MISSISQUOI COUNTY MUSEUM — The Cornell Mill, in Stanbridge East was restored to its original condition by the Missisquoi County Historical Society with the aid of interested commercial and industrial enterprises and fairly regular government grants - both federal and provincial. It is the oldest three-story brick mill of its kind on the banks of the Pike river, with a history dating back to 1830. The society needs money. A provincial grant which had been promised for last April has not materialized. The explanation is not fully known. The president of the society has charged that it has been withheld because of discrimination by the provincial government.

Historical society charges government discrimination

BEDFORD — The Missisquoi County Historical Society has been waiting since last April to receive a grant from the Quebec ministry of Cultural Affairs.

The president of the society charged yesterday that government inactivity is prejudicing the financial position of the organization and claimed that the reason the grant isn't coming through is because it is for a project oriented towards the English speaking minority.

"The ways things look now," L.R. Whitcomb said, "it doesn't seem we're going to get anything this year."

"If Glen Brown (Brome-Missisquoi MNA) has the cheque," he added, "I haven't seen the color of it."

Mr. Whitcomb charged that Mr. Brown should take action immediately to guarantee the grant. Many projects have not been undertaken this year due to the lack of funding.

The funds available through provincial grants were to have been used to update the library section of the society. The society also finances a museum in Stanbridge East and attempts to publish an annual report reviewing the history of the region it serves.

In the library the society's membership wanted to implement a new classification system. Thousands of research documents are being held by the organization.

Knowing how important it is to have the material classified in such a manner as to be readily available the society is seeking other ways to finance the project. It is applying for a grant through this winter's local Initiatives Program (LIP). A meeting on that subject will be held next week.

However, the society was given a LIP grant last year to landscape and repair the museum which it operates. Officials are worried that the government won't accept another project from the society again this year.

Funds are also needed to hire translators to work on the documents.

But even if a LIP grant was awarded funds wouldn't start rolling in until late this year perhaps not until the beginning of next year. The historical society, one of the most active in Quebec, will have lost one full year waiting for government action.

But the question is much deeper than that. Does the fact that the provincial government has not awarded a grant mean that the cultural associations designed for, or used mainly by, the English speaking population will go without provincial aid?

That is the question which members of the society are asking themselves these days. That is a question which Glen Brown must answer.

Mr. Brown did not return phone calls despite numerous messages left at both his office in Quebec and at his home in Brome-Missisquoi riding.

Until financing is found the society can not achieve the main goals which its reputation demands. The Missisquoi County Historical Society is noted for the work it has undertaken. According to acting archivist Mrs. Elizabeth Jones the annual report, a collection of local historical writings, will only be published every two years because there just isn't enough money.

Other forms of financing are being researched but the society is depending on the provincial government. In previous years the provincial government has awarded a grant.

Why the change? The society wants to know the answer.

How much the society does can be seen in the museum. Nineteenth century life in the Eastern Townships is vividly recreated at the Missisquoi County Museum at Stanbridge East. Outside, by the dam on Pike River, a millwheel once again revolves beside the old Cornell Mill and, inside, the 1974 theme for the rooms of a typical home is a wedding of the 1800's.

Visitors will find over 9,000 items of Canadiana throughout the three floors of the Museum, depicting every facet of the daily lives of early Canadian.

Nearly a person can step into Hodge's old county store, a recent acquisition of the Missisquoi County Historical Society dating from about 1840, where the warm welcoming atmosphere and shelves laden with every imaginable need made the local general store a community meeting place.

WANT TO TALK — Neil Creller, Historical Society member, is ready to chat with visitors in Hodge's General Store.

Provinces seek Ottawa conference on inflation

TORONTO (CP) — Despite an advance cold shoulder from Prime Minister Trudeau, the federal government likely will receive today a request from the provinces for a top-level meeting to talk about inflation and other problems of the economy.

The 15th annual premiers' conference headed in this direction at its opening session Thursday, and Premier William Davis of Ontario said later there are several points the provinces can usefully explore with the central administration.

"Not a confrontation," said Mr. Davis, acting as spokesman for the conference with reporters, "but I just don't see how you can lose in having the heads of government discuss what is of chief concern to the vast majority of Canadians."

Speaking with the "unanimous" voice of the multi-party conference, Mr. Davis also dealt out a stiff rejoinder to a statement attributed to the prime minister Thursday to the effect that the provinces want firm economic action by Ottawa because "they probably don't want to take tough measures themselves."

The conference—nine premiers and acting premier Peter Nicholson of Nova Scotia—expressed "regret and concern" that Mr. Trudeau should have spoken this way while they were trying to deal with the state of the economy and find ways of effective co-operation.

It "hardly demonstrates the leadership that we are seeking from the prime minister and the federal government," the provincial statement added.

Several other premiers individually indicated anger in talking to reporters. Premier Dave Barrett of British Columbia called Mr. Trudeau's attitude "sad," and Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick called it "impudence."

Premier Davis indicated it was a pretty sure bet that the premiers, if a federal-provincial meeting is called, would want to discuss with the Trudeau administration the way the federal government proposes to deal with taxation of natural resources.

The proposal—included in Finance Minister John Turner's budget that did not pass when the Liberals were overthrown in the Commons—was to disallow the federal tax deductibility of provincial corporation taxes in this field.

Mr. Davis said this had been done without consulting the provinces and had created a difficult situation for them. Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba also brought up the subject at the conference and expressed "serious concern."

"I expect there will be something on that before we adjourn," Mr. Davis said.

Besides wanting to explore this with the federal government, Mr. Davis said he thought the provinces might want to discuss such topics as greater stability for agriculture, the raising of capital by the provinces, what constraints governments should impose to beat inflation, and to what extent the provinces might co-operate with Ottawa in this.

WANTS INFORMALITY

Mr. Davis said his own idea for a meeting would not be a full-dress federal-provincial conference in the ritual style, but an informal meeting of heads of government before the next federal budget, which he said he expects to be "crucial" to the provinces.

Mr. Davis said any federal measures to deal with the rate of inflation could be expected to be included in the budget.

He said he would like to see the conference as a "working meeting to express some of our concern and share problems"—without a battery of advisers—but he did not know whether that format would meet with the approval of the other premiers.

Dealing with Mr. Trudeau's reported statement that the provinces may not want to take tough anti-inflation measures, Premier Davis said that "in Ontario we have done one or two things that are not politically easy." One of these was a new tax on land speculation in the province's 1974-75 budget.

"We've done a great deal here to try to come to grips with it (inflation)," Mr. Davis said. "We have done a better job of reducing the level of government expenditure than the federal government by about eight per cent."

"And we have yet to see any tough decisions by the federal government relating to the economy and inflation," he added.

Kiss of death for King killer

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Marcus Wayne Chenault, who applauded and blew kisses to the jury which convicted him Thursday, faces the death sentence for the slayings of Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. and a church deacon.

"My name is Servant Jacob. I was ordered here by my God, my Father and my Master," Chenault, who is black, told the court after the judge set Nov. 8 for the execution.

The jury, which included four blacks, deliberated little more than an hour before convicting Chenault of the shooting deaths of Mrs. King, 70, and deacon Edward Boykin, 69, in historic Ebenezer Baptist Church last June.

Chenault, 23, was also sentenced to 10 years in prison for the wounding of a woman member of the congregation.

Under Georgia law, a review of a death sentence by the Georgia Supreme Court is automatic.

As the verdict was read, Chenault appeared jubilant while his parents stared at him in disbelief from the front row of the crowded courtroom.

Later, as his lawyer argued for mercy, Chenault trembled, his face contorted, feigning the spasms of death in the electric chair.

Chenault, a student at Ohio State University, contended he was innocent by reason of insanity.

Mrs. King, mother of slain civil-rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., was playing the organ on June 30 when, witnesses said, Chenault leaped on a pew, fired twice at her and then randomly at the congregation.

King Sr., contacted at home, said "I'm just glad it's over." His wife would have been 71 today.

Quebec steps in

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec national assembly may be recalled from summer recess next week unless some progress is made in talks with striking transit commission maintenance workers, Jean Cournoyer, Quebec labor minister, said Thursday.

Mr. Cournoyer told listeners to a radio talk show that the decision was made after he spoke with Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa about the 35-day strike which has closed the city's subway system and crippled bus service.

The labor minister said special efforts would be made to draft and pass special legislation ordering the men back to work should the recall be made.

The 1,600 garage and maintenance workers, members of the Montreal Transport Union, walked off the job Aug. 7 to protest the suspension of 73 colleagues who refused to work two statutory holidays earlier this summer. The men also want cost-of-living wage adjustments inserted in their contract, which expires July, 1975.

Talks between the union and the transit commission broke down Wednesday after both sides failed to reach agreement on the question of holiday work.

Discussions Wednesday hinged on the commission's claimed right to assign holiday work.

Over 28 million eggs destroyed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) announced Thursday that by the end of the year about 28 million rotten eggs will have been destroyed.

Taken from inadequate warehouses and buried in open pits, the eggs were bought by the federal agency to protect farmers against falling prices despite CEMA having no market for the eggs and too little temperature-and humidity-controlled storage in which to keep them.

Criticism of the agency has mounted steadily since late last month when it was announced that nine million Quebec eggs had to be destroyed.

Bob Harrison of Montreal, hired recently as a financial adviser to CEMA, and James Fisher, a public relations consultant, told a news conference Thursday the destruction of the eggs was unfortunate, but that it represented only a small portion of the 5.7 billion eggs produced by about 50,000 farms each year.

Both agreed mistakes had been expected in the first year of CEMA operations and that a smooth operation had not been anticipated for about five years.

They said the destruction figures had been obtained from a detailed check of stored eggs purchased from provincial marketing boards.

Beryl Plumtre, chairman of the food prices review board, called the news shocking and James McGrath (St. John's East), Progressive Conservative consumer affairs critic, said the egg destruction "is tantamount to criminal negligence."

RENEWED DEMAND

Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet renewed his demand for consumer representation on CEMA and Maryon Brechin, marketing board spokesman for the Consumers Association of Canada, suggested that the total of eggs destroyed will be closer to 35 million "if we ever get the full total."

James Johnstone, chairman of the Ontario Egg Producers Marketing Board, said a claim by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan that agency people are provincial and not federal is not true.

Mr. Johnstone said each member of the agency represents a provincial board but that the agency reported to the National Farm Products Marketing Council which is Mr. Whelan's direct responsibility.

Regarding demands by most critics for a full review and re-assessment of the CEMA operations, Mr. Fisher and Mr. Harrison said such a review already is under way.

Both rejected Mr. Ouellet's suggestion that consumer representatives be on the board.

St. Francis School Board says Not opposing Bill 22 was best policy

By ROSA HARRIS
Record Reporter

DRUMMONDVILLE — The English of Quebec are an endangered species, as a direct result of bill 22, in the opinion of Wendell Sparkes of the St. Francis Protestant School Board, but although he finds the bill anti-democratic, he feels it is ultimately sensible.

"The Bourassa government made a lot of legitimate claims when it introduced the bill," the director-general said in an interview yesterday, "and our school board deviated from the 'party line' set by other Anglophone boards in the province in our approach to the legislation. Of course we had some strong objections to the bill," he affirmed, "but we tended to look upon its passing as inevitable."

He explained that most English education officials preferred to condemn the bill outright rather than attempt to change its contents by proposing amendments at the public hearings held in the early summer.

The SFPSB was one of the few English-speaking boards to vote against supporting a resolution condemning Bill 22. The resolution had first been passed by the Greater Montreal Protestant School Board and had been sent on to the local board for their approval.

"We felt that blanket rejection of the legislation would not serve our purposes, aside from accomplishing nothing," he went on, "so we decided to work on a brief in the hopes that our recommendations would be acted on."

The logic has been proven sound. "Many of our proposals were incorporated into the final reading," he said.

One of the amendments adopted was the direct result of the SFPSB. "We insisted on a guarantee of English language educational rights. This guarantee has now been built into the legislation," Mr. Sparkes pointed out.

He feels that while both languages should enjoy official status, French must be regarded as the language of priority, "but I don't see why all our internal written communications must be in French." He sees this as an enormous imposition, which he says the board will fight against on the grounds that it is unconstitutional.

The chairman of the school board broke a tie vote on the question of whether to condemn the bill or to suggest changes.

Chester Perkins, secretary general of the St. Francis School board is happy that this avenue was used. "We didn't want to jump on the bandwagon," he remarked, "but chose to handle the issue more moderately. It paid off. We achieved more changes than we expected." He added that the brief they submitted was much milder in content than most of the others put forth by different boards.

