Weary after 26-hour flight

First Canadians arrive in Vietnam as...

SAIGON (CP) — The first contingent of Canadian peace observers, tired after a 26-hour flight from Montreal but still enthusiastic, arrived in this South Vietnamese capital today.

The 130 soldiers and 15 civil servants immediately came up against South Vietnamese red tape that delayed their departure from the airport for three hours.

"If this peacekeeping arrangement doesn't work, it won't be because of us," said Col. D.G. Loomis of Montreal, third in command of the military contingent. They are here to serve on the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) along with similar contingents from Poland, Hungary and Indonesia. The Canadian Forces Boeing 707 arrived at 2:30 a.m. Saigon time.

Ambassador Michel Gauvin, 55, the over-all leader of the trim-looking Canadian group, said the signing of the peace agreement is a hopeful sign, but the real test of whether the main parties to the Vietnam war want peace will come in the next week or so.

"We'll just have to wait and see," he told the eight news media representatives during the long flight, which included brief stops in Anchorage, Alaska and Tokyo.

Gauvin, ambassador to Greece who has been assigned temporarily to head the Canadian observer group, went into a get-acquainted session this morning in a red-shingled faded-yellow building where an earlier commission started two decades ago had tried unsuccessfully to keep the Vietnam peace.

"We hope to have teams out in the field within a week," Gauvin told reporters as the session began.

The 22 delegates from Canada, Hungary, Poland and Indonesia ranged themselves at a long table under rotating ceiling fans in the building where the old International Control Commission of India, Canada and Poland had once labored.

"We have no agenda," Ambassador Bogdan Wasilewski of Poland said. "We will take things as they come."

The leaders of the military contingents of the four countries were meeting at the same time to work out supervisory and reporting duties. The Canadian military contingent is headed by Maj-Gen. Duncan McAlpine of Montreal.

QUICK ACTION SOUGHT

Initial plans called for supervisory forces to be established within 48 hours of the ceasefire in seven regions of Vietnam—in Hue, Da Nang, Pleiku, Phan Thiet, Bien Hoa, My Tho and Can Tho. Five members of each participating supervisory force will make up the regional headquarters, with two-man teams at ports of entry and border points.

There will be 26-member delegations from each participating force at the main headquarters in Saigon.

Earlier, as he left the Canadian plane, Gauvin said some fighting extended into the ceasefire period had been inevitable. Fighting was still going on in South Vietnam 24 hours after the ceasefire had been proclaimed.

He is regarded as one of Canada's top troubleshooters after working as Canadian charge d'affaires in The Congo and the Dominican Republic.

ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN — The brakes on a parked truck failed Friday causing over $500 damage to this car Friday morning. The car was owned by Jean Louis Bilodeau of 1050

Champlain street in Sherbrooke. The truck, the property of Provost Cartage from Ville d'Anjou, received $100-200 damage. Nobody was in either vehicle when the crash occurred.

Oppose Regulation 6

Sherbrooke cabbies urge exemption

By CROSBIE COTTON
Record Reporter

SHERBROOKE — City of Sherbrooke taxi operators have asked to be exempted from any taxi legislation for a minimum period of four years.

In a brief presented to the Parliamentary Commission on Transportation the 68 Sherbrooke taxi owners argue that the organization of the taxi industry in the city is already more advanced than in other areas and that the service is adequate for the population it serves.

Throughout the province, and especially in Montreal, taxi owners have voiced opposition to Regulation 6 proposed in new taxi legislation. The regulation would revamp the taxi industry in the province.

Sherbrooke Radio Taxi Inc., the only taxi firm in the city grouping all drivers, submitted the brief after studying Regulation 6.

The government decided to prepare legislation to control the taxi industry in an effort to cut down the number of taxi companies in the province, to guarantee a reasonable standard of living for the taxi drivers, to improve the quality of service and to add safety precautions to the industry.

ONE ADMINISTRATION

Sherbrooke Radio Taxi points out that taxi operators in the city have worked for 17 years to bring all the taxis in the city under the control of a single administration. In 1955 the taxi associations were amalgamated into two different companies and, in the summer of 1970, the two companies joined forces.

The company points out that there are 75 taxis in the city and that with a ratio of one taxi to every 1,200 residents service is adequate, if not excellent.

In addition no individual is allowed to possess more than two taxi permits. As it now stands only seven of the 68 taxi operators have two cars. As a further safeguard, the company says in its brief, an individual has to have operated one taxi for three years before he can apply for another permit.

On the organizational level, Sherbrooke Radio Taxi is well advanced. With two years' experience and with the drivers earning a respectable living, the company contends that it is not in the predicament of most taxi companies and should be exempt from legislation.

Once the four-year exemption is over the company would have to adapt to the legislation. However, the owners point out that it will take at least four years before the other taxi companies in the province catch up to Sherbrooke on an organizational level.

OPPOSE CLAUSES

The brief also takes issue with many of the clauses included in Regulation 6. The draft legislation recommends that all taxis be of the same color — black. Sherbrooke Taxi drivers, however, would like to see this clause changed. The owners feel that a uniform color would be too expensive and that owners would have problems buying and selling cars. They point out that in 1964, the Blue Veteran Taxi company in Sherbrooke abandoned a policy of having uniform-colored cars because the practice proved too costly.

Regulation 6 also asserts that taxi drivers must get out of their cars to open the door for their customers. In the brief, the Sherbrooke taxi owners say this service should only be extended to the handicapped, the aged and to persons with children or packages.

The brief argues that it takes too much time and exposes the driver, who must get out of the car on the traffic side, to possible injury.

The regulation, if accepted, would force the taxi driver to be able to change a $20 bill at any time. The city of Sherbrooke already has a municipal regulation which makes it mandatory for taxi and bus drivers to be able to change a $20 bill.

$10 ENOUGH

Sherbrooke taxi drivers feel that change for a $20 bill needlessly increases the possibility of robbery. They therefore recommend that change for a $10 bill would be adequate.

They recommend that companies should only have to be incorporated if five or more taxis are operated and, that an individual should have the right to buy or sell taxi permits or give them to his or her family.

The regulation says the drivers must be guaranteed a minimum wage and just working conditions. The Sherbrooke drivers point out that the best way to operate the taxi industry is on a commission basis.

At present the drivers are paid for 40 per cent of their trips. A decrease in the quality of service would result if the drivers worked on an hourly base.

The drivers do not believe that disk-brakes should be obligatory. Nor do they believe that recapped tires should be banned. Regulation 6 bans recapped tires and makes disk-brakes mandatory.

...Vietnam names 555 prisoners...

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defence department said Sunday that the Communist side has listed only 555 living United States servicemen as prisoners in North and South Vietnam and another 55 who died in captivity. The Pentagon said no clues to the fate of more than 1,300 Americans missing in action were provided.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedheim said the two lists of the living and dead covered men imprisoned in North and South Vietnam but failed to identify any U.S. troops known captive in Laos.

He said the U.S. expects to receive shortly another list covering the 317 Americans who previously were listed as either captured or missing in Laos.

Before the ceasefire Saturday, the Pentagon had said it knew of 591 prisoners in Communist camps in Vietnam, but expected that some were dead. In Laos, 317 were considered either captured or missing.

All American prisoners of war are to be released in the next 60 days, Hanoi gave the U.S. the prisoner list in connection with the signing of the ceasefire agreement Saturday.

The National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia said it learned also that 22 civilian prisoners were on Hanoi's list. The group said 23 prisoners, including three not previously reported, have died in North Vietnamese camps.

TO STUDY EACH CASE

Those not on Hanoi's list are still considered missing in action until boards of inquiry meet to consider each case and possibly declare the men presumed dead.

Before that, U.S. officials will try to learn more about the missing from Hanoi and will conduct searches in Southeast Asia.

It may be years before the fate of some is known, but a number are expected to be flyers who crashed in jungles or prisoners who died on the way to prison camps.

Precise figures had been delayed earlier as the Pentagon released names only after notifying the next of kin.

Congressman G. V. Montgomery (Dem. Miss.) said "I think we are going to have to face the blunt truth" that only a small number of the 1,334 Americans listed as missing will show up as captured.

"I don't see any extra 100 or 200 Americans coming out as captured who have been classified as missing," said Montgomery, a member of the armed services committee of the House of Representatives.

The congressman spoke with defence department officials at the Pentagon.

While he had been unable to get a firm figure on the number of names on the lists, Montgomery estimated the total would be only slightly higher than the 591 listed by the Pentagon as captured in Southeast Asia.

...Spelling agony for some, joy for others

NEW YORK (CP) — The waiting was over Sunday for hundreds of relatives of United States servicemen missing in Indochina. For some the ordeal ended in joy; for others, despair.

And for many Americans, there was continued uncertainty and the chance to cling to hope.

Mrs. Arthur Newell of Pekin, Ill., was one of the lucky ones. She learned that her son, Stanley, an army staff sergeant missing since July 12, 1967, was on the prisoner-of-war list released by Hanoi and will be coming home.

"We're happier than we could ever say," she commented.

Others learned that their relatives either had died in captivity or were not on the prisoner list and remained unaccounted for.

Mrs. Donald Cook of Burlington, Vt., believed her husband, a marine corps major who was captured in South Vietnam in December, 1964, was a prisoner. She received a letter from him, smuggled out by a released prisoner in February, 1967. A Viet Cong defector reported seeing Cook in October, 1970.

On Saturday, however, she learned that her husband had died in a prison camp in August, 1967.

"That's it. It's all over now," she said. Mary Ray of Woonsocket, R.I., also was informed by a Pentagon representative that her son, S.Sgt. James R. Ray, had died in captivity. Ray had been missing since March 18, 1968.

Some kept hoping.

'LONGEST DAY'

"Yesterday was the longest day in my life," said Lou Page of San Jose, Calif., who was told Saturday that her husband, air force Maj. Gordon Page, was not on the prisoner roster. He had been missing since March 7, 1966.

"I was numb," she said. "I still am. But you just don't give up after seven years of waiting."

"As long as you don't know, you can't help but hope," said Joyce Treece of Fitzgerald, Ga., whose husband, James, an air force major, was shot down over South Vietnam on Oct. 7, 1966.

DEMOLITION STARTED — Work to demolish the ruins of the New Sherbrooke Hotel has started. Saturday a miniature auction was held and much of the burned furniture was sold. Men have already started to tear the inside of the hotel apart.

Celebrates 5th birthday

STANSTEAD — January 12 was an exciting day for Master Jody West. It was the day he had reached the ripe old age of five years.

His mom, Mrs. Steve West, to mark the occasion was hostess for a supper party. The guests were his nursery school and play mates to include Kevin and Lori Reynolds, Peter and Andrew Paige, Jane Bullock, Kenzie Trevail, Jeffrey LePitre, Peggy Alger. Two other guests, Claire Alger and Scott Smith were unable to attend due to illness.

The youngsters had a happy time playing games. Jody was the recipient of several lovely gifts from the guests, and from relatives all of which pleased him very much.

The supper served by Mrs. West included the traditional birthday cake. This was made and decorated by Mrs. West having a snowmobile in the center of snowcovered land (square cake) where there were trees, a rail fence, a chalet and so forth. Jody loves to go snowmobiling with his dad and mom. The cake was cut and served with ice cream. All the youngsters were given favors.

After supper musical records were played and the children had lots of fun dancing. It was undoubtedly a party which Jody will in his adult years remember as one of the highlights of his childhood days.

Congress results

By ROBERT HAMILTON

A report in capsule from this week on the results of the international senior citizens congress which met in Strasbourg, France toward the end of 1972.

First, our president of the NP & SC Federation Mr. J. L. Lerette of Toronto has been appointed vice president representing Canada in this powerful international association which has a strong representation of Pensioner and senior citizens Associations from all over the world, so we have every right to be proud of the fact that we in Canada have a man of Mr. Lerette's stature to represent us in the world body.

