How Colin James got his name

By Thomas Ledwell
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

Blues guitarist Colin James has traveled a lot of musical roads, shared stages with some of the biggest names in the business, and crafted blues, swing, and soul into a style all his own. It is the third reincarnation of his Little Big Band that will take him to the Granada Theatre next week.

The Little Big Band grew out of the 1990s, when blues and roots music were down on their luck.

"It was really a reaction to the whole grunge thing in the early '90s. Blues rock had really started to wane," said James in an interview. "We were all sitting there saying, 'What are we going to do?'"

James gathered musicians to form the Little Big Band, a swinging, blues-driven album that put a horn section alongside the more traditional hollowed out guitars to perform 60-year-old classics. "Everyone thought it was career suicide. People were like, 'Well,

A fast and easy dish that brings Mexico to the Eastern Townships.

Garlic and lime bring Caribbean flavour

... to grilled shrimp

I have to confess that I haven't cooked much lately, as I am writing this sitting on a plane on my way back from Playa del Carmen, Mexico. Instead of spending my nights at home boiling turnips or carrots for soup or eating bland bananas or tasteless tomatoes (can you tell I've gotten sick of winter produce?) I, like many of you who flee the winter, gorged on pork tacos with green salsa and lime, bean and corn soup, grilled fish with plenty of guacamole, chicken stew with hot sauce, and, every morning, a big glass of freshly-squeezed orange juice.

Food on the Caribbean coast of Mexico doesn't get too complicated, which means that, in theory, we can all reproduce a good part of it at home. This week's recipe is a great example.

I got it from Veronica, the excellent cook at one of the hotels where I stayed, the uberhip Básico. Her kitchen looks like a vamped up hot dog trailer, and she serves up some of the best fish and seafood in Playa (more authentic and fresh than at any of the tourist traps on the famed Quinta Avenida).

It's nothing more than shrimp doused with a generous amount of garlic sauce, cooked on a hot grill and served with rice. Simple, yet delicious.

Try it yourself and add a splash of Caribbean sunshine to your winter dinners.

GRILLED SHRIMP WITH AJILLO (GARLIC SAUCE)

Ingredients (2 portions):

10 very large shrimp
3 garlic cloves
1 big lime
4 tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. olive oil
1/3 cup water
1/2 jalapeño pepper (optional)
salt

Peel the garlic cloves, cut in half lengthwise and remove the buds. Chop very finely. Heat up the butter and oil. Sauté the garlic on medium heat for a couple of minutes, not allowing it to brown. Add the pepper, cored, seeded and also finely chopped. Stir. Turn the heat off. Add the juice from the lime, and the water. Let this sauce cool (it can be kept in the fridge for up to three days).

Rinse the shrimp and pat dry. Cut their backs open and remove the black vein. Grill them on a frying pan with ridges, brushed with oil, until they curl into half-moon shapes and turn bright pink. Pour the sauce on top and when it comes to a boil, it's done. Taste, and add salt to taste. Serve with white rice and/or salad and hot sauce and lime wedges on the side.

MICROWAVE CHOICES FROM STOUFFER

With more flavours, seasonings and choices in lines of ready-to-microwave foods such as Stouffer's Thai Ginger Beef, their popularity remains assured. Food companies are extending their lines to provide more reasons for time-crunched families to buy them and fit them into the weekly menu.

So, the opportunity to actually try the product sample that arrived satisfied the curiosity about them. People buy them, food companies concoct still more flavour combos.

Surprisingly, the Thai Ginger Beef with Coconut Rice and chili garlic sauce tasted OK. A home cook can do better — the choice of beef, in particular wouldn't be hard to compete with.

Still, it's a contender — again for someone on the go, especially bored with still another frozen pasta. The rice was actually somewhat fluffy, not sticky and congealed. The sauce had flavour, if the consistency of goop. Yes, you can heat the items in a conventional oven too.

So, give it one thumb up, or fork, for Stouffer's. The products meet the Health Check logo criteria from the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

Items such as Barbecue Chicken, Grilled Balsamic Chicken are low in saturated and trans fats. Portion size is adequate for many.

Other items in Stouffer's line, such as Turkey & Stuffing and Meat Lasagna have been improved, including for nutrition. Suggested price is $3.29.

A SWEET ANNIVERSARY

Hershey's Kisses are 100 years old. In all, more than 80 million of the foil-wrapped, bite-size chocolates, with the signature plume, are produced every day.

Hershey's Canada kicks off a nationwide contest giving chocolate lovers the chance to win a two-carat diamond necklace. The sweepstakes will be running across Canada until July 7. See www.hershey.com/en/newandfun/kisses100th.asp for rules.

With revenues of over $4 billion and more than 13,000 employees worldwide, The Hershey Company markets such well-known brands as Oh Henry!, Jolly Rancher and Twizzlers.

LOOK BEYOND THE PRETTY PACKAGE

More than half of the most aggressively marketed children's food with pictures or names of fruit contain little or no fruit at all, cautions the Strategic Alliance for Healthy Food and Activity Environments.

