150 cows perish in barn fire Wednesday night

Origin of the blaze still unknown

Record Staff

A fire killed 150 cows and caused several hundred thousand dollars worth of damage to a barn on a farm in Saint-Herménégilde.

The cause of this fire remains unknown but there is no suspicion of foul play.

The fire erupted around 6:20 p.m. Wednesday evening when in the milking room on Old Canaan Road. By the time firefighters arrived the blaze was already spreading to another part of the building and the 25 firefighters then built a trench to slow the fire and save part of the complex.

Firefighters from Beecher Falls lent assistance with their tanker.

Weil returns to the Townships promising consultations early next year

GORDON LAMBIE

Kathleen Weil and Karine Vallieres met with student council members and other representatives of the ETSB as a part of her visit to Richmond Regional High School yesterday.

By Gordon Lambie

Touring the Richmond riding on Thursday morning on her second trip to the Eastern Townships as Minister responsible for Relations with English-Speaking Quebecers, Kathleen Weil highlighted the fact that the province-wide consultations on the needs of the English speaking community will be getting started at the end of January 2018.

Weil returned to the Eastern Townships to visit with institutions and community organizations in Richmond riding having previously concentrated her focus in the Lennoxville and Stanstead areas. Over the course of the day she stopped into the Wales Home, Richmond Regional High School (RRHS), the Mante du Carré public market in Danville, and ADS Elementary School to

The Gustav Sonata, by Rose Tremain

LENNOXVILLE LIBRARY

As I sit here, shawl around my shoulders and afghan across my lap, rocking in my rocking chair and gazing over my granny glasses at the first real snowstorm of the winter, my thoughts turn naturally toward Switzerland, the setting of The Gustav Sonata.

Author Rose Tremain, 74, is an English novelist, short story writer, and former Chancellor of the University of East Anglia. She is the award-winning author of fourteen novels, five short story collections, and one children's book. With a special liking for historical novels, Tremain saw one of her works, Restoration, made into a successful motion picture in 1995, featuring Robert Downey, Jr.

The Gustav Sonata, published in 2016, like many of her works has been greeted with effusive critical praise, and for good reason. Tremain is an excellent, engaging writer who is not afraid to tackle difficult subjects. Inspired by a true incident in World War II, the novel begins in 1947 and centres on young Gustav, aged 5. Gustav lives alone with his mother, Emilie Perle, affectionately known to him as Mutti, in the town of Matzlingen, Switzerland. Emilie works in the local dairy cooperative that produces the world famous Emmental cheese. She also holds a second part-time job as a cleaner in the local church, where she is often accompanied by little Gustav. Emilie's husband, Erich Perle, was Matzlingen's assistant chief of police, but died before Gustav had the chance to know him. It is the relationship between Erich and Emilie which forms the core of the second section of the book, but the first part, spanning the years 1947 to 1952, is centred on Gustav's childhood, his strained relationship with the distant Mutti, and his newfound friendship with Anton.

Anton's well-to-do Jewish family have moved to Matzlingen from the much larger city of Bern. The two boys become fast friends, but Gustav's mother Emilie is not as smitten with the Zweibels as Gustav. Her circumstances have greatly diminished since Erich's death, and her once comfortable lifestyle is a thing of the past, leaving her embittered and closed off. "The only toy [Gustav] owned was a little metal train.... At the carriage windows, people's faces had been painted on, all of them given expressions of blank surprise. To these startled people, Gustav would occasionally whisper, 'You have to master yourselves,' a philosophy ingrained into him by Emilie.

Emilie makes it very clear that she believes "the Jews" were responsible for Erich's death some years before, and she, like many Swiss at that time, is quick to single them out for blame. The specific reasons for her anti-Semitic convictions come to light in Part 2, which jumps back in time and covers the years 1937 to 1942. But, in 1947, Gustav and Anton discover the joys of close friendship, with Gustav a frequent guest in the Zweibel's comparatively opulent home, and a captive audience to budding concert pianist Anton's frequent recitals. Although Gustav himself enjoys music, he is not a practitioner, and greatly admires Anton's prowess on the piano. However Anton is a gifted pianist, but suffers debilitating anxiety when it is time to compete, ultimately leading to the abandonment of his dreams of glory as a concert pianist. He pursues a career as a music teacher, a far cry from the future he and his family had planned.

Part 2 takes the reader into the pre-war period, and it is during this time that the actual incident which inspired Ms. Tremain to pen The Gustav Sonata occurred. With life becoming increasingly difficult for Jews in the surrounding countries, neutral Switzerland eventually felt the need to stem the rising tide of Jewish refugees. Erich, the soft-hearted Matzlingen Assistant Police Chief, could not bring himself to turn them away, and his decision to continue to admit them into the country ultimately led to his demise.

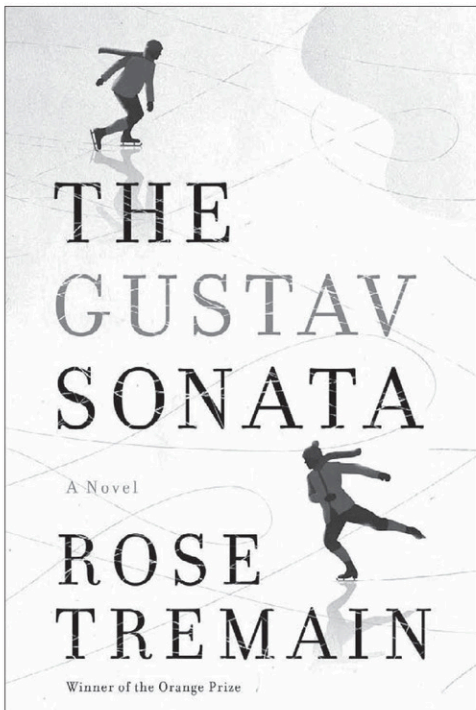

Erich is devastated by his firing, as is his wife Emilie. The loss of his position leads to their economic and social downfall, and Emilie, who was already depressed due to the loss of their unborn child, is particularly hard hit. Now burdened with the problems of unemployment and a loveless, mismatched marriage, Erich begins an affair with his Chief's wife, the voluptuous Lottie. This tempestuous relationship, combined with his unrelenting problems with Emilie and the love he feels for newborn baby Gustav, results in a fatal heart attack on Lottie's doorstep.

Part 3 is set in 1992, when Gustav is 40, owner of a small but successful hotel in his home town of Matzlingen, and Anton has moved on with his life, living in Zurich. The latter has been taken under the wing of a flighty but compelling musical impresario and decides to once again pursue his dream of becoming a professional musician. The once-close friendship of Anton and Gustav has cooled, but Gustav still hopes that a rekindling might come about.

Recounting the plot specifics does not do justice to the author's graceful prose and insight into her characters' inner lives. Several of the members of my book club felt that the first two sections were the most effective, and the denouement of the final chapter hit a false note, but I enjoyed the book in its entirety. The focus on music, in both the story itself and in the structure of the book—a sonata always has three distinct parts—made me think that packaging a CD of Beethoven's sonatas with the novel would have been an excellent marketing tool, as well as a delightful accompaniment to the story.

The Gustav Sonata can be ordered on interlibrary loan, and Lennoxville Library has another title by Rose Tremain, The American Lover and Other Stories.

English minister mending fences in "bonjour-hi" fallout

By Gordon Lambie

During her visit to the Townships on Thursday, Kathleen Weil, Minister responsible for Relations with English-Speaking Quebecers, spoke with regret about the tone of provincial discussions about language following the passage of a motion in the National Assembly inviting businesses to greet customers with the French greeting, bonjour, rather than the bilingual greeting "bonjour-hi" as had become customary in many places.