In most of the presentations put to the congress by the various delegates there was one recurring theme. The delegate from Britain stressed that older people should be interested in the quality rather than the length of life. The goal should be for all senior citizens to have full and satisfactory conditions during their retirement years.

To this end, public funds should be available to increase housing units, rent controls should be applied to help in maintaining a steady standard of housing costs and to prevent the exploitation of older people by landlords. Municipal and educational taxes must be lowered to enable the pensioner to live in the quiet dignified way for which he made plans during the years of activity while earning his daily bread.

Curiously enough, the many delegates in attendance representing many countries had almost similar themes to report. All were unanimous on one point, the Pensioners of the world are all of the same opinion, that something has to be done by governments to ensure much better conditions for the older group.

It was agreed there is no misery at present among senior citizens but there is certainly some strain and anxiety among many in their efforts to cope with ever increasing living costs. The various bodies represented indicated they have no intention of waiting. The number of old people is increasing continuously and pensions and other benefits for the aged must be increased in proportion to the increase of the elderly population. One interesting comment from the Australian Representative the honorable M.R.C. Stradwick, OBE.

"Conditions in Australia were very favorable to the pensioner but there is still heavy pressure on the government for improved conditions especially at election time," he said.

Senior citizens clubs in that country are fully financed by the government at no cost to the seniors. Now there is a thought!

The united senior citizens of Ontario and the Ontario provincial government are to be congratulated for making it financially possible for Mr. Lerette to attend the Strasbourg Conference.

The Strasbourg conference might easily have been a carbon copy of our own national pensioner and senior citizens convention in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island just a couple of weeks previously. The complaints, suggestions and resolutions were almost the same word for word, which proves one thing, that pensioners and senior citizens the world over are fully aware of what is happening to them and are ready to give notice that we are a group who intend to be heard. We are a group which will grow steadily stronger, never weaker, and the aims of the united groups will be realized no matter how long it may take.

You, the Senior Citizen can make a direct investment in your future by taking an interest in your local golden age association. If you have any ideas to put forward, you may be sure that they will be welcome as long as they are of a constructive nature that will benefit the group as a whole. Why not think of it? The retirement years are long, you alone can make them happy and gainful years by keeping busy in one field or another, but whatever you do, never allow yourself to stagnate or go to seed, that way you are no use to yourself or to anyone else.

Remember the senior citizens club is a fertile field for fresh ideas. In a couple of weeks the senior citizens trip to Spain will be taking off for that, we hope, sunny climate. Sherbrooke, Magog, Cowansville and Montreal will be represented in the group and it should be a pleasant break from our bleak, wintry weather. We will give you a word picture of the trip and any ideas which may arise from it in the March column. There have been many inquiries recently by some folks interested in taking the trip. Unfortunately, these inquiries were too late to allow time to obtain the documents necessary for the trip, that is passports, health certificates etc. We are indeed sorry about this but lots of time has to be allowed to obtain such documents, so if anyone has plans for later on, please keep this in mind, and follow closely the instructions on the passport application forms. It will save time and problems if you do so.

Gillespie denies move made to placate NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie has denied suggestions that the Trudeau government strengthened its foreign takeover bill in order to be assured of support from the New Democratic MPs when the bill comes before the Commons.

He said that the Oct. 30 election campaign showed a feeling in the country that a previous bill—introduced last year but never passed—did not go far enough for most Canadians.

The previous bill dealt only with screening of foreign takeovers of Canadian businesses. It did not concern itself with new enterprises, with land or other matters covered in a bill introduced a few days ago.

Speaking Sunday on CTV's Question Period which was recorded earlier, Mr. Gillespie said he hoped the bill would be debated within a few weeks.

Three projects here

SHERBROOKE (CC) — Three additional local initiative projects have been accepted by the government. Sherbrooke county MNA Jean Paul Pepin announced recently. The grants will total nearly $100,000 and 60 jobs will be created for the duration of the projects.

Lennoxville has been awarded an $8,352 grant for the construction of the new fire station. The project will create 14 jobs.

The municipality of Fleurimont will receive a grant of $61,776 to help finance the installation of a water and sewage system. The system will be laid under new streets the town is developing. In addition, part of the grant will be used to finish the gravelling of the new streets. A total of 24 jobs will be created.

Rock Forest received a grant of $27,846 under two local initiatives projects. The municipality will build a beach, road and lay a water and sewage system. Twenty-two jobs will be created.

Samson pledges refusal of Creditiste merger

SHERBROOKE (CC) — If Camil Samson is re-elected leader of the provincial Creditiste party, he will never allow the Creditistes to merge with another political party.

Speaking before a group of less than 25 followers Saturday night at the King George Hotel he declared:

A merger with a Union National or any other party will never take place as long as I am the leader of the party.

"We will remain by ourselves and will be elected the government to replace the Liberals," he added. Mr. Samson, one of the four main candidates in the leadership race, spoke for more than two hours, promising economic expansion and political growth.

The other major candidates in the leadership race are Armand Bois, Fabien Roy and Yvon Dupuis. The leadership convention, which is an attempt to tie together the party which has been plagued with internal problems for nearly a year, will be held in Quebec on February 3-4.

The party executive hope that the leadership convention will re-unite the party. But judging from the way Mr. Samson spoke of his opponents the party is a long way from being united. He continually downgraded his fellow candidates.

"They are not creditistes," he asserted. "I am the only creditiste."

Mr. Samson expressed doubts about Yvon Dupuis, a former liberal cabinet minister. "He wants to change the party," Samson warned. "Most of the Samson speech centered on personalities, not policies. At times, when he finally began to discuss policies, he promised to accomplish many goals without showing how these goals would be reached."

"If I am elected leader, I will lead the party to a great victory in the next election," he said.

"We will be elected the official opposition."

He promised a high standard of living for everyone with no poverty, no need for unemployment insurance and no need for welfare. The public debt of both the provincial and municipal governments would be wiped out, he said.

"They will pay so that we can live well," Samson said.

Asked if he would join the others if he lost the leadership convention next week, Mr. Samson said:

"I will not lose. The only way I can lose is if they (other candidates) fix the balloting."

"I am the only true Creditiste," he said, with humility. "The people know it and they will re-elect me as their leader."

Unconfirmed reports indicate that Mr. Samson should fail to win leadership convention, will bolt from the party and form another political party.

Saturday Mr. Samson would neither confirm nor deny that possibility. He only expressed a hope that the others would gather around him following his victory next week.

Police report plunge in criminal offenses

SHERBROOKE (CC) — The Eastern Townships district office of the Quebec Police Force cited more efficient crime prevention as the key to the large reduction in the number of criminal offences which occurred in the region during 1972 as compared to 1971.

Statistics for the Coaticook, Cookshire, Lake Megantic, Richmond, Weedon and Sherbrooke detachments of the Quebec Police Force show that some criminal offences were reduced by as much as 50 per cent in 1972 compared to the previous year and that only one criminal offence saw a percentage increase in 1972.

The statistics were divulged in a press release released over the weekend by the Eastern Townships regional office, situated in Sherbrooke.

Figures show that sexual offences were decreased by 50 per cent; homicides by 45.5 per cent, armed robberies or robberies with violence by eight per cent, breaking and entering infractions by 19 per cent and the percentage decrease in the number of stolen vehicles was four per cent.

The only crime which saw an increase in the region was robberies of more than $50 which rose one per cent.

In addition to crime prevention police cited better planning, additional roadblocks, more policemen on the road and a receptive attitude from the Eastern Townships population as reasons for the decrease.

The figures show there were six homicides in the region during 1972 compared to 11 in 1971. Sexual crimes decreased to 17 from 1971's total of 34.

Armed robberies and robberies with violence fell to 23 compared to 25 the year before. There were 351 crimes of breaking and entering in 1972 as compared

GP's practice can be increased, study shows

EDMONTON (CP) — The growing concept of using "nurse practitioners" as a substitute for hard-pressed family physicians has been praised in an Ontario study, but provincial governments don't appear willing to pay for the innovation.

The study presented to the annual meeting of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which ended during the weekend, said general practitioners can increase their practice by up to 42 per cent by the addition of one "nurse practitioner."

Nurse practitioners receive the equivalent of about eight months more training than regular registered nurses, have considerable practical experience and are paid about 20 per cent more than regular nurses.

They see all patients that call at the doctor's office and then have three choices: Recommending specific treatment, doing nothing but reassuring the patient, or referring the patient to the physician if it is a case she is not qualified to handle.

The physician, therefore, has more time to concentrate on the cases requiring his training.

The study said that the plan has great advantages but also reveals that incorporating a decision-making "nurse co-practitioner" into a practice is not financially advantageous.

Fired for distributing newspaper; hearing continues

By MARVIN ZIVITZ
REGINA (CP) — Counsel for Margaret Gordon argued Saturday she was unlawfully fired by a school board "stamped by a couple of vicious mothers," while the school board claimed she distributed "sad, sick and sullied papers to the children whose parents trusted her."

The arguments came as a three-man board of reference concluded hearings into the controversial firing of Mrs. Gordon, a 26-year-old home economics teacher from Regina who was dismissed for gross misconduct in October, 1971 by the Moosomin school unit board. She was fired after distributing copies of the Georgia Straight, an underground newspaper published in Vancouver, to her Grade 9 students.

Ross Wimmer, Mrs. Gordon's lawyer, claimed the dismissal was illegal because she did not receive 30 days notice and the unit board did not hold its own investigation into the charges.

Morris Shumatcher, counsel for the unit board, said the 30-day provision doesn't apply where gross misconduct is involved. He also said the unit board, although it did not hold a formal hearing, did investigate the charges against Mrs. Gordon.

Mr. Wimmer charged that the firing was motivated by a small group of parents "motivated by nasty rumors and vicious gossip." Two parents wanted her fired and stamped the board into a decision.

Dr. Shumatcher countered that the parents were concerned, not vicious, and that the board was not rushed into a decision.

The furore over Mrs. Gordon was ignited when she gave one of her students a copy of the Georgia Straight which contained articles about the sexual experiences of a young girl and subversion of the school system.

Mrs. Gordon now is activities director at a nursing home in Virton, Man.

Mr. Wimmer, Dr. Shumatcher and Roy Wellman of Regina, chairman of the board of reference agreed that since Mrs. Gordon's contract expired last June it would not be possible for the board to rule that she should be reinstated.

Mr. Wimmer said that the board should rule that she is entitled to $5,476.40, the amount due her from the time she was dismissed until the expiration of the contract. He said the time limit has expired under which she could have sued the school board for illegal dismissal.

The board of reference is expected to file its decision, which is binding on both parties, within three weeks.

Recycling plan disturbs Reeve

HARRISTON, Ont. (CP) — Reeve Matthews Siefried is disturbed that CP Rail plans to approach the Ontario government about a recycling research project that could bring 400,000 tons of Toronto garbage a year to Minto Township.

CP Rail has been given a $40-million contract to haul 400,000 tons of waste and 100,000 tons of sewage-sludge into this area annually during the next 15 years.

"The (CP Rail) never offered us recycling," the Minto reeve said in an interview Sunday.

"If the railroad is offering recycling, why doesn't it do it in Toronto? It's only after all the protests that they are talking of recycling and I'm afraid it's just to talk us into the scheme."

He said "there are no guarantees" that the railroad will recycle.

The reeve was commenting on a meeting in Toronto Friday between CP Rail officials and James Auld, Ontario environment minister.

"SLOPES FROM SLOPS
In Toronto, graphic designer Bob Choma suggested during the weekend that the garbage would provide "the best skiing in Canada."

He says seven peaks of trash could be turned into slopes on the northern rim of a conservation area, just two miles north of the international airport here.

In a study presented to the provincial department of municipal affairs and to be sent to Toronto and Metro councils, Mr. Choma said it would cost about $2 a ton to complete his plan compared with $6.40 a ton to take it to Harriston.

