Banks ousted as SIU boss by trustees

MONTREAL (CP) — Harold Chamberlain Banks, who traded for years on being a tough guy, has been ousted as president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada Inc.

The 54-year-old powerful and controversial union leader who came to Canada 15 years ago was removed from office by order of the board of trustees for maritime unions. The announcement was made here by the trustees and in the Commons by Labor Minister MacEachen.

Charles Turner, 40, of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, an employee of the trustees for the last two months, was appointed to the SIU presidency.

Destroy bombers?

GENEVA (AP)—The United States proposed to Russia today that they each destroy 480 planes from their strategic bomber fleets during a two-year period.

The proposal for destruction of American B-47 and Russian TU-16 Badger bomber was made at a meeting of the 17-nation disarmament conference by U.S. negotiator Adrian S. Fisher.

It differed substantially from the demand for total destruction of all strategic bombers of both nations made to the conference Jan. 29 by Soviet delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin.

QPP 'pact'

QUEBEC (CP)—Eustache Siros, a former Quebec Provincial Police constable, testified Wednesday that Henri Doyon, a former QPP sergeant, talked to him in 1953 of making a "pact" against their superiors.

Mr. Siros testified before the Quebec royal commission into the Coffin affair that he told Sgt. Doyon that he wouldn't join in such a pact for several reasons, among them the fact that one of the superiors was his brother, Capt. Raoul Siros.

Protect jurors

AYLESBURY (Reuters)—The judge in England's £2,600,000 ($7,800,000) train robbery trial has ordered a round-the-clock police guard for the families of the 12 jurors when they go out to reach a verdict.

Following an incident reported to the court Monday of an effort to bribe one of the jurors, Mr. Justice Edmund Davies was told Wednesday the entire panel wanted assurances there would be no interference with their families while the jurors were in retirement.

Foresees change

QUEBEC (CP)—Daniel Johnson, Union Nationale leader, said Wednesday night the work of the Laurendeau-Dunton royal commission on bilingualism will lead to a new Canadian Constitution.

"Today nearly everyone has been converted to the idea of a new Constitution," said Mr. Johnson, recalling that he has been demanding a new Constitution for the last two years.

Eastern Townships' French are dissatisfied with status quo; urge more, less contact

The afternoon hearings of the sessions were characterized by a wide spectrum of opinion from the mainly French speaking participation and much of this was not too well informed.

But if they were sometimes less clear on solutions, the meetings, which were supposed to deal with the national problem, produced a long list of grievances and injustices in the status quo. All groups touched on the problem of minority rights in provinces — French in nine provinces and the English in Quebec.

The French should be given the same rights in the rest of Canada the English have in Quebec. The separate schools questions was emphasized as an area where the French have been given a raw deal.

A proposal to make the federal government responsible for minority rights was one of the ways suggested to meet with the problem, making this the essence of a new federal government. It was also suggested that minority rights be given constitutional recognition in other parts of Canada as in Quebec.

One speaker claimed there was only one minority problem in Canada — the English in Quebec. He suggested that the problem would be solved if they left Quebec permanently.

English is being favored and the French Canadian is losing interest in the federal sphere because of this. It was suggested that Ottawa become a federal district and be made to reflect the dual nature of Canada.

Ruby's lawyer fired after bitter tirade

DALLAS (AP)—Melvin Belli the tirade he delivered after has been fired as chief defence counsel for Jack Ruby, who was convicted and sentenced to death Saturday for the slaying of Lee Harvey Oswald, accused assassin of president Kennedy.

Belli's televised bitter comments have brought wide criticism from Texas officials and from officials of the American Bar Association.

Ruby's brother, Hyman Ruby of Chicago, said "the opinions this man expressed about Dallas, the jury, Judge Joe B. Brown and District Attorney Henry Wade are not shared by Jack or any member of his family."

ANGRY SEAMEN GATHER

In Vancouver, seamen gathered angrily in their downtown hiring hall Wednesday following news of the removal of Banks.

About 100 men clustered around John Meredith, newly-appointed local representative of the federal government trustees as he walked into the building.

At one point Mr. Meredith, an official of the New Westminster national employment office, was greeted by a shout of "Heil Hitler." He took the name of the man who did the shouting. Simultaneously, commission-

Fighting breaks out once more in Cyprus

NICOSIA (Reuters) — Fighting broke out today in a Turkish-Cypriot village 40 miles west of here but the clash was followed by a temporary ceasefire.

A British military spokesman announced the temporary ceasefire from Ghaziveran, where mortars were used in the battling between Greek and Turkish-Cypriots. A Cyprus government spokesman reported at least two Greek-Cypriots wounded there.

The British spokesman said a troop of British paratroops were in the village.

A ferret scout car, "minus its turret," was being used by Greek-Cypriots in the village, the British spokesman added.

The chances are high that if one of the participants at the Royal Commission's informal hearing in Sherbrooke yesterday was chosen at random, he would be French speaking, under 24 and a student.

French speaking participants at the regional meeting of the bilingualism and biculturalism commission in Sherbrooke yesterday outnumbered those speaking English by 17 to 1.

Out of the 355 who took part in the day's discussions, 334 were French and 21 English. They came from all over the Townships and as far away as Haute Riviere on the North shore of the St. Lawrence.

Youth virtually monopolized the hearings, with 200 of the delegates being under 25 years old. In the other age groups, 65 were under 35; 78 were under 55; and 12 over 55.

Socially, the largest group represented at the sessions were from the university — a total of 245 students and professors.

The breakdown shows 54 persons representing various organizations, 219 students, 26 professors, 19 newspapermen, 23 professional men and nine housewives.

Expect to settle

Settlement of the dispute between French speaking Roman Catholic teachers in eight Sherbrooke diocese towns and school commissions is expected to be announced in Quebec City this evening, a spokesman for the teachers said Wednesday.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

BRIDGE THINKERS ARE LIMITED

Bridge writers would lead wonderful lives if every hand could illustrate a single subject. North's raise to two spades is entirely correct in modern bidding. You should prefer such three trump major suit raises to no-trump.

South's jump to four was just a slight overbid, but the contract was certainly a good one.

and South should have made it. East won the opening heart lead and continued the suit. South was sure that West's deuce of hearts had been a singleton so South proceeded to ruff with the king.

West had an excellent chance to put on his ace and remark something like: "No better place for it," or "Aces were made to take kings," or "Not through the Iron Duke." West was one of those players who prefer to think, not talk.

So West thought things over and discarded a club. From that point on there was nothing to the play of the hand. West had to collect three trump tricks and South was down one.

East congratulated West on his play. South complained about bad luck. North complained about his partner.

North pointed out that if South had simply ruffed the second heart with a low trump West could think things over until the cows came home but he would never have been able to make more than two trump tricks.

A record number of houses begun here last year

A record number of 938 housing units were started in Sherbrooke in 1963 said Quebec regional director of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Henri Dion last night.

Mr. Dion spoke before a meeting of the Quebec Provincial Homebuilders Association, Sherbrooke district branch, at the King George Hotel.

The 938 units in 1963 compared with 691 in 1962, 555 in 1961 and 403 in 1960, he said.

Similarly, he said, a record number of housing units were completed in 1963.

In 1963, 961 units were completed, while in 1962 there were 505, in 1961, there were 387 and in 1960 there were 564.

Mr. Dion said that this Sherbrooke building increase was greater than the national average.

The number of units being constructed on January 1, 1964 was 453, he said. On the first of January, 1962, 452 were being constructed while in 1961 there were 128.

ABOVE AVERAGE
These figures, he said, suggest that the rate of house buying in Sherbrooke is above the national average. "This undoubtedly corresponds to an increase of economic activity in this region," he said, "and we hope this upswing continues."

National figures, said Mr. Dion, show that 1963 was the second most active year on record in house building. The number started was 148,624.

This was an increase of 14 per cent over 1962 when 130,095 units were started, he said. The record year of 1958 had 164,632 houses started.

In 1963, 128,191 units were completed in Canada. Only in

Area SPCA protests butchery of seals

Support of the public is sought to stir action from government

By SANDRA PICKFORD
(Record staff reporter)

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty To Animals for the district of St. Francis has launched a district-wide appeal for support in protesting what has been described as the "wholesale butchery" of thousands of seals each season in the Magdalen Islands.