The study Where's the Fruit — reported on the website by self-proclaimed Supermarket Guru Phil Lempert, who monitors the supermarket and food industries — reveals that 51 per cent of these products do not contain fruit. Another 16 per cent contain only minimal amounts of fruit despite prominent fruit promotions on the packaging.

Only 27 per cent of the products examined contained fruit (in the form of fruit puree or fruit from concentrate).

A big surprise, according to a dietitian with the study, was a yogurt product that contained no fruit despite the reference to fruit in its name.

A TRIO OF IDEAS FOR VALENTINE'S DAY

Home cooks can break the everyday routine with creative ideas from Foodland Ontario just in time for Valentine's Day. Consider:

- Savoury starters. Start your evening with a creamy onion dip with carrots sticks and greenhouse cucumber wedges for dipping.

- Or, a bowl of mushroom leek soup with crusty bread.

- Food with flare. Fire up the barbecue and grill beef, chicken or fish and vegetables, such as thick slices of potatoes and onions or leek halves brushed with olive oil and seasoned with salt and pepper.

- Grill vegetables until easily pierced with a fork.

- Sweet finale. For delicious finish, dig in to a slice of rhubarb pie or apple crumble a la mode. Or fire up the fondue and dip Ontario apples and chunks of pound cake into warm melted caramel or chocolate sauce.

For the cowboy in us all

Art

*'Stepping outside the box,'
says curator*

By Jen Young
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

When it comes to a yearning for wide open spaces and riding off into the sunset, there's a little cowboy in us all. And the new exhibit at the Foreman Art Gallery at Bishop's University helps visitors connect with that rough-in' it lifestyle.

According to curator Vicky Chainey Gagnon, Time Inside the Image 3 is the last of a three part series that is completely different than anything the space has shown in the past.

"The pieces are time based work and it shows how contemporary artists experience time," Gagnon said. "They were all selected because I wanted to focus on the urban experience and a longing for pristine open landscapes."

The gallery is set up differently. In the sparseness there is much more to see than a quick peek will allow.

Even the gallery's front door is different. On first sight the freshly painted white appears to have been embossed with geometric shapes. However, upon closer examination the shapes and forms consist of hundreds of zeros. The artist, Toronto's Kristiina Lahde, uses zeros cut out from magazine advertisements. What meaning could complex formations all made of tiny little zeros have? It's meaning that rests in the eye of the beholder. Gagnon hopes that all five other pieces on the two-dimensional surface inside the gallery will push visitors to think outside the box.

"It's about looking, noticing, and taking the time to really see," she said. "We want people to really spend time with these pieces. This is very different than anything we've ever done before and the exhibit is important for Bishop's and these young artists."

Inside the gallery, most of the works will encourage visitors to sit down and take their time — especially the film of Toronto's Christina Battle.

Battle has taken scenes from old Westerns, cracks and flickers and all, and reworked them onto a DVD.

She depicts the mythology of the old westerns through shots of cowboys, like Clint Eastwood, riding into desolate old ghost towns and through wide open spaces, bringing viewers back to a time when a landowner's biggest problem was cattle rustlers and a latrine was a luxury.

Larissa Fan, also from Toronto, depicts how easily and quickly life and time can become obsolete by using regular 8, which is a type of film that was once quite popular and is now a rarity. Her four images all move in time.

Gagnon said that the unique work by Renee Lear, who created her piece while visiting Bishop's last year, also forces spectators to stop, examine, and return. And it's not even in the gallery at all.

"You have to see it to see how beautiful it is," Gagnon said. "She filmed a long shot of the sun setting from campus and the piece is projected through the windows of Bandeen Hall.

"She works very much with the everyday and when I met her she was projecting these types of pieces from her studio in Toronto as an offering to her community. I invited her to come to Bishop's to do a piece for us in 2006 and when she was here she kept coming back to Bandeen because it interested her so much.

"People are tripping over her work. I see them walk by and stop, look again, and come back 10 to 15 minutes later to see how the lighting and picture has changed.

"She fell in love with Lennoxville and didn't want to go home, but her piece is very important to Bishop's and her."

Gagnon said that not many find the time to watch the sun going down, but by capturing it on film, the university community can — three times a week, until the exhibit closes on March 31.

New York's Gregory King's piece is exhilarating. He strapped a camera onto his body while travelling from one end of Manhattan to the other. Manhattan Canyon can make you feel as though you're travelling at break-neck speeds.

The gallery, located on the Lennoxville Bishop's University campus, is open from noon to 5 p.m., Tuesday to Saturday. For the schedule of Renee Lear's setting of the sun, consult the website at www.ubishops.ca/art-gallery.htm. For more information call 819-822-9600, ext. 2260.

JAMES:

that's going to be the end of you," he said with a laugh, suggesting his critics thought it would confuse the audience.

That first installment of the Little Big Band went on to sell hundreds of thousands of copies in Canada. It also showed that James, who was already emerging as the face of Canada's blues scene at the time, had a greater musical range than he was given credit for.

