Afternoon scenes on Mount Royal, Montreal, which are illustrative of the manner in which Canadians of all ages find pleasure and enjoyment in the exhilarating winter air and sports of their native land.

writings and utterances are accepted with respect by scholars throughout the world. This latter fact, perhaps, accounts for the apparent eagerness of American colleges to secure their services.

That this band of outstanding scholars should be lost to Canada at the time of her growth and critical development is unfortunate. Why they are lost is an unanswered question. It is pointed out in explanation that Canada has no strong Graduate School in which students are trained for educational careers; that consequently students seeking graduate instruction must enter the large graduate schools of the United States colleges; that because of liberal inducements they remain in the alien country and are lost to their own land. This explanation is not without force. The graduate school problem is one which the larger Canadian colleges—particularly McGill—are to-day trying hard to solve. Another theory is the old one of the prophet without honor in his own country. It is said that Canadians in college work have no recognition in their own land; that, when a vacancy occurs on the staff of a Canadian university, Canadians are ignored and the vacancy is invariably filled by a man from an over-seas school or college who is frequently but poorly qualified in personality or in scholarship for his task. In short, that, for the plums in the Canadian professorial basket, no Canadian need apply. "A Canadian university is a good place for a Canadian scholar to avoid, if he wishes promotion," said a noted Canadian-born professor in the United States recently. How well-founded is this theory, the Canadian colleges can answer. The regrettable fact is that a glance at the Faculty lists of the majority of Canadian colleges shows it to be not without truth.

Of all United States colleges, Harvard University has the largest number of Canadian-born professors on its staff. It also has the largest number of Canadian students in its various departments. Canada sends more students to Harvard than any other foreign country. This is not unnatural. Harvard is the oldest and greatest university on this continent. Its history covers a period of almost three hundred years—a long period even in the life of a nation. Its birth was almost contemporaneous with the settlement of the New World. It was British in its foundation; for one hundred and forty years it was British in its allegiance; to-day it is American, but it is the leader on this continent in the new international movement—federation through education, and through exchange of professors with England, Germany and France; it is one of the most cosmopolitan universities in the world, and it continues to draw large numbers of British students. Another reason for its attractiveness is that it offers more courses in a greater variety of subjects than any other American University. It has not only the largest faculty, it has also the most eminent. From the directory of great living American scholars who have made noted contributions to the world's learning, it appears that, of these, Harvard has on its staff a number over twice as large as that on the staff of any other American University; it appears, further, that of those whose names appear in the directory, the number trained at Harvard in undergraduate work is very far in excess of the number trained elsewhere. Harvard's instructors have always ranked high in scholarship, in personality, in humanity. Other American universities have found that there are many things which show off better than brains; Harvard has never succumbed to this idea; it has never yielded to the temptation to cut salaries in order to put up splendid buildings; it spends its income for the education of the present generation instead of hoarding it for the future; it emphasizes brains, not bricks; and so long as it retains its prestige as the foremost university

ALTHOUGH Canada's population is comparatively small, and her educational history comparatively brief, she has given a large number of eminent scholars and educators to the Universities of the United States. The number of Canadian-born professors in American colleges has in late years largely increased, until almost every university of note on the other side of the line numbers one or more Canadians on its staff. With few exceptions these men are leading authorities in their special fields of study and research, and their

THE NEW HOME OF THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION IN MONTREAL—This magnificent building, now in course of erection on Drummond street, will be one of the finest Association buildings on the Continent when completed. In its interior appointments it will be thoroughly up-to-date. The Montreal Y.M.C.A. is the oldest Association on the Continent of America, and the erection of its new home was rendered necessary by the somewhat limited accommodation of the present building on Dominion Square, which is far too small to meet the demands upon it, but which only dates from 1885. (For descriptive article see "Sunday at Home" page in letter-press section.)

