Diplomats ponder Cuba arrangements

Was Russia-U.S. deal made?

NEW YORK —(NEA)—As long as President Kennedy keeps tight the lid of secrecy on his correspondence with Nikita Khrushchev over Cuba, diplomats are bound to speculate about a "deal" between the United States and Russia.

The question most persistently asked by worried Latin American officials is: Did the United States pledge to "protect" Fidel Castro's dictatorship as the price for the removal of Soviet offensive weapons from Cuba?

Since we are now again in the era of secret diplomacy, the State Department is not likely to take the American people into its confidence if a secret Russian-U.S. deal actually exists.

A diplomat, as the saying goes, is a truthful and honest man whose job is to lie for his country. Official diplomatic communications usually gild the facts when they do not distort them outright.

For instance, it took the American people more than a decade to learn about the secret Yalta agreements between President Roosevelt and the Soviet dictator Josef Stalin which made Russia master over much of Eastern Europe. Will we have to wait another decade before we learn what is in the secret correspondence between President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev?

For the trained observer there are already enough disturbing clues that indicate some deal over Cuba between the United States and Russia.

The current issue of Moscow's global propaganda organ, New Times, says President Kennedy definitely pledged not to invade Cuba — or permit other Western Hemisphere nations to overthrow the Castro regime.

New Times, like all of the tightly controlled Red press, can only write what the Kremlin rulers dictate. It thus throws light on the Kennedy-Khrushchev negotiations.

The irony is that for the first time a Red journal ostensibly defends an American president against the American press.

For, as Moscow's mouthpiece writes, the United States position against an invasion of Castro's slave state "was already defined by President Kennedy in his exchange of messages with Premier Khrushchev."

The president, according to New Times, "stated, at that time, that if the weapons described as offensive were removed from Cuba, she would not be attacked either by the United States or by other Western Hemisphere countries."

However, New Times complains, "a section of the American press is clamoring for the United States to withhold the noninvasion pledge."

The President said recently that Khrushchev has kept all his well-known commitments made during the Cuban crisis last October. But what about the right of on-site inspection? This condition has never been carried out by Castro. Yet, as Mr. Kennedy repeatedly asserted, such on-site inspection is the only way the United States can really be sure that Russia has removed all its offensive weapons from Cuba.

Why, then, is on-site inspection no longer mentioned in the polite society of Washington's foggy bottom?

Illiteracy gains in world, but UNESCO fights back

PARIS —(NEA)—To all the divisions of the world—Communist and free, white and colored, hungry and fed—add another: those who can read and write and those who cannot.

And the illiterates are gaining.

To fight this plague of ignorance, the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) is giving top priority to education in its 1963-64 program and is working on plans for a 10-year program to teach the three Rs to 330 million persons between the ages of 15 and 50.

A 1957 UNESCO survey of 67 nations indicated that 700

By ROSETTE HARGROVE

million men and women—two-fifths of the world's population—had never been to school. Eighteen nations reported illiteracy rates of 99 per cent. Today experts estimate that one out of two persons over 15 are illiterate, condemning them to a state of undeniable inferiority.

The worst illiteracy rates are in Africa, Latin America and Asia. In 85 nations of those areas, 1960 figures show only 160 million of 206 million school age children were attending primary school. This means that each year, the adult illiterate population grows by 20 to 25 million persons.

Experts at UNESCO's general conference in Paris last fall believe illiteracy could be eliminated in two generations if greater world resources were thrown into the battle. To finance UNESCO's entire two-year program, of which education is only a part—delegates from 113 member states voted a budget in Paris of $39 million, up $6½ million over the previous two years.

Ironically, while illiteracy grows, so too does the number of printed words. According to UNESCO figures, over 350,000 titles are published annually in the fields of letters, arts, sciences and education.

Social, economic changes needed

Only 'revolutions' can help Latin America

SANTIAGO, Chile—(NEA)—If the U.S. has any real hope for future friendship and alliance in this incendiary hemisphere, it lies in more and bigger Latin American revolutions.

This is not the fearful paradox it seems.

A tour of the Caribbean and South America in the wake of the Cuban quarantine leaves this reporter convinced that:

- Those who want change—by any means—far outnumber those who don't.
- Despite Cuba's diminished prestige, only the left appears to be making significant gains with its campaign for change.

- But if the coming social and economic upheaval is sweeping enough, as the signs indicate, it will overtake the political extremes on both the left and right.

The real danger is the temptation to halt or turn back the enormous multiple revolutions which already sizzle and hiss across national borders, political parties, religious allegiances and even family ties.

Unless this turmoil runs its full course, the U.S. will continue to live just before the dawn of that desperate morning when we awake to find our Latin American neighborhood turned angrily and strategically against us.

ing revolution building today is among Latin women, learning after 400 years that they hold tremendous political power.

It would shock their grandmothers to see them today, for example, on the dusty Dominican Republic campaign trail asking President-elect Juan Bosch what he means to do about more schools and teachers. Or in the cafes of remote Cuzco, Peru, arguing land reform with their husbands. Or in the smoke-filled meeting rooms of Santiago's Crillon Hotel, helping organize a new political party.

Not so apparent to the naked eye, but equally deep, is the upheaval in Latin American armed forces.

In Argentina, for example, one hears citizen after citizen despair of the depression, unemployment and crisis that plagues the government. "But," the critique usually ends, "we must wait to see our own doctor will be accepted or what the army intends to do about it."

Traditionally, the final, authoritarian voice in Latin governments, the armed forces in the hemisphere are themselves in revolution. In Argentina today one also hears:

"What are we coming to when well-bred boys won't choose an army career. Another 10 years and our armed forces will be run by the sons of non-commissioned officers."

Argentina's story is typical. The young officers of the new armies have come up from poverty and injustice with a strong feeling that change is necessary.

"If their sense of justice is as strong as their memories," a Brazilian army man says, "great progress can be made." Not so strangely, the Latin American Catholic Church has been caught up in these turmoils of revolution. Far from holding a solid position, churchmen are divided in their opinions of how to meet an uncertain and possibly unrecognizable future.

In Venezuela, for example, the church has a soft, moderate voice. In Colombia a modern welfare point of view. In Peru, it is a church nearly unchanged by current events. In neighboring Chile, it is a church that has just given up three of its enormous land holdings to peasants in an obvious move away from the past and toward land reform.

In large part, of course, such revolutions are part of this age. But considerable force has also come from the tremendous wave of migration to our hemisphere from Europe since the end of World War II, bringing with it new skills and new middle

UN STRENGTHENS CONTROL

UN force gains in Katanga
Nuclear battle boils over
Claim defences penetrated

The United Nations Congo force, tired of "waiting for Tshombe," moved decisively to increase its control in Katanga province this week.

After 30 months of power jockeying, the UN made clear that it would refuse to accept another negotiated ceasefire with President Moise Tshombe of the secessionist province. Katanga's military resources were reported almost shattered.

Tshombe, who earlier had promised scorched-earth destruction of Katanga, mining and industrial installations in the face of UN advances, returned to his capital of Elisabethville Monday with conciliatory statements.

On Wednesday night UN headquarters in New York announced that he had been placed under house arrest. But the following night the UN said this was not so—Tshombe had never been under arrest and would be free as long as he continued to co-operate.

The secessionist leader meanwhile had accompanied UN troops on a bloodless advance from Elisabethville to Mookamb, a communications centre near the Northern Rhodesian border, calling on his troops not to resist.

"I want to stop bloodshed and prove my good intentions," he said.

Another UN force moved on Kolwezi, a mining centre held by Tshombe forces. The Katangans had threatened earlier to blow up copper mining plants and a big dam there if the advance continued.

Ferment agitating the PC party

OTTAWA —(TNS)—On the surface it will be all sweetness and light when the Progressive Conservative Association of Canada assembles here next week for its annual general meeting. Below the surface it may provide the occasion for crystallization of the ferment which has agitated the lower layers of the party during the past few months.

Faced with the prospect of an early election, the party cannot but put on a fine show of unity in endorsing Mr. Diefenbaker's leadership — not because the Prime Minister's many critics have had a change of heart, but because they realize it is too late for a leadership fight.

To oust the old guard now would amount to a vote of no confidence in the harassed minority Government. Any such action would automatically doom the party to election defeat. No one among the malcontents can possibly risk jeopardizing whatever chances the party may have in the forthcoming fight for retention of power.

Thus Mr. Diefenbaker, though criticized, is assured of unanimous support. Even those who have little respect for his conduct of national affairs are bound to rally behind him; they have no alternative. It's Diefenbaker or bust. It may be both, but without Diefenbaker it would be bust only.

What applies, out of necessity, to the Prime Minister personally, need not apply to his team as a whole. It also need not apply to all the government policies.

While there will be no formal resolutions demanding personal changes in the cabinet, it would be a great surprise if some of the recent dissatisfaction were not to be voiced from the floor.

Persistent rumors in the ca-

By LUBOR J. ZINK

pital have it that some out-of-town groups of younger Conservatives are planning a determined attempt to bring about changes in the cabinet, preferably before the election.

Since most of their criticism concerns our defense policy, the attack, if it comes is bound to concentrate on the one person generally regarded as the mainstay of the present feeble course — External Affairs Minister Howard Green.

According to reliable information, a "Green Must Go" movement is shaping up behind the scenes of the conference. It has no support among the organizers, but their efforts to keep it under the lid may prove futile.

The signal for this specific rebellion is likely to come in the form of several resolutions (about five or six so far) demanding acceptance of nuclear warheads for our defense weapons designed to carry them.

