Joe Nichols: A Prolific Pro

By Jessie Aulis

Whenever an artist releases albums at the rapid pace that Joe Nichols has been keeping since bursting onto the music scene a few years ago, with his 2002 Man with A Memory, the result is sometimes watered-down, uninspired music.

That is not the case with Nichols, who has established himself as a mainstay on today's country music scene. Old Things New is another solid effort from Nichols, indicating that we can expect more of the same from him for years to come.

I am glad that I didn't review this new album after a single listen, I'm not positive that I felt the way I do now. When I first listened to Joe Nichols' Old Things New my overall feeling was that it was a little average.

But, upon listening to it a few times I somehow got a clearer vision of what his music was all about. The songs definitely grow on you just like when you taste new food for the first time. It takes a few tries and suddenly you have a craving for it.

The first thing you love about Nichols is that the songs he sings tell great stories and are easy to listen to; not to mention how relaxing Nichols' deep voice is. You hear echoes of George Jones, Merle Haggard, Gene Watson and Keith Whitley in this singer's voice and you get chills when those subtle vocal references fill your ears.

If Joe Nichols came out in the late 80's when Randy Travis was leading the charge of traditional country's return to radio, he would be a mega star.

The Wolf is at the door . . . again

By Zachary-Cy Vanasse

Jean Leloup has been one of the biggest names on the Franco-Quebec music scene for two decades now, although for a time, Leloup wanted to leave the name behind.

From his debut in 1989 with Menteur, which made waves throughout the province, to his internationally successful 1990 release L'amour est sans pitié his name has been one of the most recognizable in the province's musical memory.

He has managed to become one of those rare successes who can perform music in French but still manage to develop a strong following outside of the province, allowing him to tour the rest of Canada, France, the Netherlands, Belgium and even Japan.

Following the release of his third album, 1996's Le Dôme, he was awarded a Félix Award. He followed that success up with another critically well-received album in 1998 titled Les Fournis. In 2002 he continued his climb to the top of the Franco-music world with La Vallée de Réputations. By the time the 21st century rolled around there wasn't a bigger name in Quebec music than Leloup. Perhaps that's why the name Jean Leloup suddenly had to go away. Following the release of La Vallée des Réputations he decided to retire the name Jean Leloup altogether as he took a hiatus from recording music, naming his final album the appropriately titled Exit.

Born Jean Leclerc in Sainte-Foy in 1961, he grew up in Togo and Algeria. His international childhood experience would influence everything Leclerc did, musically or otherwise, from that point forth. To this day he cites the African beats he heard as a child as a major influence on him musically. Whether or not it was these influences directly that led to his international appeal as a musician could be considered simply a matter of debate amongst fans and critics, but there is little debate about whether or not a world, in the most literal sense of the word, was opened to him during those formative years, which, had he remained in Sainte-Foy, he would have never had a chance to experience.

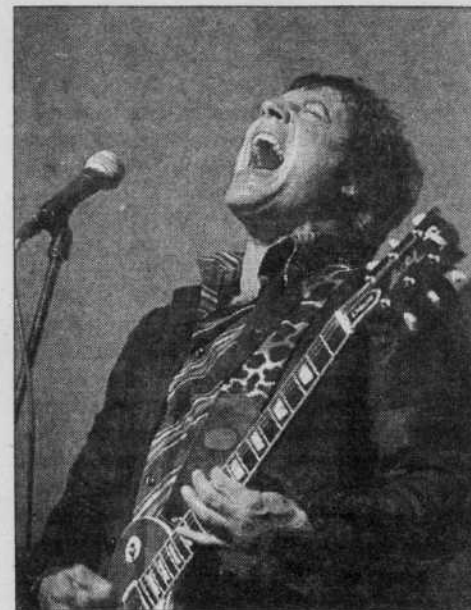

Leaving the Leloup name behind, he became Massoud Al-Rachid, at least in book form, penning a philosophical novel entitled Noir destin que le mien although it's original title had been Le Tour du monde en complet which was published in October of 2005 by Lémenac editions under the Al-Rachid nom de plume.

