JULY FIRST WILL BE CELEBRATED BY LOCAL TOWNS

Sports Day In Ormstown Expected To Attract Crowds Afternoon and Evening
FARMERS' PICNIC ALSO
Ball Game Will Be Centre of Interest At Huntingdon On Tuesday

Dominion Day will be celebrated by a series of sporting events around the District. The largest among them will be the 5th Annual Field Day which is being promoted by the Live Stock Breeders' Association at Ormstown. It had been the intention to hold this field day a little later in the summer, but owing to the electric light system being changed this year, it was decided to make sure of the successful holding of the night program before making a change in date.

At Huntingdon the old rivals, Chateaugay and Huntingdon, will clash in a ball game. So far the Huntingdon team has not played this year, but across the line the Chateaugay-Brainardville combination have been holding a series of games. "Big" Dave Roberts is the mainstay of the American team in the box and will hand out the fast ones on the Huntingdon diamond on the 1st. For the Huntingdon team Uvald Rose, who played with the Huntingdon team last season, will do his best to baffle the American batters. Rose's long experience in professional ball has made him a valuable asset in the game and while he is devoting his energies to business this year, he volunteered to come back to his native county on the 1st to do the honors.

The favorite of the league last season, Miller, the lengthy and speedy Huntingdon first baseman, as soon as he heard that Huntingdon was playing Chateaugay, wrote to Mr. MacLaren and told him that he was going to be here. He likes Huntingdon and always enjoys the snappy games with the Chateaugay team. As Huntingdon is minus of talent for the infield as yet, one player who is not known on the local ball field will be here and that is Mantha, the speed king of the Canadiens' hockey team, the present World's Champions. Mantha will be in the infield to bolster up the Huntingdon line because the local players have not had a ball in their hands this year. On the 4th of July the Huntingdon team goes to Chateaugay to play a return game.

Bush who has worn the Huntingdon uniform for several seasons decided this spring to jump into pro ball and went down to Montreal where he got a try-out in the pro league. The manager while impressed by the speed and fielding of the Huntingdon pitcher decided that a little more experience wouldn't do him any harm, so sent him down to Halifax where he is doing the honors. A recent letter stated that he had played three games, all of which he won.

For those who have passed the most exacting stage in sports and for those who enjoy a pleasant day together in the grove at Cairnside, a pleasant time is expected at the Farmers' Picnic. At the Ormstown Show last week, Mr. D. T. Ness, Secretary of the Picnic, reported that he had the Beauharnois Band engaged, and that the replies written to speakers had been most encouraging. He expects to have one of the best picnics held for many years, providing the weather holds.

SESSION NOW IN ITS LAST WEEK FOR THIS YEAR

Expected House Will Prorogue On July 5th Amid A Last Minute Compromise
PROGRESSIVE BREAK
The Break In Party Line Of The Progressives Is Being Watched With Interest

Ottawa, June 25th—There is a concerted move on foot to bring about the prorogation of Parliament on July 5th next. The summer heat is partly responsible. The fact that certain members have been holed by the opposition is a further contributing factor. And the desire of official opposition members to have certain measures now before the House shelved for the present provides another reason.

If the session closes on the fifth it will be because of a common agreement that certain items of the parliamentary programme should be laid over until Parliament meets again. The Redistribution Bill was thus postponed last session. During the present session the committees have worked hard upon the measure, and it is understood that the only objection to the present draft comes from the Conservatives. There is every indication, in spite of this opposition, that the Bill will pass before the House prorogues. A further contentious measure is that by which it is proposed to apply the single transferable vote in single member constituencies where more than two candidates offer themselves for election. Conservative members are bitterly opposed to the suggestion, and have even threatened that in the event of the measure passing the Commons which is undoubtedly will, the fight will be carried into the Senate where the Conservatives have a majority. It is regarded by political students, however, as highly improbable that the non-elective, and none too popular, Upper House will undertake to meddle with a franchise Bill passed by the majority of the elective lower chamber.