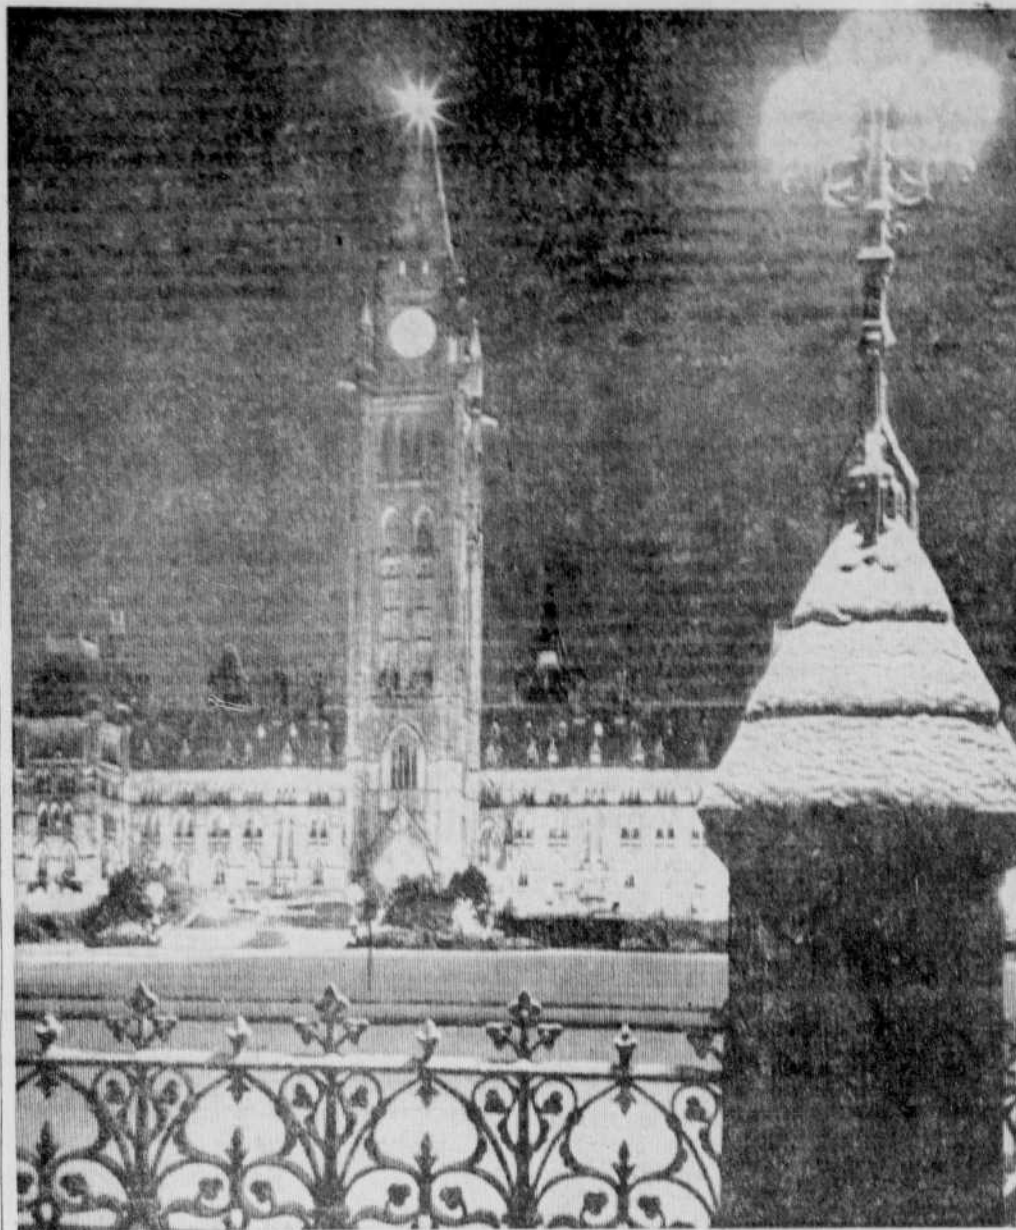

Mr. Diefenbaker could, of course, forestall the storm by announcing the desired changes in defense policy before or during the party convention. The logical occasion for such an announcement would be the second day of the conference (Friday, Jan. 18) when the Prime Minister is scheduled to address the plenary session.

Does he, however, have time to wait that long? Or, to put it more bluntly, will the Liberals let him wait that long?

There is near unanimity among seasoned observers here that the Grits have already made up their mind on defense policy and are ready to make their statement within the next two or three days. Since the Liberals are now reported to favor fulfillment of Canada's NATO and NORAD commitments (which they will criticize by accepting tactical nuclear weapons under U.S. custody, Mr. Diefenbaker may consider it awkward to follow suit. It could create the impression that he and his Government had been prodded into a policy switch by the Grit announcement.

News in brief

Two killed

BURY —(Staff)—Two men were killed and four persons, including two children, were injured in a truck and two-car collision Friday night four miles from here on Route No. 28.

Dead are, Osborne Dougherty, 54, former mayor of Bury and Roch Randcourt, 25, of Montreal.

Still in the St. Joseph du Lac Hospital at Lake Megantic today are Gerard Lecours, Mrs. Clement Bolduc, both of Bury and Mrs. Bolduc's two children, Guilaime, 1, and Yves, 2 years. A hospital spokesman this morning said the injured were "doing well."

Complete details of the accident were not available this morning. According to the Cookshire detachment of the Quebec Provincial Police, a truck was parked on the highway when one of the cars hit it. A second car coming from behind crashed into the car and truck. The mishap occurred about 8.15 p.m.

Space program

OTTAWA —(First outline of a 1964-68 Canadian space program which will include the launching of four "more satellites and cost as much as $25,000,000 was sketched by officials here Friday.

Defence Minister Harkness said the four satellites, three to be built by Canadian industry, will cost some $8,000,000. The first will be launched in late 1964 or early 1965.

Formal approval is still required—but expected — from the U.S. government whose space agency, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will put the satellites into orbit. Cost to the U.S. is expected to be some $35,000,000.

Rap printers

NEW YORK (AP)—A fact-finding panel of three jurists has strongly censured the leaders of the printers union whose strike has shut down New York City's nine major newspapers for 36 days.

The panel's report, released Friday night, terminated the walk-out "the deliberate design formed by the printers' representatives as the opening gambit in negotiations."

UK strikes

LONDON (AP)—Britons, shivering through their worst winter in memory, faced a dim weekend as wildcat strikes reduced electric power throughout the country.

Unofficial strikers in the country's power generation stations are slow down on the job. By following every rule in the book, they have slowed operations and reduced the amount of power produced. To share it evenly, the authorities reduced the voltage of supplies.

One suspended

OXFORD, Miss. (AP)—One student was suspended Friday night by University of Mississippi authorities who warned against more demonstrations protesting the presence of James H. Meredith on the campus.

Meanwhile, the 29-year-old Negro was spending the weekend at the university, studying for semester examinations.

Tshombe arrives

NDOLA (AP)—President Moise Tshombe of Katanga arrived in British-controlled Northern Rhodesia today after a secret dash from Elisabethville.

The Katangan leader met briefly with members of his cabinet here, then told a press conference he will return to Elisabethville tonight and go to Kolwezi Monday. Kolwezi, key mining centre 150 miles northwest of Elisabethville, is the last important town held by Katangan gendarmes and Tshombe's white mercenaries.

DECEPTIVE PLAY GETS TOP SCORE

Bobby Jordan is ten years older than his partner, Arthur Robinson, but the maturity of age 36 does not seem to have made him the staid member of the partnership. Instead it is Arthur who plays straight man and Bobby who creates the situations in bidding and play that are most likely to force mistakes from the opponents. In a recent duplicate match, Bobby found himself in a very comfortable three no-trump contract. Overtricks are important in duplicate and at trick one Bobby was able to make a deceptive play that netted him all thirteen tricks and a top score.

Then he ran off his six club tricks and West had to find five discards. The first three were easy. There was no pain about letting a low heart and two low spades go. The fourth discard was the queen of spades. On the last club, West could not afford to chuck a diamond and he did not want to unguard the king of hearts so out came the ace of spades. It looked safe enough. East surely held the jack since Bobby had won the first trick with the king.

Now Bobby's jack and four of spades were good and he had thirteen tricks. His false card at trick one had really paid off!

Show Business

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The lessons networks are learning from television's rating race is: There is nothing like a name.

Judging from the 1962-63 season thus far, it appears that the race goes to the swiftest in signing up name personalities. That has been CBS in recent times.

In the early days of television, NBC contracted all the comedians in sight; it even signed Milton Berle for 30 years.

Lately CBS has taken the lead in tying up the big names, and the results have appeared in this season's ratings.

One listing late last year gave CBS 18 out of the top 20 shows. Included were such tried-and-true names as Red Skelton, Lucille Ball, Danny Thomas, Jack Benny, Andy Griffith, Jackie Gleason and Lassie, plus other sure properties such as Candid Camera, Gunsmoke, I've Got a Secret, What's My Line, The Defenders and To Tell the Truth.

CBS already has announced some deals for next season that further its big-name policy. The network staged two coups by coming up with enough money to entice Danny Kaye and Judy Garland into undertaking weekly shows. It also plans to return old favorite Phil Silvers to the rating race, and Carol Burnett has signed to do specials, guest shots and a possible series.

ABC, which got clobbered in this season's ratings, is lining up names to aid its recovery. The big news so far is the signing of Jerry Lewis for a unique kind of show. He'll do a two-hour stint weekly, probably Saturday night.

The network has also been assured of the continuing services of Chuck Connors, although this will be the last season for Rifleman.

Connors will be back next season with an interesting concept called Arrest and Trial. It will be a 90-minute show in which Ben Gazzara will appear as a police detective making an arrest, then Connors will take over to defend the case.

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the Jan. 30 Perry Como Show the star acts on the Ed Sullivan will be Phyllis McGuire. Show Jan. 20 will be the McGuire sisters. The guest star on television hardly constitutes a major news item. But when McGuire turns up on variety shows on two rival networks within 10 days, it is highly unusual.

Almost invariably, a performer must agree to keep off other network shows for some three weeks before—and after—an appearance.

"The rule doesn't apply," explained Phyllis, "the middle one."

The Sullivan Show signed a contract with the McGuire sisters. There's nothing that says I can't appear as a single."

IN SOLO ACT
Phyllis now has launched a new, independent career as a solo singing act, and a new, independent career as an actress.

Big news this week and next is the Sherbrooke Hi-Y Club's annual Boys' Basketball Jamboree to be held January 19 at the Sherbrooke High and Mitchell Schools.

The event, entered by some 19 schools throughout the Eastern Townships is the highlight of the sports season for basketball fans.