At the time, it seemed he felt he had taken the Leloup name as far as he could and was in search for a new identity, Massoud Al-Rachid in the philosophical and literary world, and, in a 2005 return to music, less a name himself and more of a collaborator in a group. He teamed up with Montreal rock group the Porn Flakes leading to the provincially successful single "Les Corneilles."

He made an official return to music in 2006 with the album Mexico, except now he was recording under the name Jean Leclerc, having already taken Leloup as far as he thought he could trade on it.

But his stage name and perhaps the persona that went with it made a return last year. As Quebec celebrated its 400th anniversary, Leclerc was asked to take part in the city's celebrations by playing a concert. Though he hasn't said why exactly, he returned to the stage as Jean Leloup.

It may simply have been a choice based on his early successes to bring the stage name back, or perhaps Leloup, upon reflecting upon 400-years of history in his birth-province, realized that Jean Leloup as a figure had been artistically an important part of representing Quebec as an international artist in a small but important portion of those 400-years of history.

Either way, John The Wolf as he likes to be called in English, was back in name and talent. This year he released Mille Excuses Milady and he has since been touring in support of the album that marked the return to recording of Leloup.

The Wolf will make his return to Sherbrooke this Saturday, November 7 at the Granada Theatre. Tickets cost $43.50 and can be purchased from the Granada box office.

Poetry in Motion

By Maurice Singfield

CIDI attracts people not only from the Town of Brome Lake and surrounding areas, but from outside of Brome Missisquoi and Shefford counties as well. All those who wish to experience being who they are, are invited to take part in the many different aspects of the broadcast, recording and events promotion arts and sciences practised by Radio Communautaire Missisquoi (RCM).

With direct hands-on experience in the fields of radio, TV and events production, RCM offers people of different ages and diverse backgrounds a chance to discover for themselves just how good they really are. If you want to buy a jacket it's always a good idea to try one on first. The same can be said about one's life.

Michaela Sefler is a metaphysical poet and host of Poetry and Transcendence, a new show produced by RCM for broadcast on CIDI and streaming on rcmmmedia.org every Thursday evening at 11.

Her poetry is esoteric, drawing on ancient writings to convey a message of hope and survival, highlighting nature and creation. She has twelve published compilations of poetry to her credit.

In her poetry she attempts to reconcile difficulty and pain with perseverance and triumph. She is inspired by ancient scripture, and ancient mysticism. In her poetry she draws on faith and ideals as spoken in the Qabbala, as in such works as the book of splendor and the book of formation.

"It has always been a dream of mine to learn about life's mysteries," says Sefler, "...I was mesmerized with the thought of travel to far away lands...and was even more enthralled, about the existence of ancient civilizations."

At the moment she lives in Montreal and plans on moving to Knowlton in order to pursue her interest in broadcasting and to improve her quality of life. "I really enjoy the area," exudes Sefler, as she transcends a moment in time with peaceful reflection.

It's great to know that RCM can catch the fancy of people from urban centers and transform their lives in a positive way. Talk about building confidence in our community. It's nice to be wanted, to be able to help and to teach.

Sefler wants to help others as well: "When I was old enough to understand that some of these ancient mysteries and doctrines are written in books, I promised myself to obtain them. I read and studied, but it wasn't until 10 years ago that I started bringing back and relating my own insight of these works in poetry. It has been a real honour to be able to write about what I most admire... given that I believe that all knowledge was written and understood by ancient civilization."

Sefler has been featured in various Print journals. Prism Quarterly, Ancient heart magazine, The Taj Mahal Review, Faerie Nation Mag, Decanto Magazine, THE CURIOUS RECORD - Dare 2, The Cherry Blossom Review, Phoenix New Life Poetry, Lonestars magazine, Magazine Conceit, African Journal of New Poetry No, Tarot Canada, Michaela Sefler won the AAA American Authors Association Award for 2008.

Anthologies: Poetry Vibes., Best Poets, Prominent Voices in Poetry, Namaste Fiji: The International Anthology of Poetry, Tales of the supernatural. Sefler has been featured on various websites e-zines and online journals.