It may be that the whips of the three recognized parties in the House will reach an agreement as to the date for the closing of the session. But since the Gleaner went to press last night a new group has sprung up in the House, which do not believe in whips, discipline, caucus, or party organization of any kind, and will "on principle" oppose any arrangement of the kind suggested. The new group which is nameless and leaderless, numbers six members, and is a throw-off from the original Progressive party. Its personnel consists of Messrs. Spencer, Garland, Gardiner, and Kennedy, all from Alberta, Campbell from Saskatchewan, and Miss Agnes Macphail from Ontario, whose name should probably have been mentioned first, not only in deference to her sex, but because of the fact that she is one of the moving spirits in the uprising against party domination. In a letter jointly addressed to Robert Forke, the Progressive leader, the new group, which is occupational in character, declares in effect that it does not believe in party organization, leadership, or whip control. It blames the main Progressive group for failure to exercise its influence upon government toward the gaining of greater reforms, and intimates that principle has been sacrificed to an inordinate desire for cooperation with government. Significantly it omits one of its chief grievances is that the bulk of the party last session declined to hold up prorogation by a filibuster on the question of the tenure of Bank charters. The new group declares that it can get along very well without a leader or a whip, and serves notice that it will never again attend a Progressive caucus.

While the new group has so far given itself no name, several names have been suggested by parliamentarians outside of its meagre ranks. By some it is referred to as the "Fabians"; by others as the "Individualists". By others still as the "Bronches", the "Gingerites", the "Lone-handers", and the "Egotists." The latter name may stick.

During the week Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, has given evidence before the new standing committee on government railways and shipping. Subjected to examination by Sir Henry Drayton, Ex-Finance Minister who has confined his attack principally to the Hotel Scribe deal, it has been charged that Sir Henry Thornton by reason of this deal dragged the country into an unwarranted expense. The latter however, declared last week that, since purchasing the property, an offer of forty million francs had been made for the property by Paris interests, with the additional proviso that the Canadian Nationals should have free rent for their offices in the building.

ORMSTOWN SHOW FINISHES WITH GOOD SUCCESS

Crowd Of Thursday Night Made A Record For Attendance For The Fair
TRACK RECORD MADE
"Romalo" Lowered The Track Record In The Free-for-All By Two Seconds

With the weather still holding fine the Ormstown Show came to a close on Friday night. The attendance that evening was not as large as that of Thursday night, but the total for the day brought up the receipts to the comfortable amount of $5500 which gives the show one of the best years in its record.

Thursday night the Arena was crowded in fact jammed and a record for attendance was made. The program went off well and everyone enjoyed themselves. Immediately after the cat parade a milking contest was held for two cups given by Mr. J. E. Boulais of Montreal. One competition was for girls and the other for boys. As a group, the girls proved to be the faster milkers and the silver cup was won by Miss Lydia Elliott. Among the boys Robert Cottingham was the first prize winner.

Friday evening more silver cups were being handed out. The first was for the best road horse in the District. Four horses were entered, the prize going to Douglas Ness, and Miss Vian entered the ring to present the cup.

Another Cup was given for the best high jumping horse. Four entries were made, Captain Finney riding two of the Military horses and Mr. L. Stafford, the Stafford Stable mounts. All four horses cleared the bar until over 6 foot mark, when trouble began in negotiating the bar. Captain Finney was thrown when his mount dragged the top bar and tripped. He was thrown on his shoulder but immediately got up, unharmed by the accident. Mr. Stafford's big black "Steeplejack" was finally left the only entry eligible when he cleared the bar at 6 foot 8 inches, a good jump when the nature of the footing is considered, but the horse is capable of doing a great deal more. Mr. Stafford stating that the black has cleared seven feet nine inches. The big silver cup was presented by President Sangster. A jumping class attracted more attention than the drivers for the competitive interest appeals to the crowd. The entries of Mr. Stafford are made up of hunting horses and with Mr. Leo Stafford up, fine exhibitions result. Mr. Stafford stated on Friday that he had won the Ormstown Show last year at 7 feet 3 inches, won the high jump and championship at Rome, Italy, last month.