Bruce Fairborn, the chairman of the board who broke the straight split by voting in favor of a moderate approach, explained his action this way. "Our decision to attempt changing wasn't exactly radical, but it was more direct than most. Many of our criticisms were listened to. Many of our proposals were accepted." He went on to say that some of the amendments actually left the English speaking population in a stronger position than it did the French segment.

"We managed to retain the chance to educate our children as we want to. Francophones have no such freedom," he noted.

He explained that the passing of the bill will have little immediate effect on the schools in Quebec. "The legislation has no 'grandfather clause'," he elucidated. "That means it won't touch the pupils who have already begun their studies in one language."

Next year, however, students will be obliged to undergo tests to determine their French level.

The SFPSB, which administers schools in St. Francis, Asbestos-Danville, and Drummondville-Shipton, will lose an elementary school, however, as a direct outcome of the legislation. "The population in this area is heavily French-speaking," Mr.

Fairborn expounded, "and under the bill, we have no right to an English elementary school. The hiring policies of the companies in this area have changed to accommodate the bill, resulting in fewer English families with school children."

He pointed out that a large percentage of students attending Protestant schools are French-speaking, "over forty percent in Drummondville were French, according to last year's figures. This session's statistics are not completed, but the number of Francophones attending English schools has probably increased," he claimed. "You can walk down the hall in some schools in the area and never hear an English word spoken."

He says that many of these pupils even have a greater facility with French than they do with English. "Many of them are the products of mixed marriages," he elucidated, "but since they are surrounded by the French language, some have such poor quality English that we are obliged to give them remedial courses. This is a situation that Bill 22 failed to make allowances for."

In spite of the remaining areas of contention, the officials at SFPSB feel they made the right move to "speak softly and carry a big stick."

"We have managed to make the bill more practical," Mr. Fairborn mused. "At least now we can live with it."

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Trading in gold mining shares dominated hectic activity on the Toronto stock market Thursday as prices in all sectors were sharply lower.

The gold index closed at 314.19, down 4.31 points although it had fallen as much as 33 points earlier in the day. It was a low since Nov. 27, 1970.

Meanwhile, the industrial index, widely-based indicator of market trend, dropped 4.63 points, the second largest drop this year, to close at 153.08, its lowest level since July 16, 1970.

Base metals lost .82 to 62.68, a low since June, 1964 and western oils 4.85 to 126.84, a low since July 15, 1970.

All sixteen sub-components of the industrial index declined. Industrial mining, banks and utility stocks suffered the greatest losses.

Observers attribute the decline of gold shares to the influence of a small but respected U.S. firm that last weekend advised its clients to cash in their gold holdings. Also contributing to the decline on the New York market was the release of wholesale price figures for August which were higher. The figures are a strong indication prices will rise making controlling inflation more difficult.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was sharply lower for the fourth straight session. At Toronto, gold mining shares bore the brunt of investors' displeasure. Gold stocks traded at about six times their normal volume. The Toronto gold index has fallen 166.68 points in the last seven sessions.

Declines outnumbered advances by five-to-one.

Gas exporting countries are investing heavily in the West

The petroleum exporting countries, their economies unable to absorb the billions of dollars earned from the fourfold increase in petroleum prices, are seeking to make billions more through investments in the Western world.

Financiers and real estate experts predict that most of the surplus oil money will end up in the United States, Europe, Canada, Japan and Australia.

Businessmen interviewed by The Associated Press said many of the oil exporting countries continue to hold on to their surplus revenues, putting it in short-term bank deposits of no more than 90 days. Some are being invested in helping less-developed countries, and some are being spent on arms purchases.

But increasingly, opportunities are being sought for investment in real estate and businesses. By the end of this year, the 10 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are expected to have $60 billion more than they need. The World Bank calculated that the surplus would grow to more than a trillion dollars by 1985.

The non-Arab countries—Iran, Venezuela, Indonesia and Nigeria—have larger populations or more sophisticated economies which can soak up most of their money. But even those countries will have excess cash for temporary investments.

Where is oil money going? Bankers, realtors and others in the financial community were reluctant to talk for attribution. They say they are afraid that pending deals could fall through and possible future transactions might be jeopardized. But some pieces can be put together. Among them:

—An offer from Kuwait to pay almost $250 million for the St. Martin's Property Corp., a British real estate group. Kuwait already owns 8 per cent of the company.

—An investment by the Kuwait Investment Co. in a $100 million Atlanta hotel-commercial complex. The Kuwaitis put up $10 million in cash and took out a mortgage for the rest of its approximately half interest in the complex.

—The purchase by the Kuwait Investment Co. of Kiawah Island off the South Carolina coast. The company paid $17.4 million for the island, which it hopes to develop as a resort community.

—An offer from Iran to loan money to Grumman Corp. to assure production of the F14 Navy fighter plane after the U.S. Senate refused a Grumman request for a $100 million loan.

—The purchase by Iran of $3.5 billion worth of U.S. military equipment and $4 billion worth of French industrial goods, some of which is expected to have a military use.

—The purchase by Iran of 25 per cent of the steel subsidiary of West Germany's Krupp industrial enterprise for $100 million.

Canadian company signs protocol with Soviets

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kaiser Resources Ltd., the Vancouver-based coal-mining giant, has signed a protocol with the Soviet Union that the two parties hope will lead to an exchange of technology.

Edgar Kaiser Jr., president and chief executive officer of the company, says the protocol, worked out after four days of negotiations in July, stipulates that a Soviet mission will visit the Kaiser mine near Sparwood, B.C., this fall.

"After that, we are hopeful that a definitive agreement will result by the end of the year."

The Soviet Union is the world leader in hydraulic mining methods and Kaiser has built up expertise mining coal at Sparwood where temperatures frequently drop to 30 or 40 degrees below zero and 15-foot snowbanks make mining difficult.

The Soviets are seeking to develop strip coal mines in north-eastern Siberia but lack Kaiser's expertise to mine the deposits in the most economical way.

Hydraulic mining is simple and inexpensive. Water under high pressure is used to break up the coal instead of conventional drilling methods.

ROYALTY PAID

Kaiser, in an agreement with Mitsui Mining Co. Ltd., pays the Japanese company a 15-cent-a-ton royalty for coal mined hydraulically.

The Soviets, who mine 600 million tons of coal a year, lead in hydraulic mining because "they have been working at perfecting the system for 13 years and in their coal research institute they have 1,700 employees doing nothing but working on hydraulic coal mining," said Mr. Kaiser.

He hopes the negotiations will lead to "an exchange of technology where we would give them the technology of working in cold weather with complicated equipment and we in turn receive their technology in hydraulic mining."

"The situation could develop where we would become their technical advisers for their strip-mining operations and we in turn would hopefully utilize some of their latest hydraulic mining techniques."

"We have spent a lot of money perfecting our hydraulic system and the intention is that we will license coal companies interested in our process."

Pay more in 75

Chapin said AMC cars will have about 17 per cent better fuel economy than comparable 1974 models, based on federal testing.

AMC raised prices on 1974 models an average of $377 or 9.9 per cent, compared with average increases of more than $500 by each of the Big Three.

Under the tentative prices announced, AMC's lowest priced car, the Gremlin, would carry a sticker price of about $2,800, not including shipping charges, options and state and local taxes.

GM's lowest priced car, the Vega, also would list for $2,800.

Chapin predicted U.S. sales during the coming model year would total about 10.1 million cars, up slightly from the expected 9.4 million sales this year.

The other companies have predicted 1975 sales of up to 10.5 million, up from an expected 9.6 million this model year.

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler and American Motors completed car manufacturer increases for 1975 models Wednesday by announcing sharply higher prices for the new cars soon to be on the market.

Chrysler said its 1975 car prices would go up 8.8 per cent, or $400, and AMC said its new model prices would be up 7.7 per cent, or $300.

AMC Chairman Roy Chapin warned that his company's increase is "the minimum we can see, because (cost) pressures are in fact tremendous."

The two companies are the last of the four major auto makers to announce firm or tentative price rises for 1975 models. Both Ford and General Motors also blamed cost increases for part of the increase.

General Motors said its car prices will be up about $435, or 8.6 per cent, and Ford tentatively increased prices for its 1975 cars and trucks an average of $418, or eight per cent.

Chrysler's average $400 boost in its car prices included $50 for optional equipment that is being made standard. The firm later said there would be an additional $15 increase in shipping charges.

The company also said its dealers may start selling 1975 cars as soon as they wish, even before the official public announcement day of Oct. 1.

The dollar increase at AMC, the smallest of the major auto-makers, is the lowest of the four and reflects AMC's smaller car line which carries lower average sticker prices than cars of the Big Three.

Chapin said the company would announce final prices when the new models go on sale Nov. 15.

Speaking at a preview of the 1975 models, Chapin said fall prices remain uncertain because of ongoing labor negotiations for a new national contract with the United Auto Workers union.

DROPPING AMBASSADOR
The firm is dropping its standard-size Ambassador and sporty compact Javelin from its model lineup this fall and will concentrate on the smaller car segment with its intermediate Matador, compact Hornet and sub-compact Gremlin.

The firm will introduce a new sporty sub-compact, the Pacer, in February.

AMC officials said less than half of the new cars will come equipped with anti-pollution catalytic converters.

The devices will be on all of AMC's cars sold in California, but only on cars with eight-cylinder engines, about 25 per cent of AMC's production, in the other 49 states.

All the vehicles will require unleaded gasoline.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market skidded to another four-year low under the pressure of some fresh bad news on inflation Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 12.98 to 641.74, its lowest close since it reached the bottom of the 1969-70 bear market on May 26, 1970 with a finish of 621.16.

What stocks did:

|           | Thurs. | Wed.  |
|-----------|--------|-------|
| Advances  | 182    | 424   |
| Declines  | 1,274  | 884   |
| Unchanged | 327    | 433   |
| Total     | 1,783  | 1,741 |

The New York Stock Exchange composite index established another low-water mark since its inception in 1965 with a 94 slide to 34.88. Losers overpowered gainers by 7-to-1 on the NYSE as volume swelled to 16.92 million shares.

As the market was winding up its fourth straight day of declines, the New York and American Stock Exchanges approved plans to add a half-hour to each session by moving their closing times from 3:30 to 4 p.m. EDT, starting Oct. 1.

The new hours, which will be tested for six months, are designed to encourage an increase in lagging commission revenues for the financially strapped securities industry.

The declines came as the U.S. government reported wholesale prices increased in August at an even faster rate than they had in July.

From Vienna came reports that the subject of a possible new Arab oil embargo would be discussed informally as representatives of the petroleum producing countries held a periodic policy meeting.

Brokers said the market was foundering in the grip of a continuing widespread concern over inflation and fears that it would lead inexorably to a serious economic slump.

Need $5,000 Scouts hope to attain goal

SHERBROOKE (EN) — The Second Annual Scout Campaign began only five days ago and the co-chairman of the Sherbrooke and District Council looks forward to the final outcome. Speaking informally with The Record, D.M. Patrick observed: "Our needs are well-defined and we feel confident that our regular contributors care enough to help us meet our needs."

The organizers of the campaign have set themselves a goal of $5,000 but whatever the outcome of the campaign, the money earned will be used to finance programs for Scouts in the Sherbrooke and District area exclusively.

It has been estimated that $1400 will be needed for the camp site at Lake Lovering alone. The plans for the camp site are modest. The figure given includes insurance and maintenance costs for the year. However, the Scouts have long-range plans for expanding the present camping facilities.

Ultimately, they want to see the camp grow large enough to accommodate 1,000 Scouts and Leaders. The facilities in use now can provide for a total of only 486. An additional $2,000 would be needed to clear camp sites, spray the area and purchase other essential services.

Short-range plans include sending two boys to the World Jamboree, which will be hosted by Norway in 1975. Traditionally, the boys selected to act as representatives to the Jamboree pay for 50 per cent of the expenses incurred during their trip. The estimated cost for this year is $1,000. Five hundred dollars will be needed so that the Sherbrooke and District Scouting Organization can be represented.

To point out that the Scouts have not relinquished their credo of self-reliance, Reg Chilvers points out: "A boy in the Scout movement has to earn whatever he gets."

Each of the nine groups in the Sherbrooke vicinity is self-supporting. Scouts raise money for individual projects throughout the year by collecting old newspapers, selling apples — they raise the money to finance activities within individual troop efforts.

