next year.

However Jean-Paul Fiset, who is in charge of registering voters in North Hatley, said last night the manual sent him by the province's chief returning officer states specifically he is not required to visit each home in turn, and that those missed in the current census would have a chance to add their names to the list during a yet-to-be-announced revision day.

Neither Fiset nor another North Hatley enumerator, Helene Cousot, could say when the revision date would be. "It will be once the lists are posted in the village," Cousot said last night. "I think it's October 25." She said she believed there would be announcements of the revision but she couldn't say where or when.

Fiset said the revision day could come as early as next week, as soon as the lists were compiled, but he wasn't sure. See CENSUS, page 10

The Anchorage, the latest addition to Ripplecove Inn in Ayer's Cliff survived Sunday's blaze and Steve Stafford, the hotel owner, has set up a new office there.

RIPPLECOVE WILL REOPEN, OWNER VOWS

By ALISON HOGAN

AYER'S CLIFF — The Ripplecove Inn sign still stands at the junction to the lane which leads down to the beautiful peninsula where the Inn was situated.

There is little sign now of the horrible events of the weekend, only a roped-off area of blackened rubble with the chimney stacks still standing, the only indication of where 11 elderly visitors lost their lives.

To the other side of the Inn is an attractive building looking over the lake, brightly painted chairs on the lawn and boats moored at the landing. This is the Anchorage, the newer part of the Inn built some years ago and which survived the fire.

In this lies Steve Stafford's hope for the future. Stafford, the young proprietor of the Inn, has already set up a temporary office there and hopes to use the building to its fullest extent, possibly beginning with a discotheque next weekend.

"We're down but not out," said Stafford, looking tired and wan, as he left his desk for a moment to talk about his plans for the future.

"I haven't given much thought to it," he said wearily, the events of the weekend weighing heavily on him. "I'm still shocked."

Eighteen rooms, a cocktail lounge, dining room and his own family residence went up in the blaze and Stafford was reluctant to talk in too optimistic terms about reconstructing the place. There are many obstacles but if it is possible Stafford will rebuild.

'ASSEMBLY SHUFFLE' ANGRERS GRENIER

QUEBEC (CP) — The "assembly shuffle" was the subject of a heated debate in the Quebec legislature for almost an hour Wednesday.

The televising of national assembly proceedings began Tuesday and resourceful government members, taking an example from their counterparts in the Commons, already have established the shuffle, in which they constantly change seats to give viewers at home the impression of a full house.

Thus, as Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau began speaking Wednesday, fellow Parti Quebecois members left their assigned seats to fill the vacant ones surrounding him.

Fernand Grenier (UN—Megantic-Compton) denounced the practice, telling a harried deputy Speaker that he will raise the issue every time members change their seats in this way for the camera.

Deputy Speaker Louise Cuerrier-Sauve refused Grenier's request to order members to stay in their seats. "You've gotten your message across," she told him. "The public now knows that seats are assigned in the national assembly and that there are members who are changing seats."

But members have never been denied the right to move freely around the chamber and to sit where they choose, as long as when they want to speak, they regain their assigned seats, she said.

"I will ask the members to be discreet and not to interfere, of course."

Grenier's complaint was picked up by several other opposition members and debate on the question raged for almost an hour.

Marion jury complete

MONTREAL (CP) — A five-man and seven-woman jury was chosen Wednesday for the trial of Claude and Jeanne Valence, charged with the 82-day kidnapping of Sherbrooke credit union employee Charles Marion.

The jury will begin hearing evidence Friday morning, giving the Crown the opportunity to transport exhibits from Sherbrooke to the courthouse here.

Valence, 43, was in the prisoner's dock Wednesday, while his 42-year-old wife, who is free on bail, sat in the audience.

Quebec Superior Court Justice Marc Beaugard made a point of warning the jurors not to read a book dealing with the "Marion affair."

The trial began Monday and the judge said it is expected to last at least two months.

The Valences are charged with conspiring from February 1977 to Aug. 6, 1977, with Michel De Varenne to kidnap Marion, carrying out the kidnapping Aug. 6, forcibly detaining him until Oct. 27, extortion and attempted extortion.

The crimes are alleged to have taken place at Sherbrooke and the nearby villages of Stoke and Gould, about 145 kilometres east of Montreal.

Pope's funeral shadowed by conclave

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The body of Pope John Paul I lay in a marble tomb beneath St. Peter's Basilica today as the cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church began preliminaries for the election of a new leader for the second time in two months.

Workmen already were busy with preparations in the area to be sealed off for the electoral conclave, including the Sistine Chapel, the frescoed Borgia Apartments and a large section of offices and private apartments in the Apostolic Palace.

The conclave starts Oct. 14. Voting begins the next day, and many cardinals predicted it would continue for longer than the one day it took to elect Albino Luciani, the patriarch of Venice, to succeed Pope Paul VI on Aug. 26. Juan Cardinal Landazuri Ricketts, archbishop of Lima, Peru, said the cardinals would "hold several encounters before the conclave in order to exchange opinions, impressions and experiences."

In pre-conclave meetings in August, the cardinals were reported to have had more discussion of the general criteria for Pope Paul's successor than of individual candidates. They agreed they wanted an Italian with pastoral rather than bureaucratic experience.

STILL HOLD TRUE

"Undoubtedly those criteria retain now their full validity, which has actually increased," Eduardo Cardinal Pironio of Argentina said in a newspaper interview. "The fleeting but profound mission of Pope John Paul I teaches us that the church needs a true pastor."

Three Italian cardinal-archbishops were being mentioned as papabili—possible popes. They were Corrado Ursi, 70, of Naples; Salvatore Pappalardo, 60, of Palermo, Sicily; and Giuseppe Siri, 72, of Genoa.

Some cardinals in the Vatican Curia also were considered papabili because they had extensive pastoral experience before they joined the central bureaucracy.

They included Sebastiano Baggio, 65, the head of the Congregation for the Bishops, and Sergio Pignedoli, 68, a longtime friend of Pope Paul VI.

Meanwhile, the great bronze doors of St. Peter's reopened this morning and a steady stream of mourners went down into the grotto beneath Christendom's largest church to pray at the tomb of Pope John Paul.

NEAR PAUL, JOHN

Situated near the tombs of Paul VI and John XXIII, the predecessors from whom John Paul took his papal name, the sarcophagus is made of greystreaked white marble from Turkey, with four small ancient columns at the corners supporting the upper slab and the front adorned with ancient bas-reliefs of two angels. The tomb is inscribed with the Pope's name in Latin.

The body was entombed Wednesday night at a brief rite attended by the Pope's relatives, 12 cardinals and other prelates after the rain-soaked funeral in St. Peter's Square. The crowd in the square was estimated at 50,000, about half the turnout for the funeral of Pope Paul VI on a sunny Saturday afternoon.

The arrangements for the two-hour funeral duplicated those for the funeral of Paul VI, the first papal funeral held in St. Peter's Square instead of inside the basilica. The cypress coffin rested on an Oriental rug in front of the altar on the marble steps of St. Peter's, adorned only by an open book of the Gospels. Foreign delegates sat on one side of the altar, facing 95 scarlet-robed cardinals sitting on the other.

CELEBRATED JOINTLY

The cardinals celebrated the mass jointly, and a hundred priests went among the crowd to give communion to all wanting to take it. And as the papal throne-bearers carried are traditionally applauded at the end of public audiences and ceremonies.

Offshore oil drilling moves north

HALIFAX (CP) — Offshore oil exploration on Canada's East Coast has been shifting progressively northward since it began in 1960, says Gulf Oil Canada's manager of East Coast and frontier exploration.

Stan Bolter of Calgary said Tuesday that drilling on the Scotian Shelf off Nova Scotia has been disappointing because the shelf's oil reservoirs are thin and discontinuous. The Grand Banks off Newfoundland have also been disappointing because there are few oil reservoirs, he said.

But he saw promise in the Labrador Shelf and said drilling activity there should increase next year. It appears to have the right geological structures and there have been indications of petroleum, he said.

Farther north, Baffin Bay appears to have promising structures similar to the Labrador shelf, and companies with holdings there are expected to begin exploration in 1979. The shelf west of Greenland, however, has been disappointing.

In the United States, the Baltimore Basin off Atlantic City appears promising and is attracting a lot of exploration, Bolter said.

Canfarm bidding begins

OTTAWA (CP) — A call for tenders from groups interested in taking over Canfarm, the national farm accounting service, will be issued later this week, says Gaeten Lussier, deputy federal agriculture minister.

But Lussier said in an interview Tuesday that the inside track on taking over Canfarm, which has to find a new sponsor because Ottawa is dropping out to save $5.5 million, belongs to farm groups which have already expressed an interest in the agency.

He was commenting on a meeting Monday with provincial deputy agriculture ministers and deans of agriculture colleges, Ottawa's partners in the creation of Canfarm in 1963. The officials set an Oct. 25 deadline for bids.

Farm leaders and representatives of financial co-operatives will meet in Toronto on Friday to prepare a detailed proposal to take over Canfarm.

A number of banks and computer consulting firms also have expressed interest in the agency.

Vickers workers strike

MONTREAL (CP) — About 450 employees of the industrial division of Canadian Vickers Ltd., who have been negotiating for a new contract since January, went on strike Tuesday.

The employees, members of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, voted to strike by a two-thirds majority, a union statement said.

With some health and safety conditions already resolved, it is primarily financial issues which divide the two sides. The union wants extra pay for work in restricted areas and a cost-of-living clause in a two-year contract.

