Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan

Official announcement was made Monday of terms of the Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan. This issue extends the opportunity to holders of Dominion of Canada War Loan and Victory Bonds now approaching maturity to convert their holdings into bonds extending over a further period of from 15 to 25 years, and marks what will eventually prove to be the greatest financial operation in the history of Canada—the refunding of the heavy volume of financial obligations incurred during the War period.

The offer does not involve the raising of any new money. Not a penny will be added to the national debt of Canada in consequence of the 1931 Conversion Loan. It is entirely a matter of exchanging existing bonds for others of the Dominion. A total of more than one billion dollars of bonds reaches maturity within the next 3½ years. This total is made up of about $52,900,000 War Loan 5% Bonds due October 1, 1931; $73,300,000 Renewal Loan 3½% Bonds due November 1, 1932; $446,600,000 Victory Loan 5½% Bonds due November 1, 1933; and $512,000,000 Victory Loan 5½% Bonds due November 1, 1934.

Holders of bonds of these issues are being given the opportunity of continuing their investment over a longer term in the direct obligations of the Dominion Government. They will not lose anything in the way of interest payments or income tax exemption by exchanging for bonds of the 1931 Conversion Loan. It is explained that the new bonds will carry coupons entitling holders to receive up to the date of the maturity of their old bonds, the same interest payments and tax free privileges as they would enjoy if they held their War Loan or Victory Bonds until the actual date of maturity in each case. For the remainder of the term of the 1931 Conversion Loan Bonds, they will carry interest at the rate of 4½% per annum, which, in the opinion of leading investment bankers, is a comparatively generous return in view of the interest rates now prevailing in the London and New York markets.

Conversion applications are now being invited up to a total of $250,000,000 of the new bonds. It is announced, however, that the Minister of Finance reserves the right to increase or decrease this amount, in his discretion. Subscription lists opened Monday and will close on or before the 23rd of May, as may be decided by the Government.

Holders of the War Loan 5% Bonds maturing 1st of October, 1931 may exchange their bonds for Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan Bonds maturing November 1, 1936. The new bonds will not be subject to redemption before November 1, 1946, but from that date until maturity they may be called by the Government on any interest date on 60 days' notice, at 100 and accrued interest. The first coupon on these bonds will be for six months' tax free interest at 5% per annum, payable October 1, 1931; the second coupon will be for seven months' interest at 4½% per annum, payable May 1, 1932. All other coupons will carry interest at the rate of 4½% per annum payable half-yearly on the 1st of May and the 1st of November.

Holders of the Renewal Loan 3½% Bonds maturing 1st of November, 1932, may exchange their bonds for Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan Bonds, maturing November 1, 1957. The latter issue cannot be redeemed before November 1, 1947, but after that date it may be redeemed by the Government on any interest date on 60 days' notice, at 100 and accrued interest. The new bonds will carry regular coupons covering interest at the rate of 4½% per annum payable half-yearly on the 1st of May and the 1st of November. In addition to the regular coupons, these bonds will carry three adjustment coupons payable, respectively, on the 1st of November 1931, the 1st of May 1932, and the 1st of November 1932, for additional interest at the rate of 1% per annum.

Holders of the Victory Loan 5½% Bonds maturing the 1st of November, 1933 are being offered the opportunity to exchange their bonds for Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan Bonds maturing November 1, 1958. These new bonds will carry interest at the rate of 4½% per annum from May 1, 1931, payable half-yearly on May 1st and November 1st. The first five interest coupons—that is, those due to be paid each six months up to November 1, 1933, will be tax free. In addition to the regular coupons, these bonds will carry five tax free adjustment coupons for additional interest at the rate of 1% per annum, payable, respectively, November 1, 1931; May 1, 1932; November 1, 1932; May 1, 1933; and November 1, 1933. The Conversion Loan Bonds maturing in 1958 will not be subject to redemption before November 1, 1948, but on or after that date on 60 days' notice, at 100 and accrued interest.

