Had Hand In Marriage Of 654 Persons Boasts Not One Divorced In 21 Years

An interesting service was held in the United church last Sunday morning when Dr. A. F. Fokes spoke to a large number on the pastoral charge. The church was crowded for the service and much interest was created when he announced that he had while minister at Shawville, married, 273 couples, issued 54 licenses to couples who had been married by other ministers, making a total of 654 persons in whose marriages he had shared.
He said that of this great number not a single one had ever applied for a divorce and not over two had been separated since their marriage. On the other hand he knew of a great majority, who lived happy married lives together and were the bulwark of the best community life.
He gave some very practical and helpful advice on how to keep their marriage successful and happy and closed by an appeal to make religion a leading factor in their lives.
As Dr. Fokes is closing his ministry at the end of this month he has been speaking to various groups in the church. A week ago he spoke on the losses the

Shawville Fair Opened by Deputy Minister Arthur Dagg Looks For Record Crowd

Shawville's 96th annual fair got off to a flying start Wednesday morning, despite the wet spell of Monday and Tuesday. While the main events of the fair take place (Thursday) when Dr. J. G. Taggart, federal deputy minister of Agriculture officially opened the big show at 2.30 p.m. and Friday and Saturday, the grounds began to hum early Wednesday morning as exhibitors moved their equipment in and the T. Green Amusement Company began setting up their midway and rides.
With clear, although somewhat cool and windy weather as the prospect for the three main days, Arthur Dagg, president and Mrs. Lawrence Young, secretary-treasurer are looking forward to a record crowd. Entries in most classes are greater than last year and interest in the cattle and horse classes is the keenest for many years.
Today is Children's Day, with all kiddies being admitted free. This is the day, too, for judging of poultry, dairy, fancy work, field roots, horticulture and benefits with the Junior Cattle Parade starting at 8 p.m.
Friday's program includes judging of horses, cattle, sheep, and swine, judging and show of breed shows; track events at 2.30 p.m.; commercial beef show and auction at 1.30 p.m. with an evening show and dog show at 8 p.m.
Saturday there is the big horse show with track events at 2.30 p.m. and a horse show in the evening. Final event Saturday will be a draw for $500 in cash prizes and a $50 money doll by the Lions Club of Shawville.

Pioneer Resident Of Shawville And Yarm Mrs. William Horsfield Dies In 96th Year

One of the oldest residents of Shawville district, Mrs. Thomas William Clark Horsfield died in her home on Main street, Sunday night, after a brief illness, in her 96th year.
Born at "the Briars" near Yarm in the township of Clarendon, she was the former Margaret Smith, daughter of the late John Smith and his wife Margaret Smith. She lived at home until she was 30 years of age, teaching in a number of the district schools of Clarendon for ten years. She was married July 2, 1890, and moved with her husband to his farm on the fourth concession near Stark's Corners, where they lived until 1917 when they moved to Shawville, where she has lived ever since. Her husband died in 1935.
She was a member of St. Paul's Anglican church, and in her younger years a worker in the church Women's organizations and the Shawville Women's Institute.
Surviving her are three brothers, George, Campbell's Bay, Herbert, Shawville and John A., Edmonton, Alta.; one sister, Mrs. James Amm, Quyon and a number of nephews and nieces.
The funeral was held Wednesday at 2 p.m. from her home to St. Paul's Anglican church, where the service was conducted by the rector, Rev. R. G. Elliott. Interment was in the nearby church cemetery.

Shawville Band Plays At Cemetery Service

The annual union service of the United and the Anglican churches is being held in the parish cemetery in the center of the town on Sunday September 21, at 3 p.m. The speaker this year will be Canon L. F. Crothers of Ottawa and music will be furnished by the Shawville Community Band, who will also lead in the singing of the hymns.
This is always an inspiring service in the cemetery grounds and a special invitation is extended to all who have friends buried there, to attend. An offering will be taken which will be used for the upkeep of the cemetery grounds and subscriptions will be taken and receipts given for special contributions by the treasurer, Dr. D. J. Campbell.
A request is also made that the graves be decorated with flowers to help beautify the grounds.