Miss Ruth Taylor of North Hatley, treasurer of the district SPCA said Wednesday the Society is seeking government legislation covering:

- (1) A limit on the number of seals permitted to be killed each season;
- (2) Shortening of the present seal-hunting season and
- (3) Enforcement of a more humane way of killing the hunted seals.

The district Society's appeal for public interest and support comes following a report on page five of The Record March 16 describing conditions during the annual seal hunt, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence area according to Miss Taylor.

The article relates that two Montreal cameramen returned from the Magdalen Islands with two baby seals they say were rescued from "wholesale butchery."

Andre Fleury and Hugh Koneman photographed two half-hour documentaries which will be shown on the French network of the CBC.

The baby seals — about 13 days old — will be presented to the Granby Zoo.

The cameramen said they recorded the sight and sounds of baby seals being skinned alive by hunters oblivious to their human-like cries.

SKINNING SEALS
They filmed "killers," as they are officially called by seal hunters, skinning baby seals at the rate of one every 30 seconds.

The baby seals, whose snow white pelts are valued at from $10 to $12, are caught and slaughtered in such great numbers because they cannot swim until taught by their mothers. Adult seal pelts are valued at from $18 to $20.

The cameramen said they had talked to biologists who claim the remaining seal population of the type hunted in the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence will vanish within three or four years unless the federal government stops the hunting.

The population of the Greenland-class seals is estimated to have decreased to 1,000,000 from 20,000,000 in the last few years.

"We have been aware of these conditions for some six months now," said Miss Taylor. The situation was brought to the attention of the district branch through the Federation Humaine Society, with headquarters in Ottawa.

The Federation has been attempting to bring the situation to government attention for some time now and has launched a Dominion-wide appeal to since the commission report will not be ready until 1966.

Mr. Scott answered that he as well as the other commissioners were completely outside political influence and were sincere. "We cannot find an answer right away," said Mr. Scott.

Describing the commission as "the most important in Canada's history," Mr. Doherty asked if part of the treatment for Canada's ills would not be the dissemination of the commission's opinions over the mass media and through discussions such as last evening's.

Mr. Laurendeau agreed, but denied that the commission members are pushing any definite opinion yet or that they have arrived at the solutions either.

When the discussion was thrown open to the floor, a lively and sometimes impassioned question and answer period ensued.

Expressing what is perhaps the essential French Canadian grievance, Magog's Mayor Ernest Simard said:

"I want to feel at home in my country."

"When I travelled across Canada I felt as a stranger in a foreign land."

"When I crossed the Quebec border I felt I did not belong."

"Let's make this country bilingual so that we can also call it our own."

His remarks were met by a burst of applause from the audience.

Gulf between Quebec and rest of Canada a big one

The co-chairman of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism yesterday described the present period in Canadian life as one of crisis and insecurity.

Speaking in a panel discussion at the University of Sherbrooke Mr. Laurendeau said that the rest of Canada is beginning to ask questions, to doubt and to develop a certain understanding of Quebec.

But he warned that a tremendous gulf exists still between Quebec and the rest of Canada. "We feel that we exercise little power in the federal government; but in the rest of Canada they think we exercise power way out of proportion to our numbers."

"They say we make and break governments."

"They are uneasy. Some of them answer separatism with their own brand — 'to hell with Quebec.'"

"The truth is that we don't know the answers yet ourselves."

Participating in the panel discussion were Mr. Laurendeau, commission members Frank Scott, Jean Louis Gagnon, Father Clement Cormier, Claude Thibault, Professor of history at Bishop's and Sherbrooke Universities; Hugh Doherty, editor-in-chief of the Sherbrooke Daily Record; Jean Paul Lemieux lawyer; and Rene Dupont, economist.

During the discussion, Mr. Lemieux asked the commissioners if the commission was not in reality a face-saving measure.

Mr. Scott answered that he as well as the other commissioners were completely outside political influence and were sincere. "We cannot find an answer right away," said Mr. Scott.

Describing the commission as "the most important in Canada's history," Mr. Doherty asked if part of the treatment for Canada's ills would not be the dissemination of the commission's opinions over the mass media and through discussions such as last evening's.

THREE MAIN QUESTIONS FACING COMMISSION

In his opening remarks to the afternoon session of the Royal Commission hearings in Sherbrooke yesterday, co-chairman Andre Laurendeau narrowed down the basic questions facing the inquiry to three —

- Do French and English speaking groups want to and can they live together?
- Under what new conditions?
- Will they accept these new conditions?

He told the audience the commissioners recently completed cross Canada tour meeting Provincial premiers would help them answer these questions as well as helping to clarify certain misconceptions one group might have about another.

Certain points have clarified themselves during this time, Mr. Laurendeau said.

• Bilingualism does not mean that all Canadians should be bilingual. Just as the Vancouverite may not need to speak French the man in St. George de Beauce may not have to speak English.

• Biculturalism is not a mixture of two cultures, in one person but refers to the co-existence of two cultures.

Quebec is not the only place where rumblings are being heard Mr. Laurendeau said. Everywhere there are signs of growth, of change and of progress creating a fluid situation.

He quoted a BC source as saying that "Your revolution in Quebec is a noisy one; the quiet revolution is going on in English Canada."

Mr. Laurendeau found that public apathy towards the French-English problems is disappearing outside Quebec.

"A sense of urgency is growing at the present time and it is accompanied by tensions."

Sessions in Sherbrooke said in best university tradition

The sensitive poet in Royal Commission member Frank Scott showed through during last night's closing meeting, when he summed up the afternoon sessions.

But the constitutional lawyer, Dean of Law at McGill University and widely-read Canadian poet gave more than a summation to the audience.

Philosophizing on the commission's format, Mr. Scott said it would establish personal contact with the great mass of Canadian people "who will eventually decide the fate of this country."

The commission could have contented itself with receiving voluminous memoirs from organizations and not have met with the "grass roots" at all, Mr. Scott said.

"But if we are to make recommendations to satisfy the government, the people and you, we could not have received your opinions from any other source."

He described the day's discussion as "in the best university tradition."

And how fortunate we are, Mr. Scott said, to live in a province "where we are more free to speak than in any other part of North America on any subject—politics, religion or education."

Mr. Scott warned the sometimes impatient audience that the great dialogue and debate cannot be expected to be resolved too quickly.

In the meanwhile, said Mr. Scott, "hear the other side."

Dean Scott told the mainly French audience he understood their feeling of "being oppressed by the Anglo-Saxons."

"But let's not forget the other minorities who are also suffering in Canada," he suggested. "The essence of a new entente would be that minorities be protected by the federal government."

On behalf of the members, Mrs. Harley Purdy gave a vase as a souvenir to Mrs. Boomhough.

It was decided to build new cupboards in the church kitchen. Several members are to attend the Quebec - Sherbrooke Presbytery annual meeting in Richmond, on May 4.

The devotion was conducted by Mrs. Betty Black in the form of an Easter Thankoffering Service and a solo was sung by Mrs. Delores Williams.

Lunch was served by the Afternoon Unit.

Royal Commission learns of griefs

In his remarks opening the first regional meeting sponsored by the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism held at the University of Sherbrooke Wednesday, Joint Chairman Andre Laurendeau declared that many claim the Commission is dealing with vague problems.

Before the day was out, Mr. Laurendeau probably learned, if he did not know already, just how vague these problems were.

At five committee sessions held during the morning, which were listed as dealing with bilingual and bicultural problems on a district basis, discussions often ranged far afield, with more time being spent on arguing individual incidents than on suggesting any clear cut solution for the many problems which exist.

The resulting reports, therefore, offered little basis for discussion at the plenary session which followed. As no resolutions were asked for, the chairman merely outlined the various items which had been discussed without offering any suggestions which could be debated by these attending the general meetings.

This does not mean necessarily that the time was wasted.

These informal discussions are something of a precedent for Royal Commission inquiries and the conference held in Sherbrooke yesterday was the first of a series planned by the Commissioners.

Probably it served its purpose in two ways:

It certainly gave the Commissioners an idea of just how complex is the problem they are inquiring into and will help them establish the ground rules for the formal hearings which will open at a later date, permitting them to determine the scope of the arguments to be heard;

And it may enable them to iron out some of the folds apparent at yesterday's gathering.