"I felt I was doing something against the grain. I was proud of it."

Fast forward a dozen years or so, and James has found that place again. The third volume of the Little Big Band has a little less swing and a little more soul than the first two editions, but it has the same smooth sound.

"This time out, I feel I'm a little alone again," James admitted.

He's speaking from experience. The Saskatchewan native left high school and set out for Vancouver in the early '80s to find a place in the music business. While he was carving out a niche of his own, a chance meeting with the late, great Stevie Ray Vaughan helped put him in a place of prominence.

"It was absolute fluke and weirdness that we even got together," said James of his meeting the legendary bluesman: James was asked to step in as Vaughan's opening act just hours before a show in Regina.

Vaughan had fired his opening band, and James just happened to be in the right place at the right time.

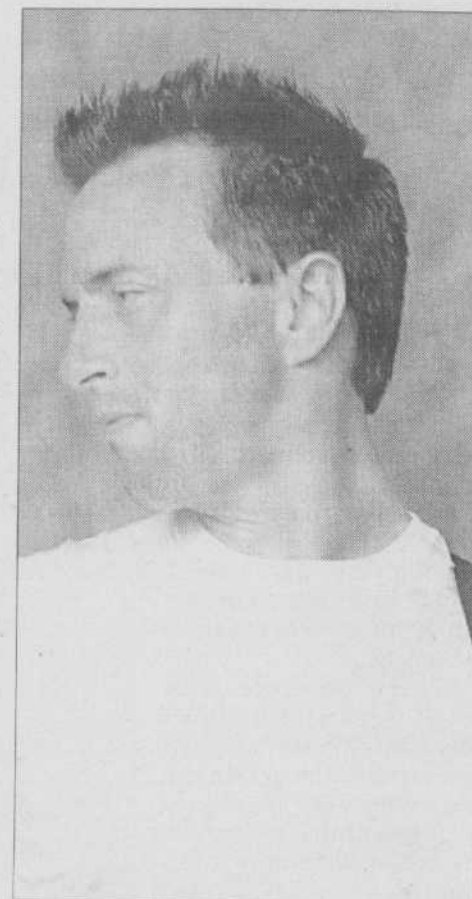

"I literally had to get on the phone and call the local jazz society and said, 'Hey, I just got offered to open for Stevie Ray Vaughan. Do you have a drummer and a bass player?'" James recalled, adding he had just three hours to find some musicians, practice, and hit the stage.

The impromptu performance caught Vaughan's attention, who signed James on to open a few more shows in the US.

Vaughan was also the one to give James his stage name. The Canadian bluesman was born Colin James Munn. The name was hard to make out in noisy venues, and a newspaper article even misspelled his last name as "Mud".

James told that story to Vaughan before heading out on stage. "He introduced me as Colin James for the very first time, and I've been Colin James ever since."

James has performed alongside an impressive list of musical names from different corners of the music landscape: Keith Richards, Sheryl Crow, Mavis Staples, Robert Plante, Bonnie Raitt, who he met at Stevie Ray Vaughan's funeral, sang on one of his early albums and the two have remained close.

While James had some early success breaking into the American market, it is his Canadian fans who have really fuelled his long career. James said he's now setting his sights on Europe, and hopes the Little Big Band will find a niche there.

James said the music industry itself "is in a tailspin right now." While record sales slide, and radio stations narrowly play very specific genres and playlists, for him it has always been about taking the stage and playing for a live audience.

"It's everything to me. It's my audience who allow me what I do for a living," James said, adding some of his favourite moments have been spent in Montreal playing with the likes of ZZ Top, Albert King and Bonnie Raitt.

"I couldn't live without performing. It's part of my chemical make-up. It keeps me going."

Colin James will be on stage at the Granada Theatre on Thursday, Feb. 15 at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $45 on the floor and $39 in the balcony.

Radio Canada lends a hand as transmitter dies

On Air

An unwritten code to help

For many months we have been predicting the demise of our aging transmitter. This week the predictions came true and our old QEI 600 FM transmitter died.

For the past several weeks the transmitter had been shutting itself off and turning it back on was becoming more of a challenge with every passing day. I knew that one time it would be the last time and that is exactly what happened.

Listeners noticed the off-and-on performance of the transmitter, culminating in a prolonged period of about eight hours when CJMQ was off the air. What listeners couldn't know was the harried attempts at getting the transmitter back on line.

Finally the decision was made to take the transmitter apart to see if the faulty components were replicable, repairable or of such a critical nature that any attempts at a rapid rebuild would be impossible.

The final diagnosis was the worst possible, the components that actually transform electrical energy into radio signals were beyond repair and replacement of such specific components was not possible.

With great sorrow and reluctance I removed the transmitter from the housing — disconnecting it for the last time.

CJMQ was now officially off the air. While we could still be heard over the Internet, that was of little solace to me.

With a heavy heart I got into my car and started the engine, getting ready to leave the tower. Of course the car radio is perpetually set to CJMQ 88.9 FM and always on so I was greeted with dead air, something that long time readers and listeners will know is an intolerable situation for me to face.