The Big Shoot Starts Saturday

For those who are disappointed with this year's fishing, the best news of the week comes from Game Warden Lee Hodgins: The Partridge season opens this Saturday, September 20! The partridge season lasts until November 16 and it's all right with Lee and the Department of Game and Fisheries if you bag 5 a day so long as you don't get more than 15 during the season. And don't carry a loaded firearm in your airplane or other land vehicle. A fire-arm is loaded if it contains a cartridge in its magazine.
October 1 opens the deer season which ends November 30. The daily and season limit is ONE. If you are lucky and want to know the age of the deer, forget its antlers and look at the teeth. According to the experts deer can only be aged properly by their teeth. The checks used are much the same as those used by farmers when checking horses or cattle. In the younger age classes, up to 1½ years, age is told by the replacement of the milk teeth which will be carried as long as the animal lives. From 2½ years on, a deer's age can only be told from the wear shown on the crowns of the teeth.
A deer's age can't be determined by the antler development because antler size is dependent upon nutrition, the amount and quality of food the animal has eaten during the time the antlers were growing and the winter before. Given good nutritious food a 2½ year old buck may grow a 5½ inch antler but with starvation in the winter and poor summer food, a 4½ year old buck may not even grow a six inch spike.

Other Hunting Dates
Moose: October 11 to November 2; Fox: March 15 to April 30; Skunk: November 1 to March 31.
To those who are tempted by J. M. Argue's bush at Green Lake: Pheasants do not look like partridge and are protected all year round.
A glimpse through the microscope into the otherwise unseen world of mystery and beauty will be provided in "Hidden Treasures" to be shown at Shawville Theatre next Wednesday. The film is sponsored here by the C.R.M.C. of Shawville.
One of a series "Sermons from Science" the film, through the medium of the microscope, takes the viewer on an expedition with cave explorers; a trip undersea and into the desert. The film brings to view, for instance, diatoms, which play such a large part in our industrial life, yet are so small that 15 million are needed to fill a thimble.

Borne To Rest By Six Grandsons

Member of a family who pioneered the Radford section, Mrs. Albert Elliott, the former Margaret Grant, passed away at her Shawville home last Tuesday, following a brief illness.
Born February 24, 1871, a daughter of John Grant and his wife Frances Ralph, she was married in 1890 to Albert Edward Elliott. The couple farmed in North Clarendon for many years celebrating their 60th anniversary at their farm two years ago. They recently made their home in Shawville.
Surviving are her husband and four sons, John A. and Gordon, Campbell's Bay; Burland, Belleville, Ont and Russell, Shawville; two sisters, Mrs. Thomas Eades, Shawville and Mrs. S. Horner, Rosetown, Sask. and three brothers, Robert, Shawville; David, McKee and Ezra, Carp, Ont. There are 11 grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

An active Christian worker all her life and well known for her many acts of charity to the needy and afflicted, she was a adherent of the Standard Church.

The funeral service was held Thursday in the Holiness Movement Church, Shawville, conducted by Rev. A. Slater, Rev. C. McEwen and the Rev. H. Stobbart.

Rev. Slater paid tribute to the deceased in a comforting message from Luke VI, "For it was founded upon a rock" while a favorite hymn "Face to Face" was sung by Mrs. John Hodgins and Mrs. C. McEwen.

Interment was in Maple Grove Cemetery with six grandsons acting as pall bearers, Ardley and Clayton Elliott, Lorne and Brian Elliott and Grant and William Elliott.

Wildlife Display Sponsored By Lions

An added last minute attraction at Shawville Fair this year is a wildlife display sponsored by the Lions Club of Shawville.