"The English community is rooted here. We don't want to hurt anybody from the English speaking community," Weil said, repeating the words of Premier Philippe Couillard from last week that, "English is not a foreign language in Quebec."

The Minister went on to say that despite the non-binding motion, she finds "bonjour-hi" to be respectful.

"I like the fact that someone is wondering what language I speak, and I answer back with bonjour-hi so I am returning that respect," Weil said. "I don't know if that person wants to speak French or English, and we usually end up speaking French because it's usually a francophone, but it is a very Montreal reality that the urban English speaking population is comfortable with."

Weil said that the bilingual greeting reflects openness to diversity in the province.

The Minister was criticized as condescending toward the English community following the debate last week when she was quoted as saying that English speaking people didn't understand what had really taken place in the National Assembly and that English media responded in a way that was very emotional. Asked about the reaction on Thursday, Weil said that she heard the critiques from family, friends, neighbours, and people in her riding, but argued that those same people also shared a desire to move on from the subject.

"Some people weren't quite sure why we adopted it and what we adopted," she said.

Asked about why the discussion and eventual motion on how people should greet one another was allowed to take place, Weil didn't offer a direct response. Instead she pointed out that the Liberals changed the initial wording of the motion to remove negative phrasing.

"In that particular case we had to bring some kind of clarification," she said. "All negative comments about the English language were removed."

Ultimately, Weil acknowledged that the situation did not resolve well.

"It was some kind of confusion that happened there," the Minister said. "It was certainly not our intent to give a negative message about the language."

Gerald Cutting, the President of the Townshippers' Association, described the "Bonjour-hi" debate as one that left the Liberal Government with "two black eyes" in the sense that it made them look noncommittal on one hand and anti-English on the other.

"The only way out now is for (the Liberals) to show that they are concerned about the wellbeing of the English community," Cutting said, "and I think that what we saw today is a start."

Cutting was one of many representatives of local community organizations to attend a lunchtime gathering in Danville as a part of Weil's visit to the Richmond riding and, speaking with The Record after the fact, he said that he is fairly satisfied that the government is showing itself to be on the right track with regard to the needs of the English speaking community.

"They fell into the trap," the Townshippers' President said, referring to the fact that Parti-Quebecois leader Jean-Francois Lisée boasted of having set "the oldest trap in the book," by pushing for a motion about the greeting. Reflecting on Thursday's meeting, however, Cutting said that he felt sincerity and purpose in Weil's statements about what she has seen and heard in here capacity as minister so far.

The Townshippers' President said that he was delighted to see the level of engagement Weil showed with representatives of community organizations, and argued that even in a case where the English speaking community was getting more attention because of an upcoming election, that is attention the community should capitalize on.

"There are a lot of dynamic people and projects at work across the Eastern Townships," Cutting said, adding that the presence of an attentive secretariat for the English community means that those who are willing to do the work to call attention to their projects stand to see them go further than ever before.

"We have to start from a position of good faith," the President said.

visit with a wide range of community groups and local institutions.

During the morning visit to Richmond Regional, Weil heard from Special Education Advisory Committee chair Cindy Veronneau about the need for more special needs resources in the English system as well as Eastern Townships School Board Chairman Michael Murray and RRHS Principal Kirk Robinson about other needs at various levels within local English schools. The minister was also given a presentation by Student Council executive members Jessica Coddington, Megan Oakley, Anne Laberge, Amelia Yetter, Alycia Chabot, and Jeremie Girard as well as their supervising teacher, Laurie Hannan. The student council offered the minister perspectives on the importance of community engagement within the school environment.

Invited back for a more in-depth visit with the rest of the student body, Weil expressed great enthusiasm about the idea.

Following the school visit, Weil and Richmond MNA Karine Vallieres attended a round-table lunch event with representatives of a wide range of local community groups including the Townshippers' Association, Youth employment services, Literacy in Action, the ETSB, local historical societies, and several local municipalities. Each group was invited, in turn, to present their concerns to the minister to help present as broad a portrait as possible of the needs of the English community prior to the start of the consultations next year.

U de S students simplify their research

Record Staff

A lot of the fear surrounding health issues lies in the unknown.

In an effort to demystify some aspects of the medical profession, The University of Sherbrooke Health Sciences department gave its students a challenge; to explain the research they are working on in a way that someone without a medical background could understand.

Samuel Wilson took up the challenge. Wilson is a Bishop's University graduate with Honours degree in Health Sciences, and is currently working towards a Master's in Cell Biology at the University of Sherbrooke.

He is one of the students benefiting from a partnership developed in recent years between Bishop's and the University of Sherbrooke to allow students to pursue graduate studies locally rather than leave the area.

The focus of Wilson's Master's project at U de S is to study the molecular mechanisms of DNA repair that could be exploited for colorectal cancer treatment.

The following is his explanation of his field of study in easy-to-understand terminology.

Colorectal cancer research: Like reporting traffic from the moon

By: Samuel D. Wilson

The equivalent at the molecular level of this traffic reporting feat was recently accomplished in a colorectal cancer study. The research project at the Université de Sherbrooke was headed by Prof. François-Michel Boisvert. Prof. Boisvert's group published their findings earlier this year. The findings detail how the researchers tracked the location of thousands of molecules, known as proteins, in colorectal cancer cells.

Colorectal cancer is one of the deadliest forms of cancer in the country according to the Canadian Cancer Society. Survival rates for cancers in general depend on scientists' and doctors' understanding of what causes different types of cancers. Improved understanding of cancer processes allows these professionals to create and apply treatments effectively.

Cellular changes due to cancer

Cells start operating differently when something goes wrong with the way proteins behave. Proteins serve as small molecule-sized machines responsible for running our cells, usually keeping them healthy and alive like microscopic factories. Changes to the activity of these machine-like proteins can often lead to cancer through a breakdown of healthy processes. In the same way that we might get an idea of what a person does based on where they spend most of their time, we can learn a lot about a protein from its placement within the cell.

The cellular traffic report

In this study, researchers analyzed the location of proteins in seven types of colorectal cancer cells increasing in stages of severity. To achieve their goal, the scientists separated different compartments within cancerous cells from one another and analyzed their contents individually. The analysis is made possible using a high-precision instrument known as mass spectrometer that can count, measure, and identify all the proteins present in a sample of cells. The technique is known as proteomic analysis, a term coined from the word "protein" and the suffix of "genomics," meaning to study something in its entirety.

Proteomic analysis revealed the compartments of each type of colorectal cancer to contain abnormal proteins depending on severity of the cancer. This finding suggests that the movement of proteins within the cell, between compartments, has an important role to play in cancer development and therefore offers insight into cancer progression. This information was catalogued by the team and made available online for everyone to access, free of charge.

What does it mean?

We can view this study as a protein traffic report in colorectal cancer. The report was placed online for interpretation by other scientists, who might be able to offer more insight into the phenomena observed and even use the findings in their own research. With information like that generated by this study, doctors should have more of the information that is necessary to make recommendations for specific instances of colorectal cancer—leading to improved outcomes for patients.

Proteomics used in the future

Cutting edge technologies like proteomics are heading closer to a doctor near you. Practitioners will soon be able to use proteomics and similar technologies to facilitate "personalized medicine." For example, personalized medicine could use tools from proteomics to make traffic reports, like those generated in this study, of cancerous cells from any given patient. From these tests would come a comprehensive report of the innermost workings of the diseased cells. The reports could then be interpreted by doctors to understand precisely what is happening in the cancer of that patient. These discoveries could be immensely powerful to help doctors individually tailor the best course of treatment to optimize patient outcomes.

