BOYS' HOME BOING SPLENDID SERVICE

Celebrate Institution's 53rd Anniversary—Sir Arthur Currie Praises Work

War stories and tales of the heroism of their brothers, fathers and "boys just a little older than they," told by Sir Arthur Currie through boys and old boys of the institution.

When asked as to whom they should like to have for their special speaker it had been the unanimous wish expressed by the "old boys" that there was one man whom they wished to hear, and that was Sir Arthur Currie.

"War is not a grand thing. It is a thing of misery, of suffering and of wretchedness," said Sir Arthur. "It has brought a greater sorrow than all the men, women and children who live in Canada were killed."

The speaker claimed that within a few minutes of the death of a man, his life is over, and his memory is left to his family.

The speaker was introduced by the Rev. Father DeLattre, the eighty-year-old priest, student and archaeologist, who for over fifty years has devoted himself to the study of the Carthaginian civilization.

HEART FAILURE MAY BE CAUSE OF DEATH WITHOUT HEART DISEASE

The unusual number of sudden deaths which have occurred in Montreal and Toronto recently are being set down as due to "heart failure," do not indicate that the persons who have died have all been stricken with heart diseases.

There were many diseases which may result in the sudden death of a person attacked, such as the bursting of the arteries in hemorrhage of the brain or apoplexy; but the coroner was not in a position to determine which of these the patient suffered.

As to the reasons why so many persons had died within the last few weeks, Dr. Belmont said he could not give an opinion. A few years ago one or two cases were handled at the Morgue each day.

Transporting an audience of intent listeners from today's civilization to the scenes of the Carthaginian civilization, revealing the great discovery of the Carthaginian civilization.

Very little destruction, he claimed, had been done to many of the Carthaginian ruins. Much of it had remained intact under the earth.

SEEK CHANGE IN SCHOOL TAXATION

Verdun Protestant Board Asks Legislature For Financial Relief

A bill for the relief of the Protestant schools in Verdun, and an alteration in the school taxation designed to improve the financial condition was presented in the Quebec Legislature yesterday.

The provisions of the proposed legislation call for a cash grant of $50,000, and the imposition of a tenants' tax amounting to 5 per cent of the assessed rental.

Whereas the Protestant Board of School Trustees of the City of Verdun has represented that the number of pupils in the schools under its control is large, being fifty per cent of the total school attendance in said city, but that the amount of taxable property in the said city is proportionately small, and that in consequence the ordinary school charges for the maintenance of the said schools is levied at the high rate of two per cent which constitutes a heavy burden on the property owners.

The present tax of two per cent now levied on the real estate of corporations and individuals in the city of Verdun is hereby authorized to be increased to three per cent.

All amateur performances given by pupils of said schools and their friends, when the charge for their services is made shall be exempt from the payment of the special tax imposed under Chapter Second of Title of the Revised Statutes of the Province of Quebec, 1909, and Chapter 61 and the amendments made thereto.

Efforts are being made to secure a team of trained moose from Canada, Northern Ontario, to parade the streets of the city as a special feature of the Montreal Winter Sports Association.

Motorists read a big sign at the entrance of the lodge, the members of which comprise men employed in contract shops: President, R. J. Kerrigan; vice-president, A. J. Watts; recording secretary, Roy Walker. They were installed by the President of District Lodge 82, J. T. Cupello.

Edwin Barker, 26 years of age, accountant in the lodge, members of which comprise men employed in contract shops: President, R. J. Kerrigan; vice-president, A. J. Watts; recording secretary, Roy Walker. They were installed by the President of District Lodge 82, J. T. Cupello.

PROTESTS AGAINST JUNIOR DOG DERBY

S.P.C.A. Sharply Criticizes Carnival Event for Montreal Children

Years of work on the part of Montreal animal lovers will be undone in one day if the "dog derby," which is being arranged by the Winter Sports Committee, is allowed to take place according to J. R. Innes, secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, in telling of the complaints which are coming in to hand from far and near.

The use of dogs as draft animals was prohibited in London, 84 years ago, and 60 years ago the regulation was passed to take effect throughout the United Kingdom.

In the past Montreal Carnivals were wonderful events, said Mr. Innes, but in his opinion things have come to a "prett pass" when those promoting the winter sports are obliged to depend on races of dogs to attract the public.

The present tax of two per cent now levied on the real estate of corporations and individuals in the city of Verdun is hereby authorized to be increased to three per cent.

very plainly that weakness rather than strength would supersede. To him the Canadian Northern was a source of real national danger, and when to the situation was added the project of a third railway from ocean to ocean, he was prepared to sacrifice every personal ambition, and the high

The Hon. A. G. Blair

Years later I was one day talking with Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the administration of the Intercolonial, and something I said led him to suspect that I was depreciating Mr. Blair. He hastened to correct the impression, and Sir Wilfrid said: "I am glad I misunderstood you; for Blair was a big man; yes, a very big man, and a man of great character."

This well known Parliamentarian is the subject of the accompanying article by Mr. Payne.

HOME MAN. He was a home man. His domestic life was so strong that he had no time for clubs or sports. He loved his family and his home. He bought a great many books. He was a devoted husband and father. He died his books and art gallery constituted an important part of his estate.

place he held, rather than approve it even by his silence. What infinite loss and menace Canada would have avoided if Blair's prophetic vision and judgment had prevailed at that time!

memories of his abounding generosity. A bigger hearted fellow never lived. Mr. Blair had known him in St. John, and, after coming to Ottawa, Russell turned up one day with a proposition to exploit a saline laxative which he had picked up in England.

How far above his fellows Mr. Blair towers in the retrospect? Yet, clearly as he foresaw what would happen, he never for a moment wavered in his affection for Sir Wilfrid Laurier; nor did he doubt the Prime Minister's charity.

A HUMBLE BEGINNING. Mr. Blair had a humble beginning. He rose to be a successful lawyer on his merits, and for many years was the Prime Minister of New Brunswick. He told me that his earnings from his law practice in Fredericton had never exceeded $3,500 a year, and his domestic responsibilities practically absorbed all of that sum.

At Fredericton Junction Sir Robert Borden came aboard, and for the next two hours he and Russell were closeted together. What transpired at that meeting I have not the faintest notion; but I always regarded it as significant that the next day an announcement appeared in all the leading Conservative papers that Sir Robert Borden would not be responsible for any promises made by anybody other than himself.

BORDEN AND RUSSELL.

When the general election was brought on in the latter part of 1903, David Russell was very much in the foreground of the political situation in Quebec and New Brunswick. Just what he was aiming to do he never told me; but he was clearly at the head of some big movement.

really great man was poignantly pathetic. He was naturally masterful and independent. His presence was remarkable. Yet, big as he was, and clear as was his judgment and vision, in the end he was the victim of men and forces which I know he would despise.

How David Russell came into possession of the St. John Daily Telegraph would be a good story if I were free to give all the details. It can be said, however, that this organ of Liberal thought was capitalized by a syndicate of Mr. Blair's friends. One day Russell wired Mr. Blair that he had taken over the paper. Mr. Blair showed me the telegram and remarked that "Dave is getting to be quite a joker." It wasn't a joke, however. Russell became the owner of the paper by right of seizure, and there was no one to protest. Politics is a funny game when you see it from the inside.

garded as forgotten. Of Mr. Blair's peculiarities and characteristics, however, I shall have something to say later. (To Be Continued.)

"The Confederation of the Swiss Cantons is a sort of League of Nations. We have stuck together since 1291, and examples should be a help in modern times to those who believe in the newly-born League of Nations.

PHOTOGRAPH PLANT BY ITS OWN LIGHT

Discovery Opens New Possibilities in Plant Fluorescence Study

How plants may be photographed by their own light is explained by Francis Lloyd, Macdonald professor of Botany, at McGill University, and Director of the Biological Building, the discoverer of a new method of plant photography.

As long ago as 1833 Sir David Brewster discovered in the green coloring matter of plants the property of fluorescence which makes them glow with a beautiful red light when no red light has been supplied to them.

Other pigments produce yellow, orange or green fluorescent light. It is by these beautiful, softly glowing lights emitted by the plants themselves that a wonderful series of plant photographs have been made by Professor Lloyd.

A stumbling block in the path of scientists working on plant fluorescence had been the difficulty of seeing the fluorescence while the plants remained within the living microscope. This had been overcome by means of a very special optical arrangement known as the fluorescent microscope.

In his photographic apparatus Professor Lloyd places in front of the camera a screen of methylene blue which filters out all light except red. The section to be photographed is then seen by its fluorescent light and can be photographed providing the plates are sensitive enough and are exposed sufficiently long.

The red fluorescent light shown by green coloring matter was instrumental in the detection of camouflage green foliage during the war. Photographs showed red foliage to be red, while camouflaged foliage appeared up green.

The value of this discovery in microscopic technique is that it affords an additional and new method of studying the pigments of plants which are connected with the process of photosynthesis.

By means of the dark field illumination used by Professor Lloyd, it is possible to study the way in which such pigments occur in living organisms and already Professor Lloyd has been able to photograph the various forms of some of them not understood up to the present.

Annie has golden hair like little Golden-Locks, in the fairy story old, and her eyes are blue.

Annie's mother died and her father boarded her out with a woman he knew. The foster-mother was sick. The little girl was sadly neglected, very dirty and unfed, for story is that she was turned out on the street and told not to come back. Be that as it may, the foster-mother died in her bed.

Somewhat told one of the Girl Guides about the little golden-haired girl who had never had a Christmas present. Her troop dressed a doll for her and she was turned out on the street as a Christmas tree, and also every child might her stocking to her bed the night before Christmas.

The unity of the Roman Catholic Church throughout the world might become more practicable the Commission on Catechetical Teaching have made considerable progress during the past six years in formulating a common text of the catechism for all Catholics. The burden of the work has been done by Dr. McKeachan, Professor of Catechetics at Washington University. He has been comparing the catechisms used by Catholics of all languages, and has drafted a single text, which will be of great service in these days of emigration.

The 128th session of the New England Methodist Conference will meet at the Hotel Hamilton in Boston, Mass., on Monday, Jan. 14. It will be presided over by Bishop Mead, of Denver. The number of students in the Episcopal Colleges in the United States has increased from 485 last year to 466. During the 21 years that Rev. A. Pohlman has been pastor of the Temple Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, he has received 3,285 into full membership. A missionary's son has finished his education in Canada and has joined his father in China. The happy father is Dr. William McCure, one of the first medical men in Honan, and his son Robert will also join the father in China. The Rev. Dr. Norman J. Endicott, son of Rev. Dr. Endicott, Foreign Missionary Secretary of the Methodist Church in Canada, has been chosen Rhodes Scholar for Ontario. The first bell of a carillon of five chimes has been placed in the bell tower of St. Redemptorist Church, Hull, Quebec. It weighs 1,800 lbs. and is called Joseph Arthur, after Father Carriere, the priest in charge. The Rev. Dr. George A. Stewart, member of St. John's Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, Mo., has left $50,000 to the church and the Bible Society. The Rev. Dr. Stewart is the fourth of a new Ecumenical Patriarch, Mr. Gregorius VII, to succeed Mr. Meletios IV, who was so badly used by the opposing forces in Turkey.

Dean Inge, of St. Paul's, London, Eng., has set the "hearer on fire" by a sermon in which he bluntly asks the question: "Why should the capital of the universal church be the city of Rome?" A Catholic editor charges him with trying to "inflame John Bull against the church." "He knows," says the editor in his reply to the Dean, "that the Vicar of Christ has never ceased since 1570 to protest in the most solemn manner against the compromising of the universality of the Church by the intrusion of nationality into the city and the territory which so long as it remained his inviolate patrimony were symbols to all nations and peoples and tongues of the Catholic greetings from Rome and as their Holy Father the Pope is no more Italian than he is Irishman or a Brazilian."

The threatened split among the Episcopal Theologians of New York and the church generally has evidently passed the danger point for the present. A statement issued by Mr. Zabriske, Chancellor of the Diocese of New York, lays down the principle that "the right solution of the difficulties within the church will be found not in controversy, but through conference." Such a "get-together" meeting has been held at which opponents like Bishop Manning and Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks; Bishop William Cabell Brown, of Virginia, and Bishop William Lawrence, of Massachusetts. There were also called in such strong men in the church as Bishop Charles H. Brent, of Western New York, Dr. Foshbrook, Dean of the General Theological Seminary, and Judge Augustus N. Hand. This meeting was not officially called or announced by any single person, but the next will likely be called by the authority of the church.

There are 24 Catholics in the British House of Commons, an increase of three over the old Parliament. Of these belong to the Labor Party, seven are Unionists, three are Liberals, two are Nationalists, and one Sinn Feiner. The Abbot of St. Wandrille, Dom Potbury, has passed away, aged 88. Pope Eius X. made him President of a Pontifical Commission for preparing the Vatican edition of liturgical books. The two cardinals recently added to the Sacred College, Rome, are both noted men. Mgr. Galli was Secretary of Briefs to Princes since 1911, and also of Latin Letters. Mgr. Lucidi was Auditor of His Holiness and Secretary of the Signatura.

The ex-Moderators of the Presbyterian Church of Canada have sent greetings and counsels for the New Year. The evening service at Christ Church Cathedral next Sunday will be broadcast by the courtesy of the Northern Electric Company, it is announced today. The Very Reverend Arthur Carlisle, D.D., rector of Christ Church Cathedral, and Dean of Montreal, will be the preacher and the whole of the sermon will be broadcast.

THAT is the Golden Rule applied to politics and it is because being a good citizen is fundamentally just a step along the road to being a good Christian, that the churches are of such great value to the community by their influence on the citizen.

RAIL STRIKE IN BRITAIN CERTAIN

Locomotive Engineers Turn Down Wage Award by 6 to 1 Vote

WILL CALL OUT MEN

Last Minute Efforts to Effect Compromise With Roads Fail

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(Associated Press)—The locomotive men's organization officially announced today that a railway strike in Great Britain was inevitable unless the question of a wage readjustment. The society asserted that the lines had refused to make any concessions. P. Bromley, secretary of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, announced that the attitude of the companies was absolutely unyielding. He stated that the union was perfecting its arrangements for the calling of the strike at a time which would not be made public. The dispute arose over the question of the railway wages board, a decision which the locomotive men assert reduces their weekly wage on a proportion to the cost of living. The award, they contend, is unacceptable. The society polled its members with a view to the acceptance or rejection of the finding, and the returns show a six to one majority against taking the reduction. Representatives of the society met the railway men in London and reported the outcome of the ballot. A prolonged conference was held yesterday at which the road officials promised to consider the points raised by the employees. This morning the companies replied that they could make no concessions and would abide by the wages board award, which, they said, had been accepted by the other two railway unions—the National Union of Railwaymen and the Railway Clerks Association. The locomotive men, however, consider the award harmful to the membership of their organization. Mr. Bromley later stated that a strike would not take place immediately, and said that unless the men were otherwise instructed they would cease work at the time already decided upon. Unofficially, it is reported, that the workers are not likely to be called out before the end of next week. Mr. Bromley told an interviewer the men were resolved to fight to a finish.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(Star-Tribune Staff Copy)—The Admiralty have been let by the Admiralty to Cox and Banks, engineers and shipbrokers, or salvaging the German fleet scuttled in Scapa Flow in June, 1919. Sixty-eight vessels are to be raised, making the task the biggest salvage operation ever undertaken. Among the vessels to be raised are the battleship cruisers, three cruisers and many smaller ships. After being raised the ships will be examined for possible use as targets for anti-aircraft guns, and if found suitable they will be sold to shipbreakers.

SHIPS' NIGHT RADIO MUST BE QUIETER

Interfere in Concert Programs—Canada at U.S. Conference

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(Special to Star From Our Own Correspondent.)—Ships that sail in the night hereafter will be asked to do it quietly. They interfere altogether too much with the classical jazz that goes over the air of the continent. Scarcely a song or sermon or lecture is heard that does not, at the psychological moment, suffer from a gasping shriek or spluttering spark-ship monologues over the wireless. As one step toward restoring harmony in the radio world, experts from all parts of the country and from Canada met yesterday with Arthur H. Hays Sulzberger, radio inspector, at the Custom House, to discuss ways and means of giving every ship its time and place in which to make outlandish noises. A world congress may be called to pass international legislation on the subject. Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, of the Radio Corporation of America, said commercial ship and shore telegraphy had not kept pace with the rapid development of radio in the last three years. The problem is one either of driving the imperfect transmitters of ships away from the frequencies employed by broadcasting stations, or of requiring them to substitute radio data equipment which would not interfere even though operating on the lower frequencies. He said it was not the aim at present to attack the trouble in a drastic fashion, but merely to obtain the amicable co-operation of ship stations, so that they will keep off the short wave lengths employed by broadcasting at stated intervals, notably in the evening when concerts are sent out. Commander Edwards surprised some of the conferees by telling them that Canadian amateurs, from coast to coast receive all their broadcast programs from American stations. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that ships should not send on waves shorter than 300 meters. At present they are allowed by the London conference 450,000 700 and 900 meters and it is the first of these that causes all the trouble.