Suggested by Lee Hodgins who arranged for most of the animals, the exhibit includes a wolf cub trained by Joe Kluge at Otter Lake, a pet fawn provided by Amile Zacharias, of Otter Lake, two young foxes George Tucker has been training, two pet squirrels owned by Basil Elliott and Howard Brinkworth's pet bear from Portage du Fort.

Shirley Greta Hodgins Weds Elwyn Rooney

A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Dr. A. F. Fokes, who performed the ceremony of Shirley Greta Hodgins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Hodgins to Elwyn Albert Earl Rooney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Rooney, Charteris.
For the ceremony the bride wore a floor-length white satin gown, with long sleeves and fitted bodice and a halo of white net held in place her full-length veil and she carried a spray bouquet of gladioli.
The attendants were Lawson Rooney, brother of the groom, and Vera Hodgins, sister of the bride the latter of who wore a full-length dress of pink taffeta with shoulder length pink veil and she carried a colonial bouquet of autumn flowers.
After the ceremony dinner was served to the friends of both families and later a larger reception was given at Charteris. The young couple are to reside in Shawville.

A Little of This and a Little of That

By BILL KINMOND

In Line Of Duty. Shawville's postmaster, Cliff Woodley, has received a long service badge, authorized for presentation to postmasters with over 25 years' service. Cliff, a veteran of World War I, enlisting at the age of 19, was captured by the Germans during the Battle of Ypres, June, 1916. He was discharged in 1919 and seven years later was appointed postmaster.

Coming Up. The induction of Rev. H. G. Lester, of Warkworth, Ont., new pastor of Shawville and Zion United Churches will take place at Shawville United Church Thursday, October 2. Mr. Lester's family have been living in the parsonage since September 1.

Congratulations. And best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. W. Dave Hodgins who will be 47 years wed this Saturday, September 20. An extra bouquet goes to them for their attendance at Shawville Fair which they have gone to together every year for 47 years, rain or shine. Mr. Hodgins is a director of the fair.

In The Mail Bag. "I've been having a great time this afternoon reading the latest three Equities forwarded to me by my parents, Mr. and Mrs. T.S. Harris. It is about ten years since I could call Shawville my hometown but there are always quite a number of the items in your paper about people I do, or did, know very well. I'm grateful to you for such a fine paper and for keeping me in continuous touch with so many old friends. As I write you, and recall the 90 degree weather reported from down your way, I feel I must tell you about ours. We've snow-thick on the mountain peaks and thin under foot. Ye olde thermometer dropped its mercury to register 15 degrees above zero a few days ago. Amidst this white grandeur, we have our colored autumn leaves—so the scenery is gorgeous even though not really what one dreams of for September. I hasten also to tell you we're here because we like this goofy country and our work with our big family of Indian children. My husband, Rev. C. T. Stanger, is principal of this school. I do my best to teach the three lowest grades—with the help (?) of our own two kiddies—Judy and John who are 5 and 3."—Laura Stanger.

A Close Shave. Returning from the Cuthbertson-Thomas wedding at Sudbury, Mrs. James Cuthbertson, Sr., James Cuthbertson Jr., Roland Nicholas and Shirley were delayed eight hours when their train was wrecked at Mattawa. No one was injured.

Home From The West. First group to return from helping with the Western harvest were in Earl Young's car. They included Earl, Habba Young, Don Burton and Joe Hobbs. Their one gripe against the west was the water. They just couldn't get used to drinking it.

New Hotrodder. Bill King, of Toronto, currently visiting with the Mackays at Charteris will drive Ray Sheppard's car at Beamishill Sunday. Ray plans to put a new motor in the car.

Many Happy Returns. To Alex Cobb, Sr., who was 80 years young Monday. To celebrate a family get-together was held at (Continued On Page Eight)

The biggest printing job ever tackled by The Equity production of the book involved 44,000 pieces of paper, 500 feet of binding tape, several pounds of ink, four days steady press running, about 200 pounds of lead, 1,000 gallons of sweat, loss of several pounds of weight by members of the staff and the valuable assistance of many Shawville women who pitched in at the last moment to get the book out on time for the fair.