The union also is demanding the company recall a number of employees of the nuclear division who were laid off last year for union activities.

The union says it has already put pressure on the company to agree to several improvements in safety conditions, to the concede the right of workers to demand safety conditions without reprisals, and to offer suitable employment without loss of salary to workers injured on the job who are unable to continue in their former line of work.

PSAC mulls pension amendment

OTTAWA (CP) — The Public Service Alliance of Canada is considering an amendment in pension recovery for employees being cut under the federal austerity program.

Don Yost, president of the 9,000-member Agriculture Union, said in an interview Tuesday the move is intended to protect the pension payments of those nearing retirement.

He said many federal employees at or just over 50 years of age already have fully paid up their pensions while many between 50 and 65 will be heavily affected by having to leave their jobs early.

Yost said his union, an affiliate of the alliance, passed a special resolution Tuesday to place the proposal before the federal government.

Canadian businessmen in China

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says in a Peking dispatch that more than 20 of Canada's top business leaders have begun a secrecy-shrouded trip to China that may result in major sales.

The dispatch, by the newspaper's Peking correspondent John Fraser, says the Canadians, who provide over companies representing more than $35 billion in assets, came here without any government assistance and embassy officials in Peking know little about the group and have no idea what it is going to offer the Chinese.

Fraser says the group is headed by Paul Desmarais, chairman of Power Corp. of Canada Ltd., who has been the driving force in getting the group together.

MONTREAL OPENS WATER PLANT

MONTREAL — The City of Montreal has officially opened its new $300 million water supply system, designed to meet the city's water needs for the next 40 years, last week.

A major portion of this investment lies in a huge plant, acknowledged by water systems experts to be one of the most modern facilities of its kind in the world. It can now supply 250 million gallons of water per day and will eventually provide double that amount.

Montreal is situated on an island in the mighty St. Lawrence River, which feeds the new filtration plant, erected less than one mile from its banks in the southwestern section of the city.

"Our beloved St. Lawrence River has supplied Montreal with its water needs for more than 150 years," Mayor Drapeau said. "Now, our highly efficient, completely automated filtration plant will enable us to continue to draw on this great natural resource for the citizens of Montreal and those of 14 adjacent towns in the Montreal Urban Community for many decades to come."

Named the Charles-J. Des Baillefs Filtration Plant to honor the Swiss-born engineer who was chief of the Montreal Water Commission from 1921 to 1941, the new plant is the culmination of more than 10 years of planning and construction.

Begun in 1973, the filtration plant enjoys many extraordinary features. For example, the facility is fully automated; it can operate under computer control and, although one person is assigned to the central computer room to monitor ongoing activities, the plant requires no human input.

Another unusual feature is that the water is sterilized with ozone. Except for Moscow's water system, the Montreal facility is the largest system in the world using ozone. Ozone adds highly active oxygen to the water; this oxidizes organic matter, effectively burning it up and destroying its ability to cause infections or toxic reactions. Water purified with ozone is widely held to have superior qualities to water sterilized by chlorination.

Thanks to the use of ozone, chlorine is added only to prevent contamination of the water during pumping and storage; this requires a chlorine level far below that needed to sterilize. As a result, the Montreal water has considerably less chlorine smell than water purified with chlorine.

Maternity petition rejected

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Human Rights Charter provides no general guarantee of maternity leaves for women working under the terms of individual contracts in service industries, a Quebec Superior Court judge says.

Mr. Justice Claude Benoit gave this as a reason Tuesday for rejecting a petition for an injunction to force the Aristocrat Apartment Hotel to rehire a waitress who had left her job to have a baby.

The Quebec Human Rights Commission had filed for an injunction on behalf of Joan Audain on grounds that the charter forbids discrimination because of sex.

Mr. Justice Benoit said the commission, in effect, was arguing that Ms. Audain had been denied employment "because of the particular function of the female sex—namely pregnancy and childbirth." However, he said, all employees waiting on tables at the apartment hotel were women and Ms. Audain's job was filled by another woman after she became pregnant.

Sexual discrimination, he said, occurs only when "a distinction is made between two persons on the grounds that one is a man and one is a woman."

The commission's interpretation of the law went a good deal further, the judge said, because it would prevent employers from ending contracts of women who became pregnant even if they left voluntarily.

The charter does not create this right, he ruled, adding that the word "sex" was not comprehensive enough for "a matter as complex as this."

The judge's ruling does not apply to cases where maternity leave is guaranteed by collective labor agreements.

CDC controversy

To paraphrase the oft-heard CBC promo, out at Bishop's, the CDC is the one to watch this fall.

The Committee of Divisional Chairpersons (CDC) is the body that assumed the duties of the Dean earlier this year when former Dean Cecil B. Haver's mandate expired.

Lately, the committee has been in the midst of a controversy surrounding the appointment of a new dean. The campus community at the moment seems to be somewhat divided on the issue, with the students voting overwhelmingly in favor of a recent Students' Executive Council meeting of a motion calling for the replacement of the CDC with a full-time dean.

Some of the faculty, however, want to keep the committee until it has had more of a chance to test its mettle. At a recent meeting of the Faculty Council, however, a motion to maintain the position of dean of faculty was carried.

No final decision on the position of the post of dean is expected for some time to come and this decision, when it is made will culminate in the striking of a committee to search for a new dean.

At the present time, the CDC is reportedly holding its own with no problems reported, at least through the student sector.

The Committee of Divisional Chairpersons is composed of the chairmen of the five academic divisions at the university.

As a postscript to this note on the CDC, students got a taste of the spirit of democracy as they set about the ratification of the Divisional Chairman proposed to represent them in conflicts with professors, the University Senate or courses.

Humanities Division Chairman William Shearson was grilled by students at a recent SEC meeting on the subject of his post as student rep. Impressed by Dr. Shearson's statement that he "would not make end runs around the rules of the University" in resolving student problems but that he would, in the case of an injustice, "tear the walls down for you," the students ratified him in a vote, almost unanimous save for two members.

A trip to Greece

If you hear some of the students from Champlain College talking about a trip to Greece, you'd better listen a little closer because they might not be discussing a jaunt to the movie of a similar name. In fact, the Greece trip (the country, that is, not the movie) is an annual event arranged as a complementary credit course by Professor Peter Rahn. For a total cost of $650, some lucky Champlain students get to sample European culture. The trip includes visits to museums, archaeological sites and the Greek Islands.

If some local CEGEP student is divided over which Greece to see, he should be reminded that, although Aristotle may not be on a poster with Olivia Newton-John, the ancient philosopher has been around a lot longer than John Travolta.

Communications channels

Lines of communication between the student government at Bishop's and the local administration were opened this week as yours truly in his capacity as SEC president and SEC external affairs vice-president, Paul Bachand, met with Mayor Cecil Dougherty who was interviewed for the Bishop's weekly tabloid "Campus". The mayor was very receptive to student involvement in the town although he stressed that students were here to get an education and that he would not want to see involvement in local affairs detract from anyone's studies.

On the subject of liaison projects, Le Club de Liaison is off and running for another year.

Though the turnout was small at the club's initial meeting, enthusiasm charged the air in the conference room. Headed up by Bishop's students Sue Aitken and Daniel Dion, the Club de Liaison aims to make students more aware of the francophone element in the Townships. They intend to achieve this by sponsoring trips to area cultural events, opening up channels of communication with counterparts at the Universite de Sherbrooke and possibly arranging a field trip to the Quebec Winter Carnival.

They are also interested in promoting the use of the French language on campus which will provide the less bilingual among us with a golden opportunity to brush up on a second language.

The organizers realize that man cannot live by bread alone and have planned some trips to local French restaurants.

The Student Centre exhibit room will add its own touch of culture to campus life on October 10 as Bishop's and Champlain inaugurate the new art gallery with a presentation titled, "The Art of the Caves". Concerned primarily with cro-magnon artwork, depicted in photographs by John Hollander, the exhibit will coincide with a performance by noted classical guitarist John Mills in Centennial Theatre the same night, starting at 8:30.

Archambault seeks election

SHERBROOKE (AF) — Jean Guy Archambault, one of the three city councillors now representing Seat No. 2 in the North Ward, last night announced his candidature for another term of office.

A group of citizens who met with Archambault at his home on Meilleur Street were assured that Archambault was looking for a return to office after what he described as four years of municipal administration experience, proven honesty and integrity as regards his decisions in council, respect from his colleagues and with a very democratic style of fulfilling his mandate.

He cited as examples of his democratic style his consultations with citizens

SHERBROOKE (MM) — Mayor Jacques O'Bready is expected to meet with energy Minister Guy Joron today to discuss the possibility of an amalgamation between Hydro-Sherbrooke and Hydro-Quebec.

Joron, in town to address the Quebec Corporation of Master Electricians, will also meet with the Quebec branch of the Order of Engineers to discuss the government's White Paper on Energy.

It is expected that the energy minister will also discuss the proposed Hydro-Quebec and Hydro-Sherbrooke rate hikes with the mayor.

Joron's stop in Sherbrooke is the first leg of a province-wide tour to inform the population of those aspects of the white paper dealing with energy conservation.

The CMEQ's three-day annual conference, being held at the Auberge des Gouverneurs and the Hotel Le Baron, will focus on the viability of integration between the electricians and the Regie des entreprises en construction.

Following a press conference this afternoon, Joron is scheduled to speak at the Sherbrooke branch of the Order of Engineers' monthly dinner, where he is expected to face stiff opposition to the government's energy policy.

The minister's tour was conceived last June after the release of the White Paper on Energy, as a way to stimulate discussion of the future of energy in Quebec.