One important area for improvement would be a better defining of the topics to be discussed by the various committees, permitting a wider coverage of the many problems.

With the possible exception of the report of the English-speaking panel, which dealt with educational matters and especially the difficulty in obtaining qualified French teachers for Protestant schools, the other committees apparently spent their time in arguing the Anglo-Saxon control of the economy of the province.

With the price of oyster stew what it is it's a wonder restaurant patrons don't look for pearls.

Distribution paradox comes home

Current events, when not dealing with human conflict caused by nationalistic or racial stupidity based on prejudice, usually seem to deal with the more reasonable conflict between the have and have-nots.

This is an ancient struggle, as old as man. Recently, however, we have had warnings that it is coming very close to our prosperous home from both within and without.

Modern communication and transportation of food or weapons (the alternative seems inevitable) are forcing us to give more consideration to the paradox of the western world's troublesome food surpluses and the east's hungry millions.

At home, the basic problem is as simple, and the solution as difficult. ☆ ☆ ☆

Be careful how you put on your girl friend's school pin, lads, you might be stuck with it.

Zanzibar democracy shows principles

In many of the older and more mature nations there has been a growing demand for an end to the United Nations, or at least the withdrawal of the western nations from the organization.

One of the reasons for this demand has been the claim that the newer nations, created from colonies of European powers, are dominating the Assembly. Many critics charge these recently-established governments represent yet uncivilized people who cannot form intelligent decisions on questions of international importance.

Some strength is lent to these arguments by accounts of the recent independence celebrations in Zanzibar. According to news reports the native government, to mark the great day:

Hanged the former finance minister in public;

Doused one Arab leader with gasoline and burned him;

Ordered another to kill his own sons and daughters and then commit suicide.

In weighing United Nations Assembly decisions it must be remembered that Zanzibar and each of these other small African states, not far removed from jungle status, have equal voting power with Canada, the United States and Great Britain.

Other papers say:

Compromise vital to lumber dispute

The lumber industry is deep at the heart of the history and economics of the Ottawa Valley. The prospect of anything except the powers of nature herself interfering with the passage of timber from one side of the river to the other quickly worries many persons in many places.

The decision of the province of Quebec to ban the export to Ontario of cut timber from the forests of Pontiac and Gatineau is being called short-sighted economic nationalism by some and, by others, a long overdue step to bring industry and a higher standard of living to Western Quebec.

The Ontario point of view is that the Ottawa river was given us to be an economic bond between the two provinces, that it should never be allowed to become an economic iron curtain. Both sides of the river, it is argued, should be considered as one economic unit, not divided by a political boundary.

Moreover, they say on the Ontario side, Quebec's action is shortsighted and, in the long term, it will hurt Quebec more than it will help. It might open the way for relation by Toronto in other ways. A new lumber and pulp plant has been expected in the Valley, probably in Quebec. Any hindrance to the flow of lumber by either province might delay the project.

Ottawa Journal

The whole trend, it is said, is toward larger and integrated pulp and lumber plants and rival operation looking at each other will be economic folly. The Quebec decision is felt to be emotional and not economically sound.

But in Quebec a different story is told. The people of Pontiac have been watching some 35,000,000 feet of cut timber being taken out of the country each year to supply Ontario mills, principally at Pembroke and Braeside. They know the need for new jobs and they note that apart from a few sawmills the only employment their lumber provides is work in the bush.

Provincial authorities say that the lumber companies in Ontario have been given plenty of warning about a possible ban but they have not located in Quebec. They have preferred paying a premium on Quebec timber to crossing the river. The ban is said to be a reluctant last step after other means of persuading industry have failed.

So the arguments go. The very merit in each argument should mean that reasonable men can work out some compromise. Perhaps a meeting between Trade Minister Sharp and the provincial ministers, as Mr. Joseph Greene of Renfrew South has suggested, would be a good beginning.

What must not happen is that the two provinces should eye each other across the Ottawa River as foreign powers. The historic reasons for locating the big lumber mills on the Ontario side were partly because of closeness to the railways. But perhaps the old reasons no longer apply and Quebec should have its share. Certainly, the mills should follow the supply; it is in Western Quebec where the great forests remain. The building of new lumber mills in Quebec seems inevitable, ban or no ban on timber exports.

The problem between Quebec

Joseph Amos McLoughlin

Inspector labored for 20 years to set high standards on frontier

By MARION PHELPS

One of the true pioneers of education in the District of Bedford was Joseph A. McLoughlin, Inspector of the Common Schools for twenty years. On the frontier of our educational expansion we find him a central figure setting up high standards, and, under most adverse and trying circumstances, assisting to build up creditable schools in the various communities in which he laboured. Fortunate indeed are we that the trunklet containing the letters of the McLoughlin family found its way to the Knowlton museum, otherwise Joseph A. McLoughlin would be just a name in the long list of early educationists. The letters are fascinating to read and from them something of the story of his life has been pieced together for this article.

His birthplace was in a small settlement in Megantic County called New Ireland. Joseph, the eldest, with brothers, William and Michael Ira, and sister, the lovely Lucinda, were born children of Michael and Electa (Hall) McLoughlin in the 1820's. They were baptized by the Rev. Mr. Mountain, afterwards Bishop of Quebec who was at that time the missionary in charge of the township of Shipton. The McLoughlin family seemed to have already been settled in this district when the Irish and Scotch settlers came into Megantic County. The mother died when the children were small and the father re-married after a few years. The lovely little sister Lucinda was sent to live in Portneuf with the family of the Hon. Mr. Hale.

On November 16, 1838 we find the two older boys, Joseph and William making a forced march from the Widow Mitchell's to Israel Rice's Inn in South Ham. "The weary march down the old Craig Road, the speculations on the road, the rests, standing guard while the other slept, the brave old dog challenging the approaching stranger, the relief when they heard the cheery voice of Israel Rice and the kindly greeting of Mrs. Rice" were incidents recalled by the two when they, as older men, re-visited the scene of this escapade forty-seven years later. The boys went on to an uncle's in Danville, Vermont, where they lived afterwards and attended school at the Danville Academy. Joseph was preparing for entering college at this Academy in 1845 when he was twenty-three years of age. He then attended the University of Vermont from which he received his degree in 1853 at the age of thirty-one. He was principal of the Academy at Bakersfield, Vermont, until he came to teach in Canada in 1855 as principal of the Dunham Academy. He remained in Dunham until about 1863. It would be interesting to note that he became one of the first presidents of the District of Bedford Teachers' Association. In 1859 he married Antoinette (Nettie) Hewitt who was from a well-to-do family in Burlington. His parents were living in Burlington by this time and a half-sister, Maggie, was living with them. Brother William had gone to Chicago, had married, and was doing well. Michael Ira, the younger brother lived on the Grand-Isle Hall's farm in New Ireland until 1866 when he moved west with his family. Lovely Lucinda, their own sister had died in 1843 while still in the family that adopted her.

Along with his work as principal Mr. McLoughlin studied law for four years under Mr. James O'Halloran of Cowansville. On April 3, 1865 he received his diploma conferring on him the right to practise as an Advocate, Barrister, Attorney and Solicitor in all Courts of Lower Canada. His father wrote to him at this time congratulating him and stating that "teaching does very well for a few years but that it was poor employment for old age."

Teaching, however, continued to be his main employment and in 1869 we find him

JOSEPH AMOS McLOUGHLIN
(Second school inspector, district of Bedford)

One of a series of articles on the history of education in the District of Bedford prepared to mark the centennial of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers.

Principal at Sutton. While there, in his capacity as President of the District of Bedford Teachers' Association, he receives a letter from the secretary of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers, who at the time was Archibald Duff, Jr. The letter is interesting as it throws some light on the early activities of the provincial organization. It reads in part: "We are thinking of a Convention and the District of Bedford was proposed as our last meeting for the gathering. As the Hon. Mr. Dunkin, the President of the Provincial Association suggested Waterloo, the Central Executive Committee agreed to recommend Waterloo and also that the time be the latter part of August. I was instructed to write you and ask whom you think to be the right men to appoint as a Local Committee of Arrangements. I am sending you a copy of the by-laws in which you will find the rules relating to preparations for meetings. We are to have another central committee meeting on Saturday next 8th inst., and would be very glad to have information from you by that time." Aside from the fact that some of the early conventions were held in the Townships, the letters also reveal that many of the officials of the P.A.P.T. were not even teachers and that those people arranging for the conventions were not teachers but the laymen of the district in which the conventions were held. The president of the district in which the convention was to be held evidently had the work of finding people who would prepare for the meeting and so in the summer of 1869 it fell to the lot of our Joseph McLoughlin to do this.