They gave their names as Eddie Green, 20 years, and Howard Smith, 28 years, both of Ottawa. Green, it is said, wore a fur coat under his regular coat. They are charged with burglary.

Found wandering about attached to a coal vendor's wagon, the aged animal was driven in the police yard. It leaped the fence which separated the yard from a sunken lane and the harness caught on a post. The owner has entered action for $100, contending the horse should have been taken to the pound.

WOULD REPEAL ACT. QUEBEC, Jan. 12.—(Star Special)

A bill for the amendment of the Quebec Fish and Game Act will be presented to the Legislature by Gen. C. A. Smart (Westmount) to change the terms of the law relative to the Crown reserve of non-navigable streams. It is claimed that prior to 1919 the law read that the Government might hold lands to a distance of three chains from the water for fishing purposes. In the year mentioned the wording was changed so to place the land in full possession of the Government. This is objected to by the member for Westmount as confiscatory legislation.

Organization of Conservatives in St. Antoine Division

The first step for the forming of an organization to promote Conservative interests in St. Antoine division was taken last night at a meeting held at the Liberal-Conservative Association headquarters, Mount Royal Hotel. It was decided to form a body with two sections, one for each of the wards which form the constituency. William R. Bullock was chairman in charge of last night's meeting, while Frederick H. Hays, gave a review of the history of the constituency. It was stated that the Conservative Party had always been chosen as representatives of the ward, he said. The speaker points out that in the elections of 1918 the Liberal-Conservative Association was formed. It was agreed that an efficient organization of workers in each subdivision would prevent the voters from being swayed with names of people who had no right to vote. Other political workers present at a meeting last night were: C. E. Hays, representative of St. Antoine in the Provincial House; Dr. F. W. Hays, Messrs. John Macnaughton, J. Robertson, Lord Strathcona, C. J. A. Gower, J. H. Larocque, S. Lunham, G. A. Forbes, S. Rappin, A. P. Barrett, H. W. Marshall, H. E. Hays, R. A. Rothwell, Ernest Hays and Samuarez Carmichael, P.C.

THE SPREAD OF PELMANISM

The Story of a Great Movement That Has Captured the Imagination of Forward-Looking Men and Women.

By the President of The Pelman Institute.

PELMANISM is one of the most important things that has come to Canada in recent years. With a record of hundreds of thousands of successes in England, this famous course in mind training has crossed the ocean at last. Pelmanism is neither an experiment nor a theory. For twenty years it has been teaching people how to think; how to use fully the powers of which they are conscious; how to discover and to train the powers of which they have been unconscious. Pelmanism is merely the science of thinking; the science of putting right thought into successful action; the science of that mental team play that is the one true source of efficiency.

I heard first of Pelmanism during a recent visit to London. Its advertising matter filled pages in papers and magazines, and "Are you a Pelmanist?" was a common question. It was T. P. O'Connor who satisfied my curiosity and gave me facts. By 1918 there were 400,000 Pelmanists (the number is 559,000 today) figuring in every walk and condition of life. Lords and ladies of high degree, clerks and cooks, members of Parliament, laborers, clergymen and actors, farmers, lawyers, doctors, coal miners, soldiers and sailors, even Generals and Admirals, were all Pelmanizing, and heads of great business houses were actually enrolling their entire staffs in the interest of larger efficiency. In France, Flanders, and Italy over 100,000 soldiers of the Empire were taking Pelmanism in order to fit themselves for return to civil life.

As a matter of fact, with many who took the training the thing had all the force and sweep of a religion. It went deep into life, far down beneath all surface emotions, and bedded its roots in the very centres of individual being. It was an astonishing phenomenon, virtually compelling my interest, and I agreed gladly when certain members of Parliament offered to take me to Pelman House. A growing enthusiasm led me to study the plan in detail, and it is out of the deepest conviction that I make these flat statements:

Pelmanism can, and does, develop and strengthen such qualities as will power, concentration, ambition, self-reliance, judgment and memory.

Pelmanism can, and does, substitute "I will" for "I wish," by curing mind wandering and "wool-gathering."

Not a Mere Memory System

Viewed historically, Pelmanism is a study in intelligent growth. Twenty years ago it was a simple memory training system. Time has broadened it. Today it does not confine itself to the training of just this or one function of the human mind, but scientifically exercises and develops all of the mental powers.

Pelmanism today is a known course in applied psychology, a course that will build mind as a physical instructor builds muscle. There is nothing really new in it. All of its truths are as old as the hills. But it reduces these truths to practical use. It puts them into harness for the doing of the day's work.

It teaches how to develop personality, how to build character, how to strengthen individuality. Instead of training memory alone, or will power alone, or reasoning power alone, it recognizes the absolute interdependence of those powers and trains them together.

The course comes in twelve lessons—twelve "Little Grey Books." They are sent one at a time, and the student fills out work sheets that are gone over with pen and ink by a staff of trained instructors. There is nothing arduous about the course, and it offers no great difficulties, but it does require application.

Pelmanism Has Got to Be Worked At

You can take a pill for a sluggish liver, but all the patent medicines in the world can't help a sluggish mind. Pelmanism is not a "pill" system. It proceeds upon the scientific theory that there is no law in nature that condemns the human mind to permanent limitations. It develops the mental faculties by regular exercise, just as the athlete develops his muscles. It gives the mind a gymnasium to work in; it prescribes the work scientifically, and skilled educators superintend the work.

It is the science of Get There—getting there quickly, surely, finely! Not for men alone, but for women as well. Women in commercial pursuits have the same problems to overcome as men. Women in the home are operating a business, a highly specialized, complex business requiring every ounce of judgment, energy, self-reliance and quick decision that it is possible to develop.

Canadians need it as much as England needed it. There are too many men who are "old at forty"; too many people who complain about their "luck" when they fail; too many people without ambition or who have "lost their nerve"; too many "job cowards" living under the daily fear of being "fired."

Original thinking is almost a lost art. We look at games instead of playing them. The less the mental demand the more popular the play. There is music in restaurants because it is too much trouble to talk intelligently. Life is cut to pieces by deep ruts, with the people in them never looking over the sides. Greater driving force and higher powers of concentration will add to the nation's assets.

Increased Incomes

TALK of quick and large salary raises suggests quackery, but I saw bundles of letters telling how Pelmanism has increased earnings and capacities from 20 to 200 per cent. With my own ears I heard the testimony of employers to this effect. Why not? Increased efficiency is worth more money. Aroused ambition, heightened energies refuse to let a man rest content with "well enough." Business demands ever-increasing efficiency, and employers are quick to reward it.

But Pelmanism is bigger than that. There's more to it than the making of money. It makes for a richer and more wholesome and more interesting life.

Too many people are mentally lopsided, knowing just the one thing or taking interest in only one thing. Of all living creatures they are the most deadly. I have seen eminent scholars who were the dullest of talkers; successful business men who knew nothing of literature, art or music; people of achievement sitting tongue-tied in a crowd while some tool held the floor; masters of industry ignorant of every social value; workers whose lives were drab because they did not know how to put color in them, and I have heard men and women of real intelligence forced to rely on anecdotes to keep up a conversation.

The emphasis of Pelmanism is on a complete personality. It does away with lopsided developments. It points the way to cultural values as well as to material success. It opens the windows of the mind to the values of the world; it puts the stored wealth of memory at the service of the tongue; it burns away the stupid diffidence by developing self-reliance and self-expression; it makes unnecessary the stereotyped in speech and thought and action.

Canada's Response

Every Occupation, Trade and Profession Represented in the Swift Rush of Pelmanism.

Pelmanism is not bound by sex, class, creed or circumstances. Its benefits are as broad as the needs of mankind. Any man or woman, no matter whether rich or poor, skilled or unskilled, will find strength and advancement in Pelmanism. The truth of this claim is proved by the books of the Pelman Institute. A study of enrollments shows that every corner of the land has its growing group of Pelmanists, and that the list includes every field of human endeavor. The home, the shop, the farm, the bank, the store, the factory, the bench and bar, the office, all have their representatives and the letters show that this great system of mental training comes as an answer to a tremendous need. This occupational survey shows that the driving, conquering spirit of Canada is not the property of any one class, but is found in every walk of life. Within the past few months thousands of these trades, professions and occupations enrolled as Pelmanists.

Pelmanism has touched the real Canada. This world-famous Course was brought to Canada only a short time ago. Already thousands of men and women have become Pelmanists and are benefitting their lives by the application of Pelman principles—increasing their incomes—lifting themselves out of mental rut. Below quote from a few of the hundreds of enthusiastic letters we have received from Pelmanists.

"Increases Salary $2,000"

"Until recently I sort of believed the other fellows in our office had cornered the cleverness market. I was awed by their ability and success. Then, in order, came the first four books of Pelmanism. I began to assimilate my ideas. I got real with confidence so, a change in their attitude toward me. My salary went up. My judgment was sought. 'I know and I can' got them. A big position outside of newspaper work became vacant. On January 1st I wouldn't have tackled it. I became a candidate. The position pays $2,000 MORE a year than I now receive. I became aggressive. I am as good as the man who held it. I decided. Other candidates, good men, withdrew in my favor."

"Increases Salary Fifty Per Cent."—Pelman Student Bank Teller

"I have accepted a position with the Dominion Savings Bank & Trust Company as teller in the Foreign Exchange Department. It would have been very hard to decide but for the Pelman course. I also feel that if I had not taken Pelmanism I would probably not have gotten this position, which means 50 per cent. more money to me than the last."

"Second Lesson Alone Worth More Than Price for Complete Course"

"Please let me thank you for your good course. The second lesson was worth considerably more than the full price to me, for it did its work completely. If I had an aim before it, was too vague for any real use, and I really was just drifting along from day to day. The aim which you so kindly helped me uncover is entirely feasible, and with proper effort, will be accomplished. The rest of the course is all that it should be, and I know it will prosper in my daily work although my employer probably does not understand the reason for the phenomenon."

Treasurer of Big Corporation Enrolls Five Sons as Pelmanists

One of our students in Pelmanism is treasurer and director of one of the largest corporations in the land. A man of mature years, in the height of his mental vigor, he took a course in Pelmanism to keep fit. He found Pelmanism so interesting, so inspiring, so infinitely beneficial to him, that he has introduced his five sons to take up Pelmanism.

"From an Army Man—Flanders Veteran"

"I took Pelmanism originally because I was bored to death about 50 per cent. of the time (and scared to death the other fifty) in the line in Flanders, but I have found Pelmanism a life-giving investment from all points of view—and especially now I am finding it in getting back from the excitement and danger of military service to the dullness of an office. I am sure that it will be a permanent benefit, and I am enthusiastic."

FAMOUS MEN ENDORSE

Great Figures in International Life Put Themselves Squarely Behind Pelmanism.

Major-General Sir FREDERICK MAURICE, K.C.M.G., C.B.

"The PELMAN System is not cram or trick, but a scientific method of training which has proved its value to the soldier in war, and in the world. I am certain, be of the greatest benefit if it were adapted to army training generally."

Sir H. RIDER HAGGARD, author of "She," "King Solomon's Mines," etc., etc.:

"I recommend PELMANISM to those who, in the fullest sense, really wish to learn and become what men and women ought to be."

Admiral Lord BERESFORD, G.C.B., G.C.V.O.

"I judge the PELMAN System from the experience gained during the fifty years I was associated with the training of officers, men and boys in the Royal Navy. I should describe the System as inculcating self-reliance, and the perfecting of the mind, memory and mental equipment generally."

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR, Member of Parliament and one of the most brilliant writers and orators of modern times, is an enthusiastic believer in Pelmanism. He says:

"Of two young men in business, one takes the PELMAN Course and the other does not. Other things being equal, the young man who takes the PELMAN Course will quickly pass the one who has not availed himself of this advantage in the race of life."
"Not one person in a thousand who takes this Course but will find it a distinct benefit, as many thousands have done before him: The PELMAN System is not only unique in itself, but deserves well of the country and of the world."

Judge BEN B. LINDSEY, world-famous founder of the Juvenile Court of Denver, Colorado.

"I first heard of PELMANISM in England on what work. It was the topic on every tongue. I had heard of PELMANISM and came to a belief in it. There is no earthly reason why the mind should not be trained as the body is trained, why it should not be strengthened as the muscles are strengthened. It is a 'big thing' to have PELMANISM in the United States, because it will carry a message of courage and ambition into every life willing to receive it."

Take Advantage of Special Introductory Fee

The special introductory fee for Pelmanism, now in force, will be available for only a few weeks longer. The rate in prior times being made necessary by the grade of service we insist on giving.

Early problem which your study of Pelmanism brings up in doubt with an excellent book has been well trained in the Pelman Institute, but also post-graduate degrees in education and psychology.

In private work the head of the instructional staff has received for a slight consideration as much as the full fee paid for this course of instruction. Each of our students has been well trained in the Pelman Institute, but also post-graduate degrees in education and psychology.

General Sir ROBERT BADEN-POWELL, Founder of the Boy Scouts:

"Now in PELMANISM I find practically the same principles enunciated as in the Boy Scouts' training, including even a number of the same ideas in detail."

"It is these attributes are common to both Movements that my sympathy has gone over to PELMANISM."
"The PELMAN System, so far as I can judge from what I have seen of it, appeals to me because it deals with the individual, and because it offers to him in a practical form the cardinal steps to the development and strengthening of mental character, which is the foundation of success in any line of life. And many, if not most, of these steps are those which have been omitted in the average school training."
"How much or how little benefit he will derive from such a scheme depends largely, of course, on the extent of the student's previous education and on his own application. I feel, however, that no man—no matter how educated, or what his age or what his profession—who seriously takes up the course offered can go through it without improving himself in some degree, while to many it will assuredly point a path that will help them to successful careers."

Mr. E. F. BENSON, the brilliant author of "Abroad" and many other successful works, says:

"My own independent judgment (of PELMANISM) is so amply endorsed that I cannot hesitate about recording my confidence in the soundness of the System and in the result which anyone who honestly and consistently follows it may be entitled to expect from it. The PELMAN System is an apotheosis of common sense, and I know no higher praise than that."

By JEROME K. JEROME, author of "Three Men in a Boat," "Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," etc., etc.:

"All book learning depends for its usefulness upon memory. We give the boy the books to learn, but we take no trouble to teach him how to remember. We give him the books first, and twenty years later let him, if he chooses, go to the PELMAN Institute to learn how to make use of them. The consequence is that two-thirds of the time he has spent upon his book learning is so much time of his life wasted."

"Every youngster comes into this world provided with a fine box of tools necessary for his life's work. It is neatly packed, and nothing is missing. He carries it in his brain. It contains Concentration, Observation, Imagination (the Mother of Enterprise), and above all, Memory. Properly employed, they will enable him to accomplish any task to which his may call him. But nobody shows him how to use them. Oh, that's all right, we say, 'he'll find out in time.' So he does, with his feet towards the end of middle life, after years of hunting and despair. And by a little help in the beginning, by the help of PELMANISM—I don't care what it's called, I mean by showing him how to employ and become fast in the use of his brain—how to observe truly and perceive rapidly; how to concentrate his attention and arrange his ideas; how to think and how to reason—above all, how to remember, he might have been a useful member of society from the beginning."

"As it is, he has to trust to hearing about PELMANISM. I am more than willing to help in making it known to him. He ought to have been taught it when he was young. The sooner he takes it the better for him and for the country. It's your turn, then, to get it. It won't put more brain into him than the Lord gave him. But it will enable him to make full use of the brain he has been given. Most of us at present are wasting it."