SMALLEST PASSENGER LOCOMOTIVE IN THE WORLD—The above is a photographic reproduction of one of the most remarkable locomotives in the world. It was made by Mr. Walter J. Russell, of London, Eng., and is powerful enough to draw its maker over a miniature track. The length of the engine over all is 40 inches; length of engine only, 22 1/2 inches; height from rail to chimney, 8 3/4 inches; total weight, 32 pounds. Only eight castings were used in its construction, as it was made almost entirely from sheet metal and scrap.

THE TWENTY-SECOND PLATE IN THE STANDARD'S SERIES OF GREAT CATHEDRAL PICTURES—The west front of Exeter Cathedral. This splendid church was commenced in 1112 by Bishop Warelwast, and dedicated in 1351. The massive Norman Towers standing on the north and south sides were opened below in the 13th century to form transepts, and the main structure was subsequently transformed from the Norman to the Geometrical Decorated style of architecture. The episcopal throne is a remarkable construction in oak. Special features associated with the Cathedral (which is 408 feet long by 140 feet in width across the transepts) are the exterior western screen (seen in the above illustration), adorned with 67 statues of saints and princes; the beautiful choir screen (1324), surmounted by the fine organ (1665); the minstrel's gallery (1353); the miserere, sedilia, reredos, stall-work, and choir; a clock, dating from 1317 or earlier; the Great Peter bell, brought from Llandaff in 1482, recast in 1616, and weighing 12,500 lbs.; and the chapter-house (1420-78), containing 8,000 priceless manuscripts and early books. In 1870-77 the Cathedral was restored by Sir Gilbert Scott at a cost of £40,000, and in 1889 the cloisters and library.

A CHURCH IN WHICH CANADIANS ARE INTERESTED—An interior view of the Lady Chapel in the Church of St. Jude-on-the-Hill at the Hampstead Garden Suburb, London, Eng. This somewhat unique chapel was recently dedicated by the Bishop of Islington. It forms a part of the Church of St. Jude, now in course of erection,—of which the Rev. B. G. Bourchier, M.A., who preached the Lenten Mission in 1909 at the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Montreal, is Vicar. This church will be the spiritual home of the residents of London's first Garden Suburb, and, when finished, will contain a pulpit and lectern, the cost of which has already been defrayed by Canadians resident in Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Quebec. The church, it is expected, will be consecrated by the Bishop of London on May 7th next. The Hampstead Garden Suburb owes its inception to Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, the Earl of Grey, until recently Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Right Hon. A. Lyttelton, K.C., M.P., and Mrs. S. A. Barnett. Its object is to prevent, rather than alleviate, some of London's social evils. It puts within reach of the working classes the opportunity of having, at a moderate rent, a home and garden, within a penny fare of central London. It gives the poor better homes, purer air, more space and freedom. It has been suggested that a similar Garden Suburb should be established in the vicinity of Montreal.

AN HISTORIC INCIDENT IN THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S TOUR OF AFRICA—Native chiefs at Gaborone bearing gold-mounted sticks brought to them by the Duke of His Majesty the King. on this continent, its degrees will be sought by ambitious students from Canada. Canadianism at Harvard is illustrated not alone by the number of Canadian students and professors. Long before Canadian Clubs were thought about in this country, Harvard had an enthusiastic Canadian Club. Its beginning was small; to-day it has a spacious and splendid club-house of its own,—the only college national club-house in existence. The purpose of the Club is to promote Canadian spirit and to keep alive Canadian loyalty; to promote social intercourse among its members and to further the best interests of Harvard in the British Empire, particularly in Canada. Addresses are frequently given at its meetings by Canadians prominent in public life. The House is maintained by Harvard Canadians, and by the Canadian students at Harvard, many of whom have rooms in the club-house; to its support Lord Strathcona and other prominent Canadians have also generously contributed as an evidence of their sympathy with its objects and of their belief in its usefulness to Canada.

Of the distinguished group of Canadian-born professors at Harvard, the oldest is Dr. S. M. McVane, Professor of History. Dr. McVane is a native of Prince Edward Island. He was graduated from Acadia College in Nova Scotia in 1865; he then followed post-graduate courses at Berlin and at Harvard, and received his Ph.D. degree in History. In 1878 he became an Instructor in History at Harvard; in 1883 Assistant Professor; and in 1886 Professor of History, the chair he now holds. He is the author of "A Political History of Europe since 1814," "The Working Principles of Political Economy," "The Marginal Utility of Value," and of numerous other books and brochures.