Dave Sinclair, vice-president of the Sherbrooke Hi-Y Club says the deadline for schools entering in the event this year is January 16. To date, entries have been received from Lennoxville, North Hatley, Thetford Mines, Cowansville, Knowlton, St. Patrick's, Sherbrooke, Cookshire and Abasco-Danville-Shipton High School. Other teams are urged to make their entry before the above deadline, says Dave.

Because of the number of schools participating in the event and the limited time set aside for the jamboree, some of the games will be played in the Mitchell School gymnasium on Portland-Street. The first game begins at 9 a.m. at SHS.

Chairmen of this year's jamboree are Gordie Bennett, Bob Lothrop and Mark Wheeler.

Following the jamboree there will be a dance at the YWCA on Dufferin Street. Dancing will be from 8 to 11 p.m. Dave Sinclair will be master of ceremonies.

ORATORICAL CONTEST — The first oratorical contest of the school term at St. Patrick High School, Sherbrooke, will be held January 21 says correspondent, Richard Wilson. There are two such contests during the year, sponsored by the Mother's Guild. Meanwhile, a contestant from Sunnyside High School is to be chosen to participate in the McGill Alumnae public speaking contest open to students of the St. Francis Valley Branch January 28.

Today and for the next few Saturdays, says correspondent, Tom Rothney, the high school Red Cross will be cleaning, painting and furnishing a schoolhouse at the Dixville Home for Retarded Children. The St. Francis High School Red Cross at Richmond is also helping with this project.

SCHOOL EXTENSION FINISHED — Students attending St. Patrick High School were able to move into the new classrooms after the New Year's holiday following the completion of the third floor extension to the school.

In a letter from correspondent Richard Wilson, the school expresses thanks to the Sherbrooke Catholic School Board for the new extension and for complete renovations done in the rest of the school the recreation hall, sports dressing rooms and the enlarged cafeteria. The board has also purchased six spotlights for the hockey rink.

LITTLE REMAINS in the Guy Bilodeau Men's Wear store, 121 Main Street Cowansville following a visit by thugs early Friday morning. Owner of the establishment, Mr. Guy Bilodeau, estimated that $10,000 worth of men's clothing was stolen. Only about 10 overcoats remain in the store.

Probe into theft continues

COWANSVILLE — (Staff) — Cowansville municipal and Quebec Provincial Police today are still investigating the largest theft in Cowansville history which occurred at the Guy Bilodeau Men's Wear clothing store on Main Street here early Friday morning.

The thieves made away with an estimated $10,000 worth of clothing after gaining entrance through a steel-barred window at the rear of the store which leads to the basement.

From the basement, the thieves gained access to the store itself, where they stole over 100 suits, 100 pairs of pants, sports jackets and ski clothing.

Police believe that the merchandise was loaded into a truck which was parked in the parking lot of the Maurice Hotel. The parking lot is adjacent to the store.

When questioned by a Record reporter, Mr. Bilodeau said, "they were experts in clothing. I had about 10 overcoats of little value on hand and they left them where they were. All the remaining merchandise excluding such small items as shirts, socks and ties were cleared from the store."

Projected bridge

New survey is made near Mitchell Park

Charles Langlois, Sherbrooke director of services said Friday that another survey is being made of the Mitchell Park area in connection with the Montreal-Terrill Street bridge project.

According to Mr. Langlois, this survey is being made in order to lay precise plans for the project.

Although surveys had been conducted in the past for the project, Mr. Langlois said that these were only preliminary ones.

Tenders will be called on the plans based on the new survey, he said.

The present survey is being made by Cote-Lemieux-Carignan and Royer, he said. The bridge that is planned from the foot of Montreal Street in the North Ward over the St. Francis River to Terrill Street in the East Ward will cost $870,000, according to estimates released earlier by city officials.

The remainder of the project including traffic circles and a highway along the west bank of the St. Francis River will cost $1,280,000, according to city hall officials. Although the city is awaiting an answer to a request from the provincial government for financial aid, the city council decided that regardless of the outcome of this request, they will proceed with the project if the people so wish.

Provincial elections in E.T.

Over 80% of voters turned out at polls

Complaints of electoral apathy, frequently aired in many democratic countries, do not apply to Eastern Townships voters judging from the official report of the November, 1962, Quebec general elections issued by Francois Drouin, Q.C., chief electoral officer for the province.

In the 12 counties comprising the Eastern Townships, the turnout of voters in every case exceeded 80 per cent of the registered electors and in one constituency, Arthasaska, the turnout was over 92 per cent followed closely by Brome with 80.4 per cent.

Percentages of the eligible vote cast in other district ridings were: Wolfe, 90; Compton, 89; Drummond, 89; Megantic, 88; Frontenac, 86; Stanstead, 85; Missisquoi, 84; Shefford, 84 and Richmond, 83.

The most impressive majority rolled up by any candidate was in Drummond where Roads Minister Bernard Pinard led his sole opponent, UN Lucien Morissette by 13,611 to 10,953 for a majority of 3,668. Rejected ballots numbered 224.

Equally impressive was the 2,703 vote lead registered in Richmond by Welfare Minister Emile Lafrance who defeated UN Raymond Frechette by 9,932 to 7,229, with 174 spoiled ballots.

Ranking third in majority was Emile Maheux who held Megantic for the Liberals, polling 13,182 votes to the 10,762 cast for J. H. Paquet, the Union Nationale nominee, for a majority of 2,400. Spoiled ballots numbered 173.

Also registering a majority in excess of two thousand, 2,101 to be exact, was Georges Vaillancourt, Liberal in Stanstead, who polled 8,908 to 6,817 for Roland Dion, Union Nationale, and 99 for Marcel Ostiguy, Provincial Action Party. In Stanstead 143 ballots were rejected.

Fifth position was held by Jean Jacques Bertrand, Union Nationale, who rolled up a lead of 1,962 over Liberal Gabriel Cloutier in Missisquoi. The vote there was Bertrand, 7,630; Cloutier, 5,668; rejected, 136.

Carrier Fortin, one of the two newcomers elected to the House from ET ridings, defeated Mayor Armand Nadeau in Sherbrooke by 18,539 to 16,714 for a majority of 1,825. The third candidate, Claude Perreault, received 87 votes although he had withdrawn unofficially from the race and 502 ballots were rejected.

Liberal Albert Morissette polled 10,988 votes in Arthasaska, 1,453 more than 9,535 cast for Yvan Jutras, Union Nationale. There, 160 ballots were rejected.

In Compton, UN candidate

Claude Gosselin held a 1,014 vote lead in a three-way fight, the result being Gosselin, 5,569; Roland Brousseau, Liberal, 4,554; Gerard Houle, PAP, and spoiled ballots, 53. Eloi Guillemette, Union Nationale, polled 6,217 votes in Frontenac County to defeat Joseph Luc Roy, Liberal, who received 5,639, by a majority of 982, 111 ballots being rejected.

Shefford remained in the Union Nationale ranks, giving 800 majority to Armand Russell in a triangular fight. Detailed vote was Russell, 12,026; Marcel Boivin, Liberal, 11,226; Romeo Lantagne, Ind. Liberals, 754, and 237 ballots rejected.

In Brome, Glen Brown, Liberal, defeated James Jolley,

More bilingualism needed in Ottawa

In a section of the recently released third volume of the Glassco Commission report there is a discussion of the use of bilingualism in transacting the government's business which emphasizes just how lax this government — and others before it — have been in exercising even elementary politeness.

The section notes that translations of bills and reports from English into French are extremely difficult to come by, an in some cases, impossible. The report cites case after case of delay and neglect in this regard. It even cites cases of special requests made by various organizations for translations of specific documents being put off for months.

Strictly speaking, this section of the report is not dealing as much with economic efficiency as the rest of the report is. A better translation service would undoubtedly mean increased bilingual staffs and extra cost. But there would be efficiency in the sense that delay, irritation and downright insult would be eliminated.

There is no reason why the government's business should not be made available for scrutiny to both French and English-speaking citizens with a minimum of delay and fuss. It is done in many spheres in Quebec.

There are at least two fine examples right in Sherbrooke. In 1960, a three-volume city planning study for Sherbrooke was published. Called the La Haye report, it ran to hundreds of pages. Yet, simultaneously with the appearance of the original French-language editions of the volumes there were made available identical English-language translations. This in a city where the English-speaking population is much less than 30 per cent of the total.

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce regularly issues reports, studies and notices in both languages.

And there are countless other examples around the province.

There is no reason why the federal government — which is, after all, a government of all the people — should not operate more than it does now in both of Canada's official languages.

Japanese living standards improve

The frequently-painted picture of Japan as a nation of low-paid workers existing at a bare subsistence level is rather obscured by recent statistics concerning the automobile industry in that country.

During the past year, Japanese plants produced more than one million automobiles, most of them being disposed of on the home market. And production is expected to exceed this figure during 1963, with the great majority finding their way into the hands of domestic buyers.

The total number of motor cars owned in Japan is now 2,400,000, still a rather low ratio when the country's 92,000,000 population is considered. But millions more Japanese apparently hope to buy cars when they become available.

More than six million of them have qualified to drive after passing practical and written examinations so stiff that some of the "paper drivers" have had to take the tests as many as 40 times. There are 30 driving schools in Tokyo alone and people line up for hours to get their test at the wheel.

And the Japanese appear to have spare cash for the purchase of more than automobiles. The country, after the United States and Russia, is the third largest producer of pianos, with production jumping from 11,600 to 65,100 in an eight-year period. Significantly more than seventy per cent of the instruments are owned by private individuals and the rest by schools and organizations.

Many other "luxury" lines report steadily mounting demand by the Japanese people indicating that while in some lines of industry the worker may still be exploited, the living standards of the majority of the people are rising at an impressive rate.

It isn't until he outgrows his kid days that a man stands up to take what's coming to him instead of leaning over.

Haydn S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR

Tracks in the snow tell vivid tale

It was a sparkling day after the storm had blown itself out. Fence posts were jaunty white berets and hilltops were jewel-bright in the sunshine. The countryside was clean and fresh with its new blanket.

