Despite the general economic depression, results of which are evident practically everywhere, Ormstown Exhibition enjoyed its greatest year both in attendance, and in the number of exhibits. Its unheralded success is a great credit to the district.

There was some disappointment in the fact that Premier Taschereau did not announce the provincial election date on Sunday. However, there was much consolation in his pronouncement that all pledges will first be fulfilled.

Masons Hold Church Service.—

The members of Chateauguay Masonic Lodge and friends attended the annual church service of the lodge in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last evening. The special speaker for the occasion was the Rev. Malcolm Campbell, D.D. of Montreal. Dr. Campbell gave a very uplifting address and one that received much commendation by all who attended the service. The lodge chaplain, Rev. J. B. Maclean was assisted by Rev. J. H. Miller. After the church service the Masons marched to the lodge rooms where Dr. Campbell again spoke. D.D.G.M. Borup of Montreal was also present along with a number of visiting brethren from Valleyfield and other lodges. Mr. Harry Whitehead of Valleyfield rendered a solo at the church service. The collection received will be devoted to charitable work.

Dominion Store Now Opens up.—

It is questionable if ever in the history of Huntingdon if three retail stores outlets opened up within 12 months. The march was opened by Victoria Stores coming to town, followed recently by the "New Life Restaurant and Fruit Store," and now comes the Dominion Store which enters the newly built stores of Ferdinand Lefebvre.

Among those receiving the degree of Master of Arts at the recent Convocation at the University of Toronto, was John McKenzie Rowat, who was pursuing his studies in the Graduate School of the University under a fellowship. Mr. Rowat is the son of William A. Rowat, and a grandson of the Rev. Andrew Rowat, late of Athelstan, Que., and graduated from the Saskatoon University in 1929 at the age of nineteen. He will continue his studies at Toronto leading to the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, under a renewal of the fellowship granted by the Graduate School.

On Sunday fourteen motored to Brownsburg to attend the funeral of the late William Mason, formerly of the Huntingdon Hockey team. Those who went were Messrs. Carl L. B. Wheeler, Roy McWhinnie, F. Messier, Gordon Ferry, Brethour Lunan, Purcell Fortune, Stanton Smaill, Huntley Rolfe, Eddie Cappiello, Douglas Fortune, Leo Cappiello, J. Moris Hunter, and the Misses Nellie Bigras and Madeline Lasalle. Messrs. Purcell Fortune and Morris Hunter numbered amongst the pallbearers.

The front of the post office has had a brushing up with varnish, a pity the paint brush didn't extend across the road and finish up a last years' paint job started on the bridge. The exterior of the Bank of Commerce has just been painted, too bad the paint brush didn't take a swipe at the fountain. It needs a coat of green paint as well as the hydrants throughout the town. Whilst wood will deteriorate for the lack of paint, iron will rust, and soon cause havoc and considerable loss. Going short on the paint brush is false economy.

In the I.O.O.F. Hall on Monday evening the Rebekahs had a large number of members turn out. The degree was put on and nine in all joined. A large number from Valleyfield accompanied the candidates; also a crowd from Ormsdale Lodge of Ormstown. After the meeting refreshments were served. Addresses and singing brought to a close a very enjoyable evening.

Mrs. J. E. Seale spent Thursday with her sister, Mrs. Allan Dawson.

Mrs. Frank Budd spent Friday in town.

The Misses Jessie and Claire Derochie of Montreal spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Derochie.

Mrs. D. Boyd has returned to Montreal after spending a week with her daughter, Mrs. Jas. Ferns, Jr.

Miss M. A. Sadler and Mrs. Peddie of Ormstown were Sunday guests of Mrs. Jas. Ferns, Jr.

On Monday, Mgr. J. C. Allard and Agronomist P. N. April of Ste. Martine were in Huntingdon and called upon a number of friends. When in this community they visited Brackenglade Farm and purchased a purebred Holstein calf for the Farmers' Club of Ste. Martine.

Ernice Bruce's Ragtime Band which was in attendance at Ormstown Exhibition spent a few hours in Huntingdon on Monday, advertising for a dance to be held in Ormstown that evening. Much merriment took place at the O'Connor Hall square when school pupils were out for noon. Singing, dancing, bagpipes, band selections, and stories were in order for a half hour. After luncheon selections were played at the fountain and a visit made to Jack Ross' smithy.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil A. Reavie, Mr. Angus Reavie, Edmund and Margaret, who have been spending the past week with Mrs. Geo. M. Hamilton and other friends, left by motor on Monday morning for their home in Flinton, Ont. They were also visitors at Ormstown Exhibition.

The Misses Helen Oliver and Estelle Lefebvre of Montreal, and Miss Marjorie Hamilton of Ormstown, were week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Lefebvre.

Miss Lomyra Popeck of Westmount spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. Gerald Hunter of Montreal, spent the week-end at his home here.

James Morris

Former M. P. for Chateauguay, who died in his home at Aubrey on Friday.

J. MORRIS EX-M.P. DIED AT AUBREY

Former Conservative Member Was Ontario Born—Farmer and Marble Merchant

James Morris, former Conservative M.P. for Chateauguay, died somewhat suddenly at his home at Aubrey early Friday morning. He was 75 years of age. It was during the memorable Chateauguay by-election of 1913 that Mr. Morris defeated the late Hon. Sydney Fisher, Liberal candidate. After having been member for Chateauguay during eight years, Mr. Morris was defeated in 1921 by the late Hon. James A. Robb, M.P. who was Minister of Finance at the time of his death last year.

By a strange coincidence, Dr. J. C. Moore, present Conservative M.P. for Chateauguay-Huntingdon was at Aubrey Friday morning and was called to the deathbed of Mr. Morris. Later Dr. J. L. Savage, of Ste. Philomene, coroner of the district, was summoned, and disposed of the case with a verdict of natural death.

The late James Morris was born in the town of Rutland, Ont., on December 16, 1857, the son of Patrick Morris, Irish, and his wife, Ann McRae, Scotch-Canadian.

He was educated in the village of St. Chrysostome, and was later a farmer and marble and granite dealer. He was later the president of the firm of Morris Brothers and vice-president of the Howick Farmers' Telephone Company. He was also mayor of St. Jean Chrysostome for two years.

Mr. Morris was a candidate for the first time at the general elections of 1911, but was defeated. He defeated Hon. Sydney Fisher at a by-election October 11, 1913. He had lived practically all his life in the county of Chateauguay and was an active Conservative and a Presbyterian.

M. L. McCarthy Banquetted

A pleasing interlude occurred at the time of the Ormstown Exhibition when a group of Holstein and Ayrshire men met and gave a complimentary banquet at Burke's Inn, Ormstown, to M. L. McCarthy of Medford, Mass. and Sussex, N. B. This in a way being a token of the esteem in which he is held by livestock men in general.

The hosts were H. T. Cunningham and W. L. Carr of Huntingdon, Que.; C. L. Goodhue, Vaudreuil, Que.; J. E. Chandler, Hudson Heights, Que.; P. J. Sally, Lachine, Que.; R. M. Holtby, Port Perry, Ont.; D. A. McPhee, Vankleek Hill, Ont.; J. D. Gale, Guelph, Ont.

The Hon. F. C. Biggs and F. Stanley Biggs, Dundas, Ont.; Wm. Hunter, Grimsby Beach, Ont.; Frank Napier, Ottawa, Ont.; H. Colson, Ontario Farmer, Toronto, Ont.

The other guests in addition to Mr. McCarthy were Lorne Logan, Manager, Lonsdale Farm, Sussex, N. B.; Dr. L. A. Donovan and H. Donovan of Sussex, N. B.; H. A. Strohmeyer, New York and J. Rettie, Burgessville, Ont.

Messrs. Cunningham and Carr acted as Master of Ceremonies and Mr. Cunningham conveyed the thanks of the Holstein men for the work he had done for the breed. He also spoke feelingly of the general esteem in which Mr. McCarthy is held by all livestock men. Frank Napier and the Hon. F. C. Biggs conveyed the best wishes of the Ayrshire men in general and the latter made reference to the good comradeship which prevails between Holstein and Ayrshire men and hoped that this would continue.

Mr. McCarthy in a few words expressed his gratitude for the compliment which had been paid to him.

Races at Ormstown

In speaking to Mr. D. J. Greig, chairman of the track committee we have learned that there were 67 horses on the grounds. This included the running horses.

This year was the first time running races were run at Ormstown and proved to be very attractive and effective. In future years running races will become the event of the show.

In the 2.24 trot on Wednesday 9 entries were made and won by McNealey, owned and driven by Johnnie Powell of Waddington, N.Y.

The running race saw six start and ran the heat in one minute and one half second. At the finish it was very close, the winning horse winning by about half a neck. Billy Henderson won this heat on Wednesday and on Thursday the negro, Snowball won.

MAN KILLED WHEN AUTO STRIKES POLE

J. Daly, 23 Years of Age, Killed at Valleyfield Early Sunday Morning

M. J. Daly of the Canadian Bank of Commerce staff at Valleyfield was instantly killed in an automobile accident on Sunday.

J. McFarlane, an engineer working on the Laguerre canal, along with M. J. Daly left the Chateau Salaberry at two o'clock on Sunday morning in a Chrysler roadster to drive out to where McFarlane resided near St. Stanislaus where they intended to spend Sunday.

Striking the gravel road just beyond Brupbacher Silk Mill they failed to make the curve and crashed into the ditch. The car plowed its way 100 feet, struck a telegraph pole and turned a complete sumersault. Daly was instantly killed. McFarlane was saved by falling lower than the car into a grass trough. He, however, managed to extricate himself. Lifting Daly from the wrecked car McFarlane proceeded to walk to Valleyfield, arriving at the police station at five minutes to 3 o'clock. A verdict of accidental death was returned at the inquest held under Coroner Ed. Besner. The wrist watch worn by Daly stopped at exactly half past two o'clock. Mr. Daly was 23 years of age and had relatives living in Montreal.

A census now being undertaken in Valleyfield is likely to show a substantial increase in population, is the report of Chief of Police.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. M. S. of the United Church was held in the Church Hall, Friday the 12th. The greater part of the programme was provided by visiting ladies. Mrs. Greig led in the devotional period. Mrs. Roman contributed a solo in a most pleasing manner. Mrs. Wilson, president of the Montreal Presbyterial gave a brief account of the work of the W. M. S. at home, and in the foreign field. Mrs. Rice, Supply Secy., said she was not a speaker but a packer and told of the work of repacking and distributing the contents of bales and boxes sent her from the different Auxiliaries of the district.

Mrs. McDonald, late of Kongmoon, China, gave a sketch of the work with the Chinese people of Montreal. The principal address of the afternoon was given by Mrs. Im-Obersteg, one of the missionaries of the United Church, working among the people from the different countries of Europe, who came to our land to make Canada their home. She asked that as we hoped to make good Canadian citizens of them to receive them kindly, treat them courteously and give them our gospel.

At the close of the meeting tea was served. Mrs. Robb and Mrs. McQuaig were hostesses.

Gate Receipts Fall at Ormstown, Increased Attendance

The reduction of 10c in the admission to Ormstown Exhibition possibly meant greater attendance at the show but it also meant a drop in the receipts for the entire show. The gate receipts were as follows:

	1931	1930
Gate	$5311.00	$6067.25
Racing grand stand	365.75	371.55
Reserved seats	316.00	315.00

The 1931 receipts were $761.05 less than that of a year ago. Had the same admission been charged as a year ago, with this year's attendance the receipts would have been $300. greater than 1930.

NESS HORSES IMP. FROM SCOTLAND WIN CHAMPIONSHIP AT ORMSTOWN

Judge Sinclair Praises Exhibit of 10 Horses of Miss Viau Which Won Hon. Honoré Mercier Silver Cup—Noel Reynolds, Aged 77, Entered Five Horses and Won Prizes on All

D. A. CAIRNS LARGEST DIST. HORSE EXHIBITOR

Holstein Championships Largely Divided Between M. L. McCarthy, Sussex, N. B., and Mount Victoria Farms —Sheep, Swine and Poultry Shows Greatly Augmented This Year

The greatest of exhibitions ever held at Ormstown has just been concluded. The stock showing was easily the best for Ormstown and would rival the Royal Winter Fair to a higher degree than any other show in Canada.

Judge McKendrick was greatly taken with the showing of heavy horses, particularly the Clydesdales. The recent Ness importation received much commendation from Mr. McKendrick. These horses were well brought out and shown. The champion mare of the show was Lady Margaret, owned by Ness and Sons. She is 3 years old and when developed will make a high class show mare. The champion stallion was Elegance. He is 4 years old, and was seen a little lacking in his middle owing to the heavy season.

The big string of horses that attracted the keenest of attention was that in competition for the Government special, sired by a registered stallion. Six entries with fives horses in each entry made up the class. The honors went to Adam Cullen who won the $100. with D. A. McCormick as second. The next big class was that of a string bred and owned by exhibitor. In this class D. A. McCormick took top place and A. Cullen second. In this class Mr. Cullen drew out one of his mares that appeared in the Government class, whilst Mr. McCormick added three.

The Driving Horses

In the driving classes a greater number of horses were seen that belonged to men of the District. D. A. Cairns was again the greatest local showman having eight fine horses in his string, and all of which were in the money winning classification. Donald Black had six horses all being of exceptionally good quality. Noel Reynolds, the veteran show man, and who is 77 years of age, was likely the oldest showman on the grounds. Mr. Reynolds had five horses, and in every class in which they were entered they won a money prize. A roadster and two hackney ponies were entered in the name of Myrna Wheeler and they all gave a good account of themselves. Mr. Arthur McClatchie entered three general purpose horses and won first prize on all three. The names of the other exhibitors of the district who had strings will be found in the prize list in this edition.

The horse exhibitors from outside this district were of course headed by Miss E. Viau with her wonderful array of 10 horses. Judge Sinclair of the driving horses was particularly taken with her display of horses in competition for the Mercier Cup. This class will undoubtedly be made an evening show feature in future years. Judge Sinclair proclaimed this class the finest show made at the whole of Ormstown Exhibition.