THREE VILLAGES (IH) — For the fourth consecutive year the Butterfield Plant at the Boundary is sponsoring a photography contest of photos taken at the Sled-dog races.

The rules are simple — all photos must be black and white, each should be named and addressed on the back. Each should be marked whether professionally finished or finished by an amateur.

All marked photos will be returned to the contestants except those which win prizes. These will be held by the committee for publicity at the 1973 Sled-dog derby.

Deadline for entries is February 28. The entries should be sent to Butterfields, Rock Island, Que., attention Mrs. Joyce Aude.

After the entries are all in and, a reasonable time will be allowed for all mail deliveries to arrive, a panel of three judges will choose the winners.

Prizes in each class, professionally finished and finished by amateur, will be $20, $10 and $7.50. Total prize money is $75.

There is no limit to the size of photo entered or number submitted. This is open to all age groups but pictures must be of the sled-dog derby and not the Carnival of Feb. 2-11.

Noted historian dies

MAGOG (WM) — The many friends of Leonard Auger, well-known local historian, were saddened to hear of his death Thursday in the Sherbrooke Hospital. Mr. Auger was 80 years old.

Mr. Auger made a detailed study of the history of Indians in Canada and published several articles for historical magazines on Indian carvings found near Knowlton Landing. He was reported to have one of the best collections of books on Indians in this area and lectured at historical societies in both Quebec and the United States.

Mr. Auger was employed as personnel manager for Dominion Textile in Magog until his retirement. He was a member of St. Paul's United Church in Magog.

The funeral service for Mr. Auger will be held today at Cass Funeral Home in Magog.

Heavy burden

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP)—Obscured at first by the exhilaration of a ceasefire, the realization is widespread now that the Vietnam war has bequeathed to the American people a financial and social burden that will remain very heavy.

The ceasefire agreement is signed, but the United States is left with severe budgetary problems and social unrest. There is no "peace dividend" it vanished bit by bit long before the ceasefire.

The disappearance of the dividend is no mystery; it was based on a sudden ending of the war and, as everyone knows, the war "wound down" over a period of many months. And so, what dividend there was is already spent.

The rest of the legacy stands out in bold relief in the current budgetary plans of the federal government.

—Budget deficits, in part related to big military expenditures, appear to be unavoidable, even though both the president and Congress are aware that massive government overspending can be explosively inflationary.

—Domestic social needs, some of which can be traced to neglect resulting from the exigencies of Vietnam, may remain unattended because the consequences of war continue to force funds into other channels.

One simple illustration of this is to compare the strict budgeting for education, health and housing, with the relatively liberal military expenditures, resulting in part from the need to pay higher salaries to a volunteer army.

TRACED TO WAR
 But, while the current stress in many social areas can to some extent be traced to the war, the precise degree of blame will always be debated. That is not so when budget deficits are discussed.

Since 1965, there has been only one year in which federal income exceeded expenditure. That was in fiscal 1969, and it amounted to only $3.24 billion.

These deficits can more readily be traced directly to war, defence and other military needs. As the war built up so did the budget deficits and so did the rate of inflation. They were like interacting gears.

Now both Congress and the president would like to see some of these excesses corrected, but they find that their choices are limited. Because the war forced Americans into inflation, their options are reduced.

In the view of the president, security matters demand a big share of the budget. In the view of Congress, domestic social matters deserve more attention. Perhaps both deserve more money, but where is it coming from?

A solution of sorts could be arrived at by agreeing to more big budget deficits, but that would be an illusion quickly to be dispelled by the reality of galloping inflation, such as the United States had two years ago.

And so the domestic battle, aftermath of the Vietnam war, begins.

Three weapons

It has been announced that President Nixon has ended most price controls. That's not quite the way it looks from here.

In reality, the President and his aides have decided on what in effect will amount to more rigorous controls - if they are enforced.

These new controls will be indirect, to be sure. They will seem less tight and allow more leeway. They may not be visible to the naked eye. But they may be more rigorous and harsh at the price limits that Phase I or Phase II.

In these new procedures, the tightening or easing of voluntary or legal controls on exports or imports or commodities and other goods will be a major weapon. The products affected, of course, will be those whose prices are rising at an unseemingly rate, or goods essential to the manufacture of products whose prices are jumping.

The President will use two other major weapons. He will take or threaten to take, commodities out of one stockpile or another. He will change rules and regulations of one type or another to spur competition and greater production.

In the stockpile maneuver, Mr. Nixon has taken a leaf from Robert S. McNamara's tough steps as secretary of Defense. Back in 1965, to hold down prices of military purchases, McNamara arranged for considerable quantities of copper to be released from the nation's stockpiles.

China-size Japan spells trouble for west

WASHINGTON — "The East is Red" — that favorite Chinese claim to ultimate triumph — could well portend fairly dire trouble for the Western industrial societies. If you think of what a China-size Japan would do to the world economy, you will get an idea of what the future can easily bring.

One has to say "the future" because all Chinese policy, including economic policy, is now dominated by the threat of a Soviet preventive attack. The threat is perceived because of the vast, continuing Soviet military buildup on China's northern frontier. While defense needs have absolute priority, China's industrial exports cannot be vastly increased.

These matters have already been covered in previous reports attempting to sum up an unparalleled experience in China. This final report concerns the kind of thing the United States and other Western nations ought to be ready for if and when the Chinese leaders conclude the Soviet threat has been contained.

One must begin by remarking that there are two ways of looking at Chinese industry in its present stage. You can say that heavy overstaffing is widespread, that almost all Chinese industrial plants still bear conspicuous traces of their handicraft origins.

All of this is undoubtedly true today, on the other hand, it is even more striking to find so much industry, including so much industry of advanced types, in a country that used to have almost no industry at all. Yet this was the real state of affairs less than a quarter-century ago, except in a few special centers like Shanghai and southern Manchuria.

What has been achieved, from a near-zero start, is already fairly staggering. Moreover, there are other factors to consider. The Chinese labor force, to begin with, is incomparably ingenious, hard-working and eager to learn. Yet as far as I could figure it out, the average wage in the many factories I visited was about 45 Chinese dollars a month — or 18 of our dollars.

At China's amazingly low prices this buys what Chinese most care about — ample but plain food, reasonable but cramped housing and decent though simple clothes. Throw in several things that Chinese have not had before, such as simple but good medical care and universal schooling. You cannot expect a Chinese wage-price push in this highly authoritarian state.

Then add the other industrial factor on which I concentrated when I was in China. In all the Chinese industrial enterprises that I visited — and there were a great many — I would ask the managers for their prices for this generator or turbine, or that machine tool. I would also ask for the world market prices, which the managers often knew.

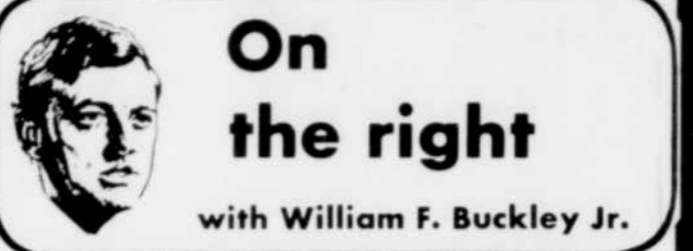

Again, the answers were fairly staggering. Where comparative prices were obtainable, in fact, the Chinese price was all but invariably in the range of one-fifth to one-third of the world market price. As to quality, I could not judge. But since I have got home, I have asked a dozen experts. The answer has always been that in countless fields, ranging from textiles to machine tools, Chinese goods are now fully competitive in quality.

Overall, my best guess is that China's industry today is about where Japanese industry was in the middle '50s, except for two features. In the first place, the sheer size of China has imposed the policy of local self-reliance. As far as possible in each case, all provinces try to be industrially self-supporting. Second, however, Chinese prices are considerably further below world prices than Japanese prices used to be at the critical moment when the Japanese economic takeoff began.

In Principle, therefore, nothing prevents China from taking the Japanese road — which means driving hard to export largely and then investing the profits in further industrial expansion. In practice, China is only prevented from doing this by the overriding defense priority. "Our needs must come first," the Chinese planners keep saying; and this mainly means defense needs.

At some time in future, however, China must be seriously expected to take the Japanese road. The Chinese are too shrewd to overlook such a golden chance. And when that happens, the result is likely to be a sudden tilt in the overall balance of this changing world such as no one has been since the 18th century when the Industrial Revolution began in England.

Lyndon Johnson R.I.P.

SAN ANTONIO — The lady is middle-aged, shrewd, politically active, impeccably kind, civic-minded, born in Texas and raised here, and she spoke as if she were facing such a problem for the very first time in her life. Well, obviously not the first time: when acknowledged monsters like Hitler and Stalin died, people did not, for the most part, scratch about to find something redeeming to say about them. LBJ was clearly of another category, but the lady now remarked — "What am I supposed to say? I didn't like what I knew about him personally. I didn't admire his domestic programs. And I thought his foreign policy was a mess. So what am I supposed to say?"

I counseled her to say nothing, absolutely nothing at all. Having done so, I regretfully acknowledge that my advice is only one part discretion, nine parts funk. Accordingly, into the breach...

Even if history justifies Lyndon Johnson's determination to stand by South Vietnam, it is very difficult to believe that history will applaud his conduct of the war. We set out, in Vietnam, to make a resonant point. We did not make it resonantly.

In international affairs as in domestic affairs, crime is deterred by the predictability of decisive and conclusive retaliation. The Soviet Union knows that it can count on a dozen years between separatist uprisings in its empire because when it moves, it moves conclusively. If the Soviet Union had sent a few battalions into Hungary, and a dozen years later into Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union would not have made its point.

Johnson, reminiscing in the White House a year before he was evicted, told two reporters that there was no way he might have avoided a showdown in Indochina, that not only John Kennedy (who told him shortly before leaving for Dallas that he intended to make a stand there) but Dwight Eisenhower (who told him in the early sixties that Southeast Asia would be the principal challenge of the Presidency) agreed on the strategic point. But what, one wonders, has been achieved under the circumstances?

To begin with, nobody can predict that, a year or two from now, South Vietnam will still be free. But of greater importance than that, no one in his right mind will predict that the United States, facing a comparable challenge a year or two from now, would respond with military decisiveness.

If, in that part of the world, the decision is to gobble up Thailand, what are we going to do about it? Exactly. And if, in another part of the world, they decide to go after Yugoslavia, or even Greece — what would we do about it?

It was the strangest aspect of this strange man that, once having decided on a course of action, he did not pursue it characteristically — i.e. with exclusive concern for its success. By his failure to do so, he undermined the very purpose of the intervention. And if the great communist superpowers exercise restraint at this point, it will not be because they have learned the lesson of Vietnam, in the way that Stalin learned the lesson of Greece and Iran. It will be merely because of the coincidence of their mutual hostility and their desire for American economic aid.

So what of his great domestic accomplishments? What great domestic accomplishments? He sought a Great Society. He ushered in bitterness and resentment. He sought to educate all the population of America, and he bred a swaggering illiteracy, and a cultural bias in favor of a college education so adamant and so preposterous that if John Milton applied for a job with Chock Full O' Nuts, they would demand first to see his college diploma. The rhetoric of LBJ was in the disastrous tradition of JFK — encouraging the popular superstition that the state could change the quality, no less, of American life. This led necessarily to disappointment, and the more presumptuous the rhetoric, the more bitter the disappointment.

The Great Society did not lead us into eudaimonia. It led us into frustration — and to the lowest recorded confidence-vote in the basic institutions of this country since the birth of George Gallup. But: he was a patriot, who cared for his country, who was unsparing of himself, and who acquired at least a certain public dignity which lifted him from buffoonery, into tragedy. And he was the object of probably the greatest sustained vituperation in American political history. He paid a very high price for the office he discharged. And his detractors, as it happened are America's worst friends, if that was any consolation.

