Allowing animals to suffer in the service of mankind

"The fav'rite pastime iv civilized man is croolty."

Mr. Dooley

Tuesday's front page announced the National Assembly's standing committee on agriculture was beginning three days of hearings into draft legislation proposed by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. This long-overdue bill will require the licensing of pet shops and give broader powers to the SPCA in combating cruelty of all kinds — particularly puppy mills.

The only legislation in Canada's criminal code forbids causing "unnecessary" suffering to animals and birds. That implies an unspecified amount of suffering by creatures in the service of mankind is both necessary and acceptable.

"As it stands," said Joan Clark who had helped draft the bill, "it's only after an animal has suffered and is in a real state of disrepair that we can step in."

This is hardly front page stuff for most newspapers but readers of the Record are depressingly familiar with raids by the Sherbrooke SPCA to rescue starving cattle and horses or close down puppy mills. Each story is accompanied with photographs of animals "in a real state of disrepair" and it is clear that something must be done.

Pet shop owners, of course, are opposed to the proposed legislation lest it interfere with their $85 million annual business in Quebec.

"We are quite able to set our own standards," sniffed one, using an argument favored by burglars everywhere. "The SPCA's law goes too far. Forcing (pet shops) to get registration certificates is nothing more than another form of taxation. Why should our money underwrite the SPCA?"

Who's Who

By Tadeusz Letarte

Well, for starters, because you profit from puppy mills, because you sell cute little ducklings and chicks, goslings and bunnies every Easter, cute little kittens and appealing puppies all year round which can't be returned once their appeal wears off. Many are then abandoned in the city or dumped in the country to starve, run wild, or depend — like Blanche DuBois — on the kindness of strangers. And because it is the unpleasant task of the volunteer, non-profit SPCAs to clean up the mess after pet shops have made their profits.

It's likely this proposed legislation will be opposed by the powerful hunting and trapping lobby, too, because they know cruelty to domestic animals is only a step away from cruelty to wild creatures. Last month, the Sherbrooke Society for the Protection of Animals courageously brought suit against a Lake Megantic trapper for leaving a bear caught in his leg snare for days, perhaps weeks. The trapper will claim that it is all perfectly legal, even ethical and he would be right.

Most civilized countries have either outlawed trapping entirely or passed laws requiring trap lines be visited within specified times to end the suffering of animals caught in them. Last year, the Quebec Ministry of Killing for Fun published a "Code of Ethics" suggesting traps be visited "regularly." This is the first time the SPCA has attempting to prosecute a trapper for cruelty in the performance of his sport — and it may well set a precedent. Two weeks ago, the SPCA publicly condemned a Weedon hunt club for its annual woodchuck hunt in which prizes are awarded for the most animals killed by one hunter. Sportsmen taking part must view the taking of a life as having no more meaning than plinking a tin can.

And these are not bad people. Their sport is lawful, healthy and great fun. They love their wives, protect their children and wouldn't dream of abusing the family dog or cat. They may enjoy wrasslin' and the cop shows and even subscribe to K-Tel Videos currently turning the Gulf War into home entertainment but all that is perfectly legal, too.

They may even be concerned with violence on television and support Quebec's proposed legislation to limit the number of violent incidents per hour in children's programming. After all, everybody knows that little Johnny or Janie may be psychically injured by watching Wile E. Coyote blow himself up or Sylvester squashed flat by a steamroller.

But when little Johnny or Janie reaches the ripe old age of 12, the Province of Quebec will license them to carry a gun of their own and shoot wild animals with it. (Children younger than 12 can be licensed to strangled rabbits with neck snares or kill frogs, of course, because they have to begin somewhere.) A man's not a man until he's killed.

And why not? Wasn't that the way we were raised, our fathers before us, their fathers before them back to the days when the Townships was a wilderness and all nature an enemy? Trees had to be destroyed before crops could be planted and livestock fed. Raccoons and squirrels, bears and wolves had to be eradicated wholesale before crops and livestock could be protected.

Back in Roman Times, the head of the family had the power of life and death — not only over all wild and domestic animals — but over his household slaves, his children, even his wife in certain instances. They entertained themselves watching gladiators or wild animals maim and kill each other in an arena.

Civilization marched forward but a man still had a Christian duty to discipline his wife and beat his children regularly lest they spoil. Cucking-stools for "scolds and disorderly women" provided entertainment along with cock-fighting, bull-baiting and bear-baiting. Those living short and brutal lives themselves took pleasure in seeing the suffering of others so that public executions or floggings were popular entertainment along with the stocks or the pillory where those condemned were "exposed to public ridicule, insult and molestation."

There was one a pillory on Flagstaff Hill in Sherbrooke but after 1837 people had to be flogged more privately. In Canada, women could be sentenced to the lash until the 1880's, men until the early years of this century, children until quite recently. Until very recently, too, animals could be beaten and killed without guilt or shame because René Descartes decided they could feel no pain.

Some ideas are so stupid only philosophers can believe them.

Celebrities' favorite books, an interesting mix

By Glenn Adams

GARDINER, Me. (AP) — Whoopi Goldberg's favorite book is Harper Lee's To Kill a Mockingbird.

Cher was chilled by Anne Rice's Interview With a Vampire. And James Stewart praised James Michener's island epic, Hawaii.

Goldberg, Cher and Stewart are just a few of the scores of celebrities on Glenna Nowell's growing list of who reads what. And just who is Glenna Nowell? She's an enterprising librarian in the Maine city of Gardiner who has released her fourth annual list.

She came up with the idea of writing to celebrities in 1988.

Some celebrities send Nowell cordial notes, listing several favorites. Others, such as Queen Elizabeth, coolly turn her down.

"I was looking for a hook that would get people to read a book," Nowell said, adding that she also wanted to steer readers toward books other than best-sellers.

After looking at news and fashion magazines and listening to suggestions from readers, Nowell formulated her first list of VIPs to be contacted. She dug their addresses from the celebrity references at the Gardiner Public Library.

The first list included several Maine political figures, and such entertainers as Doris Day, whose favorite is Inship With All Life; Lana Turner, who liked Anatomy of an Illness; and Oprah Winfrey, who listed Color Purple among her favorites.