Social Credit Looks East

(From Toronto Globe & Mail)

Encouraged by its triumph in British Columbia, and by its five successive victories in Alberta, the Social Credit Party has announced that it will contest next year's Federal election on a nationwide basis. Mr. Solon Low, national party leader, says there will be a full slate of candidates in Ontario and most of the other Provinces. Toward this end, the party will open a headquarters in Toronto during the next few days.

There is no reason to think the Social Crediters are reaching for the moon. On the record of their recent successes, notably that in British Columbia, they have a right to believe that a substantial number of Canadians are interested in what they have to offer. And on the record of their approach to national and international affairs, they have a right to believe that the wind is blowing in their direction.

The Social Credit Party, as it has developed over the last fifteen years, is essentially a conservative party. It has gained strength in the Western Provinces because conservative-minded voters had nowhere else to go. It has gained strength nationally by occupying the position which the Progressive Conservatives might have been expected to occupy. On such major issues as trade, fiscal policy, social welfare and Commonwealth relations, it has followed a clear, vigorous line of thought which has not only won the attention of those who appreciate clarity and vigor in political argument, but has been largely justified by the turn of events.

The complexities of Social Credit theory are above the heads of most Canadians and, one suspects, above the heads of most Social Crediters. They talk about it, but there seems no real intention of doing anything about it. What Social Credit stands for, in actual practice, is a grass-roots, brass-tacks viewpoint which goes far back into Canadian history, and which has the same message for the Ontario factory worker as for the Alberta farmer.

The Social Credit Party stands firmly for private enterprise, and against socialism. It argues that reform must come from the bottom up rather than from the top down, and that the nation needs the old religion more than the new ideologies. It sees the welfare state with its accompanying high taxes, as a menace to the real welfare of individual Canadians, and an attempt to make them subservient to an all-powerful Government.

It believes that Canada should cherish its traditional ties with Britain, and play a strong role in a strong Commonwealth. It regards our present dependence on American markets as dangerous, and thinks we should be working harder for multilateral trade.

The Social Party thinks present taxation, especially Federal taxation, is too high. Hidden taxes which inflate prices, and restrictive taxes which discourage effort and enterprise, excite its particular antagonism. It views with suspicion the "centralizing" tax policies of the Federal Government, and calls for a new deal between the Dominion and the Provinces.

It argues that the only real wealth is in production; that policies of plenty raise the standard of living, whereas policies of scarcity only depress it. In the matter of inflation, the party's stand is firm. Asked, for years ago, how his party would deal with high prices, Mr. Low replied:

Our first point of attack would be to remove every possible restriction to optimum production.

For only by increasing production can we balance the supply of money and goods which is the basic cause of inflation.

All this (quite apart from the drums and banners of Social Credit theory) adds up to a platform which is strong enough, and distinctive enough to support a national campaign. If Mr. Low's plans go ahead, Canadians from coast to coast will be confronted with a down-to-earth conservation which may stir up a surprising amount of interest; and should have the effect of causing the other parties to stand back and take a good, long look at themselves.