RCMP: Dynamite theft knowledge denied

OTTAWA (CP) — Former RCMP Staff Sgt. Donald McCleery testified Wednesday that he had nothing to do with a case of dynamite before it was stolen from an explosives warehouse in Quebec's Eastern townships in the spring of 1972.

"My involvement with that case of dynamite was after the fact," McCleery, dismissed from the force Dec. 6, 1973, told a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing.

His testimony on the dynamite incident contradicted that of RCMP Sgt. Bernard Dubuc, who told the commission last month that at McCleery's orders he, Constable Richard Daigle and Cpl. Normand Chamberland made a midnight run to the warehouse southeast of Montreal.

The dynamite, stolen along with a case of detonator caps, was to be used by an RCMP informant trying to gain credibility with members of a terrorist cell.

McCleery, who headed the G2 anti-terrorist unit in Montreal, testified that someone left the dynamite with him and he kept it under his office desk for several days.

OFTEN ASKED Commission counsel Ross Goodwin asked McCleery why he volunteered to keep the dynamite, which was later stored at his Laurentian cottage. McCleery said he has often asked himself that question.

He later asked that it be removed from his cottage. He, Sgt. Claude Brodeur and another Mountie took it to Brodeur's cottage in the Eastern Townships and buried it beneath a wrecked car.

It was later left on a roadside field to be picked up by Quebec Provincial Police, who were tipped by Daigle through an anonymous phone call.

While other witnesses have suggested that the dynamite would be used to frame someone, McCleery said that although the idea may have come up, it was never acted upon.

He has the strong support of the community of Ayer's Cliff; the reputation of the Inn brought people from all over the country to the town bringing life and trade to the place and the local response to the tragedy has resulted in an outpouring of support.

The Inn was always family-run business, built in 1945 by Steve's father, Archie who lives just next door, but they agree they can never bring back the old Inn. A unique family collection of furniture and prints went up in smoke which can never be replaced. The chimneys remain and the large fireplaces which were always a popular feature of the central structure would provide the centrepiece for a new Inn, a link with the old.

Despite the young owner's mood of melancholy, a note of hope came through when pressed for a possible date when a new Ripplecove Inn might be ready.

"If I rebuild," he said smiling, "I would love to be ready for next summer, or if not, the conference season next fall."

Noose's opponents lie low as public mood swings

OTTAWA (CP) — While policemen and prison guards mount an expensive campaign to bring back the noose, opponents of capital punishment are keeping quiet, waiting to see whether the government intends to reopen the controversial issue.

Some of those who lobbied for abolition in 1976 say they are staying out of the debate on reinstatement of the death penalty until the government moves to change the law. "They won't react until it comes down to the wire," said Ward Adams, executive director of the John Howard Society in Ottawa. His organization, a prisoners aid society, campaigned for abolition of hanging.

"Right now I don't think anybody is paying attention to it," Adams said. "The abolitionists, or people who want the law to stay the same, are by and large totally unorganized."

In contrast, the Canadian Police Association and the union representing guards in federal penitentiaries have raised $200,000 for a public campaign to bring back the death penalty.

Parliament abolished capital punishment in a free vote in 1976 after two periods of trial abolition. Even though hanging was in force for killers of on-duty policemen and prison guards, there has not been a hanging in Canada since 1962.

LANG REOPENS

Despite Prime Minister Trudeau's frequent statements that the issue is closed, Justice Minister Otto Lang appeared to reopen it last month when he suggested a referendum be held.

This is just what the policemen want because they feel the public backs their contention that capital punishment is a deterrent to crime.

At their annual convention in August, Canadian police chiefs unanimously approved a resolution calling for the death penalty in first-degree—premeditated—murder.

A Gallup Poll in April showed that 82 per cent of Canadians want a referendum on the subject and 68 per cent want a return to capital punishment.

If the government does decide to officially reopen the question, the John Howard Society, civil liberties and church groups will undoubtedly gear up campaigns against the death penalty, Adams said.

Both Lang and Trudeau have said they do not feel the advocates of capital punishment would necessarily win a referendum.

HAS FAITH

Lang, an abolitionist, said he has faith that many persuasive spokesmen for abolition will come forward and perhaps bring the population to their side.

Trudeau thinks "people who are convinced that hanging is the only way to protect society can be convinced there are better ways."

The fact that no abolitionists are answering the policemen's challenge is not surprising, said Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster), whose entire party voted for abolition in 1976.

"It's rare that you have a group in society who starts to militate for no change in the law," Leggatt said in a telephone interview.

Killer brollies terrorize U.K. exiles

LONDON (CP) — Like the bowler hat, the tightly-furled, long, black umbrella has become a symbol of London over the years.

Even on fine days, cautious Britons can be seen pointing directions with it. They wave it like a sword to flag down taxis. They swing it with a jaunty air as they stride past the stock exchange.

Now the traditional "broolly" has become something else—a symbol of murder, as Scotland Yard's anti-terror squad investigates two bizarre deaths.

Somewhere in London is an umbrella either sharpened like a lance or fitted with a compressed-air pistol attachment.

DEFECTORS DIE

Dead are two British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC) workers. Both were Bulgarian defectors.

Georgi Markov was the first to die a month ago when he complained of being stabbed with a poison-tipped umbrella by a man who vanished in a cab. Doctors found a pinhead-sized metal ball under his skin. It has been drilled out to take either poison or a deadly virus.

His widow said he had lived in fear of Bulgaria's secret police.

The second man to die was Vladimir Simeonov, a friend and co-worker of Markov. Doctors diagnosed cause of death as asphyxia from inhaling blood from a broken nose.

Police want to know what caused him to fall and injure himself.

A victim who survived was also a Bulgarian emigre, Vladimir Kostov, based in Paris.

PELLET REMOVED

French surgeons removed a pellet—identical to the one taken from Markov—from Kostov's back. It had been fired at him in a Paris subway.

Like Markov and Simeonov, Kostov was a journalist. Scotland Yard placed the two British cases under Jim Nevill, chief of the anti-terror squad who stated cautiously: "It is fair to say we are looking at all possibilities."

The investigation is focussed on the BBC's external services area.

Byelections '78

WINNIPEG (CP) — The spectre of political backlash has turned the Oct. 16 federal by-election in St. Boniface into a volatile and highly unpredictable contest.

Political pundits are watching closely for signs of voter hostility toward either the federal Liberal government or Manitoba's Progressive Conservative administration.

Given the tone of the campaign and the large number of candidates, the riding's next member of Parliament could be more of a survivor than a victor.

St. Boniface has been a Liberal stronghold since its creation in 1924. Although the riding has changed radically over the years, it has voted Liberal in every election except the Conservative landslide of 1958.

This year, most observers look for a tight, two-way race between Liberal candidate Robert Bockstael and Conservative Jack Hare, but see the showing of NDP candidate Grant Wichenko and national Social Credit Party leader Lorne Reznowski as important factors in the outcome.

Independent candidates Don Oliver and William Hawryluk are given little chance of picking up more than a few hundred votes each.

Bockstael, 55, a local contractor, is making his first foray into federal politics after five years as a Winnipeg city councillor.

Independent candidates Don Oliver and William Hawryluk are given little chance of picking up more than a few hundred votes each.

Bockstael reminds voters that 12 of the 13 federal seats in Manitoba already are held by opposition MPs, and he says adding to the opposition makes little sense at this time.

"To have another negative voice that sits in the opposition to complain about what the government is doing is not very constructive," he says.

The other parties, however, view the by-election as the first step toward ousting the Liberals from power.

Hare, 58, a former university professor who now has his own agricultural consulting firm, is back as the Tory candidate this year after a surprisingly strong finish in the 1974 general election.

He ran second, only 3,167 votes behind Joe Guay four years ago and is confident of victory against Bockstael with Guay now gone to the Senate.

Hare says most of the new voters who have moved into the riding in recent years are inclined to vote Conservative. And he shrugs off suggestions that the austere economic policies of Premier Sterling Lyon could alienate potential supporters.

"Really, I don't think it's going to have a large effect on our situation," he says. SAYS PEOPLE FED UP Wichenko strongly disagrees with this analysis. He points to traditional NDP support in the area in past elections, and he is counting on disillusionment with both the federal and provincial governments to work in his favor this year.

"We're not the government anymore, and people are out for blood," he says. "They're really fed up."

The 26-year-old engineer lost his job as a planner and advisor to the provincial government soon after the Conservatives took office last fall and has been unemployed since that time.

Reznowski, 49, a professor of English literature who was chosen last spring as the Social Credit Party's national leader, also hopes to take advantage of anti-government sentiment.

The party's best showing in St. Boniface was 3,872 votes in the 1957 general election, and its support in the last three elections has been less than 1,000 votes.

Reznowski figures to do much better this time, partly because of his status as a national leader, partly because of his emphasis on traditional social economic, and partly because of his strong stand on such issues as abortion—he is against it—that cut across party lines.

ALL UP FOR GRABS

"Everything's up for grabs in a by-election," he adds. "If we're going to make a start in reconquering the West, we have to start here."

The two independent candidates, Oliver and Hawryluk, are both accountants.

Oliver believes Ottawa is spending billions of dollars a year in support of terrorist groups at home and Communist countries abroad. To protest this use of tax money, he has not filed personal income tax returns for the last seven years and disputes the constitutionality of federal income taxes.

Hawryluk is a former Socred now involved with the Western Democracy Party, a party not recognized under the federal Election Act.

It's your right

The manner in which Quebecers are being enumerated for the so-called master voters' list is little short of criminal.