Holders of the Victory Loan 5½% Bonds maturing 1st November, 1934 are being offered the opportunity to exchange their bonds for bonds of the Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan maturing November 1, 1959, which will carry coupons entitling the owner to interest at the rate of 4½% per annum, payable half-yearly May 1 and November 1, commencing May 1, 1931. In addition to the regular coupons these bonds will carry seven adjustment coupons for further interest at the rate of 1% per annum, payable, respectively, November 1, 1931; May 1, 1932; November 1, 1932; May 1, 1933; November 1, 1933; May 1, 1934; and November 1, 1934. The Conversion Loan Bonds due November 1, 1959 will not be redeemable before November 1, 1949, but after that date they may be redeemed by the Government on any interest date on 60 days' notice, at 100 and accrued interest.

The issue of bonds of the 1931 Conversion Loan is authorized by Act of Parliament, which provides that both principal and interest on all of the bonds is to be a charge on the consolidated revenue fund of Canada.

Principal and interest on the new bonds will be payable without charge in lawful money of Canada at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, Saint John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, or Victoria. Interest coupons will be payable without charge as they fall due at any branch in Canada of any of the Chartered Banks.

The Department of Finance announces that interim certificates in bearer form will be delivered in the first instance in exchange for all War Loan and Victory Bonds accepted for conversion. The interim certificates will be exchangeable at a later date for engraved definitive bonds. The Finance Department expects that the definitive bonds will be ready on or about the 15th of August 1931.

When the definitive bonds are ready it will be possible for holders to obtain delivery of coupon bonds in bearer form or of coupon bonds registrable as to principal. These bonds will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000. Fully registered bonds, on which the interest will be paid direct to the owner by Government cheque, will also be obtainable in denominations of $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $100,000.

Applications to convert bonds will be received and receipts issued by any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank and by recognized Canadian Bond Dealers and Stock Brokers, from whom application forms and copies of the prospectus containing complete details of the new bonds may be obtained. They will arrange for the conversion of bonds without expense to bond-holders.

Loyal Finns Reject Communism

In Northern Ontario, especially about Timmins is to be found a large clan of Finlanders. The Finns are a respectable race, but unfortunately paid "Reds" are working amongst them spreading Communism. Two weeks ago the Communists decided to hold a parade in Timmins, but it was fortunately prohibited by the municipal government. The Communists are molesting the Loyal Finn to Canada and are making it very disagreeable for foreign people to live peaceably. The Loyal Finns have organized themselves into a group called "The Loyal Finns of Canada." Immigrants of this type are to be encouraged everywhere, but a strong hand is necessary to subject the other disturbing elements. The Loyal Finns passed a resolution at a mass meeting censuring the work of paid Russian agents in Timmins. When the Finns will make such a resolution, it is an indication that it is high time for our Governments to step in with a firm hand and deport the undesirables.

Power of Lightning

A flash of lightning will develop sufficient power to lift five large railway engines with their tenders, to a height of a mile and a quarter. And hundreds of thunderstorms are constantly raging over the earth's surface. It is strange, therefore, that the death toll from lightning is not far larger. In Britain, of all her millions, only fourteen people die yearly by lightning. In the United States the number is 452. But it must be remembered that part of the United States is definitely semi-tropical. In August, 1926, a violent thunderstorm swept the Kentish coast, and the flashes fell at the rate of 300 a minute. Next morning hundreds of rooks, wood pigeons and other birds were picked up dead in the country behind Ramsgate. An attempt is being made in the German mountains to harness lightning by giant insulators.

Wise Old Hen Helps Grocer

A hen delivered herself to the home from which an order had come to a local grocery store. Here's the story, vouched for by the grocer and others. Mrs. A. M. Fite, of 2416 Noble street, Anniston, Ala., ordered a chicken from the store. A clerk went to the yard back of the grocery and attempted to catch a hen with which to fill the order. But Biddy had other ideas about the matter. She flew from the yard and to the top of a moving street car headed in the direction of the Fite home. At the end of the car line, at Twenty-fifth and Noble, the hen flew to the ground, landing in the yard of Mrs. Fite's residence, where she took refuge under the floor. Her action so impressed those concerned that she was spared the axe.