The harness prizes this year went principally to the horse fanciers of the District. It is but too true that the beautiful animals exhibited were better than was the rule when horse flesh ruled the roads in this District, and now that the automobile is everywhere only a few keep a driving horse of any type. Among the horses from Montreal were some unusually fine animals, perhaps the chief among them being "Ashshire", the entry of the Maple Leaf Farms.

Friday afternoon a long shot Romalo owned by L. M. Stewart of Napier-surprise surprised the race managers by coming home ahead of the talent in the free-for-all on lower weights. The present track record by two seconds, bringing it down to 2.11. The races attracted a good crowd during all the show and the new grand stand was generally well filled, on one or two afternoons it being fairly well crowded.

One of the features of the show, and one that a great many overlooked, was the exhibit of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. It comprised a number of tables of averages of cows, and at one side of the demonstration was an automatically controlled magic lantern giving a series of pictures of noted horses and their being "Ashshire", the entry of the Maple Leaf Farms.

The Postal Strike.

A week ago everyone was uneasy over the situation regarding the threatened postal strike. The week has come, the heralded tie up of business has been attempted, and failed. Public opinion and a decided attitude by the authorities have been sufficient to break the back of the Union's claims.

There have been isolated examples of strikes of police in Canada, but this was the first attempt on a large scale by public servants to cripple the ordinary business of the country. The failure comes as a source of satisfaction, for the general attitude has been that public servants secured from dismissal by whims of politics, and protected by pension in old age, have no right to go out in a body in the hope of forcing a decision for their own personal gain by crippling the work of those whose labors go to pay them. A postal clerk, like any other public official, has the undisputed right, if conditions are not to his liking, to quit his position and enter into direct competition with the general labor market, but to go out in a body is an entirely different matter.

The Stand of Weekly Newspapers.

In the "Toronto Saturday Night" of last week appeared a comment on a resolution passed by the Canadian Weekly Newspapers' Association at their recent convention. Part of what was written follows:

Passing on political questions was thus laid down as a definite rule of conduct for the rural press. It is said that the resolution did not pass without some opposition but a majority were apparently of the opinion that it was the duty of the weekly newspaper to maintain a course of strict neutrality as to how the country is governed; and who governs it. If a fool or an undesirable manages by accident or intrigue to obtain public office he shall be regarded as mystically endowed with wisdom and honesty from the moment he takes office. The situation was of course, not stated in these blunt terms in the convention of the weekly editors; but that is precisely what their resolution meant.

To those familiar with the complete decadence of the majority of rural newspapers in Canada, as voices of public opinion either national or local, it seems surprising that it should have been deemed necessary to adopt such a resolution at all.

The quotation may be correct, but the reports which appeared in the daily press the day following the meeting, would lead a person to infer that the weekly editors condemned vomitory descriptions of political leaders in the Dominion, when such denunciations were caused by party spleen.

Be it as it may, neither the resolution nor the criticism will have much effect on the policies of the individual weekly newspapers of Canada; yet the raising of the question again points to the change that is being made in the weekly newspapers.

Twenty, thirty or forty years ago, hard-hitting and often bitterly partisan editorials were printed in the weekly newspapers of Canada, just as similar comments appeared in the daily newspapers. It was the style and rule of the day. Canada was not as large then in population, and a more intimate line could be maintained on the different policies of the parties. But, with the growth of the cities, the increased use of advertising space, and the larger circulations, the daily began to lose its edged touch, and there is scarcely an English paper in Canada whose daily editorial dish would not sicken the stomach of an old war horse of a generation ago. Among the French papers there are a few whose policy of editorial domination is still maintained, but they are but a few. If the dailies have followed that route, why not the weeklies? The War killed more rural papers in Canada than the previous half century, and the high production costs since have yearly added to the death roll, so that to-day we find in nearly every county but one paper representing the views, hopes and ambitions of that area. A wider, saner and more generous attitude on public matters has resulted, and this coupled with the absolute lack of division in policy between the political parties, has made the weekly newspaper a news medium rather than a political blunderbuss.