Synopsis of the Course

A Swift Survey of the Twelve Great Lessons

The Science of Self Realization

Everything in nature realizes itself; but civilized man often fails to do so. To succeed he must be mentally efficient in his communications. Man must operate to his advancement. Man must understand himself and his surroundings. In this lesson we point out how we show how the mind works. We define mental ability and show how it is developed.

Purpose or What Is Your Aim?

This is one of the most vital lessons of the course. Analyze yourself according to the instructions and you can not possibly emerge from the ordeal the same man; you see things in a new light, and you are your own advancing interest and purpose are the key words.

Knowledge and the Senses

There are two worlds: one external and one internal. The senses act as the bridge between the two. Undeveloped senses mean little knowledge and poor ideas; but trained senses spell efficiency.

Will and Effort

There is a good deal of false teaching about will-power. Have you ever tried to reflect, arising out of twenty-five years' reflection and experience, Pelmanism helps put man in control of himself. It believes control should come daily in the course. The lesson teaches how to show you how to bring your will-power to bear on your theory to better you."

Concentration

Can you focus your attention on anything but the "anyway" and "so" of the world, and in spite of surrounding distractions? If not, study this lesson. It places the whole subject in its proper light. The great leaders of men have been able to concentrate as well as to concentrate. It teaches you how to carry out your will-power to the point where the other fellow is not.

Mental Connection

Scores of students have said this is the best lesson of the course. Why? Because it teaches the art of thinking in a connected manner. In many persons the mind is a jumble of bits and pieces of thoughts and impressions. This lesson introduces order and method into the mind's operations. It helps give you that kind of grip and control which will give you notice in the man.

Imagination and Originality

Many Pelmanists enrolled to get this lesson because the subject appealed to them. It appeals to all progressive and original minds. The lesson is a vital part, and Pelmanists everywhere are carrying it out. It has brought wealth and happiness to thousands.

The Pursuit of Truth

Everybody is seeking the truth about something. The detective seeks it; the inventor seeks it; the trader, the theologian, the philosopher, the scientist, the judge are all of them trying to discover the real facts. How is it done? By following the method of the Pelman Institute. It teaches you how to carry out the principles of connection.

On Personality

There is no country in the world where personality is more deeply considered than in Canada. In this lesson there is a new treatment of the subject; the aim is to bring out the unconscious element in character, both mental and moral. The course of our men and women, both financial and social which know no standard of measurement.

How to Organize Your Mental Life

A PELMANIST is a realist first. He is not to carry an income by believing in something, an increasing income. Money is not to be made by believing in something. He must be able to discuss ideas as well as talk figures. There is no doubt about it, the great success is in the fact that he has a clear idea of his own claims, and in this lesson we show how to keep in touch with the more reflective side of life. PELMANISM'S resources are not at all limited in the bank; he carries some of them himself.

Your Subconscious Mind

Our minds may be likened to feathers which, when floating in the ocean, show only a small portion of their mass above the surface. The great bulk is below—out of sight. Our consciousness is the part that shows above the surface, but the subconscious is the part that is hidden below. It is as important to you as to the professional student of psychology.

Pelmanism in Action

In the pages of the last lesson we give a resume of an application of the principles previously expounded. We do this to show you how to apply them in your own life. There is a punch in our questions, but it is always friendly. Moreover, the last workout is longer and fuller than any of the others. It is a kind of hand-to-hand contest with the student, and we have no more sequence more to say to each other. We do not want you to miss any of the points contained in Lesson 12 to 21. We are anxious to see you firmly established in the new foundation. Therefore, when you have covered the round of the whole course, and realized it in its entirety, the greatest questions will help you make PELMANISM a living element in your personality.

YOUR UNSUSPECTED SELF

Pelmanism Brings Your Hidden, Sleeping Qualities Into Full Development and Dynamic Action.

ARE you the man or woman you ought to be? Beneath the Self of which you are conscious there is hidden an unsuspected Self, a thing of sleeping strength and infinite possibilities. That Self is the man or woman you ought to be.

It is the Self of power and pride; the self of courage, confidence and decision; the Self that will lift you from the ruts of life to the hilltops of ambition; the Self that leaves "footprints on the sands of time."

It is this unsuspected Self that occasionally rises upmost in some crises of life after you have set your teeth to go in and win and have won. And then you say, wonderingly: "How strange? I didn't think I had it in me."

Let that Self be always upmost! Resolve to be always the man you ought to be!

But first discover your unsuspected Self!

Search through all the muddle and chaos of wrong thinking, of doubt and self-doubt and find the qualities, these powerful potentialities all those slumbering talents which every one of us possess.

Developed and used, they will lead you to a higher, finer place in life; they will lift you from the dead levels of mediocrity to the broad highway of progress. The human mind, freed from slavery to slothful habits, and trained to strength by proper exercises, has the drive of a mighty machine. It takes no account of obstacles; it refuses to be stopped by barriers.

Benefits Not Measured in Money Alone

THESE statements are not advanced as empty speculations, but are stated as facts, facts that have behind them the testimony of more than five hundred thousand men and women who have studied Pelmanism, that science of Self-Realization which bids fair to revolutionize our conception of "Destiny" and "Possibility."

"I have got into a position that I should never have managed a few months ago; in fact, I can hardly believe myself," says another.

It is this quality of laying bare unsuspected powers and potentialities that makes Pelmanism a great intellectual movement.

Pelmanism takes no account of class, creed or circumstances. Its values are for all.

Business men, from the great captains of commerce to their clerks, are ardent Pelmanists.

Professional men—lawyers, doctors, clergymen, teachers, artists, authors—have come to the knowledge that Pelmanism will help them to surmount difficulties and achieve a greater degree of success in their vocations.

Thousands Now Being Benefited

THE minds of many men are veiled by misunderstanding. Pelmanism tears aside this veil and shows you how your mind works and how you can make it work more efficiently. When you know your mind as an accelerator.

Educationally, intellectually and socially Pelmanism is a factor whose power must be felt to be fully appreciated. To thousands Pelmanism has meant intellectual rebirth. To thousands it has been the means of discovery of latent mental powers and unsuspected talents. Thousands who were used to go unarticulate through life have learned the joy of self-expression. Tens of thousands, after studying the first lessons, have hastened to write in glowing terms of the stimulus, sane optimism, encouragement and courage imparted to their minds by its study.

Whether you measure the value of Pelmanism in terms of hard cash, intellectual vigor, moral strength or everyday happiness, you cannot fail to be satisfied with its results.

Only Your Spare-Time Required

Pelmanism does not ask you for fixed hours of attendance and set times for study. It fits into your time instead of demanding that your time fit into it.

The PELMAN Course is arranged in a series of well-planned lessons for correspondence instruction based upon over 20 years' experience with all classes of men and women in different parts of the world. A special system keeps the examiners in close personal touch with the students right through the course, and insures that individual attention which is so essential to the success of a study of this character.

All postal and other expenses on the outgoing lessons, etc., are prepaid by the PELMAN Institute, and the student is at no further expense beyond that of postage on communications to the Institute. The instruction sheet includes men and women of the highest qualifications and experience, and the privilege of their expert counsel does not terminate with the instruction. "Once a PELMANIST, always a PELMANIST."

How to Become a Pelmanist

"SCIENTIFIC Mind Training" is the name of the booklet which describes Pelmanism down to the last detail. It is fascinating in its clearness, and wealth of original thought and incisive observation. It has benefits of its own that will make the reader keep it.

In its pages will be found the comment and experience of men and women of every trade, profession and calling, telling how Pelmanism works—the observation of scientists with respect to such vital questions as age, sex and circumstances in their bearing on success—"stories from the life" and brilliant hit-or-miss, on personality, opportunity, etc.—all drawn from facts. So great has been the demand that "Scientific Mind Training" has already gone into the fiftieth edition of 100,000 in the English language.

Your copy is ready for you. Immediately upon receipt of your request it will be mailed to you absolutely free of charge and free of any obligation. Send for "Scientific Mind Training" now. MARGARET CURRIE'S CHATS

WHAT IS BEAUTY?

This continent seems to have gone mad on the subject of beauty contests. When even the Yukon goes in for a selection of the handsomest man as well as the most beautiful girl in that district, it does seem rather surprising.

One is fed from one's childhood on tales of the "blood and thunder" of the far north, where "he-men" carry "six guns" as a matter of fact and the man who is "quickest on the draw" is considered "cock of the walk"; one has been told of the mirth that greets the "dude" and the "tenderfoot" and when one has been quite convinced that these tales are true, it is a decided shock to read that the Yukon has staged a beauty contest for men. Shades of Curwood!

The most recent beauty contest for women in New York was won by a sixteen-year-old Toronto girl, who promptly secured a movie contract as the result of her win. Where do you suppose it is going to end, and what is beauty anyway?

A group of people were discussing the subject at a dance one evening this week and one of the women said, "My husband and I never agree on any woman's looks. If I think a girl is pretty, he can't see it."

"Wise man!" interjected a cynical bystander, "but do women ever agree with a man on the subject of another woman's looks?"

"Yes, indeed," said another woman present; "I am the most cordial admirer of beauty you ever knew. But I think woman judge beauty by a different standard. I admire beautiful skin, eyes, hair, teeth and figure, but I am also influenced by the way in which a woman is dressed. Does she do her hair in a becoming fashion? Does she wear smart, up-to-date clothes? Does she choose becoming colors and lines? All these things affect my judgment, while a man gets the tout ensemble, as it were, and doesn't pause for details."

"Clothes do affect a man's judgment to a certain extent," asserted the husband of the first woman. "I like a woman to be well-dressed but I don't want her to hit me in the eye with her costume, and I'd like her to look like a lady, not like a person I don't care to introduce to my wife. But much more important than her clothes or her perfection of face or figure is her expression. I don't care how pretty a girl is, if she is sulky or bad-tempered. If a woman has a pretty smile, a pleasing manner, and looks absolutely clean, as if she depended on soap and water, instead of paint and powder, for her complexion, then I'm for her and she looks good to me."

There was a general about at this and another man said, "I think you're right, old scout, but just then the music started for the next dance."

"Handsome is as handsome does," and "beauty is in the eye of the beholder," are two sayings that find much favor in the mouths of old-fashioned people. What is your idea of beauty? Send it along and perhaps we'll find out what really constitutes a beautiful woman. MARGARET CURRIE.

TO A WOODSMAN.

Well Woodman you have certainly formed a wrong opinion of the boys I write of in my first letter. I was misled by your words, to tell you the truth that letter was written to tell the boys, because the girls were quite as misled.

So you think I should go north? Allow me to inform you, my friend, that I returned only last night from the small town in the north-east of this province. Let me tell you of one experience.

My brother and I set out on Christmas morning (they have no church in that town) to shoot rabbits. We had to hike about five miles in the bush before we came to the section that the rabbits frequented.

We followed their trails until we tracked one rabbit to his hole. We politely invited him to come out and be introduced to our hound, but Mr. Rabbit was evidently an unapproachable creature. We next tried to persuade him to come out, with smoke, still Mr. Rabbit would not come out, so we decided that he had a rear entrance to his home, so off we went.

That part of the country is not only bush, but it is very difficult to get around, because of the holes in the ground. I don't know how they got there, but there they are, of course, and they are never more than a couple of feet deep, but it is very uncomfortable when you walk over them. There are also streams, fallen trees, and stones that you write about, and the stones are very uncomfortable when they are covered with a thin layer of snow so that you never can tell where you are going to cut your toes on them.

We hiked through that bush all day and the only rest we had was when we stopped at a summer camp. We had the farmer's bull there; his maple syrup; we had our lunch there; it consisted of thick sandwiches and hot coffee and I do not remember what meal tasted so good before. Nevertheless, when we arrived back to the town about 8 p.m., we were able to do justice to our Christmas dinner.

No, friend Woodman, I do not carry a pack of twenty pounds. I do not believe I could for a long distance, but I carried a gun that weighed a considerable amount, and a camera, and believe me, I took some splendid pictures of the scenery. If you care to send your address I will send you some pictures of the woods to prove that I am writing what is true.

You are wrong, and I do not hike around Park Avenue or Sherbrooke Street. When I hike I get away from the city altogether and I do not need a boy's arm either. I usually go alone and I enjoy my own company more than I would that of any fellow who is always leaving of the hearts he has broken.

I would be delighted to tell you the exact location of the town I have been writing about also the name, but if it were printed in Margaret Currie's page, too many people would recognize it. CARLA.

emergency and the name of a reliable person, not a relative, as reference. Married women-transients, desiring room whose husbands are supporting them are asked $20 a night, the same as at any hotel. There is a cafeteria in the building. Sometimes two women are asked to occupy the room. There is the famed Young Women's Christian Association, in Lexington Avenue and Fifty-First Street, Central Branch, with many branches. There are no rooms here but executive offices, cafeteria, reading rooms, rest rooms, study classes, etc. Boarding houses and housekeeping apartments can be obtained through the office.

For the girl who wishes to get out of congested parts of the city, Brooklyn, across the river affords ample selection. Around Fort Greene Park and south of De Kalb Avenue, can be found suitable rooms and housekeeping apartments. Staying south of Myrtle Avenue from $0.50 a week up. Board is extra.

There is a Y.W.C.A. in Brooklyn which affords many services in night school work, etc. I may say good children's nurses and competent housekeepers can obtain a monthly salary of from $40 to $50 and board and room in one basket.

"Want Ad." papers are New York World, Morning Times and Sunday World, Herald and Times. Any girl going to New York should have at least $50 in her pocket. Hoping this will help those in need.

BROOKLYNITE. Ed. Note:—Thank you very much for your practical letter, containing just the information needed.

WHAT DO YOU THINK? 1. A gentleman offered me his seat in the car. What is the world coming to?

2. Went to the theatre and the fellow did not ask me to kiss him when we came home. How surprising! I laughed.

3. A fellow invited me to a party. I'll never get over it.

4. I am not a flapper and yet... had every dance. Are the men modern?

5. I am not considered pretty, but I am not considered ugly, either. I'm simply crazy about myself.

6. My steady fellow, for the first time is asking me to go to the show. Miss Currie I cannot believe it! Impossible!

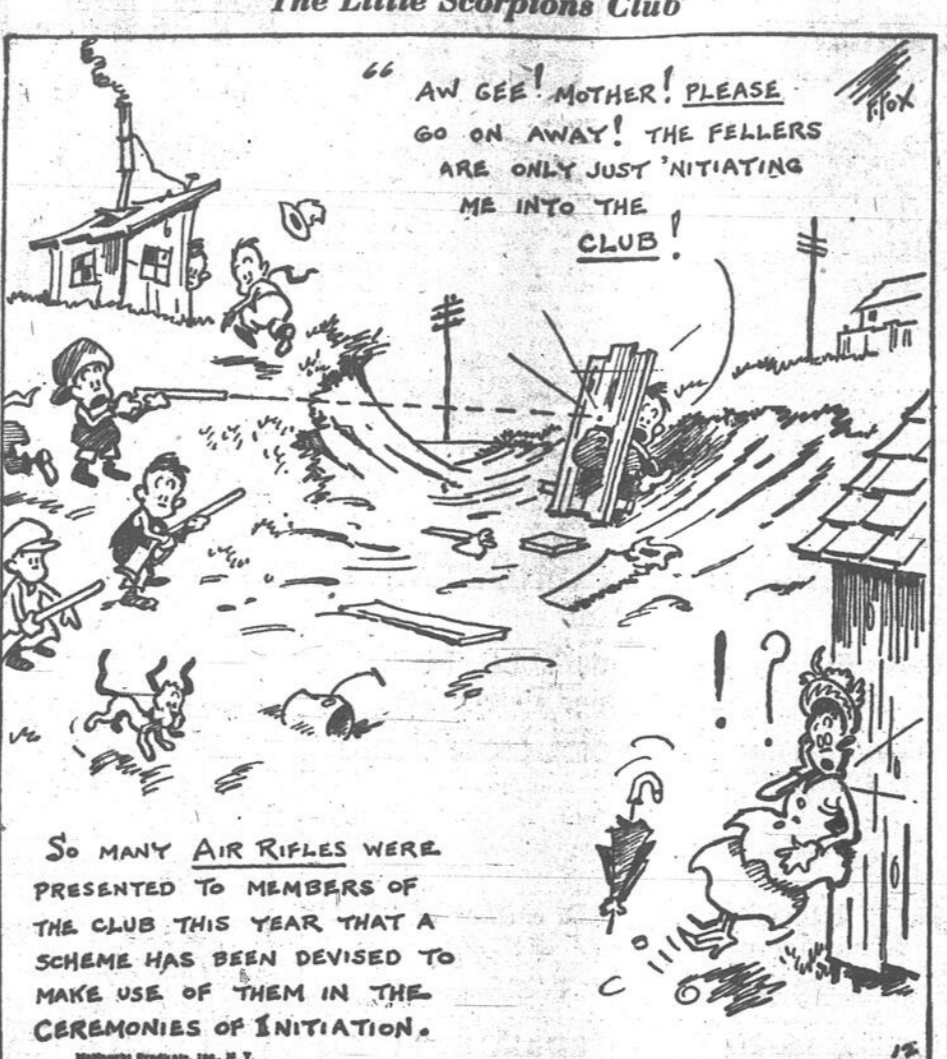

7. A fellow gave me a dish of cream almost choked. I thought he had broken his heart you very much.

8. Please publish this, the one I am referring to will recognize this I am positive.

9. I am going out tonight, I wonder what miracle will be performed! SYDALG.

A "SLACK JAW." "Man-haters" letter will, I am sure, start a big noise, for which purpose I suppose it was written. Now I have no girl. I have never gone out with one steady at all, maybe I have not much right to criticize your correspondent, but here goes. In the first place a guy who chucks up a girl with no explanation like "Man-hater" can't do it. It is not worth worrying about. It shows how despised his affection was. Secondly,

When your little child won't go to sleep, but keeps fretting after being put to bed, soothe him into the slumber with some simple little story about tired and sleepy animals or people, reading by having them all asleep. The best thing I've found is a little exercise for the child's fingers. I name the fingers for members of the family, or for some animal family, I tell what each of them has been doing all day to make him tired, and tuck each one in bed by turning "under the fingers in their order." Then when I caution the child not to awaken his sleeping finger family he will usually keep quiet until the "sammies" finds him. (Copyright, 1924, Associated Editors.)