"Well, getting in appears simple enough — let's make sure we know how to get out..."

A 'fragile' peace

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — Big-power relations have changed and the Vietnamese people and country are nearer to exhaustion.

These two factors, as much as any, are being counted on to maintain what even President Nixon has described as a "fragile" agreement to end the war.

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger seems to place special emphasis on major-power "self-restraint" and the spirit of "reconciliation" required now of the Vietnamese.

In their earlier diplomatic breakthroughs with the leaders of China and the Soviet Union, Nixon and Kissinger undoubtedly did crucial spadework for the ultimate success of their negotiations with Hanoi and for whatever long-term prospects the coming ceasefire may hold.

WILL BE CAREFUL

Now that the two major Communist powers have a new, more promising relationship with the United States, they are unlikely to want it jeopardized lightly by a breach in the new agreement.

Although their own rivalry for leadership in the Communist world could be aggravated as they compete with aid in the reconstruction of North Vietnam, China and the Soviet Union have similar reasons for pursuing their new ties with Washington — trade, technology and reduction of tensions.

None of that was true in the Geneva-convention days of 1954, when the Russians and Chinese still saw eye to eye and when their common enemy, the U.S., already debated carrying on the anti-Communist crusade abandoned by France after Dien Bien Phu.

The Geneva conference produced an agreement on Indochina which none of the participants signed, which Saigon repudiated and which even Hanoi came to regret.

There are other differences between Paris 1972 and Geneva 1954.

The Communist forces in South Vietnam have their own representatives now at the signing. And there is no requirement for North Vietnam to withdraw its troops behind the demilitarized zone.

BOTH SIDES SUFFERED

Most of all, the Vietnamese of both sides have since sustained more than a decade of war which has created millions of casualties and refugees and which has devastated much of their land.

In many of the most important respects, however, the Geneva and Paris agreements contain similarities.

Each defines the 17th-parallel division between North and South Vietnam as temporary, pending the eventual reunification of the country. Each sets out in elaborate detail the arrangements for a ceasefire and its supervision, and each proposes a formula for political accommodation.

In the end, the willingness of the Vietnamese to pursue their aims by political means rather than by warfare becomes the key to sustained peace, as virtually every commentary has acknowledged since the Paris agreement was announced.

Kissinger phrased it as well as anyone:

"Of course, the hatred will not rapidly disappear and, of course, people who have fought for 25 years will not easily give up their objectives. But also people who have suffered for 25 years may at least come to know that they can achieve their realization by other and less brutal means."

BERRY'S WORLD

"If we would have had to listen to one more of Dr. Kissinger's stories about the swinging chicks he dates, I would have left Paris!"

Landers warns that high fashion shoes are dangerous to health

Dear Ann Landers: My wife is a reasonably sane, fairly predictable, 35-year-old woman. So what am I writing about? Well, last night after dinner Florence says, "Sit down I want to model my new shoes." In a few minutes she came teetering in on a monstrous pair of stiletts and announced, "The latest thing — four-inch platforms. Sexy, eh?"

"If you live," I replied. "Those shoes look like killers. How do you lift them?" She became defensive and replied, "They're comfortable. They might look heavy but they're actually cork!"

I can't believe those shoes are safe, Ann. And they give the body such an unnatural tilt they must be murder on your back. Maybe the shoe stores are saying hooray — but what are the foot doctors saying? — Shorter Than She is Now

Dear Shorter: They are saying the new shoes are hazardous and bad for the back.

Hundreds of women have already tripped on curbs, fallen down stairs, sprained their ankles and in some instances broken bones. Many fashion mavins have declared skyscraper platforms and chunky heels "ugly," and say it's impossible to walk gracefully in them.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 23 and have been married three months to a wonderful girl. Here's the problem. My wife wants a family, not right away, but some day I hate kids. Occasionally when I see a cute little boy or girl, well-mannered and smart, I think, "Gee it would be nice to have a child like that." But most kids are obnoxious brats.

Here's an example. Yesterday a little boy (about four) threw dirt on me as I was walking to my car. I could have cheerfully bashed that kid's head in. I think if he were mine I might have done it.

My wife loves all kids. Every time she talks about having a family I sweat. Should I try harder to like kids or should I tell her I don't want any? — Just Molly and Me

Dear M and M: "Well-mannered, friendly and smart kids" aren't born that way. Somebody worked with them, probably a mother and father. It would be unfair to deprive your wife of a family. Get some counseling and ventilate your hostilities. One thing is certain — many parents overlook things in their own children that they can't stand in somebody else's.

Dear Ann Landers: After reading the letter from "Nothing in Newark" I was relieved to learn that I wasn't the only married woman in the world who is hungry for love. My husband is attractive, intelligent and to outsiders, everything a woman could want. Your suggestion to wives who have unsatisfactory sex lives to "Guide him gently, let him know what is pleasing, and respond with enthusiasm." sounds fine, but it's not that simple. I've tried it. Nothing improved.

There are times when I become bitter, but I tell myself he's faithful and good to me and I have no right to expect anything more. Yet, I feel cheated. For a long time I thought perhaps something was wrong with me physically or psychologically, but now I'm beginning to believe there are no frigid wives, just lousy lovers. — Low in California

Dear Low Cal: Perhaps you are too subtle. Be more explicit.

If that doesn't work, ask your doctor for some "how to" books and give them to your "lousy lover" for Valentine's Day.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? Ann Landers' completely new "The Bride's Guide" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send a dollar bill, plus a longself-addressed, stamped envelope (16 cents postage) to Ann Landers, Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB
A Vitamin Deficiency

Pellagra Rare in the U.S.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Please tell me what pellagra is and what causes it.

Dear Reader—This is a disease caused by a vitamin deficiency. We usually attribute the problem to a deficiency of niacin (also known as nicotinic acid and nicotinamide). This disease almost never occurs any more in the United States. It was quite common in the southern United States in the 1930s and I know from your letter that that is your location. Many families in those days ate a diet heavily dependent on pork fat and hominy grits from the corn that had been degermed, and as a result, their diet didn't have sufficient niacin. Today the problem is noted mostly in areas where the diet primarily consists of corn.

Even in areas of the world where the diet isn't very rich by our standards and corn is a major staple, if people also use lots of mature bean seeds, they don't develop pellagra. The mature bean seed is an excellent vegetable source of protein and it serves adequately to prevent pellagra and a number of deficiency diseases. It is perhaps one of the most neglected foods available to us. Not only is it rich in protein, it is low in fat, and most varieties of mature bean seeds contain an appreciable amount of calcium as well as some iron. The common white bean or navy bean is an excellent choice.

Besides mature beans, other good sources of niacin are lean meat, fish, poultry, whole grain cereals and enriched breads and enriched flours. Individuals with pellagra have a variety of symptoms which include weakness, fatigue, loss of appetite and the gamut of digestive disturbances which include abdominal distention, diarrhea and proctitis. In the advanced form there is inflammation of most of the mucus linings of the body which results in a sore mouth and tongue and inflammation of the lining of the entire digestive tract. It can also result in inflammation of the urethra and vagina. Advanced cases can cause a variety of mental symptoms from simple anxiety and irritability to disorientation, delirium and hallucinations.

One of the features of the disease is a dermatitis. It may look like a mild sunburn in early stages and it characteristically affects the areas of the skin that are exposed to the sun. As the condition advances the skin becomes thicker and scaly.

In the presence of niacin deficiency or pellagra, there are usually multiple vitamin deficiencies including thiamine (B-1). This can result in burning feet. Usually, if you have one significant vitamin deficiency you will find that there are other vitamin deficiencies. Individuals who are obtaining an adequate diet may sometimes develop pellagra and other vitamin deficiencies if they have an absorption problem and can't properly absorb foods and vitamins from the digestive tract. This can occur in alcoholics, individuals with cirrhosis of the liver and people with chronic diarrhea from other causes.

In otherwise normal people the problem can be prevented with an adequate diet, and if for any reason there is any question about obtaining an adequate balanced diet, a regular daily vitamin which contains at least the minimum daily requirement should be taken. This is a good idea for people who are not likely to consistently eat an adequate diet. Vitamin pills alone will not replace a good healthy diet, but they will help.

Peace for Vietnam not necessarily ideal or lasting

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu told the 17½ million South Vietnamese today that "there is no guarantee that the forthcoming peace will be an ideal and lasting peace." He forecast a political struggle as difficult and dangerous as the last 18 years of war.

Thieu made a 45-minute radio address at the same time President Nixon was telling the U.S. of the agreement in Paris Tuesday.

The Viet Cong broadcast a pledge that it would "seriously carry out the peace treaty," and North Vietnam said in a communique that it hopes the agreement will ensure stable peace in Vietnam and will contribute to the preservation of lasting peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia.

GOOD WILL LACKING

But Thieu accused the Communists of not having "good will for peace" and warned his people:

"As I have frequently told you, no agreement will provide a 100-per-cent guarantee for peace, and no international body may be considered to be able to give us a 100-per-cent guarantee for peace."

"In order to have a genuine peace and a lasting ceasefire," he continued, "only we, and we only, will be able to give ourselves the solid and effective guarantee more than anyone else."

Thieu characterized the agreement as "so far only a ceasefire treaty, no more and no less... to see if any favorable conditions may be reached with the Communists in order to proceed to a genuine and lasting peace."

STAGES OUTLINED

He outlined four post-ceasefire stages:

"First we will have to wait and see if the Communists will honor the ceasefire in South Vietnam in a serious manner, and if the Communists will completely terminate all their acts of infiltrating weapons and troops from the North to the South."

"Secondly, we will wait to see if the National Liberation Front will discuss with us seriously to agree on a reasonable internal political solution for the South Vietnamese people."

"Thirdly, even if an international political solution is reached between us and the National Liberation Front, we will still wait to see if they will carry it out seriously, and whether the South Vietnamese people will be able to implement their rights of self-determination in a free and democratic manner or not, or if they will be threatened by an invasion of North Vietnamese Communist troops."

"Fourth, suppose an election were held based on a political solution reached by us and the National Liberation Front and suppose the National Liberation Front did not win over the South Vietnamese nationalists as they desire. Would they accept the results pleasantly or would they reject their own defeat, make an about face and create another war against us?"

VICTORY CLAIMED

Thieu said the ceasefire agreement met most of his major demands. But Premier Pham Dong of North Vietnam said the agreement was "a great victory for the Vietnamese people in their long and hard-fought victorious struggle for freedom, independence and peace."

"We shall carry forward this struggle, by relying on the agreement and other documents to be signed, to complete the revolutionary cause of the Vietnamese people... so as to march ahead in the cause of liberation of South Vietnam and reunification of homeland," Dong said in a ceremony in Hanoi. His remarks were reported by Tass, the Soviet news agency.

DEMAND NOT MET

On another key issue, Thieu indicated that the agreement did not contain a provision for the immediate withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from the South as he had demanded, but that there was some kind of tacit understanding on the matter. He did not spell it out but said only:

"The Communists have failed to force us to recognize that they have the right to leave North Vietnamese troops in the South, and the right to introduce North Vietnamese troops into the South as if this territory were part of one under their control."

"We have asserted that we will not accept that. We will still maintain our position that we do not accept any outside troops to have the right to stay in the territory of South Vietnam. Thus, the problem of North Vietnamese troops, as an outside army, and as an invasion army from the North, must be appropriately settled with us by the Communists."

WATER SUPPLY — Surplus water from some Ducks Unlimited projects is utilized to keep downstream creek channels alive. By use of lengths of plastic or metal pipes, water is siphoned over the earth-fill dam and into the creek channel which may meander for a mile or more. Such creeks, which normally dry up by mid-summer continue to provide valuable water for nesting habitat and other uses.