The campaign now in progress continues until September 20. A canvasser may come to your door if you are not already a regular contributor. Anyone wishing to donate his services as canvasser for this cause is invited to call Don Lyon at 567-7035.

Stallions to appear here

SHERBROOKE (JM) — The world famous Royal Lipizzan stallions are coming again to Sherbrooke. Now on its fifth national tour, the "Wonderful World of Horses", created and produced by Gary and Philip Lashinsky, has been dazzling audiences all over North America. A breathtaking two-hour display will take place at the Palais des Sports on Tuesday, Sept. 17, at 8 p.m.

The Lipizzan stallions, known for their exceptional conformation, beauty and intelligence, are the result of centuries of crossbreeding of Spanish and Arabic-Oriental blood-lines.

The breed has had a long, exciting history. In 1942, the studs were shipped to Czechoslovakia for safekeeping. Without the mare, the breed faced extinction. The dramatic tale of rescue and return to Austria by the forces of General Patton is vividly recounted in Walt Disney's film, "The Miracle of the White Stallions".

The Lipizzan is renowned as the world's greatest exponent of dressage, and their performance is the result of many hours of exacting training. Admirers of fine horsemanship will appreciate the display of skill, which also includes Andalusians, Arabians and other fine breeds.

Handicapped well treated

SHERBROOKE (ES) — The City of Sherbrooke has started work on plans which will make it easier for the handicapped residents of the city to get around.

In the future, new sidewalks will be sloped so that people confined to wheelchairs will have fewer difficulties moving along city streets. One such sidewalk already exists at the intersection of King and Wellington streets.

Plans to provide the handicapped with reserved spaces have also gone into effect. These parking areas are identified by a stylized version of a wheel chair and are restricted to cars bearing matching stickers. At the old public market, parking spaces have already been reserved. More are in the offing.

Gerard Cote, of the Regional Welfare Council, declared that he is satisfied with projects the city has undertaken on behalf of the handicapped. In commending the city on its progressive attitude, Mr. Cote said that he believes Sherbrooke to be one of the few, if not the only, city to have taken such action anywhere in Quebec. Handicapped motorists who do not yet have a sticker for parking in the restricted zones should contact Gerard d'Arcy at city hall — phone 569-7471.

More sunshine

LENNOXVILLE (MI) — Local populations enjoyed an August of more than average sunshine, the Lennoxville research station reports.

The station recorded 250.8 sunshine hours during the month, compared with a 60-year average of 221.5 hours for August, and a record high of 295.4 hours and low of 171.6 hours, accumulated during 1960 and 1968, respectively.

Last month's rainfall was greater than usual also. Some 5.6 inches fell during the month, compared with a 60-year average of 3.85 ins.

With the temperature vacillating between the 85 degrees measured on the 22nd and the 42 degrees recorded on the 16th average temperature was 65.5 degrees, about one degree warmer than the history-determined average temperature for August.

Guard held

SWEETSBURG WARD (JD) — Judge Gerard Normandin consented to the request of defense lawyer Louis Grignon which was supported by Crown prosecutor Claude Noiseux and ordered Denis Gregoire of Cowansville to undergo a psychiatric examination prior to accepting his plea at arraignment on three counts of arson in court here Thursday.

Gregoire, guard at the Cowansville Institution, is accused of having deliberately set three fires in the penitentiary grounds earlier this year.

Quebec Fire Commissioner Cyrille Deslaurie held a brief inquiry at the penitentiary Wednesday and ordered that Gregoire be arraigned. Although the inquiry was not held in closed session, reporters were barred due to penitentiary regulations.

Gregoire will be returned to court here November 11 when it will be decided whether or not he can be formally charged.

Antique show soon

SHERBROOKE (JM) — The Le Baron will soon be the scene of an antique-lover's paradise, when the second annual Autumn Antique Show and Sale opens on Friday, Sept. 27.

Hundreds of pieces of furniture, art objects and dealers will be shown by 31 dealers from all over Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

The display will feature some fine examples of primitive and folk art, as well as many superb examples of Quebec furniture, some of which dealers have been saving all year for this show.

Mrs. Ann Beaulieu, the show's manager, is very enthusiastic about this year's show. Last year's, the first, was a tremendous success and has been compared favourably with the well-known Canadian Antique Dealers Association show in Toronto.

Collectors with every size pocket book will find something to interest them. Last year, pieces of furniture sold from $5.00 to $8,000.

The gala opening, preview and sale will take place on Friday, September 27, at 6 p.m. Refreshments will be served. Tickets are $7.50 and may be obtained by reservation only. The show continues on Saturday, and Sunday, opening at 11 a.m. Admission is $1.50. Reservations for opening night may be obtained from M.E. Maysenholder, R.R. 1, Sherbrooke, 864-4746, or Mrs. Ann Beaulieu, 842-2643.

Holiday on Ice good

A Review by
 ROSA HARRIS
 Record Reporter

SHERBROOKE — Like the proverbial little girl with the curl, when Holiday on Ice is good, it merits the use of every superlative in the dictionary. When it's bad — well, it's not hard to find mediocre.

The ice extravaganza now appearing at the Sports Palace in Sherbrooke, is celebrating its 30th anniversary with a revue entitled "A Salute to America". While the theme is a little incongruous to an Eastern Townships audience, mercifully the display of U.S. patriotism was kept to a minimum, and it was in part justified by the spectacular costumes and fine skating display that the troupe put on.

A semi-erotic number, entitled "Fever" proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that the follies is capable of producing some highly sophisticated entertainment. Sensual Jill Shipstad does an old-fashioned "torch" dance and carries it off with style. Her interpretive talents are superb; her interpretive talents are unquestionable.

A novelty selection early in the show, features a skating chimpanzee named Charlie. His antics are quite enjoyable and do much to forward Darwin's theory of evolution.

The productions geared toward children were sadly disappointing. Cascades of bubbles which drifted down from the ceiling, could not camouflage the unimaginative choreography or the weak skating.

Jimmy Crockett portrayed Jonathan Livingston Seagull in a number that could have been melodramatic but proved to be inspired instead. His all-too-brief dance routine was a high point of the evening.

Biddy and Baddy, a duo of skating clowns, performed a ski so successfully that they could compare to some of the greatest clowns.

Traditionally, audiences make a great show of mercy when a performer misses a cue or makes a faux pas on stage. Such was the case, last night, when Mary Church lost her balance and landed ungracefully on the ice. In her pas de deux with David Sutton, she managed to recover from her error quite successfully.

Paul Andre, a native of Sherbrooke, appeared as a WAC in one of the comedy routines of the evening. The gags were juvenile and in questionable taste, but he is such an exuberant comedian that he managed to overcome these obstacles.

Another novelty routine features a member of the Cook family skating on what appear to be stilts with blades on the end. This is an oddity worth watching. The remaining members of the family put on a passable performance.

The finale, featuring all members of the troupe including the 32 girl chorus of "glamorizers", relies more on the sympathetic reactions of pro-American audiences than it does on the skills of its skaters. There was a poetic irony when the orchestra played parts of "America the Beautiful" off-key. This is Canada, after all.

Chamber wants members

RICHMOND (MI) — During the first two weeks of this month, the Richmond-Melbourne Chamber of Commerce has been immersed in a campaign intended to recruit new members.

Moving into its 80th year, the local chamber intends to commemorate the anniversary with a special souvenir program and a business supper on November 18. At the dinner, the guest speaker will be Claude Duhamel, president of the provincial chamber of commerce.

Already operating with a tourism committee, and in the process of getting active an educational committee, the chamber hopes to be able to interest active farmers into establishing an agricultural committee aimed at serving as a meeting-place for discussion of common problems and goals.

In a recent press communication, Georges-Henri Poulin, president of the Richmond-Melbourne chamber, emphasized the chamber's support for the work being performed by Gerald Brassard, industrial commissioner for Richmond-Johnson.

Market to end season

The Sutton Saturday Market is completing its most successful season ever. The Flea Market provided fun and bargains for all ages and the wide range of hand crafted articles on sale made by the vendors were just as popular as the delicious home baking sold each market day.

A further opportunity for the vendors to sell their wares was provided by the Sutton Valley Council booth at the Brome Fair held in Brome over the Labour Day weekend.

The proceeds from the Fair and the summer Saturday Market have made the construction of a new market building possible. The Sutton Valley Council is now nearing the completion of this new building on Curley Street in Sutton and we would like to take this opportunity to thank the many volunteers whose labour enabled the building to take shape.

To end the season an all day Fall Market will be held on Saturday, September 14, from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Early Christmas shoppers will find a large selection of hand crafted articles to choose from and garden produce will be on sale in large quantities for the home freezer.

Next spring we look forward to opening our 6th season in the new building and welcome enquiries from new vendors at the following numbers: 243-6263 or 243-6353.

Round the Bend

A Toronto psychiatrist thinks inflation is driving us crazy. Psychiatrists and counselling agencies say more people are seeking professional help because of anxiety and depression over runaway prices.

People are making more money and getting less for it, a confusing situation which understandably leaves them worried about the future. It's no wonder. When a couple with a combined income of over $20,000 can't afford to buy a house in Toronto and food prices rise by 37 per cent in two years, people have good reason to be anxious.

There doesn't seem to be any end in sight. Prime Minister Trudeau has said that the government cannot do anything about inflation in Canada because it is only the reflection of a worldwide problem. Well, worldwide, inflation is reaching epic proportions — a rate of 20 to 25 per cent predicted in Britain this year, for example. Perhaps the psychiatrists should consider putting in some extra couches.

Man on Horseback?

A Canadian Press despatch from London last week painted the disturbing — though to most Canadians highly unbelievable — picture of a clandestine movement or movements within Britain aimed at overthrowing the elected government if economic conditions do not improve in the months ahead. The threat, according to the story, does not come from the workers, who at the moment are keeping up with inflation through automatic "threshold" wage payments. It comes largely from the middle class and the well-to-do; from people who depend for part of their income on invested capital. They are the ones who have been squeezed by rising prices and confiscatory taxes to the point where their standard of living has dropped precariously. They blame the government for a lack of leadership, for failing to take the steps necessary to halt inflation.

Naturally, the make-up and strength of such groups are very much a secret. One name mentioned is retired General Sir Walter Walker, once a high-ranking officer in NATO. He claims that in one day alone recently he had 450 letters and 35 telephone calls before lunch supporting him in what he calls his attempts "to warn the country of the disaster facing us" from a worsening balance of payments, rapidly rising prices and industrial unrest. The general, who sounds as if he would like to be the man on horseback, claims that all groups sharing his views have set up a nation-wide, co-ordinated network, ready to act when the time comes. It all sounds like a rather bad "Seven Days in May" type of thriller; but one group, which calls itself the National Association of Ratepayers Action Groups, says it has 13 million members and is now looking for a leader to take over from the present government if economic chaos develops.

How much validity there is to such claims, how seriously such statements are to be taken, and are taken by the rank and file Briton, is highly debatable. But the idea is more disturbing in light of an article that appeared in The Economist at the beginning of the year — and, since then, economic conditions, the trade balance, labor strife, have worsened, and Britain's inflationary rate is now over 15 per cent a year.

"No country which has sustained a rate of inflation of over 20 per cent for long has been, or remained, a democracy. South American countries run inflationary economies only with authoritarian governments which dictate the distribution of income. Without dictatorship, the social strains of over-rapid shifts in income from the weak to the strong tear society apart. Few countries have ever sustained rates of inflation of 10-12 per cent for more than two years. Governments either react violently to the crisis of double-figure inflation to pull prices back down, or lose all control."

Violence mars political crisis

Violence, bloodshed and death have marred the negotiations for independence in the beautiful African land of Mozambique and the former Portuguese possession now faces its greatest political crisis in a generation.

Local white settlers in the southeast African country, angry and bitter at the imminent handover of government to black nationalists, are posing a grave threat to Portugal's belated attempt at a peaceful transition of power.

A once-thriving economy has begun to stagnate, inflation is running at the dangerously-high rate of 30 per cent a year and industrial unrest is rampant as uncertainty about the future grows.

The recent seizure of the main radio station in the capital of Laurencio Marques by a white radical group known as the Dragons of Death and its subsequent surrender, along with other violent outbreaks, are widely viewed as just the opening move in a campaign of resistance.

At the moment, the white militants appear to be a fairly small minority of the full white community which numbers about 250,000 out of a total population of roughly 10 million.

SUPPORT GROWS

But during recent events it has become clear they have found broad support among large numbers of whites and it is this which holds the most danger for the peaceful future of Mozambique.