For more information please go to her website at msefler-inspiration.net

We encourage all of you who are interested, willing and able, to join our ranks and to help shine a light on our beautiful part of the world. We have not come this far for nothing. Being who we are is CIDI, lots of great shows, lots of wonderful hosts and terrific volunteers. Give us a listen, send us your comments and suggestions, we always want to hear from you all and play the stuff you want to hear.

Save the drama for your mama

"It's All Good" by Nikki Carter
c.2009, Dafina Kensington
$9.95 / $11.95 Canada
240 pages

By Terri Schlichenmeyer

You have enough drama in your life. And it all starts at home. Your mother is always asking favors and while you usually don't mind, sometimes you just want to roll your eyes hard. Where does she get these ideas?

And then there are your friends. You love them to infinity and beyond but they can make you insane. You wish you weren't wrapped up in their drama, too, but hey - that's your job, right?

In the new novel "It's All Good" by Nikki Carter, Gia Stokes is back and totally up in her friends' business. But that's not a bad thing, is it?

It's almost the middle of Junior Year and sixteen-year-old Gia Stokes is pumped. She finally made co-captain of the Hi-Steppers Dance Squad at school and the squad is on their way to the state's biggest game, where the Spartans are going to be champions. And one of those champions is Gia's BFF, Ricky.

But Ricky has been all weird lately. He gave Gia a Tweety bracelet at the beginning of the school year and that's such a boyfriend thing. It's got her wondering if Ricky's crushing on her. Because if he is, she likee.

And another weird thing: Valerie, the Hi-Steppers' other co-captain is so nasty. Sure, Valerie is a senior and it's her last year in the squad but is that any reason to hate on the girl who was crowned Homecoming Queen? Is that any reason to trash the girl on FaceBook?

As if this can't get any more dramatic, Mama Gwen got married to LeRon and now Gia has a step-sister. Candy is just a freshman and she's got a lot to learn, but while Gia's not so thrilled to have her around, it's pretty cool to have a little sister. Even if she was a shoplifter once.

And then there's this new project that Aunt Elena and Gwen have cooked up: a purity group at church they call PGP (Powerful Girls are Pure). Well, you might just as well slap a "GEEK" sign on everybody's forehead, right?

But as the school year progresses and things fall into place, Gia Stokes learns that things aren't so bad. In fact, it all turns out to be pretty great.

Okay, so how old is author Nikki Carter, anyway? Because she absolutely nailed teen culture and language, dead-on.

It's been a long time since I've read a young adult novel that's as fun and fresh as "It's All Good". Gia is funny and smart, the kind of girl anybody would like as a friend. Her classmates are well-written (the good and the bad), and the adults don't come across as completely ridiculous, bumbling fools. The best news is that this is the latest installment in a series, so old fans will be familiar and new fans can start at the beginning.

If you're looking for a teen novel that's written by someone who doesn't sound like your great-grandmother, then look for this one. There are few better than "It's All Good".

Nichols is back, better than ever

In this day and age, it's hard to predict what will happen to him and his music. He may never reach that status because of commercial country which slows down neo-traditionalists like him.

However, he's far from being second level talent with his robust, velvety voice and dedication to well-crafted country ballads that have a distinct honky-tonkin' style. It is clear that Joe Nichols has become this decade's Randy Travis, for he is a roots-oriented singer of remarkable talent and power.

On 'An Old Friend of Mine' an almost acoustic-type ballad about a man giving up the bottle, with the genuine emotion of a man singing about what he knows, Nichols is parting company with alcohol. All his fans are aware that he recently had to go to rehab 'to get rid of this old friend'. You can easily feel his pain as he uses his voice as a sheer instrument to deliver a gamut of powerful emotions.

The title track 'Old Things New' describes to perfection his approach to country music as Nichols sings about giving fresh spins to his old Haggard vinyls. And this is what he does with his own music. His work offers a great balance between traditional music including twangy guitars, fiddle and pedal steel and lyrics tackling contemporary issues with a fresh twist.

For that matter, just like country singer Brad Paisley, Nichols, doesn't hesitate to include a few humorous numbers on his albums. Producers Mark Wright and Brent Rowan did a good job on most of the songs.