And then there was Alan Alda, whose response Nowell still consi-

FOUND COMEDY

Among the actor's best-liked volumes is The Congressional Record, which he remembers poring over as a child. "I had never read anything so funny," Alda wrote about the proceedings of the U.S. Congress. "From then on, I knew I wanted to do comedy."

Lucille Ball, writing back for the 1989 list, recalled being "enchanted" as a child by Black Beauty, as well as Life of Samuel Johnson.

"But, I think the important thing is to read and read and read," the late comedian said, before her sweeping signature that simply said "Lucy."

U.S. President George Bush's wife Barbara picked The Autobiography of Frederick Douglass, and Jimmy Carter chose James Agee's Let Us Now Praise Famous Men. Maureen Stapleton's top book was The Brothers Karamazov, and Steven Spielberg chose The Leatherstocking Saga, and Treasure Island.

Ann Landers's favorite book is The Scarlet Letter. Rev. Desmond Tutu recommends God's Fool, and The Journey and the Dream.

Connie Chung's favorites are the classic Little Women, along with All the King's Men, and All the President's Men. Stephen King likes Fifth Business, and Lord of the Flies.

Carol Burnett told Nowell that "no book will ever have the impact of The Yearling read for the first time."

Arsenio Hall chose Little Girl Lost, while Bob Hope listed the Mark Twain classics Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn.

Communications mogul Ted Turner hailed Commodore Hornblower, and Mutiny on the Bounty.

Nowell's latest list includes a rare reply from a sports figure — Jack Nicklaus — who said he managed to read all of Wilbur Smith's books in his sparse spare time. Nicklaus, who confessed he didn't care much for reading as a child, said his current favorite is A Time to Die.

Cybill Shepherd listed Women, Sex and Addiction, Angela Lansbury tabbed The Shell Seekers, and Vincent Price likes "Nothing If Not Critical."

Jeff Bridges picks Iron John, Gerald Rivera recommends One Hundred Years of Solitude and Loretta Lynn said her best-loved book is The Bible.

Of the 145 letters Nowell sent out for this year's list, only 22 wrote back with the name of their favorite book. Others replied, but declined to say what they like to read.

"That makes them human, to see what they are reading," said Nowell, who has noticed that some non-celebrities even "get antsy" when she examines the titles on their living-room bookshelves.

A lady-in-waiting to Queen Elizabeth answered Nowell's letter stiffly. "I am commanded by The Queen to write and thank you for your letter, but because of Her Majesty's rules in these matters, I regret it is not possible for her to do as you ask."

Nowell is already collecting names for her next list, with designs on such hot celebrities as Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf and Saddam Hussein — "if he's still living."

She may also try to reel in more rock musicians and athletes, reasoning that idols talking about reading will lure youths to the library.

As for her favorite book — it's James Joyce's Dubliners.

Widow expresses grief in her new book

By Sheila Norman-Culp

NEW YORK (AP) — One lesson stood out among the many Dr. Joyce Brothers learned upon becoming a widow: Grief spares no one, not even an expert in psychology.

When her husband, Dr. Milton Brothers, died after 39 years of marriage, the psychologist was amazed at the intensity of her grief — and her rage.

"I had thought that the pain would lessen in time," she writes in her new book, Widowed. "Every morning I woke up and hoped it would be less, but it was not."

"Sometimes it was more painful than it was the previous week."

The book (General Publishing $27.95, 288 pages) chronicles Brothers's transition from living "a golden life" to helping her husband fight cancer and then dealing with his death. Later chapters offer practical, sometimes startling, advice for widows and their families and friends.

RAW FIRST YEAR

But the bulk of the book is not the pithy advice Brothers is famous for — it is a raw, detailed account of the first year of widowhood. Her surprising honesty sets the book apart from a more typical advice manual.

"Anyone who is reading this book understands that I did not manage my grief any better than any other widow," she says. "But it is important — and helpful — for widows to know what lies ahead."

The first reaction is almost always a numbing shock, Brothers says. After that, pain sets in. This stage, which can last anywhere from four months to four years or longer, must be endured before some kind of acceptance of the spouse's death is reached.

Although every widow faces similar emotional crises, Brothers insists each handles grief, rage, loneliness, guilt and fear in her own way.

"There are no rules for grief. There is no timetable for grief."

TEARS AT DETAILS

Brothers found herself frustrated and in tears over the nitty-gritty details of life — especially those her husband used to handle — such as car maintenance or insurance forms. She could not sort through his clothes for almost 10 months. It was a year before she could think of her husband without crying.

"I wallowed in memories day after day, week after week, month after month," she writes. "There was no getting away from memories."

She was stunned by the intensity of her anger; furious that her husband never could quit smoking, furious that years of her future was robbed from her when he died, furious at society for treating her like a second-class citizen.

For when it comes to social status, "widows are losers on all counts," she quotes one sociologist as saying.

WIDOWS' LETTERS

In addition to her own story, Brothers cites letters from thousands of other widows. These women are angry at married friends who drop them socially, relatives who treat them like children, contractors and salesmen who try to take advantage of them.

These tales are not intended to frighten new widows, but to reassure them.

"This book helps you understand that you are not going crazy," says Brothers. "It is the worst period of your life."

More than two years after her husband died, just talking about him was enough to bring Brothers to tears in interview after interview. She had to take a two-month break from promoting the book because the stress was too great.

After the break, she went on, buoyed by the knowledge her book has helped other new widows and the hope it could help more.

"Life stinks, sometimes," she said. "But then it does get better — it has to."

Violating cultural boycott of Africa

By Hillel Italie

NEW YORK (AP) — Ray Charles, Goldie Hawn and Ernest Borgnine are among a dwindling number of artists still included on a United Nations list for violating the cultural boycott of South Africa.

"The list may be unnecessary a year from now," Assistant Secretary-General Sotiris Mousouris, who heads the UN Centre Against Apartheid, said in reference to the rapid political changes in that country.

"I'm looking forward to closing my office," he said.

On the weekend of May 11-12, the UN will hold a symposium in Los Angeles on the Cultural and Academic Links to South Africa, with actress Glenda Jackson, rocker Little Steven and South African author Nadine Gordimer among those expected to attend.