The Dragons of Death, as far as can be determined, are mainly Portuguese ex-servicemen and fairly recent arrivals in Mozambique. Their political allies are members of a right-wing group known as Fico, which means literally: "I stay."

But within this political hard core there are deep divisions, with one group calling for a unilateral declaration of independence similar to Rhodesia's, while others object to what they consider an undemocratic handover of government to the Frelimo liberation front by Portugal.

Still others favor a constitutional conference, a referendum and elections to decide the next government. The growth of various splinter groups adds to the uncertain political atmosphere.

SWITCH FEARED

The sudden turn-around in Portuguese policy towards Mozambique has added to the insecurity and confusion among the whites. Only a few months ago, Lisbon was continuing its propaganda barrage, labelling Frelimo as the advance guard of communism and the red or yellow peril.

When Gen. Antonio de Spínola took over the Portuguese government last spring in a coup against the former president Marcello Caetano, he gave the impression of wanting to adopt a more lenient policy towards the colonies but stopped far short of independence.

It was not until late July that Spínola adopted the view that the only way to end the war with Frelimo was to negotiate on its terms and the result has been a vacuum in Mozambique's political leadership since then.

What happens next, now that Spínola has granted Frelimo the right to form an independent government in Mozambique, depends largely on whether the remaining Portuguese troops in the region can deal with the incipient white rebellions which are widely expected.

Washington Merry-go-round

Lapithos-Dassi-Sisklipos villages...

The Turkish attack actually began on July 31, not July 30. But the assault unfolded exactly as outlined in the plan.

"The 61st Infantry Regiment will move along the Road Sisklipos — and the Sisklipos valley east of the villages Krini-Agios Ermolaos, following the Commando Brigade which will cover the regiment."

"The armored battalion of the armored brigade, with the tanks landed in the region of Kyrenia, will move towards Platani village along the road Bogazi-Kyrenia-Agios Georgios. It will attack the three tanks of the 39th division... The tanks of the tank battalion in the area of Krini together with the 230 Infantry Regiment will form a task force."

"The amphibious regiment... will occupy the Karavas Area and will reconnoit the enemy. The commando brigade will attack with its units situated in the area of Sisklipos and occupy the ridge south-east of the woods of Lapithos-Karavas."

"Towed and self-propelled artillery units... will move into the area of Sisklipos pass and will support the encircling maneuver which will be conducted in Lapithos area..."

The operations order also contains these instructions:

"American installations in the area of Karavas. They will not be destroyed and measures will be taken to secure life and property..."

"The units taking part in the attack will carry in their lorries food for 3 days. Movements during daylight will be effected in small parties and in such a way as not to be detected by the enemy. As long as the enemy does not fire we shall not fire either."

Just as the plans specify, within three days after gravely declaring in Geneva that they would "desist from all offensive or hostile activities," the Turks had captured four Cypriot towns, including both Lapithos and Karavas.

Around the world, the Turkish ceasefire violations were strongly denounced. In Washington, however, there was curious apathy. On August 2, as the Turks were shelling Cypriot towns, State Dept. spokesman Robert Anderson was asked for an official reaction. "I am not persuaded that the ceasefire is in danger or has collapsed," he said.

Bell Ringer: "Ma Bell's" children are not content with their phone system monopolies. They want equipment monopolies, too. Pacific Telephone, Bell System's gigantic California subsidiary, recently agreed to deliver Model 812 PBX switchboards at a reasonable price to Levi Strauss, Allstate Insurance and others. But once installation was underway, Pacific drastically jacked up the price.

As if this weren't enough, we have now learned that even as its salesmen were quoting the original low price, Pacific's management was estimating how much prices should be raised. Pacific also assured the California Public Utilities Commission that the additional PBX costs would not "increase any rate or charge" to customers. Yet, at that same time, Pacific was telling customers that some rates would skyrocket.

At Pacific Telephone, a spokesman insisted that the price juggling had nothing to do with trying to underbid competition and then hiking prices once the customer was committed, a classic way of driving out competition. The spokesman insisted that the low price quotes were made only by a few "overzealous" salesmen and that the deals could be terminated without penalty.

But we have located at least one low-cost contract which was dated after Pacific had all the data it needed to predict a realistically higher price. Meanwhile, a consumer advocate, David Wilner, is suing Ma Bell's Pacific subsidiary to roll back the price.

As necessary as water but dwindling

By Don Oakley

The warning that automobile antifreeze will be in short supply this season and double the price it used to be is an unpleasant reminder that the energy crisis is still very much with us.

The waiting lines may be gone at the neighborhood gas station but there is a "hidden" part of the energy crisis we are not too conscious of until we discover a product we once took for granted is no longer available or has soared in cost.

This is the portion of the energy spectrum that concerns the small amount of the nation's oil and natural gas that is not used for fuel but as raw material for making the petrochemicals that have become so essential to modern life. How essential?

"From the time we get up in the morning and brush our teeth with a plastic toothbrush and wash our faces with man-made detergent, until we go to bed at night and pull our permanent press sheets and synthetic blankets, we are surrounded by petrochemicals."

The quote is by Richard C. Perry who is in charge of Feedstock and Energy for Union Carbide Corp.

Although the percentage of oil and natural gas that goes to make petrochemicals is extremely small compared to the amount that goes to fuel uses — about five per cent of the oil and 10 per cent of gas — our dependence upon them is much greater than we realize, says Perry.

Consider the family car. If we were to remove everything based on petrochemicals from today's automobile, gone would not only be such essentials as antifreeze but radiator hoses themselves, also tires, brake fluid, steering wheel, dashboard, upholstery and carpeting. Gone, too, would be the windshield because the resins that hold safety glass together are derived from petrochemicals. And also gone, the grille and even the paint.

In and around the home we come in contact with petrochemicals in paints and finishes for walls, furniture and appliances, vinyl wall coverings and floor tile, kitchen countertops, refrigerator for air conditioners, refrigerators and freezers.

Even the family medicine chest depends upon petrochemicals. Common aspirin is a petrochemical derivative. In the garden shed: Garbage and leaf bags, fertilizers, bug sprays, weed killers — all petrochemicals.

Okay. But do we really need all these manmade materials? Why not go back to the naturally occurring materials we used before synthetics came along?

The answer is simple, says Perry: Natural products are in extremely short supply and getting shorter. There are too many people in the world today to be supported by natural products. There aren't enough trees and we couldn't raise enough sheep.

Even if natural materials were available, in many cases they cannot do the job as well or as inexpensively as synthetics with their unique properties of light weight combined with strength, wrinkle resistance, long wear, etc.

Then, too, any massive shift back to natural materials would cause severe economic dislocations. It might seem a simple matter, for instance, to go back to cotton for all the things we now make from synthetic fibers. But how do we come by the 16 to 20 million additional acres of cropland?

To add 16 million acres of cotton would mean reducing the nation's soybean crop by 30 per cent. A reduction that size in soybean production would send the cost of animal feed skyrocketing worse than it is already.

In sum, like it or not, we are dependent upon petrochemicals. From no other single natural resource do we get four of the fundamental needs of life: Food, through fertilizers and pesticides; shelter, through structural materials, coatings and adhesives; clothing, through fibers and health care, through drugs.

The banana split of just desserts

By Ralph Novak

"You are a low and despicable criminal," the judge snarled. "You have lied and cheated and stolen. You have disgraced yourself, your family and your friends. You have betrayed the trust of all who had confidence in you. I'm only sorry that the law limits the jail sentence I can administer or I'd lock you up and throw away the key. In all my years on the bench, I've never seen such flagrant behavior."

"What will your employer say about all this? By the way, who was your employer again?"

"The White what? You mean the White Tower? Why, you're not fit to fry a hamburger nor salt a french fry. You're not fit to shake any good old American milk or put ice in a soft drink. You're..."

"It's not White Tower, you say: it's White House? THE White House?"

"Well. Well. Well again. That puts an entirely different light on things, I must say. Bailiff, let me look at that list of crimes again. Umm."

"Now that I think of it, what's a little lying and cheating and stealing more or less? Doesn't everybody steal stationery and pencils from his boss, after all?"

"And another thing: Now I realize how sincere you were. Sincerity is always a good thing, even in a criminal, and you were a criminal, and you were a heckuva sincere criminal. I always say that anything that's worth doing is worth doing well and it's clear that you were really committed to excellence in trickery and deceit."

"Now I also think, on reconsideration, that I should take into account all the suffering you've been doing. You've had to keep calling your $200-a-day lawyers all the time, which is a nuisance, I know, especially with phone service being what it is these days. You've had to spend a lot of time getting your memoirs into shape for publication, which can really be a drag. You've had to read all that fine print in the newspapers to see how your stocks are doing. And you've bitten your fingernails down to the quick worrying over who would polish your Corvette when you went to prison."

"After all, it's not as if you were some common mugger or burglar who doesn't have any expensive lawyers or memoirs or investments or Corvettes to worry about. You've already been punished so much, in fact, that I'm strongly considering cancelling your sentence altogether and ordering the government to give you a couple of million dollars or so."

"But I guess I can't really do that. So I'm going to sentence you to three weeks on probation during which you'll be required to eat a banana split every day. And I'm going to fine you 34 cents, which, I might point out, is something you might be able to work into a tax deduction. In conclusion, I'll just ask that you promise not to do anything bad again."

"Yes, right; that's fine. I hope you'll accept my personal apologies for all the trouble you've gone through. I noticed when you were promising just now, in fact, that you are so tense your fingers seem to be all crossed."

Metric system inches on

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States may have tossed a wrench into the works, but the metric commission feels Canada will continue to inch toward metres, grams and hectares.

The U.S. Congress earlier this year voted overwhelmingly against a bill designed to facilitate conversion to the metric system. This likely means Canadian conversion will be slightly slower than planned because the two countries' economies are so closely linked.

"We are not controlled by the United States, but we have to take it into account," said Stevenson Gossage, chairman of the 16-member commission.

Canadians and Americans are likely to have a foot on both sides of the measurement fence for some time, but the commission wants full "metrication" as soon as possible because of the economic implications.

Frank Symons, the commission's information and education director, said conversion should be in full stride by about 1977 and that the commission will become extinct once its job is done.

"The faster we can work ourselves out of a job, the better,"

MANY HAVE IT

Changing to the metric system—actually to a slightly revised method known as the Systeme International d'Unites or SI—would make Canada more at home in a world that is 90 per cent metric.

Aside from the U.S., the only other holdouts are Jamaica, Sierra Leone, Yemen, Barbados, Nauru, Gambia, Liberia and Tonga.

Even in Britain, where much of the present standard measurement system evolved, metrication is well along the road.

The modern metric system evolved in France and was adopted there by law in 1799. The metre was intended to be 1-10-millionth of the distance between the poles and the equator, but doubts about the accuracy of this have made it expedient to define the metre legally as the length of a platinum bar kept in Paris.

As measurement goes, the metric system is a newcomer compared with the standard method used in Canada, which is based on a weird set of measurements dating back more than 1,000 years in some cases.

MEASURED BY BARLEY

The inch, for example, originated as the length of "three barleycorns, round and dry," laid end to end. And the foot, as late as the 18th century, had as many as 280 variations in Europe, thanks to the diverse sizes of nobles and officials who decreed their own feet should be the standard.

Today, however, despite the delays inherent in any bureaucracy, the metric system is being adopted piecemeal here and in the U.S.

Many American federal agencies already use it for science, medicine and technology. The agriculture department, in its regular crop reports, includes a summary converting it to metric figures. A number of American corporations, including Ford, General Motors and IBM, have announced their intention of going metric.

"Most major corporations have been converting since at least the beginning of the '70s," Mr. Symons said. "IBM has been working on it since 1966."

CANADA LEADS U.S.

He said Canadian subsidiaries of these firms are converting and that with the help of the federal and provincial governments, Canada is well ahead of the U.S. in the overall picture.

Conversion is taking place outside the corporate sector. More than 60 per cent of Canadian hospitals are completely metric and schools in at least six provinces are experimenting with metric education at the elementary level.

In Toronto, John Del Grande, mathematics co-ordinator for the North York board of education, said all borough schools from kindergarten to Grade 13 will be using the metric system in two years.

"It's working very well as far as the students are concerned," he said, referring to a current experiment at junior levels. "But obviously the adults are going to have second thoughts."

Converting adults to the metric way of thought may be more of a problem than the actual conversion itself, Mr. Symons said.

COMPLAINTS HEARD

"On hot-line shows older people call up and say 'this is terrible' or 'I will never work in the metric world.'"