"Not at all," said George. "You were both squeezed. He had to come down to six cards including four diamonds. The other two would be either two spades or a spade and the 10 of hearts. If he came down to two spades, you would be squeezed in spades and hearts when I cashed my diamonds. If he came down to one of each, you would not be squeezed but my ace of spades play would drop his queen and I would make the slam by finessing against your jack. Generous George overbids all no-trump hands and most suit hands. Hence his three no-trump call.

North put George right in six and West opened the king of hearts. George saw that six clubs would have been a cinch but that six no-trump might well not come in.

Nothing showed on his smiling face as he remarked to West, "I am generous enough to let you hold this first trick."

George won the continuation and ran off his five clubs. Somewhere along the line East let go a diamond and the slam wheeled in.

25th Wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William Ride of North Hatley were guests of honor on their 25th wedding anniversary. The party was held in December at the Lennoxville Rifle Club, given by their children, Robert, Eva, Gerald and Kathleen.

The honored couple were escorted to the hall by Mrs. Ride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Paterson of Windsor Mills, and on their arrival were surprised to find the hall filled with friends and relatives. They were met at the door by their family. Gerry presented his mother with a corsage of red roses decorated with a silver ribbon, while Kathy pinned a carnation boutonniere on her father.

The happy couple with their family, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ride of North Hatley, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Beaulieu of Longueuil, Gerry of Montreal and Kathy of North Hatley with their escorts, formed the receiving line and greeted the guests.

Dancing was enjoyed by all, beginning with the Anniversary Waltz led by the honored couple. Music for the evening was provided by Albert Nutbrown's orchestra.

The hall was decorated for the occasion with white streamers, wedding bells and silver 25's completed the decor.

Lunch was served downstairs, where the tables were decorated with red candles in white birch holders, decorated with pine. The head table was decorated with a garland of holly and poinsettias, and was centred with an anniversary cake, decorated with roses and topped with two white doves holding silver wedding rings. The initial cut was made by the anniversary couple and a piece was given later to the guests. The cake was made and decorated by Mrs. Andrew Paterson.

Delicious refreshments were provided by Mrs. Robert Ride and Mrs. Peter Beaulieu and were served by the ladies of the Hatley Centre branch of Quebec Women's Institutes. Following lunch, Gerry presented his parents with a basket of currency and some lovely gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Ride expressed their thanks to all for the gifts and good wishes.

Relatives and friends attended from Montreal, Lachute, Brome, Asbestos, Windsor Mills, Sherbrooke, Huntingville, Lennoxville, Waterville, Ayer's Cliff, Massawippi and North Hatley.

Whatley-Ruzeski exchange vows

The marriage of Deborah Ann (Debbie), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ruzeski of Cheektowaga, New York and Douglas Bryan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Whatley of Sherbrooke took place on Friday, December 29, at 7 p.m. in the Church of the Blessed Trinity, Buffalo, N.Y., Msgr. Paul R.

Juenker officiated at the double ring ceremony. Selections from Bach were played on the classical guitar.

The beautiful old church was decorated with Christmas plants and lights. Scotch pine and white satin bows marked the guests' pews.

The bride, who was escorted to the altar by her parents, wore a white sata peaou gown with a two tier shoulder length veil. The gown's empire waist, skirt panels and shoulder train were outlined with white daisies. She carried one perfect long-stemmed white rose and a hand embroidered handkerchief. The latter was given to her by her late paternal grandmother.

Mrs. Diane Graves was matron of honor for her sister. Her full skirted gown of pink chiffon featured a cranberry velvet empire bodice, caps and cuffs on the long sleeves. She wore matching accessories and carried a single pink rose.

The bride's brother-in-law, Anthony Graves acted as best man. Sean Graves, the bride's nephew, was the ring bearer and the groom's brother, Robert Whatley served as usher. Steven Whatley of Ottawa, Ontario was unable to attend because of illness.

The bride's mother wore a tangerine accorcion pleated palazzo gown with silver accessories. Her corsage was of white feathered carnations and tea roses with silver ribbon.

The groom's mother wore a blue figured gown with empire waist and straight skirt split to the knee. Her accessories were blue and gold. Her corsage was of tea roses and feathered carnations with gold ribbon.

The reception was held in the Reception Room of the Boulevard Towers, Town of Amherst, N.Y.

Dr. and Mrs. Whatley are spending their honeymoon in Paris, France.

For travelling the bride chose a black and white knitted pant suit with matching accessories.

Among the many messages received by the happy couple were telephone calls from the bride's brother Gary Ruzeski of Georgia and the groom's brother Steven Whatley who was a patient in the Sherbrooke Hospital.

Out of town guests were from Sherbrooke, Quebec, Brantford, Ontario and Pittsburgh, Penn.

Historical Society executive meet

BEDFORD — An executive meeting of the Missisquoi County Historical Society was held on January 6 at Stanbridge East in the museum, the meeting being conducted by the president, Kenneth Tree, who reported the death of the Rev. Father Brosseau, on January 5 at the Verdun General Hospital. A resolution was passed at the meeting, instructing the secretary to send a letter of sympathy to Father Brosseau's family and to the wardens of St. Jeanne D'Arc Church, of Stanbridge East, of which church he had been the vicar for several years. He will be greatly missed by all the Society's members at meetings and at the Museum as he was always helpful in translating, making suggestions for the improvement of the Society, and helping out in every way, always with a smile and a good sense of humor. The Society was very fortunate in having such a valued member.

Katherine Winsor of Cowansville, whose father, Dr. Cotton was the first president of the Society in 1899 and Mr. Roy Vaughan of Victoria, B.C. another fine supporter of the Museum, both passed away in 1972, as did Miss Irene Corey and Mrs. W.D. Smith of Cowansville and Mr. Hugh Montgomery of Montreal, the latter two both intensely interested in the historical work of the Society. Messages of sympathy were sent to their families.

A new constitution was suggested, consisting of a few changes in the by-laws, which has not been revised since 1899. These will be presented for approval at the annual meeting.

Changes in the price of life memberships, single and family annual memberships as well as the price of the publications and price of admission to Museum will also be presented for approval at the meeting. It is felt that these increases are a necessity to keep the Society in a healthy financial state, as government grants are being gradually cut off.

It is very evident that the people of the County of Missisquoi realize that the Museum and its assets and the services that are available for research belong to the whole county, otherwise the response to the appeal for funds would not have been so generous.

Men use make up and powder for fashion

VANCOUVER (CP) — Delicately dabbing their faces with powderpuffs, men sit in front of illuminated mirrors learning the art of face shaping or contouring with makeup.

In an adjoining room, other men practise turns and basic patterns of movement on a fashion runway.

They're training to become male models and instructor Peggy Morrison says they're a mixed group.

One is a professional stuntman, one used to drive taxis, another was a miner, several are students and one is a Calgary oil executive.

"It takes an awful lot of courage to come up here," Miss Morrison said. "But in a lot of cases they're expressing what they've wanted to do for a long time. They've repressed it because of the attitudes of their fathers and mothers."

She said it takes courage because the masculine strong-man stereotype is taking a long time to die.

"The men who come here aren't the least bit feminine; on the contrary, they're secure enough in their masculinity that they're not afraid to come," Miss Morrison said.

"The thing people fail to realize is that men have their problems with skin and hair just like women. They, too, have the right to look their best."

BRING OUT BEST

In addition to modelling techniques, the 10-week course covers manicure, skin and hair care, posture, exercise, diet and "personality styling."

Later in the program, trainees learn photo projection and "self appreciation" and special television classes prepare them for work in TV commercials.

"Our purpose is to bring out the best in you," the course outline promises.

The majority of students agree that it works. Cameron Wallace, a familiar face in department store catalogues, graduated from the course in 1971. He studied modelling, he said, to improve his appearance.

"I took it initially just for informative purposes, for personal hygiene. Once in the course I found that it was a way to assert myself, like character acting."

Paul trained as a stuntman before he enrolled in modelling school "because I've always been interested in clothes, I like dressing nicely and I thought I could take a nice picture."

BUILDS CONFIDENCE

Brad said some people are reluctant to talk about his modelling course.

"There's nothing to be ashamed of, there's nothing wrong with wearing nice clothes and it's a change, something new to do," he said.

"It's a great confidence builder. It's good on how to conduct yourself, it helps you talk to people, teaches you how to move and to stay loose. So it's good mentally as well as physically."

Howard, a former taxi driver, said he was attracted to the course to build up his image. "I don't know whether I'll go into modelling full time, but it's useful to know how you look," he said.

Frank, a former miner, said he joined the class to overcome his shyness.

"I was so shy and I wanted to beat my fear of being in front of a lot of people. Modelling, I believe, can be useful to any man — he doesn't have to plan a career in it."

Recently a major airline sent its pursuers to an intensive day-long session at the school. Miss Morrison said most of the men were hostile to the idea when they arrived, but by the end of the day, some of them were enjoying themselves.

British public not amused by I and Albert

LONDON (CP) — I and Albert, the lavish $329,000 musical about Queen Victoria which features the work of Canadian choreographer Brian Macdonald, will close Feb. 10 after only a three-month run.

The musical, first venture into stage direction for movie director John Schlesinger of Midnight Cowboy fame, opened at the Piccadilly Theatre Nov. 6 to an enthusiastic audience but cool notices.

At least two critics hauled out that well-known phrase attributed to Queen Victoria—"we are not amused"—to describe their reaction.

The show covers 60 years of Victoria's reign and inevitably loses some sparkle halfway through with the death of Prince Albert.

Star of the show is British actress Polly James, who made her West End reputation in the Canadian children's classic Anne of Green Gables.

It was the first West End show for Macdonald of Montreal, who holds the Order of Canada and is noted for his work in ballet. He spent 11 weeks preparing for the musical.

The show had a high-powered production team, with script by Jay Allen, who adapted the successful stage and film versions of The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie, and music and lyrics by the Broadway team of Charles Strouse and Lee Adams.

The Evening News critic says the $329,000 backing, mostly from U.S. sources, is a "total loss."

He quotes a management spokesman as saying it has been a "dead season" in the West End this winter but it is possible the show may be produced elsewhere.

Running costs for the show, which has an exceptionally large cast, have been high and the press agent said large ticket sales were necessary for the show to break even.

Macdonald returned to Canada last December to make a television film with Les Grands Ballets Canadiens in Montreal and then was scheduled to make a film in New York and begin work on an off-Broadway musical by composer Bill Solly of Hamilton, Ont.

Congregational Meeting

BEDFORD — The Bedford United Church held its annual congregational meeting on Monday evening, January 15 in the church hall. Rev. Mr. Eddy opened the meeting with prayer.

Mr. Thomas Bird read the minutes of last year's annual meeting, which were accepted. This was followed by the report of the Session Clerk, Mr. Neil Creller, showing that during the past year, eight deaths and four marriages had been recorded, also four communion services and four centennial services were held.

Rev. W.C. Lake served as minister of the Bedford charge until September 30, 1972, when the Rev. Keith H. Eddy took over as pastor. Mr. Eddy's induction service was held on October 19. Mr. Creller spoke in appreciation of Mr. Lake's kindness to the many shut-ins of the charge.

All reports gave evidence of a busy year and good financial standing. The M. and S. givings were $2713.00 plus $300.00 for the UCW Presbyterian allocation.

The report was given by the Trustees of the sale of the Bell property on Elizabeth street, which was willed to the Bedford church by the late Rev. Mr. Bell.

and which has been rented during the past years to various tenants, to Mr. A. Giroux. The transaction was approved by Presbytery.

The session members are Neil Creller, R.V. Oakes, H.L. Ames, Fred Gilman, Ewart Martin, L.V. Harris, T.P. Bird and D.A. MacArthur.

The committee of stewards consists of Fred Gilman, Allan Palmer, K.J. Best, J.K. Soles, George Gasser, Ross H. Howie, H. Smith, Rolf Gasser, E. Woolmer, a representative from the UCW and a newly proposed member Russell Biggs.