Nichols enlisted songwriters such as Paul Overstreet, Bill Anderson, Victoria Shaw, Rhett Atkins, Gary Burr, Jamey Johnson and Shawn Camp to provide the songs he wanted.

On this new album, Nichols shows his diversity, from the swinging and humorous 'Cheaper Than a Shrink' to the jazzy and very romantic 'This Bed's Too Big' and from the modern upbeat rhythm of 'Give Me That Girl' to the lonesome blues of 'It's Me I'm Worried About'.

The award-winning, Grammy-nominated singer demonstrates one more time, how he has found his own niche. Faithful to the person he is and what he does best, Nichols keeps on ignoring the country music trend to perform the style of country with which he is comfortable. It's the perfect follow-up to his acclaimed 2007 album, Real Things.

There's 'We All Go Home' a steel guitar-driven ballad while Tony Martin, Tom Shapiro and Mark Nesler penned 'It's Me I'm Worried About' a great ballad with a twist.

'Believers' was the first single released and a reminder of Mark Chesnutt's 'Thank God for Believers'. It is an inspirational number that pays a tribute to the faithful. 'Man Woman' is Nichols' version of Brad Paisley's 'I'm Still a Guy' about the difference between men and women. It's a great number but not as witty as Paisley's take.

Joe Nichols has added a remix of 'Tequila Makes Her Clothes Fall Off' to his new album, released on Universal South. The remix features Colt Ford and has been shipped to 250 dance clubs in the United States. A live version of 'Let's Get Drunk and Fight' (written by Canadian singer/songwriter Aaron Lines), a track from Nichols' 2007 album, Real Things, has also been added as a bonus track to the new album.

Those two songs were originally great and didn't need to be remixed or recorded live. We didn't need them on this album either. What would have pleased the fans much more is the cover of a country classic like Joe Nichols has done before on other albums. Let Nichols sing a Haggard, Watson or Whitley tune and it comes as candy for the ears. These would be real bonus tracks...

JESSIE AULIS

To sum it all, I say that sometimes it is preferable not to rely on a first impression. Don't forget that the nicest fruits on a tree are often hiding behind some leaves. And I never even got to mention his good looks and his charming Southern manners. Oh, My lord! I know the girls will agree.

BY JACQUELINE CUTLER

"Sesame Street" launches its new season Tuesday, Nov. 10, 40 years to the day it premiered – and revolutionized television.

The show has made such an impact that the world can be divided into pre- and post-"Sesame Street" people. Those old enough to have learned to read from Dick and Jane wound up watching the Muppets with younger siblings or children. Those who grew up with the show had an advantage. As studies have proven, children who watch "Sesame Street" start school more prepared to learn, know their letters, understand basic phonics and have a concept of math.

"Sesame Street," however, has been on for 40 years because it gives viewers what they want – sheer fun. When raising money to get it on the air, Joan Ganz Cooney, the show's creator, vowed that "every piece of education would be entertaining, and every piece of entertainment would be educational."

Sure, some skits work better than others. What program, offering so much for so long, could say otherwise? "Sesame Street" never stops trying, changing with the times. Those revisions sometimes rankle viewers who want it to stay as it was when they were toddlers.

This is not your mother's "Sesame Street." There are CGI segments with Bert and Ernie, "Abby's Flying Fairy School" and guys rapping a count to 40 in the season opener.

Tuesday's episode has heavy-hitting guest stars befitting a special anniversary. First lady Michelle Obama, Cameron Diaz and Lin-Manuel Miranda, the Tony Award winning creator and performer from "In the Heights," appear.

Mrs. Obama plants seeds with two girls, a boy and Elmo and talks about how delicious and healthful vegetables are. When Big Bird ambles by, she beams with unabashed joy. Who could blame her?

Being in the presence of Muppets is a treat. But as to the 40-year-old question, "Can you tell me how to get to 'Sesame Street'?" the answer, geographically speaking, is to go to New York, take the R train to Astoria, Queens, and walk past well-tended homes until you get to the hulk of a building that houses the studios. Of course, you need to get past security.

Upstairs, magic happens. On a soundstage are Hooper's Store, with cafe tables, Charlie's Auto Repair and the 123 building. Though the new season premieres this week, the cast was wrapping up the season in February.