Dr. Benjamin Rand, Librarian of the

Philosophical Library at Harvard, is well-known to Canadians. He was one of the founders of the Harvard Canadian Club and is still its leading spirit.

Dr. W. H. Schofield, Chairman of the Department of Comparative Literature, was born in Brockville, Ont. He was graduated from Victoria University in 1889. In 1892 he entered the Graduate School of Harvard. He received his Ph.D. degree in English in 1895, studied for a time in Paris and Christiania, where he devoted his attention particularly to Icelandic language and literature, and later was called to the English Department of Harvard. He is now Chairman of the Department of Comparative Literature. Two years ago he was selected by President Eliot, of Harvard, as the Harvard exchange professor to Germany, and his selection, because of his Canadian birth and British allegiance, called forth much criticism from a section of the American and German press. Professor Schofield is the author of "A History of English Literature to the Norman Conquest," "Studies on the Libanus Decanus," and of numerous books and monographs on Chaucerian subjects, mediæval literature, and Icelandic literature.

Dr. W. B. Munro, Assistant Professor of Government, is a native of Ontario. He was graduated from Queen's University, and later received his Ph.D. in Government from the Harvard Graduate School. After a brief period on the staff of Williams College, he was called to Harvard. Professor Munro's work in his special field has been extensive. Many of his publications are of particular interest to Canadians, as they deal with the history of our country. He is the author of "The Seigneurial System in Canada,—a Study in French Colonial Policy," "The Office of Intendant in New France," "The Jesuit Relations, their Value as Historical Material," "Can-

AN IMPRESSIVE INCIDENT CONNECTED WITH THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S VISIT TO SOUTH AFRICA—His Royal Highness at the grave of the late Right Hon. Cecil Rhodes, who, for nearly a quarter of a century, was the dominating personality on the imperial side in South African politics. He was Premier of Cape Colony for many years, resigning as such, however, after the Jameson Raid, for which he held himself "morally culpable." He died in 1902, and was buried on the summit of the Matoppo Hills, Rhodesia, at a spot consecrated by his will as a resting-place for those whose lives had been worthily spent in the service of South Africa. About 80 yards to the south-east of Mr. Rhodes' grave is the massive granite monument in which lie the remains of Major Alan Wilson and his party, who fell on the Shanghai River on Dec. 5, 1893. The Matoppo Hills proved impregnable when held by the Matabili in the 1896-7 rebellion.

dian Club and is still its leading spirit. Dr. Rand is a native of Nova Scotia, and, like Professor McVane, a graduate of Acadia College. After graduation he entered Harvard for post-graduate work; for four years he was Walker Fellow; his career as a student was brilliant both at Harvard and at Heidelberg; and, in 1855, he received his Ph.D. degree in Philosophy,—his special field of study. Since that time he has been associated with the Philosophy Department of Harvard. Dr. Rand's literary work covers a wide range. He is the author of "A Bibliography of Philosophy," a work of comprehensive scope; of "Modern Classical Philosophers," of "The Classical Moralists," and of several other books.

Dr. W. A. Neilson, Professor of English, is a Scotchman by birth, but he has lived long enough in Canada to be called a Canadian. After graduating from Edinburgh University, he came to Canada, where for a time he was connected with the staff of Upper Canada College. He entered Harvard for post-graduate study, and received his Ph.D. degree in English. For a time he was connected with the English Department of Columbia University, but in 1905 became Professor of English at Harvard. Professor Neilson is general editor of the "Types of Literature" series; his investigations in connection with Shakespeare and the Age of Shakespeare have been extensive; he has edited the edition of Shakespeare in "The Cambridge Poets" series; he is the author of "The Origin and Sources of the Court of Love," "The Original of the Complaynt of Scotland," "A History of Allegory," and of several other books and monographs which have won wide recognition.