ALEXANDER GALT CHRISTMAS BASKET CAMPAIGN 2017

The AGRHS Christmas basket campaign has been a long-standing tradition in the community. Over the years we have been fortunate in being able to rely on several partners and community members to help us fill the baskets with some staples and all the trimmings of a holiday meal. Thanks to great success last year, this holiday season we will continue to focus on raising funds rather than food items (any such donations will be taken to the local food bank), baskets will be created from the funds received.

With the help of our local partner Lennoxville's Provigo Robert Lafond, we are able to create baskets filled with daily necessities, holiday essentials and fresh produce. Your overwhelming support has allowed us to move forward to better answer the needs of the community and we thank you.

The baskets will benefit families from Alexander Galt Regional High School sector (elementary and high school).

We hope we can continue to rely on your support, as it remains very important for the success of our Christmas basket campaign.

SHERBROOKE

Sherbrooke traditional dance enthusiasts BalFolk Sherbrooke are pleased to announce their first soirée, combining traditional European dances, live musicians and microbrewery beers. The event will take place on Sunday, December 17, at 7 pm, at the Brasserie Le Refuge des brasseurs in Sherbrooke.

On the program is an introductory course in traditional European dances followed by two talented traditional music groups, accordion, guitar, and violin duo Bal Biquette and flute and harp duet Duo Delmes.

General admission is $7, $5 for students (with card), and free for children under 17 (admitted until 10 pm).

BalFolk celebrates traditional European dances that are easy to learn. Unlike Quebec traditional dances, European trad dances are not "called." An introductory workshop at the beginning of the evening will allow novices to become familiar with the dances before the beginning of the ball.

BalFolk Sherbrooke was founded in the spring of 2017 by Laurent Mandrile and Marine Pouyfaucou in the tradition of BalFolk Toronto, BalFolk Québec and BalFolk Montreal. Its mission is to spread the appreciation and enjoyment of traditional European dances. The group meets weekly for a workshop and a dance.

Conditions eased in Richmond attempted murder case

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

A 40-year old Avenir man was back in a Sherbrooke court Wednesday to change some of the conditions of his release.

Éric Bergeron is accused of attempting to kill his ex-spouse's new boyfriend by throwing him off the Richmond's iconic Mackenzie Bridge. The incident in question took place October 3 on Bridge Street. Armed with a crowbar, Bergeron is alleged to have threatened the victim and struck him a blow. Charges of assault with a weapon and assault were also laid as a result these events.

After threatening the victim, Bergeron ran off but was located and arrested by Sûreté du Québec officers.

In addition to the attempted murder and assault charges, Bergeron has also been charged with uttering death threats against his ex-spouse, her partner, and threatening to burn down their homes.

Bergeron was released after a few days detention after promising to respect several very restrictive conditions. He is forbidden to be in the judicial district of Saint-François except as part of his criminal case, may not come into contact with the alleged victim, and is subject to a curfew. On Wednesday, he was granted exceptions to his curfew in the context of legitimate paid work. He also has to report to the SQ in Drummondville every week.

Proceedings in this case will resume February 14.

One of the rarest ecosystems on Earth is the temperate rainforest stretching between Alaska and northern California, pinched between the Pacific Ocean and coastal mountains.

SCIENCE MATTERS

Don't blame God or nature. We're the culprits

By David Suzuki

Traditionally, we've labelled events over which we have no influence or control "acts of God" or "natural disasters." But what's "natural" about climate-induced disasters today? Scientists call the interval since the Industrial Revolution the "Anthropocene," a period when our species has become the major factor altering the biological, physical and chemical properties of the planet on a geological scale. Empowered by fossil fuel-driven technologies, a rapidly growing human population and an insatiable demand for constant growth in consumption and the global economy, our species is responsible for the calamitous consequences.

We now know that the weight of water behind large dams and injecting pressurized water into the earth for fracking induce earthquakes. Clearing large swathes of forests, draining wetlands, depleting water for industrial agriculture, polluting marine and freshwater ecosystems with nitrogen, plastics and pesticides from farmland and cities, expanding urban areas and employing ecologically destructive fishing practices such as drift nets and trawling all combine to produce species extinction on a scale not seen since the mega-extinction of dinosaurs 65 million years ago.

But we use language to deflect blame from ourselves. Not long ago, wolves, seals and basking sharks were called "pests" or "vermin," regarded as nuisances to be killed for bounties. Insects are the most numerous, diverse and important group of animals in ecosystems, yet all are affected by insecticides applied to eliminate the handful that attack commercial crops. One egregious class of pesticide is neonicotinoids, nerve toxins to which bees – important pollinators – are especially sensitive. Ancient forests are called "wild" or "decadent" while plantations that replace them after clear cutting are termed "normal."

One of the rarest ecosystems on Earth is the temperate rainforest stretching between Alaska and northern California, pinched between the Pacific Ocean and coastal mountains. The huge trees there have been decimated in the U.S. Fewer than 10 per cent remain. Yet environmentalists who called for the entire remnant to be protected from logging were branded as "greedy."

Former B.C. Premier Glen Clark famously labelled environmentalists like me "enemies of B.C." Former federal Finance Minister Joe Oliver called us "foreign-funded radicals" while others said we were "eco-terrorists." The real enemies, radicals and eco-terrorists are those who rush to destroy forests, watersheds or the atmosphere without regard to ecological consequences.

Recently defeated B.C. Premier Christy Clark called opponents of pipelines or LNG plants "forces of no." We who want to protect what we all need to survive would more accurately be called "forces of know" who say "yes" to a future of clean, renewable energy and a rich environment.

We seem to have forgotten that the word economy, like ecology, is based on the Greek oikos, meaning "domain" or "household." Because of our ability to find ways to exploit our surroundings, humans are not confined to a specific habitat or ecosystem. We've found ways to live almost everywhere – in deserts, the Arctic, jungles, wetlands and mountains. Ecologists seek the principles, rules and laws that enable species to flourish sustainably. Economists are charged with "managing" our activity within the biosphere, our domain.

Former Prime Minister Stephen Harper decreed it was impossible to act to reduce greenhouse gas emissions to avoid climate change because it would destroy the economy. To people like him, the economy is more important than the air that provides weather and climate and enables us to live. At the same time, many "fiscal conservatives" rail against an effective market solution to climate change – carbon pricing – ignoring the example of Sweden, which imposed a carbon tax of about $35 a tonne in 1991, grew its economy by 60 per cent by 2012 while reducing emissions by 25 per cent, then raised the tax to more than $160 in 2014.

We know climate change is caused primarily by human use of fossil fuels. It's influencing the frequency and intensity of such events as monstrous wildfires (Kelowna, Fort McMurray), floods (Calgary, Toronto), hurricanes (Katrina, Sandy), drought (California, Alberta), and loss of glaciers and ice sheets. There's no longer anything "natural" about them. We must acknowledge the human imprint. If we're the cause of the problems, then we must stop blaming "nature" or "God." We have to take responsibility and tackle them with the urgency they require.

Magog property taxes rise significantly

Record Staff

The City of Magog is increasing its residential property taxes by 3.8 per cent in its 2018 budget, the largest increase in more than six years.

According to Finance Committee Chair, Nathalie Bélanger, this increase will affect the residential sector that is served by municipal water and sewer services. For a property with an average value of $256,000, the tax bill will go up $93 over last year to $2,511.

The impact will be slightly less for owners in the non-urban sector, who will see an increase of 3.4 per cent, or $74, for a similarly-priced house.