But they likely will have no choice because of the way metrication is mushrooming in Canada. Little things—such as the proliferation of road signs in Quebec, where the kilometre is fast replacing the mile, and the packaging of all toothpastes in metric tubes—should help convince the critics that metrication is here to stay.

By April 1, 1975, all temperatures will be given in centigrade, which uses the freezing point of water as zero degrees and the boiling point as 100. The Fahrenheit scale has been abandoned in many countries, including Britain.

Adoption of the metric system, says the consumer and corporate affairs department in a booklet, undoubtedly will benefit industry and the consumer.

SEEKS UNIFORMITY

"In the last 20 years, there has been a continuing trend toward improved communications and greater world trade," it says.

"Along with this, there has been a desire for world uniformity in standards to make life easier for both the consumer and the producer."

The decimal-based metric system will simplify unit pricing for housewives as well as industry, not to mention such things as the bicycle, which now may have two or three different kinds of threads on its nuts and bolts.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association has established a metric resources centre to help ease its members into the metric system. The association says Canada likely will be predominantly metric by 1980.

The Metric Commission, which first met in January, 1972, has 11 steering committees assisting more than 200 industrial, consumer, service, labor, trade, agricultural, professional and educational associations that have been asked to co-operate.

The commission has handy conversion charts, booklets on such things as how metric symbols look in shorthand, bibliographies of material from other countries that already have gone metric and even posters.

One poster, showing cartoons of a 150-centimetre female jockey and a 220-centimetre male basketball player, says "think metric" in both official languages.

Another, which had to be scrapped because of protests from women's libbers, shows a bikini-clad young thing with the caption "Girls measuring 90-60-90 are inevitable." That's about 37-24-37 in standard measurements.

Oil king's tug-of-war

TORONTO (CP) — When the petroleum industry was caught in the federal-provincial crossfire over sharing of tax revenues, Jerry McAfee was one man who got upset.

It was an understandable reaction for the president of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

But unlike many corporation executives, Mr. McAfee did not sit fuming in his seventh-floor office at Toronto headquarters while lieutenants were dispatched to carry the word.

Instead he mounted a series of speaking engagements in Eastern Canada and the Maritimes to criticize sharply the governments and vigorously defend the industry.

"Unfortunately, the Canadian oil industry today is caught as the bone of contention in the middle of a jurisdictional tug-of-war between the federal and various provincial governments," Mr. McAfee said at the time.

INDUSTRY 'BITTEN'

"Instead of working out rational solutions on an inter-governmental basis in the interests of Canada as a whole, they each take another bite out of what is already a badly bitten industry."

"While the industry, for its part, has demonstrated its willingness to co-operate with every reasonable request of governments, I, for one, do not think it should be the role of industry to try to resolve conflicting, overlapping and sometimes deliberately pre-emptive government policies."

Talk such as that has earned Jerry McAfee the label of the "Texas-Irish hip-shooter" but also a reputation as one of the industry's most articulate and effective spokesmen.

Yet it is in the area of communications that Mr. McAfee suggests that both he and the industry could be doing a much better job.

"We've been so badly misunderstood in spite of our best efforts in the past," he said in an interview. "We've got to find a better way of getting our story over, a better way of communicating with people and with government."

TALKS TO ANYONE

In five years as Gulf Canada president, Mr. McAfee, 57, has made a point of carrying the message in his easy southern drawl to anyone who cares to listen.

He has addressed himself to the industry's traditional problems—taxation, future oil supplies, exploration, prices, the role of government—and more recently to—nationalism, the environment, inter-government disputes, and the world-wide energy crisis.

What he has said has not been all that unusual. His stand on the industry's problems are those universally voiced in the industry.

But in these uneasy times Mr. McAfee is concerned about an erosion of public confidence in big business and big government.

For his part he wants to restore confidence in business and says the industry has nothing to hide.

When Gulf's net earnings for 1973 were 58 per cent higher than the previous year and the industry was under attack for the substantial profits, he invited financial writers to discuss the results.

PROUD OF EARNINGS

He said: "We've called this press conference to announce our 1973 earnings of which we are pretty darn proud. Far from being apologetic or negative, it's the other way around. We worked hard to achieve these results."

He went on to say that the figure that counted was the return on investment which was 10.1 per cent—a fair figure, he said, but by no means astounding.

Communicating, he stresses repeatedly, is the single most important factor in solving any problem.

"I don't know any way to answer questions except straight on top of the table. If I don't know, I'll tell you right off the bat. If it is something we are not prepared to talk about I'll tell you that too," he told visiting reporters.

Not that he won't dodge an uncomfortable question. Normally genial and unassuming, he will frown a bit indicating some displeasure and then, like the seasoned politician, smoothly sidestep the question with some verbal manoeuvring.

SECOND LARGEST

His company, 68.5 per cent owned by Gulf Oil Corp. of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the country's second largest refiner, third in terms of sales of refined products and natural gas and fourth in production of crude oil and natural gas liquids.

Gulf accounts for 20 per cent of Canadian refining capacity, has 10,000 direct employees and 7,000 outlets including bulk plants, distributorships, and service stations.

After more than 30 years as an oil man, it's hard to separate the man from the industry.

His association with Gulf began with his father who spent more than 40 years in Gulf labs as a research scientist. Jerry McAfee grew up in Port Arthur, Texas, with a Gulf refinery in his back yard.

His high school and university vacations were spent rolling barrels in that refinery for 40 cents an hour.

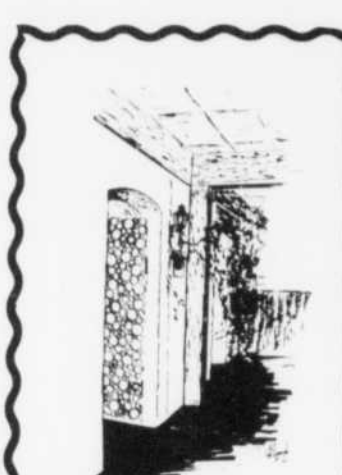

He received a degree in chemical engineering from University of Texas and a doctorate from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1940. He spent the war years with a small independent working on the design and start-up of aviation gasoline plants. In 1945, he returned to Port Arthur to "put down roots" with Gulf.

HOLDS PATENTS

That lasted about five years until he eventually started moving around, spending much of his time in research and development. He holds 17 U.S. patents.

He moved to Canada in 1967 as executive vice-president and in 1969 was appointed chief executive officer.

His climb up the corporate ladder was probably in part due to two personal characteristics he exhibits. One, he is considered decisive by his colleagues, offering a "sense of purpose," and he exudes

Farmers and Woodlot Owners

40,000,000 coniferous saplings are at your disposal!

Under its program of accelerated reforestation of privately-owned lands, the Quebec Department of Lands and Forests is offering FREE to all Quebec farmers and owners of woodlots 40,000,000 pine and spruce seedlings for Spring planting.

The minimum order is 1,000 trees and for orders of more than 5,000 plants, the Department will also provide you with a mechanical planter. But please take note: your order must be received by the regional Department office before October 25th of this year. A few weeks before the planting, the Department will let you know where and when you may take delivery of your seedlings.

Why reforest our Quebec land?

Because trees are one of our most valuable natural resources. But not an unlimited resource. And it is for this reason that the Department of Lands and Forests is actively reforesting Crown Lands. However, there is an additional 2.5 million acres of privately-owned land in Quebec (otherwise unusable for agriculture) which can be made productive again. And that is why the Department is making available — free to Quebec farmers and owners of woodlots 40,000,000 pine and spruce seedlings — as well as the personal assistance of the Department's forestry advisors.

Why should you reforest your land?

Above all, reforestation adds to the value of your land beginning from the very first year of planting. In addition to that you may take advantage of article 164 of the Lands and Forest Act. "So long as at least three hundred trees to the acre are kept, lands replanted in trees shall retain, for a period of thirty years, the valuation which they had before the planting, at the expiration of such period of thirty years, the municipal valuation of such plantations, provided they remain as wooded land, can only be changed every ten years."

In addition to the increase in land value, reforestation creates a more healthy environment for man as well as wildlife... it protects arable soil from water erosion... and provides a natural protective windbreak for maple stands, orchards, fields and farm buildings. However, the Department is unable to allocate seedlings for purely ornamental purposes.

YES! I am very interested in obtaining FREE _____ coniferous saplings (minimum 1,000) for Spring planting. Please process my request and have one of your advisors contact me to take an appointment.

Beavers seek second win

SHERBROOKE (GB) — Sherbrooke Beavers will be seeking their second win of the exhibition schedule this evening when they go against the Hull Festivals in Hull.

Hull is winless after dropping a 5-3 verdict to the Sorel Hawks earlier in the week. Both teams appear to be in good shape despite the earliness of the season.

Beavers have been working out for almost two weeks and the squad which started out with 60 players on hand has been reduced to 26.

Coach Ghislain Delage plans to keep 20, maybe 22, players this season. "Some may head for Granby during the season to keep in shape," he said after last night's workout, "but with a heavy Junior schedule and the possibility of injuries during the season, we must carry at least 20 players during the entire season."

The Beavers held another 90 minute practice session at the Ivan Dugre arena last night.

One other game tonight will see Trois-Rivières visit Shawinigan. Trois-Rivières has one win and a tie in two exhibition starts. Shawinigan will be playing in their first game.

On Sunday, Sherbrooke will be at Cornwall, the Quebec Remparts will oppose the Junior Canadiens at St. Jerome, Hull travels to Sorel and Shawinigan will meet Trois-Rivières.

Next week, the Beavers will play three games including two at home. Cornwall Royals will be the visitors at the Sports Palace on Wednesday evening while Trois-Rivières will oppose the Beavers Friday.

On the 22nd, Beavers will head for Sorel and a return engagement with the Rodrigue Lemoyne crew.

Beavers handled their rather easily in their first meeting 7-2 in a penalty-filled game. It will be interesting to see how the two teams will react in their second confrontation.

The league executive this week warned all teams about unnecessary fights. Paul Dumont, president of the board of governors of the league says he is in favor of the new ruling submitted by the executive. "When games take over three hours to play," added Dumont, "it's time something was done to improve the image. Useless fights have to be discontinued," concluded Dumont.

Sherbrooke, Sorel, Trois-Rivières and Laval have all been involved in wild brawls and the season hasn't even started.

The latest flare-up occurred this week in a Laval-Trois-Rivières game. The contest lasted well over three hours and Claude Labossière, Laval coach, withdrew his team from the ice in the final period.

The Beavers will see plenty of new young faces in their weekend games at Hull and Cornwall.

The accent in both cities is on youth, especially Cornwall where most of the veterans have graduated to professional ranks.

In the past three years, the Royals won the Memorial Cup, went to seven games against the Quebec Remparts and took the Western division title.

"Now we are rebuilding," said Orval Tessier who is back as coach of the Royals after serving as general manager last year.

Tessier is counting heavily on centreman Ron Davidson, the club's first choice. Davidson is expected to be the team leader. Danny Geoffrion, Rick Paterson, Marc Brazeau, Allan Wagar, Denis Rochon, Ken Chadwick and John Markell will be in uniform against the Beavers in Sunday's game.

Beavers will likely go with the same players as in previous exhibition games against Sorel and Trois-Rivières, although Delage may insert a player or two at the last minute. In workouts this week, Delage has stressed defensive play. "Too many times we blew leads in key games last season," he said last night. The Beavers hope to practice what Delage has been preaching.

Elsewhere around the league, Larry Regan said he is looking forward to the 74-75 season. Admitting he knew little about the league, Regan told reporters the quality of skaters in the Montreal camp impressed him greatly. Mario Tremblay in particular caught Regan's eye in workouts this week at St. Jerome where the Junior Canadiens are practising.

Two Americans have also looked good and drawn praises from Roger Bedard, the team's general manager. Mike Wong and Mike McDougal are among the rookies who have won berths on the club.

Blair MacKasey, veteran defenceman will be missing from the Montreal line-up for the first two months because of a blood condition. He was also bothered last year.

At Trois-Rivières, Claude Dolbec considered one of the finest coaches in junior hockey is counting heavily on his rookies this season. The Draveurs will be weakened through the loss of Alain Daigle who scored 80 goals last season.

Dolbec figures the league will be well balanced this season. He still has 26 players in camp.

The Quebec Remparts have 11 players under contract. They play in Chicoutimi tonight. Marc Picard, Quebec coach plans to dress 20 players. He still has 30 working out.

Shawinigan Dynamos with 27 players are awaiting word from Rick Neilson who is from Boston. Neilson tried out with an OHA team.