Mr. T.P. Bird was re-elected as congregational secretary, Miss Casey as Sunday School superintendent, Mr. Ronald Martin as organist, R.V. Oakes for the M. and S. treasurer, and Mrs. Ernest Gasser Jr. as secretary for the church paper, The Observer.

Rev. Mr. Eddy thanked all for the cooperation and kindness shown him and his family in the three months of his ministry in Bedford and spoke briefly of future plans.

The meeting was closed with prayer, after which refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

Research and development far from satisfactory in pulp and paper industry

MONTREAL (CP) — Pulp and paper industry representatives were told Thursday the amount of research and development and the rate of technical advancement in the industry is far from satisfactory.

Two government spokesmen said pulp and paper makers must return to previous levels of research and development if they are to retain their competitive position in world markets.

Robert Head, assistant deputy minister in the department of trade and commerce, said it is "most unfortunate" that many paper firms have cut back the innovative aspects of their operations.

Aurele Beaulnes, deputy minister of state for science and technology, said the record of Canadian paper makers has been "much better in the past than it is now."

He told industry scientists at a technical session of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association's annual meeting that paper firms "must retain internal research and development just to capitalize on developments abroad or else lose competitive advantage."

Mr. Head said pollution control "is an area where research can lead to competitive advantage," particularly since pollution control is expected to cost the industry about $600 million by 1974.

NEED TESTS

However, one of the problems in the paper industry was that "nothing less than full-scale mill trials are necessary" to provide that a new development will work.

Of about $100 million worth of government grants for research conducted in Canada, only a small percentage goes to the pulp and paper firms, Mr. Head said.

Industry spokesman R. L. Gillen, a vice-president of MacMillan-Bloedel Ltd. of Vancouver, said government policies are "basically sound" but there is a need for greater effectiveness.

Lionel Cox, director of research for MacMillan, said his company spends about $2 million a year on research, with about 25 per cent of the spending financed by the federal government.

Mr. Cox, who read Mr. Gillen's speech, said it is highly desirable that "the government make it possible for research and development to continue."

Britain may lose soccer to EEC

By IAIN MacLEOD
LONDON (CP) — While Europe has long been a prosperous playground for British soccer, there are mixed feelings among British soccer authorities over the inevitable increase in exchanges at many levels of the game between Common Market countries now that Britain has entered the European Economic Community.

The main source of consternation in soccer ranks is that Britain may lose its individual style of play with the influx of players from other European countries to British clubs.

The Football Association, the game's controlling body in Britain, maintains that "British soccer has a character of its own, fashioned to the expectations of the British soccer public," as one official put it.

"We have reservations about free-for-all transfers of players between Britain and Europe," he said. "Our youth teams will be the first to feel the ill-effects with managers who normally spend 100,000 pounds (about $235,000) a year on young players preferring to buy up Continental players instead."

WAIT AND SEE

The association intends to "see how things go for a while," the official said. "Then a ruling will be drawn up setting out regulations on how many European players each British club is allowed."

Manchester City manager Malcolm Allison agreed that the Common Market merger will mean "problems and fears for soccer."

"But," Allison added, "it will also mean a whole new horizon for the game."

Britain's domestic program is turning into a treadmill, the crack manager said. Because of this the fans were turning away from the grounds.

"The closer we get to European soccer, the better it will be for us," Allison said. "We will see the advantage of treating our players less like machines and we'll understand more about what truly inspires a soccer fan."

Whether the outlook is optimistic or depressing, British soccer already is firmly rooted in Europe. The first links came in 1956 when the Scottish League Cup winners Hibernian entered, though unsuccessfully, for the European Cup.

MADE IMPACT

A year later, today's England manager Sir Matt Busby, then manager of Manchester United, took his club to the finals of the European Cup. Although United were not to be victors in this tournament until 1968, they made an impressive impact on European soccer.

The bid to monopolize European soccer continued. Britain's earliest success came in the Winners' Cup, for Association Cup winners from each European country, when Tottenham Hotspur carried off the trophy in 1963, followed two years later by West Ham United. Since then, Manchester City, Glasgow Rangers and Chelsea have been listed in the Cup Winners' honors.

In the Fairs Cup, a tournament among four selected clubs from each country, Arsenal and Leeds were victors in 1970 and 1971 respectively.

Now called the E.U.F.A. Cup after the European Union of Football Associations, the trophy was won last season by Tottenham.

So Britain is no newcomer to the European soccer scene.

Recent Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Mackey, Kathleen and Allan were Mrs. Dorothy Ainsworth, Randy and Sheila; and Mr. and Mrs. Oral Downes and Carolyn of Bishopton.

Mrs. Walter Maskell of East Angus spent Jan. 13 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Antoine Guillette. While there she was pleasantly surprised to have her former neighbor friends "drop in" to help celebrate her birthday. After opening her lovely cards and gifts, Mrs. Guillette, assisted by Mrs. Lloyd Betts served a delightful lunch which included a candle-lit birthday cake. Everyone sang Happy Birthday and wished her many more happy returns. Since Mrs. Maskell has been away for the past two years and now resides in East Angus, it was a pleasant opportunity to have her back among her friends for a social afternoon.

Mr. John Stevens has returned to his school in Carillon after spending his two week vacation with his brother Peter at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guillette.

Revision of Smallwood book hailed as better than ever

By STEWART MacLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When Richard Gwyn wrote Smallwood, The Unlikely Revolutionary back in 1968, many reviewers hailed it as the best book ever produced on a Canadian politician. Now that Mr. Gwyn has revised it with an additional 30,000 words, it's regarded as an even better book.

This massively researched work on Newfoundland's long-time premier perhaps didn't get the attention it deserved in 1968 because, at that time, a series of fast-finger writers were rattling off books about a new Canadian politician—Pierre Elliott Trudeau. Joseph Smallwood had then been in office for 19 years, and he would keep.

But Mr. Smallwood is no longer premier, and just as Mr. Gwyn meticulously recorded the fascinating history of the politician's life up to 1968, he now has recorded, just as meticulously, the final chapters—humiliations and all.

While there may be other books on Canadian politicians as well researched as this one, most have come from historians, not journalists. Mr. Gwyn reveals the results of his painstaking research through a writing style that is light, lively and lucid.

And from this emerges a remarkably well-detailed account of the life of Joseph Smallwood, the one-time soap-box orator whose peppery power propelled him into a premiership he dominated for nearly 23 years.

It's all there, the compliments, the criticisms, the controversy. The conclusions are left to the reader.

Through the book, Mr. Gwyn lets the reader experience and feel his remarkable subject. Mr. Smallwood's life is carefully placed against his environment, a product of those craggy coasts whose love for Newfoundland is "absolute and unqualified."

All the controversies are there—the loggers' strike, the scandals relating to economic development programs, the premier's association with fast-talking business magnates.

While the book was written with the premier's co-operation it is clearly no commissioned work. If some of Mr. Smallwood's political opponents disagree with any of Mr. Gwyn's assessments, it's certain that the former premier would disagree with others.

But after reading this highly-entertaining document few would be likely to disagree with Mr. Gwyn's final assessment of Mr. Smallwood: "The generation of Newfoundlanders that defeated him are the beneficiaries of his life's work. Their achievements will be his memorial."

Library elects new officers

LENNOXVILLE — The Lennoxville Library Association held its annual meeting in the library on Monday, January 22, 1973.

The officers for 1973 are Gerald Frost, Chairman, H.J. McLeod, Vice-Chairman, W.S. Aird, Treasurer and B.M. Allison, Secretary.

Annual reports were received from the different committees. It is interesting to see that there were 57 new members joined the library in 1972. During the year 350 new books were purchased and in addition, 52 volumes were donated to the library.

A $5.00 annual subscription gets you some good reading, two fiction and one non-fiction books at a time. Did you know that the library has most of the titles on the best-seller lists? Drop in sometime and see what the library can offer you in the way of good reading.

The McLennan Travelling Library makes four visits a year and can provide extra books of interest which the Lennoxville Library cannot afford to buy. Children of school age can get their books free. The library is part of the community and deserves your support.

100 gather to observe Prayer week

STANSTEAD (IH) — In observance of world week of prayer, over 100 persons gathered at the Christ Anglican Church in Stanstead on Tuesday evening, January 23.

A warm welcome was given by Rev. Canon Harold Church to the visitors and congregation as a whole in both French and English. Likewise the entire service was bilingual.

Prayer was the emphasis of the message by Father R. Lecours, parish priest at Our Lady of Mercy Church, Rock Island, and Rev. G.W. Stokes, pastor of the Boundary United Churches, Passages from the book of St. Luke were read.

Mrs. Alfred Middleton played the organ and the choir led the singing of hymns, alternating verses in both languages. The choir also sang an appropriate anthem. Others who read Psalms were Mrs. G.W. Stokes, Rev. Sisters and students from the Ursuline convent and Alexander Galt School. Before the congregation left, Rev. Stokes offered a special prayer from the back of the church. There was a feeling of warmth and unity as French and English speaking people from the various faiths of the Border, and from two countries met as one in Christian worship. The fellowship continued in the parish hall where members of the Christ Church ACW guild served refreshments. "This should be done more often" were some of the comments heard from the congregation.

Selected store manager of the year

SHERBROOKE — Gaston Godbout was honored Jan. 24 by Sherbrooke Mayor Marc Bureau by being selected "store manager of the year" by B.F. Goodrich officials.

Mr. Godbout manages the BFG store at 570 Wellington Street South which is one of 30 BFG stores and some 4,000 dealers across Canada. He became store manager in 1970 and since that time business has almost tripled.

"He is an excellent business man with personality," said Marcel Berube who was his supervisor and attended the dinner to honor Mr. Godbout.

Cross-breeding profitable

ST. ALPHONSE DE GRANBY — Dairymen in the region do not limit themselves to keeping dairy types only. They know how to profit from cross breeding with other breeds. This is what happened to a dairyman from St. Alphonse de Granby.

Albert Cote who lives on the fourth range of St. Alphonse operates a Holstein dairy farm. Last year, Mr. Cote followed advice given at the local agronomist's office and decided to inseminate one of his Holstein cows to a "Chianina" beef bull.

Andre Beliveau of the Yamaska Cattle Improvement Club inseminated the cow.

The cow was four-years-old and in her second lactation 8 days ago she gave birth to a heifer calf weighing 115 pounds. Today, eight days later, the calf, lively and well-developed, weighs 136 pounds.

The pregnancy caused no problems. The calf was born without any difficulty or help in a period of 15-20 minutes. Mr. Cote is happy with the results and plans to breed more of his cows to the same "exotic" bull.

Mr. Cote intends to keep his best cows for replacement breedings in his dairy herd.

Guaranteed prices for these crossbred calves offer an interesting supplementary revenue to dairy farmers.

Amin now seeks foreign replacements

KAMPALA (AP) — After throwing out the Asians and watching Western aid fade, President Idi Amin of Uganda now realizes that new foreign help must be brought in to keep his suddenly Africanized economy afloat.

In an interview this weekend, Amin said help should come from "friendly" Arab, European and Asian countries and include engineers, doctors and other experts.

Chinese, Arabs and East Europeans may thus replace expelled Asians of Indian origin and departing Americans and Europeans—but in smaller numbers and for a limited time.

"We are not going to depend completely on outside aid, but we do need temporary assistance... three to four years should be sufficient," he said.

"If the British had helped us to train our people in commerce before independence, we would not now be in a position of asking for technical assistance. The British did not hand over the commerce. They gave it to the Asians, who controlled 99 per cent of it."

Amin took it away from the Asians and deported them on 90 days' notice last fall. He declared last week that black Ugandans should manage all Uganda businesses.