BOY SCOUTS

The Scout Mothers Auxiliary met on Tuesday to arrange their plans for the Fall and for their Annual Meeting on Monday, October 20 next. The first business was the arranging for the volunteers to be on duty at the Fall Fair. These ladies have always done an excellent job and again will cover the First Aid tent from 1.00 to 9.00 p. m. for the last three days. The names are shown under Duties in The Equity. If there should be anything in the schedule, they are asked to advise the president, Mrs. Garrison, so that a substitute may be arranged. Two ladies must be on duty at all times, one of whom is to have St. John Ambulance Certificate, and who will wear their insignia on a white arm band, worn above the elbow on their right arm. Those in uniform will wear the badge sewn on the right arm of their uniform. A nominating committee was appointed with Mrs. Rice as Convenor, and Mrs. Reuben Smith and Mrs. McCleary as members to bring in a slate of officers for the annual meeting. The District Commissioner spoke on the splendid work being done by the Mothers Auxiliary with particular emphasis on those who had taken up the St. John Ambulance work. He advised that there would be another class after the New Year through the kindness of Drs. C.F.C. Powles and Frank Cowley, and hoped that there would be a number of new applicants and that those who now held certificates or senior, would carry on for their next step. There are now 35 graduates, ten of whom had their Voucher rating, and the opportunity of taking the test for the Medallion would be available. A knowledge of First Aid and knowing what to do in an emergency is well worth while, and it is hoped there will be a full class of at least 30. Anyone wishing to enroll should give their names to Mrs. Cliff Garrison.

The annual meeting of the Group Committee will be held on Thursday, October 16 in the High School at 8.00 p. m. It is requested that at least one parent, both if possible, be present at this meeting to hear the reports from the different Scouters in charge of Units, and to elect their officers for the coming year. The Charter for Shawville is based on a "Group of Citizens" and that "Group" consists of the parents of the boys and any other interested citizens in this area. Please remember the date and arrange to be present.

The Shawville Group of the Pontiac Rover Crew held a meeting on Wednesday to arrange for schedule of duties for the Fall Fair. These are shown separately. In addition plans were made for the reception of the District Rover Leader and the 2nd Ottawa Crew when they visit this Crew later in the month and put on the Ceremony of the Investiture. Squire Irvin Watson made a proposal, which if it meets with the approval of His Worship Mayor Emmerson Cotie, will be a splendid Community Good Turn to this community. Further particulars later. District Rover Leader, Don Macintosh is very keen that the Squires qualified to receive their Investiture report to him at their earliest convenience. Registration fees of 60 cents are now due for the ensuing year and should be paid to the R.S.L. or his Rover Mate. The annual meeting of the Crew will be held shortly and the election of Rover Mates carried out in accordance with Rule 78, Sec. II, and registration fees should all be in by that time so that the forms may be completed promptly. It is also hoped a number of Rovers will enrol in the coming St. John Class to obtain their certificate, or take a higher rating. The 1st Shawville Troop had a complete going over on Thursday and the Patrols re-arranged.

A number of Registration fees were received and the personnel of this Unit will be published in the Gazette in The Equity along with the other Units as soon as the fees are all received. Two Rover Squires were appointed Scout Instructors who are experts in different phases in Scouting. The Wolf Cub Pack was also brought up to date and full particulars of this Unit will also be published in a later issue of The Equity. Both of these Units are almost at full strength and are looking forward to a big year in Scouting.

A Short Story

Iron Clad

By Clark Dawson

On the train going west, Freda thought it all out. She must never, no matter what the circumstances, let them guess that she had an inferiority complex. Somehow she would have to build up a defense that was iron-clad. Of course, when you considered the matter, especially if you were a stranger, you never would have dreamed that a girl who had just captured first prize in the biggest beauty contest ever held in the east and was now on her way to Hollywood with good chances of becoming a movie star, could have an inferiority complex.

The trouble was that in Hollywood she was going to have a lot more skilled competition than back home. There were going to be girls there, five all told, from other sections of the country and only one was going to be selected for the part in All American Beauty.

Uneasily Freda reflected upon her success back home. She wished she could be wholly certain that first prize had gone to her wholly upon merit. She remembered the two other girls over whom the judges had wrangled so long. Both had been beautiful, possessed of undeniable charm and appeal. Had they been more beautiful than she? Had her father's famous name and prodigious wealth influenced the judges?

That was the beginning of her inferiority complex, that was why she knew she'd have to build up an iron-clad defense. Before the train reached Chicago she had it all figured out. She would give the impression, without boasting, that she was tremendously popular, that men were mad about her, that she had turned down all sorts of offers in order to make this trip.