Though a lawyer by profession as well as teacher, Mr. McLoughlin continued teaching, being still Principal at Sutton at the time. He was appointed Inspector of the Common Schools of Brome, Shefford and Missisquoi, comprising the District of Bedford on August 24, 1870 at a salary of $700 per annum in place of Dr. Rotus Parmelee who had resigned. Surely settling down as a lawyer would have been easier for him, but he evidently chose the harder life. As I have already said, he was a school inspector for twenty years. Some time in the mid 1880's Mr. McLoughlin was saddened by the death of one of his two sons, and then again in 1872 by the death of his wife.

Among the letters are many from a confrere, Inspector H. Hubbard of Sherbrooke District with whom, of course, Mr. McLoughlin had much in common. An interesting one dated Sherbrooke, June 28, 1884 from Mr. Hubbard can be quoted partly as follows: "I hardly know which course is really best as regards visits, I would like to be able to visit twice a year; but I cannot of course do so with my present number of schools, and at the same time give half a day to a visit. My opinion in taking Commissioners with me has been various, sometimes I have succeeded in getting them out and in having them manifest a little interest, but usually it has been 'up hill work.' I am glad to see that you have recommended Gage's Readers. I am well-pleased with Gage's Sixth Reader for High Schools as it meets the clamour of those who want meetings at Lennoxville and Richmond were large gatherings, the best, Mr. Rexford said, he had attended at all, and an excellent interest was kept up. I anticipate a fairly successful gathering at the Institute at Richmond, the 8th to the 11th of July. I rather enjoy the days of my Teachers' Meetings. I feel confident that they are productive of much good. I have some 5 or 6 weeks of summer visiting this year and shall have 4 or 5 weeks in the fall."

This letter would reflect much the same type of work that Mr. McLoughlin would be doing at it is evident that they worked out their problems together as there are letters from Inspector Hubbard every month or oftener. Inspector Joseph A. McLoughlin is listed in the Canada Directory of 1871 as still living in Sutton, being secretary of the municipal council, lawyer, and school inspector.

REPORTING

OTTAWA — Yukons and Hercules transport planes of the RCAF are dropping down onto the runways at Nicosia this week to disgorge their platoon of the Van Doss and the RCDs — and even at this distance the strange sweetish smell of Cyprus is in my nostrils.

It's strongest late in the day when the breeze is off the land — land fertilized for three millennia by the ordure of men who wrestled livelihoods from the soil of this semi-arid island 140 by 60 miles in size.

In that period Cyprus has been ruled by Phoenicians, Assyrians, Egyptians, Persians, Romans, Byzantines, English Crusaders, Franks, Genoese, Venetians, Turks and modern Britons — but never by ancient Athens or modern Greece despite the distant Greek ancestry of 80 per cent of Cyprus' half million people.

Now the Cyriots have proven that political independence after 3,000 years of vassalage confers only the right to govern themselves — not the ability. The United Nations' peacekeeping force of 1022 Canadians plus some 6,000 British, Irish, Swedes and Finns has the responsibility of ensuring that the breakdown of the three year old federation of Greek and Turkish Cyriots does not trigger a Greco Turkish war, or worse.

It would be ironic if after overcoming such explosive situations as Berlin, Korea, Suez and Cuba the west lost the game in Cyprus — irony that the world cannot afford. Already this dry bone of an island has destroyed the Balkan Alliance and left the Greeks and the Turks NATO allies in name only.

As a result the strength of NATO's eastern flank defenses against Russia is dubious, yet we in Canada remain committed under NATO to defend the territorial integrity of both Greece and Turkey. Not the least embarrassing question is whose integrity we defend if Greek fights Turk over Cyprus.

Cyprus' importance is strategic. Forty miles from the Turkish coast, it outflanks the Turks' Mediterranean defenses — and the Turks are unwilling to see it come under the sway of Greece, as President Makarios wishes it to, because Greece is not a very stable member of the democratic camp. It could turn Communist.

Although Cyprus' military importance has diminished in the atomic age, otherwise the situation remains basically as it was when the British leased Cyprus from the Turks in 1878 to guard against further Russian encroachment. As long as Russia is in the Caucasus, promised Disraeli, the British will remain in Cyprus.

It took EOKA, the National Organization for Cypriot Resistance, only five years to win independence on terms that still leave the British with treaty bases on the island. I was there in 1955 shortly after EOKA launched its terror campaign of bombings, murders and sabotage.

EOKA promised "enosis", or union with "Mother Greece", and this unfulfilled dream underlines Makarios' efforts to nullify both constitutional guarantees to the Turkish minority and the treaty rights of British and Turkey to intervene in Cyprus.

One doesn't have to look hard to see a growing parallel with Cyprus in Canada — not only the terrorism, but the deepening French-English antipathy in Quebec, and moves towards economic and cultural enosis with Mother France.

Traffic-choked cities will be out-maneuvered by the electronic brain

TORONTO (CP)—For several years Sam Cass, a man who's paid for worrying about what happens 20 years from now, has been thinking about what could happen on a particular day in 1980.

If Metropolitan Toronto's motor vehicles keep multiplying as forecast and if all were to appear together on the streets on that 1980 day, Mr. Cass figures, they would form a line two abreast along every foot of Toronto's roadways, give or take a few miles and ifs.

As Metro's commissioner of traffic, Mr. Cass admits this is a highly unlikely circumstance, but he has plenty of worries anyway. And he and Metro's council are betting $3,000,000 that the snowballing problem of one of North America's most traffic-choked cities will be out-maneuvered by the electronic brain of what is expected to be the world's most advanced traffic control system.

That's the price of the computer setup and its attendant communications web which for months has been getting groomed for the job of controlling all the traffic lights on the 2,500 miles of streets in Metro's 13 municipalities. It is to take over a cluttered downtown area with 100 signals about May 1 and work its way into the other 600 in about two years.

FEED MEMORY CELLS

It will be the first central automatic system for controlling all the traffic in a metropolitan area anywhere, and, when it is in full operation, will be the largest control job of any kind turned over to machine thinking.

Some six years of human thought have already gone into the project, and the brain's more than 1,000,000 metallic memory cells are being stocked up with enough statistics and instructions on traffic-unsnarling techniques to keep it going for four or five years of operation.

To Commissioner Cass the statistics spell trouble, latent but big. Metro has more than 600,000 vehicles registered within its 240 square miles, for a per capita density second only to Los Angeles and Detroit on the continent. This is compounded by a daily influx of about 150,000 vehicles — about twice the total registrations of Vancouver — from outside the area.

Vehicle use of Metro's streets is galloping ahead at a pace three times as fast as the growth of the roadways themselves.

"It is fast absorbing all the capacity of our existing streets," Mr. Cass says. Subway and expressway construction relieves traffic congestion in particular areas but creates it elsewhere; 90 per cent of the subway's passengers use surface vehicles to get to or from it.

CALLED ON EXPERTS

With Toronto continuing to mushroom and traffic hurtling along towards a monumental jam in the not-too-distant future, Mr. Cass about six years ago called in a firm of traffic consultants to find out whether an electronic computer could solve the problem.

Other cities have used them in carrying fashions. Baltimore has controlled traffic automatically along individual arteries. In England, they handle separate intersections. Both systems have no relation to vehicle movements outside their immediate scope.

What Metro was looking for — and eventually came up with — was a system that would collect and co-ordinate all the traffic elements of a whole area instantaneously and give the lights the right instructions to move the traffic at the best possible pace.

A pilot project operated along 1.7 miles of busy Jarvis Street showed computer control reducing the average delay per vehicle by 11 per cent in the morning rush and 28 per cent in the evening rush.

