DAILY NEWS FROM TOWNSHIPS

He had received a good deal of advice about his lecture and then you will have a good one." Mr. Gomey thought that banking could be classed as a science, because it came under the heading of political economy.

That was known as the dismal science, but he would endeavor to deal simply with those broader features of the subject which were of more general interest to the public.

He then showed how, in proportion to the vast mass of the world's daily commercial transactions, the actual money played a very subordinate part.

Real values of all kinds were daily changing hands the world over, but actual money was not exchanged in every transaction although actual payment might be made in every case.

The payments were effected by means of credits which balanced one another throughout the world. The mechanism by which this was done was very clearly explained.

He then discussed the principles underlying bank loans, and instanced the case of incorporated companies doing large businesses.

A manufacturer of farm machinery would need a large amount of money in April to send out the great number of agricultural implements required at that time.

These are sold on notes, which the banks discount. By the autumn the notes of these notes are paid and the money is available for the bank to advance to the farmer who, in his turn, will only get the whole of his payments in by the following spring.

This afforded a simple illustration of a very vast complication of balanced and balancing interests, which the banker had to study and get upon.

The annual movement of capital to the Northwest for the moving of the wheat crop was then referred to. Mr. Gomey then spoke of the Banking Act of 1890, and of the Canadian banking system in general.

The real strength of the system was the men of integrity who managed it. A whole ship load of law would not secure safety. Coming to the question of bank interest, the lecturer said that many people asked why the banks only paid three per cent to the depositors, while they charged six and seven per cent for money loaned out.

He showed, however, that it was only a small proportion of the funds which earned the higher rate of interest. Some of the funds, indeed, earned less than three per cent. The mechanism of call loans was then explained.

In conclusion, Mr. Gomey regretted that he had not left himself time to speak of the modern stock exchange.

A very hearty vote of thanks was moved by Major Hewton, and seconded by Mr. A. G. Jones.

The chairman announced that the next lecture in the course would be by Major Hewton on "Myths, ancient and modern," on Monday evening, April 13th.

THE TEMPERANCE CAMPAIGN IN THE FRENCH PARISHES.

The lectures given Sunday last at Chateau Richer, in behalf of the Anti-Alcoholic League, by Sir Francis Langellier, Hon. Justice Lemieux and Hon. T. Chapais, of Quebec, were most successful.

The church was filled with people, not only from the parish, but surrounding localities and even from Quebec and many clergy were present as well as all the leading men of the village.

The drunkards occupy the prisons and asylums of 23 individuals who had been brought before him accused of murder. It had been under the influence of liquor.

In a peroration the orator urged his hearers to prove themselves worthy of their forefathers, and expressed the hope that the cause of temperance would be finally victorious.