Sisters Were Reunited

Dorothy Matoska, 20, and Bertha Wittig, 19 both telephone operators in a Baltimore exchange, had only a slight speaking acquaintance with each other. On a recent night when Dorothy came home, Mrs. Matoska said she had a secret to reveal. The woman confessed she was not Dorothy's own mother but had taken her into her home in early childhood. Dorothy's own mother, Mrs. Mary Thomas, had just died, Mrs. Matoska said. Recovering from her surprise, Dorothy asked if she might go to her mother's funeral. She did, and there she met Bertha Wittig, also a daughter of Mrs. Thomas, and who had been adopted in childhood by a family named Wittig. There at the funeral of their mother the two girls discovered for the first time they were sisters.

Bees Were Intoxicated

Emil Kemelstrand, of Salem street, Rockland, Mass., a staunch prohibitionist, reported to the police his bees were coming home intoxicated at all hours of the day and night. They had forsaken flowers, he said, and were devoting all their attention to a pile of mash, discarded by an unidentified local brewer. The result was, he said, the bees flew back to the hive drunk at times when well-behaved bees are abed. Demand for their honey increased to the point where he could hardly supply it, the bee-keeper averred. Police have tried in vain to find the malt pile, not being able to keep up with the bees.

Divining-Rod Used

The search for the bodies of William Mallough and Leonard McDonald, of Goderich, who were drowned in Lake Huron, off Goderich, continues, but without result. The search went on indefinitely. The fathers of the drowned youths, Bert McDonald and Joseph Mallough, conduct the search, and they were assisted by upward of twenty men. A number of motor launches were used. A party visited Goderich with a divining-rod, and the water surface at the scene of the drowning was covered. On a number of occasions where the bodies were, Marine men stated that the rod did not dip twice in the same place, being many feet out.

Dimes Take Him on World Tour

Since 1903 a dime to Ascar S. Bodenhausen, an American, now living in London, has been more than just 10 cents. He revealed that while on a world tour, financed on dimes he had saved for 28 years, Bodenhausen said each night he would put all dimes he had in his pocket in a purse and each week put them on time deposit with compound interest twice a year. When he had saved $3,250 he started on his world tour.

King Purchases Devil Wagon

Departing from all traditions of his country and faith, His Holiness the Dalai Lama, ecclesiastical King of Tibet, India, ordered an automobile sent to him at Lhasa, high in the Himalayas. A newly-trained Chinese chauffeur will pilot the car where routes are navigable but where no roads exist parties of 30 coolies each will be posted along the mountain passes and on the desolate Tibetan plateau to carry it in relays to its destination. Heretofore all automobiles have been dubbed "devil wagons."

They Want Mayor Ousted

During Mayor Wagner's recent, successful campaign for mayor in Winona, Minn., 600 dozen eggs were distributed to the public at one cent a dozen. The market price was then 16 cents. District Judge F. W. Senn ordered him removed from office on the petition of 71 voters who alleged he had violated the corrupt practices act.

Quenches Fire With Milk

When E. G. Clark, farmer, of Rock Creek, Kansas, discovered the roof of his house on fire, there was no water with which to combat it. But inside the house were two ten-gallon cans of milk. Clark rushed in, got two buckets of milk. His son, Clifford, also got two buckets of milk. The four pails of milk were sufficient to quench the fire.

Basketball Game Follows Wedding

An hour after the wedding the officiating clergyman, the bride and the bridegroom were participating in a basketball game at Meriden, Conn. The Rev. John Farr was guard and Joseph Bower, the groom, center on a church league quintet. The bride, Gertrude Patz, was a prominent member of the cheering section.

Married Again at 128

A Hottentot, who is 128 years of age and who was born a slave has just married for the third time, says a Johannesburg dispatch. His wife is 80 years his junior. The man declares it is a love match and that he feels younger than ever. He had 35 children and eats only one meal a day of mallemeat and meat. Otherwise he exists on coffee.

Stricken at Graveside

Stricken with a heart attack as she knelt to put flowers on her sister's grave, Miss Bessie Fenelon, 55, died in a cemetery at Albany recently. Before going to the cemetery she was asked by a niece how long she would be. Her reply was: "I may not come back."