The sun climbed near the height of its arc and the red line climbed in the thermometer. A good day, a countryman thought, for a ramble across the fields, around the swamp and into the woodland.

Near the edge of the swamp, he came upon the story. There were rabbit tracks leading from the woodland, where cottontail had loped leisurely along on a morning search for food.

The tracks ended. There were a few drops of scarlet congealed in the snow. One could see where the wing feathers of the owl had pressed the snow before the bird flew away with its prey.

It seems a tragedy when man reads the story in the snow. But we know that behind the many life forms that inhabit field and wood, swale and mountainside, is a plan so intricate that man does not yet fully understand its ramifications.

Biologists label it the "balance of nature" and in its complex web live rabbits and owls, mice and hawks, pheasants and foxes, deer and wildcat. Why it should be true, man does not know. Why could there not be a few species that would not grow too numerous? Why should one species need another to hold it in check? Why, indeed, did certain insects and animals originate in the first place?

We do not know. But on a winter's day when fresh-fallen snow makes a painting of the landscape, one can go forth and read the stories. Life is still a mystery. Life writes stories for man as well as lower forms. We do not understand but we can walk and read, and still live by faith.

Other papers say:

Last word in municipalities' greed

A device which automatically cancels unexpired time on a parking meter is the nastiest case of greed to come along in some time.

City officials have quite properly turned aside any suggestion that the device will be installed in Calgary. They have said that there are no plans to change the present metering system.

The device, introduced by a Florida firm, works electronically in cancelling "free" time as a car nudges up to the curb. Thus the motorist in the parking spot must pay for his own time, no matter how much time previously remained on the meter.

Any charges of free-loading by motorists using time paid for by others pale into insignificance alongside any practice that would allow a city to collect double time for its meters.

It would be a classic case of double-gouging, of further punishing the motorist already caught in a traffic nightmare of the city's own making.

During the hours the parking meters are in operation, they can bring in only a clearly defined maximum revenue. To increase this through any such method as a needless and unbusinesslike double charge is unacceptable.

Calgary works enough hardship on a parked motorist at the moment with meters that will not accept pennies, thus forcing the motorist to ante up a nickel although his stop may be of only a few minutes' duration.

And the fact still remains that meters are not to make money as much as they are designed to assist enforcement in zoned parking areas.

Robert Bailey, city traffic superintendent, has said that if the city wanted to stop the free-loading, all it would have to do is remove the clocks from the present meters. Then only the person who deposited the coin would know how much time was left.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Bailey posed this only as a hypothetical situation.

Huge German investigation on into the thalidomide situation

AACHEN, Germany (AP) — A huge legal investigation is going on here in connection with thalidomide, the drug which thousands of parents associate with the birth of deformed children.

In the town of Stolberg, just outside Aachen, thalidomide was developed by the pharmaceutical firm Chemie Gruenthal.

A special prosecutor's task force investigating charges against the drug has established itself in Aachen's court building. It is assembling reports from all parts of the world.

The aim is to find whether there is positive evidence of a link between thalidomide and malformations in babies born to mothers who took the drug.

Many doctors believe there is, and the drug was taken off the market more than a year ago when it first came under suspicion.

The manufacturer insists final proof is lacking. Its scientists argue that the rate of deformities was not always identical with the sales curve of thalidomide. They say reports from the Philippines and Hungary shows that malformations increased even where no thalidomide was marketed.

The official inquiry has been running since late 1961.

Prosecutor H. Havertz, in charge, has made no direct comment on findings so far. But he said recently they indicated that the spread of malformations had a cause and could have been prevented.

Dr. Havertz has received more than 500 criminal complaints against the manufacturer. A firm cannot be held criminally responsible here. Dr. Havertz has to determine whether charges of criminal negligence should be filed against any individuals at Gruenthal.

"In my opinion a decision on whether criminal charges can be preferred will not be reached before mid-1963," Dr. Havertz says.

If there are criminal proceedings, their result presumably will have a bearing on whether civil suits are brought against the manufacturer. No civil actions have been reported.

To illustrate the investigation's scope, Dr. Havertz points out that the record already runs to more than 200,000 pages. Many scientific studies when completed will add to the files.

Besides his assistant and a squad of specially trained detectives, the prosecutor is helped by a state-appointed medical commission and several scientists conducting private research.

In addition, he is kept informed on tests that the manufacturers of thalidomide are continuing.

There are still no definite statistics on the number of deformed babies born to mothers who took thalidomide. Estimates for West Germany vary between 2,000 and 6,000. Parents of deformed children need not register such cases.

A Gruenthal spokesman has estimated that the total number of malformed children born since 1959 was 2,500, a third of whom died.

Thalidomide was developed in 1954 and sold in Germany under the trade name Contergan.

It was swallowed daily by thousands of sleep-seeking Germans. Animal tests had established that even the heaviest dose could not be fatal, so doctors favored Contergan in prescriptions.

Following the alarming reports about births, Contergan was withdrawn from sale Nov. 26, 1961. Nine months later, health authorities reported a slump in defective births.

matter of fact

Here is a term to add to those such as: polygamy, monogamy and bigamy — henogamy. This word denotes the custom by which one, and only one member of a family or stock is permitted to marry. Thus among Nambuturi Brahmins of Malabar the eldest son alone marries to keep the family property intact and to prevent its disintegration by partition which the marriage of younger brothers might necessitate.

MEXICAN AUTO PLAN

MEXICO CITY (Reuters) — Plans for putting auto production on a more domestic basis are covered by a new decree signed by President Adolfo Lopez Mateos. The decree specifies all cars and trucks assembled in Mexico must have at least 60 per cent of domestically manufactured parts by Sept. 1, 1964.

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — An important low-key political development in the Commons over the last few months has been a changing pattern of position and responsibility within the Liberal opposition.

What has happened, and is still happening, has taken place without benefit of official announcements or formal elevation or demotion of the individuals involved. But the increased prestige and influence of certain Liberal MPs, and the corresponding diminution of the images of other MPs has become increasingly evident.

The same thing has happened among the Conservatives, but in the government party the changes were plain for everyone to see in the organization of the cabinet last summer. Donald Fleming was downgraded from second place to not better than fifth, and David Fulton's transfer to public works, which he considered a demotion, was influential in persuading him to quit Ottawa for the not exactly green pastures of the provincial Tories in British Columbia.

The ascendancy of other Tories' political stars was obvious: George Nowlan, Richard Bell, Hugh John Flemming and Paul Martineau in particular.

Liberal leader Pearson does not have even a "shadow cabinet" — at least, not officially — so the relative ratings of his followers in the Commons must be assessed in other ways. One is by noticing who appears to have the main responsibility for asking questions of specific ministers, replying to ministerial statements of policy, and carrying the burden of Liberal criticism during the House's consideration of departmental estimates.

Inasmuch as there was practically no consideration of departmental estimates before Christmas, it is quite likely that the changes evident so far in Liberal caucus hierarchy are incomplete.

Pearson's chief lieutenants are still Paul Martin, Jack Pickersgill and Lionel Chevrier, but Chevrier's prestige as the number one French-Canadian federal Liberal suffered through Social Credit successes on June 18. His influence relative to Quebec policies is now rivaled by that of others, notably Maurice Sauve, the freshman MP who was one of the architects of Premier Lesage's victory in 1960.

No one has announced that Paul Hellyer is no longer the defence critic, and C. M. "Bud" Drury is — but that seems to be the situation.

No one has announced that W. M. Benidickson has been supplanted as financial critic by Walter Gordon — but that appears to be the case.

No one has announced that former CCF leader Hazen Argue is Liberal farm critic, but it is obvious.

No one has said that George McIlraith's hopes for a top portfolio would not be fulfilled in the likely event the Liberals win an election this year — but he has just announced he will not contest the next election. McIlraith had set his sights on the trade and commerce portfolio — but few doubt that Pearson's choice would be Mitchell Sharp, the former deputy of C. D. Howe who narrowly missed election when he ran against Donald Fleming last spring.

The growing prestige of Judy LaMarsh points her towards a cabinet post. However, she has avoided crowding any one of her male rivals by becoming in effect the Liberal critic on Indian affairs, the National Gallery, and in the field of patents and copyright.

Thus does the makeup of the next Liberal cabinet take shadowy shape.

The 'DO IT NOW' Season is here again

- The season for improvement jobs around your home, plant or business.
- The season when skilled workers are more readily available and, being more productive, give you better value for your dollar.
- The season when many firms offer discounts.
- The season when many other things can be done to advantage—such things as maintenance of lawn and garden equipment, electrical appliances, outboard motors and automobiles, as well as dry cleaning of drapes and rugs and replacement of upholstery, to mention but a few.
- The season when you can help your community to create employment during the traditional winter lull. When everybody works, everybody benefits.

Suggests factory in every town

A factory in every city and town solely to provide winter employment has been suggested in "Do it now" campaign discussions for the Sherbrooke district.

Union Nationale, for the third consecutive time, by polling 3,417 votes to the 2,704 cast for Jolley. The Liberal majority was 713 and 58 ballots were rejected.

Rene Lavoie captured Wolfe from the Liberals by defeating the former member, Dr. Gerard Lemieux 3,939 to 3,458 for a majority of 481. Robert Roy, P.A.P., polled 46 votes and 71 were spoiled.

Advising representatives of the Sherbrooke dailies were present, as were Herbert Simons, manager of Royal Trust here, and president of the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce, and Joseph Fortier, a retired builder and president of the local Property Owners' League.

Gaston Deblais of the UIC, who will be secretary of the committee, said he had invited many other local officials of both labor and management, but they had not been able to attend.

Speaking for contractors, Mr. Beaudry said, "We find it a bit more expensive to build in the winter, but otherwise you lose all the money you earned in the summer. You can pay a man a dollar an hour in summer."

The meeting, chaired by Sherbrooke UIC manager Eugene Charette, did not take any action on the suggestion. It appointed a publicity chairman for the eight-week campaign—Leon Beaudry of the Eastern Townships Outdoor Contractors Association. Two other committee members will be named.

Mr. Fortier said some homeowners hired a laborer directly to do renovations for them, by-passing contractors, and there was no record of the hiring.

"Still, it does help with unemployment," Mr. Rivard commented.