It's not the fault of the enumerators. They don't get paid to do a good job, nor are they even encouraged to get out and register the folks in villages and rural areas. Even so, many of them are making an honest effort to compile the lists the best way they know how.

We don't suppose the government or the chief returning officer would for one moment be purposely trying to avoid registering people on the basis of name, language, background or other consideration, because surely they'd be aware of the truly monstrous outcry if this were the case.

Therefore, it must be laziness, stupidity or just plain incompetence which prompted the chief returning officer's decision not to send enumerators from home to home in the villages and rural areas as has been done in the past.

Without a doubt, the Parti Quebecois has far greater support in urban areas than in the smaller villages and hamlets. And we all know that the system for picking returning officers is essentially a political one, unchanged since British North America first began having elections.

But surely for a list which will be used to decide who may vote on the future of Canada, money and time should be no object?

If a single voter goes unregistered through the fault of this ridiculous system, it should be blamed on the fool or fools who decided it was to be done this way.

And any eligible voter who doesn't check and double-check to make sure he or she is on that list shouldn't be allowed to vote in the first place.

We've given you all the information you need to find out whether you and your family are enumerated. We'll continue to keep you informed the best way we know how.

But the strength of democracy is also its weakness; people must exercise that freedom of choice or they run the risk of losing it.

If you care about the future of Quebec and Canada, phone your local returning officer. Ask where your list will be posted. Demand to know when the revision period will be.

It's your right. Use it. JAMES DUFF

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Feds powerless to deal with Mob's growing

WASHINGTON — The federal law enforcement apparatus appears powerless to cope with organized crime, whose ominous growth has reached crisis proportions in America.

If the Mafia were suddenly to incorporate, its assets and revenues would place it close to the top of the Fortune 500. The mob has mushroomed into a $50 billion empire, with the money and muscle to challenge city and state governments.

The syndicate bosses control the illegal drug flow into the United States. They direct the back-alley commerce in pornography, prostitution and gambling. They have also invested billions of dollars in such legitimate enterprises as real estate, hotels, restaurants, construction companies and liquor stores.

Notorious Mafia figures also hold key positions in some labor unions, thus giving sticky mob fingers access to lucrative pension funds. All the crime syndicate's endeavors, of course, are attended by bribery, violence and murder.

In all too many localities, the corruption of politicians and police has rendered law enforcement relatively ineffective against organized crime. It has fallen on the federal government, therefore, to battle the underworld. It's an intense struggle, with the good guys pitted against the wise guys. Sadly, the wise guys are winning.

Two years ago, the General Accounting Office charged that the "war on organized crime is faltering." The campaign, declared the study, "is not planned, organized or directed efficiently."

But there is more behind this federal failure than common inefficiency. Under ex-President Richard Nixon, the Justice Department was more enthusiastic about enforcing the laws against street crimes than the rackets. This strange reluctance to pursue the criminal godfathers reached such a stage under ex-President Gerald Ford that several organized crime strike forces were disbanded.

Now the Carter administration is bringing new vigor to the subterranean war against the crime syndicate. But the crackdown will never be successful, as we have pointed out in past crime reports, as long as the populace patronizes the rackets. For it is the American people who provide the substance that the Mafia needs to spin its spiderweb.

Every payoff to a bookie, prostitute or pusher strengthens the mob and subsidizes lawlessness in this country. The General Accounting Office has concluded that "consumer demand for organized crime's goods and services provides billions of dollars in income each year."

All federal lawmen can do is to throw an occasional running block in the path of a dangerous crime lord. They recently got a break which has turned a notorious Mafioso into the most important underworld witness since Joe Valachi.

This inside informant is 63-year-old

Aladena Fratianno, known in crime circles simply as "Jimmy," whose life is now better protected than the president's. For every hit man in the murder business would like to collect on the contract that the crime chiefs have placed on Fratianno's life. As one source close to the case told our associate Marc Smolonsky, Fratianno's information could "bring them all down."

Years ago, the Chicago Mafia dispatched Fratianno to help protect its crime operations on the West Coast. The FBI believes Fratianno was the Mafia's chief West Coast executioner. He has performed 15 alleged killings that the FBI has heard about.

He is most celebrated in the underworld for allegedly knocking off Frank "Bomp" Bompensiero, once a fearsome figure on the West Coast. Bomp was killed for violating the Mafia's most deadly taboo: he was slipping information to the FBI.

He had tipped off the FBI about mob shakedown of pornographic operators in Los Angeles. Allegedly applying the squeeze were some of the ugliest customers in the West Coast underworld — Michael Rizzitello, Louis Tom Dagna, Thomas Ricciardi, Jack LeCicero, Dominick Brooklier known on the streets as "Jack Regace" and, of course, Bomp and Fratianno.

Bomp kept the FBI informed on the shakedowns. There was one porno operator, for example, who paid a $20,000 tribute to the mob for the privilege of staying in business. For betraying such confidences to the FBI, Bomp was efficiently rubbed out, it is alleged, under the direction of the ruthless Fratianno. Now it is Fratianno who is talking to the FBI and watching over his shoulder for a Mafia hit man.

Fratianno jumped sides after a Cleveland racketeer, Ray Ferrito, began singing to the FBI to save his own skin. One of the big names he mentioned was that of Fratianno. Meanwhile, the FBI learned about a murder contract on Fratianno for plotting against his syndicate superior. The FBI used inside information to persuade Fratianno that his life wasn't worth a plugged nickel if he stayed on the streets.

So Fratianno, under indictment on racketeering charges and facing execution by his underworld bosses, began squealing. He filled in details that his erstwhile victim, the late Bomp, had omitted about the porno shakedown. The FBI built a strong case against the Los Angeles mobsters, even setting up its own undercover porno business to gather the proof.

The investigation led to indictments against Fratianno's ex-associates, an indictment that has been dismissed but, according to insiders, will be renewed.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID HORAN

DANVILLE — Baskets of tastefully arranged late summer flowers formed the background for the double ring ceremony performed in Trinity United Church, Danville, Quebec, by the Reverend Watson Glover at 4 p.m. on August 26, 1978, when Judith Ann, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manville Williams and David Carl, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Horan, all of Danville, Quebec, exchanged their marriage vows.

Given in marriage by her father, she entered the church to the strains of "Trumpet Voluntary", played by the organist, Mr. Berkley Taylor. Her period gown of nylon net over white peau de soie, with applique and embroidered pearls on the bodice was complemented by a white straw derby hat from which fell a waist-length veil of illusion tulle. Her bouquet was of red roses, white carnations and stephanotis.

Miss Wendy Williams, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, wore a pale yellow gown with finely pleated bodice and matching cape. Her bouquet was of pink and white carnations. The other attendants, Miss Katherine Taylor of Richmond, and Miss Julie Tremblay of Montreal, wore gowns with accented pleated skirts, plain bodices and sheer capes, matching that of the maid of honor's, and carried bouquets of yellow and white carnations.

Awaiting his bride at the altar, David wore a dark brown tuxedo with a ruffled shirt of beige and matching dark brown tie, as did his best man, Mr. Andrew Lockwood of Ottawa and the two ushers, Mr. Michael Williams, brother of the bride and Mr. Keith Horan, brother of the groom.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. June Lodge sang a solo, "You are the Sunshine of my Life", accompanied at the organ by Mr. Taylor.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Williams chose a floor-length gown of dusty rose polyester with fine tucks in the jacket forming a jacquard pattern. Her corsage of toning carnations and black accessories completed her attire.

Mrs. Horan, mother of the groom, wore a sea-spray green crepe de soie with tiered skirt, matching shawl and beige accessories. Her wristlet corsage was of pink and white roses.

Mrs. Martha McVety, maternal grandmother of the bride, wore a floor-length gown of pastel tones and matching corsage, while Mrs. Charles Horan, paternal grandmother of the groom, was gowned in a floor-length deep pink polyester with a carnation corsage.

After a number of pictures had been taken, including several family ones, the receiving line was formed in the reception room of the Asbestos Golf and Country Club, where the happy couple, those in the bridal party and the parents welcomed over one hundred guests.

A delectable buffet supper was served by members of Trinity Church U.C.W.; the table was centered with an arrangement of seasonal flowers, as were the individual tables. When all the guests were seated, Mr. Brian Woods, master of ceremonies, called upon Mr. Frank Bryant of Paspempec, P.E.I., uncle of the bride, to ask the blessing. At the close of the meal a toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Woods, to which the groom responded and, at that time, proposed a toast to the bridesmaids, which brought an apt response from the best man, Mr. Andrew Lockwood, on their behalf. For these toasts the bridal couple drank from silver goblets which had been a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Smallman, longtime family friends.

Mrs. Susan Boutin and Miss Wendy Smith, close friends of the bride were in charge of the guest book, which was signed by those present prior to the supper. During that time, punch was also served to the guests.

At the conclusion of the supper David and Judy cut the double tiered cake which was tastefully decorated in octagon shape in pale yellow with pink flowers and green leaves. The wedding cake was then served to the guests by the young couple from a silver tray.

Dancing was enjoyed later to the music of Denis Bourrasa's tapes. In the course of the evening, many of the guests visited the Williams' home to see the numerous wedding gifts.

Later the bride and groom left for a honeymoon in the Eastern States and Maritime Provinces. For travelling Judy chose a two-piece rosewood suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations, while David chose a suit of medium grey. As Judy prepared to leave the hall, the prospective brides congregated at the front. Judy tossed her bouquet in the traditional manner, and it was caught by Wendy Smith.