I got out of the car and went back inside the tower. Something would have to be done. After several phone calls I got in contact with a Radio Canada technician. There is an unwritten code among radio people: when a station is down they will do all they can to help the other. And that code is alive and well at Radio Canada.

Radio Canada lent CJMQ a small transmitter, called an exciter. Its normal role is to feed a larger transmitter, but it is in its own right a transmitter. Radio Canada (CBC) lent us this exciter. After a few hours of configuring and testing, we were finally ready for the installation, and just like that CJMQ was back on the air.

While it is true that we are transmitting at a lower power than before, we are still broadcasting and signal reports indicate that we are getting out very well. Of course this situation can't continue forever: Radio Canada will need its exciter back.

But now the need for our new transmitter has been turned up to highest priority possible.

Your donations are essential to our continued existence. We need a 2,000 watt transmitter, a venture of approximately $50,000. Please help us to keep getting the job done. We are serving the English-language community of the Eastern Townships.

Please send your cheques to CJMQ transmitter fund, 2600 College St., Sherbrooke J1M 0C8. Tax receipts will be issued, and CJMQ is a registered non profit organization with an all volunteer staff.

You can also visit our website at cjmjfm.com and click on donate. Don't let the last locally produced English-language broadcaster disappear.

On an other note, CJMQ 88.9 FM provided the music for last weekend's winter fun day in Lennoxville.

Next week, back to the history of CKTS and the connection to CJMQ.

The Vagina Monologues

A cast and crew of 30 Bishop's University students are eagerly awaiting their debut in this weekend's performances of the Vagina Monologues in hopes of fighting violence against women.

"There's a great need for awareness, especially on campus," said coordinator and acting director Erin McGregor. "It's important for girls to get involved. It's not only to raise awareness about violence against women, but it's also very inspirational on many levels."

The production is in collaboration with V-Day, which is a global movement to stop violence against women and girls. It generates broader attention for the fight to stop violence. The V stands for Victory, Valentine, and Vagina.

Schools and communities around the world are presenting local productions of the Vagina Monologues.

It's an Obie Award-winning episodic play written by Eve Ensler that premiered at the off-Broadway Westside Theatre in 1996.

The production has been staged internationally, and a television version was produced by cable channel HBO, but now the heart wrenching testimony and real life traumas will be performed in Lennoxville by Bishop's students this Sunday and Monday evening.

"The experience brings you such a wide range of emotions," said the 24-year-old McGregor. "It will take you from feeling a terrible sadness to laughing hysterically and it depicts real life."

The campus women's centre, of which McGregor is a member, provided the budget and the $12 at the door will be given to V-Day, which will make its way to women in conflict (war torn countries, for example), as well as the upcoming Day of Silence event organized on campus.

The play will be performed on Sunday, Feb. 11 and 12 at 7 p.m. at Centennial Theatre on the Bishop's campus in Lennoxville, but all are encouraged to come a little earlier to be a part of the pre-show where McGregor will sing and play guitar along with other attractions. Nina Owens

The work of the late Nina M. Owens is on show at Lennoxville's Uplands Cultural and Heritage Centre.

The Eastern Townships artist was born Nina Pickel in Bolton Centre.

From a very early age, Nina sketched prolifically. She worked in watercolour and oils, painting the life around her and her travel experiences across Canada, Great Britain and Europe.

The show is sponsored by the Lennoxville-Ascot Historical and Museum Society. "In this first ever exhibition of a selection of her sketches, we note her attention to detail in multiple drawings of the same subject and her notes about the colours to be used and critiques of the sketches. As an artist, she faithfully reproduced sites and recorded the world around her and the history of her times," note the organizers.

Though born in the Townships, Owens ended teaching in Montebello, where she met husband Owen Ernest Owens. The pair lived there until 1906, then moved to Montreal.

Owen died four years later and Nina died in Rosemere at age 90.

Nina M. Owens (1869-1959): A Life of Sketching and Painting, is up through March. It's on the second floor of 9 Speid in Sherbrooke, and is open Thursday to Sunday, from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Admission is free. Phone 819-564-0409 or e-mail lrider@uplands.ca.

Beaux-arts auction

The Musée des beaux-arts de Sherbrooke's big fundraiser is next week.

The Soirée des Beaux-Arts, the annual benefit auction, will take place on Tuesday, Feb. 13.

The auctioneer is industrial designer Michel Dallaire and tickets are $75; the evening begins with a cocktail at 5:30 p.m.

The 50 works to be auctioned can be seen Tuesday to Sunday between noon and 5 p.m. Admission is $7.50 for adults, $6 for seniors and $5 for students. The museum is at 241 Dufferin St. in Sherbrooke.

Guided tours in English and group tours are available anytime upon reservation. Call 819-821-2115.

Magog show

Magog's Galerie du Centre culturel holds a vernissage this weekend.

The show - Suo Tempore, La Suite - features painter Johanne Martel and wood sculptor Olivier de Rohozinski.