Speed: new NHL rules

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League plans to implement two proposed rule innovations designed to speed up play during most of its 75game exhibition schedule which begins Sept. 19.

The NHL announced Thursday that one proposal limits player changes to any time when play is in process or when there is stoppage in play following a goal or an assessment of a penalty. Changes also could be made when penalties create an inequality of playing strength on the ice.

The other proposed rule creates a free shot for the non-offending team whenever a stoppage in play is created by a goaltender holding the puck for more than three seconds. A free shot would be awarded if a goaltender deliberately dropped the puck on the goal mesh or should any player hold, freeze or play the puck along the board in such a manner as to cause a stoppage, unless he is actually being checked by an opponent.

The referee would place the puck on the centre spot of the face-off circle on the side on which the infraction occurred.

Any player on the non-offending team who was on the ice at the time of the infraction would be allowed to take the free shot but he would have to take a normal face-off position with his stick touching the edge of the face-off spot.

MUST BE ONSIDE
All other players must be on-side and only the player taking the free shot is allowed inside the face-off circle.

The goaltender must remain in his net and when the referee blows his whistle, the player taking a free shot must shoot in the direction of the net. Play then continues in a normal manner.

For violation of the free-shot rule—offsides or the shooter not taking a proper face-off stance—the attacking team forfeits the shot and the resulting face-off is in the neutral zone.

If the defending team violates the rule, the shot is repeated. If a violation occurs again, the shot is repeated and a minor penalty is assessed against the player who commits the second violation before the second shot is taken.

Girls can join Little League

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House sub-committee recommended unanimously Thursday that Congress amend the charter of Little League baseball to guarantee girls full rights of participation.

The amendment, sponsored by Rep. Martha Griffiths, D-Mich., is little more than a formality aimed at making the 1964 federal charter compatible with new rules already adopted by the organization.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the Civil Rights sub-committee which made the recommendation, said approval by the full judiciary committee was likely within a week, with a House vote about two weeks later.

The sub-committee's recommendation followed the testimony of P. J. McGovern, president and chairman of the Little League. McGovern fully endorsed the change.

McGovern noted that while the original charter referred solely to boys, litigation by women's groups and others in more than 20 states the last two years had prompted the league's trustees and executive board to approve rules changes earlier this summer to admit girls.

MUST BE HONORED
He assured the panel that all branches have been "advised to honor the change in good faith and without prejudice."

Edwards said he was "somewhat bothered" by the fact that the Little League meanwhile had established a separate softball program for girls in some cities, a move which McGovern said was designed to accommodate those who weren't good enough to make the hardball teams.

"It's an obvious signal light to steer the girls there (to softball) in the first place," said Edwards. McGovern denied that was the intent, insisting "it was created in good faith."

Rep. Robert McClell, R-Ill., complained that the softball program wasn't open to boys in some cases—thereby posing a reverse issue of discrimination.

McGovern acknowledged it was a thorny question, but said it was feared that boys might monopolize the softball program if it were open to them, depriving

COOKSHIRE-LENNOXVILLE ROAD

US takes second Cup race

NEWPORT R.I. (AP) — The American yacht Courageous won her second victory Thursday over Australia's Southern Cross and made it stand up hours later at the protest table.

Courageous, defending for the United States in the international yachting series, finished one minute and 11 seconds ahead of the Aussie challenger to go two up in the best-of-seven race competition.

Alan Bond, the Australian land promoter who owns Southern Cross, filed a protest before the race even started. He charged Courageous and her crew violated rules that are in force around the starting line.

Ted McCullough, manager of the 116-member syndicate that owns Courageous, filed a counter protest accusing the Aussie boat of essentially the same violation.

More than six hours after the race, an international jury headed by Italy's Dr. Beppe Croce said neither boat had grounds for protest. The ruling allowed Courageous' victory to stand.

Although no details of the incident were divulged immediately, it occurred less than 100 yards from the yacht carrying the three-man jury that later judged the case.

The third race in the series is scheduled for today, beginning at 12:10 p.m. EDT.

AUSSIE IN LEAD
Courageous, which had profited from a two-second lead at the start Tuesday, let her rival get the jump Thursday but quickly made up for it.

Sailing directly into the wind on the first leg of the triangular, six-legged course, Courageous made her move just before the halfway mark of the leg. Her crew made a superb headsail change and darted in front to gain an advantage she never relinquished.

Southern Cross started out as if she meant to make up for obvious mistakes in the first race. She took advantage of two wind changes and crossed Courageous' bow about the halfway point of the first leg.

But that was the only time Courageous saw the Aussie's wake the rest of the way. Her margin was 34 seconds at the end of the first leg, remained the same after rounding the second marker and went to 56 seconds with the turn back into the wind.

Her owner had promised that Southern Cross would be unbeatable when the boats were sailing with the wind to their backs. It didn't work out that way, because it was during one of the downwind legs that Courageous showed what a sailor she is.

SKIPPER WON'T BITE
Twice during the race, Hood refused to accept a tacking duel challenge from Hardy. The Australian boat tacked 19 times during one upwind leg and 18 times on another.

Courageous, for the most part, ignored her. In the end, Courageous showed her speed on the homeward leg, jumping from a 56-second advantage to more than a minute in less than 4½ miles of sailing.

In the two races thus far, Hood and his crew have shown remarkable handling, in light wind and in fresh breezes.

Expos inch near fourth with win

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos continued their drive for fourth place while Chicago Cubs slithered further into the cellar of National League baseball's East Division Thursday night.

The Expos edged the Cubs 2-1 to extend their winning streak to four games and move to within one-half game of fourthplace New York Mets, who, like the Expos, are well out of pennant contention.

Barry Foote's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning scored Willie Davis from third to give the Expos a sweep of their three-game series with the Cubs and their 10th win in 14 meetings with Chicago this season.

Montreal's current winning streak comes on the heels of a seven-game losing string the club had during their recent road trip.

The Cubs, 1½ games out of first, jumped to a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Don Kessinger walked, went to second on an infield out and scored on a single up the middle by Jerry Morales.

Chicago starter Tom Detmore held the Expos to two hits until the fifth when singles by winning pitcher Mike Torrez, Tim Lincecum and Davis produced Montreal's first run.

Two singles and an error loaded the bases in the bottom of the eighth for the Expos and Foote drove his fly ball to Rick Monday in centre and Davis scooted home from third with ease.

A rain-soaked crowd of 5,163—the smallest of the season—was on hand for the contest between the NL's East doormats.

The Expos continue their homestand tonight against Pittsburgh Pirates while the Cubs visit the Mets in New York.

Opener Saturday
Gaiters ready for big oneBy BRUCE PORTER
Record Reporter

LENNOXVILLE — A big boisterous home crowd, some super efforts by his players and sunny skies would almost make Bruce Coulter's day tomorrow. The only other thing that would make him happier would be a victory over the University of Waterloo.

"This game is very important," said Coulter, head coach of the Bishop's University football Gaiters Thursday. "If we do well against Waterloo, then we will know that we are competitive with anyone."

That statement came before the local squad's home and season opener in the QUAA-OUAA football league Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Bishop's stadium.

The two teams have met only once in pre-season exhibition tilts before this year, but with the addition of three Quebec universities in the Ontario league, the game will have much more importance than in the past.

Coulter hopes to see good performances from many of his veterans in the game. Of the seniors playing for BU, five will double up on both offense and defense. Bob Gillies will play as offensive guard and defensive end, Jeff Salvis will see duty as a slot-back and safety, Doug Murray will fill in offensively as a tackle and defensively as a linebacker, Jack Latta plays the tackle spot, both offensive and defensive, and Phil Oughton will see service at the split-end and defensive halfback positions.

Jim Burrows, Ed Jackland and Peter Sorenson, all second-year men for the Gaiters, are also expected to give the team an added boost of experience where it will be needed.

Mike Bookalam, who made some very good gains for the Gaiters in last weekend's scrimmage against UQTR, and quarterback Mike Munzar, who has been passing well in practice, should be able to combine for the really 'big plays' needed to sweep the Bishop's contingent to victory.

Munzar, the BU starting quarterback, will have second-year quarterback Steve Connell facing him from the offensive Warrior side.

But Wally Delahey, the coach of the Waterloo squad, feels his club can match anything put against them. "The crop of players that we got from the high schools this year is probably the best we have ever had turn out," he noted. "There are some really good players in this year's crop of freshmen."

He also stated that three rookies might fill the starting running-back slots, while veterans will hold many of the defensive positions.

With more experience on the Bishop's offensive unit's side, a couple of turnovers wouldn't hurt a bit, but the younger Warrior tribe may fool everyone when game time rolls around.

A parade will go through town shortly after 1 p.m. to stir up spirit for the game. Prizes will be given to the best decorated car, bike and person. Citizens of Lennoxville are welcome to join in the parade and try for the prizes to be awarded.

The parade, after it leaves the Dewhurst Dining Hall on the BU campus at 1 p.m., will travel the following route: College, Queen, Speid, Hunting, Park, Belvidere and College streets and return to the dining hall before the game commences.

Admission for adults is $1, while school students are charged 50 cents. Anyone under 14 years of age will be admitted free.

The Warrior Band is also slated to attend the game. It promises to be a battle of wits, both on and off the field.

Pennant race YANKed open

Bill Virdon isn't claiming the pennant and New York Yankees' three rivals in the torrid American League East are not conceding it.

"I don't feel any different than when we were tied for first place last week," the Yankee pilot said Thursday night following a 3-0 victory over Baltimore Orioles which left New York 2 1/2 games up on Boston Red Sox, three ahead of Baltimore and six in front of Cleveland Indians.

"Next week it'd be nice to put together an eight-or nine-game winning streak," said Baltimore manager Earl Weaver. "Let's see—that'll be four here against Cleveland, three in New York and two in Boston."

The Red Sox, who had dropped three games in a row and 11 of their last 13, nipped Cleveland 3-2 as Bill Lee scattered 10 hits and Dick McAuliffe drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning.

"Maybe this will snap us out of it," Lee said. "It better do something for us or else it's going to be a long winter."

Cleveland manager Ken Aspromonte said that the loss was not a crucial one in the Indians' pennant hopes. "I don't see how it could be," he said. "We'd like to win it, but it's just another game on the road to the top."

TIGERS WIN IN 10

Elsewhere, Oakland A's edged Minnesota Twins 2-1, Texas Rangers and Chicago White Sox played to a 2-2 tie in a rain-shortened contest, and Detroit Tigers outslugged Milwaukee Brewers 9-7 in 10 innings.

Red's Sparky no Dodger

Sparky Anderson doesn't feel intimidated as he prepares to meet the lordly Los Angeles Dodgers tonight. "Don't bury us yet," says the Cincinnati Reds manager.

After a 9-6, 6-2 doubleheader sweep Thursday over Atlanta Braves, the Reds begin an important three-game series with the Dodgers in Los Angeles.

The Reds have no morale problem even though the Dodgers have beaten them 11 of 15 times this season.

"Morale is just so much hogwash," says Anderson. "What you need is swinging bats and pitching."

The Dodgers, 11-0 winners over San Francisco Giants

Thursday night, hold a three-game lead over the Reds in the National League West race.

In the other games, St. Louis Cardinals routed New York Mets 12-5, Philadelphia Phillies beat Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4, Montreal Expos defeated Chicago Cubs 2-1, and San Diego Padres beat Houston Astros 4-1.

Lion's spurt stumbles Argos

TORONTO (CP) — British Columbia Lions made all their mistakes early Thursday night and then rallied while Toronto Argonauts saved their worst efforts until the last.

The result was a 26-24 win for the Lions with running back Lou Harris providing two fourth-quarter touchdowns.

The Argos took advantage of the Lions' early, intercepting two Don Moorhead passes and turning them into a touchdown by Doyle Orange and a field goal by Zenon Andrusyshyn.

Toronto continued to dominate and had a 24-12 lead after Andrusyshyn's third field goal of the game early in the fourth quarter. But then the B.C. offence came alive and their defence rallied to stifle the Argos attack.

"We were too tight at the start," said Lions coach Eagle Keys.

"I don't know why, but we were. Then the defence went in cold and they ran all over us. But we looked good on the blitz late in the game."

MOSS UNHAPPY
Joe Moss, Argos acting head coach, was disappointed with the poor effort his club showed late in the game.

"I fully expected them to go out and win that one," said Moss, who directed the club in its second defeat since head coach John Rauch was fired last week.