In the season opener, Miranda plays a slightly smarmy, very funny, rapping real estate agent. He tries to get Big Bird to migrate, showing him beaches and forests. The giant yellow one, though, says, "Sesame Street is where I belong. This is my habitat."

And that ensures another season of sunny days.

GOING SWIFT-ly INTO THE NIGHT

At her last award show, she was rudely interrupted.

Unless someone else in country music decides to go rogue, Taylor Swift should have it easier this time.

After her much-discussed MTV Video Music Awards win that Kanye West stepped in on, the young singer-songwriter continues to move past the incident with four nominations – encompassing most of the biggest honors – in the 43rd Annual CMA Awards, the Country Music Association event that ABC will broadcast Wednesday, Nov. 11.

Carrie Underwood and Brad Paisley will host at the Sommet Center in Nashville, Tenn. They'll also perform on the show, as will Swift, Keith Urban, Sugarland, Kenny Chesney, Reba McEntire, Tim McGraw, George Strait, Vince Gill, Miranda Lambert and the soon-to-separate Brooks & Dunn.

Swift isn't sure which song she'll do, as her single "You Belong With Me" keeps riding high on multiple music charts.

"I've gotten to perform almost every track on my album 'Fearless' on award shows," she notes. "Getting to perform 'Fifteen' at the Grammys when it wasn't even a single was a great gift, so it's interesting to think about which song to do this time."

Swift already has set an awards-performance threshold. At the MTV ceremony, just after the Kanye encounter, her rendering of "You Belong With Me" took her into a New York subway station, through one car of a train, back out to the street and onto a stage in front of Radio City Music Hall.

"It's something I'm very proud of," Swift says. "I had to really get in the zone to pull that off."

Excited as she is about her CMA nominations – for female vocalist of the year, music video of the year ("Love Story"), album of the year ("Fearless") and the top prize, entertainer of the year – Swift maintains, "I always go into award shows feeling like I'm not going to win. My parents brought me up with the belief that the world doesn't owe me anything, so I'm always very shocked if I win. I think life is more fun that way."

Michael Urie

BY JACQUELINE CUTLER

The voice is the same, but without the over-the-top theatrics of Marc St. James on ABC's "Ugly Betty."

Michael Urie, hired for a one-shot deal - Vanessa Williams' Wilhelmina is so nasty she was going to have a new assistant each week - was such an instant favorite that the part was rewritten for him.

Urie is far more self-possessed than his character. He was reared in Plano, Texas, outside Dallas, which he describes as "a super suburb. There's a Starbucks on every corner, and it's flanked by two enormous megaplexes. It was a great place to grow up."

Let's anyone get the notion that he's a caricature of a Texan, Urie says, "I don't horseback ride. I have never ridden a horse. I have never drilled for oil, and I have never really worn a cowboy hat. Dallas is such a metropolis. You don't get that Crawford, Texas, mentality."

You also don't get the twang.

"I went to Juilliard," he says. "And they took whatever accent I had away. And suburbs are so gentrified, and you take the accent from TV. You don't hear accents on the news."

At Juilliard, he indulged his passion for theater, but as a struggling student, he didn't have the money for Broadway tickets.

He would walk in during intermission. "I got caught at 'Death of a Salesman,'" Urie says. He convinced classmates Luke Macfarlane and Jess Weixler "that I was Mr. Second Act. 'I'll show you how it's done.' You can't really hit a second act of a hit because it's sold out, and we got there and were looking around on the floor. We were all wearing backpacks and in sweats. I told the usher, 'We were upstairs, and we can't see that well.' She said, 'Let me see your tickets.' OK. We left."

Birth date: Aug. 8, 1980

Credits: The spinoff Web series "Mode After Hours," "Beverly Hills Chihuahua"

Best Halloween costume: Thomas Magnum from "Magnum, P.I."

Best dish he cooks: Peanut butter and jelly on toast

First plays he saw: "West Side Story," "Peter Pan," "Stage Door Charley" with Tommy Tune. It was on its way to Broadway. It was the first time I knew what a star was, watching him. For a couple of weeks I got to work with him, and the first thing he said to me was, 'You feel like I know you.' 'You feel like you know me?'"