Walter Nesbitt of Montreal had 8 horses at the show, they being entered largely in the saddle and hackney classes. Captain Bates of St. Johns, Que., was out with an exceptional showing of cavalry and jumping horses. Between Captain Bates and Walter Nesbitt's entries of saddle horses Judge Sinclair remarked that the saddle classes showed the greatest improvement over all other classes shown in recent years.

Ernest Mason of Malone, N. Y., had three very superior horses at the show. Last year he sold one of his horses to the Chestnut Stables of Walter Nesbitt. Mr. Mason drove this horse in competition with Miss Viau's famous pair Lord Brilliant and Radiant. Usually these two horses take first and second place in whatever class they enter, but Mr. Mason drove his old horse to second place, and received much applause upon his successful achievement. D. E. Urquhart was again present with four horses all entered in the saddle classes and all worthy of mention. Adelard Raymond and the Mount Royal Riding Stables were ably represented.

Shetland Ponies

Mrs. Romeo Poirier of Montreal, had an excellent exhibit of nine Shetland ponies. This string won the silver trophy for best display of ponies, and the string of five owned by Harry Nussey of Brysonville, came second. Mrs. Ramsey of Bedford, a new exhibitor, was out with four ponies and they all stood well in their classes. Harry Nussey's little daughter Phyllis gave a very creditable demonstration of handling the Nussey string of ponies before the evening attendance. Phyllis is certainly to be congratulated upon her horsemanship ability.

Mr. M. H. Haley, Springfield, Ont., judged the Holstein classes, and gave general satisfaction to the many exhibitors of the 140 odd head of Holstein cattle. The Holstein exhibit was perhaps not quite as large as it has sometimes been, but for all of that excellent classes were brought forth. The Macauley milch cows were outstanding and particularly was that noticeable when it came to the milk cow class. Papoose Phebie owned by Macauley won the milk competition whilst another cow from the same stable in the name of Mount Victoria Pabst Countess Johanna won the dry cow class. Papoose Pebie owned by trip last year M. L. McCarthy had a cow win at all shows in this class including the C. N. E. but at the Royal, Papoose won the laurel and again at Ormstown last week. Mount Victoria Pabst Countess Johanna won the grand championship. She is a four year old. In winning this championship it is a signal honor to Mr. J. E. Chandler who has been the continuous herdsman and manager of this farm for years.

The Mount Victoria herd had several outstanding honors to its credit including the senior and reserve championship females on Countess Pabst Johanna and on Papoose Pebie. Won the get of sire on Montvic Rag Apple Baron, Montvic Rag Apple Segis and on Montvic Rag Apple Colantha. The class for the best four females also went to Mount Victoria herd, each of the four animals entered won first place in their respective classes.

M. L. McCarthy of Sussex, N. B., has a very outstanding Holstein herd. Mr. Logan who is his herdsman will return to Sussex much gratified over his season's work preparing for this exhibition, as the herd won six championships. The championships included: the senior and grand championships on the sire Abbekerk Sylvius Lad, the junior championship and reserve grand on the sire Lonsdale Hartog Faforit, the junior championship for females on Queen Tidy Posch and the reserve junior championship. Mr. McCarthy's winnings included 10 firsts.

Of the district exhibitors perhaps one of the most outstanding classes was that of junior yearling bulls. The big fight was between the bulls owned by H. T. Cunningham and W. R. Tannahill of Huntingdon. After due deliberation the judge gave the honor to the Cunningham bull which also won the reserve junior championship and special for best junior Holstein bull in Beauharnois district.

Mr. W. L. Carr, proprietor of Brackenglade was at Ormstown with his purebred herd of Holsteins. Mr. Goodhue gives a special prize for best get of sire in Beauharnois district. Eight entries were made and the red ribbon was won by W. L. Carr's entry. In the regular class, this same animal took third place, the entries of Mount Victoria Farm and of M. L. McCarthy taking 1st and 2nd places. Messrs. Helm Bros. who recently held a dispersion sale had a few entries at Ormstown. The 2 year old bull which they entered won 1st place for the Macauley special for bull bred and owned by breeder residing in Beauharnois district. This bull also won the reserve senior championship.

The showing of Jerseys was very gratifying. In past years the classes were left largely to one or two exhibitors but this year saw A. C. Hardy, Garnet Kerr, Wm. McEwen, A. E. Hubble in competition with one another. The championships and reserves were largely divided between A. C. Hardy and J. W. Innes & Sons.

The Shorthorn, Canadian cattle and Polled Angus saw small classes, often not sufficient entries to win all the prize money offered. With the showing made by these breeds one would almost think the directorate would be justified in cutting out these breeds in the premium list and devote the prize money to other classes in the more popular breeds of livestock.

Sheep Men to the Fore

If some of the cattle breeds were lacking in entries, and even if this district is not noted for sheep rearing, Ormstown Exhibition has the magnetic pull to draw out sheep exhibitors. The great showing of sheep, especially of Cheviots, Shrops and Southdowns was worthy of attention of all people who recognize good sheep when they see them. The classes all had 6 or 7 entries which was much better than at any previous showing at Ormstown. Mr. Cheeseman of Ellenburg, N. Y., was a new exhibitor, his entry being made up with a showing of Dorsets.

Poultry Show Attained Record

Mr. Thomas McGill has long been in charge of the poultry building and we therefore believe he is the most authentic authority we could go to for information about that exhibit. Mr. McGill did not hesitate in the least in proclaiming the showing this year as the best on record. The most popular breeds shown were the Leghorns, White and Barred Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and White Wyandottes. Of the water fowl the Toulouse and Embden geese predominated with 10 and 12 entries respectively. The showing of turkeys was also very gratifying. The farmers classes of trios of Leghorns, Rhode Islands and Plymouths was the remarkable feature of the poultry show. In the pet stock, rabbits predominated, 33 pens being entered.

In ducks the popular classes were of the Indian Runner, Pekin and Rouen breeds.

Swine Exhibition

Wesley Page & Son of Uxbridge, Ont., G. N. Graham & Son, Udora, Ont., and Hooker Bros. of Ormstown were the largest exhibitors. Judge J. A. Brethour of Burford, Ont., claimed that the opposition in the swine classes was fully equal to that of the great Royal Winter Fair. The Yorkshire classes were particularly heavy. The entries in all classes numbered from 5 up to 9 and 10. The Government special for best pen of five bacon hogs went to Hooker Bros. Twelve entries were made in this class.

Animals Killed on Way

When some freight cars were derailed near Actonvale, Que., R. C. Johnston of Danville, Que., breeder of Shorthorns and Polled Angus, suffered the loss of 22 head of his choice cattle, on way to Ormstown Exhibition. W. S. Brock and R. S. Carson, both of Danville, also lost a few head of their Jersey cattle.

MISSIONARY NURSE DIES FROM BURNS

Miss Barbara McNaughton, Formerly of Huntingdon, Was Supt. of Hospital in Chunking, China

Accidental burns have caused the death at Chungking, China, mission hospital of Miss Barbara Gardner McNaughton, nursing superintendent under the Foreign Mission Board of the United Church of Canada.

A cablegram from Rev. G. R. Jones, Chungking, was received at mission board offices on Monday, announcing the mission's great loss. Miss McNaughton was senior nurse of the West China Mission. She had completed 21 years' service and hoped after her next furlough to return as an evangelist among China's women.

"Deeply regret to convey sad news of death of Miss McNaughton, June 13th, accidental burns, received the same day; passed away peacefully sleeping," reads the message.

Born 58 years ago near Huntingdon, Miss McNaughton received her early education at Huntingdon, went on to McGill Normal School, Montreal, and graduated from Montreal General Hospital in 1902. She entered the Methodist Training School that year in hope of becoming a foreign missionary and was recalled home by her mother's death to care for eight younger children of the family.

"Her service in China commenced in 1909 and is closed early, but she was thoroughly efficient professionally in important posts and has proved a tower of religious strength and a spiritual inspiration to the mission," said Rev. Dr. James Endicott, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions. She became superintendent of Chengtu mission hospital and assisted in establishing the hospital at Chungking.

Late William F. Mason

An Honourable Young Athlete Passes

The young men of Huntingdon received a great shock on Friday morning when word was received through N. W. Sparrow, manager of the Bank of Montreal, that William Francis "Bill" Mason had dropped dead at his home in Lachute. Bill was a favorite amongst hockey fans in Huntingdon, and as a matter of fact throughout our entire district. He was a clerk in the Bank of Montreal here during the past winter, but left in March to enter into the auto business with his father at Lachute and Brownsburg, his home town. Wednesday, Bill was at the Ormstown Exhibition and visited a number of his friends in Huntingdon when on the trip. As the garage was about to be closed up Thursday evening Bill and one of his friends were wrestling, whilst his brother who had been away from home and another chum were looking on at the fun. Bill's heart weakened and he died due to over exertion. Dr. Drew was called immediately but death was instantaneous. Dr. Wales of St. Andrews East, the coroner, was called and gave the verdict as accidental.

To mark the esteem in which this young athlete was held in Huntingdon fourteen of his intimate friends in Huntingdon went to Brownsburg and attended the largely attended funeral.

Bill was not only an athlete, he was a genuine sport, and one to be ever admired for his cleanliness in sport. He was ever fair in play, and so he carried it in his business life. He was admired in the bank in Huntingdon, and without a doubt he gained the same favourable impression at Brownsburg. He was a model young man whom we hope many of our young men will take as a pattern.

To the bereaved parents and family the sympathy of Huntingdonians is extended.

LABORER WAS HURT FATALLY

Felix Luigi, 30, Fell From Height of 68 Feet, at Beauharnois

Struck by the scoop of a huge crane while working at the Power canal under construction, Felix Luigi, 30 years of age, of Melocheville, met with a terrible death Sunday. The Italian employee was hurled down a height of 68 feet and when his companions rushed to his aid, Luigi was dying, having suffered a fracture of the skull and both legs, and a torn chest. The fatality occurred at 6 o'clock Sunday morning and the victim died at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal at 4.00 o'clock that afternoon.

From information gathered at Beauharnois, Luigi was an employee of the Beauharnois Power Construction Company. He was working on top of a scaffold of the building under construction when the fatality occurred. A large crane used to dump the cement into the forms was operating nearby. It is believed that Luigi failed to see the scoop of the crane when he was struck and hurled into a large hole, sixty-eight feet below the scaffold.

Success Attained by Ormstown Exhibition

The twenty-second annual exhibition to be held at Ormstown is over, and now we look to the preparations for a better show to be held in 1932. Yes, we all know where improvements can be made, but none know that better than do the untiring directors and manager of that Exhibition. The exhibition has advanced each year, and with every forward step it takes it just advances our district so much further. With the thousands of people going to this exhibition each year and hundreds of farmers coming from outside points it most certainly means more livestock sales for our local breeders. The livestock sales made at Ormstown Exhibition mean much to the exhibitors but other farmers in this territory also make sales on account of this exhibition. Such being the case it means every farmer has a direct interest in this Exhibition whether he be an exhibitor or not.

No doubt the President and Directors will be calling a general meeting of people interested in the welfare of this exhibition. It is your duty to attend any such meetings and lend it your assistance wherever possible. Don't try to shirk a task and hope someone else will do it, do the work willingly and well and you will be repaid in some manner or other, as has been done in the past. Just think for a moment what time Hugh Chambers has put into that exhibition. Mr. Chambers is not a farmer, not an exhibitor to win prizes, but he has the interests of the show and its successful attainment at heart and it is just through such unselfish and energetic individuals that such shows are built up. President R. R. Ness with all his unfavourable health conditions has ever lent assistance to the show. Even though sick and confined to his home for months at a time he has called meetings to be held in his home in order that Ormstown Exhibition might continue to advance. R. R. Ness has seen the inner workings of more great exhibitions than possibly any other individual in Canada, so it is but reasonable to believe that with such a guiding head at the helm, Ormstown Exhibition must succeed.

It would be an omission were we not to sight the efforts put forth by the other three directors of this Exhibition. Gilbert McMillan, the great Ayrshire breeder of Canada is a favorite amongst all breeders. His wisdom is ever sought by Ayrshire breeders and as Ayrshires predominate in this exhibition it is fortunate they have such a man as is Gilbert McMillan on the directorate. Peter Dickson and D. A. McCormick are two men who have come into the directorate in recent years, but not before they earned their spurs in the cattle and horse divisions accordingly. Mr. Dickson has made it his hobby to care for the cattle exhibitors and whilst he was doing this Mr. McCormick was working in the interests of the horsemen. It is little wonder that this show has succeeded and developed with such men as directors.

Mr. W. G. McGerrigle has been secretary and manager for a great many years, and has literally speaking grown up in the business. No matter what crops up in the way of a predicament he is equal to the occasion; the troubled waters are oiled and all goes on without a hitch. Mr. McGerrigle has the happy faculty of being able to get good workers about him and so it is that "many hands make light work."

Another fifty or so men and women are also found numbering in some one or other of the sub-committees. All committees are found to be carrying out their allotted task and that is the reason why Ormstown Exhibition is attaining greater success each year.

The officials of this Exhibition are worthy of much commendation and praise from everybody in this district, for few of us really considered what this exhibition means to the financial welfare of the farmers.

Sales Tax Affecting Milk Prices

When Premier Bennett, acting as Finance Minister, brought down his budget imposing the 4% sales tax, it is not likely he realized he was going to have so many protests made, as he is receiving. The farmers in Ontario who are producing milk for the Drimilk Company and Carnation Company at Simcoe, Courtland, Straffordville and Aylmer are up in arms over the tax. According to the new budget fresh milk, cream, cheese and butter are exempted from sales tax, but the sales tax is applicable to evaporated milk, condensed and powdered milk and ice cream. On top of this the factories will be obliged to pay 25c more per ton for coal. The factories have informed their patrons, possibly 1000 strong, that they will have to reduce the price of milk to the extent of 5c a hundred pounds. The prevailing price previous to the budget was $1.00 for 3.5 milk.

The farmers have been waiting upon the local members of parliament and the National Dairy Council to intercede in their behalf.

Taschereau Says — Elections on Day of Victory

Sunday last Premier Taschereau addressed a largely attended gathering at St. Raymond, in Portneuf county. It was generally expected he would intimate when the Quebec provincial elections would be held. The Premier stated that although the government had been in power for four years it had the privilege of remaining in office another year before going to the people. He plainly told the large gathering that the government would not go to the polls before any promises made had been fulfilled, and furthermore that that would be on the Day of Victory for the Liberal Government.