When this is extended to completion, a spiderweb of lines will hook up all of Metro's lights with the automated traffic cop in the centre of the web. Sensors buried in the pavement along the approaches to each light will send back word of the approach of each vehicle. In a wink, the machine will put these all together and send back the appropriate instruction to each light.

For a particular light, the process goes something like this: The computer — Univac 1107 — gets the traffic information from the immediate point; checks with its memory bank on such factors as the number of lanes and whether parking is permitted in the area; takes a look at the traffic setup for all Metro; comes to the logical conclusion on whether the light should be changed; sends out the instruction and checks back to make sure it has been carried out before moving on to the next intersection.

All this takes 1-1,000 of a second. For the whole 700 lights, the process will take 7-10 of a second. This includes such refinements as sensing potential traffic jams and taking steps to avoid them. When traffic is converging on one point in a volume that spells a jam, the computer can hold back the converging traffic and open up movement ahead of the threatened area.

GAS PIPELINE

Construction of the 1,400-mile Alberta-California natural gas pipeline required 16,800 railway carloads of steel, enough for 250,000 automobiles.

Includes a Hunga-Munga

Here's a gun collection designed for use

By TED BEAUDOIN
(Record staff reporter)

COWANSVILLE — Any pesty critters in your cellar?

Try a Hunga-Munga on them.

That'll swipe them clean.

A Hunga-Munga is an African sword-knife, shaped in many different ways, and is designed for throwing.

This article isn't about a Hunga-Munga though. It's about rifles, rifles and more rifles—about 85 of them.

The Hunga-Munga is one of the first weapons one sees when one enters A. H. Hitchcock's home on Main Street in Cowansville.

It provides a backdrop for the rifles he has on the walls, and adds to his collection of swords, knives, sabres and compliments his rifle collection.

His oldest dated rifle is a Barnett Percussion Cap rifle with the 1822 date stamped on it. The collection, really begun in earnest when Mr. Hitchcock moved to Cowansville in 1951 (he had only four at that time) ranges from the early 1800's to 1942.

"The collection is not a collection of guns for show," he says, "but is merely a collection of guns that have been designed for use."

Not one of his rifles is a decorative piece, although some of them have "ingenious designs engraved on them."

The majority of the guns are obsolete, and no more ammunition is available for them. But a good portion of them can be fired, with "a bit of elbow grease and a screwdriver here and there," he adds.

It all started in 1925 when he bought his first rifle, a .22 calibre, from McFadden's Hardware in Lennoxville. "A couple of years ago, Mr. McFadden came here and told my wife he could never find a tin can around the store without a hole in it," commented Mr. Hitchcock.

This progressed to a heavier calibre weapon, a .35 Remington, purchased from Claude Turner in Sherbrooke in 1927. "When I went west to Saskatoon in '28, they told me I couldn't take it with me," he said he now wishes he had dismantled the gun and taken it with him.

When he and his brother-in-law (who "does most of the hunting for the rifles and guns for me") began collection in earnest in 1951, the only guns he had were an old Civil War Musket (belonging to his wife's great-uncle who is buried in Freighsburg); a percussion cap pistol from Ireland; a percussion cap shotgun — a fowling piece—

Maritimes hit by blizzard

HALIFAX (CP) — Wet snow was still falling in most parts of Nova Scotia early today and winds that hit 35 miles an hour in gusts during the night were whipping up large drifts across city streets and provincial highways.

Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and southern New Brunswick were still receiving heavy snowfall today as the intense storm that moved up the New England coast and swept across the Maritimes, turned its ferocity northeast toward winter-weary Newfoundland.

Nova Scotia was hardest hit by the sixth major blizzard of the winter.

The storm was predicted to let up this morning, but hopeful residents with snow shovels in hand were still watching more snow heap on top of the four to 10 inches that had mounted during the night.

Halifax motorists were churning their way to work through the wet stuff that had piled itself four inches deep by Wednesday night and was getting deeper. More than six inches had fallen at Liverpool Wednesday and the Annapolis Valley had recorded four.

from the 1820's; and a 38-55 Winchester, his father-in-law's.

Another unique aspect of the collection is that no gun cost him more than $25, and he or his brother went no farther than 25 miles from Cowansville to obtain them.

Among Mr. Hitchcock's collection is an 1873 Winchester repeater type rifle used by the Northwest Mounted Police. This gun is reputed to have played a major role in the defeat of Louis Riel and his band of halfbreeds when he tried to take over the Saskatchewan Government in 1885.

Another proud piece is the "Plains Rifle," a sleek-looking weapon which fired a .61 calibre shell.

"That brings down a buffalo at one shot," he said. A .61 shell is a little over half-an-inch thick in diameter.

Mr. Hitchcock has never had his collection evaluated.

"Remember, they're guns that were designed for use, not for show," he emphasized several times.

Mr. Hitchcock also collects stamps and coins.

A. H. Hitchcock checks over his collection.

In other legislatures: The government tabled the report on finance and municipal taxation together with draft legislation based on its recommendations will be considered together during a special session of the legislature later this year. The commission report recommended centralization of some municipal functions.

The Nova Scotia legislature prorogued Thursday, leaving eight provincial houses still in session. The Saskatchewan legislature session ended Wednesday.

Recreation group seeks incorporation of all area sports

COWANSVILLE — (Staff) — Just what is the Cowansville Recreation Inc. — Les Loisirs de Cowansville Inc.?

Les Jordan, publicity director for the English newspapers, said, "the executive of the group is selected from a wide variety of occupations. These persons all have wide experience in business, sports and organization."

The purposes of the group are mainly to "incorporate all sports in the Cowansville area under one body," said Mr. Jordan. This would cover activities in Sweetsburg, Farnham, Dunham, Farnham East and other communities.

"Letters will be written to mayors in the surrounding municipalities and they will be asked to become a part of this project and give their support to the organization."

The executive of the Cowansville Recreation Inc., was elected at a public meeting held on Jan. 13, 1964. "There is no age group in this executive, and that is one of the reasons why the project co-ordinated recreational activities is working smoothly," said Mr. Jordan.

Mr. Jordan added that anyone attending an executive meeting would think that he or she was in a League of Nations meeting. "Everything is conducted on a bilingual level," he stated. "The executive minutes are read in French and the sports committee minutes are read in English, and everyone present understands both languages."

Rousseau says "We make a point of listening carefully to our customer's problems. This, we find a great help in getting a closer understanding of the individual himself. No two people are alike and we have found that in order to instill confidence we must get as close to our customer as possible. If you've made a prospect feel at home you can be almost certain of a sale and further of his repeat business. As one example, we have one family now driving six BMC cars."

News flashes from around the world

MONTREAL (CP) — Three men charged with the slaying of underworld figure Keith (Rocky) Pearson were described Wednesday as "worried and tired" when the victim disappeared in June, 1961.

"I heard them say that they had gone to Thorford Mines to look for Rocky when he didn't show up at the office," realtor John Jasco, 38, testified at the capital murder trial of Rosaire Daoust, 34, Armand Larose, 36, and Raymond Caza, 36.

The witness also added that he believed the two accused to be on good terms with Pearson.

ter maintained, Ruby "tried to disengage" Belli after a disagreement over tactics used by the lawyer. Belli "bitterly opposed and forced himself" on Ruby and "would not consent at that time to any local adequate, competent counsel," the letter said.

Ruby pleaded not guilty of shooting Oswald by virtue of insanity. In the month-long trial, Belli tried to prove that the balding night club operator was a victim of a form of epilepsy and not in control of himself Nov. 24 when he lunged forward and shot the manacled Oswald in the Dallas police jail basement.

Ruby himself signed the two-page letter. Copies were sent to the two other defence lawyers, Joe Tonahill of Jasper, Tex., and Phil Burleson of Dallas, but it was not immediately known how their status was affected.

Hyman Ruby said Belli "never consulted us about anything regarding the case so he certainly wouldn't consult us before he blasted all those people Saturday afternoon. . . I had the feeling he was evading the whole family."

DETAILS DISAGREEMENTS — The letter outlined the family's disagreement with Belli's "constant bitter criticism of Dallas and the people of Texas" that it contended were aimed at "promoting only Belli's personal fame and fortune."