Out-of-town guests were from Charlottetown and Paspempec, P.E.I., Toronto, Ottawa, Guelph, Kingston, Scarborough, and Fenwick, Ont., Montreal, Beaconsfield, Inverness, Drummondville, Sherbrooke, Waterloo, Lennoxville, Bulwer, Richmond, Kirkland, Kirkdale, Denison's Mills, Kingsbury, and Asbestos, Que.

Mr. and Mrs. Horan have taken up residence in Montreal where Mr. Horan is doing post graduate work in physical education and Mrs. Horan is in her second year of political science, both at McGill.

Christening

BURY — On Sunday, September 17, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. William Sylvester was christened at the Morning Communion Service in the St. Paul's Anglican Church here, Rev. Linton Westman officiated.

The baby, dressed in a blue and white suit and white blanket, received the names Christopher Clayton, Joyce and Herbert Thompson, Jr., and Larry Sylvester, uncles and aunt, were the godparents.

Following the service, a delicious turkey dinner with all the trimmings was served by the parents at their home. Guests included grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Sylvester and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lowe; great-grandmother, Mrs. Mabel Sylvester; godparents, Larry Sylvester, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Thompson Jr. and their family and great-uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin.

The dinner was highlighted by a special christening cake, decorated in blue and white with little booties on top. This was the work of Rosemary Lowe.

25th anniversary

MANSIONVILLE (MB) — A delightful evening was enjoyed by some 45 relatives and friends of honoured guests, Ross and Jean McNeil, in the La Rougette at Mansionville on Saturday evening, Sept. 23rd.

Their three children, Danny, Donna and Dorothy showed their love for mother and father in giving this celebratory party to honour them on the occasion of their 25th Wedding Anniversary. The bride and groom were married on Sept. 26, 1953.

Ross and Jean were met at the door by Mr. McNeil's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Gibney of Richford, Vt., and upon entering the dining room, Donna presented a corsage of pink miniature tea roses and pinned it to her garment, while Dorothy fastened a red carnation boutonniere to her father's lapel. Danny joined his sisters and they escorted their parents to the head table which was prettily decorated with white wedding bells and center pieces of silver 25's along with candles and red and white carnation arrangements. Seated at the head table with the bride and groom of yesteryear were the Gibneys, also Mr. McNeil's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Howard, and the McNeil children.

Danny proposed a toast to the anniversary couple in an eloquent manner. A most delicious hot dinner was served, followed by an evening of visiting and reminiscing of events over the past 25 years.

Many beautiful silver gifts and money cards were received by Jean and Ross and a beautiful bouquet of miniature pink roses and yellow gladioli arrived, a gift from the members of Owl's Head Chapter No. 35, O.E.S.

Guests attending were from Richford and Swanton, Vt., Fulford, West Bolton and Iron Hill, Que., as well as friends and neighbours from South Bolton and Potton Township.

Fish campaign launched

OTTAWA (CP) — What can you eat twice as much of and still make nutritionists happy?

Simple, fish. Canadians now eat an average of 16 pounds of fish a year, away behind the Japanese and Europeans but up from 14 pounds per capita back in 1975.

Federal health experts are hoping Canadian consumption will reach 35 pounds a person by 1985 and to help consumers increase fish purchases, November will be Canadian Fisheries and Seafood Month.

Besides relating the now wellknown tale of the introduction of the 200-mile limit, the regrowth of fish stocks and resulting prosperity that is bringing to the fishermen, the campaign will tell consumers the average Canadian would benefit from eating more fish.

Advertisements are scheduled for prime-time television, radio, newspapers and major magazines and retail stores and hotel chains will participate in special sales to help promote fisheries products.

HAS LESS CHOLESTEROL. Fish, like poultry, is a highprotein meat that is low in fat, meaning less cholesterol. Cholesterol, a product of the animal fats in red meat, has been linked with high risk of heart attacks.

The health department has started to include fish in its campaign to improve the lifestyle of Canadians.

Even though fish prices have been climbing steadily in the last few years, it is still a good buy compared with meat.

The biggest problem with fish, says Michele Daignault, head of promotion and market development, is that most people overcook it. To help the country's cooks, a handy sticker that can be kept in the kitchen tells you to cook it at 450 degrees for 10 minutes for every inch of thickness.

A flock of fish recipes are being prepared and weekly specials are planned by fish retailers and major grocery chains. At least one hotel chain will be featuring fish on its menu during November.

Mrs. Daignault said there has never been a concentrated promotion of fish and she is certain that getting the public to focus on fish will help whet their appetites.

The cost of the campaign will be between $250,000 and $400,000, fisheries officials said.

ANN LANDERS SAYS:

Gift reaps rewards

Dear Ann: Much has been said about the sorry state of nursing homes and the apathetic personnel that staff them. I'd like to give your readers an opposing view if I may.

I am the nurse who cared for your mother in the nursing home. I see that her basic physical needs are met but that's not all I do.

I'm the one who worries about her when she's sick.

I'm the one who talks to her when she's lonely.

I'm the one who gives her a hug and a kiss when she needs affection.

I'm the one who tries to cheer her up when she's depressed.

I'm the one who gets annoyed with you when I have to explain to her why you don't visit her very often.

I'm the one who listens when no one else will.

I'm 25 years old. I give up half my weekends, most of my holidays, and the pay is lousy. Believe me, if I didn't care, I wouldn't be here. — Growing Older Myself

Dear Growing: Thank you for reminding us that there are still angels right here on earth.

I hope your letter will inspire other young people to give of themselves as you are doing. The beauty of such a gift is that the rewards are tremendous. One of the irrefutable laws of life — "the hand that gives, gathers."

Dear Ann Landers: It is 2:00 a.m., I'm walking the floor, just drank my 12th cup of coffee, and I'm going crazy. My husband went to a stag "with the boys" (he left the house at six o'clock) and isn't home yet.

Bob and I have been married three years and have no children. We both work and have a good relationship. He's a great guy except for this one fault which drives me nuts. It seems every few weeks Bob goes someplace "with the boys." He says he'll be home by midnight, but he never is. Usually he comes rolling in at 2:30 a.m., or 3:00. Of course, he's had too much to drink which is part of the problem. When I ask him why he didn't telephone to say he'd be late, he says, "I didn't think of it."

I'm sure I'm not the only woman in the world who has this problem. Tell me, Ann, what do other wives do? — Outa My Mind

Dear Out: They do the same as you — walk the floor, imagine the worst, and worry themselves sick.

They ask themselves the same questions, "Where in the world is he?", and, "If he's alive, why doesn't he call?" The answers are well known. He's in some saloon and he doesn't call because he is slopped to the eyeballs and his brains are on hold.

I know of no cure for these selfish heels, so do yourself a favor and keep busy and entertained. Invite some friends over for a kaffeeklatch. Go to the theater or to a movie or a concert or a lecture. And pray a lot.

What's prudish? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

CONFIDENTIAL to Need to Be Set Straight at Once: A blood test can only prove that a man is NOT the father of a child. It cannot prove that he is. Check with a physician if I have not made myself clear. If the results indicate you could NOT have fathered that child, your lawyer should have a fairly easy time of it.

POLLY'S POINTERS
Polly Cramer

Clothes turned gray

By Polly Cramer POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — I have some polyester clothing that was washed successfully several times and now has suddenly become very gray in color. I do not know how this happened and would like to know how to restore it to its original whiteness. — MR. J.M.E.

DEAR MR. J.M.E. — Grayness in white polyester clothing could be caused by using too little detergent or by overloading the washer. Also, whites should always be washed alone.

Try dampening these articles and then pouring one-half cup or more of a laundry detergent over them. Work this all through the clothes with your hands and leave to soak for about 20 minutes. Put in the washer with any excess liquid left from the soak. Use a chlorine bleach dilute (four parts water to one of bleach) in the wash but do not add until agitation has started — bleach should never touch the clothes. Read label on bleach bottle. Oxygen bleach maintains rather than restores whiteness. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Please tell Chris that I put a toothpick or nail in the opening of the white glue container and that stops the clogging. — MARY

DEAR POLLY — Many years ago my mother told me to always empty a new box of brown sugar into a tightly closed glass jar so it would stay soft. Also she said to put a box of hardened brown sugar in a warm oven and leave it for quite some time. It will become lovely and soft. — MRS. E.M.H.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

October 6, 1978

Old attitudes will make way for the new this coming year and you'll find yourself being receptive and anxious to acquire knowledge about many different things. This change will do you good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The old drums accomplish only one purpose — keeping you miserable. Shake them off. Get yourself moving. You'll quickly find much to smile about. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Being subjected to putting up with difficult people would normally get you down, but not today. Because of your attitude, things will eventually come out your way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you run into a few setbacks today, look for new methods or people to help you accomplish your purposes. Success lies in a fresh approach.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have a friend who can help you find the answers to a situation that has you stymied.

Don't be too proud to seek advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Call a halt to an involvement you have with another if things are getting a little too costly. In retreat, a new direction can be found.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't become frustrated when you run up a dead-end street today. Admit you made a wrong decision. Once you accept this, a new way will open up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A heavy responsibility not necessarily of your own making could rest on your shoulders today. Accepting the burden philosophically will be a big help in disposing of it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Depending on others today to take care of what you think should be their duties would be a mistake. The only person you can rely on is yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Old, unsolvable problems should be kept buried for the moment. Go on to other things that you know bring happiness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take care today with jobs calling for mental concentration. Though you may want to get your work finished, chances are your mind would wander too much.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're good at everything today except the handling of money. Wait till another day to shell out for something you think you can't live without.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A lack of patience could spoil some beneficial happenings coming your way today. A little more tolerance for those you deal with will reward you the most.