That promise means much to our district, for we can take from that, that the Caughnawaga bridge contract will be authorized and under way before the election. Perhaps we are also safe to state that the Ste. Martine agricultural school will be under the course of erection; but it is unfortunate we had not promises of financial assistance towards our needed Protestant and Roman Catholic boy schools in Huntingdon.

It is current topic about the streets that it is not the intention of the Bennett Government to proceed with the new public building to house the Huntingdon post office. Although tenders are being called for the erection of a new building upon the site purchased during the regime of the Liberal Government. One probable contractor was told it was little use going to the trouble of making a tender as it was not the intention of the Government to build the public building, but to purchase the O'Connor building, which we believe is not an adequate building.

The O'Connor building is a fine structure, well built but not suitably designed for a post office. $40,000 appeared in the estimates for the Huntingdon building, Huntingdon needs the building, then why not spend that money in Huntingdon?

Premier Taschereau intimated in his address, he was going to have his Government fulfill its pledges and promises, the Bennett Government has promised Huntingdon a new public building when it appropriated $40,000 and has submitted plans and specifications. If there is any foundation to the street rumor, that the new building will not be built in Huntingdon, it is indeed the duty of the Conservative party supporters to demand that this building be erected, as it is a necessity to Huntingdon.

Example

Every man has some power over others that is exercised without conscious effort on his part. It is a responsibility he cannot dodge. If he is a strong man, others will strive to emulate his strength. If he is a weak man, others, in passing, will shudder at the thought of being like him. Both serve the noble cause of uplift.

In almost every group, organization or community there is one man who walks his chosen way without thought for the preferences, opinions and will of others. He is a strong man; original, dominant, cocksure. If he has looked the world over and decided against it; if it is his custom to attribute the worst possible motives to all men; if he is, in short, a cynic, those who come within his influence are almost certain to find themselves sneering at mankind and calling the world a failure.

But if this strong man is a conservative with a well-lined nest and a conviction that all who advocate change or a disturbing of dividends are dangerous cranks who should be jailed or deported, those who associate with him soon learn to use his pet phrases in denunciation of dreamers and to feel a certain awe of money in large piles.

Therefore, since it is a certainty that the average man, who lacks a dominating personality, will be remade after the imagine of the strong men within whose orbit he moves, why shouldn't he exercise what little discretion he has in the matter and attach himself to men who now are what he would like to be?

When Germans Dislike Shows

Three hundred white mice and a quantity of stink bombs have been used by 500 National Socialists to stop a revue of "beauty queens" at the Palais Theater, Nuremberg, Germany. "Miss France," who entered to the music of "The Marseillaise," had already been banished by the management on account of an earlier protest. But it had not occurred to them that "Miss Germany," being dressed in tatters, to suggest that Germany is very poor, would cause offense. The protestants took the view that it was unpatriotic to present a shabby "Miss Germany" among smartly dressed young women representing other countries. The beauties of the stage ran in terror for the doors when the white mice scampered out of the open boxes which had been thrown among them, and the nauseating smell of the stink bombs made the women in the audience flee into the corridors.

Trial For Stabbing Dog

Arrested on a warrant sworn out by the superintendent of the Humane Society, Dr. Caroll Smith, prominent physician, Spokane, Wash., faced charges of stabbing a dog to death. Dr. Smith said the animal had attacked his two children and that in returning it to J. E. Croyle, from whom it had been purchased, he demanded assurance that it would not be sold to anyone with children. When Croyle refused to promise, Dr. Smith said he pierced the dog's heart with a knife.

Naming the Baby

When an English child was born in Paris recently the parents were surprised to learn that its name had to be chosen from an official list of "permitted" Christian names, and that names outside the list were banned. They protested—but there is a strong case for a censorship of names, as many unfortunates realize. Their parents had more enthusiasm than consideration, and gave them names like "Mafeking" or "Mesopotamia." There might also be some limit to the number of Christian names. In one case, which was revealed at Somerset House a few months ago, a woman was named Ann Bertha Cecilia Diana Emily Fanny Gertrude Hypatia Inez Jane Kate Louisa Maud Nora Ophelia Quince Rebecca Starkey Teresa Ulysses Venus Winifred Xenophon Yetta Zenus Pepper—one name for each letter of the alphabet.

Bull Likes Music

A bull on the farm of C. O. Ryan near Geneva, Ind., comes up daily from the rear of a field to a fence near the house and paws and bellows until Mrs. Ryan plays on the piano. After Mrs. Ryan has gone through her repertoire, the bull contentedly returns to the back of the field.

3 Wives at Once

Three women were divorced from the same man while their husband began a state prison sentence of from three to five years on a bigamy charge. Ralph Dunham, alias Kenneth Shannon of Springfield, Mass., the defendant, was sentenced by Judge Carl Foster in Superior court. His three wives sat together in the court room throughout the criminal term as one by one they received their divorce decrees.

Donkey Avenges Slaying

Anybody would have a hard time showing the natives that donkey connotes assininity. A villager named Liu, riding his donkey to Peiping, China, was killed by bandits. One of the slayers essayed to ride the animal. The donkey's homing instinct asserted itself. Straight to Liu's house he came in a hurry, the slayer on his back. The culprit confessed. Draped in red satin, the donkey was paraded through the village as gongs beat and banners flew.

She Wouldn't Get Supper

John Niznensky's wife refused to serve his supper in his home at Schenectady, N.Y., because he was late getting home from work, and the argument resulted in his shooting her to death. The 40-year-old factory worker fired at her at point blank range with a shotgun when she continued working in the garden while he called her to serve his meal. He submitted quietly to two policemen who heard the shot. He said he only hoped he would be permitted to attend the funeral. Mrs. Niznensky was 39. Arraigned in police court on a charge of murder in the first degree, Niznensky waived examination and was remanded to jail pending presentation of his case to the grand jury.

A Cactus as Bouquet

A bride in Warsaw astounded her guests by carrying a cactus as a bouquet at her wedding. It was explained the cactus suggested a warning to the bridegroom to treat his wife considerately, for the cactus is provided with means of self-defense.

Unbelievable Superstition

Almost unbelievable superstition was found in Zipser Neudorf, Czechoslovakia. A widow named Andrejcak who had a love affair with a railroad employe, Joseph Koery, thought she detected signs that her admirer's affection was cooling. On the advice of a gypsy she went one night to the cemetery and disinterred the body of a child which had been buried the day before. A gendarme meeting her accidentally on her way home arrested her. On her confession that she intended to use the body for secret ceremonies incidental to the preparation of a love potion, both she and the gypsy who had advised her were committed for trial.

New Automobile Becomes Boat

Capt. Geoffrey Malians of London, has invented a car which will travel on road, rail and water. The car has two sets of wheels, one of which fits the standard rail guages. It has bags under the running boards and under the fore and aft bumpers which can be filled with air in one minute. A good-sized paddle is attached to the back axle. Capt. Malians has successfully tested his car on rivers, roads and railroads. With several companions, he will start out shortly on a 12,000-mile trip to the wilds. He expects to cross the channel in his car on his way to France.

$50 Fine For Swearing

Henry Fields, 36, of Buffalo, N. Y., found it does not pay to express one's feelings by the use of profanity, especially within earshot of Patrolman Ernest Palmer. Fields was arrested by Palmer, who charged the former used profane language. City Judge Patrick J. Keeler fined Fields $50 on the swearing charge and $100 for allegedly resisting arrest and for disturbing the peace.

Suicide on 100th Birthday

The oldest resident of Limoges, France, Madame Marie Marageix, was due to celebrate her 100th birthday. Friends and relatives came to celebrate. They found her dead. She had committed suicide.

Owls Fancied Pigeons

Another monkey-faced owl was captured recently at Port Chester, N.Y. The driver of a truck found it in the cupola of a fire engine house when he ascended to find out why pigeons had abandoned the place. He threw his sweater over the owl and captured it at the expense of a single scratch on his hand. The bird probably will be given to the New York Zoological Society, as were five which were caught there a week ago. Millar discovered that not all the pigeons had abandoned the cupola in time; the remains of at least 100 of them on which the owls had fed, littered the place.

Damages to Firebug

Search for a person believed to be a pyromaniac who is held responsible for starting a series of fires which have caused more than $100,000 damage in Dutchess County has been redoubled in an effort to apprehend him before more damage is done. Seven fires were reported in two nights among a line of Summer camps near Silver Lake. Authorities said there was little doubt but that they were of incendiary origin. No clue has been uncovered to the person who set fire to three brickyards in this section. Eight buildings were destroyed in the Brockway and Schwarzler yards north of Beacon, N.Y.

A Stitch in Time

When he was invited to go with his friend, Frank Nemecik, to see a girl, Mary Warnus, Sam Basgiorno of Chicago declined as he had a hole in his trousers. Frank said Mary would be glad to fix it for him. She declined, however, and one word led to another. Frank drew a pistol and fired at Mary, but missed. The bullet struck Sam in the fleshy part of his leg, puncturing Sam's pants once where it went in and once where it went out. That made three rips in Sam's best trousers.

Austria's Memorial Organ

Austria, although she is almost the only ex-belligerent country not to have buried in state an "unknown soldier," now has a unique war memorial, unveiled to her fallen heroes on May 3 last. It consists of a huge organ which has been built into the rocky hill of Kufstein, crowned by the medieval fortress of Geroldstein. The organ, which is electrically operated, has 1,813 pipes, twenty-six registers, two manuals and one pedal. The keyboard is being placed in the court yard of the fortress, in the open air, below the so-called Burgerturm. The organ's notes can be heard many miles away along the valley of the Inn and the Kaiser Tal, down which they are carried as through a megaphone, and will re-echo far across the German frontier.

When A Goat Saw Itself

Looking into the window of the farmhouse of its master, Peter Hartman, of Theresa, Wis., a goat, saw its own reflection, and it was not flattering. The goat lunged head-first at the image, crashed through the window and landed astride a washing machine where the astounded Mrs. Hartman was working. The family dog chased the goat outside.

Policeman Raids Own Club

The Manufacturers' Club, in the heart of Philadelphia's most aristocratic hotel section, was raided by a liquor squad headed by L. B. Schofield, safety director, and hundreds of quarts of assorted liquors were seized. The city's wealthiest and most prominent men are members of the club, including John Monaghan, district attorney, whose office will have to prosecute the alleged liquor violators. Schofield, a member until the raid, handed his resignation to the managers as his men entered.

Liszt Rewarded Audience

In one of the smaller towns of Germany, the great pianist, Liszt, once found in the hall where he was to give a recital a very small audience. Stepping to the front of the platform, he announced: "Ladies and gentlemen, the audience which is absent deserves to be punished, and you deserve to be rewarded. I invite you all to dine with me at my hotel, and after dinner I shall play to you there." And he did so.

When Guests Brought Coffins

A custom of the Middle Ages was referred to at a party to inmates of Norwich Great Hospital, a hostel for aged men and women. When the inmates were admitted years ago, each had to bring a coffin. It was found, however, that the coffin was used as a cupboard in the cubicles, and when some of the old people died the coffin was worn out. Nowadays, instead of a coffin, each man and woman takes in £1 to provide a shroud.

Miss Lets Driver Miss

A "miss" in the motor of his automobile probably saved the life of Charles Kinkade of Equality, Ill. When the motor developed trouble Kinkade drove the car to a garage. The trouble was caused by five sticks of dynamite wired to the motor. The dynamite would have exploded had the motor been heated.

The Charm Vanished

Marvellous efficiency was shown by a machine that turned out five dollar bills as fast as its operators could feed it green paper. It was demonstrated to Mrs. Joseph Lepir of Clinton, Ind., when she was on a visit to Chicago. But when she took it home she found that all of its magic powers had vanished, she said, in asking Chicago police to find the two men who accept the $8,500 she withdrew from her bank to pay for the contraption.

Motor Smash Causes Thirst

Ladislaw Almassy of Budapest, who, while driving an auto, met with an accident resulting in the death of his employer, has won the lawsuit which he brought against the heirs of his late boss. He claimed the accident afflicted him with an unquenchable thirst and that unless he used costly preventive medicines he would be obliged to drink twenty-eight pints of beer a day. The court decided "that must not be," and awarded him a pension of $44. a month.

Bandit Poses as Detective

The little city of Hawk Point, Mo., is puzzled at the daring which led two men posing as a check forger and a detective to get into the cashier's cage before they drew their revolvers and robbed the Peoples Bank of $3,500 in cash. Seven men and women were bound and forced to lie on the floor while the robbery went on. A third man waited in an automobile outside while the robbery took place. One of the bandits went inside the bank and attempted to cash a check. The second bandit appeared while he was attempting the check forgery. "I'm just in time," he said, flashing a badge under his lapel. "This man's a forger. I've been following him from St. Louis." Before the teller could speak, both the bandits pushed their way inside the cage. The detective drew his revolver and the robbery was on.

Re-surface old walls and ceilings with Gyproc

HERE is a wallboard that does not burn, made from gypsum rock into sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and 3/8 of an inch thick. It is used for interior walls, ceilings and partitions.

As well as being fire-resistant, it has structural strength, insulation value and is draught and vermin-proof. Use Gyproc Joint Filler for sealing the joints between the tall, broad sheets of wallboard.

When you are "doing over" any room in the house or adding new ones in the attic or basement, use Gyproc for walls and ceilings because you can nail it directly over the old surface. Gyproc is also an excellent base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

Gyproc is Canada's pioneer non-burning gypsum wallboard. Ask your nearest dealer for full details and a Gyproc direction sheet. Or write us for the FREE booklet, "Building and Remodelling with Gyproc". 374E

HOWICK WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WINS AT ORMSTOWN

Handicraft Work Displayed in Howick and Huntingdon Booths Most Outstanding

The booth in the Industrial Building occupied by the Sisters of Jesus-Marie who conduct the School of Domestic Science at Ste. Martine, contained a remarkable display of high class needle work and weaving. A small weaving machine was set up and in operation, proving of great interest to a large number of visitors. The decorations were tastefully carried out with crepe paper and an assortment of beautifully made artificial flowers. Sofa cushions made from homespun were an interesting feature and many useful and decorative articles as well as boxes of homemade candy were offered for sale. In addition to this display of fancy articles entries were made in nearly every class and a substantial sum will be received in prize money.