Huntingdon and its Water Supply.

There are many in Huntingdon who deplore and denounce the agitation against the present water supply. They believe, and not without reason, that a great many people are now afraid of the water, who a few months ago, were willing to recommend its use. Such an attitude can be understood but that will not blot out the fact that the Quebec Board of Health has tested our water and has found it other than it should be. Neither will it afford security against such an epidemic as swept the village of Mansonville 15 months ago. These are facts that must be faced, and the Council of Huntingdon are inviting the people of the Town to attend a public meeting in O'Connor Hall on Monday night to discuss the matter. The Council has caused investigations to be made, and has been able to secure data and costs on two alternative plans, one provides for the piping spring water by gravity from Brooklet to Huntingdon, the other calls for installation of a filter at the present power house.

Both plans will cost money to install, the gravity system calling for a heavier installation expense, which would later be offset by a lighter operation expense. It is apparent that no matter which may be accepted, the result will be a higher rate of taxation to the users of water, but health is worth more than an extra tax of a few cents a day, and the doctors are convinced that danger is always lurking in the present water pipes. Consequently an open mind should be kept until the arguments of both sides are heard.

HUNTINGDON

—The road gangs have been dumping stone along the highway during the past ten days and it is expected that offing of the roads will start either this week or the beginning of next.

—The Academy closed yesterday much to the scholar's relief. The continued stretch of warm weather had made them restless and the examinations were as difficult as usual.

—A new dentist has been added to the roll, for Mr. Harold Purcell, son of Mayor Purcell of Godmanchester, has been notified by the College authorities at Toronto, that he has successfully passed his examinations. Dr. Purcell has not decided yet where he will establish himself.

—Mr. James Ogilvie who left here many years ago was in Huntingdon on Monday renewing old acquaintances.

—Mr. W. F. Stephen was in Ottawa on Tuesday attending a meeting of the National Health Council. One of the main questions for discussion and decision was that of adopting a uniform recipe for the manufacture of ice cream. This is to overcome adulterations which are offered to the public as the genuine article.

—The fishing season for bass is now on, but the number of that sporting fish, which are being caught, are small. Unless the dams from the mouth of the river are provided with gaps for the fish to get through, the time will soon come when comparatively few fish will be found in the upper parts of the river.

—A change which has improved the appearance of the store front has been made by Mr. James Fortune, who has removed the old glass windows, which were in sections, and replaced them by two large plate glass panes.

—Mrs. W. D. Bradford of Granby, also Mr. and Mrs. Russell Bradford and children, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Goodfellow.

—Mr. Charles Monique left on Monday for Pierreford, N. Y., where he has accepted a position.

—The land in this part of the Province is getting into bad shape owing to the need of rain. Many farmers report that the grain crops are not coming through the ground to any extent, and in some cases similar conditions existed all along the route. In fact in many parts the conditions were worse than here.

Barrie who was away last week to Hamilton, Ontario, reports that the farmers are resowing their fields in different crops. The dry spell is general and Mr. Archd.

THE completion in 1886 of the Canadian Pacific Railway, a project that had received the moral and financial support of the Bank of Montreal, cast a bright ray of promise across the then somewhat troubled economic life of Canada.

Canada at last was spanned by rail from coast to coast, opening up for profitable development the fertile territory lying between.

The Bank of Montreal signalled the completion of the line by establishing a Branch at Vancouver and later at Victoria, thus completing its transcontinental chain of Branches and bringing to the Pacific Coast banking facilities essential to the successful development of the great economic potentialities there.

Of its 567 Branches, 53 are situated in the Province of British Columbia.

"THE SHADOW'S EDGE"

By Frank Bending

Up the familiar path to the cabin where a yellow window blurred through the snow-ridden air. He glanced to the left as they silently passed Mauger's tent. Except for a wide patch where the stove-pipe came through, it was sagging with snow. The lantern inside cast two dim shadows. Portent of the thing which had come upon him—the everlasting shadow that he could not blot out! He could hear their muffled voices.