So many Air Rifles were presented to members of the club this year that a scheme has been devised to make use of them in the ceremonies of initiation.

Man-hater I don't think ever in love. Anybody that is really in love does not go about it from the house tops and when the fellow leaves them start he-rating them through the newspaper. No I think Man-hater suffers from a common complaint of her sex, a slack jaw and not enough to occupy her time, I can prophesy a new love affair for Man-hater soon, here's luck in it.

UNFAITHFUL FRIENDS. A and B (two girls) have been going together for over four years always sharing each other's pleasures. In fact of it, A has given up many prospects of a good time because B had not been invited.

Lately B has made friends with C, a girl who is more popular than either A or B and is able to introduce the latter to many boys who takes them to dances, etc. to which A is never invited. The latter, not having many friends, having given them all up for B, is therefore left on her own resources. Naturally, the girl feels rather hurt, and don't you think that it is unkind to treat a friend in that manner.

WHY you please give me your opinion of this as I am sure this is not the only case of its kind.—MURIEL. Ans.—My dear, in friendship, as in business, it is not always wise to put all your eggs in one basket. Human Nature is frail and we are all apt to expect too much from it. When you are loyal and true yourself, it makes you very sick at heart to see your expectations in your friend but as you grow older, you will see that no-one will ever quite measure up to your expectations—it isn't humanly possible and you will learn to love people for their virtues and to overlook their faults. It is unkind of B, but A will just have to make herself more friends—and never again allow herself to become wholly dependent on one person.

FOR MAN HATER. Now, Miss Man Hater, truly I have my sympathy for you to a great extent, but do you not take your little experience too seriously? Perhaps Miss A really did love Mr. A. but most likely it was nothing more than fascination. (It is often very hard to distinguish between those two.) Whatever the case it is quite evident that Mr. A. really did love Miss A; for, if he did, on hearing his "friends" remarks, he would start right away to try to win the love of Miss A.—Isn't that so?

Undoubtedly Mr. B is an extremely mean person and not to be trusted, but he is only one, why down his list? Many are the men who'd be titled to death to get an undisturbed five minutes with him. To think that he should cause such a wonderful grieve to talk like that about us!

Do you know I could tell you of a great number of little episodes very much like yours and where girls played a rather prominent part? On one occasion a certain Mr. C (to adopt your style) and a certain Miss D were both I believe) desperately in love with one another. Mr. C's eyes began to go back on him. Then Miss D saw anxiety ahead, or perhaps a little rougher road, so she promptly sprung to another with a brighter future. However, I'm sure she never forgot Mr. C and I think she is sorry today. Mr. C went through the crisis, his only comfort his dog—no more dependent than the girl.

'Tis the man who breaks the engagement is it? Well you listen here, how many times have you heard of a man suing for breach of promise? Never have I heard of it. But if a man only thinks he would like to have the engagement discontinued he expects a warrant within the next hour. So boys are the meanest of the sex and they can't deny it!—A boy can deny it just as easily as a girl can say it. But a boy thinks twice before he speaks.—he has no proof. A woman surely thinks twice I know I shouldn't say that I have no proof. Perhaps I'm sorry (I mean sorry that I said such a thing). Speaking of meanness, I once heard of a little girl who was treated meanly by a boy, so she promptly gives each and every boy and icy shoulder. Of course, they were all exceedingly sorry and many broke down in grief.

Oh you mustn't take it to heart, poor little Man Hater and remember, they all flop sooner or later, and the longer they hold out the harder they flop.—EASY GOING CHICK.

THE HEALTHFUL LIFE By Dr. JOHN B. HUBER

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS. Chronic bronchitis is an attack of the gripe or acute bronchitis that has been let run on for weeks and months after it should have been cleared up; and then the inflammation of the "pipes" becomes chronic. The trouble is also apt to go along with other lung affections—asthma or consumption, heart, artery and kidney ailments, alcoholism, indigestion, rheumatism and gout. Workmen who must constantly breathe in irritating vapors are very susceptible to this disease. It is easily developed. It thrives in damp, cold and changeable weather. The sufferer is short of breath on exertion, is easily exhausted and his chest feels tight. He has, however, little pain and rarely fever. His cough varies with the state of the atmosphere and with the season; and in the summer there may be none at all, or only morning and evening coughs. The general health is then pretty fair, but with the coming of winter the disease again becomes prominent. At all times there will be in each case the symptoms also of the associated disease.

The sputum may be scanty, or it may be excessive, especially in old and feeble folk and those with valvular heart disease. In some sufferers sudden death from asphyxia may have to be feared. Or the expectoration may have a putrid odor; and then there is very likely an abscess or a cavity or a tuberculous cavity in the lung. In such patients death may have to come from pneumonia or some brain trouble, by extension from the lungs through the circulation.

These patients when they can afford it, should spend their winters in a warm, dry, equable climate such as our Southern affords. They must, in any event, from November to May avoid exposure and at all times fatigue. The strenuous life is not for them. The clothing, especially the footwear, must be always warm and dry; the diet of easily digested food; the meals regular, the stomach never overloaded. Such sufferers must never take on fat. The bowels must be free moving, at least once a day. The physician will prescribe medicine appropriate to the individual case—tonics, expectorants, inhalants. His success in treating this disease will depend largely on finding out how it originated, and what disease (such as I have mentioned) accompanies the chronic bronchitis.

Although complete cure may not be possible, a great deal can be done to prevent extension, to avoid complications, to ease the symptoms and to prolong life.

EXERCISES. (1) Kindly tell me is it all right for a lady 41 years old to do gym back and forwards and sideways (of bending), even if she is pregnant, having had 6 children. (2) To what age can a person have children? I would like to have as many as the good God would send me.

Answer.—(1) Exercises should not be taken by a pregnant woman. (2) Up to the beginning of the change of life—about the 50th year. Questions of general interest will be answered in this column, space permitting; all others by mail if a properly stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Address Dr. John B. Huber, care of this newspaper.

GOD'S MINUTE

The faithful God, which keepeth covenant.—Deut. 7:9.

OUR Heavenly Father, who come to think Thee for Thy many mercies, and to invoke Thy protection and guidance for all the way of life. We rejoice that we may know Thee and love Thee and serve Thee and be like Thee. Grant us Grace to please Thee in all that we think and plan and do. Help us to live in such fellowship with Thee that Thou canst not only dwell in us, but work through us. Help us to share our interests in life, give us to see the speedy coming of Thy Kingdom among all men, and let us have an increasing share in its establishment. Fill our hearts with songs of expectation, and flood our faces with morning light, and when the day is done, let the weariness of work make welcome the rest of home, we beg in our Redeemer's name. Protecting your skin with powder and rouge

By Mme. JEANNETTE

OH, you lucky women of today who know—or can learn—the pleasant roads to Beauty through fragrant avenues of cosmetics that help and do not harm!

It is a proven fact that good cosmetics actually benefit the skin. Actresses are notably beautiful, most of them women with radiant complexions, and they make an almost hourly use of cosmetics.

A pure, harmless powder or rouge, such as Pompeian, performs a distinctly beneficial service to the skin, in addition to its beautifying effect.

Powder and Rouge Protect This service is that of protection. Powders and rouges put a soft, gossamer film over the delicate surface of the skin and guard it from sun and wind, dust and dirt.

Again, the lip stick tends to protect the lips from chapping, roughening, and cracking. It keeps them soft and mobile. The woman who uses good cosmetics will actually have a softer, smoother skin, less prone to redness, roughness, and freckling than she who does not use such protection.

Pompeian Day Cream (vanishing), Pompeian Beauty Powder, Pompeian Bloom (the rouge), and Pompeian Lip Stick, like all Pompeian Preparations, are absolutely pure and harmless. They are formulated with a care as great as though they were intended for medicinal uses and in a laboratory always scrupulously clean.

Coupled with their purity will be found the other desired qualities of cosmetics—naturalness of effect, high adhering property, attractiveness of perfume.

And Use Day Cream Do not overlook the importance of the Day Cream in achieving the most successful effects from the use of the other Pompeian "Instant Beauty" Preparations. This cream provides a foundation for powder and rouge that makes them go on more smoothly, adhere much better, and blend with each other more perfectly, than when they are used without it.

STARVED HEARTS

ETUWIM 2 (1924) MILDRED BARBOUR

XII.—RENUNCIATION. Barton arrived at Ann's just before dinner. There was a frown on his handsome face and an anxious look in his eyes. He took Madelon into his arms and held her close. Despite Ann's presence, he kissed her. When the latter would have left them alone, he called her back. "Don't go! I've a lot to tell Madelon, and I'd rather you heard it too. We need your wise counsel."

What you for my wife. What else matters? "Where was I sobbing against his shoulder. "No, no, no! I can't, I won't let you! I love the bright head, his eyes sought Ann's. "If I can get a license tonight—and I think I can—will you come with us to a minister's?" Ann rose abruptly and walked away to the window. For a long minute or two, she stood staring out into the winter darkness, her brown pucker in thought. Then she came back to the fire and drew her chair to face the two young people on the couch. "Children," she said, "you're going to hate me for this and I can't blame you for it. But I wouldn't be your good friend if I didn't talk to you seriously about the step you contemplate taking. . . . You're young and deeply in love, and nothing else seems to matter. But have you thought of the future? Have you thought of what responsibilities marriage entails? Where is the means to come from to carry you on?—If you marry, Julian will be drift. He will have either to start out for himself, which is a long hard road even for such a clever attorney as he, or he will have to attach himself to some other firm. "I need not remind him that both such avenues will be closed to him as fast as the power of Stephen Lane extends, and you, Julian, know how far that is. He will block you at every turn. He will crush every new effort before it is begun. You are in a trap from which there is no escape. Madelon, of course, will have nothing. Stephen's first act will be to dishonor her. And she has been delicately raised, Julian. She has had every luxury. She glories in her sacrifice now. But will she in the long, long years to come? "Yes, on yes," tearfully from Madelon, here head buried in Barton's shoulder. Ann smiled sadly. Her eyes were searching Barton's face. His mouth was set determinedly, but the misery in his eyes told her that her words were going home. Her heart ached for them both. "There is one thing more, Julian. You are not alone in the world. You have a mother and sister in the West dependent upon you—isn't that so?" He nodded. "Have you a moral right to jeopardize their future?" Silence. "Oh my dear children!" Ann cried despairingly. "My heart aches for you. But I would be less than your friend if I didn't look into the future for you. When you, blinded by your love, are incapable of vision. You are trapped, you are captives to a cruel and inexorable will. . . . What are you going to do?" "Get married and gamble on the future," answered Barton promptly. "I love," Madelon said, her face flushed, tear-wet face. "I can't ruin his life. I am going to give him up." (Continued Monday.)

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

A MENTAL SEDATIVE

There is this to be said for Mah Jong. There is no one to load you with blame if you chance to do anything wrong. For it isn't a partnership game. In bridge, it is not your opponent you fear. You know he's no mercy to lend you—the glowering look or the pitying sneer of the fellow who ought to befriend you. When a man with a scowl on his face Says in accents unpleasantly terse: "Did you know you were trumping my ace?" Or haven't you very good sense? Your temper is hard to keep under control. For he seems to you cold and unfeeling. And his words make a wound in your innermost soul. Which will always remain beyond healing. When a lady with whom you have played A soul-racking rubber, or two, Observes: "Oh! my nerves are so frayed! I can't go on playing with you!" Which most of them will, if your luck has been bad— You (in spite of your hollow-toned laughter), Whenever you think of that dame will get mad. And stay mad a fortnight thereafter. I know in Mah Jong that I pung When the thing I should do is to chow. The words get confused on my tongue. And are mixed when I say "em, somehow. But having no partner to cry out my shame To the joy of the other folks present, I have come to regard quite a commonplace game As exceedingly soothing and pleasant.

EASY ENTERTAINING

DRINKING CUP FAVORS by Marion E. Peters. Have you ever wished you could make the little paper cup favors which are so dainty and altogether adorable, and so expensive to buy? They give even the simplest table such a "dressed-up" appearance and you can make them fit into any color scheme. They are decorative and useful for serving nuts and candies at card parties, and they are complete decorations in themselves. They are made with paper drinking cups as foundations. Be sure to use the corrugated cups because you can make these into a great many different shapes by pulling them out in the center, around the top, or at the bottom. A piece of wire (quite stiff wire is best) is bent over for a handle and fastened to the top of the cup with adhesive tape. Before fastening it in place the handle should be wrapped with crepe paper. One of the prettiest of these cups is trimmed with a simple ruffle of crepe paper. The effect is better than you could imagine possible with such a small amount of work, and it is so seldom one ever finds that to be true! The crepe paper should be cut a little wider than the cup, in order to flute it around the top and paste it to the bottom. A circle of cardboard pasted over the bottom ruffle for the cup is gathered in the middle and pasted around it, with the lower edges standing out, or a double ruffle of two colors is effective. Concerning the colors to be used, it is impossible to suggest a single one before telling about a new shade called sunset rose; it is quite like old fashioned shell pink, only with much more life and vividness. It is ever so delicate and pretty to use for decorations in the evening especially, and having candle shades of the same color adds greatly to the whole table. Sometimes yellow and flame strike just the right note, and black and white are always smart looking. Then just one other tiny suggestion: it seems as if no one ever realizes the possibilities in yellow and brown. When you are going two colors in combination, a double ruffle, one of each color, should be pasted around the cups. Perhaps you think this is all very simple to do, but the cups with the lovely rose petals curling over their rim are what you want, and they look impossible for an amateur to make. Not at all! The petals should be cut eight or so at a time by folding a strip of paper over and over. These should be pasted to the under side of the cup first just as the ruffle was pasted. The curly rose-like effect of the petals is produced by rolling the tips of them over a knitting needle. By pasting two shades of crepe paper together before the paper is cut, the petals may be made lighter on one side than on the other. The darker color should be on the outside when the cup is finished.

A THOUGHT

The glory of young men is their strength; and the beauty of old men is the gray hair.—Prover. 20:19. So life's year begins and closes; Days, though short'ning, still can shine; What though youth gave love and wine, Age still leaves us friends and wine.—Moore.

Why Doctors Employ Virol

Advertisement for Virol medicine. The success of Virol has been made by the Medical Profession. Doctors know the remarkable value of its food constituents and the wonderful manner in which they are assimilated—that is why they employ it in over three thousand hospitals and sanatoria. There is no other food which can take its place, and often Virol is the only thing to save life. VIROL. Sole Importers: BOVRELL, LTD., 3725, Park Avenue, Montreal.