A fact worthy of particular emphasis and to be recalled to the attention of all those who had the opportunity and pleasure of viewing this exhibit is, that the entire display consisted of articles made by the pupils of the School of Domestic Science at Ste. Martine. Sister Agnes, who is in charge of the Domestic Science Department, is to be highly congratulated on such an excellent exhibit.

Women's Institutes Exhibit

The six booths at the north end of the Hall were occupied by the Chateauguay-Huntingdon Women's Institutes and offered many novel features of interest. These displays were on a competitive basis and three prizes were offered for "Best Display of Home Handicraft." The judges were Miss Leblanc and Miss Methôt of the Cercle des Fermières, Quebec, and placed the awards late on Thursday afternoon in the order named: Howick Huntingdon, and Aubrey-Riverfield.

One of the principal features of the Howick booth was an elaborate display of manufactured goods from the Brupbacher Silk Mills, and the Montreal Cotton Company, Valleyfield. Part of one side and the windows were draped with samples and an assortment of multicolored chiffons fluttered in the breeze in the lower windows. A window seat below rather insisted on the importance of home handicraft by supporting a patchwork quilt and several fancy cushions. An assortment of Bronze work and samples of paper from Valleyfield Mills were also displayed. On the back wall five hooked rugs and some woven rugs were displayed. An interesting point being two scenic rugs of exactly the same pattern but worked in different colors, thus affording an opportunity for comparisons in color effects. A table in the corner literally groaned under the weight of delicious looking pies, cakes, buns, shortbread, honey, maple sugar, and canned fruit of all descriptions. Several fine quilts and spreads decorated the remaining wall space, while a line was filled with smaller fancy articles of fine handwork.

A reminder of the past was a painting of the Chateauguay Block House while a definite link with "Other Days and Other Ways" was established when Mrs. David Cairns of Brysons and Mrs. Alex. Younie gave a demonstration of carding wool and spinning. The ladies looked very picturesque in old fashioned white bonnets and attracted a large crowd of interested spectators.

A canary bird in a cage added a lively note to the picture and we learned from Mrs. John Howden, who is a bird enthusiast, that she has 36 canaries at her home in St. Louis de Gonzague. Mrs. Howden stated that she sold two this week and shipped them to St. John, N.B.

A tray made of wood, beautifully inlaid, the work it was said, of Mr. Robert Kerr, of Howick, was included in this very complete and interesting exhibit.

The Howick branch of the W.I. are to be congratulated upon the energy and enthusiasm which obtained them the award of first prize exhibit. The committee in charge included Miss Macdonald, Mrs. Howden, Mrs. D. Tait, Mrs. Robt. Anderson and Mrs. Jas. Hamilton.

The Huntingdon Exhibit.—

The booth occupied by the Huntingdon W.I. was next and directly opposite the main aisle of the building. The theme of this exhibit was based on a Living Room Scene. The windows in the background were partly filled in with blue paper and the upper portions were hung with two hand crocheted door panels in filet pattern. Side drapes of blue crepe paper effectively suggested the idea of a furnished home. A fireplace with a hooked rug completed the main background. This rug attracted a good deal of attention owing to the fact that it was a copy of the famous picture of the True Type Holstein-Friesian Cow. Many spectators did, in fact, mistake the rug for a painting. At the request of Mr. J. D. Gale, a director of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada, the rug has been loaned to him for exhibition at a field day in Guelph, Ont. this week. Other handsome hooked rugs filled in the remainder of the background and covered the floor. A water color painting by Mrs. J. T. Ewart showed a familiar Huntingdon scene, that of the river and rapids opposite the point at Shirriff's Island. The side walls were hung with handsome quilts and a cut work tea cloth, as well as many fancy articles. A very attractive feature to the younger visitors was the beautiful doll belonging to Marjorie Clouston dressed in that young lady's own christening dress, showing the beautiful drawnwork by her grandmother. The doll also displayed a knitted sweater, bonnet and bootees and reclined in a cleverly constructed handicraft chair. A tea table was covered with a beautiful lunch cloth of linen and crochet and set with hand-painted china. A cedar hope chest used to transport the fine ware was loaned by Mr. J. B. Carr.

An inlaid end table for a chesterfield and a tabouret were greatly admired, also a wood box constructed from discarded fruit packing crates. These were all the work of Mr. C. K. Morris, father of Mrs. Adam Sellar and Mrs. Geo. T. Hunter.

The most outstanding attraction of this exhibit appeared to be the handsome inlaid wardrobe, the hanging lamp and model for an illuminated radio case, all the work of Mr. J. B. Cooper. A great number of people from all over the continent were deeply impressed with the novelty and beauty of this work. Mr. Cooper has made a gift of the cabinet and lamp which were on display to his daughter, Mrs. W. J. Smellie, of Huntingdon, and they are now in her possession. If suggestions received from several different admirers are acted upon it will not be surprising to hear of this work being in demand for exhibition in metropolitan centres in the near future. A prominent gentleman in the livestock world and former member of the Ontario Government insisted on leaving an order for a duplicate of the wooden lamp shade. Huntingdon exhibit was awarded second prize.

The committee responsible for the Huntingdon display included Mrs. W. J. Goundrey, Mrs. Wallace Merson Miss Alice Goodfellow and Mrs. W. L. Carr. This committee is very grateful to all those who assisted in loaning material and gave active assistance, especially Mrs. R. A. Arthur and Mr. J. Cooper.

Aubrey-Riverfield Exhibit.—

Aubrey-Riverfield exhibit was greatly admired for the quality of the work and its orderly arrangement. The background consisted of fancy quilts and a crochet spread. Across the top was a frescoe made with crochet and tatted doilies placed on a strip of yellow crepe paper. Several very pretty pillows filled in the corners and hanging from a shelf in the rear were five pair of pillow cases in colored embroidery. There were a number of embroidered towels and luncheon sets, including one in blue applique, especially designed for a round table. A bureau set in linen and Irish crochet and a sampler cushion top in wool were also noticed. A card table was used to display a luncheon set and hand-made baskets decorated with paper flowers. Baskets of the same design were used along with blue and yellow paper streamers to decorate the front of the booth. Another table was prepared for a card game displaying four hand painted cigarette dishes. A very fine example of home handicraft in this exhibit was an inlaid stand, the work of the late Mr. James Logan, and now owned by Mrs. Andrew Bennie.

The committee in charge included Mrs. Chester Orr, Mrs. Andrew Bennie, Mrs. Gordon Austin, Mrs. John Gruer, Mrs. J. Bruce and Mrs. Angell. Aubrey-Riverfield received third prize.

Other Institutes exhibiting were Franklin Centre, Hemmingford and Dundee and all had excellent displays of handicraft. Miss Helen Marlin, Secretary of the Hemmingford Branch, remained in Ormstown during the show in charge of their exhibit.

One interesting feature of the competition would appear to be that the W.I. recognizes that men can also add to the comfort and beauty of the home and find useful occupation in old age if they become interested in handicraft. The three winning exhibits all featured examples of work that could be done by father as well as the more familiar variety designated merely as "Women's Work," in the catalogues.

The committee in charge of the entire exhibit on the top floor of the new Industrial Building was Chairman, Mr. P. N. Apil, Miss L. Walsh Mrs. D. A. McCormick, Mrs. Robt. Roy, Miss W. J. Murphy, and Mrs. Alfred Greig.

All the classes in the fancy work section seemed to be overflowing with entries. Someone stated there were 110 quilts and the hooked rugs covered three long tables, knee deep. Our heartiest congratulations go to Mrs Geo. Moore of Huntingdon, under these circumstances, as winner of a hooked rug.

HOLIDAY?

We place a question mark after holiday because it would be interesting if each one who reads this far would say to himself what he thinks a holiday is. We have another reason for the query, because we are anxious to know what will be the results of the holiday.

Holidays are excellent. Everyone should have a chance to get away from his regular task, and this includes the housewife who has the hardest task of all. The break from the usual routine of life is a good physical and mental tonic. Holidays provide the time for recuperation and storing up of energy.

We are not going to attempt to plan your holiday for you. There are great difference in people and what appeals to one offers no attractions for others. The man who is fond of fishing cannot understand why everyone does not enthuse about rising at daybreak and going miles to catch fish. The golfer is sure that his game affords the one real holiday, and the young people are amused at their elder's idea of a good time.

Holidays should mean a good time and all we have to suggest is that a bit of planning beforehand will not interfere with the good time, and it will prevent some of the occurrences which are apt to spoil a holiday.

It is certainly not a good holiday if you develop typhoid fever when you get back home. It would have been much better had you asked ahead of time about the water supply, or to have boiled or chlorinated the water you used if you were not sure of its purity. The clear stream or the sparkling spring may be contaminated with typhoid germs—Why take a chance?

Sunshine is good. A coat of tan is a coat of health. Over-exposure to the sun, however, leads to serious discomfort from sunburn, and if excessive, may cause heat prostration. Better, to go slowly and to be holidaying every day of your vacation than to spent several days in misery, shut out from the fun because you overdid exposure to the sun the first day or two.

There is really not much consistency about the parent who carefully safeguards his children at home and then, during vacation, exposes them to any danger that comes along because of some peculiar idea that disease is unknown in the country and that you become healthy just by living there. The country is a fine place but disease germs are found there just as they are elsewhere. The tuberculous cows live on the farm, and if your children drink their milk while you are in the country, they will get tuberculosis just as surely as if they used that milk in the city. In most cities the milk is pasteurized and made safe. It is just as necessary to take this precaution in the country. You cannot tell from the appearance of a cow whether or not she is tuberculous.

Do not spoil your holiday by being over-fussy about thing, but, on the other hand, do not spoil it by failing to give some attention to such important matters as water, milk, and food supplies.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Ed. Note—The paragraph referring to tuberculosis in milk might be practically overlooked for our district is a T. B. free area.

Sidelights of Ormstown Exhibition

That our exhibition is extending its field for those attending is evidenced by the fact that on Wednesday four agronomists from below Quebec accompanied by J. A. Ste. Marie and 44 farmers motored to the exhibition. The party came in 12 autos and were directed by J. N. Albert, inspector of agronomes east of Quebec. The party visited Oka and a number of farms in the District before coming to Ormstown.

On the same day forty farmers and agronomists from Berthier came to Ormstown in a bus.

From the Lachute district at least 75 people were at the Show on Thursday. The Lachute exhibition is at present going on and concludes on Saturday. It is to be hoped a number of our farmers will see fit to acknowledge the visit of the Lachute people by visiting Lachute this week. Friday is the big day at Lachute Fair.

Three Pickpockets Caught

Four pickpockets were in operation on Thursday. Messrs. Charette, Sam Geddes and Robert McDougall had pockets picked. Mr. LeMesurier, the manager of the Bank of Montreal caught one of the pickpockets in the act of picking Mr. Charette's pocket of $23. The pickpocket had an accomplice with him and he shoved the money to him quickly before he was caught by Mr. LeMesurier. With the co-operation of the two provincial police three men were arrested on the charge of pickpocketing. They were disrobed in the secretary's office, but no money was found. The fourth party escaped with the cash. The accused were taken to Valleyfield gaol, and it is said they will likely be convicted upon circumstantial evidence. The accused said they came from St. John, N. B., and one from Montreal.

$300. Worth of Gravel Spread

With all the mud on the grounds on Monday and Tuesday gravel hauling never ceased and by Wednesday the grounds were in a favourable condition. It is said that over $300. worth of gravel was spread. Ormstown Exhibition has so often been affected by rain it might be well to prepare for having the main roadways covered with tarvia.

Cattle Judging

This year the grade cattle were judged on Wednesday and the purebreds on Thursday and Friday. After being once tried it is evident the former method is preferable.

The Free Attractions

Staging the free attractions at one end of the arena is not wholly satisfactory. Many people found it very hard to see the acts. especially if seated far away from the stage. Another year it might be well to double up the programme by having an act going on in both ends of the arena at the same time. If the attendance can't see all the acts at one time it will mean so much more of an inducement to them to attend the show for a second performance. We believe the actors do not wish to put on two acts at one time; but who is paying them; surely the directors can have a say in the matter.

Running Race Applauded

For the first time in the history of the Ormstown Exhibition a running race was staged. It proved entertaining and successful in every respect. Running races will be the coming attraction for the track exhibition.

Greater Display For Industrial Hall

For the first year the display of food, art, needlework and flowers was very gratifying. In future more classes will have to be made and thereby have a still greater showing. With such a beautiful hall for an horticultural show it is to be hoped this fall will see a big flower and vegetable show arranged. With a big display on the top floor and market booths on the ground floor for farmers to market apples and vegetables and flowers, etc., it could surely be made a profitable and worthwhile show. Ormstown is the logical center for a district fall show.

Publicity For the Exhibition

Every year finds our great exhibition getting greater publicity and larger attendances. We want the advertising, so in future wo should endeavour to form a publicity bureau, with a small room provided with a number of typewriters and a telegraph key and an informed attendant. Ormstown Exhibition would soon become more widely known if such a service were extended its press.

Hon. Honoré Mercier Supports Show

On Thursday when the Hon. Honoré Mercier attended the show, he congratulated the directorate upon the success they had made of Ormstown Exhibition. He told before the members of the Quebec press gallery, who were his guests, how this show came into being 23 years ago. The directors are particularly grateful towards attaining Government financial assistance for the buildings, particularly the Industrial Building just erected. Mr. Mercier said he did not think it would be very many years before other buildings would be required, and he assured the directors he would be ever willing to do his utmost for the upbuilding of this great livestock exhibition of eastern Canada. (Applause.)

BLOSSOMING ORCHARDS

After a week of showers the lightly veiled sun glows potent and compelling. The cloud drift blows from the west, the green meadow mist lifts, revealing a greener mist of tender leaves. An oriole, breaking into song, queries: "Will you? Will you really, really, truly?" and a meadow lark answers: "Spring o' the year; spring o' the year."