The vernissage is at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 11. It's at 81 rue Desjardins, Magog. The show closes March 11, and hours are Wednesday to Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Call 819-843-8200 or visit www.creatio.net.

Lake Megantic artist in Richmond

Annik Desbiens exhibits her work in Richmond, beginning with a vernissage scheduled for this weekend.

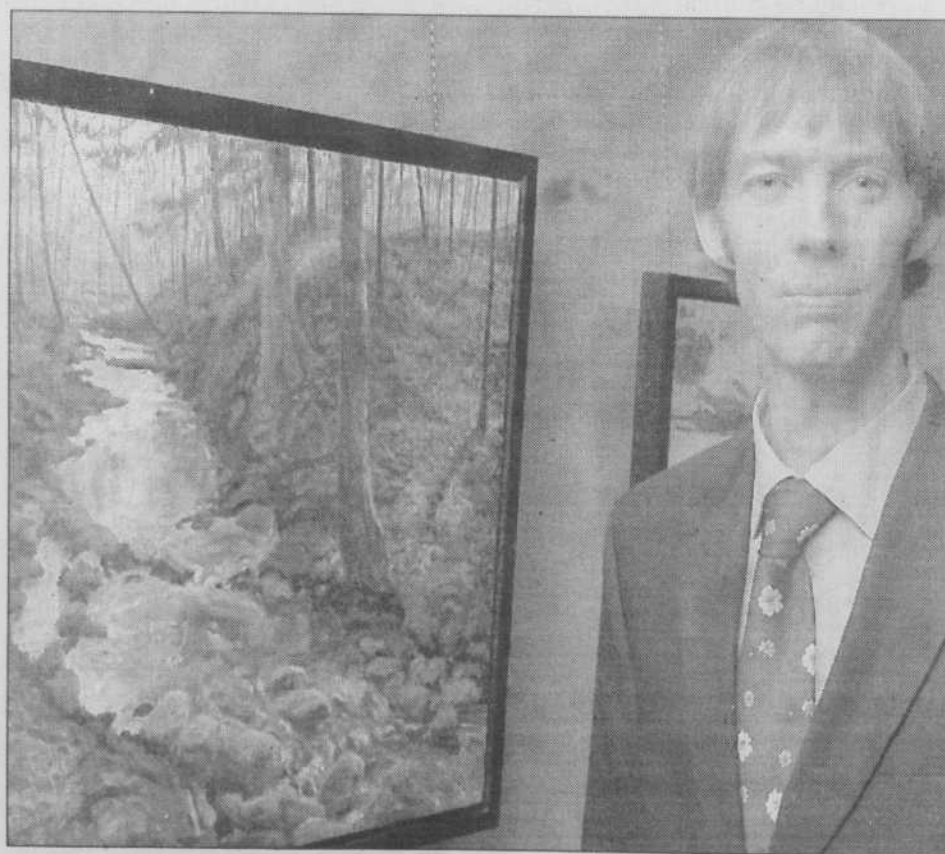

The show features works from the series titled Nature Humaine.

Desbiens is a Lake Megantic artist. The vernissage is Saturday, Feb. 10 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the Courant d'art gallery located in the Centre d'Art de Richmond (1010 Principale N.). Open business hours, and until 7:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. Call 819-826-2488.

You choose, you lose

Books

Beware the bad book

By Elizabeth Withey
CANWEST NEWS SERVICE

FOR many a book-club member, it's a formidable task to finish the book in time. More daunting is the challenge of choosing the book your club will read. As every bibliophile knows, your literary reputation hinges on it.

See, even though you had nothing to do with the writing or publication of your choice, that book is a reflection of who you are and what you read. And your fellow book clubbers might not like what they see.

Are you two thumbs-up or a yawner? An engrossing page-turner or a light beach read? Are you worth owning — or selling for a dime in the next yard sale?

In my book club, the person who hosts the meeting is the person who chooses the book. At our most recent get-together, we ate, drank, discussed and then, as always, put names in a hat to choose the next host.

It was me.

Dang.

My book club is made up of intelligent and friendly women. But we have this half-joking, half-catty habit of jeering those who choose a "bad" book. Maybe we begrudge the investment of time and money in something that wasn't worth it. Maybe it's just affectionate teasing.

Whatever the reason, several of us have borne the brunt of this book club ridicule. One fine lass is still recovering after selecting Nick Hornby's unanimously loathed Fever Pitch. Another was taunted for suggesting an obscure novel her mother had enjoyed. I've suffered my share of mockery, too, after recommending Barbara Gowdy's The Romantic to a host struggling to pick a book.

By contrast, when the book is "good," my club applauds the chooser. We commend them on their impeccable taste, their fine ability to judge a book by its cover.

"Barney's Version was my favourite," said one gal at the last meeting. My chest puffed up with pride. Yes, that Richler selection was a rather fine read, wasn't it? And I picked it! That was me!

So when my name came out of the hat, chooser pressure hit like a Greyhound bus. Despite the Gowdy incident, I realized I had a standard that needed to be upheld. My book clubbers were counting on me.