Mayor Vicki-May Hamm says an increase was predictable mainly because of the costs associated with the reorganization of the fire department. That, alone, represents a cost increase of $1.5 million per year. The cost of snow removal, which has risen by $452,500, is also a major factor.

To help alleviate pressures, the Municipality requested a streamlining effort for all of its departments that led to savings of $450,000. A similar exercise was done about two or three years ago that cut another half a million dollars.

On the other hand, municipal revenues are expected to increase by $2.4 million next year.

The mayor also explained that the increase has nothing to do with the major projects planned for Magog, such as the revitalization of the downtown area and the Omerville purification plant. She also points out that subsidies should reduce the burden on taxpayers.

Tax new tax rates by building category per $100 of assessment have been set at 0.763 cents for a residential property of fewer than five units, 0.814 cents for those of six and more, 2.172 cents for commercial buildings, and 2.719 cents for industrial buildings. Vacant lots with services will be taxed at 1.383 cents per $100 evaluation and farm buildings at 0.758 cents.

ONE COLUMN, FOUR VOICES

Opening to the Spirit

Today's word: Guest

By Revs Mead Baldwin,
W. Lynn Dillabough,
Lee Ann Hogle, and
Carole Martignacco

1) Guests who come laden with gifts are always such a delight! When I consider how much preparation goes into making a trip; the packing, the travelling, the setting of the itinerary, I am always amazed at the guests who make the extra effort to consider a gift their hosts might like.

The children who came to stay at our house for health visits every summer always came with more gifts than clothes. It showed us just how much their parents appreciated our sponsorship. A special relationship is nurtured in the context of being a host or a guest. More than a lunch meeting in a special restaurant, or a rendez-vous at a favourite watering hole, hosting a guest makes a statement. It tells our guest that they are welcome into the intimacy of our home and our lives. It offers the possibility of friendship and mutual support. It sets the stage for getting to know another person more deeply and authentically. More than simply opening our front door, we endeavour to open our hearts. At this time of year many of us find ourselves too busy to receive guests or accept one more invitation to be a guest. We rely on social media to keep in touch. Yet nothing can replace the intimacy of hosting or being a guest. Perhaps in this super charged season of busyness it would be better to do less and reserve more time for authentic communication. Host a guest, be a guest. Spread goodwill towards others. Get to know your neighbours better.

2) My father used to teach us, when we were hiking in the woods, to be good guests of the forest. I remember tramping behind him, as he pointed out the names of trees and plants and insects. Showing us traces of other non-human visitors. The animals in the woods are our hosts, he'd say, and their home should be respected.

An outdoor adventure course I took once similarly taught us to leave nothing behind that does not belong to the natural habitat, unless it be our wonder and appreciation. As teachers in training for environmental studies, nature was our curriculum. Our lesson plan was to engage with various ecologies and learn from them, how to instill awareness in our young students. Leave no trace of your passing through, treat everything - leaf and branch and stone along the path - as pure gift.

It would be good for us to remember that we are all guests here. Nature itself welcomes us. Beauty welcomes us at every turn. We humans are not the hosts. To quote Gunter Grass: "If we take into account the existence of our planet, we have to recognize that we are guests that spend a short and very determined period in this world, and all we leave behind is nuclear waste." The best guests leave behind a gift or thank you note, and may even strip the bedding to help make clean up easier for the next visitor.

We have a vision of ourselves as stewards of earth. In the best sense that makes us guardians who protect and preserve. Yet in mass, on a global scale, we've taken over as if we are the owners, assuming rights to appropriate everything within reach. The next visitors will be the children of our children.

Sometimes I wonder what the other visitors here think of us and our habit of taking over the place. Let us remember we are not owners but guests, no less or more honoured than others, and on all levels teach and practice good manners

3) Rumi says, "For sixty years I have been forgetful, but not for a second has this flowing towards me stopped or slowed. Now I realize that I am the guest the mystics talk about." I older I get, the more this being the guest makes sense to me; I know I will not be here forever.

We keep our guest room at home ready for the unexpected traveler, coming through the townships on their way east or south. We try to anticipate what simple practical needs

The role of the host is to welcome and provide hospitality. To set the table and prepare the feast. The role of the guest is to show up, fit into the festivities, and enjoy the visit, maybe even bear gifts and news from near or far away. Sometimes they bring potluck or even help with the dishes, as just happened with guests last week at our church's annual Pageant and Turkey Supper. After the meal, the guests - mostly men - cleared the tables and took charge of the kitchen. Clearly, they felt at home.

Amidst the festivities of this season, we will change places and practice being both guest and host. The boundary between giving and receiving is obscured as we mingle to celebrate and enjoy being in each other's company.

More and more I am convinced that life is one great banquet laid out before us every day. Whatever role we play, let us be thankful.

4) As minister in my first congregation after I was ordained, I was always a bit brash. I remember mentioning in one of my first services that the best way to get to know me was to invite me to a meal. Needless to say, I was invited often to be a guest for lunch or dinner. Maritimers are known for their hospitality. I also remember that they would take extra care to clean house and I was often seated in a fancy parlour. Guests were always well treated.

In the biblical accounts, Jesus was often a guest. He was a wedding guest when water was changed into wine. He was often a guest at the home of his friends, Mary, Martha, and Lazarus. He even invited himself to be a guest sometimes, as in the story of Zaccheus. Once at a banquet Mary anointed Jesus' feet with perfume and wiped them with her hair to honour him as a special guest. He was so touched by the welcome that at the Last Supper he also anointed the feet of his disciples.

At Christmas time we welcome Jesus as a guest in a spiritual sense. We light candles and sing carols to mark his arrival. We clean our homes before decorating them in a festive manner. We bake cookies, and cook special meals. We put on our best face to welcome our friends.

One Christmas carol, "People Look East" has a line that goes "Love the guest is on the way." This reminds us that God came to us not as royalty but as a child. How do we welcome this special guest? How do we welcome any guest for that matter? Perhaps this is something to think about this special season.

One word, four voices - now it's your turn to reflect: Hosting or being the guest, or both - which do you prefer?

Rev. Mead Baldwin pastors the Waterville & North Hatley pastoral charge; Rev. Lynn Dillabough is now Rector of St. Paul's in Brockville ON. She continues to write for this column as a dedicated colleague with the Eastern Townships clergy writing team; Rev. Lee Ann Hogle ministers to the Ayer's Cliff, Magog & Georgeville United Churches; Rev. Carole Martignacco is Consulting Minister to UU Estrie-Unitarian Universalists in North Hatley.

Not many new Christmas albums released this year

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE PELLETIER AULIS

It really feels like it is the right time to deck the halls with sounds of country Christmas music. There are not many new Christmas albums out this year, but rather songs and collaboration that you can only order online.

Alabama are the ones who offer the new country Christmas music release in 2017 while songs featuring Blake Shelton and Shania Twain are also quite interesting.

Alabama's new Christmas album is one of very few full-length albums being released this year. Anyway, I am positive that an older Alan Jackson or George Strait album will sound perfect as you decorate.

This year, 'O Holy Night' has been the pick for four amazing performances being released in the past few weeks. Kelleigh Bannen, Brett Young, Lee Brice, and Luke Bryan all bring their own style to the classics, but if you're a fan of country Christmas music, no doubt you're going to love each of them.

There's also Willie Nelson teaming with Lee Ann Womack to record 'Baby, It's Cold Outside.' Sometimes, releasing samples is what artists decide to do, instead of releasing a full album.

You can also find Kellie Pickler and Phil Vassar teaming up for 'The Naughty List,' Gwen Stefani and Blake Shelton duet on, 'You Make It Feel Like Christmas,' Nick Jonas and Shania Twain sing 'Say All You Want for Christmas,' while Lucas Hoge released a full album titled Christmas Is Here.