The woods and lanes are astir with the mysterious whisperings of the opening buds; the grass has grown deep in the fields, hides the fading violet, saying as it closes over them: "Sleep softly, I will protect you." Ceres, who has been laggard for weeks, has suddenly awakened to her duty, as if Pomona, anxious for her harvest, had roughly shaken her. The garden is blazing with a flame of late tulips; bizarres, byblooms, flakes, and parrots, with fringed and twisted petals. The primulas show many hues from gold to deepest crimson with a yellow centre, and mingle their perfume with the various Narcissi, the double, whose blooms rival the Gardenia, the trumpet major, and the pheasant's eye—the poet's Narcissus. Branches of amethyst lilacs hang over the gray wall, and as they sway to and fro, the bees, laden too deeply with honey, fall drowsily to the ground. Pear and cherry and plum blossomed together this year, and the ground is still powdered with a wealth of their corollas.

Look through the vista before you, over the fields and up the hillside, where the tree tops meet the sky; there are the blooming apple orchards foam-white, or rosy as Aurora's finger-tip . . . .

Follow the grass-grown road that lies between the garden and the farm. The orchard breath floats on before, goes with you, then straying, follows you, pervading everything; and here and there, beside the very wheel-tracks, you will find the orchard's offspring, the wild crab-apple tree, and the orchard birds become more shy, and wrapt in reverie, as if overshadowed by the mood of the wood birds.

Down the road the cattle saunter homeward from the pasture, and the orchard fragrance comes retrospectively, like a refrain that lingers in the memory. Precious are the orchards, the sunlight, and the home-going cattle, for they warm the heart.—Mabel Osgood Wright, in "The Friendship of Nature."

CARE OF THE GRINDSTONE

When grinding tools of any kind, they should be traversed over the full width of the stone, to prevent grooves being worn in the stone. Any grindstone, from continued use, will wear out round, as the stone is not the same hardness and density at all points. When this condition becomes severe, it is impossible to do good work and the stone should be dressed. Truing is done by placing a block of wood across the frame so that the upper side of the block is slightly above the center of the stone. A piece of ½-inch pipe is then rested on the block with the end touching the stone. As the stone is revolved, the pipe is rolled back and forth on the block, the lower edge of the pipe cutting away the stone.

If the stand carries a trough under the stone, the water should be drained when the stone is not in use; permitting the under side of the stone to rest in the water will render it brittle and reduce the density at this point, so that it will wear unevenly. Though a grindstone should never be used dry, it is better to apply water, drop by drop, to the working face.

If the natural hardness of the stone varies considerably in spots, so that it rapidly wears out of true, it should be first thoroughly dried. The soft spot is then brought to the top and brushed with boiled linseed oil. The stone will rapidly absorb the oil at first, but the process must be continued until the stone is saturated. The oil should then be left to dry for several hours, when it may be used immediately.

Covered Wagon Days

In the days of the pioneer treks across the plains courage was required to face the 2,000 miles stretching bleakly in front of them. A typical train consisted of one wagon, "two yoke of four-year-old steers and one yoke of cows." In front of them were rivers, mountains, thirst, hunger, privation and the pestilence that overtook migration hordes. Soon they were in a column of wagons said to be 500 miles long—all moving toward the west, their occupants without proper food, dependent upon unhealthful streams for water, enveloped in an untolerable dust. In calm weather the dust would rise so thick at times that the lead team of oxen could not be seen from the wagon. Then, again, the steady flow of wind would hurl the dust and sand like fine hail, with force enough to sting the face and hands.

BEAUTIFUL LAWNS AND HOW TO MAKE THEM

(Experimental Farms Note)

Of all the factors which combine to form a pleasing settling for a home, the lawn is one of the most important. Probably no other single factor has so great an influence on the appearance of a property than the condition of the lawn. It is the prime essential without which the pleasing effect of flowers and shrubs is almost entirely lost.

A good lawn depends to a considerable degree upon a proper beginning It rarely results from a slipshod of hastily preparing the soil and scattering a little grass seed upon it. A lawn is a fairly permanent creation, and will amply repay the owner for any extra effort expended in its preparation.

The site is usually fixed as is also the type of soil, and unfortunately the latter is often very poor,consisting of the sub-soil removed in the excavation of the cellar. In all grading work, an extra effort should be made to keep the surface and subsoil seperate. After the rough grading has been completed, the entire lawn may be given a coating of three or four inches of the good soil.

The ground should be brought to a perfectly uniform grade, making sure that there is a good drainage away from the foundation of the building, and that there are no pockets left in which the water will collect during the winter. It should be thoroughly compacted and rolled with an ordinary lawn roller, raked lightly in order to procure a satisfactory seed bed, seeded then raked lightly again and finally rolled.

Regarding seed, a mixture which has been found very satisfactory at the Experimental Station, Fredericton, N. B. consists of 70 pounds Kentucky Blue Grass and 2 pounds white Dutch Clover per acre. For small lawns, this is equivalent to approximately one ounce to every 3½ square yards. Seeding should be done as early as possible. in the spring and on a calm day.

Mowing should commence when grass is about two inches high, and continue throughout the season in order to produce a compact thick type of turf.

As to fertilizer treatment, almost any lawn will respond to a light application of a good commercial fertilizer of approximately a 4-8-6 analysis, applied at the rate of one ounce per square yard. This is especially important in the renovation of old, worn-out lawns. In such cases, two or three light applications per year of a thoroughly decayed compost will also prove very beneficial.—L. C. Young, Dominion Experimental Station, Fredericton, N. B.

Crane - - - - - Water Supply System

Hydraulic engineers of wide experience have devoted years to perfecting the design and construction of Crane System in order to provide owners with a water supply that will give many years of faithful service with the minimum of supervision and cost.

By means of the positive automatic control, pressure is maintained in the tank at all times without attention. When this pressure drops to a fixed point, the control switch closes automatically, and the sturdy pump, driven by a dependable motor, quickly raises the pressure to normal and stops automatically. This assure an abundant supply of water for all farm uses.

Suicide Percentage Highest on West Coast

California and British Columbia Highest in U.S. and Canada. Quebec is Lowest

People commit suicide for a variety of reasons, but it is a safe assumption that most who do are mentally deranged, at least temporarily.

According to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, 748 persons took their own lives in Canada during 1928, the last year for which figures are available; and it is estimated that there are annually 15,000 suicides in the United States. The suicide rate per 100,000 of population in Canada is 7.8; and for the United States, 12.1. Strangely enough, both in Canada and the United States, the farther west one goes the greater chance there is of one's committing suicide. San Diego, California, has a rate of 39.6, and Los Angeles, 35.7, as against an average for all American cities of 18.2. This may be because so many invalids go to California in search of health; they have nothing but death to look forward to when this hope fails. British Columbia, which is not so well advertised from a health standpoint as California, has a rate of 17.02—the highest in Canada; and Alberta is next with 13.9. The lowest rate in Canada, 3.7, is in Quebec. Despite the fact that Nova Scotia, with a rate of 3.8, is next, the Quebec rate may be attributed largely to the influence of religion, since in other Roman Catholic countries the percentage of suicides is also low. The Jewish religion, however, does not seem to act as a deterrent; in Prussia, for instance, the rate for Jews is 8.3, while for Protestants it is 5. and for Catholics, only 2.1.

Men are more prone to suicide than women, in the ratio of about three to one, and single persons seem more susceptible than the married. Men show a preference for firearms and women for poison. Negroes apparently think twice when suicide is contemplated; in the state of Georgia the rate for whites is 9.6 while for the colored population it is only 1.6, and this ratio holds for other states.

It may seem strange to some that the Irish Free State has the lowest rate of any white country, and that the next is Mexico; but here again religion probably plays its part, for the ratio in the Irish Free State is about 3, while for Northern Ireland it is just double that.

There does not seem to be any evidence to support the common belief that suicide among students and other young people is becoming more prevalent. People suicide at all ages, but the average in the State of New York, which may be taken as also a fair estimate for Canada, is 46.1 years for men and 40.6 for women.

Nothing much can be done at present to reduce this serious human wastage. Like other evidences of mental disorder, the situation which leads to suicide is usually of fairly long standing, and is the outcome of one's way of living. When every individual is taught to face the facts of life and to meet issues squarely as they arise, the number of those who choose the suicide way out or who slip into some form of mental disease will undoubtedly be reduced but there does not seem to be any other remedy.

Brazilian Nut Pickers Victimized by Buyers

The business of gathering brazil nuts in the Amazon jungles resolves itself into a skin game for the natives concerned when the traders, who follow the harvest, arrive with their boatloads of rum and trinkets.

Near a group of huts on the river bank the trade boat stops, writes Hugo Franklin in the Boston Transcript, and there the merchandise is displayed in an improvised "store." The trader sits, like the spider in its web, behind a battery of jugs of rum, surrounded by a few pieces of bright colored goods, tobacco, bags of sale, cans of kerosene, sometimes even cases of cheap beer.

The nut pickers could make a good profit on the long trip up the river to the nut forests if only they would shun the trader, but little by little their crop piles up beside the store. At the end of the season the poor natives owe money to the traders, and, unhappy and penniless, offer to pay the debt by helping to load the nuts on the boat and work their way back to civilization.

Mental Health

By D. M. LeBOURDAIS

Director, Division of Education, Canadian National Committe for Mental Hygiene

A correspondent writes about her brother. He was bright at school, she says, but quit at 13 when he was in the 8th grade. During the next few years he worked at a variety of occupations, sticking to none very long. His chief characteristic was a dislike for mixing with others. If there were visitors he would hide. Then he became more peculiar still. He would go for long periods without speaking to anyone; he shaved off all his hair; would light paper and throw it about the house; drank peroxide, hair oil, etc. Finally he was taken to a mental hospital. She seems puzzled by the fact that, at times, he could talk quite sensibly, and wonders if he were not himself largely responsible for his own condition—if he is not more to be blamed than pitied.

To determine the exact causes of human behaviour is extremely difficult, and even the most apparently simple case requires a thorough study of all factors involved. Nevertheless, in this case, it is probably safe to say that the boy himself was least to blame. In the first place there is heredity. His physical and mental equipment were thrust on him, so to speak. His nature was the result of a complicated set of factors stretching back into the past. As a child he was open to impressions on all sides, and naturally the first were stamped on him by father, mother, sisters, brothers, and others in the community. He attended a school and was subjected to a system of education which was little concerned in him as an individual. Later, while still a child, he drifted into the industrial world to fit in as best he could. And meanwhile he was passing through the most critical period in life—the age of puberty, when sex and its implications overshadow all else.

Most of us run the gauntlet of all these more or less successfully, but a great many fail in one way or another. In the past, when one has failed, we have tried to hold him responsible. We have blamed him and overlooked the environmental factors which are much more to blame. Now it is coming to be realized that we must hold the community responsible; and that the community can meet this responsibility only by providing an environment—home, school, occupation, and other social relationships—which will produce the least percentage of misfits. This is a big job, but nothing less will do.

(Information on any point not covered here will be given in later issues if you will address your questions to "Mental Health," 111 St. George St., Toronto, Ontario.)

A boy, aged five, was told that if he was very good he might soon have a little brother or sister. He became greatly excited over the prospect.

One day he saw nurse with some tiny woollen boots.

"I know who those are for, nurse, don't I?" he said; and then: "But wouldn't it be a sell for you if it has boots and stockings on when it arrives!"

VARIATION IS SPICE

One may travel up and down a city and find no two houses exactly alike unless they be members of a row of dwellings.

The different makes and models of automobiles number into the hundreds.

Women insist that their dresses, coats and hats be exclusive, but neither will two men be found in identical habiliment.

What is true of houses, automobiles and clothes is also true of breakfast foods, furniture, shoes and virtually all of man's possessions.

The reason is obvious. No two people have identical tastes. That which one finds attractive repels another. The person whose discernment you criticise probably thinks even less of yours.

Life would be a monotonous existence but for this conflict of tastes. Nothing bores like uniformity. What interest would the world hold for humanity if every house was built alike, if the choice of the ten million was good enough for the world, if the wardrobe of the modern woman had as little variation as Eve's, if what one wanted everybody wanted?

The monthly meeting of the United Church W.M.A. met on Friday, June 5th at the usual hour, 2 p.m. Mrs. Donald Morrison presided and thirty-two ladies responded to the roll call with a verse containing the word "Joy." Mrs. Edgar McKell led the devotional exercises choosing as her subject, "Christian Stewardship." Mrs. Bruce Ness gave some very interesting current events. Miss Barbara Morris then gave a talk on Japan. Some 400 years ago Christianity was first introduced into Japan by Francois Savier, and at that early time one million converts were made. After a time the Japanese turned against Christianity and for about 200 years Christians were persecuted until the new religion died out. About 70 years ago it was again revived by our Protestant missionaries who have laboured among these people ever since, gaining many converts. All felt very grateful to Miss Morris for having given us such a comprehensive and interesting survey of the work done in Japan during these years.

BETTY LEARNS HOUSEKEEPING

It is a good part of nursery training to give even small children one or two little jobs to do each day to "help mother." Something really necessary and useful is best, because children are quick to find out whether what they are asked to do is a bit of real work or merely something invented to keep them quiet. The real work will not be very well done at first, but the face that it is attempted is important. Children like to feel they are really helping and that something actually depends upon them.

Betty loves to play the small housewife. She has been provided with a little apron "just like mother's"—another good idea, because children like to dress the part. Two pockets hold a little duster and small brush. Then when mother is dusting the drawing-room Betty's job is to dust the legs of the furniture and one or two simple things within her reach. She is expected to do her job properly, and knows that any dust left will be to her own discredit.

John, a year younger, also has a few household tasks which he is expected to perform. These vary with the season, but something to help the wheels of home along is expected from both children.

At present John fetches up the bundles of kindling wood, and every evening before bedtime he places one in each fender to get thoroughly dry. He seldom forgets; if he does, seeing the smoky, uncomfortable business of trying to get a cheerful blaze with damp wood is his punishment. It is important to allow children to notice the effects of their failures. It develops their sense of responsibility.

Girl's father: "My daughter tells me you are worth over ten thousand pounds."

Suitor: "That's right. Expectation of life, thirty-five years—salary, three hundred. Thirty-five by three hundred—well, you can work it out for yourself."