CHILD WELFARE CORNER

EYES AND EARS

We so soon grow accustomed to the enjoyment of beautiful sights, such as flowers, blue sky, loved faces, lovely sounds like the song of birds, the laughter of children and the voices of dear ones, that we forget the gateways through which those joys reach our understanding. It is impossible to picture the blank darkness of the blind, or the appalling stillness in which the deaf pass their lives. Perhaps if we could really imagine their deprivation we would be more careful to prevent maltreatment of eyes and ears. Sometimes serious injury is done to them in childhood through ignorance and carelessness. The eyes of a new-born babe should be shielded from strong light, and only gradually brought to endure full daylight. The young toddler should use his eyes as little as possible by artificial light, and never directly facing the light. During convalescence from a sickness the child's eyes should be protected from strong light. This is especially necessary in measles. Sometimes a mother of a beautiful babe is distressed to see a condition of cross-eye developing. If treated early by a skilled doctor this may very often be corrected. A child of even less than two years may be trained to wear the necessary glasses quite happily. If your child has inflamed eyes, or frowns continually, or holds objects closer than fourteen inches from his face, or has hard tears, you should consult a good oculist immediately. Do not buy glasses for him until the definite prescription for them obtained from a competent specialist. Many a child who has failed to receive a careful medical examination on entering school has been rated as dull and stupid for the whole school term until chance revealed that he was seeing the blackboard only dimly or hardly at all. In many large cities such children are immediately placed in sight conservation classes, where on entering school has been employed to enable the child to continue his studies, and yet protect and strengthen this most precious of the special senses. Protection of the eyes from infection must begin from the first moments of life, when two drops of one per cent. solution of nitrate of silver should be put in each eye. This is a definite preventative measure against blindness of the new-born. The child must be taught not to rub his eyes because dirty fingers may carry the germs of infection. The use of a common towel may be the means of infecting a child's eyes. If any marked inflammation of the eyes should develop no time should be lost in securing medical advice. Any irritating object such as a cinder or particle of dust near the eye should be readily removed by turning back the upper lid over a match or a knitting needle and gently removing the object from the everted lid with a twisted corner of a clean cloth. If a foreign body should be imbedded on the lid or in the eyeball the child should be taken at once to the doctor. Ears need intelligent care. All the exposed surfaces of the outer ear must be kept clean by washing with a soft cloth or absorbent cotton. Do not try to remove any yellow wax from the inner ear. Nature usually takes care of the excess wax. If not, the accumulation should be removed by a physician. Rough or unskilled efforts to remove it may result from a neglected or badly treated inflammation and you must take care to have the child get a head or other foreign object into his ear, take him to the doctor without delay. If an insect gets into the inner ear pour in some clean sweet oil to stop the insect moving or buzzing, then take the child to the doctor. The gateways by which most of the germs of life reach our understanding demand intelligent care which will be repaid a thousandfold in the joy of living.

FAVORITE POEMS

JUST BEHIND THE TIMES A party of young village people, gathered in their little church. A meeting of importance there to hold. They then decided that the Minister, although they loved him well, He must resign for he was growing old. They sent to him this message, He read it through and through While burning tears fell on those cruel lines, For it was written in that message that, "Your sermons are too dry." It also read, "You're just behind the times." Chorus:— Behind the times so they told him, We're just behind the times, You're vision has lost its sweetness, Like bells that no more chime, You cannot hold our attention, You falter on your lines, Your power has gone, though few will mourn, For you're "just behind the times." On Sunday morn the Church was crowded, For I was rumored round the town, A young minister was going to preach, And in that same old dusty Pulpit, Where the old man resigned for years, Another man had come his flock to teach. He spoke of love and poetics, He spoke of fashions too.

Wild flights of shells passed, and rained over the ridge, barren and filthy with the relics of death. Then the Canadians came. The ridge seemingly was empty again. For the men who had taken it had sunk down into the deep dugout, while the ousted foe pitched heavy shells, that came howling across the waste, towards them. Of sights he'd seen in many different climes, The old man sat alone and listened, While he sadly shook his head, I guess they're right, am, behind the times. Chorus.
And so at last the sermon-ended And so at last the old man awoke, Just let me say a few words are you so.
Then slowly up the aisle he staggered, To his pulpit, where he stood, With trembling limbs and face as white as snow, I've buried all your loved ones, I've wept beside their graves, I've shared your joys and sorrows many times, Just when he gave a start, for his poor Another man had come his flock to teach, Had broken from its pain I guess they're right, I am "behind the times." NEW RECORD SET BY HALIFAX COURT CRIMINAL DOCKET

Noted Nova Scotians Being Painted by English Artist STUDENTS ANGRY Marked Increase Shown in Number of Auto Licenses Issued

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 12. — (Star Correspondence).—The criminal trial term of the Supreme Court which closed last week at Halifax, had the largest docket of any such term in the history of the county, there being forty causes on the docket. Not only was the number of causes large, but it contained many serious charges, including murder, manslaughter, sedition, and the case of the ex-convict collector, which ended with a sentence to two years in Dorchester.

Harris Browne, English portrait painter, is doing splendidly well with his portraits of leading Halifaxians. Among the number are portraits of Chief Justice Harris, George S. Campbell, which is to ultimately find a place in the Bank of Nova Scotia, and President A. S. Mackenzie, whose portrait is being painted for Dalhousie University. Mr. Browne recently finished a portrait of His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Grant, which hangs in Government House. Dalhousie students are once more up in arms over the results of their mid-year examinations. Each year, and especially of late, the students have been very much displeased at the large number of students plucked, and especially at the system of identifying examination papers by name rather than by numbers. This matter has been taken up by the students on several occasions, and as the adoption of this system is a simple matter, they feel the attitude of the university authorities in ignoring the justice of the plea is inexplicable. At present law is the only faculty at Dalhousie which has adopted the new system of having each candidate for examination write under a number. This is but one of the complaints which are heard when students get together.

With the increase in enrollment at Dalhousie there seems to be a regrettable decrease in interest in the individual, and the result is a discontented body. The school has fine buildings today and large staff of professors and every promise of becoming one of the big universities of America. But she lacks something which the old colleges fostered—the love of her students. Graduates and undergraduates are represented in the groups who criticize the university, and it is noticeable that the complaints are not the usual "harshness of professors." It is felt by many that Dalhousie is becoming too commercialized for her own good.

Judging from the large number of applications now being received at the Provincial Secretary's office for the new 1926 automobile licenses, it is strongly believed that there will be a marked increase in the number of motor vehicles in operation throughout Nova Scotia this year as compared with the number in use last year.

While it is anticipated that the number of autos in use may not be known until May, for the first three days of the new year over 1,500 licenses have been issued, including 800 passenger and 500 commercial motor vehicles.

For the first time since J. A. Watterson, defuncting ex-secretary of the City Health Board, evaded the police and made a successful escape to parts unknown, the City Council, which up to the present time has not even indicated a health board secretary of his defuncting and subsequent disappearance, will discuss the matter. It is understood the Council has at last decided to take the matter up, and will take steps to discover the whereabouts of the ex-official and to bring him to court. Mr. Watterson, who was very seriously ill, was given two years, and Mr. Watterson is permitted to escape.

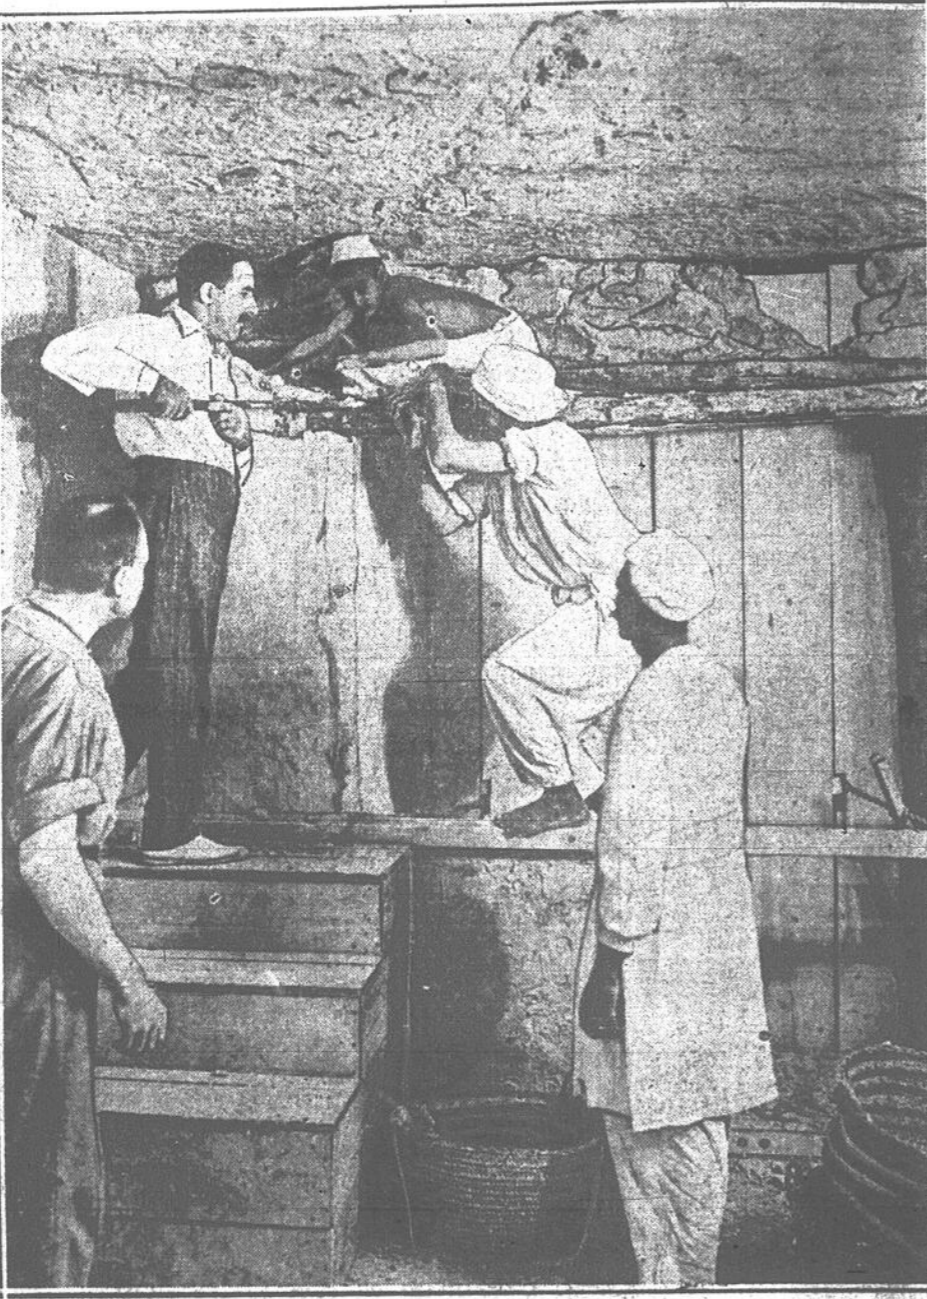

The new United States Consul-General is due in Halifax on Jan. 15. Mr. H. Robertson of Virginia, Mrs. Robertson will join Mr. Robertson in the spring.

Nova Scotia's balance for last year to her credit, so says the Provincial Treasurer's report. The total revenue for the year was $2,317,533, an increase of $204,964 over the projected revenue, and $226,128 over the previous year's revenue. The total expenditures amounted to $2,092,570, thus showing a balance surplus in the year's transactions of $100,125. The expenditures for the year were $440,000 greater than the previous year.

But this increase was practically all expended in connection with highway improvements and education.

COMPENSATION ACT SUBJECT OF DEBATE Organized Labor Representatives Directly Oppose Employers' Suggestions ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 12.—(Star Special).—The committee to all the proposals submitted by the representatives of the employers of the province in the matter of the Workmen's Compensation Act and its administration in New Brunswick was voiced by representatives of organized labor at the conference here today.

but that it required the judgment of at least three commissioners. DISAPPROVE SUGGESTION.

The suggestion that employers be given the option to carry their own insurance the Labor Board declared by a majority of 3-2. It was pointed out that in Pennsylvania during a five year period, out of more than $20,000,000 paid out in insurance premiums only $35,000,000 went to provide benefits, while in Great Britain $2,000,000 were collected, and $5,000,000 paid out in 1925.

Regarding the suggestion of the employers that the associations representing the employees may obtain through assessment under the Act, such funds as they may require to carry on their work, the Labor Board replied that they were in favor of the suggestion, but that the associations should be given the right to raise the funds in any manner they may see fit.

PROPER GRASS FOR PUTTING GREENS A tip to golfers and to charmers of greens committees on how to get smooth yet fast putting greens was given by Dr. R. A. Oakley, of the U. S. Bureau of Plant Industry, in a talk before the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Under certain kinds of grass are used, the greens must not be cut close, he said.

One of the favorite grasses for putting greens is fescue. Dr. Oakley said, and it is this grass which does not stand for close cutting. Bent grass, on the other hand, stands it quite well. The reason is that while in all grasses, the new leaves are grown from nodes at the base of the stem, these nodes in fescue are a little distance above the surface and close cutting destroys them, no new shoots develop and the grass becomes thin. The remedy, said Dr. Oakley, is not to topdress and fertilize, but merely raising the mower.—Science Service.

By ARCHIBALD HURD.

The Distinguished British Naval Critic. Registered in Accordance With The Copyright Act by Montreal Star News Bureau.

There is frequent reference, whenever the problems of Imperial defence are discussed, to "unity of the seas." But does that phrase carry any significance to most people's minds? We are accustomed to speak of the Atlantic, the Indian and the Pacific oceans, as well as of the North Sea and the Mediterranean, though there were physical boundaries between them.

The seas are all one, and the naval strategist recognizes no divisions of kind or description. His only purpose is to plan that when war comes, right force shall be at the right place at the right moment and, so long as bases of supply and repair are available, he makes his dispositions of ships about any regard to the manner in which the various seas and oceans are signified, in a very sketchy way, on the maps in every day use.

THE PERILS OF THE TRADE ROUTES.

There are always about 1,000 ships of the British Register traversing trade routes at any given moment, and these trade routes have a length of 80,000 square miles. The cargoes in these vessels consist largely of the products of the Dominions, Crown Colonies, and Protectorates, and in war they must be protected.

That consular statement leads to a consideration of the two kinds of val defence which must exist if the Empire is to be made safe—the one a defence, which each territory can provide in the form of a few light cruisers and a great number of destroyers, submarines and mine-layers, and the other, general defence—a reservoir of naval power consisting of capital ships and light cruisers, held on the leash at any convenient place "ready to anywhere and do anything" in the late Viscount Goschen's historic phrase when he was First Lord of the Admiralty.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST MAN-OF-WAR.

The Empire's greatest man-of-war will illustrate the fluidity of naval power, while at the same time "showing the flag" to the increased prestige of the whole

British Empire and the advantage of its trade and commerce. For this is no ordinary naval unit which is to make the circuit of the Dominions under the command of Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Field, until recently one of the Sea Lords of the Board of Admiralty. He will fly his flag in the Hood, the largest, swiftest and most powerful man-of-war in the world—a combination of the qualities of the battleship and the battle cruiser on a displacement of no less than 41,200 tons.

Do these figures convey any idea of the character of this ship of wonder? On a moment's reflection it must be apparent that as this Special Service Squadron makes its furrow through the oceans, spectators at the ports visited are going to look upon a very wonderful embodiment of power. And with the Hood, will be the Repulse, sister ship to the Renown in which the Prince of Wales had travelled in his Empire tours.

THE LIGHT CRUISER SQUADRON.

But the Hood and Repulse constitute only the head and front of the Special Service Squadron. They will be accompanied by five light cruisers, the very latest type turned out of British dockyards. They are of the "D" class, and, like the two capital ships, use oil and not coal, a revolution in fuel which was begun by Lord Fisher and is now all but complete in the British Fleet.

"OCEAN" LIGHT CRUISERS.