"The guys are going to bitch because we're going to do a lot more classroom teaching and try to eliminate things before going on the field."

The Lions' defence set up the late rally by stalling the Argos offence at a time when it needed to keep its drive alive and run out the clock. The B.C. defenders threw halfback Ed Shuttlesworth and then quarterback Mike Rae for a total loss of 26 yards and Toronto had to give up the ball, setting the stage for Harris's heroics.

Team Canada romps in last exhibition

EDMONTON (CP) — A 8-0 victory over the Western Canada Hockey League All-Stars Thursday night signalled the end of the beginning for Team Canada '74 which opens an eight-game struggle with the Soviet Union Tuesday in Quebec City.

A capacity crowd of 5,200 gave Team Canada its warmest reception of a five-game Prairie tour in which the World Hockey Association players won four and lost one game against their speedy junior rivals. The last minute was played amid solid applause.

The team hopes to better the record of four wins, three losses and a tie achieved by Team Canada '72 against the Russians. Coach Billy Harris said the team is where it should be in preparing for the series.

"Our conditioning is good and our timing has continued to improve," he said. "We have some things yet to work out, but we will manage to concentrate on them before we leave Saturday for Quebec City."

Johnny McKenzie scored three goals and linemates Andre Lacroix and Mark Howe picked up three assists in a brilliant display of puck control. Howe also scored a goal, his first of the series.

ADD TO TOTAL
Other Team Canada goals were collected by Frank Mahovlich, Tom Webster, Paul Shmyr and Marc Tardif.
The first period Mahovlich beat junior goaltender Larry Hendrick, after taking a pass from Gordie Howe, and McKenzie scored two in a row.

TODAY'S TREASURES

Westerner finds knives are his fascination

By Jean Barne's

The precise arrangement on the dining table was eloquent proof of the care and thought with which Bill Rodgers is building his second collection of pocket knives.

"This collection, what's left of it, I started seven months ago. My first collection had about 170 knives in it and my dad wanted it so I gave it to him."

"I just thought I'd quit collecting but I got the fever again and went right back to it," he explained.

Just recently Rodgers sold a good portion of his second collection to a dealer-collector. This will enable him to specialize in stag-horned pocket knives, he said.

A native of Campo, Colo., Bill resides with his wife and two young sons in a mobile home park at Great Bend, Kan., where he is employed as a service station attendant.

He is modest about his collection, pointing out that one "Colorado cousin" has about 2,000 knives and that several men in his family are also collectors. But his knowledge of the subject is formidable. He has nearly memorized the collector's manual which he found at a garage sale.

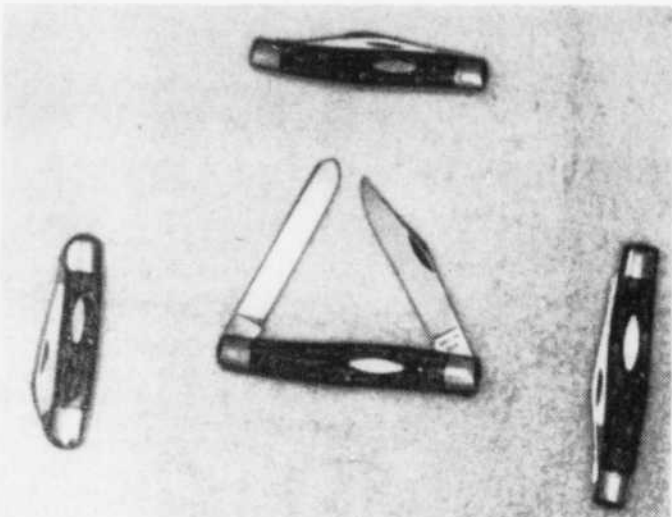

To identify a knife, he said, look for the markings at the base of the blade. There will be either symbols, numbers or a name and sometimes a combination of these three. The pattern of a knife is determined by the number and arrangement of its blades. Although there is an unlimited variety of patterns, most pocket knives fall into one of about 15 standard patterns.

Fitted with a two-three-or four-blade style, a pocket knife becomes a specific tool enabling its owner to perform a wide variety of tasks.

Bill specializes in repairing old knives and keeps a large box filled with spare parts he has gathered. One of his curiosities is a collection of worn and broken blades strung on wire.

While he sometimes assembles a knife from spare parts he has found, he is careful to make sure the pieces mate. "I never sell a knife I've assembled without telling the buyer exactly what it is."

His final words of caution included the fact that most collectors want blades in mint condition. However, in many instances you can destroy the value of a knife by sharpening it.

Collector Bill Rodgers shifts interest in knives to case bone handled knives. Pictured here are from his collection. Of recent vintage they are (top) premium stock, (bottom) large stock, (left) canoe, (right) moose and (center) opened moose showing both blades.

How we battle the inflation nightmare

By Gaynor Maddox

The steadily rising cost of food is forcing most Americans to alter their eating habits. As meals in most homes are adjusted to the increased costs, resentment grows or indifference sets in. But the changes go on whether we like it or not. In the family budget there is usually only the same amount of money (actually less because of dollar devaluation) for much costlier familiar food items. Problems? Yes, the nation's number one nightmare is inflation.

"Who can you trust today?" asks Christine Pines, a business executive and mother with a husband, a son, 17, and a college-age daughter to feed. She lives in Port Washington, N.Y., and she says she puts the blame for higher prices half on supermarkets and half on food growers.

"Actually, under pressure, we are finding we actually don't need as much meat as we thought. For example, we use more eggs, more chicken, more bean dishes. We have just begun to use soybeans and rather like them."

"Horrible." That's the way Ruth Lundgren looks at the situation. She runs her own business and has two sons, one in college and the other just entering (both are now at home), and a housekeeper to buy food for. But she refuses to give up meat regardless of rising cost. She cuts down on other things. She does admit that she and her friends entertain less and also much less elegantly. She has cut out all luxuries in daily menus such as bakery cakes and desserts, many carbonated drinks and out-of-season vegetables. But meat she and the boys want. And they get it — "meat one night, the next night chicken."

"I don't like to be taken." That's the way Anita Fial of Roslyn, N.Y., feels about supermarket prices. She has an executive job in Manhattan and goes home nightly to feed four hungry people — a son, daughter, husband and herself.

"I never saw so many yards of chopped steak in my life. But we do have chicken fairly often. Flank steak — the lean flat type, particularly large pieces, two pounds or more, saves money and tastes good. And the large size leaves some for next day. That's important for lunch. Another way I also save is by cutting up my own chickens rather than buying them cut up. This saves six cents a pound, on a three-pound chicken that is 18 cents."

Here are views of two women who live alone: Marjorie Woodard of Virginia is a retired widow on a fixed income and Beverly Sperry, a secretary, 24, lives in New York. Miss Sperry feeds herself, watching a particularly strict diet, and feeds a cat and a dog.

"Prices are terrifying," exclaims Marjorie Woodard. "I ate steak last night for the first time in two months. I live almost exclusively on chicken. I can buy one for $1.28 and get four meals from it."

She comments on women in supermarkets who pick up meat packages, look at the price, then put the packages back. Then she watches them buy macaroni or spaghetti, dried beans or creamed soups. The result is they are putting on weight. It comes down to the problem of eating more carbohydrates or starving for some, despite the calories.

"Awful simply awful" is the way Beverly Sperry characterizes the cost of food. "I must live on protein — little or no carbohydrates since I have hypoglycemia. So I go out to Chinese restaurants for dinner once in a while and it costs around $5. I carry lunch to the office in a tin lunchbox. I used to buy lunch for around $3. But no more. I like to have a dinner at home that takes less than a minute to prepare and fits into my diet. That means cold sausage, eggs, tuna fish, maybe a tiny piece of steak. Oh, yes, once a week I buy myself a few shrimp. I love them."

Lachapelle-Buzzell Wed

A very pretty wedding was held at the St. Paul's United Church on Pine Street in Magog on August 17, 1974.

Susie, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Lachapelle was united in marriage to Rocky, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Buzzell, all of Magog.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white pompadour, with long puff sleeves, hand button cuffs, laced trimmed yoke with an empire waist line. The gown was adorned with tiny pink rosettes and three rows of lace, at the bottom.

The train was carried by her cousin, Miss Dianne Mitchell. The bride's veil of tulle illusion, was floor-length, held in place by a crown of baby breath and sequins. She carried a bouquet of red roses, baby breath and shasta daisies, with long lace streamers.

The necklace worn by the bride was the one worn by her mother on her wedding day. The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Lokhorst, from East Angus.

Miss Patricia Lachapelle, sister of the bride, acted as matron of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of yellow sheer polyester in floral print, with a satin lining. Her head dress was a band of yellow shasta daisies and she carried the same.

Miss Loriann Lachapelle, sister of the bride, acting as bridesmaid wore a floor-length dress also of yellow sheer polyester in floral print, with a satin lining. Her head dress was a band of yellow shasta daisies, and her bouquet was made of the same flowers.

Miss Dianne Mitchell wore a blue dress of polyester. Her head dress was a band of blue shasta daisies. Her wrist corsage was made up of blue daisies and ribbons.

Miss Tammy Thompson acted as flower girl. Her dress was blue. The head dress was a band of blue shasta daisies. She carried a tiny basket of blue daisies with blue streamers.

Mr. Darcy Lachapelle, brother of the bride acted as best man for the groom.

Master Daryl Lachapelle, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

The ushers were Mr. Norman Sager, friend of the groom, and Mr. Davy Lachapelle, brother of the bride.

The groom and the rest of the male attendants wore plaid jackets, white shirts, and blue matching pants, and wide blue neckties.

Mrs. Alva Lachapelle, mother of the bride, wore a floor-length gown of tulle with silver accessories and wore a corsage of red roses.

Mrs. Howard Buzzell, mother of the groom, wore a floor-length gown of tulle, in sea green, trimmed in tan with a floral printed top. Her accessories were white and she wore a corsage of orange colored roses.

Mrs. Myrtle Mitchell, grandmother of the bride, wore a floor-length gown of pink tulle, with a lace jacket, and white accessories. She wore a corsage of pink roses.

The wedding reception was held at the Franciscan Motel. Some 180 guests were present for the wedding supper.

The three-tiered wedding cake was made and decorated by the bride's mother. The cake sat on an antique cake plate, which was a wedding gift to the bride's grandmother many years before.

Dancing was enjoyed by all, young and old alike, as they danced to the music of the Nutbrown's Band.

Later on Mr. and Mrs. Rockford Buzzell left for their honeymoon in the States. The bride chose a white voile dress for travelling and a red rose corsage.

Earlier in the same week Rocky and Susie gave a small party in order to present the bride party their gifts. Necklaces with matching earrings were presented to the ladies and tie pins to the gents. Refreshments were served by the couple. An enjoyable evening was spent by all.

Out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were from Manitoba, Ontario, U.S.A., also from Sutton, Waterloo, Bolton Center, Austin, Montreal and many surrounding areas.

U.C.W. annual fall rallies

Five areas of the Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbyterial United Church Women will be holding their annual fall rallies during the next few weeks. The theme of the day long program in each area will be "Apathy or Action?". A good attendance is expected at these rallies, where many members share their ideas, enthusiasms, and start things happening in their local groups.

The Waterloo area rally, to be held in Sutton United Church on September 17th, will centre their day's program around bible study and a skit. A bible should be taken to this rally. Rev. Londa Beaudon will be the speaker at the Thetford Mines area rally, to be held on September 19th in Portneuf.

Mrs. Krystyna Kouri, Social worker, will be the afternoon speaker at the Sherbrooke-Stanstead area rally at Ayer's Cliff United Church on September 24th.

The Scottstown area rally will be held in Bulwer United Church on September 26th, and the Richmond area rally will be at Danville United Church on October 3rd. Rev. Douglas MacKenzie, Richmond, will be speaking.

Mrs. Max Surjadinata, Literature Secretary, will be at each rally with many books and supplies for sale, as well as taking orders for supplies for the coming year.

Mrs. Brun was in charge of the guest book.

The hall was decorated in yellow and white with large baskets of summer flowers.

The table was covered with a white linen tablecloth flanked with yellow candles and centered with a shower cake made and decorated by their aunt Mrs. Eugene Naylor Jr.

Mrs. S.A. Pleszezynska poured tea from a silver teapot and Mrs. Marc St. Laurent poured coffee from a silver coffee pot. Delicious refreshments were served buffet style.