"Can I please request something uplifting?" one woman asked. I said I would try.

The selection process was a painful and exhausting literary labour that dragged on for days. I browsed through the spines in the "pending" section of my bookshelves. Read excerpts off the library website. Scanned online reviews. I checked for awards, formulated lists, even e-mailed my mother.

Marley and Me? Too fluffy.

The Bluest Eye? Too depressing.

Madame Bovary? Too cliché.

I waffled like an ex-prime minister. Refocused my efforts on authors.

Margaret Atwood? Too feminist.

Todd Babiak? Too close to home.

Sheila Heti? Too far out.

It had to be deep but not too esoteric. It had to be challenging but not too cryptic. Emotional without the sap, fiction with some real-life grit.

Oh, ya, and uplifting.

I whittled it down to six titles,

General Wolfe's bad rap

By Mike Gillespie
CANWEST NEWS SERVICE

Here's a quick look at recent releases. Paths of Glory: The Life and Death of General James Wolfe, by Stephen Brumwell (McGill-Queen's University Press)

Gen. James Wolfe was by all measure an unlikely hero, a soldier whose short, albeit dramatic, life altered the course of world history. But as renowned military historian/author Stephen Brumwell points out in a new examination of Wolfe's life and death, revisionist historians have been casting the general in a new light — as a bloodthirsty thug. Brumwell's book, the first full-length biography of Wolfe in 50 years, reassesses the life of the soldier and digs deep into antiquity to determine whether he was an heroic icon of patriotic self-sacrifice or just an inept but lucky commander, especially at the Battle of the Plains of Abraham.

Robert Service: Under the Spell of the Yukon, by Enid Mallory (Heritage)

He starved in Mexico, lived in a California bordello, farmed on Vancouver Island and pursued — unsuccessfully — the love of his life in Vancouver. And all this before he moved to the Yukon as a bank clerk and wrote the most commercially successful poems of the 20th century. Everyone knows about Robert Service and "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," but few will know the back story behind the "Bard of the Yukon." Former librarian, and now Peterborough, Ont., resident, Enid Mallory fills you in.

Mystery/romance shelf: Sisters, by Danielle Steel (Delacorte Press)

By our reckoning, Danielle Steel has written more than 70 potboilers, stories fraught with mystery, romance and oversexed characters. Here she drops four sisters into a Manhattan brownstone, throws in some loss, courage and a "stunning tragedy," and then lets readers watch "as four very different young women come together under one very lively roof." 560 million copies of her books in print can't be all wrong.

brought the finalists to bed and fell asleep with a pile of paperbacks on my nightstand.

After a night of book-club dreams, I began to wonder: why am I going through this hell? Do people join book clubs to read or to win a popularity contest?

A recent news story says book clubs have evolved, and are now as much a networking tool for young professionals as they are a venue for literary discussion. Most of the women in my club work in the media. Although we haven't discussed books that relate to our jobs, we are making some professional connections. So it's important to make a good impression.

Which is perhaps why I cared so much about my choice. I wanted them to like the book — and like me, too.

I gave my head a shake. One, even if the book is bad, I didn't write the frigin' thing. And two, no matter the book, we can still learn something and enjoy one another's company.

Bearing this in mind, I settled on Kurt Vonnegut's Slaughterhouse-Five, a novel I'd read more than a decade ago. "One of the world's greatest antiwar books," the back jacket boasts.

Brilliant satire, riveting plot, timeless themes? I think the gals will love it.

Or not. Maybe it will be the most awful book they've ever read. Maybe they'll raise their noses in scorn and expel me from the club. Maybe I'll be a literary laughingstock until the day I die.

In the words of Vonnegut, so it goes.

Ankle-biters Movies we love

The best and worst child actors

By Jen McDonnell
CANWEST NEWS SERVICE

Celebrity is a fleeting commodity in Hollywood that's nearly impossible to retain, especially for those blessed by the soft glow of the spotlight at a young age.

Child stars like Dakota Fanning make the transition from tyke talent to accomplished actor look easy, but for every Brooke Shields success story, there's a Tina Yothers cautionary tale lurking around the corner.

In honour of The Messengers — which stars cute ankle biters Theodore and Evan Turner as kids who see dead people — we're counting down the Top 5 child actor successes and Top 5 child actor failures.

SUCCEEDED

5. Drew Barrymore

Baby steps: The precocious six-year-old nearly out-charmed the title character in E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial (1982). At the age of seven, she became the youngest star to ever host Saturday Night Live.

Growing pains: And how. As a young 'un, she had difficulty adjusting to her newfound fame, dabbling in drugs, alcohol, suicide attempts and rehab, all before turning 13. She toiled in obscurity with craptastic roles in Poison Ivy (1992) and TV's The Amy Fisher Story (1993) before redeeming herself in 1995 with the Whoopi Goldberg cryfest Boys on the Side and Joel Schumacher's Batman Forever.