Plants Romans Planted

In many parts of England are the remains of Roman camps built by soldiers of nearly two thousand years ago. All have fallen into ruins and most are now buried under several feet of soil. But it is possible that flowers which the Roman soldiers planted still live and bloom year after year. Near the sites of many of the camps in the South of England tiny red tulips make their appearance each spring. They are quite different from any other tulips seen in this country, and are found nowhere but in the neighborhood of Roman camps. Still more curious, the bulbs from which the flowers spring are found at depths of five feet and more underground. The most simple explanation of this peculiarity is that they were planted near the surface in the ordinary way by the Romans, and with the passage of years they have become more and more deeply buried, like the ruins of the camps themselves.

Black Eggs Upset Scientists

For a long time, white ducks have been laying white eggs, and black ducks, white eggs. And science didn't get excited. But now poultry fanciers are doing some fancy talking about a black duck that lays black eggs. So far, four black eggs in a row. The duck is owned by Marvin Snowwhite, 15, of Bridgeton, N. J. Marvin broke the first egg, he was so excited. A hen's sitting on another. A third is being exhibited, and the fourth was opened and cooked. It was like other eggs.

Man One Half, Wife Other

After seven years of living in a section of his home apart from his wife, Chester A. Jones, wealthy builder of Beacon, N. Y., is seeking an annulment in Supreme Court at White Plains. Jones told Judge William F. Bleakley that soon after their marriage he found his wife cold toward him. So he divided their home at Pleasant Plains. She lived in one half and he in the other. Judge Bleakley reserved decision until a later date at Poughkeepsie, when Mrs. Jones will appear. "I will not grant you an annulment until I see this woman, until I see what such a woman looks like," Judge Bleakley told Jones.

Saved by Wife's Pluck

Accidentally shot in the shoulder when his gun exploded as he sat in his canoe, Archie McGinnis, Indian trapper, of Koochiching Reserve near Fort Frances, Ont., will recover because his plucky little wife performed a strong man's work for six hours, removing her husband to a place where he could be treated. When he was shot McGinnis fell from his canoe into Captain Cuttle Lake. His wife pulled him back into the craft. Then she paddled twenty miles to Calder's Fishery with her wounded husband, and turned him over to a fisherman, who rushed with him to Fort Frances in a motor boat.

Fortune Smiles on Widow

Fortune smiled upon a widow and her four children at Schenectady, N. Y., after their dog "Pal" was threatened with execution unless his license fee and court costs, amounting to $11, was paid. The widow, Mrs. Dorothy Fonda, had no money. An animal protective organization worker became interested and she appealed to the citizenry for funds. As a result $28.85 was collected and the license fee was paid. City Judge James W. Liddle then dismissed the court charges, and the remainder of the money was turned over to the needy family.

Uses Old Truck as Home

An old, discarded automobile truck, near the Boulevard at Niagara Falls, is serving as the temporary home of James Canall, 30, unemployed chauffeur, and his wife. Canall had been out of work since last September and unable to meet household expenses. As a result he was evicted from his home at Wheatfield recently. Instead of appealing to charity, however, he gathered his few belongings and moved into the truck. Despite their plight, the two appear happy and hopeful of better times.

Transformer Drops Into Car

David Dempster, 22 of Toronto, must carry horseshoes or rabbit's feet in his automobile. Dempster's car skidded in a rut. It snapped an electric pole. On the pole was a transformer weighing 900 pounds. The transformer dropped off the pole into the back seat of the car. Dempster got out, surveyed the wreckage, and walked across the road to a doctor's office to have his minor bruises treated.

Wedding For One, Jail Another

Harris Blasingame, 37, had to go to jail at Modesto, Calif., so Gene Holthams, San Francisco, could get married. Holthams had put up $500 bail for Blasingame when the Modestan was charged with driving while intoxicated. Three weeks later Holthams decided to get married, so he withdrew his bail money, causing Blasingame to return to the city bastille.

Mouse Held up a Car

Fred Clark, who lives on a farm near Kilmer, Kansas, started to drive to Oskaloosa. His car began to miss. Suddenly it stopped running altogether. Clark couldn't figure out just what the trouble was. He called a garage man and had it hauled to the garage. An examination disclosed the fact that in some manner a mouse had got on the battery. The mouse had died there and its body laying across the wires caused a short.

Couldn't Find Key to Jail

There is an old tramp ballad about "Who's Got the Key to the Jail House Door" that applies to the city jail at Naples in Ontario county, N. Y. Mrs. Catherine Bowes, member of the state commission on corrections, returned to Albany without a report as to the condition of the Naples jail. The officials could not find the key.