False teeth faze forty-fiver

Dear Ann Landers: I am a woman 45 years of age and considered good looking. I've always had trouble with my teeth and confess I haven't taken care of them properly. Now the dentist tells me I must have a complete extraction, which means every tooth in my head has got to come out. According to him I have a bad infection of the gums which could ruin my whole system. He says it's the best way, because the few teeth that I would have left after pulling the bad ones would make bridgework impossible.

I dread the thought of dentures. I'm sure I will look old and I hate the idea. Also, I was recently divorced and I'm afraid a woman with dentures would have a harder time getting married.

A friend of mine who had dentures made last year claims it ruined her romance because she was afraid to kiss the man she was going with, and he finally dropped her. Please advise — Yea Or Nay?

Dear Y.N.: If you don't believe your dentist, get another opinion. As for "looking old" and having your sex life damaged, I'm sure plenty of people with dentures have better sex lives than they had when they were walking around with teeth that should have been extracted.

Dear Ann Landers: Will you print this beautiful poem for parents who have a very "special child"? It struck me as the most moving and supportive thing I had ever read. I'm sure it will mean a great deal to those who have "special" children. Thank you, in advance. — Your friend, Essee Kupcinet.

Dear Essee: I agree. The poem is beautiful. Here it is. Thanks for sending it on.

HEAVEN'S VERY SPECIAL CHILD

A meeting was held quite far from Earth. "It's time again for another birth," Said the angels to the Lord above. "This special child will need much love."

His progress may seem very slow, Accomplishments he may not show. And he'll require extra care From the folks he meets way down there.

He may not run or laugh or play; His thoughts may seem quite far away.

In many ways he won't adapt. And he'll be known as handicapped.

So let's be careful where he's sent.

We want his life to be content. Please, Lord, find parents who Will do a special job for you. They will not realize right away

The leading role they're asked to play. But with this child sent from above Comes stronger faith and richer love.

And soon they'll know the privilege given. In caring for this gift from Heaven.

Their precious charge, so meek and mild Is Heaven's very special child. — Author Unknown

Taken out of the Caroll McDuff
project Yesterday, Today,
Tomorrow, the history of
Mansenville and the Pottin
Townships was ably acted out and of great interest and enjoyment to the many who attended and showed the great amount of work and efforts that went into the production of the lively skits and the interesting yesteryear photos.

Much research was made by team leaders Donna McNeil and Louise Lessard with their capable and willing helpers
Jeanne Trudeau, Joanne
Marcoux and Roxanne Rouillard. They got their material from borrowed books and newspaper articles and from interviews with some of the senior citizens living in the area.

In mimeograph form, they produced 36 pages of history of the Mansenville village and other Pottin Township areas which was sold at the church hall for a very nominal fee to cover the costs of paper, etc. (There are still some available at McDuff's store).

Many citizens said that it was refreshing to know that the youth of today are interested in their heritage and all those taking part in the "Yesterday" of the project titled Yesterday, Today,
Tomorrow are to be commended for their diligent efforts.

"Ducks Unlimited" help people think about ecology

BROOKS, Alta. (CP) — In 1938, Canada and the United States were in the grip of a depression, Canadian farms were blowing away and to most people the word "conservation" meant saving enough money to live from day to day.

A few farsighted hunters, however, laid the groundwork in that year for what was to become a $3-million-a-year program to save and create habitat for the dwindling numbers of North American waterfowl.

They created Ducks Unlimited, and in the process helped create hundreds of thousands of acres of nesting lands across the three Prairie provinces.

It began as More Game Birds in North America and was probably the first international conservation and environmental organization on the continent.

"Who knows, maybe we played a role in helping people to think about their environment and the ecology," said Fred Sharp, Alberta manager for Ducks Unlimited (Canada).

Ducks Unlimited has built hundreds of lakes, ranging in size from 50 acres to the half-million-acre Tom Lamb Wildlife Management Area near The Pas, Man.

DEPEND ON SNOWPACK
A third of the $3-million Canadian budget is spent in Alberta and half of that goes into 200 projects spread between here and Hanna, Alta., about 70 miles to the north.

"Because surface water here is so non-permanent we put a great deal of effort into using runoff from the snowpack," said Mr. Sharp. "You need two inches of rain during the summer to make a creek run so you have to depend on the snowpack."

The area is in the warm and dry Palliser Triangle, which covers much of Canada's central grasslands.

This year, the snowpacks in the area were good, leading Ducks Unlimited officials to predict a good year—perhaps even for a record year—for duck production.

Ducks Unlimited uses about 90 per cent of its budget for habitat preservation and creation, said Mr. Sharp.

"We don't ask the provincial government for funds because they provide us with a great deal of land and some engineering assistance on joint projects. We can't ask for more."

Ducks Unlimited is winning the battle to maintain a waterfowl habitat on the Prairies, said Mr. Sharp, despite encroachments by farmers and the expansion of urban life into the countryside.

"The organization is criticized sometimes because some people say we are saving ducks for the Americans," he said.

"That's baloney. The hunters in Canada benefit directly because these projects are all open to hunters, unless provincial governments designate them as sanctuaries."

Ducks Unlimited draws most of its financial support from the United States, where many individual states send a portion of their revenue from duck-hunting licences to preserve the waterfowl habitat.

Fish fanciers flock

KARIBA DAM, Rhodesia (CP) — A few miles from this modern tourist resort is some of the finest freshwater fishing in the world.

The fish eagle cries overhead and elephant and antelope graze on the lush growth of the waterline of a huge man-made lake, teeming with countless fish.

King of these is the tiger fish, beautiful, hard-fighting and menacing. It hits the lure like an express train and flings itself out of the water in its battles to throw the hook.

In Kariba Dam the tiger fish average seven to nine pounds but much larger ones are taken regularly. The record is 34 pounds three ounces.

Each September a three-day international tournament is staged for this creature with its primitive head and long interlocking teeth, so sharp they can take a finger off a careless hand.

Kariba is also well stocked with a number of varieties of what the locals call bream, a misnomer for many fish of the Cichlidae family. These fish are found throughout Rhodesia and records for a number of species are in the seven- and eight-pound range.

VARIETIES ABOUND

In all, there are more than 100 species of freshwater fish

There is trout fishing in the eastern highlands of Inyanga, where anglers are restricted to using dry and wet fly in their quest of rainbow, brown, American brook and tiger trout, the latter being a locally-bred hybrid of a brown female and a brook male.

Records are seven pounds for the brown, eight pounds seven ounces for the rainbow and four pounds three ounces for the tiger trout.

Three species of black bass—the largemouth, smallmouth and spotted—are found in most dams and lakes. Current record for the largemouth is eight pound five ounces.

The heavyweight of the Rhodesian fishing scene is the vundu, a giant catfish found in the Kariba Dam and the Zambezi River. The average weight is between 40 and 50 pounds and the Rhodesian record stands at 105 pounds.

Mirror carp, although not native here, have found conditions to their liking. The local record of 53 pounds 12 ounces is the second-largest carp ever taken.

Other records are 27 pounds for the cornish jack, 22 pounds for the bottlenose, 68 pounds for the sharptoothed barbel and 18 pounds four ounces for the mottled eel.

No chestnut tree for this smithy

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The romantic picture of the village blacksmith standing over a red-hot forge beating raw steel into custom-fit horse shoes is no longer applicable.

The modern blacksmith plies his trade from a half-ton panel truck outfitted with modern welding equipment and factory-made shoes.

He travels a circuit each month, is skilled in pedicures and has a complete knowledge of hoof problems.

Trainers of race horses acknowledge that the blacksmith can make or break a horse's reputation.

Frank Reid, who lives in Anderton township, 15 miles southwest of Windsor works seven days a week except when he attends the Windsor Raceway meets.

Mr. Reid said he got into the business 16 years ago when he ran a stable but gave it up when he found he couldn't get a blacksmith to shoe his horses.

Local smiths offered their time and advice while he was learning and although he found the business lucrative, he discovered some occupational hazards.

LEG BROKEN TWICE
Some horses get nervous and he had his leg broken a couple of times, along with his collarbone, and the end of a toe chopped off.

All of Mr. Reid's work is with trotters and pacers and this requires a skilled hand because shoes must have the correct angle for the horse to run properly.

The work of shoeing begins with removal of the old shoe, then paring and measuring the hoof before nailing on the new one.

If special shoes are needed, the cost runs higher than the usual $20 to $25 for a simple cleanup and refitting.

Correcting problems occasioned by horses with different running styles can be frustrating and time-consuming, Mr. Reid said, and can cost twice the regular rate. And the pedicure, which has to be done about every three weeks, is expensive.

Although some customers would like him to set up shop at his home and shoeing in a shop is more convenient than travelling, he said travel is easier on the nerves.

Considering the booming horse population across the country, Mr. Reid expressed confidence that blacksmithing will be an occupation for the future.

Although the apprenticeship is two years long and only pays about $55 to $60 a week, Mr. Reid estimated a young person on his own should be able to make about $20,000 the first year.

Once the reputation is established, there should be enough business to keep a blacksmith busy 365 days a year.

Riggs unfazed by King

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bobby Riggs has overcome the humbling tennis experience of losing to a woman and says he is ready for Rosie Casals or Chris Evert or Carol Mann or Sandra Haynie.

Almost a year has passed since he was defeated by Billie Jean King in Houston's Astrodome, and he's bounced back with a bevy of promotions "to exploit Bobby Riggs from here on out."

He's trying to get into television beyond the product commercials he has made by starring in a series called, Bobby Riggs Hustles Hollywood.

After grossing what he said was $1.5 million from his 1973 triumph over Margaret Court and the defeat against Mrs. King, Riggs said he has started "probing, investigating" the prospect of another Battle of the Sexes in tennis or golf.

Riggs, a short, bespectacled, mop-haired former tennis champion, is 57, but he still calls himself the "55-year-old male sex symbol, the happy hustler."

WAR CONTINUES

As if writing his own headline, Riggs said:

"Bobby Riggs still continues his war with the women and it's a battle for keeps."

"And I hope that the next battle coming up will be with Rosie Casals, or possibly Chris Evert, or one of the other top woman players...."

"If I don't get one of the women tennis players, I expect to get one of the women golfers to play a match with me, Carol Mann or Sandra Haynie."

Riggs said he plays golf to a 12, 13 or 14 handicap "but we'd work something out so that the match would be entertaining for TV viewers."

Riggs said he is going Hollywood. He has made a pilot film for a series of half-hour programs which he hopes will be sold to a TV network to be aired starting next January.

CONS WITH COSBY
"It looks good," he said, naturally, and explained the format.

"In the pilot, Bill Cosby comes on and we talk a little bit about his tennis, how he's doing. I talk about how I'm going to hustle him on the show. He says: 'No way.'"

"From there we have a hustle where I shoot a football against his basketball from a free throw line. Then we play tennis."

Riggs didn't seem upset that promoter Jack Kramer didn't invite him to play in an oldtimers tennis tournament later this month in Los Angeles. He laughed at, but didn't deny, Kramer's comment that it takes $5,000 these days just to get Riggs out of bed.

"I'm on the go all the time, doing something, but I love it," said Riggs. "I don't do it for the money. I do it for the fun of it, the excitement, to keep busy and stay active."

Despite his chauvinist image, Riggs said as a result of his loss to Billie Jean "Girls love me now."

"They can't keep their hands off me. I've had all kinds of proposals (for marriage). They always want to cook dinner for me."

GOOD NEWS ABOUT THE CANADA SAVINGS BONDS YOU NOW OWN!

If you are one of the two million Canadians who already own past series of Canada Savings Bonds here's good news for you. The cash bonus payments announced last May have been increased to produce, from September 1, 1974 to maturity, an average annual yield of 10½%.

Everyone who owns unmatured Canada Savings Bonds, dated on or prior to Nov. 1, 1973, will be entitled to receive the new, higher cash bonus payments on the dates payable, provided that the bonds have not been cashed in the meantime. Here are further details.

1. When a cash bonus becomes due, simply present your bond to any Bank or authorized Trust or Loan Company and Caisse Populaire and you will get your bonus immediately.
2. For tax purposes, the Government of Canada proposes to permit taxpayers to treat cash bonus payments either as interest income or capital gains. As a result, if holders include such interest under the proposed $1,000 deduction for interest income, the bonus payments will become exempt from tax. Alternatively the holder may find it to his advantage to include the bonus under the favourable tax treatment accorded to capital gains.

3. The cash bonus payments are in addition to all the other outstanding features of your Canada Savings Bonds. Bondholders who are taking advantage of compound interest privileges may continue to do so and will continue to be paid compound interest in the amounts specified at the time of issue of each series.