"We do not know what we will do for further counsel. We have no choice at this time. But God willing, we will get help somehow. We will pray for help, and hope that Mr. Belli will do likewise."

The family said it has a note Belli wrote Ruby, saying the lawyer's defence would not cost anything.

Hyman Ruby, however, said "he has put all of us deeply in debt. . . there was no communication between Belli and the Ruby family except when he wanted to discuss finances and his expenses—which were considerable."

The family also said Jack Ruby told Belli he wanted "no part" of a movie or a book or anything for profit.

They quoted Belli as telling the defendant, "I can sign my own contract — I don't need you."

The convicted slayer gave permission to a California author to write a newspaper serial based on his life up to the time of the trial. The $24,000 it produced for Ruby helped finance the trial, a relative said.

To complete the local picture, a union leader attributed the source of the bi-ethnic ills in Quebec to the fact that "the English own and the French work."

He said that this led to hatred as well as to a "psychological feeling of inferiority."

He added that, for the French, the English language was an economic necessity while for the English, learning French was a luxury.

"So we are faced with one choice," interrupted a student. "Separation or assimilation?"

Texas on the day Jack Ruby was sentenced to death.

The women were identified as Christine Burke, 34, and Norma June McGriff, 38, both of Nashville.

The women are charged with violating a federal extortion statute. If convicted they could receive as much as five years in prison and $1,000 fine.

aires hired by Mr. Meredith took up 24-hour duty at the hall.

Mr. Meredith conferred briefly with Rod Heiney, Seafarers' local vice-president. Mr. Heiney had no comment following the meeting.

Mr. Meredith denied suggestions by seamen that Mr. Heiney had been "muzzled" or that his dismissal was imminent. He said he understood Mr. Heiney would soon be invited to go to Montreal to meet Mr. Turner.

Seaman Frank Benson sent a protest wire to Mr. Justice Dryer. He said the wire was signed by 150 of his mates and read: "We protest the arrogant overbearing action in dismissing our president without consulting the membership. We demand an explanation of this vicious act."

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer, chairman of the trusteeship, read a short statement at a press conference but refused to answer questions on the grounds that the matters involved were "too complicated to be answered in a few words," which could be open to misinterpretation.

Banks' dismissal followed "long consideration of the affairs and interests of the SIU of Canada and the interests of the maritime industry and country as a whole."

Mr. Justice Dryer had said in earlier statements that he preferred union members themselves to remove union leaders as long as trustee directives were obeyed. However, recently he expanded this to include removal from office in the national interest.

"It is part of a long-term program designed to achieve the objectives set out in the legislation" to bring labor peace to the Great Lakes.

"We concluded that we could not achieve that objective without taking this step."

The step was made in the interest of the SIU and its rank and file, Mr. Justice Dryer said, and was designed to strengthen the union, not weaken it.

Mr. Millard read another statement that the long-range program of the trustees called for readmission of the SIU into the Canadian Labor Congress "and for cementing of international affiliations of the union."

"No decision has been reached as to further dismissals but a meeting of SIU officers will be scheduled at the earliest opportunity."

For Banks, it marked the apparent end to 15 years of being "the big boss" in Canadian shipping.

He came to Canada from the United States in 1949 at the best of the old trades and labor congress and several shipping companies.

At the time, the Canadian waterfront was under control of an openly Communist-inspired labor body, the Canadian Seamen's Union. There were 56 strikes and work stoppages before Banks appeared.

Banks began building his empire just a few short months later when the CSU was smashed after a series of shootings and club-swinging incidents.

The report of Mr. Justice T. G. Norris last summer on Great Lakes shipping said that the 240-pound Banks was "a puffy, cruel, dishonest, greedy, power-hungry, contemptuous of the law" and called for his ouster.

Mr. Justice Norris said Great Lakes labor strife was "part of an irresponsible campaign to maintain one rapacious and violent man, Banks, in power as a dictator."

He also said Banks "is of the stuff of the Capones and the Hoffas of whom the dictators throughout history, from the earliest times to the totalitarians Hitler and Stalin, are prototypes."

Indoor Shooting program is held at Derby Line

DERBY LINE — Paul Bedard, Pearce Wheeler, Maurice Labor, George Smith and Francis Bullis, all qualified N.R.A.
Instructors, and members of the Derby Fish and Game Club, have this winter conducted an Indoor Shooting program in the Village hall basement.

This course is being attended by 50 juniors, boys and girls, and 60 men and women. When the 10 weeks course is completed, each will have shot 300 rounds of ammunition. Several who have never shot before have increased their score from 140 up to 251 out of a possible
300 perfect, some of the men have a score of 277.8, 279, 278.1.
The lowest mark is 118 up to 234 in the Juniors.

The course is not competitive and no awards are presented, these men during the past few years have given their time and help to a large number of youngsters in the northern section of the state, under the sponsorship of the Derby Fish and Game Club. Instructions have been given in the Village hall and on the club firing range at Derby. All of the youngsters have been awarded N.R.A. merit badges and certificates, after completing their exams.

The winter course has been given for the Juniors to keep in practice, it was also offered to adults for recreation purposes. The instructors were pleased that people who have never fired a gun have joined with the others, who also wish to keep in practice.

Perhaps the most gratifying outcome of this course is that it is creating a family interest in fire arms safety.

Emphasis of the instructors is to be ever on guard when around fire arms, to treat a gun as one would a rattlesnake for many accidents happen from the unloaded, gun in which a bullet has been left.

Courses in hunting and fire arm safety have been given all over the state. Perhaps the most rewarding was in 1963 when no fatalities were reported during the hunting season. The instructors hope that by continuous courses, such as the one in Derby Line, the time will come when no accident happens during the hunting season.

The Derby Fish and Game Club pays a small membership fee in his N.R.A. the instructors belong to the Department of Civilian Marksmen. The only requirement and cost to the public is membership in the Club. The instructors have a gun allotment from the govern-

New discount centre, 935 King Street East, going strong

The discount centre is almost a commercial revolution in Sherbrooke and the rest of the province.

It has developed on the principle of buying bankruptcy stock from other stores across the province, the discount centre can sell cheaper than the manufacturer even. While other stores must pay the manufacturer and raise prices to make a profit, the discount centre buys the complete bankruptcy stock of a store and cuts prices from 40 to 50 per cent.
This price is usually lower than that the manufacturer can offer.

At the discount centre, discounts are offered to everybody.
And prices are really so low that they make competition impossible. The discount centre doesn't say one should compare the prices of its competitors to find the prices it has, but that one should divide them.

However, the quality of the merchandise is in no way inferior because of its price reductions. The discount centre sells well known brand names.

Robert Fabi, owner of the discount centre said recently, "It is not the policy of the centre to present bargains that are only apparent. We don't raise the original price to make our price seem lower. Our buying costs are less and so we can reduce the selling price by 40 to 50 per cent from the store where it is sold as bankruptcy stock. We prefer to reduce the profit on each article and sell the stock

Buckingham High wins QAPSA championship while Chambly County cops intermediate title

The finals of the hockey league sponsored by the Quebec Association of Protestant School Administrators were played at Bishop's University on Saturday, March 14.

The intermediate game, between Chambly County High School and Granby High School, was an exciting, close tussle, nearly half an hour of overtime play. Chambly County edged Granby 5-4 to win the intermediate trophy with a score of 5-4.

All five goals were scored for Chambly County by Bruce Burrows, assisted on four by Doug Clarke. Roger Taylor got two assists. George Windsor scored two goals for Granby, and Edmund Patenaude and Bert Jay Clifford scored one each. Assists were divided among

The senior game, between St. John's High School and Buckingham High School resulted in a victory for Buckingham with a score of 5-2. Goals were scored for Buckingham by Bob Aube, who accounted for three, and John Ross who scored twice. Bob Aube and Mike Bigelow had two assists each and Bert Aube, Reg de Chamilland, Marcel Paquette, and Dave Ross MacFarlane were the scorers had one each.

Doug Galbraith and Doug Burrows, assisted on four by Doug Clarke, Roger Taylor got two assists. George Windsor scored two goals for Granby, and Edmund Patenaude and Bert Jay Clifford scored one each. Assists were divided among

Canada's top skiers taking special instruction at Mont Orford under Adrien Duvillard for this week

MAGOG — (Special) — Thirty of Canada's most promising amateur ski racers are spending this week at the Mt. Orford Ski Centre, taking instruction from French racing star and 1963 world pro champion, Adrien Duvillard.