A neat and very efficient young man met the train at Pasadena. Freda was surprised to discover that two of her competitors had been in forward cars. Her heart sank a little when she saw them. They were terrific.

To Freda's surprise she discovered during the next two weeks that her plan was working. This was a period in which the five contestants for the role were entertained and exploited by Hollywood officials and celebrities.

Only once did she have any regrets. And then not because of the general effect she was creating. It was when Craig Franklin asked her if she knew Dana Bridges back in Philadelphia.

"Know him?" she had laughed. "The dear boy! He bought me a diamond so big it was too heavy to wear. And he was quite serious about it, too." And into Craig Franklin's eyes had come a hurt look, a very definite look of self consciousness and inferiority.

Freda tried now, as she had been trying for five days, to convince herself that whatever Craig Franklin thought didn't matter. He had been extremely nice to her, but this was his job. He was head of publicity at Pinnacle Studios and he had to be nice to everyone.

At last the day arrived when the tests were made. There followed a period of anguished waiting, of trying to appear composed. She was glad to have Craig Franklin with her those days.

Then came the most important morning of all. A representative of the studio came to her hotel. He tried to smile pleasantly, but Freda knew, with an awful sinking sensation that all her scheming and planning and hoping had failed.

With a surprised cry she turned and rushed up to her room. She flung herself on her bed and wept bitterly, racking. Then she sat up, drying her eyes. She mustn't be a coward. Not how. Whatever else happened she must show them that she couldn't take it.

She packed her bags, clinging to one hope, one terrible yearning. If he didn't come to comfort her, life, it seemed, would no longer be worth living. An hour passed. Two. It was nearing time to leave for her train. Someone knocked at the door. Freda caught her breath, flung it open. It was Craig!

He said simply: "I'm sorry." And stood awkwardly, looking at her.

She tried to smile, to pretend it made no difference. Then tears filled her eyes. "It's what I deserve! I was a fool to come here! It's what I deserve!"

"Deserve?" Craig dropped to the divan beside her. "What do you mean you deserve it? That's foolishness. A girl like you deserves only the best there is."

"No." She shook her head. "You're sweet, Craig, but—" And because suddenly she wanted him to know, she told him the whole bitter story.