Dr. E. C. Jeffrey, Professor of Botany, is a native of St. Catharines, Ont. He was graduated from Toronto University in 1888. He became Fellow in Biology in the University in 1889, and two years later Lecturer in that subject. He then entered the post-graduate school of Harvard, received his MONTREAL'S NEW HARBOR GRAIN ELEVATOR—This huge structure, now in course of erection, when completed, will be the largest grain-handling house in the world. It is being built by the Harbor Commissioners, and will be ready, it is hoped, for the reception of grain in September.

PICTURESQUE SCENES IN THE EMPIRE'S OLDEST COLONY—A charming panorama at Bourne Bay, Newfoundland, showing the extremely pretty scenery surrounding the quaint little village at Woody Point, the business centre of the district. The development of Newfoundland is steadily proceeding, and the island is now becoming a popular resort for tourists and sportsmen. Big game are found in the interior, and the fishing pools in the different arms are now being annually whipped by anglers from Canada and the United States. The pulp wood industry is rapidly growing, and railway branches are being constructed.

PICTURESQUE SCENES IN THE EMPIRE'S OLDEST COLONY—A landscape near Bourne Bay, Newfoundland, showing the plateau on Mount Groar's Morne, which somewhat resembles Table Rock in Cape Colony, South Africa. This plateau reaches a height of 1,000 feet, and around it snow can be found at any period of the year, notwithstanding the fact that during the summer temperatures of 80, 90 and even 100 degrees are registered.

PICTURESQUE SCENES IN THE EMPIRE'S OLDEST COLONY—Bourne Bay, situated at the north-west part of the island of Newfoundland, about 625 miles from St. John's. The chief industry is fishing—cod, herring, lobster, halibut and salmon being found in abundance. The scenery around Bourne Bay is said to be unsurpassed for rugged beauty. On entering the harbor one immediately is met by hills in the foreground and beyond, mountains peeping over each other's shoulders, some being very high. (Photos by R. Roberts, Montreal.)

THE MEDICAL TREATMENT OF MONTREAL SCHOOL CHILDREN—An exterior view of St. Luke's Hospital, wherein free medical services are given to the school children of poor families. The Montreal schools contain from 15,000 to 20,000 boys and girls who are suffering from diseases of the eyes, teeth, ears, throat, etc. Thousands of these are so poor that they are quite unable to pay for the services of a dentist or surgeon. To all such St. Luke's Hospital is a boon, as in it they are treated free of charge. In order that they may continue to carry on such a work, the directors of the Hospital appeal to charitable hearts and to citizens who can afford to be generous.

ada and British North America," and of other works relating to Canadian history. He has also done a large amount of work in connection with municipal government. He is the author of "The Civic Federation Report on Public Ownership," "The Galveston Plan of City Government," "The Government of European Cities." Dr. W. S. Ferguson, Assistant Professor of Classical History, is a native of Prince Edward Island. He was graduated from McGill University in 1896. He then entered the Graduate School of Cornell, where he received his Ph.D. degree in 1899. After a year of study in Europe, he joined the staff of the University of California; here he remained until 1908, when he was called to Harvard. Dr. Ferguson's work in the field of Classical History has won enthusiastic commendation from scholars in Europe and America. His investigations in his "History of Athens" have placed him in the first rank of leading authorities in his subject. He has published several brochures on subjects in his special field, and his contributions to classical journals have been numerous. Dr. K. G. T. Webster, Instructor in English, is a native of Nova Scotia. He was graduated from Dalhousie University in the early 'nineties. He then entered the Graduate School of Harvard, where he received his Ph.D. in English, and later joined the English Department of the University. Dr. Webster's special field is mediæval literature, and his investigations in this field have been extensive. The members of the above group of Canadian scholars at Harvard are more than investigators and authorities; they are sympathetic teachers; they have the faculty of winning and inspiring students; and in drawing Canadians to Harvard, their influence is a potent force. They are part of Canada's contribution to the world of scholarship, for in their special fields of learning, they take rank among the greatest living authorities.