Sponsored by the Canadian Amateur Association, the six-day course which started Monday morning will terminate Saturday afternoon, and take in full 9 till 5 days as well as evening pictures. The students are being taught racing techniques, and the methods recommended for teaching other amateur racers.

Mr. Duvillard and his class are staying at the Lantern Inn, where the famous film on skiing by Jim Farnsworth will be shown publicly Thursday evening.

Those in the class include: Al Mitchell of the Maritimes; four Ontario stars; Gerry Korschetz, Lynn Cullis, Hans Weiland and Pierre Richer, four from Quebec City; Ernie Kolt, ennob, Marc Morency, Pierre Lortie and formerly from France, Henri Meyronnet, two Laurentian skiers; Don Sturges and John Hanna, and two Eastern Townships skiers; Rejean Turgeon of Thetford Mines and Jacques Lavender of Orford.

Referring to the special school Andre Noel, manager of the Orford centre, said it was being run on the highest proficiency basis.

NHL Big Seven

Andy Bathgate's 55th assist of the National Hockey League season was the only ripple of movement among the top scorers provided by Wednesday night's Toronto-Montreal game.

That left Toronto's Bathgate one shy of his own league record for a right-winger—he piled that one up with New York in 1961-62—and three short of the all-encompassing seasonal mark set by Montreal's Jean Beliveau in 1960-61.

The point gave Bathgate 74 for the season, good for fourth spot among the leading point collectors.

THE SKI WHIRL

By

LUCILE WHEELER VAUGHAN

Still fresh in the minds of many competitors and spectators is the Junior Canadian Championships plus a busy winter of ski racing.

Around this time of year, parents must begin to wonder if the skier in the family is missing too much school, and if a sport is worth it. This is a difficult situation for families. I know it was for mine.

I believe that both school and participation in an active sport can be accomplished. If an athlete thinks he has the determination to reach the top in a sport, then he can better prove this desire by also wanting to complete his education.

A certain amount of physical education is necessary for everyone. Since retiring from active ski competition, I have found that by exercising regularly, I have more energy, speed and enthusiasm for any activity I attempt. This includes caring for youngsters and housework.

Cassius Clay is waiting for reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Cassius Clay's merger with the U.S. Army still is in the indefinite stage, according to both the heavyweight champion and the nation's military establishment.

Reports that Clay had flunked a rematch with the mental portion of his draft examination were scotched Wednesday, here and at the Pentagon.

At his Harlem hotel, Clay said he had "not heard the results" of the tests taken last Friday in his hometown, Louisville. The army announced in Washington that "the results have not been disclosed."

The champion's draft board in Louisville confirmed it had not received Clay's papers and did not know his status. "Right now I'm thinking about business, and my next fight," said Clay, who won the heavyweight title from Sonny Liston in an upset at Miami Beach Feb. 25.

Asked about a rematch with Liston, Clay asked: "Is he out of jail yet? He ought to be a clean liver like me. I'm never in trouble. I live in the midst of hell and I'm not tempted."

Liston faces court action in Denver on several charges, including carrying a gun. "I'm going to negotiate with Patterson for a fight with everything going to charity—cancer. That way it'll be for something worth while, and the government won't get it all."

My marks were always better during the skiing season. Of course my parents and the school I attended made it clear that my marks had to be up if I wanted to take the time to race. Probably I concentrated harder in order to have the time off.

When I returned from my first Olympic Games in Oslo, Norway, in 1952, I noticed that several of my scholastic marks went up. Perhaps due to the many new and exciting experiences, and having had to make most of my own decisions, I was more able to think and analyze for myself.

Several Canadian provinces took part in these Canadian Junior Championships, held at Camp Fortune near Ottawa. East met West, province met province, and individual met individual. For many it was a first trip across Canada. Travel would give these juniors a better knowledge of their country.

During the week of the Championships, a full schedule was organized for the skiers, such as visiting Parliament, and learning about the Capital of Canada.

Now comes the question. Where does a competitor go from the Junior Championships? Again this depends upon ability and desire. Most would like to continue the sport of ski racing for as long as possible. There are several universities which include skiing and ski competition. For those who wish to make a National Team and compete in The Olympics and World Ski Championships, careful planning is necessary.

The transition from Junior to Senior ski racing is often difficult. To compete directly in Europe from having only skied in junior competition or around your own area is almost an impossible transition. This step would be a great deal easier if the racer would compete in the major competitions throughout Canada and the United States. To date the strongest and most intense competition still remains in Europe.

Once a skier has made the top ten in international skiing, then I think if he wants to win a medal it is necessary to train and compete in Europe.

As skiing becomes stronger on this continent, the competition will also become more intense, and then our National Ski Teams will be able to do most of their training right here.

Armstrong tallies equalizer for Leafs, sawoff stifles Montreal's bid to tie Hawks, Harper injured

Don McKenney's light approach to his work when the other guy has the puck has earmarked him as something less than a two-way performer.

It's said that he should put a lot more oomph into the defensive aspects of playing in the National Hockey League.

But on the attack McKenney is as slick as the best of them. And he's made this much evident since joining the goal-starved Toronto Maple Leafs less than a month ago as part of the Andy Bathgate deal with New York.

His ninth goal in 13 games with Toronto helped the Maple Leafs salvage a 2-2 tie with the Canadiens Wednesday night at Montreal in the schedule's only game before 14,177 fans.

The sawoff stifled Montreal's bid to regain a share of the league lead with Chicago Black Hawks. But the Canadiens still have two games to play to Chicago's one.

LEAFS STRUGGLE BACK — Second-period goals by the 29-year-old McKenney and team captain George Armstrong pulled Toronto even after Montreal grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first 20 minutes on goals by Billy Hicke and Claude Provost.

Gilles Tremblay, Montreal's 22-goal left-winger, was struck by Bathgate—and Armstrong's slapshot in the second period and left the game. It was feared he would be lost to the team for the weekend stretch run.

Rookie defenceman Terry Harper was also hurt but it didn't incapacitate him. He took three stitches over his right eye after Eddie Shack gave him a going over along the boards and later he was hit on the left ankle by the puck and that raised a welt.

It had to happen and in the third period Shack and Harper finally tangled. They each drew five-minute majors for fighting. McKenney's goal — a power-play effort—meant that in 13 Chicago games with Glenn Hall has yielded 166 with one more to play.

One game is on tap tonight, the Rangers meeting the Red Wings in Detroit.

Goalie Johnny Bower of the Maple Leafs made 31 stops to 23 for Montreal's Charlie Hodge. But the two goals charged against each were costly in the Vezina Trophy competition.

The Leafs have allowed 168 goals and Montreal 165 now while two games to go each while Chicago with Glenn Hall has yielded 166 with one more to play.

One game is on tap tonight, the Rangers meeting the Red Wings in Detroit.

Dodgers' hurling staff more than holding their own, big-four gives up one run, Pepitone hits homer

The Dodgers still have pitching, the Giants still have hitting, and Dick Stuart still has tantrums.

Over a two-game stretch, the big four of the Los Angeles mound staff has given up just one run as the Dodgers followed up a four-inning shutout performance by Sandy Koufax against New York Mets the day before by throttling Baltimore Orioles 3-1 Wednesday with Don Drysdale, Johnny Podres and Ron Perranoski doing the honors.

The San Francisco pitchers could have stayed home as the Giants got the best of a slugfest with Cleveland, belting the Indians for 23 hits in a 15-13 victory.

And the temperamental Stuart was labelled "selfish" by Boston manager Johnny Pesky when he twice failed to run out ground balls and ignored a coach's signal to score from second base in protest against being forced to play in a game between the B squads of the Red Sox and San Francisco. The Red Sox lost 3-1.

"That's as good as I'm going to be in that kind of game," was Stuart's angry comment. "I thought I was through with those games 10 years ago."

SCHEDULES TALK — Pesky said he would talk to Stuart about it in the morning. "And if he and I don't see things the right way, then (General Manager) Mike Higgins will talk to him."

Pesky said he thought Stuart and the other Boston regulars would appreciate playing in the B game in the morning and having the afternoon off with their families while the rookies faced Chicago Cubs.