The campaign to encourage winter employment lasts from January to the beginning of March. Mr. Charette said the federal government wanted non-governmental groups to take a predominant part in the campaign. A national advertising campaign, prepared by a Montreal agency, runs concurrently with local campaigns.

THE WEEK'S NEWS

ported in neighboring Kasai province in an outbreak not connected with the Katangan dispute. Estimates of the death toll in Kasai ranged from 100 killed to more than 500.

NUCLEAR DEBATE

A controversy over Canada's nuclear role, touched off by the visit of American Gen. Lauris Norstad last week, picked up steam.

Norstad, just-retired supreme Allied commander in Europe, said Canada won't fulfill an undertaking given to NATO unless it accepts nuclear warheads for the RCAF air division and the Canadian infantry brigade in Europe.

He indicated the obligation couldn't be carried out without a nuclear agreement with the U.S.

On Sunday Gen. Charles Foulkes, former chairman of the Canadian joint chiefs of staff, confirmed Norstad's statement that Canada had committed itself in 1958 to a nuclear role in NATO.

Maj.-Gen. W. H. S. Macklin, former adjutant-general of the Canadian Army, on Wednesday accused Foulkes of "breach of confidence" for disclosing what took place in a cabinet meeting.

Foulkes retorted that he had never attended a cabinet meeting and that Macklin was not qualified to criticize his statement. He said his statements came from a briefing Norstad gave to the cabinet and himself, and that there was "no official secret" about the NATO agreement.

Defence Minister Harkness also commented on the dispute, saying that if Foulkes' statement had been "accurately reported, he had no right to reveal discussions which may have taken place in a cabinet defence committee meeting."

CLAIM BREAKTHROUGH

A battle over North America's defences also broke out as four British newspapers claimed last weekend that four Vulcan jet bombers had penetrated into Canadian and U.S. airspace in an exercise about two months ago.

Both British and U.S. officials denied the reports, but the British air ministry would not disclose whether its bombers had ever pierced the North American defence shield, saying such exercise results were never made public.

RUSSIAN APPROACH

The possibility of Canadian-Russian co-operation in the development of atomic energy emerged Thursday in statements by Soviet Ambassador A. Maslennikov and Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Arotunian called for such an agreement in an Ottawa press conference. The prime minister said later that his government would be glad to consider a formal proposal from Moscow on the subject.

Earlier in the week the prime minister made public the third report of the Glassco royal commission, set up to study the efficiency of the federal civil service. It urged the government to pull out of many areas where it felt Ottawa no longer belongs, including the $50,000,000-a-year operation of war veterans hospitals.

The prime minister indicated the government would not be able to accept some of the proposals, considered too sweeping.

WEATHER WOES

Britain continued to shiver under a deep freeze that has gripped the country for three weeks. RAF and civilian aircraft dropped food to stranded farm animals but losses were reported heavy in Devonshire, was described in one report as a "vast animal graveyard."

Western Canada also suffered a wave of storms and intense cold that claimed four lives. Members of a Fort St. John, B.C., hockey team whose bus skidded into a ditch skated for help on the icy highway.

World briefs: Brazilians voted overwhelmingly Sunday to return executive powers to President Joao Goulart. . . . Peru's military junta arrested hundreds of persons last weekend in breaking an alleged plot for a Communist takeover. . . . The United States and the Soviet Union Monday night withdrew the Cuban issue from UN Security Council consideration, although they said all problems arising from the crisis had not been settled.

ATLANTIC WEEK

The Atlantic Provinces Economic Council during the week gave approval of the Atlantic Development Board Act as the first federal government attempt to encourage by comprehensive means economic development of the Atlantic provinces.

APEC suggested the first goal of the new board should be provision of 155,000 new job opportunities in the area in the next 17 years.

class stability—a revolution in reverse.

In Caracas today, for example, one person in four is an immigrant. In Buenos Aires, the chances are that the average citizen's parents were Italian or Spanish.

In Holambra, a model farming settlement of Dutch set up by the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration upwards of 200 visitors come monthly from all over the Latin hemisphere to learn how they can bring the same kind of success to their areas.

In Brazil's northeast, where periodic famines threaten both life and stability, ICEM is working with the government on land reclamation studies. In Venezuela's interior, where a bottle of milk is twice as expensive as a bottle of petroleum, organizations like ICEM have been summoned to survey the land's needs and help bring Europeans who will not only teach local people new methods but will also settle and become citizens.

Ferment and change like this have spread into other, more conservative forces in the Latin American community.

Magazines, especially those aimed at women, are running articles nowadays on topics once considered too explosive to mention—birth control, for example, and land reform.

Radio and TV stations are competing in a wildly growing field. Chile has twice as many radio stations as her population warrants.

In newspapers, too, change is obvious. In Ecuador, journalists have made complete national literacy their private crusade. In Sao Paulo, a young American businessman complained to this reporter that bachelorhood wasn't so easy.

"These local girls read the papers and know more about world events than I do."

At the crux of this turmoil among women, in church, army, press and land use stands the Latin American farmer. Largely, he is remote, isolated, living as he did 400 years ago. But he is awakening slowly to the realization that he wants change and has the strength to seize it.

"But is he being reached?" asks an official at the U.N.'s Economic Commission for Latin America (ECLA) in Santiago.

"Certainly not by the newspapers—he can't read. Possibly by the radio. But chances are he doesn't have one. Probably not by his local parish priest who is doubtless worried that his own status is in jeopardy and is resisting change."

It has become the major battle of this hemispheric revolution to get—and hold—the allegiance of the rural citizen.

To this end, the catch-phrase of "land-reform" has become the campaign slogan of both left and right.

To this end, the Peace Corps in Peru, for example, has been at work on a school lunch program in what appears to be a successful effort at increasing rural school attendance.

To this end, government planners and politicians alike have finally begun to recognize the power that lies with local rural leaders—the farmers, storekeepers, chauffeurs, beauticians, grandmothers—who hold Latin America's real leadership.

Puerto Rico's Family Planning Association, which relies heavily on such local leaders to spread the facts of birth control throughout the island commonwealth, is cited widely throughout South America as an example to follow in getting things done.

"Whoever convinces those leaders first," an ECLA sociologist says, "wins the race. And the hemisphere."

dockyard in Halifax, told a news conference the navy's newest ship, the Mackenzie-class destroyer escort, was equipped with outdated gear.

John Gregory said the navy should arm with Polaris missile-equipped submarines. A naval spokesman in Ottawa said Mr. Gregory was "something less than knowledgeable about Canadian defence policy."

Premier Walter Shaw of Prince Edward Island announced the first session of the legislature since his Conservative government was re-elected Dec. 16 will probably be called "about the middle of March." The government's membership was reduced from 22 to 19 in the 30 seat house.

A paper mill in Dalhousie announced a cut in production is to be made as a result of the New York newspaper strike—the second mill in the Atlantic provinces to do so.

The International Paper Company mill will start a four day work week next week instead of the usual five days. Earlier, a week-long shutdown at a mill in Nova Scotia was said to be a result of the strike.

WAYS MILLS —

The community was saddened to learn of Mr. W. N. Horn's death which occurred on Jan. 6. Mr. Horn had been seriously ill since Friday evening, when he suffered a stroke and lapsed into a coma, from which he never rallied. The funeral was held in the United Church here.

Mrs. Ruth Bliss, of Stanstead, was called to the Horn home on Jan. 5, to assist in caring for Mr. W. N. Horn, as were Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Gilbert, of Ayer's Cliff, who were in attendance most of the time.

Miss Marguerite Allan and Miss Elsie Boyce, of Granby, spent the weekend with Mrs. Hattie Gilbert.

The U.C.W. meeting, which was to have been held on Jan. 9, at the home of Miss Agnes Oliver, has been postponed until a later date.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Slack and daughter, Cathy, of Stanstead, visited Miss Agnes Oliver recently.

INVERNESS —

Holiday guests of this section included the following: Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Little, of Lennoxville, at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little; Mr. and Mrs. Willie Porter and family of Thetford Mines; Mr. and Mrs. Keith Campbell, of Plessisville; Mr. and Mrs. Alger White and family, of Glen Lloyd; Mr. and Mrs. Buster Campbell, of Montreal, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Campbell; the Misses Jeannette, Laura and Florence MacKinnon, of Quebec were with their sister, Mrs. Dan Appleton.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McCammon of Thetford Mines; Mr. and Mrs. Cromarty Cruikshank; Mr. and Mrs. John Dempsey, were guests at the Cruikshank home.

No. 678, and a New Year's Eve dance, sponsored by the Anglican Guild, were both cancelled due to his inclement weather.

Sympathy is being extended to Mrs. Harry Campbell in the double bereavement which she suffered recently, in the sudden deaths of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Tom Beattie, of Lemesurier, and that of her nephew, Mr. Clinton Beattie, of Danville.

Miss Nancy Little, of Sherbrooke, spent the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Little, at Glenview Cottage.

ANDREW WM. MULVENA, OF ASSINIBOIA, SASK., Formerly of Richmond Hill.

ASSINIBOIA, SASK. — The death of Andrew William Mulvena, took place at the Assiniboia Hospital on Nov. 26, 1962, after an illness of about five months.

After undergoing surgery at the Providence Hospital at Moose Jaw, Sask., the latter part of July, Mr. Mulvena had returned home, where he remained until entering the Assiniboia Hospital on Sept. 28.

Mr. Mulvena was born at Richmond Hill, Que., on Jan. 23, 1890; second son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Mulvena.

He came to Saskatchewan in 1909 and in 1910 entered the employ of the C.P.R., where he remained until his retirement.

He is survived by his wife, three sons and two daughters, 10 grandchildren, two brothers and two sisters. He was predeceased by a son, Desmond, who died in 1938, at the age of five years.

The Requiem Mass, sung by Msgr. J. A. Vachon at St. George's Catholic Church at Assiniboia, Sask., on Nov. 29, was largely attended by relatives and friends from Winnipeg, Swift Current, Canopus, Rock Glen, Killdeer and Glendive, Montana.

FRANK A. FIELD, OF BEDFORD.