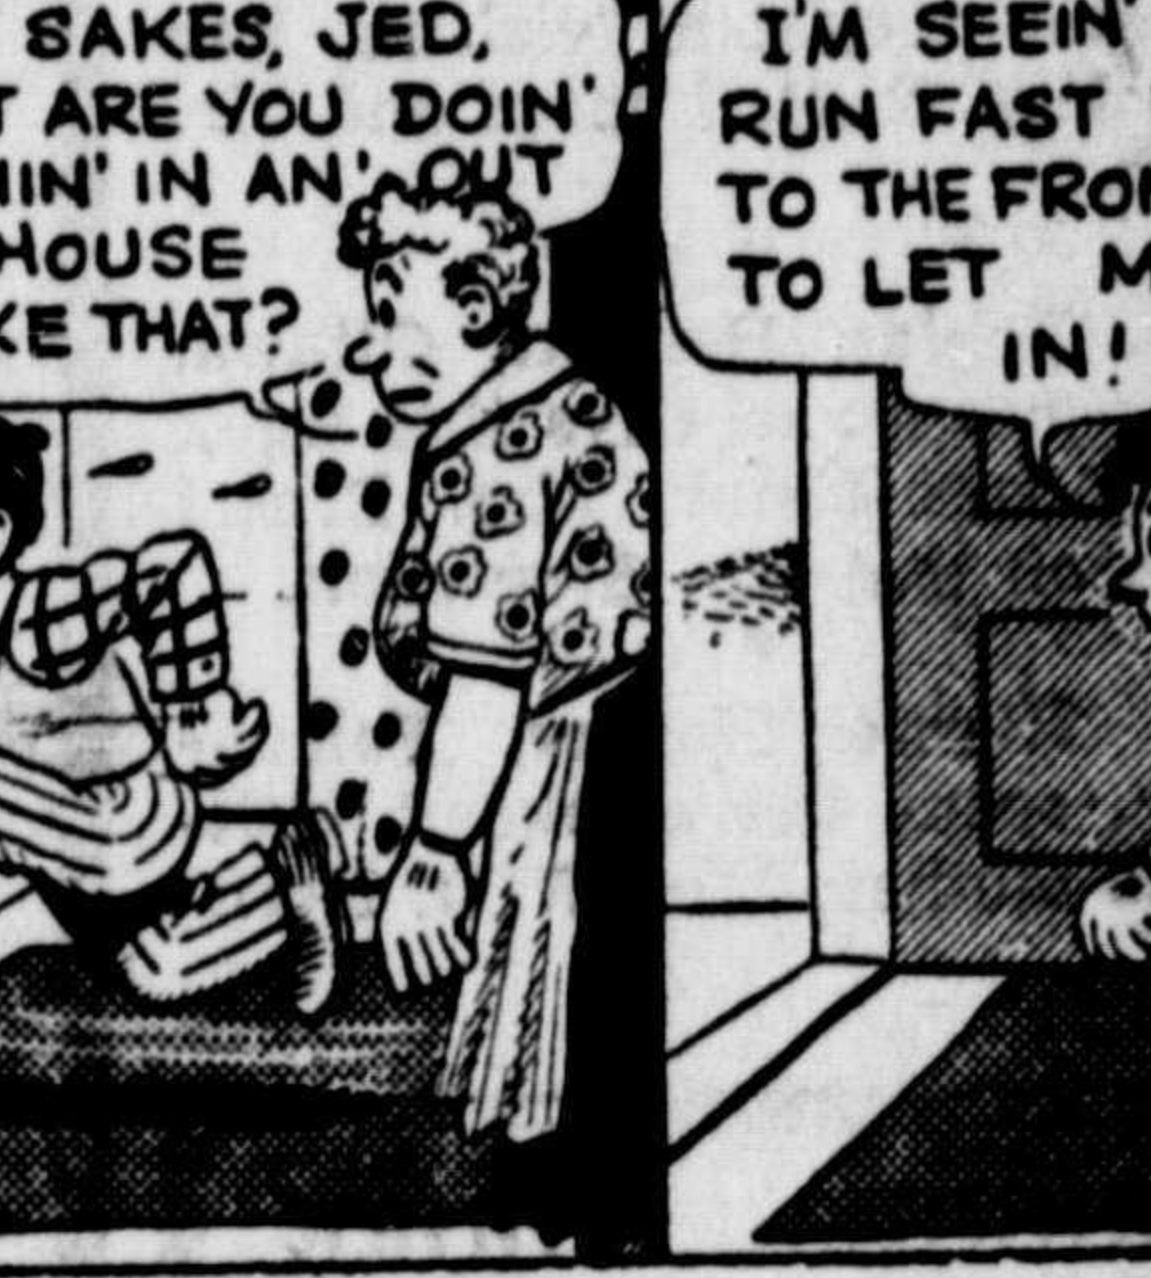

"No, you didn't," he told her. "You fooled me completely. Why I was so convinced that every man who saw you wanted you for his own, that I didn't think I had a chance. If you hadn't told me this, I never would have asked you to marry me. Will you Freda?"

Few Animals Beat Wildcat In Fight

About the only animal, man included, who can "lick his weight in wildcats" is another wildcat. Pound for pound, the American wildcat, or bobcat (Lynx rufus) is probably as capable a fighter as there is in the animal world.

The bobcat is a distinct species, not to be confused with the larger cougar, or mountain lion, or with his Canadian cousin, the lynx. He is similar to the lynx in that he has the same short, or "bob" tail, but he is smaller, prefers warmer climates and his ears are not so markedly tufted.