"Splatter," splatter.netflix.com

Launched on Oct. 29, the three-part Web series from famed horror director Roger Corman - making his Internet debut at the young age of 83 - comes to a conclusion this week, on Friday the 13th. Corman is also allowing users to vote on the final fate of its characters. Directing "Splatter" is horror auteur Joe Dante ("Gremlins," "The Howling"), and it stars Corey Feldman ("The Lost Boys," "Stand by Me") as rocker Johnny Splatter.

"Invitation Only: Tim McGraw," www.cmt.com/shows/dyn/invitation_only_tim_mcgraw/series.jhtml

The country superstar brings his signature sound to a performance taped in front of an intimate audience in Nashville, Tenn. He performs hit songs "Something Like That," "The Cowboy in Me" and more, along with music from his new CD "Southern Voice." Then he answers audience questions about his life and career. The Web site offers behind-the-scenes information, along with videos, photographs and an opportunity to receive show reminders.

celebrity q&a

Michael Strahan

BY JACQUELINE CUTLER

OF 'BROTHERS' ON FOX

Q: Did you have to audition for this?

A: They called me and said, "We want you to do this."

Q: Did you have any acting experience?

A: I went from college (football) to pro to the studio to acting. It was a natural progression. It could not have gone smoother, the whole process.

Q: Does being on camera or in front of an audience make you nervous?

A: I was not nervous. I know what my better career was. I made sure I put every ounce of energy into that; now I can do this because I am excited about it.

Q: You seem comfortable playing a brother. What's your family background?

A: I have three older brothers and two older sisters. I'm the baby of six. Chill (Mitchell, his co-star) and I are truly like brothers.

Q: How is it going with CCH Pounder and Carl Weathers, who play your parents?

A: When I see her on set, I say, "Hi, Mom," "It's OK, Mom," "Whatever you say." It's your mom, and I have had that relationship with my mom. Carl is a cool dad.

Q: Where do you live?

A: I live out here (in Los Angeles) now, and I keep a place in New York City and a place in Houston. I love the weather here. I love New York. I go now for four or five days, and I'm good.

Q: Are you as busy as you seem?

A: I have "Fox NFL Sunday," endorsements, commercials for Vaseline. I am busy. My woman and I, we have nine kids between us.

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: We are big fans of "The No. 1 Ladies' Detective Agency" series. We watched it on HBO all last season but haven't seen it since. Has it been canceled? —Judith Walsh, Tsawwassen, B.C.

A: The series, which was based on a series of novels by African-born British writer Alexander McCall Smith, was set and filmed in Botswana and dealt with a strong-willed middle-aged woman (Jill Scott) and her slightly skittish secretary solving crimes in and around a small town in rural Africa.

The series was a huge critical success and has developed a strong cult following on both sides of the Atlantic. So far, we've seen the pilot episode and the first six-show season. This summer, HBO executives told critics that the show wasn't canceled, but BBC and HBO were considering how to proceed in view of the fact that the creative brains behind it, Anthony Minghella and Sydney Pollack, had both died since the first season went into production. As of now, there's a strong possibility that it may live on only as a seven-episode gem.

Q: Is the NBC series "Southland" coming back, or is it done for good? —Jim Butler, Edgewater, Colo.

A: It's done for the time being, at least, and probably no one is more surprised than the employees of the police drama. The series — executive produced by "ER" and "The West Wing" veteran John Wells and starring Ben McKenzie, Regina King and Tom Everett Scott — had been scheduled to start its second season on Fridays starting Oct.

23, but two weeks before that, the word suddenly came down from NBC that the show had been canceled.

telefashion 'So You Think You Can Dance'

BY JACQUELINE CUTLER

The judge on Fox's "So You Think You Can Dance" works to fit her signature line.

Murphy, 51, knows that when you quit dancing you must work hard to stay in shape.

Unlike most TV personalities, Murphy creates her look.

"It is painstakingly," she says. "I do everything. I purchase it all. So I keep it all. It is all on my back; if there is anything nobody likes me wearing, I take full responsibility."