"The Secret of Margaret Yorke"

By Kathleen Norris

Copyrighted 1931

"My darling—my own boy!" she said over and over again.

"Margar, I read the whole page, nine words," Jim said gently and anxiously. "I read one word with seven letters in it."

She looked at him as if she did not hear him, yet with a painful intensity.

"It was 'baskets'," Jim further stated, expectantly.

"That is wonderful, my darling," Margaret said then, not moving her eyes. But when he had gone back to his book she opened the telegram again and spread it on her knee and read, over and over, the brief strange message.

"Party in whom you are interested died this morning, Roosevelt Hospital 8.15," she read. "Will wire you more fully tomorrow. Arranging my affairs to leave at once for California to protect your interests."

It was signed merely with the letter "T."

The giddiness had passed, but Margaret felt dazed and weak.

It was over; the bitter struggle that had broken her heart, that had eaten away six of the sweetest years of her life, that had taught her to fear and to hate.

He was dead; the man she had married on that bewildering and exciting day six years ago. The man whose incoherent words, whose thick breath, whose insistent arms, had sickened her again and again.

Margaret, here alone, in the peaceful spring afternoon, on a California farm, leaned back in her chair and shut her eyes. She would think no more. He was dead. He had not known—how should he?—what a girl's heart and soul could be. She could forgive him now; he was dead. The only person who shared with her the memory of that terrible day—of the next day—and the next—and the next, was dead.

She read the telegram again. Died, in Roosevelt Hospital, this morning at quarter-past eight. He had grinned at her timidity, he had mocked her, disbelieved her, crashed through all the reserves of body and soul—but he was dead, now. The recollection that still brought the hot blood to her proud face, the recollection of him laughing at her tears, the memory of her own dazed senses, only three days, four days, a wife, was strong upon her in this hour of release. The bitterness of her own helplessness and despair in those old days rushed over her again.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Well, it was over. The play had ended, on the balmy spring afternoon that found Margaret at "Uplands," peacefully established on the porch, mistress already, except in name, of everything she loved, and with her heart brimming with a deep happiness and security that embraced all the years to come.

There was a familiar whirring, down toward the lower gate; Stan's car. Margaret's heart began to hammer, and her mouth tasted salty. It should be so easy to tell him! Yet she was trembling in every fiber of her being.

She saw him jump out of the car, as she had seen him a thousand times before. He came up to the porch.

"Eminently successful!" he said, of the blue and tan linen.

Margaret found herself utterly unable to rise; her spine was cold, and her throat suddenly felt thick and hot.

"Stan—" she stammered. She put the crumpled telegram into his hands. "Stan—" she faltered, as, without looking at it, he took it, his concerned gaze continuing to rest upon her face. "He's dead!" she said, weakly.

Stan moved his eyes indifferently to the telegram, shrugged.

"What's the matter? Who is it?" he asked soliticiously.

"He's dead, I tell you!" Margaret said. "He—read it. He's dead."

Stanley snatched the telegram again, drank in its contents with one glance, flung it from him and caught her in his arms.

"Who is it?" he cried, with a sort of shout. "My, you don't mean your husband? Tell me—tell me!"

But Margaret could tell him nothing, for she was crying bitterly in his arms. Stanley's own eyes moistened.

"Here, my darling girl! You musn't cry now. Why, it's all over, dear! It makes you feel badly and no wonder. But when you're over this first shock—my sweetheart, you musn't cry. Think of what our lives are going to be now."

Her face was still averted, but her sobs were quieter. Margaret rested against him, gradually restored to self-control.

They started and turned, but Stanley did not release her when Shirley came suddenly out to the porch.

"I heard your car—Well!" she said, her astonished eyes not missing the traces of Margaret's tears, the agitated faces of both Stan and Margaret.

"Well," Stanley echoed joyously. "Congratulate us, Shirley. There's no use disguising anything—I'm too happy! We're to be married, Shirley, Margaret and I—it's all arranged, it's settled. You're the first to know."

"Oh, on the contrary—everyone knows!" Shirley said, after a very perceptible pause. "I congratulate you I'm sure. And you, Miss Yorke. We've all been wondering exactly why you chose to keep us in the dark."

"There was a reason, Mrs. Theobald, I was not free."

"I see!" Shirley said, trembling, although she smiled. The game was lost now, and Shirley had no thought but to withdraw as quickly as possible. But suddenly it seemed to her that in losing Stan she let go of everything she needed. "I wonder if Rudolph would drive me to Menlo Park?" she said, not very steadily. "I've got a tea, and a dinner, and a thousand things to do. I'm leaving on Tuesday, you know. I have to get back to my poor sick boy."

"Surely Rudolph could," Stanley said, cheerfully obliging.

"Just—just a minute," Margaret said, turning paler, and putting out an impulsive hand to detain Shirley. She glanced at the telegram, lying on the floor; she sent an entreating look toward Stan. "You are too late, Mrs. Theobald," she said. "Cuyler Theobald died this morning, in the hospital at 8.15 o'clock."

"I don't believe it!" Shirley said flatly.

"It's true," Margaret said, faintly.

"Then you're—" Stan whispered, staring at her. "My heavens!"

"Yes," she answered, her eyes on his, "I'm Peggy Irwin, of course. I'm his wife—his first wife. We were married six years ago."

"You'll have to prove it," Shirley stammered.

"I can prove it."

"Well, I don't believe it!" Shirley repeated, narrowing her eyes, scowling, staring into space. "You mean that you happened to get a job with Cuyler's aunt, and happened not to be recognized?" she asked scathingly.

"It wasn't quite accident," Margaret admitted.

"I never heard anything so ridiculous!" Shirley persisted.

"Your husband was Cuyler Theobald?" Stan demanded.

Margaret nodded, swallowing.

"Then all this time," Stanley said, stupefied, finding words with difficulty, "all this time—you—you. And you never told me!"

"I never told anyone, Stan. I had promised—I had sworn, never to tell."

"Promised him?"

"Cuyler?" How readily she said the name. "No; Trowbridge, the old lawyer," she said.

"Trowbridge! But why?"

"Because he knew of Jim, Stan, and when I thought I was dying, when the doctor had told me that I was sinking fast—then I sent for Trowbridge," Margaret said.

"You knew him?"

"Knew him? Oh, yes, he was the Theobald's attorney. He was like a sort of guardian to me. From the very beginning he was my friend; he used to reason with Cuyler, try to influence him. And I went to see him a few weeks after our separation. He was in the hospital the afternoon that Jim was born. He told me then that Mrs. Cutting was looking for a baby to adopt, but I wouldn't let Jim go—then. And later, when I was so ill, when I did give up the baby, I swore that it should be a secret if I died or if I lived. I had to keep it so!"

"Living, Stan," Margaret said, in an eager rush of words, "I would always have cared for my own baby, somehow. I didn't want money for him! But dying, I thought of leaving him, so tiny, so helpless, and without a friend or a penny. And then I remembered that Mrs. Cutting was his greatauntt, and that some of the family money was rightly his—poor baby, it seemed unfair both ways, to give him his name, or to keep silent! Finally, talking to Trowbridge, I told him that nobody in the world knew who he really was, and I gave him the name of Jim Field, and they took him away to be adopted! Trowbridge sat beside my bed and swore that he would never betray the baby while Cuyler lived, and I swore that I never would betray him!"

Shirley had been looking in utter astonishment from one face to another, her face an angry red, and her eyes flashing.

"Stan, you don't believe all this!" she stuttered, at last. "I never heard anything so ridiculous! Why—why, how do you know all this is true? You don't know anything—who is Jim? I never heard of him! And Cuyler—is it probable that he would not tell me that his aunt's companion—"

"I don't think you understand, Shirley," Stanley said, in his gentlest tone. "I've been somewhat in Margaret's confidence, you see. Mrs. Cutting never suspected anything and I never knew until this instant that Margaret's husband was Cuyler Theobald—"

"We were married on the eleventh of March, four years ago—more than four years ago, Cuyler Theobald and I," Shirley asserted hotly.

"His marriage to Margaret came first, Shirley" Stanley interrupted her, mildly. "His little boy was born before you ever met him—"

"He went to Paris," Magaret explained, "and got a divorce there. But his divorce, granted by the French courts, is not valid in California."

"What do you mean?" Shirley said, turning white.

"I mean that I refused ever to give Cuyler Theobald a divorce," Margaret asserted. "Trowbridge warned him his French marriage would never be recognized in America until he had an American divorce too, but Cuyler didn't care! He knew, I daresay, that I wouldn't ever trouble him! But Trowbridge has kept me informed; he looked into the whole matter because of Cuyler's child."

"Child! He has no child!" Shirley said, breathing hard.

"Jim is his child," Margaret said.

"Jim! You mean this child here?" Shirley exclaimed. "My dear Miss Yorke, you will find yourself in for a long fight on that score," she said kindly. "How do you possibly expect to prove that this boy, whom Cuyler Theobald never saw in his life, is his son? The courts will simply laugh at you—it's impossible!"

"Even if it were, I don't think I should feel too badly," Margaret assured her, unshaken. "It was his father that I feared, and now poor Cuyler is gone! Trowbridge has been watching Jim's interests ever since he was born, and even told Cuyler's uncle, I believe, that there was a son. I think Trowbridge wrote me that before Cuyler married . . . in Paris . . ."

"Married me, you mean?" Shirley interpolated sharply.

"Yes, four years ago, I think Trowbridge wrote me that he had written Cuyler that it could not be a valid marriage, here in this State, and that as all Cuyler's properties were in California he would be disinheriting his second wife . . ."

"Well, this is ridiculous!" Shirley said lightly, "and you and I will be the town's talk for the next few weeks. But I wouldn't congratulate myself too soon, if I were you! You may swallow this whole, Stan, but I assure you that I shall fight—fight to the last ditch! I was married to Cuyler Theobald in Paris, and I was married to him again, a few weeks ago, in New York. There is such a thing as a wife's claim, and I'm going to find out exactly what it is. I am sorry to have to go, but—as his widow, I may have to leave for New York tomorrow," finished Shirley, trembling. "I'll pack now, Stan, if you don't mind," she said courageously.

And she swept indoors; leaving the ecstasy of long-awaited joy on the porch, for Stan and Margaret sat down quite simply upon the old wicker sofa, and the man put his arm about Margaret's slender waist.

Shirley found them there when she came out an hour later. Stanley put her into the car, and Margaret waved, and the man grinned in farewell. But Shirley, still flushed, and with dangerously bright eyes, was settling herself in the limousine and apparently forgot to nod good-bys.

High Light of World's W.C.T.U. Convention Toronto, June 3rd-10th

The 14th triennial convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union has just closed its sessions at Toronto, Canada.

It will go down in the history of the organization as one of the greatest and most successful world meetings in the matter of attendance, representation from many countries, enthusiasm and reports of accomplishments for total abstinence and anti-alcoholic legislation. Over 500 delegates registered, each one representing a constituency of 1,000 members, but as many more visitors and friends of the cause were in attendance every day. The beautiful, big auditorium of the Royal York Hotel convention headquarters, was not large enough to accommodate the crowds that came each day. Overflow meetings were held in the great ballroom, amplifiers carrying the messages from the main audience room to the overflow company.

The following countries were represented: England and Wales, Scotland, Ireland, Australia, New Zealand, India, South Africa, Burma, Ceylon, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Austria, Bermuda, Bulgaria, Belgium, China, Japan, Korea, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Virgin Islands, Porto Rico, Denmark, Esthonia, Latvia, Finland, France, Germany, Mexico, Newfoundland, Sweden, Switzerland. White ribboners of Canada from every province were there in great numbers, as were members of the W.C.T.U. of the United States, and their friends. This large attendance from all sections of the United States is prima facie evidence that the women of the United States are not losing their interest in prohibition and are determined that it shall succeed, and after learning of conditions in Canada, they are more than ever convinced that none of the various systems of government sale in Canada or the Bratt system in Sweden should be substituted for national prohibition in the United States.

Generous Hospitality

The hospitality extended to the delegates and visitors by the Canadian hostesses was most generous. All foreign delegates were entertained in Toronto homes or in some of the city's fine hotels. The unexcelled accommodations of the Royal York Hotel, the largest and finest in the British Commonwealth, were placed at the disposal of the convention. Social functions for the entertainment of delegates and visitors were numerous and delightful. Four o'clock tea at Willard Hall was the order of the day. Complimentary luncheons and dinners to groups of delegates were given by the Canadian hostesses. One afternoon was devoted to a picnic on one of the lovely island parks. Forty-five sightseeing busses were placed at the disposal of delegates and visitors for a tour of the city, and on the last day of the convention a civic reception and boat ride on Lake Ontario was arranged. On the first evening cordial greetings were extended by a representative of the premier of the Dominion, by Premier Henry of Ontario, and by a representative of the mayor of Toronto.

In the absence, because of illness of Miss Anna Adams Gordon, president of the World's W.C.T.U., Mrs. Ella A. Boole, first vice-president presided. Her masterly address, in which was incorporated a message from Miss Gordon, was received with great enthusiasm. It closed with this ringing sentence:

The Problem of Alcoholism

"Commissions, royal and presidential, are studying the problem of alcoholism. Economists recognize that money spent for liquor is money often needed for the benefit of the home. Social workers recognize drink as a source of poverty. The world is beginning to recognize human values as the most important value of life. To the doing of our part in the solution of the problems the W.C.T.U. is committed. We have wound the white ribbon around the nations and together the white ribboners of the world will continue to work until King Alcohol is dethroned, and peace purity and prohibition have right of way. We appeal to the women who are like-minded with us in our zeal for home protection to share our vision and work." A sentence from Miss Gordon's message reads: "In half a hundred leading nations, gentlewomen, whose badge is a simple knot of white ribbon, women of all races and all creeds, steadfastly follow the gleam toward a goal of world sobriety, world morality, and the universal outlawry of war."

Secretary's Report

The secretary's report given by Miss Agnes E. Slack, honorary world's secretary, indicated a marked advance throughout the world in anti-alcohol education, organization and legislation, that was most encouraging.

The report of the world's treasurer, Mrs. Margaret C. Munns, showed that fifty-one countries have paid membership dues as affiliated with the World's W.C.T.U., that some countries that have been helped by the World's are becoming self-sustaining, and that contributions to the World's work are bringing a rich harvest of increased public sentiment against the drink traffic and drink habit.