Mousouris says issues will include strengthening provisions that allow artists to perform in South Africa if invited by anti-apartheid groups and deleting from the register those who went to the country before 1985.

"Before all the turmoil in 1985, South Africa was not as much in the news," Mousouris said. "People have little excuse after that. After 1985, it became clear to everyone that it was very oppressive."

At present, a performer may be deleted from the list by writing the UN and promising never to play in apartheid South Africa, Mousouris said, adding the artist is free to make the statement in his or her own words.

NAMES DROPPED

The boycott started 11 years ago, and since 1988 many names have dropped off. One recent deletion is Linda Ronstadt, a singer associated with liberal causes who surprised and angered many people by performing in South Africa and refusing to apologize, saying she had appeared before integrated audiences.

But last summer, Ronstadt quietly notified the UN she would not give any more concerts there until apartheid was dismantled. Past violators Frank Sinatra, Patrick Swayze, Ann-Margret and Robert Wagner have made similar promises.

Performers still listed include Kinks star Ray Davies, Australian singer Helen Reddy, fashion designer Pierre Cardin and author Frederick Forsyth.

No punitive action is taken, but singers Millie Jackson and Curtis Mayfield are among former violators heavily protested by anti-apartheid groups before deciding not to return. The Commodores had planned to go in 1989, but changed their minds.

Love stamps: helping keep international peace

There's been a great deal of controversy over the stamps issued by different countries lately. Countries such as Tuvalu, St. Vincent, and Grenada issued stamps commemorating anything and everything. The F.I.P. (Fédération Internationale de Philatélie), the governing body and watchdog of this hobby, recently declared that railway exhibits containing stamps of Bhutan would not be accepted in international competition. The Disney characters appear on stamps from many countries commemorating this and that. They look more like play labels than stamps.

Philatelists are complaining about the Christmas and Easter stamps that different countries continually issue. There never seems to be any end to them. Canada doesn't issue Easter stamps but it certainly takes advantage of the commercialism of Christmas. It only stands to reason that there are a lot of Christmas stamps around. We're the ones sending Christmas cards. After all, if it wasn't a designated Christmas stamp, it would be something else.

Christmas and Easter stamps may seem to be bad enough but, if you want to get a real sneer or shudder from some philatelists, mention "Love stamps". Since 1985, Ireland has been issuing a Love stamp every January while the United States issued its first Love stamp in 1976. But it wasn't until six years later that the second Love stamp appeared. Since 1984 however, the Love stamp has been making its appearance every year. In 1988 there were in fact two values, a twenty-five cent value and a forty-five cent value. The U.S. wanted everyone to know that they were all loved.

Stamp Corner

By Peter McCarthy

Canada has never issued a Love stamp er-se. In 1972, we issued a stamp commemorating World Health Day with a heart as the main feature in the design. Then again in 1985 a stamp was issued commemorating International Youth Year. The design of the stamp is a yellow arrow piercing an outlined green heart on the back of a pair of blue jeans. Not exactly Love stamps, they must nonetheless be put in the category because of the emotional connection through the heart.

As a stamp collector, have you ever wondered at such issuings of stamps that bear messages of love and peace. Just look at the United States, for instance. They have been in a conflict of one sort or another since the second World War. Following World War II there was Korea, Cuba, Viet Nam, Panama, Grenada, South and Central America and finally Iraq. During all this there was also the cold war with Russia. If that wasn't enough, there was and to some degree still is, the internal racial violence and prejudices.

Love, 1990

In Ireland there's that century old conflict between North and South in the name of religion. You wonder where love fits when you hear of the deaths of innocent women and children through bombings and gunfire in the streets.

Then there's Canada. The United Nation's peace keeping country. That's exactly what we are known for. Helping to keep peace in foreign countries. Canada is a loved country and yet, domestically, we can't stand each other.

The French English situation has certainly developed more hate than it has love. There's no love lost between the white man and the native people. The provinces as individuals can't get along with the rest of the country and east doesn't want to get along with west and vice versa. If at any time we do show signs of love for one another, the politicians dip the ladle in the pot and manage to stir things up again. Maybe we do need more Love stamps, from more countries.

It sounds like this article should appear around St. Valentine's Day. The fact is that hearts, flowers and love go far deeper than just February 14.

For the typical collectors of stamps depicting love and peace, I'm going to let the article finish itself by inserting this wonderful biblical passage taken from St.

Love a Puppy, 1986

Paul's letter in 1 Corinthians, chapter 13, beginning at the 4th verse. It goes like this:

Love is patient and kind; love is not jealous or boastful; it is not arrogant or rude. Love does not insist on its own way; it is not irritable or resentful; it does not rejoice at wrong, but rejoices in the right. Love bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things. Love never ends...

Marie-Lyne Veilleux, or 'Marie-Lyne Viele,' with model Emmanuel, distorting subjects to portray a personal vision of reality.

By Catherine Cheng

I watch her in fascination, and try to 'uncover' her.

Twenty-one-year old expressionist painter Marie-Lyne Veilleux, who is holding her first major exhibition at Le musée alternatif des arts libres, doesn't remember much of her childhood days spent in Martinville. She doesn't want to remember.

She just knew she was different from everyone else.

Actually, until the age of four, she would cry every time someone (besides her mom and sister) would approach her. She feared strangers and had few friends.

"I had a hard time carving out my niche at home and I wasn't really good in school. I think I just had another form of intelligence. I would draw and draw because I knew I was talented in that area," she says.

Being the youngest of six children and the only 'artist,' Veilleux is the black sheep of her family.

For a long time, she thought she was the only one who had an artistic mind and lived in a different world. But when she met artist Michel Roy (whose works are also on exhibit in the new museum) about six years ago, she found out she wasn't. She decided to take a firm stand — to really live the life of an artist.

CHANGES

She got rid of her simple, country rags and began wearing sophisticated clothes dating back to the olden times.

"I knew I felt uncomfortable in country clothes but didn't have any other choice then: now I enjoy wearing clothes from the Middle Ages, the Renaissance and Baroque periods. My mom and I make most of what I wear ... I find suits very cold-looking. Costumes add color to life."