St. Paul's Church News
The 11 a.m. service at St. Paul's Church on September 24 was led by the lay assistant Mr. Stephen Morson and the guest preacher was the Reverend Jacques Smith, who has served a long time in this diocese. He is at present in semi-retirement at East Farnham. A most welcome visitor to this church, it was his first time at St. Paul's. The reader was Mr. T. Stafford, the theme of the Scripture readings for the day being "The Life of Faith". The following Sunday, October 1, the Reader was Mrs. June Call and the theme "Citizens of Heaven".

A generous bequest has been received by St. Paul's Church from the late Mrs. Eva Bradley who died in January of this year and left $10,000 to the church in her will. Mrs. Bradley will be remembered for her long service in the parish in the W.A. and particularly in the choir. Her gift will become part of the Endowment Funds of St. Paul's - such bequests should not be used for regular expenses. Mr. Frank Harvey retired from his duties as sexton at St. Paul's, effective October 1 following four years of excellent work and helpfulness. Many good wishes are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Harvey for the coming years. Taking his place will be Mr. Stephen Morson who will take over on the same day he retires from the Post Office.

Quite a few from Knowlton's St. Paul's Church attended the Harvest Hymn-Sing at the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Bolton Glen, on Sunday evening, September 24. It was a highly enjoyable service with some really fine singing. Mrs. Edna Badger was in charge and Mr.

George Donald was at the organ. Prayers were said by the Reverend David Stanway. The next hymn sing will be on the last Sunday in October, until next year, with the exception of the exceedingly popular service in December.

Needed immediately at St. Paul's: One Server for the 8 a.m. service-male or female; two Sunday School teachers and one person to launder the altar linens. The rector would be thrilled to hear from you!

Thought: God has given us two ears and one mouth so that we can listen twice as much as we speak." Epictatus.

Note: The Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Association of Canada will be holding a giant Flea Market on Saturday, October 7 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Heroes Memorial School, Cowansville. Any home baking or good used items would be appreciated. Call Mrs. Ivy Moreton 263-0704 or Mrs. Lillian Watt 263-1592.

diamond. He is slightly disappointed when the ace doesn't appear, but he will still make his contract by means of what is called, "a loser on loser play."

He ruffs his last club, leads dummy's king of diamonds and discards a heart.

That heart was going to be a loser in any case. Now poor East is on lead. If he leads a heart it establishes dummy's king. If he leads a club, South ruffs in dummy while chucking a second heart.

Either way all the defense gets will be two diamond tricks and one heart.

A Montana reader asks if we open this hand with a forcing two bid.

We certainly do. If playing standard, we open two spades. If our only forcing opening is two clubs, we open two clubs. This hand may not produce a game but we sure want to try.

Today's hand is another example of the power of the spade suit. East and West can make five clubs but East just doesn't want to gamble at the five level so he lets South play at four spades. The ordinary declarer will wind up down one after losing three hearts and a diamond. The expert declarer will make four spades.

He plays a low diamond from dummy, ruffs the second diamond, cashes two trumps, plays ace of clubs, ruffs a club, ruffs a low

US shows swamp TV

OTTAWA (CP) — U.S. shows have Canadian programming on the ropes and strong measures are needed to revive it, CBC president Al Johnson told the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission Tuesday.

He prescribed an extra dose of Canadian content for both the CBC and the private stations, a five-year moratorium on any plans for pay television and a share of cable television revenue as part of a package to save Canadian programming.

He also said that only four U.S. channels should be available to Canadian cable subscribers.

Appearing before the CRTC for almost routine renewal of CBC radio and television licences in both French and English-language services, Johnson produced CBC survey figures showing that Canadians are hooked on U.S. programs to the extent that Canadian shows are attracting their smallest-ever number of viewers.

English-language Canadians, for example, spend about 74 per cent of their viewing time watching U.S. shows. French-language Canadians spend 48 per cent of their viewing time watching foreign TV shows, some of them dubbed and telecast by French-language by French-language stations.

In addition 53 per cent of French-language viewers are tuning in on English-language stations at least once a week to watch U.S. programs.

PRESCRIBES CURE

Johnson's cure for Canadian programming, which he said required the co-operation and efforts of the private stations and cable systems, will be theme of the CRTC hearings into the licence renewals. The hearings are expected to last well into next week.

CBC's own case will be placed before the CRTC by the end of this week but the commission has agreed to hear briefs from 56 of the 138 persons or organizations who wrote the CRTC with comment on the corporation's service.

The interventions came from a wide sweep of Canadian society, including church groups, Indian bands, homosexuals, the Ottawa Old Time Fiddlers Association and Peter Kent, former CBC newsreader and now the corporation's correspondent in Africa.

Kent is expected to make his complaints about alleged interference with the CBC by Prime Minister Trudeau's office Thursday morning.

QUOTED SURVEY

Johnson quoted survey figures showing that Canadian youngsters between the age of two and 11 spend 83 per cent of their television time watching U.S. programs. French-speaking youngsters between the ages of seven and 17 almost 60 per cent of their viewing time watching foreign shows.

"They are in danger of growing up American," he said.

News Briefs

Drapeau consulted with Desrochers

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau says he consulted a top adviser of former Quebec premier Robert Bourassa about hiring a consulting firm which later failed to complete much-needed plans for the Olympic stadium. Paul Desrochers, once described as the "grey eminence" of the Bourassa administration, knew the head of the firm of Regis Trudeau et Associes. Drapeau Wednesday told a Quebec inquiry into the $1.27-billion cost of the 1976 Games.

Crombie wants policy changed

TORONTO (CP) — David Crombie, former Toronto mayor, would like to see some revisions made in Joe Clark's proposed housing policy that would allow income-tax deductions for mortgage interest and municipal taxes paid on a principal residence. Crombie, Progressive Conservative candidate in the federal byelection in the Metropolitan Toronto riding of Rosedale, told an all-candidates' meeting Wednesday he thinks the party leader's plan should be restricted to pensioners and first-time homeowners.

Hebert wins Prix David

QUEBEC (CP) — Anne Hebert, author of the novel Kamouraska that was turned into a film starring Genevieve Bujold, was awarded the Prix David, Quebec's top literary prize, Wednesday. The prize was one of five awarded by Cultural Affairs Minister Denis Vaugeois on Wednesday to Quebecers who have achieved outstanding success in the fields of literature, science, art, the social sciences and the performing arts.

Dollar not hurting Florida trade

TORONTO (CP) — Travel agents promoting Florida as a vacation spot say the decline of the Canadian dollar on the international money market is not hurting business. Travel counsellor Barbara Kiers said that "our business is up, not necessarily in spite of the dollar but perhaps because of it."

Bikers guilty in murder

MONTMAGNY, Que. (CP) — Five motorcycle gang members pleaded guilty in Quebec Superior Court here Wednesday to charges connected with the stabbing death of a local man earlier this year. Yves Laverdiere pleaded guilty to second-degree murder, while Dominique Bourgault, Paul Saint-Pierre, Serge Leclerc and Andre Brochu entered guilty pleas to reduced charges of manslaughter.

QUEBEC RESIDENTS 'BUY CANADIAN'

TORONTO (CP) — A federal report says Quebec residents are more likely to buy Canadian products than other consumers in the country. The report, prepared by Ronalds-Reynolds Research in Toronto, said buyers in the Atlantic region appear less concerned about buying Canadian products than the national average. Meanwhile, an Ontario study, conducted by Scott and Withrow Inc. of Toronto, said 67 per cent of Ontario consumers see some benefit in buying Canadian goods. However, the research showed that residents in Northern Ontario, consumers employed in clerical or sales positions and people under the age of 26 are not as concerned about the benefits of buying Canadian goods. A federal spokesman said the report's findings involving Quebec consumers were not surprising. "Despite all the foofaraw in Quebec, I don't think people are interested in separating," he said. The report also said Quebecers buy domestic goods because of a desire to buy better quality products and to create more jobs and help the economy. The federal study of 2,078 Canadians also said homemakers and retired persons show the strongest tendency to buy domestic goods.

In Ontario, a campaign to buy Canadian goods was started in June to recommend that provincial businessmen place the maple leaf symbol on shop displays, stationery, invoices, receipts, business cards and advertising. The Ontario ministry of industry and tourism is sponsoring a convention next month in Toronto to educate merchants about available Canadian products.

Joyal wins nomination

MONTREAL (CP) — Serge Joyal, Liberal MP for Maisonneuve-Rosemont, officially entered Montreal's mayoral race Wednesday when he won the uncontested nomination to stand as the candidate for the recently-formed Municipal Action Group. Joyal, who has been campaigning for the Nov. 12 municipal elections for almost two weeks, said the top priority of his party will be to revive the faltering economy of the city.

Speculators push dollar higher

MONTREAL (CP) — Speculation pushed the Canadian dollar slightly higher against its American counterpart Wednesday for the second consecutive day. The dollar closed at 84.50 cents U.S. on the inter-bank wholesale market up nearly one-eighth of a cent from Tuesday's close of 84.39 cents. At one point it changed hands at 84.17 cents, but did not slip below the 84-cent level as it did on Tuesday. The day's highest deal was at 84.73 cents.

Civic Party shakeup predicted

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says Mayor Jean Drapeau will announce Friday the biggest overhaul of his Civic party in its 18-year history. The paper says the line-up of 54 candidates to run in the Nov. 12 municipal elections will include 25 new members—two or three of them women, 10 from the field of education and four physicians.