Formerly of Montreal

BEDFORD — Funeral services were held at noon on Dec. 26, from the chapel of D. A. Collins, Montreal, for Frank A. Field, founder and first curator of the Bell Telephone Company's museum, who died in Bedford on Dec. 24. Burial was in Mount Royal Cemetery, Montreal.

Mr. Field was born in Brockville, Ont., 1872, shortly after the invention of the telephone. He saw the telephone introduced in Brockville and, in 1889 came to Montreal, where he joined the Bell Company as a night operator.

In 1890 Mr. Field was appointed as inspector and wireman, which opened his career in the plant department. At the time his district contained the only private switchboard operating in Montreal. In 1895 he assumed charge of the East exchange in Montreal, followed by his appointment as office manager there.

In 1902 he was appointed as foreman of the Montreal installation department and in 1911 he took over the duties of district inspector in charge of Bell's buildings and exchanges in Montreal. Further promotions came to Mr. Field between 1920 and 1934, among which was the appointment as curator of the Telephone Museum and historical collection, which grew out of his hobby.

During his business career, Mr. Field was keenly interested in the telephone and was involved with its development and application. Out of this interest grew his collection of telephone equipment, documents and pictures, starting early in his career. The resulting collection formed the nucleus of the museum, which he opened as curator in 1930. Following his retirement in 1934, he was re-appointed as part-time curator, a position he held until his second retirement in 1939.

The museum is now known as Panorama of Telephone Progress and is the most unique working communications museum of its kind in the world.

Mr. Field was married twice, first to Dorcas Mills, who died in 1919, and secondly to Lottie King, who died in 1958. He is survived by his son, F. Allen Field, of Phillipsburg, and three daughters, Mrs. R. Glegg and Miss Hilda Field, both of Montreal, and Miss Una Field, of New York; four grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Qualities men admire most in women

With today's beauty aids, any woman can make herself attractive.

But while surface appearance will earn the glances of men, no one has yet been able to prepackage the qualities that most men admire, and look for, in women. Among them:

Quiet self-assurance. Men don't like conceited women. They do like women whose manner reflects basic self-respect and serenity. This is infinitely more intriguing than pride of appearance.

Gentleness: A gentle nature is an essential part of true femininity. It is not the same as mere politeness.

Vivacity: A vivacious woman brings her own special light into any room she enters; she makes life seem more exciting.

Polly's pointers

by Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — One of the best tricks I know is to hang a clock in the bathroom. The husband knows he has 10 minutes to eat breakfast. It saves wear and tear on nerves and lungs because there is no need for a blow-by-blow description of the passing minutes. The children know they have so many minutes to get off to school or down to breakfast. Try it!

MRS. E. W. G.
DEAR POLLY — We have a teen-age daughter who NEVER eats breakfast. The most I could force down her was one-half glass of milk and then I had guilty feelings all day about what a horrible mother I was for letting her go off to school without enough food. But no longer! Instead of milk there is a glass of liquid dietary food — brimful of vitamins, proteins, carbohydrates — an adequate breakfast for her and I am laughing instead of crying. If you girls keep on sharing with each other (you have solved some vexing problems for me) we might be able to save each other much bother.

MRS. J. R.
GIRLS: Looks like we are getting those early morning problems solved today, aren't we?

POLLY
DEAR POLLY — If small children hate to have their faces washed, use dad's shaving brush to get up a good lather. They love it.

MRS. L. S.
The kids would love it, but how about Dad?

POLLY
DEAR POLLY — When ripping a seam with a razor blade or a stitch ripper, place the cloth to be ripped under the foot of the sewing machine and put the needle down through it. This holds

CHILI WAFFLE OPEN SANDWICHES
The youngsters in your family will request Chili Waffle Open sandwiches over and over again. Cut pork sausage in bite size pieces; cook until browned. Add chili con carne with beans; heat. Toast ready prepared waffles following package directions. Spoon sausage - chili mixture over waffles. Garnish with sprigs of parsley.

PINEAPPLE CANDIED BEETS
The tiniest touches can put a vegetable in finery that will take it right to a dinner party. Heat small whole beets; drain. Add some pineapple preserves; mix lightly and heat. Serve sprinkled with chopped mint leaves. For such a simple touch, it's a really elegant vegetable dish.

MRS. G. B.
DEAR POLLY — An easy and inexpensive way to acquire a new lamp shade is this: take an old lamp shade or an inexpensive one from the dime store the shape and size you want. Wrap it around lengthwise with four-ply yarn in a color to match your decor. The yarn hides any defects in the shade and makes a very attractive accessory in any room.

MRS. G. A. J.
GIRLS: But be sure there's no fire danger.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By HUGH DOHERTY

HANDEL: The Royal Fireworks Music; Water Music; Leopold Stokowski conducting the RCA Victor Symphony Orchestra (RCA VICTOR stereo LSC 2612) — There are a number of arrangements of both these Handel favorites for modern orchestra. All the usual ones stick fairly close to the original in that the strings carry the main burden of the music. In these versions, however, Mr. Stokowski has assembled a giant orchestra (125 musicians) with some unusual additions, such as 24 oboes and 12 bassoons ("for tonal texture, not dynamics"). Mr. Stokowski's interpretations are heavy on the brasses with the strings often relegated to a minor role. The result is a Royal Fireworks suite (complete with real fireworks in the finale) that is reminiscent of the majesty of The Messiah and Water Music of stirring martial splendor.

ANDRE PREVIN plays French piano music; POULENG: Trois Pieces, Melancolie, Suite Francaise, Presto in B flat; ROUSSEL: Trois Pieces, Sonatine (COLUMBIA stereo MS 6346) — Modern musical master of all trades Andre Previn demonstrates on this recording a crystal clear effervescent style of playing that has aptly been likened to champagne. The performance's most apparent quality is abundant charm.

STRAVINSKY: Suite from The Fire Bird (1919 version); WALTON: Symphony No. 2; George Szell conducts The Cleveland Orchestra in both of these works. (Epic stereo BC 1149) — The variety in modern composition is especially striking when these works are played in the order in which they appear on the record. Stravinsky revised his original ballet score, written in 1909, and experts tell us the 1919 version is one of "more modest orchestration." It would be interesting to compare the brilliance of the shimmering brass tones and sensuous rhythms of the later score with the earlier one. For those who feel modern music is plagued by sameness, the contrast between Stravinsky and Walton should be a surprise. Walton's symphony, completed in 1960, is tense and elegant, bound together by a melodic thread which imposes a tight discipline, while Stravinsky's work is powerful and almost overwhelming. The Stravinsky suite is rendered with, perhaps, a shade too much zest. Walton's symphony, however, is obviously interpreted in the controlled manner in which he intended it to be.

When a new album for housing coins appears on the market, it indicates there is increasing interest in that particular issue. A couple of years ago there was a Canada Type Set Album issued by Whitman Publishing in the United States, and within the past month the same house has published a Newfoundland Type Set Album.

Newfoundland coins have been rather neglected by the majority of Canadian collectors, although the Coin Corner has received numerous enquiries from non-collectors regarding Newfoundland coin values.

Mr. E. S. C., of Renfrew, has enquired about Newfoundland 20-cent pieces of the reign of Queen Victoria, 1882 and 1873.

It is impossible to quote an exact price when the condition of the coin is not known. Most of the 20-cent pieces that are not in collectors' hands are very worn and, of course, wear lowers the value of a coin. However, if the portrait is quite clear and the legend on the reverse of the coin is legible and if there are no edge nicks, the 1882 should be worth around $2.00 while the 1873 catalogues at $6.00 in Very Good condition.

Mrs. D. D. R., of Guelph, has two Newfoundland 20-cent pieces dated 1888 and 1889. The 1888 catalogues at $225 in Very Good condition. There are two varieties of the 1889, one a wide date at $1.10 and a narrow date at $2.25.

Mrs. J. W. D. of Toronto has two Newfoundland 50-cent pieces, a Newfoundland dime and a Newfoundland large cent.

The 1896 50-cent catalogues at $2.00 in Very Good condition, the 1917 at $1.00 and the 1943 dime is valued at from 40c. The large cent, of 1894 at from $1.50 to $1.00, depending on condition.

Mrs. R. A. C., of Perth, has enquired about a silver five-cent Newfoundland coin, 1908. This coin is catalogued at $1.50 in Very Good condition.

A really scarce silver five-cent of Newfoundland is the 1946 which, according to the Mint reports, had a very low mintage of only 2,041. There are very few of these coins about. Five years ago there was so little interest in Newfoundland coins that the 1946 five-cent catalogued at only $10.00 in Very Good condition while the catalogue price today in the same condition is $100.00.

Further to last week's report on Canadian Mint Sets, latest word from Ottawa is that a maximum of 50 sets will be sold to one buyer this year. In other years there has been no top limit.

There is no change in the minimums — one Mint Set or two silver dollars per order. The silver dollars, which are packaged in polyethylene, sell for $1.25 each, or a minimum of $2.50 per order.

While this column is usually devoted to those writers who have succeeded in writing a novel, a non-fiction book or a volume of verse, a mimeographed list of books which has recently come to my desk has inspired me to introduce a new type of author to our readers. That type is the literary "how-to-do-it" writer and he is best represented by such titles as: TEACH YOURSELF TO WRITE by Elliott Blackiston.

PREPARING THE MANUSCRIPT by G. Olsen. HOW TO WRITE A NOVEL by Manuel Komroff. WRITING JUVENILE FICTION by Phyllis A. Whitney.

WRITING DETECTIVE AND MYSTERY FICTION edited by A. S. Burack. WRITING THE CONFESSION STORY by Dorothy Collett. WRITING POETRY by John Holmes. HOW TO WRITE TELEVISION COMEDY by Irving Sattel and POINTERS ON RADIO WRITING by Josephine Niggli.

The above-mentioned list has been compiled by the Canadian Authors Association and contains, in all, the names of 58 books of this type.

Though personally I lean to the "you learn to write by writing" school of thought, it is possible that some people with a yen to write might be helped by a book of this kind and therefore I recommend the list.

I might add that although I can't say it has taught me much about writing, there is one book on the list which has long been a favorite of mine. That book is THE WRITER'S HANDBOOK edited by A. S. Burack and reading a few chapters from it is the best pick-me-upper after a long string of rejection slips that I have yet discovered.