This redoubtable scrapper is found in all parts of the United States—wherever there is sufficient cover such as forest, cut-over country, canebrakes, brushy bottomlands and the scrub growth of the west's arid canyons. Unmistakable bobcat sign has been found within 25 miles of downtown Manhattan and there is not a State that does not harbor some of these animals.

Because they live concealed lives and are seldom seen, no reliable estimate has ever been made of the number of wildcats in the United States. But experts agree they are on the increase.

The animal's secretiveness is rather to caution. Like many not due to lack of courage, but other capable fighters, bobcats are willing to let prudence take the place of valor when fighting is unnecessary. They will go to great lengths to avoid man, and will flee from dogs they can cut to ribbons.

This widely distributed predator is a silent hunter and usually makes little noise, but in a fight he will spit and snarl and scream. In the January and February mating season his courtship song has an astounding range, volume and variety.

A spring litter, usually numbers from two to four. The kittens stay with the mother during the summer, learning the fine art of keeping alive. Frequently the litters remain together for their first winter, with each yearling cat going his solitary way the next spring.

If you are the owner of a motor vehicle, whether you use it or not, you must have it registered.

Ohio Newspaper Writer Makes Good As Farmer

Monroeville, O. — When Mark Wolfram bought a run-down farm on Route 2, he knew nothing about agriculture—except where to go for good advice.

Wolfram came back from World War II with a service disability. As a result, the Veterans' Administration advised him to take up farming instead of returning to his profession of newspaper writing.

"I had to buy a run-down place," he said, "because good farms were not for sale at prices I could afford. Farming is not a hobby with me as it is with many city men who move to the country. I have to make a living and a future for my two boys from the land."

Wolfram took G. I. training, got the help of the Soil Conservation Service, talked with men connected with the Ohio State College of Agriculture and listened to the counsel of his feed dealer.

Don't allow milk production to slump, says John C. Thompson, manager of livestock research for the Ralston Purina Company. Far too many dairymen allow milk production to reach the lowest level of the year during mid and late winter. Every owner knows that once cows are allowed to drop in production, it is hard to bring them up again. This low level of production in late winter is one reason why milk production often spurts so rapidly when cows go on pasture.

Milk cows need special care in mid and late winter when the weather is usually at its worst. Too many cows are in the latter part of their lactation period—not enough of them freshened during the fall months. It has been several months since the cows were on pasture and the hay is losing much of its green color and nutritive value.

When there's not enough high quality roughage during late winter, good dairymen attempt to make up for the fallings of the roughage. They know that a Vitamin A or Carotene shortage or a feed-in-take problem can result in breeding troubles and a severe drop in milk production.

Increase the amount of daily grain ration to make up for any shortcomings of your roughage supply. Increasing the protein content of the ration when roughages are poor, does not take care of the cow's need for energy or total digestible nutrients. She needs more pounds of feed.

Plenty of high quality roughage is very essential to successful dairymen. If you are running short this year, make plans now to have enough next winter. Provide plenty of good pasture so that the winter hay and silage requirements will be reduced.

Corn on Wolfram's land is now making 20 bushels more to the acre than it did five years ago. Modern buildings and equipment are going on the farm. And the Wolframs have one of the best New Hampshire Red breeder flocks in northern Ohio.

During the last half of February, Wolfram started 550 sexed pullets and 50 cockerels. His chicks grew rapidly into sturdy, well-feathered birds. Livability was better than 98%. The birds went on new range of ladino clover on May 25.

The first egg was gathered on July 1, but the pullets continued on the range until July 25, when the first birds were housed. Pullets were weighing around 5½ pounds when they were put inside.

Egg production reached 10% when the pullets were 5 months and 10 days old. When they were 6 months and 9 days of age, they were at 15% production. They were laying at 70% through September and October.

Mr. Wolfram was looking forward to extra profits from hatchability premiums. He had good reason to expect such results. The birds he had the previous year were of the same stock and were handled the same way. His hatchability ran from 77% to 82%.