The light cruisers of the "D" class are very remarkable ships, which were, for the most part, launched as the Great War was drawing to its close. They displace 4,700 tons, and have a speed of 29 knots; each mounts six 6-inch guns, as well as two 3-inch anti-aircraft guns, and can carry aeroplanes for gun spotting and reconnaissance—though, unhappily, owing to the failure of the Air Ministry to have machines ready in time, the "D" cruisers on this cruise will not be provided with "eyes," as they would be for war.

carries no less than 1,000 tons of oil, as compared with 4,000 and 4,850 tons respectively in the case of the Hood and Repulse.

The "D" cruisers are relatively small in contrast with some light cruisers now building in Japan and the United States, which will be of 10,000 tons displacement, and armed with 8-inch guns. That is the limit fixed in the Washington Treaty, and it represents a great increase in radius of action as well as power.

TEN MONTHS' CRUISE.

Such is the Special Service Squadron which has set out on a ten months' cruise. This demonstration of naval mobility and power will cost the British taxpayers upwards of a quarter of a million pounds, in addition to the normal expenditure which would have been incurred if the vessels had remained attached to the Atlantic Fleet.

OFFICERS AND MEN SOUL OF NAVY.

There is always a tendency to think of sea power in terms of ships—capital ships, light cruisers, destroyers and all the auxiliaries which go to make up a fighting unit. The peoples of the Dominions are to have ample opportunities of seeing what modern men-of-war are like, and forming some conception of their remarkable offensive and defensive qualities.

It is a fortunate circumstance that Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Field was appointed in May, 1923, to command the Battle Cruiser Squadron of the Atlantic Fleet, consisting of the Hood and the Repulse, for he has had high administrative experience and also confronted the enemy at the Battle of Jutland.

Sir Thomas Jarram, with the Ajax, Centurion, Erin, Orion, Monarch, Conqueror and Thunderer in company with her, did fine work, and happily emerged undamaged. Though his appearance may not suggest it, Sir Frederick Field is an officer who knows what a modern fleet action is like, when great capital ships fire at ranges varying from five to ten miles, and torpedoes, unseen, are dealing out death and destruction.

COMMANDERS ARE VETERAN FIGHTERS.

Another officer with war experience commands the Light Cruiser Squadron. The Honorable Sir Hubert Brand is the grandson of the first Viscount Hampden who, as a commoner, was Speaker of the House of Commons, and he has had a most distinguished career in the naval service.

What is true of the two admirals of the Special Service Squadron is also true of all the captains. They all served during the Great War, and could, if they would, tell many a tale of what happened at sea of which no history, written or to be written, will probably ever contain any record.

CAREERS OF SQUADRON'S CAPTAINS.

It may not be without interest since the peoples of the Dominions will be coming in contact with the captains of the ships of the Special Service Squadron to set out very briefly what may be regarded as the milestones in their careers.

LARRY PICKFORD, grown-up, with her golden hair coiffed high on her head in Spanish style instead of hanging in curls—hardly possible to imagine such a transformation. But she decided to take the plunge into the realm of grown-ups. "Rosita" was written for her, and she therefore will appear at the Capitol theatre tomorrow and during the coming week in the role of a charming Spanish girl, and laugh and cry her way through as dramatic a story as one could imagine. And as Rosita, Mary Pickford will play a role in an exceptional manner. One moment she is sobbing over with humor, the next she is full of pathos as to bring tears to the eyes. The scenario was written by Howard Knoblock, the distinguished English dramatist, and directed by Robert Lubitz. "Rosita" is the story of a girl who matches the fancy of the King of Spain during a carnival, and is arrested for lese-majeste, and is saved from rough treatment by soldiers from Don Diego, a Spanish noble, who turns in arrested for killing an official in a duel. The King, despite his rage, seeks to win Rosita's favor, and arranges a betrothal marriage with Don Diego, who has been condemned to death. From this point the story works up to a happy ending. It is a story of the Queen of Spain takes no unimportant part, and opportunity is given to her to show the world at large that she can be just as alluring in the portrayal of virtuous womanhood as in her more recent work. Her beauty and personality which will be shown to the hilt. Associated with Miss Pickford are many titles who have a high reputation on the stage and screen. Hollywood makes the part of the King of Spain.

a professional adventuress who has also got his lovely daughter under her influence. His wife tries to prevent this adventuress from alienating her husband's affection, but in vain.

A divorce is impending when the father accidentally discovers that his daughter has gone to a midnight party in the room of a society cad. He follows her, and, believing the man has wronged her, attacks him and apparently kills him. In the dramatic events that follow, he finds that the wife he has neglected is his true friend after all. The man recovers. The husband realises his folly, and he and his wife, with their two children, return to the country town and resume their former happy life, free from the city's mockery and sham. Huntly Gordon as the husband, Mary Alden as the mother, Norma Shearer as the daughter, Willie Collier, Jr., as the son, and a supporting cast of thorough competence combine to give it a fine interpretation. It has been a sensation of the screen wherever shown.

Viola Dana in "The Social Code" will be one of the film offerings at the Strand for three days, starting tomorrow. It is a thrilling drama of Long Island society and the sacrifices made by a young girl to protect her sister's name. There are said to be elaborate settings, charming and pathos-filled scenes, and thrills enough to satisfy even the most enthusiastic moviegoer. "His Mystery Girl," featuring Herbert Rawlinson, will be the added attraction. What should prove another popular double feature program will be screened during the latter part of the week when Colleen Moore and Lloyd Hughes will be seen in "The Hutterers," while Tom Moore and Alice Lake will portray the leading roles in Modern Matrimony.

The new Rex film production, "Fair Lady," which opens a three days' engagement at the Regent tomorrow, is described as a heart-thrilling romance set in pale-outdoor drama with an international coloring. The action of the story is said to have the typical Rex Beach snap, adventurous complications, but the theme is one of romantic love that will appeal to both sexes. The story line is one that keeps the spectator guessing right up to the last few scenes, and he will not be quite sure of how it really goes to turn out until it is all finished. Betty Blayke plays the title-role and is supported by a large cast of popular players. Katherine MacDonald in "Woman Conqueror" and a Snub Pollard comedy will round out the bill. Starting Wednesday and continuing for the balance of the week, Richard Barthelmess will be seen in "The Fighting Blade," while Viola Dana will have the principal role in "Her Fatal Millions." The dancing contest will be held as usual on Monday night.

Gloria Swanson's latest success, "Zaza," will be the outstanding film feature at the Papineau and Plaza theatres during the next three days. It is said to be a splendid picture, surpassing anything Miss Swanson has heretofore done on the screen, the role of the remarkable French character being one especially suited to her individual style of acting. one of the most dramatic episodes of the historic conflict when Oliver Cromwell overthrew the English Government, and recites the exploits and the romance of the valorous Kerstenbrook, played by Richard Barthelmess, a Finnish soldier of fortune who gained fame as the most deadly duelist in all Europe, and who by circumstances was drawn to the people's side in their fight for the right to govern themselves. The picture unfolds a story which, even without its historic background, would be a fascinating entertainment. "Daytime Wives," with Wyndham Standing and Grace Darmond, will be the feature from Monday till Wednesday. On the same bill "The Mark of the Beast" will be shown.

MUSIC

THE PLACE OF THE PERFORMER

Sounds are nothing until they are heard and music is nothing until it is performed. Of course there are people who can get pleasure from merely reading music, but they may be considered to be giving themselves private "performances." Since performance is essential to music it is easy to get the idea that the performance is everything that matters, so that there are many people who are completely satisfied with clever playing or singing, however good the music may be. A writer in an American weekly paper has lately given a splendid example of the sort of confused thinking that can arise in this way. He was talking about Paderewski, who would hardly agree with his opinions.

He starts off with a wonderful comparison. "Does not the concert hall suggest what Heaven? Here are rows on rows of individuals all at peace, all motionless, yet not inert; tension is achieved without clash." "Each man is still an individual, but his personality is drained away from him; three thousand personalities are gathered up and concentrated in the musician, and only as given out by him are they shared by all." He then observed that Beethoven without listeners would not be Beethoven and goes on: "Paderewski having lived in a vacuum would not be Paderewski. The listeners are subject to this man who plays the piano for them, but not slaves to him; they exist not for themselves or each other but for him and his glory, but they are not slaves or hypnotized wretches; nowhere is there any force; they are free in his freedom and partake of his glory." To continue this matter: "The concert hall audience listening to a musician can make one see what in general the theologians mean by the communion of saints."

The theologians can take good care of themselves; that is, supposing that they can understand what all this stuff means. But the libel on music is quite as bad as that on theology. Of course Beethoven's music, like any other music, needs performance to make it complete; but this writer puts Paderewski on the same level, and supposes that Paderewski played music by Beethoven, what would happen then? Every performer, and naturally the best of them, including Paderewski, know it, is a medium between the composer and the audience. He uses his intelligence and ability to discover and reproduce the composer's intentions, and his greatness is in proportion to his success in doing so. The performance can never be greater than the music performed nor the performer greater than the composer, and no performance can make good music out of bad. As for this writer's stuff about personalities and individualities, it is, in plain English, unbecome. And where on earth does he find, or think that he finds, audiences like that?

METROPOLITAN CHORAL SOCIETY

Under the auspices of the Montreal Centre of the Canadian College of Organists, an Organ and Choral Recital will be given at the McVicar Memorial Church on Monday evening, 14th. Hodgson, organist and choirmaster of the St. Andrew's Church, Mr. Harold Easton, organist and choirmaster of Emmanuel Congregational Church, and Mr. Walter Littleman, F.R.C.O. ### THE NEW YORK STRING QUARTETTE

This quartette, which will give the open concert of the Ladies Morning Music Club at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel next Thursday afternoon, was founded five years ago by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fullmer of New York. The names of the quartette are Otakar Cadek, first violin; Jaroslav Skovany, second violin; Ludvik Schwab, viola; and Emil Vaska, violoncello. The program on Thursday will include quartettes by Beethoven and by Dvorak as well as several short pieces for string quartets by Frank Bridge and Josef Suk.

ERIKA MORINI

The program of this violinist, new to Montreal, next Thursday evening, will begin with Max Bruch's first concerto—in G minor, which will be followed by compositions of Tchaikovsky, Brahms, Mozart, Schumann and Paganini. The program of hearing her is exceedingly interesting not only because it is her first appearance here, but because she has been given the counts she has been given of her playing. Unless the musical critics of all the American papers, together with such musicians as Nikisch and Weingartner, have gone mad, she must be a really wonderful violinist.

HIRSHMAN, KWARTIN AND HOFFMAN

The concert to be given at the Memorial National on Sunday evening, 20th, will provide music of a kind that is new to most concert-goers. A program including folk songs and Jewish music will be sung by three cantors of great stature in New York, who are said to be the three greatest cantors in the world. They will sing solo, duet and trio.

THE MATINEE MUSICAL CLUB

The date of the Matinee Musical Club's evening concert has been postponed from Friday, 19th, to Monday, 21st, at the Mount Royal Hotel ball room, at 8:30. Stanley, pianist.

LADIES MORNING MUSICAL CLUB

It is announced that on account of the engagement of the hall at the Ritz-Carlton, the meeting of this club for Thursday, 24th, has had to be postponed. The program which should have been given on that day will be given on March 20th, lengthening the season by a week.

A Violin Sonata

By Marcel Dupre

AS an organist, Mons. Marcel Dupre has an established fame in Montreal, as composer he is chiefly known here through his improvisations on the organ. A sonata for violin and piano by him was played by Mrs. Plouff-Stopes and Miss Izard, at a recent meeting of the Ladies Morning Musical Club, to the very great pleasure of those who heard it.

In the first movement excellent material is developed with, here and there, some strange harmonies which puzzled both hearers and performers. The very beautiful slow middle movement, the most attractive of the three, suggests the style of Schumann rather than that of any one of the modern French school. There are delightful chromatic scale passages passed to and fro between the two instruments and, with a good deal of repetition, there is no trace of monotony. The last movement, in a quicker time, is tuneful and cheerful. It is a work worth hearing again, perhaps on a more public occasion.—R. F. B.

Jean Gerardy's Program

On Sunday Afternoon

1. Variation symphoniques (Boellmann).
2. Sonata (Boccherini).
3. (a) L'agreste—Old French dance (Boccherini). (b) Orpheus—Air de la scene des champs elyees (Bach).
4. (a) Romance (Saint-Saens). (b) Valse lente (Boellmann). (c) Chanson villageoise (Foppe).

SUNDAY CONCERTS

The concert at the Orpheum Theatre on Sunday, 20th, will be a recital by Madame Eva Gauthier, of particular interest because Madame Gauthier, now one of the leading singers of America, was formerly a Montrealeuse and was the pupil and protégée of Albani.

SUNDAY CONCERTS

The concert on the following Sunday, Jan. 27th, will be given by Madame Montgenis-Gadoury.

These are the officers who command the ships of the Special Service Squadron, which in the course of the ensuing months will visit no fewer than forty ports washed by the waters of the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans. They are worthy representatives of the Navy which has behind it the traditions of a thousand years, having made the seas free to all men, charted them with meticulous care in the interests of safe navigation, and cleared them of pirates. In our fresh memory, the British Fleet, with its incomparable officers and men of the new and highly technical school, has led the British people under a further debt of gratitude, and with prestige high the Special Service Squadron has set forth on its Empire cruise.

The Bluenose Master

By FREDERICK WILLIAM WALLACE

(ARTICLE IX.)

Sailors of all nations testify to the Bluenose master-mariner's all-round ability and splendid seamanship. They say that the late Frank T. Bullen, "but a great deal of capacity." However, the school in which the Bluenose masters were trained was one calculated more to make a thorough sailor out of a man rather than a good mariner. They began their schooling, mostly, as boys in fishing schooners and coasters, or in the forecastles of their own Provincial ships. It was there that they learned the art of seamanship, and only a strong, tough lad could stand it. Not that they were ill-treated or abused, but the master and mates saw it that they were constantly employed and took part in everything relating to the upkeep and handling of the ship. There was no place about a Bluenose ship for a lazy or stupid boy, or one deficient in stamina or pluck, and the lad who served four years in one could be stamped as having gone through the mill and come out ground.

The young British lad who desired to go to sea and to learn the art of seamanship invariably went and served his time as a premium apprentice on board a sailing ship belonging to a recognized line. He went for a year or two through the curriculum of such school-ships as the Conway or Worcester. The school-ship training was excellent, and fitted a boy to be an officer and a gentleman, but such could not always be said of the sea training aboard a "bluenose."

British masters and mates of these vessels took a real interest in the "prentice-lads" and gave them the thorough schooling in the arts of seamanship and navigation, but a goodly number looked upon them as a necessary evil, and they were not to be trusted. On such vessels—and there were many—the boys frittered away three or four years in doing the dirty jobs of the lower mizenmast, but little of the work they were sent to sea to learn.

But on the Bluenose ship, the boy was taken aboard of her to be made into a sailor and placed on the road to command was a protégé of the master or mate. He wore no uniform with brass buttons and a cap, but he would be treated with all the respect supposedly due to an embryo officer. He acquires any such status, he had first to "make good," and the most of them were anxious to make good, for there was an excellent future in their Colonial blood that impelled them to forge ahead.

Into the forecastle he went, with his name on the "Articles" as a "prentice-lad." He was to be a friend or a relative, the boy might live at his hours of leisure be spent away from forecasting society, or he would be berthed with the carpenter or bosun forward. But he had no special privileges. As one of their own, the master and mate took a special interest in him, an interest which at times a boy would rather be without, for it meant that he was continually under their eyes and constantly under their tutelage. And the amount of work, and the multitudinous tasks that can be found for a boy to do on ship-board, is truly surprising.

THOROUGHLY DRILLED.

Such a lad, if he were any good at all, could not help but become proficient. All the various phases of seamanship were thoroughly drilled into him by precept and practice, and he was made acquainted with the ropes and wharves of every department. Boys were not allowed on Bluenose ships, though a saucy and mischievous youngster would sometimes get a rope-leading or a "make good" man would see that he washed and mended his clothes and took care of his personal appearance and health, and that he did not get into any mischief around the ports. A smart, willing lad was the kind of material Bluenose skippers loved to get hold of, that they might train him up to be a capable seaman. They took a pride in training him, with the thought, perhaps, that on some future day they might be able to point out a smart officer and say, "I made a sailor out of that young scuzz."