So, if you are interested in either theoretical or psychological help in your writing career, you might be wise to get a copy of this list. Write to the Rev. F. A. Wilkes, President of the Montreal Branch of the C.A.A., 7035 Birnam, Ave., Montreal (enclosing 25 cents if you are not a member of the C.A.A.) and ask him to order one for you.

This news item from B.C. writers might be worth passing on as a commendable project for industrial companies in other provinces to consider. "An annual award of $500.00 for outstanding individual achievement by writers on British Columbia weekly and semi-weekly newspapers has been established by MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd. The first award will be made in 1963."

The Montreal Branch of the Canadian Authors Association recently held a dinner in honor of Leslie Roberts. He was presented with a piece of Eskimo art work. Among the many attending the dinner were Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal and National President of the C.A.A., Dr. Helen Creighton of Nova Scotia.

W. J. GAGE LIMITED has announced that the second in a series of two-volume anthologies of literature for young Canadians (the first in the series were NUNNY BAG and RUBABOO) to be published next spring under the company's Writing For Young Canada program, will include works by 46 Canadian authors, some of whom will see their work published for the first time. The authors, whose names have not yet been announced, represent nine of the ten provinces. There is one, as yet unnamed, Quebec writer included in the list.

How Westerns got thataway

THE WESTERN by George N. Fenin & William K. Everett, Ambassador Books, 362 pp., $15.95.

If your child has been "beating you to the draw" either figuratively or factually all his TV-viewing life, then you may not be in a mood to enjoy this book. On the other hand, if you were one of those kids who spent their youthful Saturday afternoons watching Tom Mix or Hoot Gibson at the corner movie, then you may get a good deal of nostalgic pleasure out of this very comprehensive book on "The Western—From Silents To Cinema."

As the authors point out, "Ever since 1903, when The Great Train Robbery was made, the Western has held a special place in American life." And this lavishly illustrated book is the first to tell the full story of the Western.

To the avowed "they went thataway" fan, this book will prove a gold mine of information.

Incidentally, the number of pages listed is somewhat deceptive so far as the actual amount of detail in this book, since each page is larger than that of the average book and every page is filled with comparatively close print. In addition to the voluminous prose detail, the illustrations are numerous, varied, and on the whole—fascinating.

As usual, the price, in my opinion, is somewhat out of line. However, it must be admitted that in this book you come closer to getting your money's worth than in many of the higher-priced books.

To sum up, if you want to know how Westerns are made, how they reflect the past, how they have changed from the action-packed epics of the past to the more psychological type of the present, how the Western stars like William S. Hart felt about their pictures, why these movies continue to be popular and many more things about this type of picture, then you will find this book a source of much interesting reading.

Whale of a tale

A GRUE OF ICE by Geoffrey Jenkins, Collins, London, 319 pp., $3.75.

Where fact ends and fiction begins is difficult to resolve when the author is Geoffrey Jenkins, so deftly does he blend the two in his novels of sea-adventure, adventure with a dash of romance.

A Grue Of Ice is set in the mysterious frozen reaches of the Antarctic where the exact location of fabled Thompson Island, sighted only twice in the history of man, is known only to Bruce Wetherby, former naval commander in World War II. Wetherby, a scientist, "holder of the Royal Society's Travelling Studentship in Oceanography and Limnology," is in the Antarctic on a scientific expedition with his former leading torpedoman, Sailhardy, a forthright native son of Tristan du Cunha who owns the small sea-worthy whaleboat the scientist is using on his expedition.

Wetherby's immediate object is to discover the Albatross' Foot, to establish as fact what "Sailhardy had told me . . . was the inmost secret of the Tristan Islands. They maintained it was a gigantic warm current which swept down in spring—not every spring, but at irregular intervals—between Africa and South America, bearing countless billions of the microscopic sea creatures called plankton, which are the food of everything in the Southern Ocean, from the smallest fish to the whale."

Wetherby's work is interrupted, hampered, thwarted by Sir Frederick Upton, the tycoon who, ostensibly, wants the scientist to discover for him the breeding ground of the blue whale; Upton's plans are actually of a much more sinister nature and danger becomes Wetherby's bed fellow. The situation is made more complicated by the scientist's falling in love with Helen Upton.

A Grue Of Ice is exciting reading, the characters are well defined, the dialogue excellent and the plot tailored to suit the most exacting adventure-story lover. In fact, it is a whale of a tale.

BLUEBELL PHILIPS

New scientific editor at NRC

OTTAWA—Dr. Paul E. Gagnon, 61, has been appointed special assistant to the editor-in-chief of the National Research Council's scientific journals.

A native of Kingsey, Que., he taught at Quebec City's Laval University from 1931 to 1960, when he became director of the division of exchange and training of scientists and experts with the international atomic energy agency in Vienna.

Moses, an egomaniac, a strange mixture of pride and lust and compassion, calls the settlement in the hills, Hebron, his followers the New Believers, and himself the Black Messiah; the religion he preaches is a wild combination of Christianity and ancient superstitions, with a basic conception of the black man as triumphant on earth and in heaven under the kindly dispensation of a Black Jehovah.

Moses' self-crucifixion is a farcical tragedy, out of which grows the compelling story of his long-suffering wife Miss Gatha, their club-footed son Isaac, and of Obadiah, over whose shoulders falls the mantle of prophet.

As a novel, Saxon Sheep doesn't quite seem to get itself together, and characters are picked up and dropped rather disconcertingly. Mrs. Templeton and Mrs. Forlong, though sisters-in-law, were never friends, and author Adams, a descendant of the Templetons, makes references to a skeleton in the Forlong closet.

North Americans will recognize many familiar aspects of colonialism though sheep and convicts take the place of furs and revolution. As an account of the history of Australia, Saxon Sheep is well worthwhile.

ELEANOR MCKIM

Conductor's poodle tells all

EVERYONE IS SOMEONE by Fifi Montoux, 136 pp., $5.00.

Although this is written by a French poodle, it is no ordinary fare for the average Rover. It is a gourmet's dish—a soufflé, light and airy, liberally sprinkled with famous names and places.

It is the autobiography of the pampered dog of Maestro Pierre Montoux and his gift of wife, Madame Doris, who has obviously lent a hand to the canine effort.

It is charming and amusing reading, ideally suited to a convalescent or shut-in. Through Fifi's observant eyes we catch glimpses of great concert halls, magnificent hotel suites, famous cities, renowned people; in a word, living at a level of luxury and genius not common to many. There is gaiety and the bright gloss of sophistication.

The book is not of extreme literary value but it will appeal to many, musical and otherwise, who enjoy touching, even briefly, the enchanted world of the artistic great.

Methodist history

Parsons who fought for causes as well as preaching Gospel

PARSONS AND POLITICS by Goldwin French, Ryerson Press Toronto, 303 pp. $6.00

Parsons and Politics is a factual discussion of the influence of Wesleyan Methodists in the Maritimes and Upper Canada from 1780 to 1855.

This book should be indispensable for all who have a serious interest in our early Canadian history. Although it deals with the relationship of the church and society from the standpoint of the role played by one denomination, it covers the whole range of the background of Canadian political alignments.

Mr. French has done a superb job in documenting his story. There are, for example, 145 references given to the first chapter alone. This does not distract from the readability and continuity of the book. It is scholarly and full of human interest, which is a rare combination.

The author traces the development of the Wesleyan movement, first in the Maritimes in 1779 when the itinerant preachers came from the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, and later to the extension of their cause in Upper Canada. It was difficult in those days to secure a regular supply of ministers. Missionaries from England were persuaded to come to fill the need.

In the Maritime provinces the Methodists were known to be quite conservative and non-political, quietly accepting the existing order. In Upper Canada the Methodists took a more active part in politics. They were part of a society that became suspicious of anything American, and were influenced by the increasing Loyalist Tradition.

The main theme of this book is the role of the Methodists, in "providing an educational system that would adequately cater to the needs of a poor and scattered population"; their opposition to "clergy reserves; the efforts to provide their own press and secondary schools, and the part played by the official church paper, The Christian Guardian.

It is refreshing to read about the dedication of such gifted men as the Ryerson brothers, Egerton, John and William. Egerton is described as "a man of great influence, one of the most scholarly men in Upper Canada." There was always a shortage of ministers, but it would seem from the records that the few who carried the Wesleyan torch were men of great dedication, high scholarship, and tremendous enthusiasm.

There is a minor criticism I must make, and that is regarding the title. We think of politics in the limited sense of provincial and federal governmental activities. This book, however, is concerned with the whole arena of religious and social political endeavour. You will find more in it about schools, clergy reserves, universities (Mount Allison), church publications, etc., than you will about political parties and politicians.

Merino ranching on Australian frontier

SAXON SHEEP by Nancy Adams, Ryerson Press, 247 pp. $3.50.

Contrary to popular belief, all Australian settlers were not convicts. The Forlong and Templeton families were middle class Scots with ambition and capital enough to dream of making a fortune in the colony.

Mrs. Templeton had enough capital to charter a ship and to pay for a flock of fine quality sheep to be transported to Australia. Mrs. Forlong had enough ambition to tramp up and down Germany with her son, choosing and buying the best of Saxon merinos.

Having reached the new land the fortunes of both families fluctuated with the country's development and the market for wool.

Moses, an egomaniac, a strange mixture of pride and lust and compassion, calls the settlement in the hills, Hebron, his followers the New Believers, and himself the Black Messiah; the religion he preaches is a wild combination of Christianity and ancient superstitions, with a basic conception of the black man as triumphant on earth and in heaven under the kindly dispensation of a Black Jehovah.

Collecting

Townships

The Crown Agents' Bulletin for January contains a great deal of information for collectors of their popular stamps. It is interesting to note that there will probably be a general issue of stamps commemorating the founding of the International Red Cross Society. This coming month will see the following stamps issued:

Jan. 1 — Sierra Leone, new definitive issue.
Jan. 28 — Cyprus, the 1962 Europa commemorative issue.

Feb. 1 — British Antarctic Territory, a definitive set for this new territory.