Amin, who announced last Thursday that all Ugandans must exchange their money for new currency—bearing his likeness—within 15 days, told this correspondent he plans a national program to get personal savings "out of the mattresses and holes in the ground" and into banks where the money could help with nation-building.

He also urged his countrymen to stop drinking alcohol and not spend too much time and money enjoying life, but make sacrifices for nation-building.

Amin, a Moslem who gave up alcohol a few years ago, said alcohol and fast living were becoming a problem.

Days of wine and cheese

SHERBROOKE (WM) — The parish council of St. Patrick's Church in Sherbrooke organized a wine and cheese party on Wednesday, Jan. 24, to raise funds for projects in the church.

Mrs. Stella Mayhew, chairman of the entertainment committee, described the wine and cheese party as a new venture. The new venture certainly turned out to be a great success with more than 250 people crowded into St. Patrick's Church Hall for the social event.

The proceeds from the wine and cheese party, Lorne

McCone, president of the church council explained, will be used to set up a communications committee.

"We would like to see stimulation of the members of our parish so that people really get to know one another rather than just coming to church on Sunday," Mr. McCone said.

"We have set up a communications committee to stimulate other activities," Mr. McCone said.

The church council also hopes to set up a youth committee in the near future.

Lions roar in Knowlton

fastest growing in the Eastern Townships and in the introduction speech to the incoming members, Lion Paige Thornton — who roars and rants on occasion — told the new members their prime role was to serve the community, sometimes at large. The Knowlton Lions accepted an onerous role in 1968, and first steps have been achieved with the overall concept within the past year, in the completion of a community park.

Outlook good for manufacturers

OTTAWA (CP) — This should be a good year for manufacturers and the current unstable federal political situation is not likely to affect adversely that outlook, Daniel Sprague of Winnipeg, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said today.

He said the consensus is that 1973 will be another year of strong growth for the Canadian economy, with an indicated increase of about 10 per cent in the value of goods and services produced. But inflation "will cut this gain to about six per cent," he told the Rotary Club here.

"The unacceptably high level of unemployment, of course, is a matter of urgent concern to us all and warrants further government measures to quickly reduce it."

Mr. Sprague said the needed stimulation could come in the new federal budget with tax cuts and other incentives, as well as higher pensions.

However, this could bring with it a worsening of inflationary pressures. Manufacturers, having to compete with foreign producers both at home and abroad "are most vulnerable to the vicious circle of higher and higher prices brought on by higher and higher costs."

DISPUTES ARGUMENT — There were those who argued that the answer is to adjust all kinds of incomes to match inflation "but this is no solution to the problem." It simply built in further inflation.

The public's sense of resignation to the inevitability of inflation disturbed businessmen because it might lead to an attitude that incomes can simply be adjusted upwards as prices rise.

"But manufacturers and exporters who happen to employ a quarter of the labor force cannot afford this easy way out," said Mr. Sprague.

"It is easy enough to advocate government controls over wages and prices as the cure for inflation. They are, of course, nothing of the kind."

They could not be maintained over any great period in a free society "without distorting beyond all recognition the competitive market system," said Mr. Sprague.

"That system, let none of us forget, is based on consumer choice and private initiative, both fundamental to any free society worthy of the name."

WRONG DIRECTION — "To give government peace-time power over wages, prices and profits is a long step down the road to giving it power over the allocation of all resources, including both property and persons."

What then could Canadians do? "Foremost among the important causes of inflation that we can attack to good effect are the soaring expenditures of governments and the impact on production costs not only of various taxes of one kind or another but an incredible variety of government rules and regulations."

The increasingly complex tax situation made business not only a taxpayer but a tax collector, a situation highly detrimental to the small businessman. Added to this was a host of laws and regulations.

No one should underestimate the inflationary impact of this ever-growing burden of hidden costs, "inevitably passed on to the buyer." A vast simplification was needed of the "accumulation of tax upon tax, form upon form, regulation upon regulation."

And there was little indication the situation was going to get better.

ALWAYS MORE — "Always there is more legislation to be put on the books, rarely is there any to be deleted."

Average wages, pushed by union power, were climbing at eight to nine per cent across the board, "regardless of the performance of any particular industry." Canada's ability to compete "is seriously endangered on this account alone." A national conference was needed each year to bring all sectors of the economy together to assess what needed to be done.

"I believe that our competitive system itself is in jeopardy," said Mr. Sprague, in summing up. "We are at the crossroads. Our future well-being depends upon our taking the road that leads to restoration of the efficiency of our market economy."

The growth of government must be slowed down.

"Any real effort to overcome inflation and generate the new job opportunities needed in the private sector of the economy must begin here," Mr. Sprague concluded.

A text of his address was released prior to delivery.

Money men uneasy

LONDON (CP) — A series of developments in international money markets has sent a quiver of uneasiness through financial circles in Britain, where fears of another world monetary crisis are never far from the surface.

After several months of relative quiet, foreign exchange markets have come in for a sudden mild buffeting within the last couple of weeks, causing growing concern whether the system may be sliding toward an extended period of turbulence.

First event to shake the calm was an Italian decision to establish a two-tier system for the country's official currency, the lira.

Then the Swiss announced that the franc would be allowed to float freely on international exchanges for a time, in the same way as the Canadian dollar and British sterling.

Meanwhile, the French franc came under sustained downward pressure as investors expressed growing concern over the outcome of the forthcoming French general elections and the possibility of victory for a Socialist-Communist coalition.

Partly as a result of these movements, the U.S. dollar weakened notably against virtually every major European currency, reversing, at least momentarily, a strengthening trend over the last months.

Hold dart tourney

NEWPORT (IH) — The Southern Eastern Townships dart league singles dart tournament was held on Sunday, January 21 at the Veterans of Foreign Wars legion home in Newport.

There were 22 women and 40 men registered to participate in the games. Elsie Kerr of Richmond, Que., won the floating prize trophy for first place, a trophy to keep and a choice of several lovely prizes that were on display. The runner-up was Roberta Scott of North Hatley who also received a trophy to keep and a prize. On the men's side, the top man was Mickey Macfarlane of Beebe. He too was presented the floating prize trophy, a trophy to keep and choice of the men's prizes. Runner-up was Richard Reynolds of Rock Island. He was presented a trophy to keep and a prize. Prizes also went to the third and second rounds winners. George Berwick, Richmond, Que., organizer of the tournament is President of SETDL. He was assisted by his executive members on Sunday.

Two special prizes were drawn. The winners were B. Berube and Mariette McBain, one prize going to each side of the Border. The zone singles tournament is to be played at the Legion Memorial in Stanstead on Friday evening, January 26. Prizes and trophies will be presented.

The two-tier system in Italy is similar to one already operating in France and means, essentially, that the current official exchange rate will be maintained in dealings among central banks but the currency will be permitted to move fairly freely in unofficial transactions.

The move was generally regarded as a logical step towards easing the fierce speculation which imposed heavy downward pressure on the lira for some time.

But it also causes some confusion in the markets, and taken with the other developments, tends to weaken confidence in the system of exchange rates fixed at the end of 1971.

Floating of the Swiss franc also has raised questions about stability. Though the government has said the float is temporary, nobody can be certain this will be the case.

Experts point out that the Canadian dollar has been floating for several years, although government officials stressed that the move was only a temporary one.

The German mark has been consistently strong on international exchanges but German officials now are expressing concern that funds may move out of the lira and into the mark, strengthening pressure for an upward revaluation of their currency.

Two other key currencies, the U.S. dollar and Japanese yen, have been the subject of most recent speculation.

Weakness of the dollar indicated, experts here say that the American currency still has some way to go before complete recovery, although the trend towards an enhanced stature seems well established.

President Nixon's Vietnam peace news had little or no effect on the dollar's performance and experts agree that a worsening U.S. trade deficit is the main cause of the weaker performance.

The Japanese have added to international uncertainty by consistently refusing to increase the exchange value of the yen despite reserves of gold and foreign currency totalling nearly $20 billion and a $9 billion trade surplus last year.

Over-all, the Italians and the French, in addition to the Japanese, are enjoying trade surpluses, with Germany in a slight deficit, Britain in a deteriorating trade position and the Americans suffering a massive imbalance.

Experts contend that this is not reflected in the current exchange rate structure and this may lead to a more serious upheaval in the future.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. George Poole, Ayer's Cliff, who celebrates his 96th birthday on Monday, January 29th.

Habs' 13-game streak snapped

Boucha on the war-path; record goal paces Wings

Henry Boucha, who could hardly wait to vault the barriers into professional hockey after starring for the United States in the 1972 Olympics at Sapporo, Japan, Sunday broke a record it took 40 years to surpass.

The 21-year-old native of Warroad, Minn., opened the scoring at Montreal with the game just six seconds old to launch Detroit Red Wings to a 4-2 win over Montreal Canadiens and into a challenging position for the playoffs.

The Wings, in ending Montreal's 13-game unbeaten string, closed to within two points of fourth-place Buffalo in the National Hockey League East when the Sabres suffered an 8-5 setback to Atlanta Flames.

Boucha's sixth goal of the year, a backhand past rookie goaltender Wayne Thomas, was faster by one second than the game opener fired by Charlie Conacher of Toronto Maple Leafs on Feb. 6, 1932, in a 6-0 win over Boston Bruins.

In other games Sunday, New York Rangers kept pace with East Division-leading Montreal with an easy 5-2 win over Toronto and remained six points up on third-place Boston, hard-pressed in a 6-5 decision over Los Angeles Kings. Chicago Black Hawks handled Minnesota North Stars 5-1 and Philadelphia Flyers nipped California Golden Seals 4-3.

FLYERS IN SECOND

The victory moved Philadelphia into second in the West. They trail Chicago by eight points and are just one ahead of Minnesota and two up on Atlanta.

The Flyers topped Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3 Saturday in a game which could seriously impede their playoff drive. Veteran defenceman Barry Ashbee, upset by a call from referee Bryan Lewis, either hit or pushed the official to the ice and drew a game misconduct penalty.

Lewis required medical treatment.

The incident took place late in a game that was staged bitterly by both clubs. Lewis had earlier nailed Flyers' Andre Dupont with a game misconduct, assessed eight fighting majors and 113 minutes in penalties over-all. Saturday's other scores were:

Montreal 4, Toronto 2, New York 6, Detroit 3, Chicago 4, Boston 2 and St. Louis Blues 5, Vancouver Canucks 3.

During the Chicago-Boston game, at Boston Garden, lineman Matt Ravlich was taken ill with severe chest pains between the first and second periods. Examination in hospital disclosed the veteran official had a hernia.

The NHL all-star game, featuring stars of the East against the West, is scheduled for New York's Madison Square Garden Tuesday night.

The next regular scheduled games are Wednesday when New York Islanders visit Toronto, the Rangers entertain California and Los Angeles is in Pittsburgh.

"I had no idea, really I didn't," Boucha said in a postgame interview when told about his record-setting score. He said the pass from centre Bill Collins "was bouncing when I hit it with a backhand and it sort of fluttered into the goal."

DEJORDY HOLDS 'GROUND'

Ex-Canadian goaltender Denis DeJordy didn't let a penalty shot award to Montreal's Jacques Lemaire in the third period upset his poise.

"All you (a goaltender) can do is stand your ground," he recalled. Besides, "we were up 4-1 and I know there was no way the guys were going to let down."

Boucha's goal stood for less than four minutes, defenceman Guy Lapointe getting the equalizer at 3:47. But Nick Libbitt tallied the tie-breaker at 6:04 of the opening period and Marcel Dionne put the game out of reach with his 23rd of the year late in the second.

Jean Ratelle scored twice and linemate Rod Gilbert was credited with four assists as the Rangers stretched their unbeaten string to 10 games against Toronto at New York.

Ratelle's first of the night, at 2:48 of the second period, was his 250th career goal and opened a 3-1 lead that he subsequently padded to 4-1 about four minutes later, Gilbert drawing assists on both scores.