He turned away with an inward groan. Presently he quietly tried the cabin door and found it locked. So Gus evidently feared treachery. He thought grimly. He knocked very gently; then a little louder. After a pause he heard the sound of shuffling feet within and a loud grumble. From Gus he called thru the crack of the door.

"Open up, Gus! It's me—Hardy," and he could hear the big Swede swearing in his amazement. The door opened slowly, then was flung wide to admit them to the cozy warmth within. Gus shut the door and followed him to the stove, scratching his head. The "What the—!" He grinned hugely and glanced down at his hand. "Smokin' one of your cigars, boss!" but Hardy paid no heed.

"Get some tea, Gus—and keep things warm. It's a night for indoors! That's right, Joe, make yourself at home. Tea, Gus—pails of it—and plenty of grub!" He gazed about the familiar interior, shaking his head. The thoughts it stirred in him!

"Dureau and Maugers—still here I notice."

"You bet they're still here, boss," nodded Gus significantly.

"They don't know I've arrived. We'll let them wait till morning to find out. Gus, I'm going to bed as soon as we've eaten."

An hour later Gus still sat by the fire, smoking. Indian Joe was curled up in his blankets in the corner of the kitchen nearest the stove. Gus grinned as he listened to the occasional soft swish of the snow against the window; it would be bad in the tent. Now that the boss was back . . . Gus smoked contentedly. He was fabricating wonderful dramas in his brain—dramas in which were ever two "crooks" who invariably received the just deserts of heavy villainy.

CHAPTER XXV

The little steamer which had carried Hardy and his girls north returned on the third day and Fawcett immediately sought out its skipper. He did not have to ask about the departure of the two young women; he had seen them go aboard himself and knew it would be useless to ask Lester the reason for it. All that the worthy captain could say was that the young ladies had arrived unexpectedly, that Hardy had come aboard and that he had pulled out from the dock two hours before schedule, as arranged. He appeared to be genuinely upset about the whole affair and told Fawcett so.

"I'm going to get into trouble about this yet!" he stormed, resenting Fawcett's remark that with the young women aboard there had been no need to leave ahead of time.

"I want you to save a cabin, going back," instructed Fawcett, ignoring the other's indignation. "Sergeant Steve and I are going up with you this time. Also, I want you to save accommodation for a lady who may come in on this morning's train."

Captain Lester gently felt his chin.

"Oh-ho!" he grinned. "Becomin' quite a ladies' man, Dean! Little mystery somewhere, eh? Well, bring 'em along! We sure need some refin' influence these days!"

"No mystery, Tom," reproved Fawcett. "But no brass bands or speeches of welcome, just the same. Train's late this morning, but I guess we'll all be aboard by eleven-thirty."

"Here, ain't you goin' to tell me the lady's name? How can I enter a reservation?"

"French? Say, any relation to that Frenchman I took up a while back—same name? Say, now, he was askin' the way to the Hardy camp—" The little captain's eyes glowed with admiration for his own perspicacity.

"I think the lady is his wife," said Fawcett, turning on his heel. "So long!"

The train from Winnipeg was expected to arrive about nine o'clock. Would she be on it, he wondered as he walked rapidly towards the depot. So much depended upon it! In his mind's eye he saw again the telegram that Dureau had written and left for Gus Jensen to dispatch—back in the tent that morning, telling her to return immediately to New York. It had been a simple matter to alter the wording; but had it reached her? If so, would she obey what must appear to her as a rather strange summons?

As he stood on the platform, idly waiting in the motley crowd for the train's approach, Fawcett wondered how he would know her. What would she look like? It was his intention to introduce himself to the most likely looking woman who came off the train and trust to luck and instinct to pick the right one. He glanced among the old weather-beaten prospectors and was careful to keep near them; they might come in useful as his own credentials.

The train got there at last and soon the platform presented a jostling humanity that clamored for business, for information; that touted for hotels and the privilege of carrying luggage. Fawcett's tall figure stood to full height as he eagerly surveyed the scene, watching for the woman he sought with an outward-calm that gave no hint of his inward disturbance. He saw several steps from the coaches.