The British cadets and apprentice-ship officers were regarded with scorn by these British North Americans, and their ship's boys were impressed with the fact that they were no "bluenose gentlemen" rope-layers, and that "brass button and cap" had no place on Bluenose ships. With the Bluenose ship-master, mate, and bosun, and the boys, brought up on this doctrine, adopted it as a gospel to be revered and taught. Better ships would carry from four to eight "prentice boys; Bluenose craft seldom carried more than one or two, and this being the case, they had the additional advantage of select tuition and individual attention.

The B.N.A. ship-master did not always commence his sea-life in the manner. Some graduated from fishing vessels and West Indian traders and coasters, and joined the big square-riggers as Ordinary or Able Seamen to learn the ropes. But none of them went to sea as cadets, midshipmen, or premium or indentured apprentices. I have met Nova Scotia ship-masters who went to sea at 13 years of age. Second mates at 16 were not uncommon, and there were any number of men who held that office at 17 or 18 years of age on big square-riggers. Mates of 20 and 21 filled the position capably, well, and there were plenty of masters aged 22 years. Most of these men were "caught young," and with the training they received, their natural aptitude for seamanship, and the vast number of Maritime Province-owned ships affording berths for native sons, it is little wonder that they were able to advance so rapidly and at such youthful ages.

The B.N.A. ship-master was a stickler for discipline. This, together with cleanliness and smartness in the appearance of their ships, was almost a fetish with them. And this brings us to that well-worn subject, the alleged nigger-driving and inhuman treatment of crews on board B.N.A. ships.

CASES OF CRUELTY.

Deep-water vessels flying the Stars and Stripes were presumed to be tough packets for the crews that sailed in them. Hard work and smartness were in the order of the day for them, and the master and mate and the masters and mates were alleged to use every possible means to enforce their commands. The boot, the fist, the knuckle-duster, belting-grip and revolver were supposed to be everyday weapons of offence, and from the master and mate of the British and foreign ships, the impression would be gained that these American ships were floating jails, and that the shipmen were there to be beat and cruelly abuse the crews under their command. Among British and foreign sailors, their own ships, they would say that the Yankee vessels were bad, but that the Bluenose packets were ten times worse, and that the shipmen were the worst of all ships to sail in.

but who sailed in their ships by preference in the palmy days of sailing. It has been the writer's privilege to have sailed, in these latter years, in many Nova Scotia vessels and to have been shipmates with a very large number of Maritime Province seamen, some of whom sailed in the old square-riggers. I have also met men who have been officers and masters of B.N.A. ships, and taking them all in all, there was no evidence of any kind whatever that a latent streak of callousness or brutality was hidden in their natures, or that their favorite recreation was in bouncing seetings and belaying-pins off the skulls of inoffensive sailors. But one could discern a contempt for incompetency and impostors, both-work and slow enliness, and a plainly expressed opinion as to how they would treat such things. And had British masters and mates, made them re-terror of duffers and slackers. A voyage in one of these North American craft was a nightmare to the Fuddy Wessers of both sides, and when they escaped to the comparative ease and immunity from physical punishment.

There were a few "hard-case skippers," to be sure, and we usually hear more about these men than of the quiet and kindly ones. A story is told of a tough nut who hailed from a small village on the coast formerly known as Indian Cove. As the residents of the place acquired wealth and got out into the world in their seafaring ventures, the name "Indian" Cove did not sound any too dignified as a landing port. The name was therefore altered, to we will say, Pleasant Harbor. That was not the name, but it will serve.

A ship-master of that place was signing on a crew for a large ship which he commanded and he had his brother with him as a man before the mast. The brother was all over the shipping office of a big port, and when the Articles were opened, the captain signed his name. "Where is your home, Captain?" queried the Shipping Master. "Pleasant Harbor, Nova Scotia, sir." The crew signed the Articles in their turn and along came the ship's brother. He said, "The Captain turned as red as a beet and attempted to appear unconcerned while the Shipping Master smiled and the seaman standing around sniggered audibly. However, the skipper got the crew aboard and the ship out to sea, and when she had all the mainmast on her and was running off the land to a fresh breeze, the Old Man called his two mates. "Go forward and fetch that brother of mine."

When the sailor was fetched up on the poop, the skipper had a bowline tied in the end of the spanker and called to the brother to "take a-hold of that spanker until I get this bowline over his head." There was a rough-and-jumble tussle for a minute or so, but the skipper and two mates soon had the brother down on the deck. Then, with the bowline over his shoulders, the skipper's brother was dragged to the fore-cabin. "Now, you gabby Indian Cove gump-head," growled the captain, "I'm a-going to wash that audacious spruce-gum crew of yours you'll look like a white man in future!" And to the mates he bawled, "Kick him overboard!" With the bowline under his arm, the unfortunate trespasser on his skipper-brother's dignity was towed in the wake of the ship until such time as the latter called the spruce-gum aroma was well washed out.

"Many yarns similar to the above, and truthful enough, were told of Bluenose skippers, but to brand all of them as being rough and uncouth is an injustice to the majority.

WORE NO UNIFORMS.

The Bluenose master-mariner wore no uniform. At sea, he and his officers would dress in whatever clothes they fancied, and the layman would find it difficult to distinguish them from other members of the crew should they be grouped together. Some of them looked like farmers or horse-breeds, but no men, not even in Naval Service, ever exacted more deference and respect from their subordinates. And if they failed to decorate themselves with badged caps and

No sailor who behaved himself, obeyed orders and knew his work was ever abused or ill-treated aboard a Bluenose ship. Masters of B.N.A. ships were only too glad to get such men, and they treated them well when they did get them. The audacity and desire to make quick passage and the ambition which imbued every Bluenose master and officers to keep their vessels in first-class shape, and always spick and span and to do all they possibly could in the way of maintenance and repairs on board the ship and by means of themselves and the crew, meant hard work. But the generally good quality of the food served on B.N.A. ships was a great compensating, and a tremendous advance over the wretched provender provided in British and foreign vessels. Men did no mind working hard when they had comfortable quarters and good food to retire to in their watches below, and in addition to that, the seaman in such ships knew the pleasure of working under officers who were capable to the nth degree and who could appreciate a real sea's stann and ability.

A PERSONAL TOUCH.

Let me inject a little personal light into this subject. My father served as a premium apprentice in a British ship back in the 'sixties. After serving his four years, he exacted more before the mast for a number of deep-water voyages in some of the best British clipper ships of that time, and when he went into Bluenose ships, vessels hailing from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, schooners, barquentines, barques, and large full-rigged ships, he sailed to all parts of the world for a period of ten or eleven years, joining as Able Seaman and finally leaving as mate in some of the best, and the most prosperous of sailing vessels of that time.

but the majority could get around the world on all that was necessary to the necessary iron-work, blocks, etc. The construction of ships came natural to them, and a large number of the prominent builders were ship-masters or they went into business; and in some cases, shipwrights are they became ship-masters. Captain George McKenzie, of New Glasgow, was an outstanding example of this versatility.

To his other qualities must be added his keen business ability. Before the days of the Atlantic and other oceanic cables and the transcontinental telegraph, the Bluenose ship-master had to do all the business in connection with the ship in ports abroad. In addition to dickering with tow-boats and pilots and the port authorities, he purchased the necessary stores for the voyage and sought paying charters. In this latter business, his good judgment was called into play against the keen wits of charterers and brokers. He had to decide momentous questions in regard to certain cargo would knock the ship to pieces; others might take him to a port from which no return cargo could be got

As stated before, many of these men had an interest in the ships they commanded, and by careful attention to their multifarious duties they often made modest fortunes. And when the Bluenose ship-master made a dollar or two, he invariably invested it in a farm and put his family on it. In the palmy days of sailing ships, most of them made enough money to retire at an early age. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island had a host of these master-mariner-farmers, and some are alive to-day ensconced in comfortable homes in lovely valleys, "lying back and taking in the sun."

In concluding this paragraph, I would say that these deep-water ship-masters were not altogether confined to Canadians of British ancestry, any more than the ship-builders were. There were numerous French-Canadian ship-builders, so that in speaking of the British North American in these pages, it must be understood that we refer to the men from Quebec and Acadia as well as those from English, Scotch, and Irish stock.

WESTERN GROCERS CUTTING CREDITS

Ruling Retroactive to Jan. 1 for Benefit of the Trade

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 12.—(Star Special).—The wholesale grocers of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, have issued advices to the retail trade that terms will be strictly net 30 days or one per cent for 15 day payments. The new ruling is retroactive to Jan. 1, and it is the intention of the wholesale trade to adhere closely to the new terms. It has been felt by the wholesalers for a long time, it is stated, that longer credits were unbusinesslike and in the end were neither to the benefit of the consumers, the retailers or themselves. The wholesalers declare no other course is open to them but to shorten credits, as their own credits have been materially reduced by banking institutions, and they can no longer carry retailers to the extent that has been customary.

The wholesalers say, in making announcement of the change, that they feel it is due to the retailers to appreciate the public of the change, because of the fact that retailers undoubtedly will be obliged to ask of their patrons prompt payment of accounts.

NEARER MONTREAL.

Enquiry of the Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Association elicits the information that the wholesale grocers here have worked on a "net, no discount" basis for many years, so that the local situation is not in any way affected by this move. The Winnipeg men are simply coming a little nearer to Montreal's standard.

MONTREAL, Ala., Jan. 12.—(Associated Press).—Sixty-six convicts employed on the day shift at the Thomas Weller coal mine at Aldrich, near here, are in mutiny and in control of the pit, it was reported here this afternoon. Stern measures are being used to oust the men who are said to be strongly entrenched. Fifty-four of the alleged mutineers are negroes and two of the white convicts are said to have been among the number that participated in a mutiny at Banner Mines, Jefferson County, last fall.

Sir Henry Pellatt's Palatial Residence

SIR H. PELLATT'S WHITE ELEPHANT

Casa Loma, "Swamped in Taxes," Too Costly to Be Kept Up

WHAT OF FUTURE?

Tumors Concerning Toronto's Palatial Structure are Many

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—(Star Special)—Toronto's eyes are centred once more upon Casa Loma, the monumental castle of Sir Henry Pellatt.

Showing a rumor that the structure may be taken over by the Federal Government, as a war museum and home for disabled soldiers.

Built upon the brow of the Hillcrest district, overlooking the downtown portion of the city, Casa Loma stands as a monument of preliminary planning. But with the city's northward expansion, the castle stands today in the heart of an exclusive residential district. It is not yet entirely completed, and may never be.

MAGNIFICENTLY BUILT.

Casa Loma represents the fruition of Sir Henry Pellatt's dreams of the old mansions which he witnessed in England and Europe when, as an officer of the Canadian militia, he attended Queen Victoria's Jubilee, and later, the coronation of the late King Edward and the present King George V.

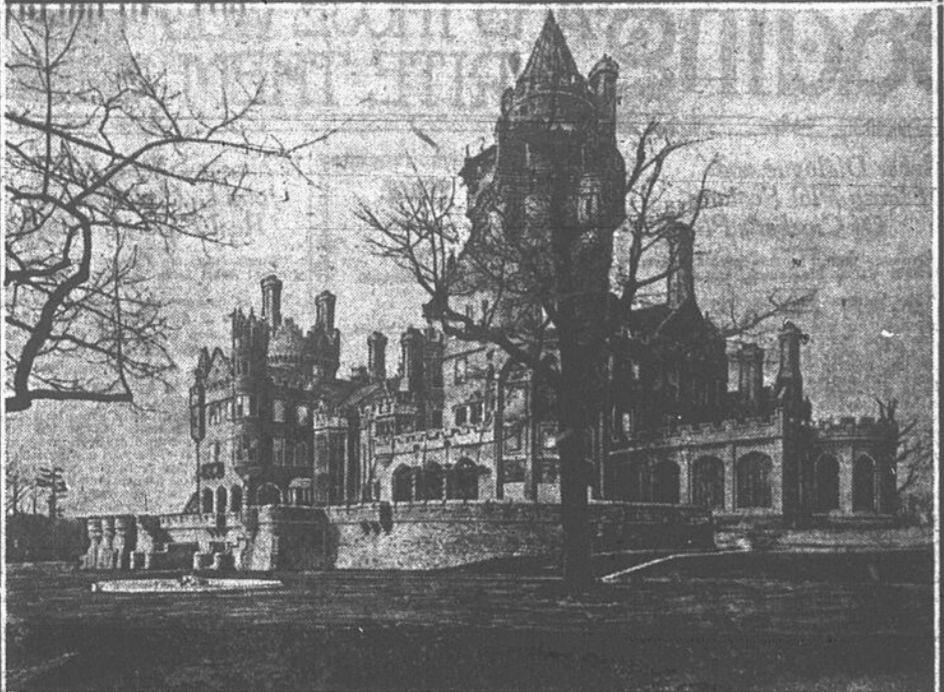

What Casa Loma has cost its owner, to the present time is unknown. Rumor says the edifice is available to the Dominion Government at a price of $400,000, which is certainly less than half the original cost of construction.

LIVES ON COUNTRY ESTATE.

Sir Henry himself occupied only one of Casa Loma's seventeen living suites during the war. The remainder of the castle he threw open to the Red Cross Daughters of the Empire, and other patriotic war-time organizations.

Rumor has destined Casa Loma for many purposes, during the last few months. It has been suggested that the palace might be taken over by a syndicate, and converted into an ultra-elaborate apartment house for the use of the city's most prominent families, that it might be purchased by patriotic organizations, and presented to the city as a memorial to the war.

Crushed against a street car, and the side of an automobile at the corner of St. Lawrence Boulevard and St. Catherine street, Napoleon Bellemare, 148-Davidson street, Hochelaga, and his right arm broken, was taken to the General Hospital for treatment shortly after 9 o'clock last night.

ARTICLES XII, SERIES 2. Copyright by W. B. Carmel, B.S., M.A., M.E.I.C.

In Article XI it was shown how a vacuum tube amplifies an incoming voltage usually making the voltage six or seven times greater, and it was stated that there is also a current amplification. This current amplification arises in the following manner: The heated filament is constantly shooting out particles of electricity, or electrons as they are called, in all directions. This is illustrated in the first of the vacuum tubes shown in the figure where the dots and lines represent the electrons shooting out of the filament. Some of these electrons are attracted to the plate by the voltage of the 'B' battery, giving us the so-called plate current. The dotted lines show that more of these electrons are going over to the plate than when the voltage is brought onto the grid from the antenna due to an incoming radio wave. This voltage diverts still more of the electrons towards the plate, and they, like the other electrons, flow out along the wire connected to the plate through the phones or through the primary winding of the audio frequency transformer, as the case may be. The increase in current produced in this way may be much greater than the increase in voltage which would produce through a resistance the same change in the voltage of the vacuum tube, the reason being that this increase in current is brought about simply by attracting electrons already in the tube, whereas otherwise they would fly from the filament in other directions. We see, therefore, that in the vacuum tube there is a source of current which can be drawn off by changing the direction of flow of electrons, or as we may say, the vacuum tube acts as a reservoir from which current may be drawn. The action of the vacuum tube, therefore, we have current amplification which is explained in Article XI.

that have appeared in The Star. The last I tried was the Relnair with three tubes and find it satisfactory. For some reason or other I am never able to get Montreal although on good nights I have tried but without success.

It is very odd that you should have difficulty in picking up Montreal but this might be accounted for by your location being a blind spot for Montreal. In Montreal, we get Toronto very badly although we get much more distant stations in other parts of North America quite easily. This is very curious and I hope to be able at some future time in The Star to get information from readers about other blind spots.

WORKING AND THOSE WHO WRITE THEM

Romance of Venice By Louise Gerard a Book That Entertains

"A French of Stars," by Louise Gerard; F. B. Rothchild, Toronto.

This novel, by the authoress of "The Son of the Sahara," a book that enjoyed a great deal of popularity, is a novel of the writer's previous work. Relating the story of a young woman who lives in the manner in which she rescues a young Englishman from being held a prisoner by an avaricious Venetian family, the authoress has provided herself with ample opportunity to indulge in as many mysterious and romantic situations as she pleases. Venice is pre-eminent in the title of Romance, and in it, a young man who had loved without love for thirty years finds love at last in a remarkable manner. The young Englishman is rescued by a Venetian girl, and the simplicity and candor of her manner bring the very obvious vanishing of the young man's love to a realization of the life of a girl who has always been a prisoner of the Venetian...