This is the first year that Kenny Rogers isn't touring for the holidays but Martina McBride is picking up with a Christmas tour of her own. Home Free are touring too, and Brett Eldredge has a dash of holiday dates planned for 2017.

Here's a look at what was released last year. You might find a few new albums that you don't have. It's time to bust out the decorations and fa-la-la-la-along to all this exciting music.

Christmas Together, Garth Brooks and Trisha Yearwood

This one is their first duets album. Selections include the jazz standard, 'I'm Beginning to See the Light,' as well as 'Santa Baby,' 'Marshmallow Christmas,' and Dolly Parton's 'Hard Candy Christmas.' The 11-song collection closes with their original 'What I'm Thankful For (The Thanksgiving Song)' featuring James Taylor. A great choice if you like Garth Brooks.

Glow, Brett Eldredge

From the strings to the jazzy horn arrangements, to Eldredge's crooning, everything about the 11-song collection screams classic Sinatra. Eldredge co-wrote the title track with Ross Copperman, who co-wrote his first four No. 1s including, 'Lose My Mind.' It sure gives you that warm and fuzzy feeling. You will love 'White Christmas' and 'Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas.' It was my favourite Christmas album last year.

Tennessee Christmas, Amy Grant

The 13-song collection is her first holiday album in nearly 20 years. Her vocal performances are warm and inviting on 'December,' 'I've Got My My Love to Keep Me Warm,' and 'Baby, It's Cold Outside,' the latter of which features her husband Vince Gill. The album opens with the title track, a song she co-wrote with Gary Chapman (her ex-husband) in 1983 for her first holiday collection, A Christmas Album.

White Christmas Blue, Loretta Lynn

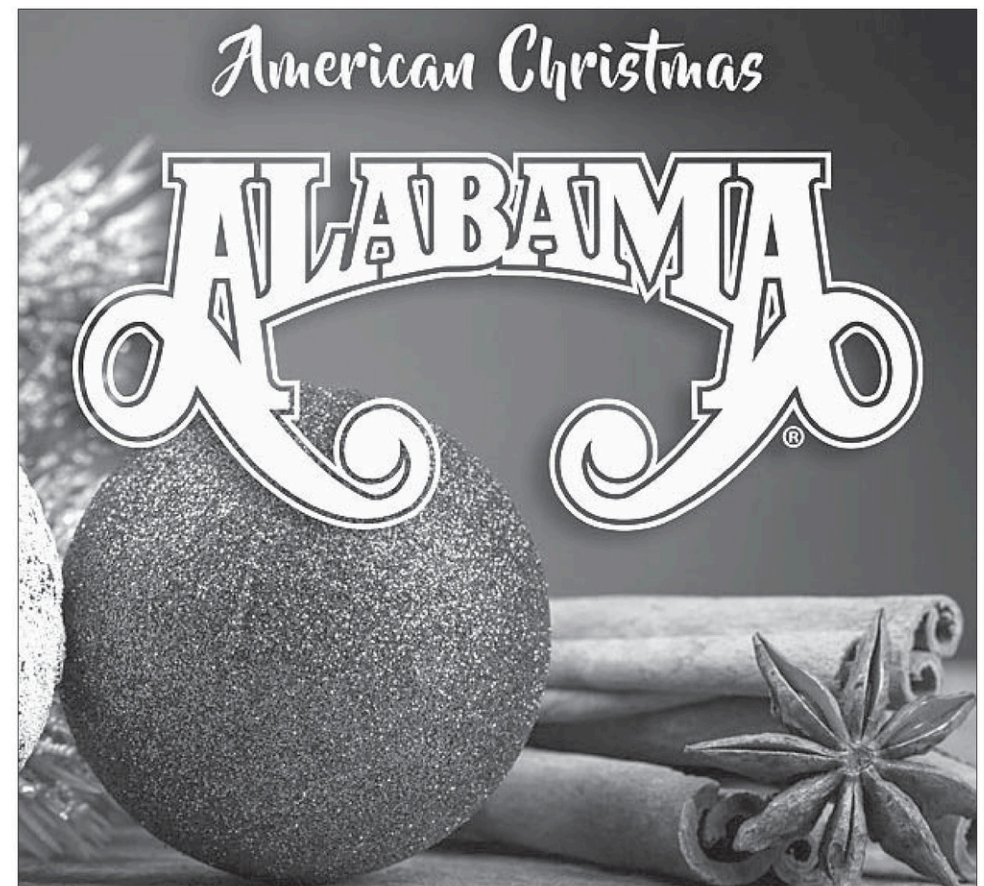

Recorded while tracking her latest album, Full Circle, Lynn's 12-song holiday collection opens with the title track, a new original weeper she co-wrote with Shawn Camp. She revisits 'Country Christmas' and 'To Heck With Ole Santa Claus,' which were originally featured on a holiday album she released 50 years ago. Included are popular classics, traditional hymns, and a reading of 'Twas the Night Before Christmas.'

My Kind of Christmas, Reba McEntire

McEntire decided to cover the classics for this 11-song Cracker Barrel exclusive, which is the first acoustic album she's ever made. Selections include 'Silent Night,' 'I'll Be Home for Christmas,' and 'The Christmas Song (Chestnuts Roasting On An Open Fire).' It is her third Christmas album.

A Very Kacey Christmas, Kacey Musgraves

It's 12 songs of country Christmas magic from start to finish. Chris Scruggs' lap steel picking and the Quebe Sisters' singing on 'Mele Kalikimaka' instantly transport the listener to a Hawaiian paradise. Willie Nelson guests on 'A Willie Nice Christmas,' while fellow Texan Leon Bridges appears on the soulful 'Present Without a Bow.' Just like the singer herself, this album is refreshing and you will love it.

To Celebrate Christmas, Jennifer Nettles

Nettles' voice is brightly shining throughout the 10-song collection. It's especially powerful on her version of 'O Holy Night.' Additional standouts include Kenny Loggins' 'Celebrate Me Home,' her jazzy spin on 'God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen' featuring Andra Day and a driving cover of 'Little Drummer Boy' featuring Idina Menzel.

Celebrate Christmas, the Oak Ridge Boys

This 12-song collection is heavy on hymns celebrating the night Jesus was born. But their new cover of 'Blue Christmas' has to be one of the bluest versions released last year.

The Greatest Gift of All, Rascal Flatts

The 10-song collection kicks off with a big gospel rendition of 'Joy to the World.' The song reunites Jay DeMarcus with the choir program at his alma mater, Lee University in Cleveland, Tennessee. The Lee University singers join in toward the end of the opener. Additional highlights include new doo-wop arrangements of 'Deck the Halls' and 'Let It Snow' that are reminiscent of vintage Phil Spector recordings. To me it lacks the warm and fuzzy feeling that Christmas music usually offers.

It Must Be Christmas, Chris Young

On 1993's Honky Tonk Christmas, Alan Jackson had one of Young's favourite singers, Keith Whitley, guest on 'There's a New Kid in Town.' So it's only right that Jackson guests on Young's take of the song. Brad Paisley and Young sound great together on a soaring version of 'The First Noel,' while Young sounds like a sixth member of Boyz II Men on their 'Silent Night' collaboration.

His performance of 'I'll Be Home for Christmas' is a real highlight on this album as it really touches your heart and soul.

I hope this information will help you pick your Christmas music. Some of my favourites have been released many years ago, but I still love to buy some of the new ones every year. Next week I'll share which are my favourite Country Christmas albums of the past 25 years, the ones that I listen to year after year with the same pleasure.