Look Ma, no hands: Barrymore has ascended to chick-flick heaven with The Wedding Singer (1998), Never Been Kissed (1999) and Charlie's Angels (2000).

She'll next be seen alongside Hugh Grant in the tooth-rotting Music & Lyrics.

4. Leonardo DiCaprio

Baby steps: Leo made forgettable TV guest appearances on shows like Santa Barbara and Roseanne before landing a recurring role on the final season of Growing Pains.

Growing pains: The fledging heartthrob stretched his acting chops in What's Eating Gilbert Grape (1993), The Basketball Diaries (1995) and Marvin's Room (1996) before making millions of teenage girls swoon as the lovesick, doomed Jack in Titanic (1997).

Look Ma, no hands: DiCaprio floundered while attempting to find his post-Titanic footing in forgettable films like The Man in the Iron Mask (1998) and The Beach (2000). Now, he's back to being the king of the world, garnering Oscar nods for his roles in The Aviator (2004) and Blood Diamond (2006).

3. Jodie Foster

Baby steps: Foster made her showbiz debut at the age of three, baring her bum in a Coppertone sunscreen commercial. She soon blossomed into a serious movie star, landing the role of prostitute Iris in the seminal film Taxi Driver with Robert De Niro when she was just 14.

She followed up the gritty drama with kid-friendly turns in Freaky Friday (1976) and Candleshoe (1977).

Growing pains: None. The young actress transitioned easily into adult roles and continues to be one of the most respected stars in Hollywood (as long as she stays away from the romantic flicks — anyone remember Sommersby?)

Look Ma, no hands: Foster landed two Oscar awards by the time she was 30 and wowed critics in The Accused (1988), The Silence of the Lambs (1991) and Inside Man (2006).

2. Ron Howard

Baby steps: The red-headed mopet first made his pint-sized mark playing Opie in The Andy Griffith Show (1960), before landing the role of Richie Cunningham in TV's Happy Days (1974).

Growing pains: Howard gained serious acting cred in George Lucas's American Graffiti (1973) and began his directing career with low-budget flick Grand Theft Auto while still starring in Happy Days.

Look Ma, no hands: Howard is currently mainstream Hollywood's go-to director, helming such blockbusters as Splash (1984), Cocoon (1985), Apollo 13 (1995), A Beautiful Mind (2001), Cinderella Man (2005) and The Da Vinci Code (2006). He's also kept a hand in TV, producing acclaimed shows like Felicity, Sports Night, 24 and Arrested Development.

1. The Olsen twins

Baby steps: The sisters grew up before our eyes, sharing the role of Michelle Tanner on ABC's mullet-loving hit Full House.

Growing pains: While still shooting Full House, the girls formed their own production company and churned out merchandise and numerous straight-to-video specials. They became the youngest self-made millionaires in American history before the age of 10.

Look Ma, no hands: Despite their disconcerting habit of dressing like homeless people, Forbes estimates their combined net worth to be $100 million US. Their big-screen debut, New York Minute (2004), failed to bring them box-office success or acting cred, but they can still afford to have us all killed.

FAILED

5. Linda Blair

Baby steps: Blair turned heads (including her own) as a possessed child in the classic horror flick The Exorcist (1973).

Growing pains: She rode her Exorcist fame to roles in numerous made-for-TV movies before her personal life began overshadowing her career. At 15, she made waves by moving in with her much older boyfriend, singer Rick Springfield, and was arrested in 1977 for conspiracy to buy and distribute cocaine.

Look Ma, no hands: After a cameo in Scream, Blair once again wormed her way into our hearts with her role in the adorable British television schlock-fest S Club 7.

4. Jonathan Lipnicki

Baby steps: Do you know the human head weighs eight pounds? Of course you do, because the precocious kid in Jerry Maguire said so.

Growing pains: After hitting Hollywood gold with Tom Cruise, Lipnicki went on to star in Stuart Little (1999), The Little Vampire (2002) and Like Mike (2002).

Look Ma, no hands: According to his official website, the 17-year-old "has been reading scripts, as well as having meetings and some great auditions." Can you smell the comeback? Smells like burning.

3. Macaulay Culkin

Baby steps: Culkin starred in family friendly flicks like Uncle Buck (1989) before hitting blockbuster gold with Home Alone (1990).

Growing pains: Culkin soon discovered the difficulties of translating his adorable hands-on-cheeks expression into a long-term career and quit the movie business for a decade after 1994's Richie Rich.

Look Ma, no hands: The actor returned to film for low-budget but acclaimed indie flicks Party Monster (2003) and Saved! (2004). Unfortunately, he's still getting his ass kicked in the cred department by his younger brothers, Kieran and Rory.

2. Molly Ringwald

Baby steps: Ringwald got her big break with a recurring role on TV's The Facts of Life before becoming the voice of a generation in John Hughes's Sixteen Candles (1984), The Breakfast Club (1985) and Pretty in Pink (1986).

Growing pains: The actress's career flatlined after she found herself unable to break out of her Brat Pack reputation. She turned her back on Hollywood and moved to France in the '90s.