But Veilleux didn't just modify her ways of dress. She also informally altered her family name to 'Viele.' Furthermore, something inside her changed too: she began to boldly reveal her inner self.

During her art classes at Sherbrooke College, she gradually developed her own artistic style, and adopted some methods used by German expressionist painters such as Hegon Schiele and Oscar Kokoschka.

EXPRESSIONISM

Expressionism flourished in the early 1900s, as a reaction to impressionism. Impressionist artists are concerned with how the objects appear to the eye at a particular moment. Impressionist art depicts soft and dreamy images. In contrast, expressionist artists try to give form to their strong inner feelings and often times reveal harsh images of reality.

Masks. Exaggerated body positions. Curves. Movement. Nudes. Semi-nudes. Skeletons. Sombre colors. Off-centred positions. Faces with dramatic detail. Veilleux uses all of these striking elements repeatedly — to try to evoke a strong emotional response from the viewer.

"I love human beings very much so and I want to reach out and touch their most profound feelings."

She spends much time experimenting with skeletons and bodies. She deforms them in order to make them more expressive. She shapes them according to the way she feels the moments she creates them.

Her fascination with death, skeletons, and the transformation of the body was so great at one point that she used a mix of acrylic paint, cotton, and sand to create a 200 by 134 cm canvas of a skeleton-mummy whose arms are crossed — her largest canvas being exhibited. Most of her other works are drawn with oil stick on paper.

Her creative process is totally spontaneous. No rationalization. No planning. No specific ways begin her paintings or sculptures. Her present emotional condition controls her paintbrush, her hands. She doesn't know what the final product of her artwork will be until it is completed.

CONNECTION

Even if Veilleux is painting someone else's portrait, a part of her transposes directly into her work. There is always a direct connection between herself and her subject.

"I draw what I see and I transform it according to what I feel of the person's inner-self."

She admits she continually feels a very strong urge to express herself, because it took so long for her to 'find herself.'

If she doesn't use a model, she lets her imagination go wild and draws faces representing her actual state of mind. In her work entitled "Le Ménestrel," (Minstrel) three off-centred figures reveal three aspects of her personality. A woman in the centre is wearing a mask. Another woman, facing down, is hanging on to a male figure who is looking straight ahead.

She herself is unable to explain the significance of these three personas but knows they make up part of her identity.

Veilleux is presently enrolled in Bishop's Fine Arts department but will transfer to L'Université de Québec à Montréal in September. She just wants to be an artist and be able to live off her works.

Marie-Lyne Veilleux, or 'Marie-Lyne Viele,' as she prefers being called, is a reserved and mysterious lady but certainly a bold artist who wants to capture our feelings and make us react on an emotional level. She claims to be a poet of imagery: she speaks through her work but has no specific words to express what she wants to say.

Six Canadian films selected for Cannes Film Festival

By Tom Blackwell

CANNES, France (CP) — The rain seemed more suited to the Newfoundland coast than the Cote-d'Azur as the Cannes film festival opened Thursday and Canadian directors prepared for their chance to wow the world's movie media.

Among the most eagerly anticipated offerings are Truth or Dare, a documentary about music superstar Madonna, and Guilty By Suspicion, Robert De Niro's latest movie.

But six less flashy films from Canada have also been selected for the 11-day cinematic extravaganza, an odd blend of Hollywood-style hoopla and some of the year's most creative movies.

Unlike other recent years at Cannes, no Canadian movie has been chosen for the official competition and a chance at the coveted Palme d'or.

But it's still one of Canada's strongest showings at the world's biggest and most respected film festival, said Jean Lefebvre, a member of Telefilm Canada's large contingent here.

BIG SPLASH

The Crown corporation has rented a sprawling suite of offices in the Martinez, one of Cannes's swankiest hotels, and will spend an average of $60,000 to support each of the Canadian entries.

"This is helping promote the entire Canadian film industry at the same time," said Lefebvre, whose yacht-club good looks seem natural in this high-gloss resort town.

"These films are our race horses. They're wearing our colors. We're in the biggest puddle in the world and we have to make a big splash."

Many expect the biggest Canadian splash will be made by The Adjuster, the newest feature by Toronto director Atom Egoyan, whose surrealistic Speaking Parts was warmly received at Cannes two years ago.

Egoyan has the rare chance to choose between two sections of the festival, one of which is called Un Certain regard, considered second in prestige to the competitive section and often first in quality.

But Egoyan decided to give The Adjuster its world premiere in Directors Fortnight — the section that opened the door to Cannes for the film-maker in 1989. He wanted to show his loyalty to the section's organizers.

The Adjuster traces the intersecting lives of an insurance adjuster, his film-censor wife and an ex-football player with bizarre sexual fantasies.

It is joined in Director's Fortnight by Une Histoire inventée (An Invented Story), by Quebec's Marc-André Forcier.

DISQUALIFIED

Forcier's film has been shown in the Toronto and Montreal film festivals, which would normally disqualify it from Cannes. But Lefebvre said Pierre Henri Deleau, head of the Director's Fortnight series, liked the film so much he was willing to bend the rules.

The third Canadian feature is Deepa Mehta's Sam and Me, which recounts the relationship between an elderly Jewish man and a young East Indian immigrant in Toronto.

Lefebvre admits Sam and Me is the wild card in the pack — the first work by a largely unknown filmmaker. Mehta, who has a PhD in philosophy, will be the only Canadian eligible for the Camera d'or — awarded to a director making his or her debut at the festival.

The animated short Mal de blocs (slang for Headaches), by Montreal's Marc Saint-Pierre and Nathalie Saint-Gelais, is in the short-film competition. The shorts Petit drame dans la vie d'une femme (A Brief Drama in a Woman's Life), by actor-director Andrée Pelletier, and A Harbor Symphony, by Barbara Doran, are in the Critic's Week series.

The more than 3,000 media representatives at the festival make it a unique forum for publicizing the type of small artistic film that is hard to sell otherwise.

"For our money we are going to get the kind of promotion we could never hope to buy," said Lefebvre.

"Cannes is the biggest film market in the world, the best promotional tool in the world."

Stallone gangster flick tops Box Office hit list

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sylvester Stallone's Oscar took the No. 1 box office spot a second consecutive time as weekend turnout was dismal at movie theatres across the United States.