Sterling-Maclean-Hunter deal fails

TORONTO (CP) — An agreement to purchase Sterling Newspapers Ltd. of Vancouver by Maclean-Hunter Ltd. has collapsed because agreement could not be reached on the purchase price, the companies said Wednesday. Agreement in principle on the transaction was announced in August, although no price was revealed. Conrad Black of Toronto said he and his partners, David Radler and Peter White, had negotiated on the basis of a price of $14 million, but he said Maclean-Hunter's move to reduce this to $12.5 million "meant there would be no sale to them." Sterling had agreed in principle to sell nine daily newspapers, nine weekly newspapers and two twice-weekly newspapers plus printing facilities.

CENSUS

sure either. According to him, he was working with the last electoral list — compiled in 1976 — and that names were added only when residents were home to answer the phone or when neighbors knew their names and occupations.

Both he and Cousot expressed their dissatisfaction with the system being used, but said these were their instructions. They said they had received many calls from people concerned about whether their names were on the lists, and that it was obvious that those who had moved into the community since 1976 would have no means of getting on the rolls if they didn't phone or their neighbors didn't mention them.

Both Cousot and Fiset said language has no barrier; respondents could register in either French or English, although occupations would be given only in French on the final lists.

They also denied they were instructed to ask anything but the names and occupations of those enumerated. "We don't even need people's ages," Fiset said. Cousot said she was visiting various homes even though she wasn't required to by the law.

"I've been three times to some houses, the TVs are blaring, the dogs are barking and people seem to be deaf. What do I do to get their attention, break a window?" One enumerator in the Sherbrooke area said most of the census-takers were new at the job because they were taking over from local Liberals who used to do the job when the Grits ruled Quebec.

"Sure, most of us are pequestes, but that doesn't mean we're not out to do a fair job. As a matter of fact, we're bending over backwards to do it properly because we don't want any comeback or accusations we were out to disenfranchise people."

The enumerators in the cities and towns are required to travel in pairs, and they're paid extra for the work involved, but according to many of them, the work is essentially volunteer — they're paid on the basis of numbers of voters registered and the average enumerator in this census will make about $100 for four days of work, according to several.

But local citizens are up in arms over what they see as the deliberate exclusion of newcomers, youths and other previously-unregistered voters. "I can't understand why nobody has come around yet," said Brian Kay, the ex-mayor of Fitch Bay and currently a Georgeville resident.

"I thought that when they did the enumeration they came around door-to-door gathering names for the electoral lists and if you were not there, they left a paper but apparently they're not doing that anymore. They say the law's changed and they no longer have to do it in rural ridings — only in the cities," said Kay.

"My wife called the returning officer for our area, Margo Corps, but she was not there and her secretary informed my wife that they don't have to pass in rural ridings. The secretary told her the enumerators take the roll from town secretaries. I don't know how up-to-date those lists are. Well, if someone has moved in and the town's not come around — who knows? We were also talking to someone in Stanstead and no one has been there either."

Saints walloped 10-2

THETFORD MINES — When Real Daigneault got going, there was just no stopping him as the Sherbrooke Saints found out the hard way last night in a 10-2 loss to the Fleur de Lys here.

Daigneault, a 19-year-old right winger, scored seven times, including consecutive goals numbered two through six, to lead the home team to an easy victory in front of 622 fans over their Junior 'A' opponents from Sherbrooke.

By the time Danny Garand scored a powerplay goal for the Saints at 8:12 in the first period, the Fleur de Lys had already mounted their attack with three goals - two of them by Daigneault. Thetford went into the second period leading 4-1 and started the last session with a 6-1 edge.

Guy Perreault got the other Sherbrooke goal at 16:44 as Thetford were coasting on a 9-1 advantage. Carmel Larocque scored twice and Francois Gouin picked up the remaining Fleur de Lys markers.

Thetford peppered Richard Nault for two periods and John Curyhey took his place between the pipes in the third for the rest of the 46 shots last night. The Saints big problem was lack of shooting when they got the chances, as signified by their total of 22.

The games was relatively quiet, with Francois Larocelle calling eight minors to Sherbrooke and a dozen to Thetford. The Fleur de Lys were also tagged with a major and a game misconduct near the conclusion of the match.

The win boosted Thetford's record to two wins and a loss while Sherbrooke goes into Friday's home match against Beauport with a 1-3 showing.

Stanstead skiers meet

STANSTEAD (DB) — The annual meeting of the Stanstead Ski Club was held Sept. 26 in the Green Room of the Legion Home. The meeting was opened by the president, Denis Parent. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved by the secretary-treasurer, Maxime Doyon.

The new officers for the year were elected with Jean Choquette as president, the first vice-president Edward Wadleigh and the new secretary-treasurer, Pierre Rinfret.

Jerome Choquette conducted the meeting. The program is to continue for 1978-79 much the same as last year. Ski races will be held for both adults and children and the owners of the land that the ski trail passes through are to be contacted. Bob Brock had brochures for a trail tracker. This will be looked into and discussed at a later date.

The president said he hoped to make courses on buying ski equipment and waxing your skis available.

Garvey leads LA to 9-5 triumph

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia third baseman Mike Schmidt predicted an "offensive explosion" and Phillies manager Danny Ozark forecast a three-game sweep.

Yet it was Los Angeles that did the exploding, led by Steve Garvey, and it's the Dodgers who may do the sweeping after their 9-5 victory Wednesday night in the first game of the National League championship playoffs.

"I hit a curve ball up, a fastball and a screwball down," said Garvey, who rapped two homers and a triple in a Dodger assault that set a NL playoff record with 30 total bases.

"We are extremely high and we are going to be extremely difficult to beat."

said Dodger sparkplug Dave Lopes, who along with Steve Yeager also homered for Los Angeles to hush 63,460 Phillies fans.

Yet the Dodgers' romp, secured by the poised relief pitching of baby-faced rookie Bob Welch, left Ozark outwardly undaunted.

Going into the best-of-five set, Ozark flatly forecast his NL East champs would win in three games.

AMENDS PREDICTION "I didn't say we'd win the first games," Ozark amended with a thin smile in the postgame interview room. "I think I said we'd take three straight, and I'm still going with three straight."

Schmidt, among several Phillies whose bat production fell off this season, had said he was looking for dynamite hitting against Los Angeles. But it was the Dodgers who detonated.

"I've always enjoyed pressure situations," said Garvey. "That is what life is all about— challenges—and in my profession that means batter against pitcher."

The score was 1-1 in the third when Garvey dug in against Larry Christenson with two runners on base. Before the homer, Christenson had a conference on the mound with catcher Bob Boone.

"I wanted to throw a curve ball in the dirt and away,"

ROYALS TIE SERIES

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Larry Gura, who wasn't good enough to stick with New York Yankees, proved too good for them in the hour of Kansas City's greatest need.

"The revenge factor's not there anymore," Gura said after hurling six strong innings in a 10-4 Royals victory Wednesday that squared the best-of-five American League playoff series at 1-1.

"I just wanted to settle us down and help us win because we knew we had to win this one," Gura said. "It was a must for us."

Gura, traded to the Royals two years ago for now-retired catcher Fran Healy, gave up eight hits and two runs.

The Royals got started in the same sloppy, mistake-prone fashion that dogged them in the opener Tuesday night when the Yankees breezed to a 7-1 triumph. With one out, Fred Patek made a throwing error on Thurman Munson's ground ball and Reggie Jackson, reaching base for the 12th consecutive time in post-season action, walked.

HAD 16 HITS But Gura got Graig Nettles to ground out to end the threat and George Brett quickly smacked what was to be the first of 16 Royals hits leading off the bottom of the first.

One out later, Amos Otis singled Brett to third, followed by a long sacrifice fly off the bat of Darrell Porter that put the Royals on top 1-0.

The Royals chased starter Ed Figueroa with a four-run burst in the second that got started on consecutive singles by Clint Hurdle and Al Cowens and kept rolling when shortstop Bucky Dent's throw to Nettles at third hit Patek and he trotted home as the ball rolled into foul territory.

Beavers host Montreal

SHERBROOKE (BP) — The Beavers play their sole Thursday home game of the season tonight against the Montreal Juniors in a match which will renew a long-time rivalry.

Sherbrooke goes into the tilt on a three-game winning streak while the Juniors lost last night for their third defeat of the young season. Both teams presently have six points.

Coach Ghislain Delage figures the game will be the first 'real test' for the Beavers since they got things on track after starting the season with two narrow losses. He said he was readying his players "to play our most important game" to date because Montreal is favored by many to be the league's champions this season.

Delage is also very satisfied at this point in the area he felt was most important to a successful Sherbrooke Beavers club in their 10th season in the Quebec Major Junior. "I stated at the beginning of the season that we would be a winning team if we play defensively - that is give up less goals. Right now we have been beaten only 14 times in five games... that makes a pretty good average. If we can keep up that average for the rest of the season," he continued, "we will end up well off at the end."

Corrado Micallef got his first taste of regular season action last night and Delage was "extremely satisfied by his impressive performance." Starter Yvan Charbonneau was hit in the throat early in the game with the puck and Micallef came to the rescue to turn away 30 Hull shots.

Charbonneau will be back in the lineup tonight, though he hadn't eaten anything solid by practice time yesterday because of pain. Also back in action will be Chuck Tuplin who missed the road game with a sore back as well as Michel Laforest, who was sidelined with a groin injury. Robert Breen is currently sporting a medical neck collar after being hurt while giving a football-type check in last Sunday's match. He will be out for another 10 days.