Look Ma, no hands: Ringwald has since moved on to theatre, starring in the Broadway plays Cabaret, Enchanted April and Sweet Charity. Still, we'll always remember her as the girl who let Anthony Michael Hall show off her panties for a buck.

1. The Coreys

Baby steps: Toronto-born Corey Haim and best bud Corey Feldman dominated the big screen in the late '80s, co-starring in seven movies, including The Lost Boys (1987), License to Drive (1988) and Dream a Little Dream (1989).

Growing pains: Their fickle teen fans allowed the Coreys to descend into obscurity in the '90s, when they released four straight-to-video collaborations before parting ways.

Look Ma, no hands: There was talk last year of the Coreys reuniting for a reality TV show, but until it materializes, we're left with only our tattered, lipstick-stained Tiger Beat poster pull-outs to keep us warm at night. Sigh.

Tracy Byrd releases best album of his career

And on his own label, too

Tracy Byrd is back with a new album titled Different Things. This is the first release on Tracy Byrd's own label. Indeed, like other enterprising country artists, he has decided to do things his way by taking a different route to consumers.

After a long two-year stint between releases, this collection has a few "different things" to offer to devoted fans. It is Byrd's 11th album and it may just be the best of his career. The country singer really takes you on a journey of love, laughter and tears in 11 songs.

With his rich baritone, Byrd has the vocal maturity to deliver any type of material he picks. It's a splendid culmination of powerful music and vocals. The emotion with which he sings the title track 'Different Things' and 'Cheapest Motel' brings home the seriousness of love and floundering relationships, provoking serious thoughts and soul searching while bringing chills every time it's played.

An inspirational ode carries the message that "what I want and what I need have always been different things," and the title track's booming beat has a way of taking care of those who need a little chicken soup for the soul.

'Cheapest Motel' offers one of the best lines written: "He paid the price for pleasure, now he can't afford the pain." The song is destined to become a cheating classic as the successful husband loses everything he has after falling for another woman.

The tune 'The More I Feel Like Rockin' gets you tappin' your feet and the swing of 'Biggest Thing in Texas' reminds me of some of Byrd's older songs on albums from a few years back.

The first single, 'Saltwater Cowboy', has some very funny lines, especially the opening one, where he sings "I look like a lobster wearing flip flops and a Stetson." It speaks worlds about Tracy's desire to stick to his Texan roots while exploring the open sea.

His answer to 'Ten Rounds with Jose Cuervo' is the song 'Better Places Than This'. The guy in the song is getting thrown out of the bar after he's probably had more than 10 rounds. These songs show that this Texan knows how to have fun with music and recognizes what turns his fans on, especially at a live show.

The sexy side of the singer comes out once again with 'Cowboy and a Dancer' and 'Hot Night in the Country', bringing the imagination into play with the description and images of new-found love and new attraction.

These lyrics bring to mind scenes of hot summer nights and the joining of two people at the same place in their lives on the road to their destiny together.

Although this album is different from his last few, this album is Tracy Byrd through and through. The music is crisp and out of the mainstream, far from the "workshop style" country music coming out of Nashville today.

'She Was Smart', and 'Before I Die' each inspire the listener to take stock of life and embrace it at any age, promoting living in the moment and following dreams.

This CD is exciting and playful, yet serious and emotional with thought-provoking lyrics. Each song is unique and showcases the artist's beautiful baritone voice, which has grown into a powerful instrument over the years. Tracy Byrd's talking song 'Just One Woman', a wonderful number about a man who can love only one woman, it will surely be a favourite with listeners.

Byrd concludes this amazing album with the sultry song 'Hot night in the Country' that melts you like the ice cube he describes. With tunes such as these, Byrd has proven once again that he is a true musician with a voice that holds its own and a love of his down home country upbringing. The radio waves are ready for his next single.

On every album cover, Tracy Byrd sports a Stetson, but stylistically he has worn many hats since the beginning of his career. First he rode the wave of the line dancing craze with 'Watermelon Crawl', then gave Hallmark a run for their money with the ultra-romantic 'Keeper of the Stars', and had a lot of fun with 'Ten Rounds with Jose Cuervo'.

Byrd has never been afraid in his choice of material, nevertheless, towards the end of his RCA contract, things slipped when his repertoire got saturated with silly numbers such as 'Revenge of the Middle Aged Woman' and the mediocre 'Johnny Cash'.

Thankfully, a label change (now on his self-financed Blind Mule Records) turned things around. Teaming with songwriter Mike Geiger, Byrd has produced one of his finest albums since No Ordinary Man and his eponymous debut.

As in the beginning of his career, there's a bit of everything on this record, from raved up rock to stone-cold country ballads to gorgeous love ballads. The songs tell unforgettable stories with an unforgettable twist. Everything that we have come to love about this Texan is found on this album.

Overall, a change of label and the presence of co-producer Mike Geiger have worked out. Back are lots of steel, fiddles and Byrd's animated vocals, a meld of grit and a believable honesty that's always winsome. A must for real country fans!