Oscar was on top with a $4.2 million US take. Michael Keaton's new police movie One Good Cop debuted in second place with a $3.4 million gross, according to figures released Monday by Exhibitor Relations Co.

The company said it appeared to be the worst weekend turnout so far this year. The weekend's top 14 films grossed $31.1 million, a 10 per cent drop from the previous weekend.

A Kiss Before Dying, the romantic thriller pairing Matt Dillon and Sean Young, was in third place with ticket sales of $3.1 million. It was followed in fourth by Toy Soldiers, which made $3 million.

Out For Justice, Steven Seagal's martial-arts marathon, collected $2.8 million for fifth place. In sixth was The Silence of the Lambs, which netted $2.54 million.

A Rage in Harlem, a new inner-city con game story, debuted in seventh with $2.5 million. Eighth with $2 million was Demi Moore and Bruce Willis in Mortal Thoughts, a movie about a battered wife and her husband's murder.

Montreal Jazz Festival: getting back to real jazz

By Eric Sibli

MONTREAL (CP) — After years of flirting with world beat and pop strains, the Montreal International Jazz Festival is getting back to jazz basics.

Eclectic saxman Branford Marsalis, jive legend Cab Calloway and volcanic British saxophonist Courtney Pine will all take to the stage this summer, festival organizers announced Tuesday.

"Is this not a JAZZ festival?" asked organizer Andre Menard at a news conference announcing the slate of musicians.

"It's a solid lineup. It's the whole spectrum of jazz from the avant-garde to the early days of swing to international forms," Menard said.

Among the tried-and-true players billed for the 10-day event starting June 28 are pianist McCoy Tyner, the forever-popular Dave Brubeck, virtuoso bop basist Ray Brown and the ageless swing-inspired violinist Stephane Grappelli.

In recent years, the festival has showcased crowd-pleasing world music as much as jazz, which has a more limited audience.

"There's more real jazz this year," said Ken Rabow, director of the Musician's Professional Workshop, which offers jazz courses on the gargantuan event. MANY BOOKED

Of the 300 scheduled acts, only a smattering of artists are from outside the pure jazz idiom.

Guitar icon Paco de Lucia will conjure up some of his flamenco-laced magic. Ben. E. King, of

The ageless swing-inspired violinist Stephane Grappelli will be playing as of June 28.

Stand By Me fame, will inject some rhythm and blues. And latin jazz will be provided by fiery Cuban trumpeter Arturo Sandoval, veteran bandleader-percussionist Ray Baretto and California-based congo king Poncho Sanchez.

Also appearing this summer will be the piano stylist Ahmad Jamal, the Montreal fusion group UZEB, the highly acclaimed World Saxophone Quartet, and a duo uniting American guitarist David Lindley and bluesman Salif Keita from Mali.

The free outdoor shows in the festival, which have drawn crowds of up to 100,000 in past years, will be announced in June, Menard said. He said that last year about 900,000 people turned out, nearly half of them tourists.

This year's lineup includes singer Diane Schuur, who shares a double bill with the original Ramsay Lewis trio, and longtime bop guitarist Barney Kessel.

The list of names goes on and on, almost a who's who of the top jazz musicians who are still working. And for a glimpse of those no longer alive, there's a series of jazz history films to be shown as part of the event.

"The dead we've tried to get in through the movies," Menard quipped.

New videos worth viewing

By Christopher Johnston

The Canadian Press

Few writer-directors could get away with such self-indulgence as a two-hour movie based on their own childhood recollections. Especially when the events portrayed are, on the surface, unremarkable.

But few movie-makers have the perceptive talents of Barry Levinson, director of such memorable films as Rainman and Good Morning, Vietnam.

In Avalon (RCA-Columbia Pictures Home Video), the story of immigrant Sam Krichinsky's family is poignant, moving and funny. And Levinson's semi-autobiographical insights guarantee that the film's series of anecdotes are a delight.

Once again, Levinson has crafted a time capsule of the late '40s and '50s in Baltimore, the setting of his acclaimed comedies Diner and Tin Men.

Through the eyes of Krichinsky's grandson Michael, we join the family at gatherings like Thanksgiving, observe their petty squabbles and share their business successes and failures. Over three generations we also see the gradual disintegration of the once close-knit extended family.

With its marvellous cast—featuring Armin Mueller-Stahl, Joan Plowright, Elizabeth Perkins and Aidan Quinn—Avalon is rich and vibrant, a heart-warming tribute to American life.

The Jungle Book (Disney) — If judged solely by memorable tunes, this would be the most-endearing of Disney's animated classics. Such songs as Bear Necessities, I Wanna Be Like You and Dawn Patrol from composers Richard and Robert Sherman (Mary Poppins) have delighted children for almost a quarter of a century.

Now a new generation of kids can get to know Baloo, the jungle bum bear, and King Louie of the apes as Disney brings its No. 2 box-office favorite to video. (Snow White, which hasn't yet seen video, remains No. 1.)

With its lovable characters, bright sharp images and swinging score, this is one of Disney's liveliest cartoons and it transfers excellently to video.

In the eyes of my three-year-old it has even replaced The Little Mermaid as her favorite. Her only complaint, she confides, is that she gets scared when the bumbling Baloo (featuring the voice of Phil Harris) is attacked and nearly killed by tiger Shere Khan (George Sanders). Parents of similarly aged youngsters take note.

Bloodsucking Pharaohs in Pittsburgh (Paramount) — I'm a sucker for great titles and couldn't resist this one. I guess I'll never learn.

Just like previous dumb choices—Stuff Stephanie in the Incinerator, Rabid Grannies, Caged in Paradise, and Surf Nazis Must Die—within a few minutes of viewing I knew I was in trouble.

Bloodsucking Pharaohs, billed as a spoof of the horror genre, is tongue-in-cheek enough during its first 30 minutes to amuse bad-movie addicts. Then it falls apart.

The opening chainsaw slaying of a woman by a serial killer wearing an Egyptian hat provokes B-movie dialogue of the highest order.

"This time he took her brain. Popped it right out of there. Looks like he used a scoop. Like ice cream."