‘Workin’ Moms’ returns with Reitman exploring more ‘really authentic’ stories

By Bill Brioux
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Catherine Reitman has it all: two children aged one-and-a-half and four; a loving husband and supportive parents; even her own TV series, CBC’s “Workin’ Moms.”

And it’s killing her. Well, not literally, but Reitman, 36, is not afraid to tell it like it is when it comes to juggling kids and a busy career.

“I don’t really hang out with friends anymore and all I do lately is work and be a parent,” says Reitman, interviewed a few weeks ago in Toronto while promoting her series. A special new preview episode of the show airs Tuesday before season 2 officially launches Jan. 9.

For Reitman, having young children at home is a double-edged soother.

“There’s no lack of story,” she says, admitting to taking notes on her tots for TV tales. What there is, however, is a lack of sleep.

“I love my kids more than anything. I love them more than me in some ways,” she says. “I’m also frustrated. I’m exhausted. I don’t always look so beautiful. I don’t have a perfect meal on the table most nights. Any night!”

Still, this daughter of director Ivan Reitman (“Ghostbusters,” “Kindergarten Cop”) and sister of director Jason Reitman (“Up in the Air,” “Juno”) seems just as dedicated to “Workin’ Moms” as she is to motherhood. Besides her own series, shot in Toronto, she continues to fly to L.A. every now and then to appear as recurring characters on sitcoms “Black-ish” and “It’s Always Sunny in Philadelphia.”

Reitman was born and raised in Los Angeles but she and her husband Philip Sternberg moved to Toronto two years ago for “Workin’ Moms.” Sternberg is an executive producer on the series and also plays onscreen hubby Nathan Foster.

“We love it,” says Reitman of Toronto. “Our kids are in the school system, my aunts and uncles and cousins are here — it’s a big deal.”

Good or bad, there’s a lot of herself in her series, says Reitman. She came out of season 1 hoping viewers would relate to the young working mom characters “because it’s really vulnerable for me. I talk about postpartum depression and all these things I don’t hear a lot of women talking about on TV.”

She was happy, then, when women did approach her and some even thanked her for dealing with thorny issues that were part of their own lives. It drives her even farther to “make sure I’m telling a really authentic story.”

Not that season 2 is any less outrageous. The preview episode flashes back to the wedding of Kate’s friend Anne (Dani Kind). We start out seeing the two young women in the back of a limo in all their post-college glory.

Guest starring is Jann Arden as Anne’s mother. Reitman says the Calgary-born singer-songwriter nails it.

“I didn’t know how funny she was,” says Reitman. “I knew she was talented; I knew she was beautiful and had this big heart. She came on and she is drop dead hilarious.”

Dan Aykroyd reprises a part he played in season 1. “We’re lucky to have him back,” says Reitman.

Other returning regulars are Canadian TV veterans, including Peter Keleghan, Ryan Belleville and Mimi Kuzyk.

ally, really talented comedy people come in,” says Reitman. “They know exactly where the joke is, exactly how to hit the button. You really learn from them.”

MOVIE REVIEW

Spielberg, Streep, and Hanks deliver in ‘The Post’

By Lindsey Bahr
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

“The Post” is kind of like the Yankees of movies. A Steven Spielberg directed film about the Pentagon Papers starring Tom Hanks, Meryl Streep and a murderer’s row of all your favourite television character actors (Jesse Plemons! Bob Odenkirk! Carrie Coon! Sarah Paulson!)? It doesn’t even seem fair. Is there any way it wouldn’t be great or least very good?

That Spielberg shot and is releasing it in under a year was perhaps the only potential handicap. Would it feel rushed? Unfinished? Eastwood-ian? The astonishing thing is that while there are a few clunkers (as if a parody, the film actually opens in Vietnam to the sound of helicopters and Creedence Clearwater Revival), on the whole “The Post” is meat and potatoes Spielberg in the best possible way.

He is directing off of a script from first time screenwriter Liz Hannah and Josh Singer, who also wrote the investigative journalism drama “Spotlight.” Instead of a deep dive into the reporting that led to the Pentagon Papers being exposed, “The Post” focuses in on the Washington Post executives who risked everything to make it happen. The reporting here is the side story.

Streep plays Katharine Graham, the new publisher of the Washington Post, who is taking her family’s paper public in an effort to save it. Hanks is the editor Ben Bradlee, who is trying to elevate it from hometown rag to national necessity on par with The New York Times. We meet them both at an interesting moment, when the most pressing matter is that they’ve been banned from covering Tricia Nixon’s wedding and that the style coverage is perhaps a little too snarky for the sensibilities of D.C. society ladies. Then The New York Times comes out with their first story about the damning Vietnam report and, well, everything changes.

The film actually begins on Daniel Ellsberg (Matthew Rhys) in Vietnam, and the moment he decides that he can’t handle the lies of Robert McNamara (Bruce Greenwood), who in private says that things are devolving in the war, but then boasts to the press that things are improving. Spielberg takes us along as Ellsberg steals the reports and starts the long and tedious process of copying them (somehow Spielberg is able to make even a copy machine seem thrilling). Indeed, while “The Post” is not much more than people talking, Spielberg infuses every scene with tension and life and the grandeur of the ordinary that he’s always been so good at conveying.

And while there is an interesting tick tock of will-they-won’t-they publish the papers that propels the film forward, at the heart of the story is Graham, an obviously smart and capable woman who is full of doubt, and is doubted by nearly everyone around her. Her father had given the paper to her husband and when he died, she took control. As she tells her daughter (Alison Brie) midway through the film, when she took control, she was a middle-aged woman who had never held a job. Streep plays her with daring reserve, as she finds herself unable to speak in key meetings, or stand up for herself as her board of directors is disrespecting her in earshot.

Hanks, meanwhile is having a ball as

Cineplex tests $1 reserved seating surcharge at some Star Wars screenings

By David Friend
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cineplex Inc. is giving Star Wars fans a surprise twist at the box office by charging an extra dollar for assigned seating at some showings.

The country's biggest exhibitor has tacked on a surcharge at select regular screenings of "Star Wars: The Last Jedi" across Canada in hopes moviegoers will be willing to pay more for not waiting in line.

It's a move the company says makes it convenient when a screening is sold out, which often leaves latecomers hunting for empty seats.

While reserved seating isn't entirely new at Cineplex, the cost has usually been built into ticket prices for the company's premium Imax, VIP and UltraAVX theatres. The exhibitor also experimented with charging an extra $2 for "prime seats" at the centre of a few of its busier theatres.

With "Star Wars: The Last Jedi" likely to be the biggest film of the year, Cineplex wanted to gauge how audiences reacted to the concept on a wider scale. The company says about 20 per cent of its Canadian locations are testing the $1 fee for reserved seats at regular screenings.

If the concept is received positively, it's likely Cineplex will revisit the reserved seating at regular screenings for other event movies expected to draw huge crowds.

Bradlee, a charming and crass cad with a mission and an army of capable and doting reporters around him trying their best to get the story. Bradlee and Graham clash as editors and publishers do, but there is a foundation of respect there too and it is a joy to watch Hanks and Streep share the screen.

Hannah and Singer's script is always interesting, and delves into fascinating topics including the casual sexism of the time, and the often too close relationships between D.C. journalists and the subjects they're supposed to cover. That we get to see Streep and Hanks delivering the lines is almost just an added bonus.

Local Sports

It is a film that traces the evolution of our sport and what running has come to mean to so many people all around the world.

Award-Winning Producer/Director Jon Dunham announces global release of his film, BOSTON

A RUNNER'S MIND

CHRISTINE BLANCHETTE

BOSTON is the first-ever feature-length documentary film about the world's most prestigious footrace, which is now available on several digital platforms, such as Amazon.