Light Proposition Gives The Council Busy Night

Huntingdon Council Gets Down To Brass Tacks In Discussion Over The Pending Light Contract With Mr. Dunn

At the Council meeting held on Monday evening the Huntingdon Aldermen considered the question of electric light for Huntingdon and at the request of the Mayor, a general expression of opinion was made by each of the Council. The Secretary read over Mr. Dunn's proposal, which in brief calls for a franchise for lighting the Town for 20 years, starting January 1st, 1925. All light to be supplied by meter, with a rate of 9c to small consumers and 7c to consumers using over 50 k.w. hours a month. The Town to take at least 65 street lights.

Mayor O'Connor after requesting the Aldermen to refrain from personalities asked each in turn for an expression of opinion, and called on the Chairman of the Light Committee first.

Ald. Faubert stated that he personally was opposed to some provisions of the proposal because the rate was too high. Under the present contract light was being supplied for nine cents.

Under the new agreement it would not be for ten years but for twenty years and he thought that there should be a flat rate all round of 8c. Also there is a clause there calling for each consumer signing a contract. Does that mean that he will have to sign up for twenty years?

Mr. Dunn: It means that a consumer who wants light for ten days or a year will have to sign for a period. Then each year as he continues to use light, the contract will automatically renew itself, just the same as a telephone contract.

Ald. Hunter: Considering this contract as a whole there is one trouble and that is respecting the impossibility of forecasting the future and in the electrical world the progress is being made. No man sitting around here to-night can attempt to foretell what the cost of production of light will be in five, ten, or fifteen years hence. Recently I noticed in the Star article describing a scheme for extracting electricity from the air so that it was possible to light a house for seven cents a year. If such developments work out satisfactorily will Mr. Dunn be willing to consider a reduction in his rate later on?

Ald. Small: I take exception to one clause in the contract and that is the seven and nine cent rate. Light is a necessity and if I require two lights for my home it is just as necessary for me to have them as it is for a man who uses forty, in fact more so, because a large consumer is using them as a business proposition and to my way of thinking light is a necessity, not a speculation. Some have stated at this board that a user of a quantity of light is entitled to a lower rate but if I need five cords of wood and another 20 cords does the larger consumer get a lower rate? True, a man who buys 10 cars of feed gets a lower rate than the one who buys one, but the larger buyer is entering into a speculation. All ratepayers should be treated equally and in this contract there is no provision for power. It is purely a light contract and we are to-day no further ahead than we were ten years ago. If Mr. Dunn were to agree to develop power I would be quite agreeable to a 9 cent rate or even higher, but twenty years is a long time and until Mr. Dunn is willing to agree to provide power I reserve my right to vote against the contract.

Ald. Boyd said that he had previously expressed his views and it would be mere repetition. He was not in agreement with the seven and nine-cent rate.

Ald. Brown took exception to Ald. Small's attitude regarding the consumption of light. He personally was satisfied as to the rates, but would like to see Mr. Dunn agree to supply power, if needed, for manufacturing concerns. By this he did not mean development now, but within a reasonable time limit when called upon, say six, nine or twelve months, to develop power in climatic conditions and to the amount of development needed. So far as the seven-cent rate to stores was concerned, he considered that it was of value to the town to have the merchants light their windows and thus display their goods. It brightened up the appearance and assisted the Town in lighting the main streets. For himself, he had 100 watt lights in his windows and with these burning until ten p.m. it improved the street lighting, at least that was his opinion.

Ald. Small: You use that light to attract business not for street lighting don't you?

Ald. Brown: Certainly, but the Town incidentally gains. And the higher you jump the rate the less light will be burned by the merchants. As far as houses are concerned, I'm satisfied that a very large proportion do not use up to the $1.15 that they must pay each month. Personally I know of a neighbor who last month only used 45c worth.

Ald. Small: Would you have people try to speculate in lighted with the rate, and I can't understand Alderman Small's argument. In any line of business he knows that the larger quantities that he buys the larger discounts he gets.

Ald. Small: Not in light that is a necessity.