Director Alan Smithey has some worthy material, including some unsubtle crusading against chain-smokers, but there's an inordinate amount of camp silliness that's not in the least funny.

NEW ON VIDEO

— Robert Redford and Lena Olin star in the romance drama Havana, playing unlikely lovers drawn together during the Cuban revolution.

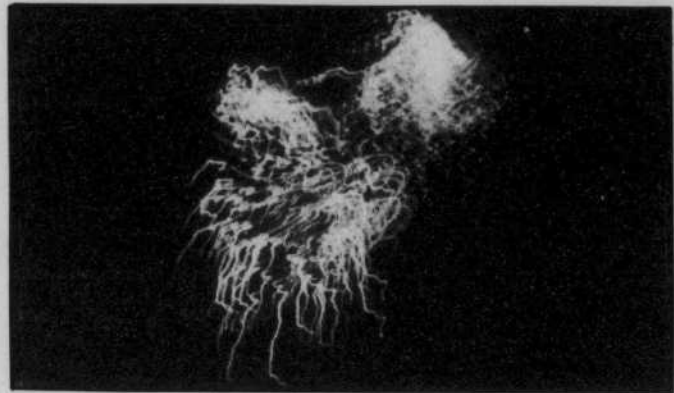

— Tom Selleck, Steve Guttenberg and Ted Danson are reunited for comedy Three Men and a Little Lady, the sequel to video hit Three Men and a Cradle (Touchstone).

— Teen favorite Corey Feldman is cool in school in Rock 'N' Roll High School Forever, billed as an irreverent comedy with teen appeal (Live).

— James Woods plays navy pilot Jim Stockdale who's taken prisoner during the Vietnam war in the thriller In Love and War (Vidmark).

— Jim Belushi is a junior executive whose life is turned upside down by a mysterious stranger played by Michael Caine in comedy Mr. Destiny (Touchstone).

Fireworks competition lights up Montreal sky

By Jennifer Merin

MONTREAL (AP) — Boom!

The first rocket blasts a streak of red across the night sky, then shatters into a spray of gold, green and white sparks that cascade through the darkness and fade to black.

Boom!

Another rocket soars heavenward and explodes into showers of brilliant white light. But this time, the rocket's report is drowned in a swell of cheers that rises from the crowd, gathered to witness what are billed as the world's most spectacular fireworks displays.

This is the International Fireworks Competition. It is staged annually at Montreal's La Ronde amusement park on Ste-Helene Island in the St. Lawrence River, in the heart of charming Old Montreal. The fireworks are launched from platforms in the park's lake, and bright overhead displays are beautifully reflected in shimmering water.

In this, its seventh year, the competition takes place May 25-June 19, with "pyromusical" fireworks displays every Wednesday and Saturday night. Each display starts at 10 p.m., lasts about 30 minutes and uses hundreds of Roman candles, rockets, big shells and specially invented pyrotechnical devices.

Displays are compliments of seven of the world's best fireworks companies, invited to compete for trophies presented during the grand finale on June 19.

ALL TO MUSIC

What's most unusual about these fireworks displays is that they are accompanied by music from start to finish. The choreography of light and sound is fabulous: As music shifts from double to triple time, trios instead of duets of rockets are released. Music and rockets spiral simultaneously. Musical curlicues and squiggles are matched by whirling showers of light.

Computers are used to control and co-ordinate the light and sound of pyrotechnics. The constant invention of new effects is based on centuries-old traditions and techniques.

Several of the participating fireworks companies are family businesses that can be traced back hundreds of years. France's Ruggieri Co., lighting up the skies at the competition's opening night on May 25, goes back to 1793. This year's Ruggieri presentation is based on the popular musical Phantom of the Opera.

Other companies this year include Spain's dramatic Pirotecnica Zaragoza (June 8), a company founded in 1860, and Italy's romantic Pirotecnica Soldi (June 15), with great Italian musical inspiration ranging from the farandola to Fellini soundtracks.

From the United States, Boston's Pyrotechnology Co. creates "New American Visions," featuring a medley of classical and contemporary hits, on June 1. The Dutch JNS Pyrotechniek, May 29, and Canada's Fiatlux, June 5, are also scheduled.

FROM AUSTRALIA

Syd Howard International Fireworks arrives from Sydney, Australia, to present a program with music ranging from Jarre to INXS on June 12. Howard, competing for a second consecutive year, believes Montreal presents a unique artistic challenge.

"Three launching areas are used, and each requires different types of explosives," Howard says. "Every company has its own style and technique. Some utilize one explosion to trigger another, but we ignite each piece individually to gain more technical and artistic control."

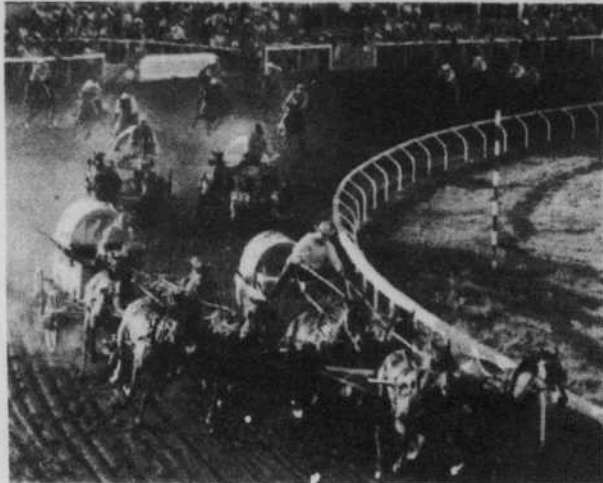

"We watch each other, learn from each other, buy devices from each other. But each display is put together very differently. So the variety and competition is tremendous."

The competition's grand finale is staged by Industria Panzera, under the direction of the Italian master Giovanni Panzera, the competition's artistic director. This year, the finale's theme is "circus."