La Roma films' award-winning producer/director and marathoner, Jon Dunham is excited about the release, which is distributed globally by Lionsgate. Dunham shares his thoughts on the release here in an emailed Q&A.

Q: What was the process like in getting the film released worldwide?

A: Since BOSTON's premiere in April, it has continued to screen in cinemas across North America throughout the summer and fall. We spoke with many potential distribution partners but finally found a good fit with Lionsgate.

We are thrilled that they will make BOSTON available in 96 countries - the biggest launch a film about running has ever had!

Q: How excited were you and your team to receive the news?

A: We were thrilled to finalize the agreement with Lionsgate and to make BOSTON so widely available before the end of the year.

Q: What other message does the film have for viewers, other than recapping the marathon's rich history and documenting its standing as the world's oldest annually competed marathon?

A: BOSTON is way more than a film about the history of the Boston Marathon. It is a film that traces the evolution of our sport and what running has come to mean to so many people all around the world. It is also a true celebration of triumph over tragedy, which is what we saw in Boston in 2014 the year following the bombings.

Q: How long did it take to make this film?

A: I really love this film. There was so much that went into it. It was many years in the making as executive producer Tom Derderian and I first started discussing it back in 2006. As a result, the comprehensiveness of the stories, the quality of archival footage, the production value, etc. are all at a very high level. You just cannot make a film like this overnight.

Q: Where can we see the film?

A: BOSTON will be available on digital platforms such as iTunes, Amazon, Google Play, etc. starting on December 5. It will be available OnDemand on December 19th.

BOSTON is narrated by Academy Award® winner Matt Damon (1997, Best Original Screenplay, Good Will Hunting) and is produced with The Kennedy/Marshall Company.

BOSTON chronicles the story of the iconic race as it evolved from a working man's challenge, to welcoming foreign athletes and eventually women; becoming the stage for many firsts and in no small part paving the way for the modern marathon and mass participatory sports. The film features many of running's greatest champions, including Shalane Flanagan, Meb Keflezighi, Bill Rodgers, Frank Shorter and Joan Benoit Samuelson. In addition to chronicling the race's history, BOSTON records the preparations and eventual running of the 118th Boston Marathon one year after the 2013 bombings when runners and community gather in support of one another for what will be the most meaningful race of all time. The film immerses the viewer into the world of the marathon - the only sport in which an everyday athlete can participate alongside the best in the world - to experience the preparation, competition and camaraderie of the runners and the loyal dedication and support of spectators.

P.K. Subban scores twice as Nashville Predators demolish Vancouver Canucks 7 1

By Joshua Clipperton
THE CANADIAN PRESS

P.K. Subban scored two strange goals, including one from centre ice, as the Nashville Predators dismantled the Vancouver Canucks 7-1 on Wednesday night.

Craig Smith had a goal and two assists, while Filip Forsberg and Kevin Fiala added a goal and an assist each. Viktor Arvidsson and Calle Jarnkrok provided the rest of the offence for Nashville (19-7-4), which got 25 saves from Pekka Rinne.

Ryan Johansen chipped in with two assists in his return to the lineup after missing three games with an upper-body injury as the Predators improved to 12-2-2 over their last 16 games.

Alexander Burmistrov replied for Vancouver (14-14-4). Anders Nilsson allowed all seven goals on 48 shots in the Canucks' fourth straight regulation loss.

The Predators stretched their lead to 3-0 at 3:05 of the second period when Subban grabbed a loose puck at his blue line and blasted a shot from centre that appeared to be going wide, but instead deflected off Nilsson's glove and in for his second of the night and sixth of the season.

The Canucks got a bit of life when Burmistrov knocked down a knee-high Henrik Sedin pass - the 800th assist of his NHL career - in the slot before chipping it past Rinne for his second at 5:01.

But Nashville, which lost 5-3 to the Canucks at home on Nov. 30, restored its three-goal lead just 59 seconds later on a power play when Forsberg's pass through the slot deflected off Vancouver forward Michael Chaput and past Nilsson for his 15th.

Rookie scoring leader Brock Boeser had a good opportunity to get the Canucks back into it with under three minutes left in the second, but Rinne shot out the glove on his backhand from the slot.

Smith then made it 5-1 on a shot shortside into the top corner on Nilsson at 8:48 of the third for his 12th.

The Predators had another 2-on-0 moments later, but Scott Hartnell, who returned to the lineup after missing 13 games with a lower-body injury, shot it just wide.

Nashville kept coming with Fiala scoring his sixth at 11:57 - Nilsson broke his stick over the crossbar and tossed the handle into the netting behind his goal in the aftermath - and Jarnkrok added his seventh just 40 seconds later to round out a three-goal outburst in 3:49.

The Canucks, who have now allowed five or more goals in seven games this season, limped into Wednesday minus two-thirds of their top line with Bo Horvat (fractured ankle) and Sven Baertschi (broken jaw) both out for an extended period, while Brandon Suter and Erik Gudbranson remain sidelined with upper-body injuries.

Nashville opened the scoring 1:33 into the game on the first of a number of weird sequences. Canucks defenceman Michael Del Zotto saw his clearing attempt cut off by Subban, who flubbed a quick one-time shot towards the goal that a screened Nilsson, who had dropped to his knees, never saw before it looped up and over his shoulder.

Subban's fifth of the year also marked the fifth time this year Vancouver has allowed a goal on the opposition's first shot.

Nilsson had to be sharp on a Colton Sissons short-handed chance a few minutes later before Rinne stopped Thomas Vanek with his mask.

Kyle Turris, who made waves earlier in the day when he said Ottawa Senators owner Eugene Melnyk is the reason he was traded out of the nation's capital last month, then hit the post after coming out of the penalty box.

Vancouver went on another power play later in the period, but Nashville broke the other way on a rare shorthanded 2-on-0 rush, with Johansen feeding Arvidsson for his 11th past a helpless Nilsson at 14:38.

The Canucks looked to have gotten on the scoreboard with 51.6 seconds left when Vanek scored on a nice re-direction off the rush. But the call was overturned after the Predators correctly challenged that Vanek was just offside in the lead-up to the goal.

Death

Dorothy Ethier
12/6/2017

Dorothy Ethier, 96, of Yulee, FL., passed away Wednesday, December 6, 2017 at Community Hospice-Warner Center in Fernandina Beach, FL.

The proud daughter of two Saskatchewan pioneer families, Dorothy Helen Elizabeth Donnelly grew up on the family farm in Indian Head with her father, Randle and brothers Ed, Ernie, and Albert. Her mother, Bessie, died in 1921. During her early school years, she lived in Batemen, Saskatchewan with her aunt and uncle, Mary and Reg Dayman and their daughter, Eleanor, who was like a sister to her. She returned to Indian Head for High School and later attended Riverbend Preparatory in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

While visiting her uncle, Murray Brooks, in Quebec, she met Roland Ethier. After she returned home, he traveled west to see her. They were married in Regina, Saskatchewan and moved to Quebec to begin their life together and raise a family. Later, after their children were grown, the couple moved to the U.S., first to North Carolina and then, while in their 80's, to Yulee, Florida.

Affectionately known as Grammie, she was an avid letter writer and enjoyed keeping in touch with her many friends and family members on both sides of the border. She would knit and crochet many clothes and blankets for her children, grandchildren and as gifts. Western novels and TV shows were some of her favorite things. She loved to give treats to her grand-kitties and watch the birds raise their babies in the bird houses Roland made for her. Grammie always was known for her sweet smile.

She was predeceased by her parents and her brothers.