Louis Hemon's Short Stories

It is not always a good thing for an author to establish a big reputation on the strength of a single book. People are apt to expect that all his succeeding work will be up to the standard of the first. They are likely to judge him by his subsequent shortcomings rather than by his first notable achievement. In the case of an author whose reputation is posthumous, however, such arguments do not apply. Louis Hemon will always be known as the author of "Maria Chapdelaine," no matter if further manuscripts from his pen are discovered and published and prove to be of great literary value. But the fact that he wrote "Maria Chapdelaine" will not prevent people from appreciating other work from his pen, because they know that he is dead and has nothing to fear from their praise or blame.

In "My Lady Fair," Hemon's short stories are collected. They are few in number, but they constitute a little volume of quite exceptional interest, alike for their variety and their queerly intense insight into human nature. It may sound like heresy, but I should prefer to judge Hemon the man rather by these short stories than by his chef-d'oeuvre of the French-Canadian pioneer. He seems to me to have come closer to an intimate knowledge of the workings of the human mind in these tales than he reveals in the novel. He is obviously interested in the emotions of life, and he shows a power of achievement that would have served him in great stead had he lived, one can easily imagine. I do not mean that he lacks sympathy. No man could write such a poignant study of old age waiting for the coming of death as Hemon has penned in "The Old Woman" who did not possess a profound capacity for human sympathy and whose sympathies were not broad and comprehensive. But at the same time he is able to stand apart and watch the play of emotions, and tell us how they react upon those in whom they burn.

"My Lady Fair," the tale that gives its name to the book, is a fine study of memory recalling an old romance of which the paths of remembrance is all that remains. It is written with an amazing simplicity, with a dramatic directness that compels interest, and with that naive intensity one finds only in the work of the best French short story writers, an engaging and disarming frankness that makes one feel as if one had been taken into their confidence and that the trust shown was worth while. "He-Who-Sees-The-Gods" is a gem, a vignette of Limehouse, bringing the romance of the South Seas into the fog of the London Dock. Here is infinite pathos, infinite tragedy, infinite beauty, too, and the understanding soul that can grasp all—even the troubled vision of the blind.

"The Last Evening" is a sordid Cockney tragedy made fine by the inspiration that has touched the tale with its glowing fire. "Fear" has its definite psychological values, but it is not free from the suggestion of exterior influence. "Lizette Blackstone" is another Limehouse story, a study of a willful girl storm-tossed by the hands of Fate.

These are the pick of the collection. And Hemon is entitled to be judged by the best. They justify his inclusion in the little band of short story writers who have been busy striving to achieve work that shall endure during the past decade. Among a veritable wealth of tales and sketches, these stand out stamped by genius, a veritas, alas, all too soon out of! But we are grateful for the legacy thus left behind.

Authentic News Of Books And Authors Up-to-the-Minute

People who have received books for Christmas presents tried to exchange them as those who receive "servants" who are "not the bookishness" would have.

Mr. Percival Perry, who worked in the Ministry of Militations during the war, and who is the author of a volume of verse, has purchased the island of Hiron, one of the Channel Islands, from Sir Compton Mackenzie.

The poet Laureate has made an anthology of English poetry for the use of schools, and the volume, which Messrs. Longmans, Green and Co. will publish shortly, should be an excellent book for schoolmasters in every quarter of the Empire. It will be "The Children's Book of Poetry," and will be published by the same publisher.

Alexander Koupriev, who since the Soviet regime went into effect in Russia has been living in France, has recently produced a powerful novel, published in Paris under the title "Fosse aux Filles."

Few volumes of collected essays and papers of a literary nature may compare with those of George Saintsbury, and published by the Macmillan Company of the author's own selection and cover English literature of the 17th-18th period, with several critical essays of the "Literary Digest" series.

Famous Hymn Was Subject of Debate With Critical Bishop

The Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould wrote "Onward Christian Soldiers" nearly sixty years ago for a Sunday school festival at Horbury, the Yorkshire parish of which he was then curate, says the London Morning Post. The bishop of the diocese raised objections to the lines "With the Cross of Jesus Going on Before" as savouring of Ritualism. Whereupon the author suggested that it should read, "With the Cross of Jesus Left Behind the Door." That only made the bishop still more vexed.

It is told that a lady once asked Samuel Johnson for a candid criticism of her poems. ## "Shepherd's Purse" A Volume of Verse That Holds No Little Charm

"Shepherd's Purse," by Florence Randall Liversay; The Macmillan Company of Canada, Ltd., Toronto.

In this all-time volume of verse from the pen of Mrs. Liversay, there is both beauty and charm, no little charm, for she is a collection of fugitive poems. Mrs. Liversay has possessed the imagination, and a color-sense keen enough to save her from error in her word-painting. Moreover, she can create melody, and set a picture in its frame with the skill of the true artist. "Canaan at Dusk" is a perfect poem for a painting. "Challenges" conjures up a clear vision.

Clever Dialogue and Flimsy Plot Features Of Crocker's Playlets

"Humble Bell," by Horwood Crocker; Stewart Kidd, Cincinnati, U.S.A.

This volume contains five one-act plays, "The Last Straw," "The Baby Carriage," "The Dog," "The First Time" and "The Case of a Hat." They are of the very popular one-act type, and deal mostly with everyday, common life in different phases, and has written in a playlet form, interesting if commonplace themes. Some of his plots are not very plausible, but when this is the case Crocker is almost always so good that the improbability vanishes before the clever manipulation of events.

Lincoln's "Dr. Nye," a Tale That Amuses and Convinces the Reader

"Doctor Nye," by Joseph Lincoln; George McLeod, Toronto.

Intimate glimpses of a small town named North Ostable hardly prepare us for the realization that in this story the author has achieved something entirely out of the ordinary. For this small town seems the last place on earth where anything worth writing about is likely to happen. Yet Mr. Lincoln, by his imaginative power and his aptness at sketching characters, has made it a distinctly lively place, and by introducing Doctor Nye, who after spending the number of years in prison, falsely accused of the theft of church money, returns to his home town on his release and begins the almost impossible task of living down his reputation and restoring his practice, the author gives us a character who overtops all the others and adds a pitiful but very human touch to the story.

Zane Grey Writes A Powerful Indictment Of The Modern Woman

"The Call of the Canyon," by Zane Grey; The Muesen Book Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Zane Grey's right to consideration as a writer of fiction of the better type has been firmly established. There are few novelists who are so consistently good with a patronizing sentence, a sort of deprecatory way of the hand. But in this book, he has shown that his own mind is making steady progress as he writes. He stands out as a writer in his own right, and his latest tale, "The Call of the Canyon," exemplified in Arizona outdoor life, only a peg upon which to hang his stories, and in this particular instance the modern American woman as any penny of late. Glenn Kilbourne, a writer and a soldier, has been in the line of the West, with its wonderful and its hardships, and in this story, he has written a man to find himself.

Whimsical Story by John L. Carter Holds Real Food for Laughter

"Come Day, Go Day," by John L. Carter; John Long Ltd., London.

This is a rather light literary raised to a plane of distinction by the unique whimsical vein which Mr. Carter has introduced and sustained throughout the book. Really, a delightful piece of work, it would be doing injustice to term the book in any other way than "Real Food for Laughter."

American Life in a Small Town Painted With Simple Realism

"J. Hardin & Son," by Brand Whitlock; D. Appleton & Co., London and N. Y. F. D. Goodrich, Toronto.

"J. Hardin & Son" is a story of small-town life, and narrates the career of Josiah Hardin and more particularly that of his son Paul. Brought up in such a community under the guidance of a strict Puritanical father, it is not surprising that this boy should develop into a man whose life is hemmed in by conventions and who is unable, in spite of his desperate struggles, to break away from his conventional mode of living and to follow the womanly real lives. His old life has always been a duty, as conceived in convention, came first, and in the great crisis of his life he elects rather to do his duty as he understands it and to be unhappy than follow the path along which love leads to his wife and children and Evelyn are the principal female characters in the novel. "J. Hardin & Son" is a story of a rather small-minded person, who does not love her husband but will not give him his freedom. For the sake of a woman Paul really loves, is ready to make an sacrifice for her. Paul's consciousness than to the pleading of his wife, but he is not to be understood as "lives unhappily ever after." It may be taken as a typical story of middle-class life. The village of Maccochee in the State of Ohio is the locale, and the author shows skill in writing a novel that is at the same time true to life and yet unmarked by dullness. We must learn to understand all the characters one would be likely to come across in an Ohio village, and we are shown in a striking manner how the Hardin family are important people in the town and well off financially, miss half the pleasure of living through their strict adherence to duty, as conceived in breaking away from the ties of their narrow upbringing.

Nat Gould's Racing Stories Retain All Old Power to Please

"Beating the Favorite," by Nat Gould; John Long, Ltd., London.

For generations past, Nat Gould's stories of the turf, his alluring descriptions of famous horse races, and his cunning manner of weaving into each pattern a strong thread of romance, have been the delight of millions. All his old-time stories, and we are shown in a striking manner how the Hardin family are important people in the town and well off financially, miss half the pleasure of living through their strict adherence to duty, as conceived in breaking away from the ties of their narrow upbringing.

HOW THE MOTORIST

"AUTOS NOT ALLOWED"

There are still many park drives where Bermuda's idea of barring motor cars continues to maintain a stronghold despite the overwhelming popularity of the automobile and its ability to explore every corner of the earth.

But whatever your views happen to be in regard to the matter there is a lesson to be learned from the mere fact that this condition still exists. Apparently automobiles are not barred because they tear up the roads, but because the people who drive them frequently make themselves objectionable.

Park authorities who bar motor cars say that the first thing the motorist does when admitted to some particularly fine bit of cultivated land is to park his car on the grass and proceed to take liberties with the privilege accorded him. He winds up by having a picnic, leaving the debris strewn in every direction. He gets careless and guns up the road with a collision. He tries to pass everyone, scattering dust over the foliage and making the day miserable for everyone else.

Maybe the average motorist needs a little brushing up in the matter of decorum. Anyway it wouldn't do any harm to think a bit whenever he sees the warning, "Autos Not Allowed!"

CLEAN YOUR SPECS.

That glare from the other fellow's headlights is always increasing by day on your windshield, but what about the windshields on your eyes? Dusty glasses do as much to increase the headlight nuisance as any adjustment of the headlights themselves.

Keep your eye on pedestrian when turning at a crossing and don't hurry just because the traffic officer urges you to. A bawling out, or a small fine, is of little consequence compared with a damage suit.

When there is a constant flow of pedestrians crossing a street, with no interruptions at the direction of the police, do not stop the car altogether when desiring to look through. If you keep coming on an opening will be made for you automatically, whereas if you stop a moment it will be that much more difficult for them to take advantage of you. But run slowly!

THE OLD MECHANIC SAYS:

That car with the muffler torn off reminds me to tell you that if you're going to switch the ignition when the engine is running, you should use the engine as a brake before you switch it, on again. The owner of this car had his foot on the accelerator, and so the unburned gas that had accumulated in the muffler went off with a terrific explosion when the first cylinder exhausted its burning gas.

I didn't use the term "backfire" because these loud reports you hear from the exhausts of cars are not backfires at all, though commonly referred to as such. A real backfire reverses the motion of the engine and is thus heard through the intake and carburetor as a sort of dull explosion. What you hear through the exhaust may be due to an open exhaust valve at the time of firing or to an accumulation of unburned gas in the exhaust and muffler, or both.

Motorists are told to open the throttle wide when going downhill with the ignition off as this helps increase the compression and retard the speed of the car. But if you do this stands to reason that the exhaust manifold, pipe and muffler will be filled with unburned gas at the bottom of the hill, which is the thing you usually switch on the ignition again.

McKinnon Columbia Chain Limited
St. Catharines - Ontario

It has increased the property damage rate credit from 5 to 10 per cent. It is conceded that such credits are granted in order to attract business, but an increase in credit percentage would seem to indicate that the particular insurers are satisfied as to the advantage of the new brakes. On the other hand, there are those who believe that the winter use of four-wheel brakes may necessitate a revision to the extent of stipulating the more desirable types of four-wheel brakes, possibly barring some types from credit reductions. The situation is interesting, and car owners are urged to give it their best thought, uninfluenced by rumor and prejudice.

DID YOU KNOW?

That starting difficulties can often be traced to simply a condition of general neglect of the engine? Spark plugs that need cleaning, a weakened battery, valves that stick open or leak, a carburetor that hasn't been adjusted for the proper weather conditions and a choke lever that has slipped a little so that it does not close off all the air—all these combined will often produce the same results as a radical deficiency. And it's more difficult to locate because no one of the constituent causes itself would be sufficient to cause difficult starting. The motorist, therefore, fails to find the cause until he tackles a general overhauling job.

That the gears will often shift better, and the car "buckle" less if the throttle is set just a little above the idling position? You can find the proper position after one or two trials. It may change from day to day. (Copyright 1924 by the Ullman Feature Service.)

A Good Temporary Repair.

For an emergency gasoline pipe repair, common soap has proven very satisfactory. Take a small piece and press against the hole in the pipe. After having applied the soap to the damaged tube, bind the soap to the tube with rubber tape. This will hold until the pipe can be properly repaired.

Announcing New and Exclusive Features for Dominion Cord Tires

The Web Cord Process

FOR several years our laboratories have been experimenting with and testing a new and improved process of laying cords for Dominion Cord Tires, by which greater strength and uniformity of strain—more mileage—would be obtained.

The Usual Method

The usual method of laying the cords is to weave a cross thread to hold the cords together while receiving a coating of rubber. This rubber is either dissolved in gasoline or other solvents or heated and forced in by heavy machinery. The result is a strong and durable tire but not of absolute uniformity.

Ordinary dissolved rubber does not give the penetration which will saturate the cords and bind them together without cross threads, because the rubber loses much of its original properties of adhesiveness, elasticity and strength in the various processes by which all crude rubber is treated.

Microscopic examination of the snow-white rubber milk, known to the trade as latex, shows that the particles of rubber in its natural solution, latex, are very much smaller and finer than those of rubber dissolved in gasoline or other solvents, consequently latex rubber is more penetrating, more adhesive and much stronger.

The New Exclusive Process

Now, by our new and exclusive process, the cords are soaked in latex, the pure sap of the rubber tree, then drawn over a drum to dry, causing the cords to form a web cemented together with the pure latex rubber without the use of cross threads. Each individual cord is thoroughly saturated with the natural latex rubber and the web is again coated on both sides with this rubber. Each cord lies perfectly flat, even and straight in the web—each takes strain equally with all the others—each is perfectly insulated from all the other cords. This process—eliminating internal friction—is one of the greatest advances in cord tire building.

Latex Sprayed Rubber

The use of latex for webbing cords led naturally to its use in the walls and treads of the tires. Latex is sprayed into an evaporating chamber in which all moisture is driven off and the pure natural rubber drops down in the finest particles, with all its original properties undisturbed by the smoke, acids or solvents used in ordinary processes.

This pure sprayed rubber, with all its original properties, adds greatly to the strength, durability and resiliency of the body of the tire.

Absolutely Proven Superiority

Tires built with Latex Web Cord and Sprayed Rubber, were given gruelling tests on every kind of road, over a period of two years. These tests absolutely prove the superiority of tires built by these processes.

These new and exclusive features in Dominion Royal and Ucord Tires do not add anything to your tire costs. They are simply plus value which you get without extra cost. More than ever, Dominion Royal and Ucord Tires are Canada's premier tires, and the standards by which tires and tire values in Canada are judged.

SYSTEM OF GRADING GRAIN ATTACKED - Witnesses Before Senate Commission Favor the Farmer - WASHINGTON, Jan. 11. (Associated Press) - Features of the "doctrinaire" system of grading grain were attacked before the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday by western witnesses at a hearing on the Norris-Sinclair bill, which purports to create a $100,000,000 corporation to deal in farm products.

upon farmers' ordinary purchases than upon those of any other class," he said, and expressed doubt that market prices of farm products would be increased by the Norris-Sinclair measure.

Mr. Hagen said co-operative organizations in the grain belt had been handicapped by the active opposition of banks, adding that he knew of cases of "practical boycott by the banks of the Twin Cities," which tended to block sales by the co-operatives.

Stagnation was threatened unless a new system of taxation was devised. He also suggested that Canada should attempt to borrow abroad.

Mr. Hagen proposed that elevators and mills be restricted to an allowance covering the cost of screening in deducting for foreign content in wheat.

He concluded with an appeal for men to heed and put into practice the teachings of the great Nazarene.