Game time is 8 p.m. this evening as the third place club in the Dilio Division hosts the third place team from the Lebel Division at the Sports Palace.

SABRES SNAP TORONTO 4-2

Traditionally, penalty shots have been a rare occurrence in professional hockey. But you'd never know it the way National Hockey League referees have been clamping down the last couple of nights.

After Toronto goaltender Mike Palmateer thwarted New York Islanders' Mike Bossy on a penalty shot Tuesday night, two more were awarded Wednesday night with the Leafs once again involved.

This time Paul Harrison was in the Toronto goal and he turned back Andre Savard's solo try after the Buffalo centre had been hauled down from behind with less than five minutes left. The stop prevented the Sabres from snapping a 2-2 tie, but it wasn't enough as Buffalo pulled out a 4-2 exhibition season victory with two late goals.

Elsewhere, Boston Bruins battled New York Rangers to a 4-4 deadlock, with Bruins netminder Gilles Gilbert foiling Phil Esposito on a penalty shot midway through the second period.

In other games, Montreal Canadiens edged Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 in a battle of NHL clubs, while New England Whalers blanked Detroit Red Wings 3-0 and Edmonton Oilers downed Vancouver Canucks 5-3 as World Hockey Association teams continued to dominate inter-league play. Indianapolis Racers and Cincinnati Stingers played to a 5-5 tie in a WHA contest.

SEILING SCORES WINNER At Toronto, Ric Seiling got the winner at 16:46 of the third and Terry Martin added an insurance goal into an empty net as Buffalo evened its exhibition record at 4-4, while the Leafs fell to 1-7.

Dan Maloney and Ron Ellis scored goals for the Leafs while Richard Martin and Jim Schoenfeld got the other Buffalo goals.

Brad Park's power-play goal midway in the third period pulled New York even with the Bruins at Madison Square Garden. The Rangers had taken a 4-3 lead early in the final period on goals by Anders Hedberg at 39 seconds and an unassisted 50-footer by Ron Greschner at 4:33.

Boston took a 2-0 first-period lead on goals by Terry O'Reilly and John Wensink, but Walter Tkaczuk and Lucien DeBlois pulled the Rangers even in the second, only to have Bob Miller put the Bruins back in front before the period ended.

Pierre Mondou knocked in a Pierre Bouchard rebound at 15:47 of the second period to give the Canadiens the win over the Hawks in a game played at Halifax.

The Canadiens, trailing 2-0 at one point in the game, got late first-period goals from Guy Lapointe and Pierre Larocque to tie the score. John Marks scored at 2:37 of the first period to move the Hawks into a 1-0 lead. They made it 2-0 at 7:17 when Doug Lecuyer beat Montreal goaltender Michel Larocque

Grey Cup rematch rainy

For most of the morning, the early autumn rain pelted down as though someone had stuck a pin in the leaden skies.

Not an uncommon sight, of course, for the first Sunday in October, but neither is it a most welcome occurrence when you're trying to fill football stands for a Grey Cup rematch with the vaunted Edmonton Eskimos.

Particularly when the local heroes - the Montreal Alouettes - are struggling merely to put points on the scoreboard with a lineup decimated by injuries. Hell, who wants to head out in the rain when you could just as easily see most of the Als in the infirmary?

Hardy fans, good football

By the time of sol peeked through the clouds early in the second quarter, however, more than 54,000 patrons occupied seating space at the Big O, a tribute as much to their own hardiness as to the sensational turnabout which football has made in Montreal.

"If the ballclub was winning you'd see those seats filled, too," said Als' public-relations director Roy Deguire, motioning to the rows of forlorn end-zone seats.

More than anyone, Deguire has been a key witness to the unfolding of this delightful phenomenon in Montreal. After joining the ballclub 10 years ago (as secretary to the coaches, including current head coach Joe Scanella) he's since been responsible for promoting the Als through the rather nauseating Autostade years to the comfy confines of the new stadium.

Upsurge factors...

"Really, there's only two factors behind the upsurge of football interest in Montreal," he revealed at half-time last Sunday. "Basically, we have a good, winning football team and a good stadium to match. 'I think Montreal and the province of Quebec in general want to associate with a winning team.'"

Attendance figures readily support Deguire's claim. In 1971, drawing on the Als' Cinderella performance in the previous year's Grey Cup, a resurgence at the gate ensued. The following two years, lean ones for the ballclub, were also without distinction attendance-wise.

Then, in 1974, when the Alouettes enjoyed an outstanding season, they drew relatively well at the box-office, although Deguire admitted it could have been even greater had the club not been restricted by the capacity of the stadium.

"Then, along comes this jewel of an Olympic Stadium, which has to be just about the best stadium you could ever have for football," exclaimed the PR director.

Big O refuge

Now, in spite of a so-so season, the Als can count on fans dashing through downpours to seek refuge in the largely-sheltered Olympic Stadium.

"We even have a season-ticket holder who comes all the way from Sept-les," noted Deguire. "Coming here for one game, he probably spends $250."

Attracting customers outside the city has become a major priority of Deguire's department lately. Officials want the team's image to extend far beyond the metropolitan area. Bus trips have been organized from such points as Chicoutimi, Trois-Rivieres, Sherbrooke, even the New England area, to diversify support for the team.

"Quite often we'll bring players into these areas for local promotions," added Deguire. "We're taking them everywhere in the province because you simply have to cater to these people."

At one time criticized for their inability to sell football to the French-speaking fans, goodwill missions such as those mentioned above have played a significant role in filling empty seats.

Bilingual market

Even the Als' front-office and publicity structure has been adjusted to reflect the bilingual nature of the market. But Deguire remains convinced the popularity surge is one of logistics rather than "linguistics."

"It doesn't matter whether they're French, English, Chinese, or Polish. Give them a good show and a winning football team and you'll bring them out to the ballpark."

The rule of thumb, he added, might extend to the Big O's co-tenants as well. The Expos have hinted that the stadium isn't suited for baseball and perhaps a second deck on Parc Jarry would solve their attendance woes.

"I don't want to criticize anyone," remarked Deguire, "but I think the way to get around the problem is to put a winning team on the field."

Not that the Alouettes' method is fool-proof, mind you. They managed to get people into the ballpark last Sunday, but the same fans were in a hurry to leave after the Larks fell hopelessly behind mid-way in the fourth quarter.

It's just that since the Als don't return until October 21 against the Argos, wounds, both on and off the field, will likely have ample time to heal.

ETIAC roundup...

LENNOXVILLE (ME) — Bishop's College School hosted plenty of ETIAC events yesterday. In senior football, the home squad fought to a 19-19 tie with Alexander Galt Regional High School. Mike Jarrett, Brent Dorion and Mike Laframboise scored touchdowns for BCS, and Laframboise kicked one convert. George MacMillan scored and converted a touchdown for AGRHS. Other Galt majors came from Doug Coulter and Wayne Westman.

The annual ETIAC cross-country meet was also held at BCS. Seminaire Salesien won the boys' overall title, and AGRHS took the girls' honours. The juvenile boys' class went to AGRHS as well, although Robert Bonfiglio and Jean-Francois Moreau, both of Salesien, were the two top finishers. In girls' juvenile running, R. Quigley and S. Boisvert led Massey-Vanier Regional High School to victory. Richmond Regional High School took three out of the four remaining classes. AGRHS salvaged the girls' midget class, as D. Enright and S. Stewart finished first and second respectively. The boys' midget champion was Richmond's Richard Caya, and Henry Marsden of BCS came in second. Marc Desbiens of Salesien and Donna Gallagher of AGRHS took top honours in the bantam classes, despite Richmond's overall success.

Stanstead College and BCS fought to a scoreless draw in senior boys' soccer. F. Bouchard and A. Doyle each scored twice to lead Stanstead juniors to a 4-1 win over BCS. Cliff Turner replied for the home side. The bantam game ended in a 3-2 victory for BCS. Clive Perry Gore scored twice for BCS, and Baldwin Evans scored another. K. Eryou and R. Riente replied for Stanstead.

There were four soccer games between Richmond Regional and AGRHS. The boys' seniors played to a 1-1 tie. Dave Corbiere scored for Galt and R. Patrick for Richmond. AGRHS senior girls clobbered Richmond 6-1, on goals by Kristine Goulet (three), Susan Guillette (two) and Maureen Patrick. Laurie Day netted the lone Richmond goal. Galt junior girls won 3-1, while Richmond won the bantam match, 1-0.

Stanstead College defeated Massey-Vanier Regional High School 29-6 in another ETIAC senior football encounter while the MVRHS juniors walked away with a 27-0 shutout against Stanstead.

Gary Hindley scored three touchdowns and a single for the Stanstead seniors as Adrian Edgar made the other major score and Luc Lesage kicked all four converts. The MVRHS scorer wasn't known. Mark Norris picked up two major scores and a convert for the MVR juniors in their whitewash, while Craig Hadlock and Dan Bates added one TD each.

Driver turns entertainer

MONTREAL (CP) — Jackie Stewart of Scotland showed Wednesday that a world driving champion can retire from his sport and be successful in another field—entertainment.

Stewart, speaking to an ad and sales club luncheon about Sunday's Canadian Grand Prix for Formula 1 cars, had a roomful of diners laughing during much of his speech.

After receiving a standing ovation, Stewart thanked the audience for sitting down.

"If you're a man of average size, such as I, it's rather difficult to see very far when everyone else is standing up," the five-foot-six Stewart said.

He said the Olympics, the Grand Prix track and other sports teams have made Montreal one of the great North American capitals of sport.