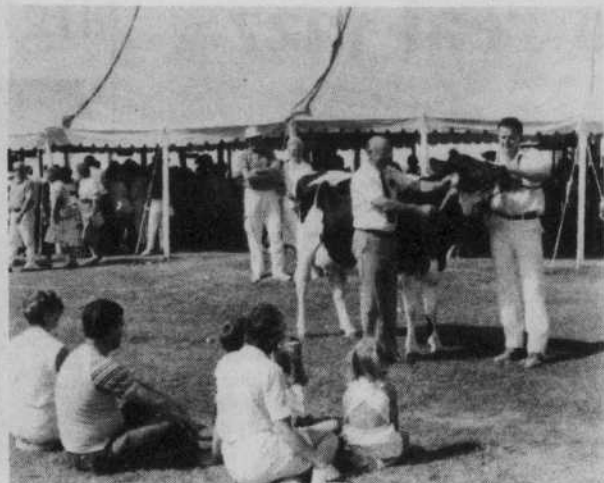

The fireworks can be seen from most of Montreal, with excellent views from the bridges that cross the St. Lawrence River to Ste-Helene Island. But the best vantage points are inside La Ronde, where the audience's energy level is almost as vibrant as the fireworks.

Reserved seating tickets cost $20 and give all-day access to La Ronde's various rides and attractions.

Montreal's Jazz Festival

Every province has festivities this summer

By Felicity Munn
CP Travel Writer

Summer's nearly here, which means festivals, fetes and fireworks are about to erupt across the country.

Following is but a small sampling of the goings-on.

The summer-long Music '91 festival in British Columbia will have everybody from high school bands to the Righteous Brothers, Johnny Cash and Dizzy Gillespie performing all over the province.

The Phantom of the Opera touring production is in Vancouver May 27-Oct. 23, while the Pacific National Exhibition will have midways, exhibits and entertainers during the last two weeks of August.

In the Rockies, some 1,000 young musicians, singers, dancers and artists will converge on Banff for the summer-long Festival of the Arts at the Banff School of Fine Arts.

Edmonton will be overrun with buskers during its annual street performers festival July 12-20. The city's Klondike Days are July 18-27, its Folk Music Festival of blues, jazz, country and folk music is Aug. 9-11 and its Fringe Theatre Festival is on Aug. 17-25.

The 10-day party known as the Calgary Stampede — billed as the greatest outdoor show on Earth — begins July 5 this year.

DENVER IN CRAVEN

In Saskatchewan, John Denver is among the country music names slated to perform at the Big Valley Jamboree July 11-14 in Craven, near Regina.

Saskatoon's jazz festival runs from June 27 to July 1, followed by its annual exhibition July 6-13 and the multicultural Folk Fest of food, entertainment and displays Aug. 15-17.

Buffalo Days, Regina's exhibition with a country and western flavor, is July 29-Aug. 4.

Major events in Manitoba include the Winnipeg Folk Festival, which attracts performers from around the world and takes place July 4-7.

Black-O-Rama, billed as Canada's largest reggae event, unfolds at Memorial Park in Winnipeg July 20-21, while the multicultural Folklorama runs Aug. 4-17.

In Toronto, Caribana, the annual Caribbean festival, will have people dancing in the streets from July 22 to Aug. 5.

Some 500 artists from North America and Europe will have work in Toronto's Outdoor Art Exhibition outside city hall July 12-14.

And Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition runs from Aug. 14 to Sept. 2, with the Canadian Air Show on the last three days.

Montreal's annual festival fever kicks off with the International Fireworks Competition, held every Wednesday and Saturday between May 25 and June 19.

The city's jazz festival runs June 28-July 7, followed by the Just for Laughs comedy festival July 11-21 and the World Film Festival from Aug. 22 to Sept. 2.

Quebec City reverberates with music, song and dance during the Festival d'été July 4-14.

In New Brunswick, Canada's Irish Festival on the Miramichi rollicks July 18-24 in Chatham and along the river, with Irish music, dancers, theatre, workshops and literature as well as activities for children.

And for 10 days beginning Aug. 9, the Festival by the Sea brings cultural groups from across Canada to Saint John, N.B., to perform folk dances at outdoor venues around the city.

For chocoholics, there's a chocolate festival in Saint Stephen Aug. 5-9; for lobster lovers, Shediac's lobster festival is July 9-14.

SCOTTISH TOUCH

The International Gathering of the Clans, a provincewide celebration of Nova Scotia's heritage and culture, will be the theme behind some 40 different community festivals and events this summer.

Highland games will take place throughout the province. New Glasgow hosts a Festival of the Tartans July 17-21 and the Nova Scotia International Tattoo will bring military bands from around the world to Halifax during the first week of July.

In Newfoundland, the weekend of Aug. 2-5 looks particularly busy.

At least two of the numerous folk festivals — the 15th annual Newfoundland and Labrador Folk Festival in St. John's and Une Longue veille, a mainly French festival in Cape St. George — take place that weekend.

So does the Placentia West Heritage Weekend, featuring oldtime baking contests and step-dancing, and the Festival of Flight in Gander.

Twillingate has a Fish, Fun and Food Festival July 25-28, while visitors to Springdale's Squid Soiree Aug. 31-Sept. 1 will eat squid and watch squid-jigging demonstrations.

Charlottetown's waterside festival, Race Week, starts July 12 and features dancing and entertainment as well as boat races.

The Miss Prince Edward Island pageant to pick the province's Miss Canada contestant will be held during Summerside's Lobster Carnival and Livestock Exhibition, running July 14-20.

And displays, midways, foods and crafts will be everywhere during the island-wide Old Home Week, Aug. 9-17.

Pub and other Canadian guidebooks

By Felicity Munn
CP Travel Writer

At least one recent guidebook on Canada has an intriguing theme but should probably only be taken on road trips when there is a designated driver.

The Canada Pub Guide and Bar Book, modestly subtitled A Coast-to-Coast Guide to Outstanding Drinking Establishments, lists all manner of watering holes, including the relatively recent phenomenon of brewpubs where beer is brewed on the premises.

Fred Graver, editor of the book, asked contributors from across Canada to submit lists of bars that were unique or interesting for any reason.

"As the contents of the book represent the subjective and objective impressions of a wide range of people, there should be something here for everyone," Graver says in the introduction.

Published by Broadview Press, the guide sells for $14.75.

DOING CANADA

There are plenty of other guides to travel in Canada, of course. And they may soon be in high demand — the Canadian Tourism Research Institute says more Canadians than usual plan to vacation in Canada this summer because of the recession.