Feb. 1 — Fiji, the Royal Visit commemorative issue. The campaign being undertaken to relieve the undernourished people of the world will be commemorated by Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, the Federation of Malaya, Cyprus, Sierra Leone and Ceylon during this year.

The Royal Visit set from Fiji will consist of two values, the three pence and one shilling of the current set. Collectors may subscribe to this interesting bulletin for only $1.40 per year in U.S. funds.

The address is: The Crown Agents' representative in North America, 3100 Massachusetts Avenue N.W., Washington 8, D.C. The money will be well spent if you collect the issues from this group.

The Dag Hammarskjöld inverted color stamp from the United States has been printed in millions of copies. It is highly possible that the error will be far more plentiful than the correct issue. Collectors who followed the instruction given in this column to order copies of the invert from the agency in Washington will have a long wait.

It seems that there have been thousands of orders for the stamp and the orders are being despatched in order of receipt. The writer received the first ones ordered but a later order has been unfilled for several weeks. You may rest assured that the information was correct and that you will receive your stamps in due course.

The following check list will not be of interest to many but there are topical collectors who do add stamps picturing the domestic cat to their collections. This must surely be one of the smallest fields in topical collecting.

There are twelve such stamps, and none is too expensive, although it may be necessary in some instances to purchase the entire set.

These stamps are (Scott's numbers used): Spain C56; France B309; Netherlands B246; Cuba 574; Hungary 1275, 1279, 1338 and 1341; Luxembourg 377; Germany B377 and B378; Belgium B657.

Topical collectors of animals, birds, snakes, will be interested in the new set from the Republic of Guinea. This features snakes in their natural colors and the stamps are diamond shaped.

The new sets from Monaco, Venezuela and Hungary which picture birds in full colors are real beauties. Sport stamps from Hungary include a new set picturing motorcycles and sports cars. It seems that the topical field is well looked after these days.

The St. Francis Collectors Club will hold their annual meeting and elections on Wednesday, Jan. 16, in the St. George Parish Hall, Lennoxville. This meeting will feature another one of the auction sales consisting of covers and stamps from Leslie LeBaron of North Hatley. You are urged to attend if at all possible. There will be auction lots to bid on, stamp news to talk about and a pleasant evening with your fellow philatelists.

Powerful and human tale of Negro Moses

THE HILLS OF HEBRON by Sylvia Wynter, Johanathan Cape, London, 283 pp., $4.25.

Sylvia Wynter's The Hills of Hebron is a tense and moving drama about a group of poverty-stricken Negroes, a desolated group of "free" men who have not learned how to live in an unsheltered world, a world so different from the one their forebears knew.

In an effort to bring some dignity, some hope into their lives, the self-appointed Prophet Moses takes his followers into the hills of Jamaica where he looks after their needs, both temporal and spiritual.

Moses, an egomaniac, a strange mixture of pride and lust and compassion, calls the settlement in the hills, Hebron, his followers the New Believers, and himself the Black Messiah; the religion he preaches is a wild combination of Christianity and ancient superstitions, with a basic conception of the black man as triumphant on earth and in heaven under the kindly dispensation of a Black Jehovah.

Moses' self-crucifixion is a farcical tragedy, out of which grows the compelling story of his long-suffering wife Miss Gatha, their club-footed son Isaac, and of Obadiah, over whose shoulders falls the mantle of prophet.

The Hills of Hebron has the color and warmth and rhythm, the melancholy and music and beauty of the land and people whose story it tells. I have read fewer than half a dozen powerful and human stories of the colored man; among them, The Hills of Hebron.

SHERBROOKE 'SPIEL SWINGS INTO FINAL RUN.

Curlers competing in the annual Sherbrooke Curling Club Borspeli opened the final dash this morning and the winners who emerge this evening will have earned their laurels. Today's matches will confine one and all strictly to curling as the contestants won't have time for much else.

The first shift of games was slated at 9 a.m. and will be followed throughout the day at two-hour intervals until the finals this evening at 8. Today's matches could well be classified as "suicide run". Some of the boys will feel just as if it was.

Playing one match is at times hard in itself, especially if one does a lot of sweeping, but when you have to go through three and four the same day that is really tough. Some pretty good curling has been witnessed during the past week and today the men will be separated from the boys for the final run to the trophy table.

A total of 64 rinks opened the march last Saturday and by mid-week the rinks started to fall by the wayside. Each quartet was guaranteed three games but after that they were on their own. Each evening, since Wednesday, a few more rinks dropped to the sidelines as the field narrowed down.

The trophies will be presented to the lucky, and tired, rinks tonight following the finals which start at 8 p.m. The general public is invited to watch. It looks like a tough battle but several of the remaining four-somes could emerge as winners in the tough grind.

Rock Island Jets seem to be running away with the St. Francis Intermediate Hockey League and at present are enjoying a comfortable eight-point spread over the rest of the pack. Their latest victims were the Magog Aces whom they stopped 5-2 Thursday evening.

Thanks to Maurice Lecours we have finally secured a schedule and will try to keep better contact with things in general. We have been trying since the start of the season to get a schedule but have been unable to secure one. They seem to be at a premium. We are told that Windsor Paper Makers were trying to locate one. Thanks again, Maurice.

Gordie Howe, 34 and still one of hockey's outstanding stars, proved Thursday why he is rated as such. He picked up two goals against Montreal and was a big factor in the Wings stopping the Canadiens' 10-game unbeaten streak. Early in the season it was the Blake squad who broke the Wings' extended winning string.

The real upset of the evening was the Bruins knocking over the Black Hawks 5-4 on Charlie Burns' goal late in the third period. Maybe Coach Milt Schmidt has finally found the key to get his team straightened away but they still have a long way to go. A win like Thursday's will certainly give the Bruins a real lift.

Montreal Olympics are certainly trying to run things to suit themselves in the Provincial Hockey League. They have broken league rules and don't seem to care what happens to them.

They are treading on thin ice and as president of the league it is my duty to see that the teams follow the rules they lay down. The big one is that all clubs must carry at least three players, 21 years and under, or they can't dress more than 13 intermediates. A team which breaks this is liable for a fine and loss of a game.

In Montreal last Sunday they trotted out a player who hadn't been accepted and had only one junior plus 14 intermediates in uniform. Therefore they were fined and advised not to use Andre Martin until the teams approved him. Thursday evening in Drummondville they had him in uniform once again and in keeping with the league ruling they were fined and the team suspended until further notice.

At the last league meeting the Olympics were given permission to sign a player of calibre outside of the league ruling and they picked up Andre Bessette. On Sunday they decided to play another without permission but were fined and lost the game as well. It will be up to the teams to decide just what they wish to do but they are ready to carry on for the balance of the season without Montreal unless the club goes according to the league rules. It will be interesting to see what will happen with the chips down.

Olympics suspended by league president

Using ineligible player and failing to comply with ruling on juniors, Drumville here Sunday afternoon

Montreal Olympics, Allan Cup finalists last year, were suspended and fined by President Len O'Donnell of the Eastern Provincial Hockey League for breaking two league rules. Thursday evening they used an ineligible player, Andre Martin, and broke the rule pertaining to junior players.

President O'Donnell notified Montreal, after Sunday's game, that Andre Martin couldn't play until he was accepted by the teams and Manager Lafond was officially advised of this fact. Despite this Montreal had him in uniform against Drummondville Thursday evening.

Manager Jack Illick of Drummondville filed a protest immediately to President O'Donnell and at the same time pointed out that Montreal had only one junior in uniform along with fourteen intermediates which breaks the rule. The Olympics were fined and suspended until further notice. They are scheduled to play Sunday in Granby.

On Sunday Drummondville is in Sherbrooke and a battle for second place is on tap. Both clubs are deadlocked with 24 points each and have played the same number of games, 25.

In the scoring race only six points separate the top five in the loop. Claude Richard of Montreal and Rejean Hamelin of Sherbrooke are deadlocked with 34 points. Richard has the most goals in the league, 20, while Maurice Boivin of Drummondville has collected the highest number of assists, 23, one more than Hamelin.

Rene Pepin of Sherbrooke and Connie Mandala of Montreal are locked in second place with 33 while Boivin has 26. Rolfe Leclerc and Leon Michelin, both of Drummondville, led with 26 while Roger Picard of Sherbrooke is next with 24, ten less the pace-setters.

Henneberger wins Ladies ski meet

GRINDEWALD (AP)—Barb Henneberger, history student at Munich University, won the downhill standings of the international ladies ski races with the ideal score of zero.

The 22-year-old brunette flashed down a fog-shrouded 2,350-metre course in beautiful style, clocking the fastest time of two minutes, 38.07 seconds. In the first major ladies downhill event of the European racing season she defeated two favorites, Marianne Jahn of Australia and Mariello Gottschell of France.

Miss Henneberger said because of the fog she stopped for a moment on the middle part of the course unable to find her way.

Traudl Hecher of Austria was second in the downhill race with an unofficial time of 2:39.28. This gave her the second spot in the combined standings with a score of 23.86.

She moved with his family to Detroit and presumably can no longer be considered a contender for the Canadian title.

The federation issued the ultimatum at a meeting here Oct.

20, ruling that Cleroux failed to comply with a contract for a return bout with Chuvalo in Toronto.

Although the federation decided to declare the title vacant if Cleroux did not go through with the bout, the Montrealer's backers said they would not take it under any conditions.

"It doesn't mean anything anyway," said Bachman. "A fare token and the Canadian championship will get you a ride on any subway in New York."

Cleroux and Chuvalo fought for the championship three times in Montreal with Cleroux winning the first and third bouts.

An indefinite suspension against Cleroux was issued by the World Boxing Association some months ago at the instigation of Merv McKenzie of Toronto, Ontario Athletic Commissioner.

Canadian Boxing Federation lifts ultimatum calling for Cleroux to meet Chuvalo, World body to follow

QUEBEC (CP)—The Canadian Boxing Federation Friday withdrew an ultimatum calling for Montreal's Bob Cleroux to defend his Canadian heavyweight title against George Chuvalo by Jan. 20.

Gene Letourneau of Quebec City, the federation's national commissioner, said Chuvalo has moved with his family to Detroit and presumably can no longer be considered a contender for the Canadian title.