Apparently the big first baseman, who led the American League in runs batted in last season, had second thoughts later.

Will TAKE ORDERS — "I am an employee of the Red Sox and I am paid by them," he said. "I will do anything I'm told to do. I didn't mean to cause any trouble. I'm sorry it happened."

Meanwhile the Boston rookies lost to the Cubs 10-9 on Mack Kykendall's two-run single with the bases loaded in the ninth. A grand-slam homer by Joe Pepitone was the big blow as New York Yankees drubbed Kansas City Athletics 9-4. Knuckleballer Hoyt Wilhelm pitched three perfect innings to protect a 3-2 margin by Chicago White Sox over Washington Senators.

Minnesota's leaky defence cost Camilo Pascual seven unearned runs as the Twins bowed 7-4 to Milwaukee Braves and Philadelphia Phillies committed five errors in losing 4-1 to New York Mets in 11 innings.

TIGERS HOT — Detroit Tigers bombed St. Louis 13-4 for the Cardinals' first loss in five exhibition games and Houston Colts hammered Cincinnati Reds 9-2, picking on Joey Jay for six runs in the seventh inning.

Drysdale and Podres gave matching one-hit performances in their four-inning stints for the Dodgers before Perranoski yielded the Orioles their only run in the ninth. Tommy Davis hit a bases-empty home run for the winners.

The Giants hit nothing out of the park against the Indians, who got homers from Fred Whitfield, Mike de la Hoz and Wally Post. But Willie Mays, Willie McCovey and Orlando Cepeda all had a perfect day at the plate, each in three appearances, and rookie Jesus Alou hit a pair of triples. McCovey and Cepeda each drove in four runs.

IT'S IN — The bulge at the back of the net indicates Montreal's Claude Provost, not close enough to be caught by the camera in this shot, scored on his drive at the Toronto net in National Hockey League play at Montreal. The Maple Leafs in the picture are goalie Johnny Bower, Frank Mahovlich (27), Carl Brewer (2), and the helmeted Red Kelly.

Richmond-Danville area Forums begin organizing for A.R.D.A.

RICHMOND — The Farm Forums of the Richmond and Danville areas have begun organizing to participate in the projects of the A.R.D.A. At a large Farm Forum meeting held in the St. Francis High School, a committee was chosen to prepare a proposed plan for the executive.

The business meeting was held after members had heard an interesting talk on A.R.D.A. by Rudy Dallenbach, of Knowlton. Mr. Dallenbach was introduced by Thomas Coddington.

The speaker pointed out that experience in participating in Farm Forum work is most helpful to groups wishing to join the A.R.D.A. plan. The plan may be said to have four general aims: To promote ideas of the proper conservation of water and the efficient use of resources depending on water; to study the best uses and alternate uses of land; to study rural development in its various phases; to make research in various creative projects.

Dealing briefly with the history of Farm Forums, the speaker referred to the first Farm Forum at East Farnham, organized in 1939 by Mr. Sim. Two of the earliest Forum projects were to lead a campaign to have the cattle disease, brucellosis, brought under better control and to get scholarships instituted for young people wishing to go to MacDonald College.

MOVEMENT STARTED

In 1956, a movement was started in the Eastern Townships, which might be called a predecessor of A.R.D.A. It was called Building for Tomorrow. About 1960, the Forums began promoting radio broadcasts on Farm Management and Farm Bookkeeping, and about that time the act establishing the A.R.D.A. plan was passed in Ottawa.

Promptly following up this new development, dynamic organizers in Brome County began conferring and planning with the Ottawa and Quebec governments. They set to work with much zeal to build up local enthusiasm both in common citizens and public officials.

The C.B.C. was persuaded to send in photographers and program planners to publicize the situation in Brome that seemed to make the A.R.D.A. plan so necessary. When the photographs were put on public screens, the Brome people complained that the C.B.C. photographers did not need to have been quite so zealous in choosing bad-looking views.

After more conferences and diligent studies a general plan of survey was prepared. In a broad general way, the plan might be comprised in a study of the following factors related to the rural problems: Agricultural conditions in the county; population figures and trends, including incoming and outgoing; occupations; forests, tourists, water problems, including obstruction of streams as well as pollutions, roads.

Valuation rolls were scrutinized and passing on to much more ambitious and much more modern ways of making surveys, aerial photographs of the countryside were taken. From these, skilled cartographers of the Quebec Provincial Government prepared a master map, made up of a basic physical geographical map, on which transparent plastic maps, each bearing specific data, might be superimposed at will. It seems one plastic map would bear complete data on forest, another might delineate good farm land, another might delineate the marginal land.

Aided by all this, dedicated planners working on the project studied ways to see that good farm land be kept in farms, that some good farm land now abused by being completely neglected, be returned to good uses by a special plan of taxation, putting pressure on owners of good land, who had let it return to wilderness.

A Co-operative Land Bank was planned to put this all under a definitely organized system. A zoning-by-law was prepared, which included town planning, with an area around the towns to allow for town growth, a zone of good land surrounding the greater town zone to be designated for active farming, and a outer zone referring more especially to marginal uplands to be considered as forest area under planned reforestation.

GOVERNMENTS ASSIST

A short discussion period followed the address. In reply to one query as to how all this ambitious project was financed, it was brought out that much of the original basic work of getting the whole thing going was done voluntarily or was contributed by local institutions, such as municipal and county councils. Both the Ottawa and Provincial governments assisted greatly after the local bodies got the project rolling. The local leadership strives to keep it non-political.

Visitors at the meeting, who came from Brome County, professed information that much of the success of the project to date has been due to the foresight and tireless diligence of the local organizer.

The Farm Forum ladies served refreshments after the business meeting.

BEAUMONT SPORT DELUXE COUPE

Owner's View

How does an owner see his new Acadian Beaumont? With great pride! For Beaumont is '64's most exciting new car with a sparkling personality all its own. Look at the roofline and the lilt of the rear fender curve. Sheer poetry in steel! Of course, when you're enjoying Beaumont's V8 or 6-cylinder performance, everyone else will be enjoying its good looks. If you go in for off-beat views, look under a Beaumont—that's where you'll see the Full Coil suspension that provides a smooth, cushioned ride. Owners point out that's the comfort view. If you go in for panoramics, take a tour around a Beaumont—it won't take long because Beaumont is trimmer than the big cars. Or, if you like conducted tours, give your own. Take the whole family. Show them Beaumont's interior. They'll love the room. And they'll compliment you on your choice of fabrics. But if you're like most Beaumont owners, you'll keep one special view for your own. That's the most satisfying one. The one behind the wheel. Enjoy it at your Acadian-Pontiac dealer's today.

STANSTEAD — Mrs. Anna Gove, a spry person of 91 years of age. The former Anna Louise Hill, daughter of the Cote Herbert Hill and Julia Hill, of Stanstead is the only living member of the first class of nurses to graduate from the Los Angeles County General Hospital, California.

Mrs. Gove now makes her home at the Huntington Drive Convalescent Home in Arcadia, Calif. She was a resident for 58 years of Pasadena, Calif. Mrs. Gove often recalls memories of her nursing career. Back in 1897 the hospital from which she graduated was a two story frame structure that accommodated only 200 patients and the entire graduating class consisted of eight nurses. Most of the women working in the hospitals were what we today call student nurses; they worked a 12 hour shift, seven days a week and received $5 a week pay.

Mrs. Gove left here as a young girl. Her father, who is credited with having done much to aid the growth of the San Fernando Valley, was an avid agriculturalist. He and his brother studied soil and climatic conditions and determined that the valley was best suited for growing olive trees. They planted the first olive trees in that section, several of which are still living and being used in the extensive landscaping program currently being undertaken in the development of the new Busch Gardens of the Valley.

Anna Louise Hill was married in 1906 to John Stevens Gove. The couple had an interesting life; they traveled considerably and the most exciting event of their travels occurred in 1936, when Mrs. Gove was invited to attend the coronation of King George VI of England.

Mrs. Gove reads the newspapers without the aid of glasses, enjoys television, spends hours knitting and is a 50 year member of Pasadena Shakespeare Club. She has a son, a grandson and a great-grandson, who live near her.