One of the most comprehensive guides is Canadian Book of the Road, a coffee-table-sized tome that blends the practical and the lavish.

Reader's Digest, publisher of the book, says it covers virtually every part of Canada accessible by car — more than 48,000 kilometres of roads.

The guide is divided into 185 "road units" varying in length from 50 to 500 kilometres.

There's a detailed map of each unit that includes symbols for historical sites, hotels, campsites, beaches and so on.

Short blocks of easily digestible text highlight the history of each area and provide information on some 2,300 points of interest. Color photographs and sketches illustrate some of the sights and wildlife found in each area.

A revised and updated edition of Canadian Book of the Road was published this spring. It sells for $39.95.

MICHELIN STARS

Far less lavish but equally thorough is Michelin's Green Guide to Canada.

Its long, slender pages are crammed with maps, historical information, descriptions, suggested car tours and Michelin's three-star rating system for sights — three stars being "worth the journey," two being "worth the detour" and one being "interesting."

The Michelin guide sells for $15.95.

If maps are mainly what's needed, Rand McNally's Deluxe Road Atlas and Guide to the United States, Canada and Mexico is a good travelling companion because its practical wire binding allows it to open flat. It sells for $11.95.

If general guides to Canada are required, Fodor, Frommer, Lonely Planet, Penguin and Insight are among the major publishers to consider.

For accommodation, there are a number of bed-and-breakfast books available.

The Canadian Bed and Breakfast Guide, for example, lists establishments in some 600 towns and cities across Canada, with listings in French where that is the host language.

Compiled by Gerda Pantel and published by Fitzhenry and Whiteside, the guide costs $14.50.

For those planning road travel in both Canada and the United States, several guides to bed and breakfasts in the United States also have short sections on Canada.

notes

"If you want to be a Mom, Cat, you've gotta be able to do EVERYTHING," my Mom said to me one day when I went back home to Quebec City one weekend not very long ago. Do you agree?

Then I guess I'm striving to become another bionic woman, like my Mom.

I don't know about you, but one thing I found out as I was growing up is that MY MOM was always right — at least for a while.

She sacrificed her comfortable and active life in Taiwan to come to Canada to raise my brothers and I. She's bright, strict, at times amusing, but most important of all, extremely loving. And I love her. And I wonder what I would've done without her.

She was my guide.

I'll keep in mind what my Mom has passed on to me and try to give as much to my children, in due time.

I hope you, too, have fond memories of the times you spend with your Mom. Make sure you let her know in special ways how much she means to you this weekend, even if she may be far away.

For theatre fans, here's a sneak preview of upcoming events at The Piggery in North Hatley.

From June 21-July 13, the popular Don Beattie is back with The Perils of Persephone, directed by his brother Doug Beattie. This continuation of the Wingfield Trilogy by Dan Needles, promises to be a comic treat. This time Walt Wingfield longs to be warden of the Reeve of Persephone Township until an atomic waste truck comes into his ditch.

From July 16-July 27, in Tonight...Piaf, a musical play dramatizing the life of the well-known Edith Piaf, Joelle Rabu will sing songs that recreate the emotions inspired by the events of Piaf's life.

And from August 1-24, the play Dead Serious will be di-

exhibitions

UPLANDS MUSEUM 50 Park, Lennoxville: Jason Krpan exhibits his pottery, recycled wood sculptures and his collection of homemade drums. Also, Hubert Vallée exhibits his photograph exhibition called Sequences-Couleurs, until June 9. He adds color to his black and white photographs of architecture by painting them — to give an original sense of depth and texture. Lastly, Photographer Rodrigue Bélanger presents an exhibit called Clergy in Black and White, featuring 25 portraits of Eastern Townshippers involved in different churches. Until May 15. Museum hours are 1 to 5, Tuesday to Sunday.

HORACE GALLERY 906 King W., corner Queen, Sherbrooke: Two photo exhibits on view till May 26. In Point de vue — Transgression à l'échelle — L'Atelier, Denyse Gerin captures metamorphic objects through the camera lens. Also, Elodie Bernier, attempts to visualize the non-visible. She emphasizes the notions of disappearance, immateriality and memory. Open Wednesday to Friday, noon to 5; weekends 1 to 5.

MUSÉE DES BEAUX-ARTS 174 Palais, Sherbrooke: Paintings by the late Paul-André Robidas and wood sculptures by the late Theodore (Teddy) Morin. Robidas is a retired butcher whose paintings recall biblical themes. Morin made his living as a textiles worker in Magog, but retired in the Brompton Lake area where he produced wood carvings of animals, wagons and household items. Until June 2. Open Tuesday to Sunday 1 to 5. For group tours, call (819)821-2115.

CENTRE D'EXPOSITION LEON MARCOTTE 222 Frontenac, Sherbrooke: Till June 16 discover the flora and fauna of the St-Lawrence River estuary with an exhibit entitled Parlez-moi du fleuve. Museum is open from Tuesday till Sunday from 12:30 to 4:30.

IN FOCUS

Will they or won't they, should they or shouldn't they? The romantic question, which has been beaten to death in series from "Moonlighting" to "Anything but Love," gets a new spin in "Seinfeld." Thursday, May 16, on NBC. Former lovers Jerry (Jerry Seinfeld) and Elaine (Julia Louis-Dreyfus) consider renewing their relationship, provided both agree that - outside of that - they will still act as "just friends." Yeah, right.

IN FOCUS

Lil Vance seeks counseling from her psychiatrist, Kris Morrow (Lisa Hartman), on how to cope with her abusive spouse, in "Red Wind," airing Wednesday, May 15, on USA. Morrow confesses that she has fantasized about how she would murder her own husband. The therapy backfires; Vance actually murders her spouse. And now Morrow is sought by the police as a possible accessory to the murder - and by her deadly patient.

SATURDAY

Peter Strauss stars as sociopathic kidnapper Wayne Stracton in the fact-based drama "83 Hours 'Til Dawn," which is rebroadcast Saturday, May 18, on CBS. Stracton abducts a young woman and buries her alive, demanding a half-million dollar ransom from her wealthy father. Robert Urich also stars.