She donates dresses to the American Cancer Society. Some outfits, particularly finale ensembles, are made for her, and the rest she finds on her travels. "Every second I am not on air, I am shopping," Murphy says.

As a former ballroom dancer, she understands glamour.

"It is all about the grooming," Murphy says. "We were taught in ballroom that you did not walk into the ballroom unless you looked fabulous. I developed a style of my own."

Mostly she wears dresses from Marchesa, Dolce & Gabbana, and S. John. She also loves clothes from Jean Paul Gaultier, Mandalay, Tory Burch, Vivienne Westwood and Valentino.

Murphy shops at Neiman Marcus, Saks and Bloomingdales.

"I spend so much time shopping for the show," she says. "I'm now in Vegas. Shopping is very good. It doesn't take me long either. I put on tennis shoes. I am very, very fast, and I move around the store incredibly quick. Colors draw me. I will buy a buy pair of shoes, and I won't have an outfit for three years."

She adores shoes, and her voice rises as she exclaims, "Oh, my God, some of my shoes are so fabulous."

She wears Christian Louboutin, Dolce & Gabbana, Gucci, Christian Dior, Sergio Rossi and Alexander McQueen shoes.

Murphy isn't the sort to accessorize with a string of pearls and stud earrings.

"I love to wear costume jewelry, but when it gets down to the finale and my jewelry," she says, letting loose that whoop of a laugh, "it's done on purpose. As the season progresses, my jewelry does too."

She adores a diamond necklace that jeweler Alan Friedman loaned her. While wearing a $1.5 million bauble, Murphy says, "Man, do I feel like Cinderella. I get to go to the jewelry store and pick out. I'm relieved when I hand it back."

what we learned from tv lately

BY BEVERLY FOSTER SEINBERG

Ellen Burstyn

"REQUIEM FOR A DREAM"
Drugs destroy dreams. Just say no.

"FUTURAMA: INTO THE WILD GREEN YONDER"

Homeless people can save the world; they just need to be properly organized.

"FORGIVEN"

Some people shouldn't be given the benefit of the doubt.

"VERTIGO"

A little obsession is a dangerous thing.

Simon Pegg

Mike Rowe

"DIRTY JOBS"

As clean and soft as your favorite down comforter or pillow is, making it was neither clean nor soft work.

"MASTERWORKS"

Artist Keith Haring began as a graffiti artist, drawing his trademark brightly colored human figures on the advertising boards in New York subway stations.

"THE SPY WHO CAME IN FROM THE COLD"

Getting out of the espionage game is easier said than done.

"RUN FAT BOY RUN"

It is possible for someone completely out of shape to get into condition to run a marathon in just three weeks - and get the girl, to boot.

Jonathan Rhys Meyers

"THE TUDORS"

Guys with an unsavory romantic history had a hard time finding love even before Internet dating sites.

Al Pacino

"SCENT OF A WOMAN"

There are two kinds of people in the world: those who face the music and those who run for cover. Cover is better.

PUPPET MOVIES

"Magic" (1978):

Evil dummies - gotta love 'em! Anthony Hopkins' character in this chiller wasn't the first ventriloquist saddled with a sinister sidekick, but the mad acting skills that earned him an Oscar 13 years later give new life - so to speak - to an overdone plotline. Just the commercial for this flick gave kids nightmares back in the '70s. Three decades later, the movie itself still has that effect on some adults.

"Pinocchio" (1940):

Not all classic tales lend themselves well to the Disney treatment ("Hunchback of Notre Dame," anyone?), but Carlo Collodi's tale of a sentient wooden puppet gained plenty in the translation, including the charming Jiminy Cricket. Every child who's ever given in to the temptation to misbehave can identify with Pinocchio's quest to prove himself worthy of becoming a real boy.

"The Muppet Movie" (1979):

Kermit & Co. had several big-screen outings, but there's something especially magical about the first one. Kermit learns Hollywood is looking for singing frogs and sets off in search of fame, encountering a host of new friends along the way, including Fozzie Bear, Gonzo, Rowlf and, of course, Miss Piggy.