She is survived by her loving husband of 70 years, Roland. She is also survived by her four children: Valerie Cameron, Ontario, Canada; John Ethier, NC; Bill Ethier (Sandy), Yulee; FL and Michele Watson (Doug), Ontario, Canada; her eight grandchildren: Elizabeth Redmile, Danny Redmile (Sue), Stephen Redmile (Karen), Alexander Watson and Cameron Watson, all of Ontario, Canada; Victoria Merideth (Brad), TN; Jennifer Reinerth (Rick), NC and Katie McCarthy (Evan), Yulee, FL; and seven great-grandchildren: William Redmile, Naomie Redmile, Nathan Redmile, Caleb Merideth, Cooper Reinerth, Grady McCarthy and Ella McCarthy.

I'm not looking at you

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 15, 2017

Dear Annie

Dear Annie: I was told recently by a neighbor that the neighbors next door to me call me Mrs. Kravitz, a reference to the nosy neighbor on "Bewitched." I am bewildered and hurt.

My kitchen window is in view of their back door, and when I'm washing dishes or cleaning up the area, they can see me; I can't see them. Now I bend down so if they are anywhere around they won't see me. This is very uncomfortable for me, but I'd rather do this than have them make such hurtful remarks about me.

I never ask them any questions except, "How are you?" or "How's the family?" If this is considered nosy, I won't even ask that much.

What can I do to make them understand? I don't watch them as they think I do. — Not-So-Nosy Neighbor

Dear Not-So-Nosy: Who knows if they ever actually called you "Mrs. Kravitz"? It's possible this intermediary neighbor was just trying to stir the cauldron, so to speak. Even if they do call you that, the health of your neck and back is more important than the opinion of a few petty neighbors. Do not hunch over at the sink. I say stand tall and wash your dishes in peace, knowing you've done nothing wrong. But if this whole ordeal has shaken you up too much to do that, install some cute curtains.

Dear Annie: I read your column with the letter about people abandoning pets. I wrote a poem called "Spay It Forward" a couple of years ago, which you may use if you wish. I hope that it will make someone think twice before abandoning an animal.

*It was just a little cat killed in the street
She just couldn't move fast, on her tiny frozen feet
The cars were too many, moving too fast
Now into eternity this small creature has passed.
You thought you were being kind, abandoning her alive
But it is rare in winter that former house pets survive*

*Her last few hours were full of suffering and fear
A creature that once someone held dear,
You couldn't keep her anymore, who knows why.
These things happen, no matter how we do try
The vet's needle would probably have been kinder.
Now that her crushed body lies there, as a sober reminder
Did she die right away, or in pain did she suffer
As car tires rolled over her, rougher and rougher?
She's out of it now, her life gone away
The miseries of life, forever, held at bay
So, if for an animal you can no longer care
Take them to a shelter, because that's only fair
The end result might still be the same
But it will be kinder, and filled with less shame.
Thank you for sharing. — Kenneth Brandhagen*

Dear Kenneth: Thank you for your touching poem. If it prevents even one person from abandoning an animal outside, it's done a whole lot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — If you pour your heart and soul into what you want to accomplish, your dedication and hard work will pay off. Rely on your intuition and experience to guide you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — An opportunity should be looked at closely. Consider where an offer is coming from and question the other party's motives before you decide to accept it. You may be best off forging ahead alone.

Smell the danger by reading the lead

By Phillip Alder

Elizabeth Taylor said, "Success is a great deodorant. It takes away all your past smells."

A bridge expert has an acute sense of smell. He notes an unpleasant aroma wafting across the table when the apparent facts don't add up. He then tries to work out who has been telling fibs. Or, he uses his olfactory organ to smell out the meaning of a lead — as in today's deal.

How should South play in five spades after West leads the diamond two?

It is a good idea to use four clubs as modified Roman Key Card Blackwood over a two- or three-level pre-emptive opening in diamonds, hearts or spades. The opener's replies in steps are: no key cards; one key card; one key card and the trump queen; two key cards; two keys and the trump queen. Here, that would have permitted North-South to stop in four spades.

In five spades, there will be a natural reaction to win the first trick and play a trump. However, East will take that trick, give his partner a diamond ruff, get back on lead with the club ace and unsuccessfully lead another diamond, trying for down two.

Don't let what you can't change get you down. Bounce back with new and innovative plans that will compensate for any loss you have endured. Keeping an open mind and being willing to adapt will catapult you into the future with greater optimism and a new lease on life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Expect an emotional incident to raise questions regarding your feelings and your relationship with someone who has let you down. Don't allow self-deception to lead to vulnerability. Be open to change.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Added stress due to someone else's mistake or shortcoming is apparent. Don't hesitate to make your position clear. Think big, be innovative and stick to a set budget.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Be careful how you express your likes and dislikes. Someone will be offended if you are too critical or ask for too much. Be truthful, but keep your demands simple.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — When having conversations with friends, in-laws or people who can boost you up or bring you down, you must manage your emotions with care. Don't blame or criticize others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Don't stew over a situation at work or school that you cannot change. Make a point to get along with the people you deal with daily to avoid future mishaps.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Make plans to do something with youngsters or a loved one or to help a cause that concerns you. A selfless gesture will make you feel good and boost your reputation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You'll face an emotional problem if you haven't been up-front with someone you care about. You are best off coming clean and making amends before the situation gets blown out of proportion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Stick close to home and family. Problems will arise if you take on too much or let conflicts at work or with friends filter into your domestic life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You'll face emotional difficulties with children or parents. Be prepared to make your voice heard and your decision clear. You may not please everyone, but it's important to do what's right.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Self-deception will lead to uncertainty. You are best off facing facts and making adjustments before someone takes advantage of you. Don't put up with emotional manipulation or unreasonable demands.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Keep your facts straight and be honest about your feelings. Communication will be necessary if you want to avoid a mishap. Ulterior motives are apparent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Keep your plans simple and focus on home, family and friends. What you do to help your loved ones will ward off tension that could result in a serious feud.

Own whatever you do. Stand up for your rights and take charge of your life. Reassess your personal and domestic situations and consider your options. A change will do you good and remind you of what you are capable of accomplishing. Don't settle for less when you can have so much more.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Listen to your emotions and follow through with your plans. Make love and romance priorities, and share your feelings and intentions with someone special.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Let others do whatever they want. Your concern should be with matters closer to home that involve your personal interests. Stay focused on what's important to you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Stick to the truth and avoid an emotional confrontation. Use your intellect and charm to bypass being dragged into a controversy, or you will end up being accused of meddling.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Emotional matters will spin out of control if you don't stop and assess the scope of an unfolding situation. Make an honest assessment before you proceed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Information you want kept secret will be revealed if you share your plans. Put your ideas in motion to stay ahead of anyone trying to get in your way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Emotional disillusionment will set in if you believe everything you are told. Question anything that appears suspicious, especially where joint money is concerned. A partnership may need an adjustment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Make special plans with someone you love. A special gesture will bring you closer to a commitment that you've been longing to make. Love and romance are highlighted.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Get involved in an event that is geared toward helping others. You will make a difference and learn a lot about different kinds of people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Making travel plans, visiting friends or relatives or attending an event or activity that will be fun for all is encouraged. A little romance will lead to a positive and eventful evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Nurture your personal relationships to avoid an emotional scene. Fix up your space and do what you can to put a smile on the faces of younger and older relatives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Plan a trip or share your feelings with someone special. Offer suggestions that will result in plans to spend more time with loved ones. Make family or close friends a priority.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — A change in the way you do things will help you decide what's most important to you. Check into alternative moneymaking options that will transform your current lifestyle.