The Bruins got three goals from Wayne Cashman for the second time in a week, but it almost wasn't enough as the Kings rally just fell short.

Los Angeles, down 5-2 going into the final 20 minutes, got scores from Bob Berry, Juha Widing and Frank St. Marseille—a recent acquisition from St. Louis. But veteran Johnny Bucyk responded shortly after Berry's score to make it 6-3 Boston—a lead the Kings couldn't rise to.

SABRES SINGED

Atlanta's Flames got three goals each from Keith McCreary and Roy Comeau to end a five-game winless streak, marking the first time any player has scored three goals in a game for the fledgling team.

The Sabres twice rebounded to tie the score—the second time on Jim Lorentz's second goal of the game at 4:23 of the third period.

But two goals by Comeau sealed the victory and Ernie Hicke wrapped it up with his 11th of the year at 16:43.

Two goals by Cliff Koroll in the first period put the game out of Minnesota's reach, giving Chicago a 3-0 lead after Dennis Hull's 26th of the season had opened the scoring with the game just 21 seconds old.

Philadelphia's rugged play from the previous night carried over into the opening period against California with several minor skirmishes. The major contests featured Seals' Stan Gilbertson and Tom Bladon of Philadelphia and Bert Marshall, California captain, going against rugged Bob Kelly.

Reg Leach and Rick Smith tallied early in the third period to climax California's rally from a 3-0 deficit to tie the score.

But with just over three minutes remaining, Bill Flett sank the winner on Seals' Gilles Meloche.

North Hatley takes School-Boy Bonspiel

LENNOXVILLE — Sixteen rinks entered the School Boy Bonspiel on Friday and Saturday at Lennoxville Curling Club.

They were divided into four sections. Each team played three games against the teams in its division.

The team with the best record in each section went into the semi-finals. Wilson, (North Hatley) and Paul, (Richmond) advanced with records of 3-0.

However, five other teams qualified for the final two places.

Saturday evening all eyes were on the ice as the Fowls rink, the Hibbard rink and the Thornton rink played-off on ice No. 1. By cutting the cards, Thornton received a bye.

The Fowls and Hibbard rinks, with each player throwing one rock, played off. Hibbard won, not having to throw his final rock. Then Hibbard played Thornton. Thornton with the last rock, was forced to draw the two foot ring to win.

On ice number two, Lee

Gerrish defeated Mike Davis in a similar manner.

With five of the 16 rinks involved in these playoffs, there was tension and excitement at the Lennoxville Curling Club.

Lee Gerrish defeated Frank Wilson in a thrilling extra-end, all-North Hatley semi-final. On the other sheet, Thornton took an early lead over Doug Paul but found himself taken to an extra end before winning.

The finals, between Don Thornton of Stanstead College and Lee Gerrish of North Hatley, were contested over eight ends for the Everett Denison Trophy and the Club's 50th Anniversary Pin.

The winning team, skipped by Lee Gerrish of North Hatley had Garry Guild as lead, Glen Ditchburn as second and Randy Taylor as third. The score was 7-6 in their favor.

The runners-up were skipped by Don Thornton of Stanstead College, with Herbie Von Falkenhausen as lead, Dave Savue, second and Joel Pearce, third.

Support of the Bonspiel and its organizer, Sam Abbott, may be seen in that 16 of Lennoxville's senior members were at the Club from 1 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Saturday to perform the duties of umpires. All of the umpires were impressed by the enthusiasm and conduct of the curlers.

This Bonspiel augurs well for school boy curling and the future of curling in general in the Eastern Townships.

Hoop tourney highlights action Galt weekend

By BRUCE PORTER

LENNOXVILLE — The Alexander Galt Regional High School first annual Invitational Boys Basketball Tournament highlighted the weekend's activities at Galt, with the Brampton Centennial Secondary Schoolteam taking home the hardware.

Other action consisted of four hockey games, two basketball contests, two volleyball teams entered in tournament competition and the wrestling squad competing in the Riverdale tournament.

Thursday, the senior and junior hockey Pipers challenged Chateaugay Valley Regional in Chateaugay, with the juniors losing 6-1 while the seniors brought home a 6-0 win. The lone scorer was Randy Davidson, assisted by Bob Fisher for the Juniors.

Alan Webb spearheaded the Senior attack with three goals, followed by Garland Nadeau and Tim Bronson, with two and one respectively. Goalie Bruce Burnham picked up his fourth shutout in five games.

The Juniors and bantam 'White' pucksters sent their Lower Canada College opponents home Friday with two losses, the bantams winning 5-4 while the juniors romped to a 4-1 victory. Bantam scorers were Stan Bell with two, while Dave Coley, Don Planché, and Stewart MacDonnell each netted singles.

Scoring for the Juniors were Brian Dezan assisted by John Mills and Alan Robinson; Dan Speck from Brian Nicoll and Dan Goselin; Mills, with assists going to Bob Fisher and Speck and Speck from Mike Bresee.

The AGRHS wrestling team took part in the Riverdale High tournament in Pierrefonds, and returned with four medals. Novice Tim Clark won a gold in the 160 pound category, while another novice, Greg Goodsell, took a silver in the 101 pound division.

Alfred Fequet copped a bronze in the 157 experienced, weight class, while another bronze went to Harrison Webster in the experienced heavyweight division.

The tournament consisted of 307 participants and approximately 540 bouts.

The junior boys' and girls' volleyball squads ventured to Cowansville to participate in the Massey-Vanier Regional tournament, with both teams taking top honors in their respective categories.

The boys' team defeated MVRHS two games straight, downed Missisquoi in three games and rounded off play beating Richmond Regional in two games. Mike Murray and Brian Parsons came through for Galt in the spiking department. The team's next game is at Galt against MVRHS.

The girls met only two other teams, beating Richmond Regional in three games while it took only two to down the Massey-Vanier squad. Good front line play is credited for the victory. Next action for the team is February 8 against RRHS.

Friday night, the senior girls' basketball squad played Chateaugay Valley regional in the first of two games on the weekend, winning 34-14. Barb Coates was the Galt high-scorer with 12 points, followed by Sue Berwick with six.

Colleen and Karen Cooney and Maureen Hallam each had six points while Wendy Stuart and Debby McLeod collected two each. Saturday, Galt defeated DVRHS 48-14.

In first round action in the AGRHS boys basketball tournament Friday night, Alexander Galt downed Chateaugay Valley Reg. 72-33, while Massey-Vanier Regional was victorious over Seminaire de Sherbrooke 67-37. Chomeyde High defeated St. Lawrence High 60-40 and Brampton Centennial beat Richmond Regional, 50-28.

On Saturday, SLHS edged Seminaire 45-43 while RRHS notched a 58-54 win over CVRHS.

AGRHS came out on the low end of a 56-41 score against BCSS, while MVRHS downed CHS 73-39.

In the consolation final, RRHS took a 54-39 win over SLHS, while in the championship final, after leading at half-time 24-22, Brampton eked out a narrow win over Massey-Vanier with less than thirty seconds left in the game in an exciting 42-40 contest. The trophy was presented by tournament chairman Garth Smith to BCSS co-captains Bernd Niermann and Bruce Thorne.

The highest point total in a game by a player was shared by Mike Laframboise of SLHS and Charles Doyle of RRHS, with 25 points each. Chomeyde's Robert Ross was runner-up with 24 points.

The highest points total in the tournament went to Richmond's Charles Doyle with 61 points, followed by Mike Laframboise with 47.

Bruce Morin of RRHS collected 41 points while Thorne and Niermann from BCSS netted 44 and 37 points respectively. Henry Blumenfeld of MVRHS also collected 37 points.

An All-star team, selected by the AGRHS physical education staff, consisted of John Hunter, Henry Blumenfeld and Dwight Waterman from MVRHS, accompanied by Bernd Niermann and Bruce Thorne from BCSS.

The turnout for the tournament was below the expected number, with the majority of spectators being students. Several coaches commented on the efficient running of the tournament and said their boys enjoyed being billeted with Lennoxville and Sherbrooke families for a one night.

All in all, a successful and exciting tournament was seen by those who did come out.

Quebec promises to pick up tab

MONTREAL (CP) — If the 1976 Olympic Games result in a deficit of about $5 million or $10 million, the Quebec government will not hesitate to pick up the tab, Finance Minister Raymond Garneau said Sunday.

Mr. Garneau, interviewed on a CBC French-language television program, said the Games will cost about $310 million and these costs can be covered by revenue from the Olympics.

He said the total figure represents about $250 million for facilities and $60 million for administration costs.

The $250 million figure includes the cost of building the Olympic stadium and other athletic facilities in Montreal and sailing facilities in Kingston, Ont., the finance minister said.

It was the first indication from government sources of the anticipated cost of the Games.

The federal government has asked for guarantees that it will not be required to pick up any possible deficit for the Summer Games and has not yet approved the budget presented by the Montreal organizing committee.

Mr. Garneau said Sunday that the estimated cost contained a margin for error and inflation and that the committee had not requested funds from Ottawa. The committee wants permission to raise its own funds through a national lottery and the sales of commemorative coins and special stamps.

Money from these projects would cover the costs of erecting Games facilities while the $60 million price tag he projected for administration costs would be derived from ticket sales and the sale of television rights.

The organizing committee last month announced it had granted the U.S. television rights to the American Broadcasting Corp. for the unprecedented sum of $25 million.

Still open for bidding are the world radio and television rights. It was not clear whether the cost of building the Olympic Village was included in Mr. Garneau's figures.

The finance minister said the Central and Mortgage Housing Corp. should help with the cost of the village because it would be available for housing after the Olympics.

"There is a need for housing in Montreal and the housing which will be built for the Olympics cannot be added to the Olympic budget," he said.

Describing the Montreal Games as "a challenge which must be accepted", Mr. Garneau said it would be disastrous to the economy of Montreal and Quebec if they were cancelled. He did not elaborate.

In the WHA Blazers blazing back

Philadelphia Blazers finally can feel what it's like being in the thick of the Eastern Division standings of the World Hockey Association.

The Blazers, after a season-long struggle to emerge from the depths of the division cellar, squeaked by Alberta Oilers 1-0 in overtime in Edmonton Saturday night to move one point ahead of Ottawa Nationals into fifth place in the six team division.

But their winning glory didn't last long. The Oilers got revenge in one of four league games Sunday, drubbing the Philadelphians 4-2 before some 4,174 in Edmonton.

Western Division-leading Winnipeg Jets edged Ottawa 5-4. Los Angeles Sharks walloped New York Raiders 9-2 and Houston Aeros downed Chicago Cougars 4-3 in the other Sunday games.

In play Saturday, Quebec Les

Nordiques defeated New England Whalers 3-1 and Cleveland Crusaders got by Chicago 2-1.

League play resumes tonight with New England visiting Cleveland in a battle for first place in the east. The teams have identical records of 29 wins, 18 losses and one tie.

BREAKS DEADLOCK

Danny Lawson broke in alone during the sudden-death overtime period in Edmonton Saturday night to score the only goal and bring the Blazers out of the cellar.

It was the 21st win of the season for the Blazers, currently one of the hottest clubs in the WHA in several weeks. It gave them 42 points, one better than Ottawa.

Jack Norris' outstanding goaltending helped turn the tide for the Oilers versus Sunday. Eddie Joyal, Doug Barrie, Roger Cote and Jim Harrison shot the Alberta goals while Andre Lacroix, the WHA scoring leader, and Michel Boudreau had the Philadelphia tallies.

Ottawa's largest crowd of the season—7,247 fans—saw the Jets rally for the victory.

Booby Hull scored the game winner and helped out on two others to spark the win. He was on the ice for all five Jets' goals.

Norm Beaudin scored two for Winnipeg while Bill Sutherland and A McDonald had the others. Guy Trotter, Brian Conacher, Bob Leduc and Tom Martin shared the Ottawa goals.