The following officers of the World's W.C.T.U. were elected for the next three years: President, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn, N.Y., first vice president, Mrs. Louise McKinney of Canada; second vice president, Miss Emilie J. Solomon of South Africa; third vice president, Miss Maria Sandstrom; secretaries, Miss Agnes E. Slack of England and Mrs. W. T. G. Brown of Canada; treasurer, Mrs. Margaret C. Munns of the United States.

The plan of work adopted recommended the observance of the Thursday after the first Sunday in January as a day of prayer for all countries affiliated with the World's W.C.T.U.; the observance of all unions of a day in May as Mother's Day; the appointment of policewomen for the protection of youth and to promote better conditions in prisons; and that every national union be urged to support the principles outlined in the resolutions through adoption of those departments of work adapted to the needs of their respective countries. "The time is not ripe to work for national prohibition in every country but the time is ripe to start in that direction."

Superintendents of departments for promotion of work among children through Loyal Temperance Legions; for scientific temperance instruction in schools and colleges; for education through Sunday Schools; for moral education; for child welfare; for medal contests, for humane education; for prison reformatory work; for systematic giving; for counter attractions to public houses; for citizenship, for protection of native races; for peace and international relations; for travelers' aid, and for the right kind of publicity presented encouraging reports of work being done in every country.

Young People's Contribution

The young people's part on the program aroused great enthusiasm. On Saturday evening Canada and the United States presented in a picturesque demonstration the work being done. Canada's Patriotic Roll, signed by thousands of the Dominion's young men and women, and the United States Youth's Roll Call, soon to reach a million signatures, were described and shown. Young women from the different provinces gave eloquent testimonies to the failure of government control, and Prince Edward Island, which has held its dry law, told of the marked benefits it had experienced from prohibition. The other countries were warned that government control does not control the liquor traffic.

Sunday's Programme

Sunday was the red letter day of the convention. In virtually all of Toronto's churches, white ribbon leaders were invited to speak morning and evening. An impressive sunrise prayer meeting was held in the early morning. At three o'clock Sunday afternoon, a mass meeting was held, at which three methods of dealing with the liquor traffic were presented. Miss Maria Sandstrom of Sweden, the only woman member of the Temperance Commission for Investigation of liquor conditions, told of the inadequacy of the Bratt system in her country, which encouraged rather than restricted the drink evil. Dr. A. J. Irwin, secretary of the Prohibition Union of Canada, explained the failure of government sale in the Dominion to control the drink traffic. The Hon. Ralph O. Brewster, former governor of Maine United States, in an eloquent address proved conclusively that prohibition is the very best policy for dealing with the liquor traffic. He said in part: "In the world reconstruction of the next decade there will be no place for groggy heads. That nation will lead the vanguard that is most efficient in all ways. Prohibition is morally and eternally right. In the not distant future it will be demonstrated that it is economically imperative." All three speeches were broadcast over the radio. At the Sunday afternoon meeting there was unveiled a bust of Anna Adams Gordon, for the past nine years president of the World's W.C.T.U., the work of Miss Dagmar Prior, a sculptor of Copenhagen, Denmark, and a World's W.C.T.U. organizer.

International Banquet

A unique feature was the international banquet on Monday evening the address being given by the Right Honorable Sir George Foster, a Dominion senator, known as the "grand old man of temperance of Canada," and also by Dr. H. H. Tory, President of the League of Nations Society of Canada. Greetings were given for countries represented in the convention in the native language of that country. Some wore the costume of their homeland, and music of various nations enlivened the program.

Of primary interest were the testimonies by foreign delegates of the progress in their respective nations of the anti-alcoholic movement. Finland's representative told how the organization of a comparatively small group of women opposed to its prohibition law and the wet propaganda they were putting out had aroused the women of Finland to new zeal and fervor in their defense of their dry law, and they were working for its retention harder than ever. The Scandinavian countries reported increased interest in prohibition, much social welfare work and support of the W.C.T.U. by subsidies from the government. Scotland, England and Ireland are specializing on counter attractions in caravans that travel from place to place, temperance coffee shops and tea tents at fairs. Switzerland and Germany are stressing sans-alcohol and alcohol-free restaurants and hotels. China Japan and Korea are putting on fine educational programs, as are all the countries. Burma, Ceylon, Egypt and South Africa are giving the temperance message through literature and posters in several languages. South American countries are persuading the public to train future citizens to see the injury wrought by alcohol and to adopt sobriety as a "safety first" measure.

Mary Campbell of India said that "India takes the matter of prohibition seriously. From a religious standpoint nearly all believe in total abstinence. The 8,000 members of the members of the India W.C.T.U.—native women—have raised the money to build a beautiful W.C.T.U. headquarters in the city of Delhi. The women recently stood silently with folded hands in front of liquor shops in the big cities as a protest against the destruction of their husbands, brothers, fathers and sons by strong drink, and many of them went to jail for their courageous action. The Congress party has promised to write prohibition in the new constitution, and Miss Campbell says India may be the next country in the world to have prohibition."

Industrial Displays Were Feature At Ormstown Exhibition This Year

R. Brunet Displays Cement Workmanship

Walking about the grounds at the Ormstown Exhibition the thousands of people attending the show could not help being impressed with the many attractive and fine exhibits of industrial concerns. Of the many concerns represented possibly no display deserved more attention than that of the ornamental cement work done by R. Bruet of Ormstown. Though Mr. Brunet is obliged to do much of this ornamental cement work with the aid of his one arm he is to be congratulated upon the quality of the workmanship he has so displayed. His display included cement urns, flower pots, cement blocks for silo building, and foundations, etc.

J. I. Case Farm Implements

Fred Moore, the local agent, and L. V. Pilon, District Representative of the J. I. Case Co., manufacturers of farm implements had a great showing of machinery upon the grounds. Usually a number of implement concerns have exhibits at Ormstown but this year Case Company were practically alone in the game. They displayed two of their popular Model C. tractors, a corn blower, thresher, hay loader, side delivery rake, mower, disc harrows, etc. The exhibit was continually being inspected by crowds of farmers of the Chateauguay Valley.

Adjoining this exhibit was seen the Dion thresher, which is made at Ste. Therese.

Coming along the line of exhibits one was next struck with the fine array of Studebaker and Durant cars exhibited by H. T. Cunningham of Huntingdon. Mr. Cunningham not only showed the luxurious and fine array of autos but also had a number of Studebaker and Rugby trucks.

The General Motors of Canada exhibit was displayed through their local agents, Messrs. O'Connor Bros. The display was shown by Mr. Jack Leehy, and it included a number of their Buick sedans, Chevrolet and Pontiac autos. To round out the exhibit of autos Mr. Nelson Farquhar in behalf of A. A. Lunan, the distributor of Willys and Willys-Knight autos had cars in the exhibit. Mr. J. A. McCracken, Empire Garage, Huntingdon, had a fine display of Ford cars in a number of models and also a Fordson tractor.

General Steel Wares Truck

Near the auto display was the General Steel Wares equipper truck. On the truck, in care of Mr. P. E. Perrault, was to be found a fine array of combination electric ranges, electric ranges of different types, etc. The Beauharnois Electric Co. Limited are the local distributors for these ranges.

Crane's Equipped Truck as Feature

The equipped truck of Crane's Ltd. was one of the most inviting displays on the grounds. The large truck was equipped with a wonderful array of plumbing. No doubt many home lovers set their eyes upon the colored plumbing which has been greatly reduced in price this year. In this exhibit was to be seen a yellow bath tub and shower curtains, cream kitchen sink and laundry tub combined, a green kitchen sink, two white porcelain toilets, wash basins, etc. Besides the plumbing fixtures was to be seen a Crane water pressure system and a Premier Water heater and water softener. Mr. J. R. McKell also had a display of Crane equipment in the Industrial Building. Mr. McKell is the local distributor of these products. A new feature in connection with the Crane water pressure system is the new magnetic starter which Mr. McKell claims is miles ahead of the old type starter.

Canadian Blanket Exhibit of Widespread Interest

This is a colour age and no longer is the housewife satisfied to have her bed coverings and her woollen blankets of white with perhaps a colored stripe to relieve its monotony. Now the colour scheme of her bedroom is reflected in the coverings for her bed which are made up in gay colours and rich bindings of satin.

The display of Ayers Limited, Lachute Mills, P. Q., in the new Industrial Building at the Ormstown Exhibition, was a striking illustration of the colourful part which blankets play in bedroom furnishing. Made in Canada and handled by the largest wholesale houses and departmental stores from coast to coast, this was the first time that Ayers blankets, etc. had been exhibited at the Ormstown Exhibition, and the interest with which the Ayers booth was visited bore witness to the favorable impression which these lovely woollen bed coverings created.

Fleeciest of white blankets for under coverings, the cosy grey and pastel shade point blankets which are always popular at camp or cottage, and warm serviceable travelling rugs in many attractive patterns, were displayed in the Ayers booth. But loveliest of all were the superfine merino overthrows in a variety of different shades with wide silk bindings to match. The booth was a rainbow of colour, whose contents worthily upheld the high reputation of the well-known name of Ayers.

Department of Lands and Forests Exhibit

In our last issue of the Gleaner we gave a description of the main booth of the Department of Lands and Forests depicting the importance of fire protection for our forests. Adjoining this 40 foot long booth was one from the Berthier Nursery of the Department of Lands and Forests. Mr. Roi who was in charge of this exhibit had a great number of visitors inquire as to what kinds of ornamental trees he had in the exhibit. The trees displayed were spruce, pines of different varieties, maples and ash. In the boxes were seedlings of spruce and pine, as well as a number of spruce ready for transplanting. In bottles were seen the cones, from which are extracted the seeds.

The seeing of the trees in growth was not enough to complete this very informative exhibit but a display of 15 logs was shown. The logs were cut so as to show the difference in the woods as well as the bark. The logs were of course all labeled and showed that they all grew successfully in our province.

The charcoal industry is one that is thriving in Berthierville today. Samples were shown of the fourteen varieties of wood that can be used in this industry. Nearby were a large number of bottles containing the sub-products extracted in the charcoal industry. The eight by-products are marketed through the drug stores.

In the Streams Commission booth of which the Hon. Honoré Mercier is the head, a number of fine pictures were displayed showing the various large dams in the province as well as the major power development plants. The dams photographed were Taschereau, Gouin, Mercier and Baskatonge. The power plants shown were Lake Kenogami, Paugan, Chelsea and Farmers, La Gabelle, Shawinigan and Grandmère

Fire Protection Service equipment used by the fire rangers in the forests were included in this display. The fire pump which is light and can be handled by one or two men with ease, or transported in a canoe, was seen on the floor. The water bag, which when used is strapped on a man's back, possibly confused many unless they asked what it was. Through using this water bag and the special nozzels used in forest fire fighting a great deal of water is saved over using the tin pail method of spreading water, and besides it is much more effective.

Lake of the Woods Display Flour and Feeds

Appreciating the facilities incorporated in the new Industrial Building, the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. Limited took advantage of the opportunity to make an effective display of their popular products, Five Roses Flour and Lakko Feeds.

Flour and feed are admittedly a difficult merchandise to attractively exhibit, yet the white bags with their different colored monograms, arranged against a background of this company's colours, gold and purple, the whole lighted by animated and still electric signs, was a striking example of clean cut exhibit advertising.

This display was of great interest, both to the housewife and to the farmer and his wife—cook books giving tempting receipes were procurable, and pamphlets containing expert advice as to the feeding and care of poultry and cattle were available to all.

The representatives of the Company, Messrs. D. L. MacDougall and George R. MacGregor, assured every visitor that Lakko Feeds were manufactured with the same care and attention to detail, as was used in milling Five Roses Flour, and that both were absolutely guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.

Messrs. Thos Baird & Son Reg'd. of Ormstown and The Consolidated Utilities Limited of Huntingdon, are the local agents for all the products of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. Limited.

Dominion Experimental Farms Had Big Displays

In the former Industrial Hall opposite the main arena The Dominion Experimental Farm had a wonderful exhibit and was of great interest to farmers. It was unfortunate this display was not made in the new building, but possibly another year will see that change made. The first display was in connection with all breeds of livestock and poultry, vegetables, flowers and landscape gardening in general. Following along the exhibit one would be informed what feeds to feed stock; when to seed and when best to garner. The milk charts showing the wisdom of following up the cow testing work was all evident. The dairy and cold storage department was in charge of Miss Leblanc. It would interest the ladies in particular and the logical place for that booth would have been adjoining those of the W. I. on the upper floor in the new Industrial Hall.

The first chart showed the use of milk for the seven stages of life, viz: for the baby, the invalid, school children, athletes, working man, business man and those in the advanced stages of life.

To complete the exhibit one's attention was directed to the "good health house" built of foods.

The foundation of the little house was made of peas and beans. The walls of rolled oats, roof of graham wafers, shutters of brown bread, window sills of dates, curtains of lettuce, door of strips of bacon, door knob a raisin, roadway of rice, and the curb with nuts.

The steps into the house were made with cheese and the verandah pillars were of macaroni. To the rear of the lot was seen a pile of macaroni representing a pile of wood. In the chicken yard was seen a fine big egg resting in a nest made of shredded wheat. In a little chart was seen the produce from the farms of vegetables and fruit. The flower beds about the home were made up with bits of cauliflower, asparagus and spinach. For the two chimneys of the house were used two ½-pint bottles of milk.

This model house made with foods is used in visiting schools giving talks to children on foods and what best to eat to grow up healthy and wholesome.

Nearby was a table devoted to egg production. The idea of this table was to show what an important part milk feeding played to the producing of eggs.

Losa Company of Canada Ltd.

The Losa Company are not generally known here but their booth in this same building showed the charts and samples of Provender which they make and recommend feeding to hogs and foxes. Bovian is the ration for cows and calves, Helios for horses, and Gallinol for hens and chickens. Other ingredients are made up by this company for other animals and pet stock.

Small Bros. Lightning Evaporators

Small Bros. of Dunham, Que., again demonstrated their Lightning Evaporator, size 40x10. The special feature of this outfit is the doing away with the turning of the front pan. This evaporator is equipped with two valves, one on each side, by which the current may be changed. Simply open one valve and close the other and the current will be altered as desired, thus enabling the syrup pan to be kept from niter.