Ald. Stark: Light is required by all of us, but Alderman Small knows as well as I do that the cost of light enters into the retail price of goods sold by any store and that the higher the rate the merchant has to pay, the more the consumer has to pay for the goods. As to light being a speculation or a necessity I will frankly admit that I can't see the argument. As I understand it, a speculation is when you buy a stock on margin, but when you buy goods outright and use them it is a straight business matter and the laws of common sense provide that the man whose larger orders permit great quantities to be produced and sold, and thus lowers the overhead, should get the better rate.

Ald. Small: But this is only a light contract. It is not a power contract and until power is developed we are no better off.

Mr. Dunn: Would you have Mr. Dunn develop power before he has any purchaser for it?

Ald. Small: I'm not interested in that.

Ald. Stark: That is no way to support a claim. Is it your wish to see Mr. Dunn spend money and develop power before he has people to use it?

Ald. Small: That does not require an answer.

Ald. Hunter: The development of power is an important phase of the question, and while naturally I would not demand that Mr. Dunn undertake to develop power ahead of a demand, still I would like to see him undertake to develop additional power if the need arose. If you get a twenty year contract Mr. Dunn will you do anything?

Mr. Dunn: If I am given a twenty year contract it is my intention to raise my dam, increase my storage basin, put in a new wheel and otherwise provide for a greater supply of power. That is why I want a twenty year contract. A ten year period will not give me sufficient time to protect the investment I will have to make.

Ald. Hunter: Win you do that this year?

Mr. Dunn: It is too late now in the season.

Ald. Brown: I am told by Mr. Michael that during the past year he had four enquiries from manufacturing concerns wanting to find a place to locate, but in all cases he had to report that there was no power available. We have got an active Board of Trade and I think we should get something to work on.

The Mayor: Mr. Dunn are you willing to fall in line with the suggestion of the Board and make such an agreement?

Mr. Dunn: It would require that an engineer survey the whole system and see what is the possibility of development and what the cost of it would be.

Ald. Boyd: You own it and should know what it will cost.

Mr. Dunn: There is a big fall at Powerscourt and in my opinion a fall of seventy feet can be obtained. By using my dam I can get from 200 to 250 horsepower above the present supply with very little labor and time. If the Council wants power at once, let them turn my steam engine and boiler over to me and I will be in a position to supply 100 horsepower within the twelve month period provided in the agreement and at the same time I can be developing my plant at Powerscourt. I want to sell power, and if I see a good chance to sell a quantity, I won't hesitate in generating sufficient by steam, if my plant isn't large enough to handle it at once, and this steam addition will take care of the added load until the necessary development has been made at my plant.

Ald. Small: Why didn't you put that in your contract?

Mr. Dunn: Because my lawyer advises me that a power clause in a light contract with a town, destroys the whole contract.

Ald. Boyd: How much power have you now?

Mr. Dunn: 250 horsepower, and the extra unit will bring it up to within range of 500. I have been advised that my site is capable of generating from 3000 to 4000.

Ald. Faubert: That will be a trifle more than we will need.

The Mayor: Are you willing to enter into an agreement to develop more power if necessary and to publish a scale of rates?

Mr. Dunn: I would like the advice of my lawyer on that first. As to the scale I can give it on a meter rate, but as a general rule it is a question of how much the man needs, when he wants it, and the nature of his load.

Ald. Hunter: The question of price should not concern the Council. That is a matter between Mr. Dunn and the user.

Ald. Small: Will your line carry 500 horse power?

Mr. Dunn: At the present voltage, yes. If the voltage were doubled it will carry all I can develop.

It was finally agreed to have the Light Committee and Mr. Dunn enter into an agreement along the lines of discussion, such agreement to be ready for the Council meeting of Friday evening.

A brief discussion followed on the water question and it was decided to call a mass meeting in O'Connor Hall on Monday night when the relative merits of filtered and spring water systems would be discussed, in order that the Council might ascertain the sentiments of the ratepayers on the matter. The Secretary was directed to notify Mr. Maclean, the engineer, of the meeting.