Swedish Separator Demonstrated

The Swedish Separator Company had in this same building one of their favoured separators on exhibition. The attendant present was ever ready to demonstrate to the dairymen the many good features of the machine.

Occasionally people in this community are desirous of securing the use of a typewriter for a brief interval and calls have been made upon the Gleaner for the loan of same. We have always been pleased to accomodate our friends, but owing to the calls being so numerous we have deemed it advisable to rent such machines either by the day or by the week. In this way people will not feel they are obliged to hurry up with the use of the borrowed machine or be without one when most desired.

The rental rates are:

One day	50c
Each additional day	20c
One week	$1.25
Each additional week	70c

People who desire a certain type of typewriter and know a few days in advance that they will want such, might advise us, so that we can secure one from Montreal in the event of our having no machines available.

A WIDOW—MY SON

When I brought a son into the world, I held, as do most mothers, very strong views as to his education. I built up for him a marvellous future. I found myself a widow, with a young baby boy, and I realized that the whole of this child's future lay in the hollow of my hand. It was a tremendous responsibility.

Most sons brought up by women are molly-coddles. They have not the balancing effect of a father, they lose strength. I had to be both parents to my son. I had not to allow my sex to influence him. I was faced with the greatest problem of my life.

I started on a new principle. I waived aside all old laws of upbringing and got down to commonsense, that alien instinct in most nurseries.

From a month old, I treated my son as a responsible being. I saw the grown man in him, not the child later to be moulded into the man.

The first great lesson of life, the lesson all animals teach immediately but which by strange paradox teach last, is responsibility, I made my son responsible for himself. I did not treat him as my son, but as an individual capable of living his own life.

I refused to wait upon him; rather I let him delight in waiting on himself. He was well under a year when he learnt to put on woolly boots, then to pull a frock over his head; later the mastery of a jersey. Finally his complete self-attire.

He was a little over eighteen months when he could go alone to buy his sweets. Although he could hardly speak, he could indicate what he wished to buy. He had a perfect faith in his fellows and he did not know fear. That was the one emotion I kept for him. Caution I encouraged. fear I eliminated. There is no room for a shy man in this world, and it was one of the continually enforced conditions of my upbringing that he should meet all people as friends; likes and dislikes I struggled to marshall into proper perspective.

A great tolerance—to my mind, the bedrock of life—was always developed. This may seem absurd to the casual reader who will maintain that the child was too young. No child, I emphasize is ever too youug. Pity for all suffering humanity, all weakness a splendid faith, a grit to look the world between the eyes and to fail; no child is too small to learn these things.

Bit by bit we learnt to face disappointment. A man is no use in life if disappointment deters him. We deliberately met little disappointments, little treats purposely postponed, little tests for the fight with life later on.

At first there came the desperate wail of baby despair, that anguish which every mother has the instinct to assuage. But why? It is a selfish craving on her part to protect her child to the very last, to "unfit" him for his battle. It is all wrong.

We always set women upon a pedestal, for I have realized that in my hands lies his treatment of his future wife; so have looked upon womanhood as deserving of all chivalry, of tender care and infinite love.

In a child's mother lies the bedrock of his future being. I have accepted my son as the greatest responsibility of my life. I have never dared enjoy him as a baby, for I have felt too keenly that every moment should be spent in moulding that future, in perfecting the man, which I must give to the world.

I have never told him a lie. However uncomfortable it may have made me, and whoever may have been present, I invariably spoke the truth to him. Parents withhold the truth from their children because the child may make them uncomfortable with his questionings. It is a purely selfish motive.

When a child is old enough to frame a question, he is old enough to know the answer. He has a right to the truth. Life holds no mysteries for my son, and he knows he can ask me nothing I am afraid to answer with candour.

I have given him a splendid faith in the Almighty, but his creed I leave to him to choose. What right have I to dictate to him the form of faith which appeals the most to me?

He knows that most people do not look upon life as we do; he knows whilst we chivalrously treat as good and beautiful, there are some women who are none of these things. It would not be fair to allow him to face life without the knowledge that the world is made up of all sorts. But not to condemn, never to be intolerant.

My son is growing up. I am retiring from my office of mother to him. Soon, we shall be no more than good friends. The animals who are so far wiser than we are with their children do not trespass upon their adult sons' and daughters' moods. The only woman who really matters in my son's life will be his wife.

He is not clever. I ask for his brilliance from my son, but I do demand that he shall be a fine man, that he shall stand as a credit to his race, and the world shall be better for his living in it.

I have effaced myself, for his interests were the important ones. It is he who matters.

I ask in return, that I may be proud to say: "This man——is my son."

I hope he may be glad to remember "this woman was my mother."

THE MAN WHO SMILES

As a stranger in a strange place, or as a newcomer to a store or an office, you feel fine when you meet the man who is brimming over with good-will, who greets you with a smile, and acts as if he were glad to see you and happy to help you.

Hail to the men of good-will! Hail to the loyal and generous youth, and to all who greet us with smiles. We welcome you wherever you are, in schools, in offices, in stores, or in factories. To the friendly and true-hearted women who help us on our way, all hail!

Whoever does business on honour, turns out honest work, serves the people and treats men by the Golden Rule, defeats trouble with a cheerful face, shows kindness and makes love grow.

All things belong to men of good-will. All things are yours! The stars in their courses move for you. The mighty invisible forces bring you their richest harvest.

The boundless future is yours. You toil, and you establish the commonwealth of mankind. You put away hate, ill-will, pride, greed and suspicion. You kill the dread giants of war, strong drink and oppression. You live and work to create a friendly and happy world. All the men of good-will find each day one more cycle of satisfaction and joy. No one ever tried it and found it fail.

Success is pledged to the man who can smile always—with the smile that is deep and true.

The sour man with the constant gloom in his face has the hard time of it.

Those who can bring sunshine into the lives of others can always bask in its beautiful rays themselves.

AYRSHIRE SHOW AT ORMSTOWN

Springbr'k Ringmaster Owned by W. H. Coverdale Wins Senior and Grand Championships

175 Ayrshire Cattle at Show

District Breeders Come up Before Very Stiff Opposition From More Distant Parts

The Ayrshire section at Ormstown Show was as usual a credit to the breed—not only insofar as numbers were concerned but also as regards quality. One hundred and seventy-five head of purebred Ayrshires were entered in the regular classes and these were mostly all forward and included a very large percentage of noted animals which have taken high places at National and other leading shows in the past. Also a number of newcomers, including several recent importations, which will doubtless take leading places at the fall fairs.

Everyone, whether he was interested in Ayrshires or in any other breed of livestock, was pleased that the president of the Show, Mr. R. R. Ness of R. R. Ness & Sons, was able to spend considerable time at the show despite the delicate state of his health which condition has existed for several months.

The Howick-Huntingdon district was well represented by the various breeders whose names are given further on in this report but these men found strong competition from quite a number of outside herds, from various other parts of Quebec and Ontario, several of which took quite a large share of the leading awards.

Robert Cunningham, Assistant Animal Husbandman, Central Experimental Farms, Ottawa, acted as judge of both the purebreds and grades and so had three heavy days' work to do. He is a careful and painstaking judge and seemed to give as much general satisfaction as has been given at any Ormstown Show in years with the result that good feeling prevailed throughout the entire time of the show

The bulls led off the two days purebred judging. The Ayrmont Farms of Jas. Davidson, Waterloo, Que. newcomers to Ormstown, led off with their Ayrmont Peter in the junior bull calf class.

The Howard Murray herd of Magog, Que. scored in the senior bull calf class with a classy son of the well-known Springburn Sir Henry, whilst Hobsland Bannerman, Imp. recently imported from Scotland by R. R. Ness & Sons for Mrs. E. J. Davis, of Streetsville, Ont. led the junior yearling class. This bull was reserve junior champion and is a pleasing animal but not far behind him although handicapped by age, and consequently size, was his recently imported half-brother Hobsland Magnate, a Ness & Sons' entry.

The Bennie and R. R. Ness & Sons partnership bull, Netherhall Satisfaction, Imp., a Royal winner of last year, made a splendid leader for the senior yearling class and also annexed the junior championship.

The two year old class brought out five entries and several of these are real top bulls. The Russell Logan bull, Hobsland Elegance, Imp., who distinguished himself last year at the Royal, made a splendid leader for this class and also a worthy reserve senior and reserve grand champion but nevertheless the next three which followed him were of a calibre that make them worthy herd headers and, fit to go into any company. These were Ness & Sons, Burnside Lucky Boy out of Burnside Blossom Andrietta; Howard Murray's Bruchag King of Hearts, Imp. and W. P. Cleary's Glen Campbell Dynamic.

The aged bull class brought out a number of noted former winners but all of a little different type from each other.

The noted N. B.-bred (McIntyre Bros.) bull, Springbrook Ringmaster which was grand champion at the C. N. E. last year and first in the 2 year old class at Ormstown last year, was led into first place by R. Brodie Ness, Manager for W. H. Coverdale. A position which he warranted because of his smoothness and other generally good points. The well-known Howie's Top Grade of the R. R. Ness & Sons' herd was still the same impressive looking sire of old but was not in show shape having been in very heavy service all winter. Such being so he had to be content with second place. Glen Campbell Memory Lad, an attractive winner of previous years at several shows came next for the Jas. Davidson, Ayrmonf Farm, whilst the Geo. H. Montgomery herd which was in charge of John Hunter and which had only one other entry forward came in fourth with Hobsland Milk Boy, that well-known son of Hobsland Lucky Boy.

Springbrook Ringmaster was given the senior and grand championship honours.

The mature dry and junior females were judged on Thursday and the wet cows and groups, etc., on Friday but we will take them as they appear in the catalogue.

Kirkcudbright Marjorie of the W. W. Skinner herd, a really impressive and pleasing looking cow in every way easily topped the aged cows in milk, a really good class.

Springbrook Bonnie Lass, a full sister of the grand champion bull, led a splendid class of 4 year olds in milk for W. H. Coverdale whilst Eshott Sympathy was an outstanding winner in the three year old in milk class for Gilbert McMillan. This cow and Kirkcudbright Marjorie 5th were the chief contenders for the senior and grand championships and made a Eshott Sympathy was reserve in both instances.

Bois de la Roche Favourite led the two year old in milk for the Skinner herd and Auchendrane Empress, Imp. led the aged dry cow class for the Howard Murray herd.

The dry two year olds were led by that distinguished winner of the past two years, Burnside Lovely Grade by Howie's Top Grade and by all appearances is one that will carry along and make another R. R. Ness & Sons' famous cow of future years. This heifer also won first in the senior futurity class.

Springbrook Lucy and Kirkcudbright Marjorie 5th respectively led the junior and senior R. O. P. classes and Burnside Blossom Andrietta won the Canadian Bank of Commerce Cup as the best R. O. P. female bred and owned by exhibitor.

Bois de la Roche Cherry 5th by Dunlop Radiance led the senior yearling heifer class and also won the junior championship for the W. W. Skinner herd. This heifer, it may be mentioned, was first prize senior heifer calf at the Royal last year. Another Skinner entry in Bois de la Roche Lizzie 5th another daughter of Radiance led the junior yearlings.

Burnside Heart's Delight, by Howie's Top Grade, led the senior heifer calves and also the reserve junior championship for R. R. Ness & Sons. Incidentally this in the first daughter of the well-known Burnside Perfect Lady.

W. H. Coverdale's Le Moines Point Pearl, by the grand champion Springbrook Ringmaster was first prize junior heifer calf.

The first prize junior futurity class was won by P. D. McArthur's Cherry Bank Luna.

First for four cows went to Coverdale. Ness & Sons got first for calf herd and young herd, also first and second for get of sire. The first prize for graded herd went to the Coverdale herd and the Skinner herd won first for produce of dam.

The two T. Eaton Co. Silver Tea Sets for the first and second best displays of registered Ayrshires went to W. H. Coverdale and W. W. Skinner respectively.

Recent sales from R. R. Ness & Sons included two heifer calves to R. M. Howden, St. Louis de Gonzague; 1 heifer calf to Mervyn Craig, Howick; a bull calf to Wm. McCracken, Athelstan. This latter is from the 18 year old Masterpiece cow who has made a number of records. Two bull calves were sold to the Quebec Dept. and a bull calf to each of the following: Paul Audet, Quebec; Joseph Prudhomme, Rapid des Pins, and Albert Hope, Howick.

A carload of cows was sold to Manuel Almieda, Rhode Island. These were purchased from Ernest Robertson (2), Ernest Reddick (2), Robert McClenaghan (3), Bruce Ness (2), J. S. Peddie & Sons (2), Jas. Houston (2), Dan McKell (2), all of Howick and vicinity, and one from Wilbur McMillan, Franklin.

Mr. Almeida had formerly cows of a low testing breed. He is gradually replacing all of them with Ayrshires. The change will give him seven cents a quart for the milk when he was only getting four cents before. Mr. Ness expects this buyer back for several loads, as he has to replace his entire herd in order to hold his milk contract.

Early Samplers Called for Expert Needlecraft

At first "samplers" were long, narrow bands, on which had been worked out patterns for delicate lace, cut and drawn work, and stitches both simple and intricate. It is recorded that the famous Italian "punta tagliato" was introduced into France by Catherine de Medici, and this gives us a new sidelight on the activities of that historic courtlady. Also, Mary Stuart, while an exile at the French court, learned to do the "punta tagliato" and brought samples with her to England. Many royal women of early days were skilled in needlecraft as well as in court intrigue.

Thus we learn that the original sampler was a pattern sheet having the latest and most popular designs for milady's workbasket. But in the Seventeenth century there came a change. Orderly rows of stitches and designs; then letters, name of workers and dates of birth, and often sentiments or lines of verses were added, all this giving evidence of originality, skill and patience, which made the sampler a thing of beauty highly prized by its maker, who could be rightly proud in adding her name and date of birth. The body of the sampler was linen or canvas, and when the former was used the work was more delicate and intricate.

If all humanity was of the same opinion on all things, the free-for-all argument would be as extinct as the Roc, but why live if you can't argue?