One Dollar to Hang Himself

After reciting alleged ills she had suffered at the hands of her former husband, Mrs. Hulda E. Tingle of Philadelphia bequeathed him $1. "to buy a rope to hang himself with." The will, written January 8, 1930, has been probated, disposing of the rest of an estate among relatives. Her first husband, to whom she was married in January, 1917, the will stated, "never supported me, only gave me trouble and caused my health to fail."

Accidentally Gives Signal; Hanged

Feeling a tug on the rope, a signal to "hoist away," workmen pulled the bucket from an eight-foot well they were cleaning. As the bucket neared the windlass the body of Joe White, the well digger, was found above the bucket with rope looped around his neck. White had evidently been caught in the slack and, seeking to free himself, unwittingly gave the "hoist away" signal.

"My dear, we've kept you awfully late!"

"Oh, no matter, my Pontiac fairly slides through traffic."

50 YEARS OF GROWTH OF THE C. P. R. AND CANADA

The Resolute Executives and Progress Made in Twentieth Century Are Here Briefly Described

May 2, 1881, was a momentous date in the history of this country, for on that day the first sod for the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway designed to connect the Atlantic with the Pacific was turned. With that simple event of half a century ago the whole subsequent history of Canadian progress and expansion is bound up.

The construction of a "Pacific Railroad," as it was at first called, was a pledge in fulfillment of the Confederation plan, given to the crown colony of British Columbia when she became part of the Dominion in 1871. At that time Confederation was still on trial and in the unsettled condition of public opinion, the "Pacific Railroad" question bedevilled politics for nearly a decade. It wrecked the Macdonald Government in 1873. It nearly wrecked Confederation in 1876, when British Columbia threatened secession because of the failure of the Mackenzie administration to carry out Canada's pledge to build a railroad to the Pacific. The situation was saved for Canada by its Governor-General the Earl of Dufferin who personally went to the mountain province (via San Francisco) and by his brilliant oratory persuaded its people that with the exercise of a little patience they would become partners in the glorious destiny he foresaw for the Dominion.

After he returned to power in 1878, Sir John A. Macdonald made the implementation of the pledge of 1871 a primary consideration and early in 1881 he had at last secured the co-operation of a syndicate whose most influential factors were as resolute a group of men as ever helped to build an Empire. In connection with this recent jubilee it is unnecessary to recall in detail the betrayals, the financial conspiracies, the almost unbearable anxieties, the political enmity and cowardice, which during the next few years tried the souls of the authors of the enterprise. Suffice it to say that at Craigellachie, B. C., on Nov. 7th, 1885, the last spike of the original main line was driven and on June 23rd, 1886, the first C. P. R. train to the Pacific Coast left Montreal, arriving at Port Moody, B. C., five and a half days later—years ahead of schedule, as named in the contract of 1881. A finer epic of peaceful achievement no land can boast.

At the outset this achievement was due to the colossal energy and emotional enthusiasm of George Stephen (afterward Lord Mountstephen), its first President. At 15 he had been working as an apprentice in a draper's shop at Aberdeen when a cousin induced him to emigrate to Montreal. At 40 he had become President of the Bank of Montreal, the greatest of Canadian financial corporations. He was 52 when he accepted the gigantic task of financing and building the C. P. R. and he and his associates pledged all their personal wealth to the cause. In the strenuous years which followed he owed most to two friends who had been his enemies and whom he succeeded in reconciling, Sir John A. Macdonald and Donald Smith. In 1889 he retired to spend a long and reposeful old age, assured of a permanent place in history.

In the task of construction, Stephen had the co-operation of two Americans of wide experience who had enjoyed an initial training on the first of Western railroads, the Illinois Central, the project of Lincoln's rival, Stephen A. Douglas. These were William Van Horne, a knight, and Thomas Shaughnessy, who died a member of the House of Lords. Van Horne was the General-in-the-Field and Shaughnessy the Quartermaster General of the forces engaged in the great task and their superb efficiency was demonstrated in the early completion of the railroad.

Van Horne, the second President, who took office in 1889, was a man of most original and pungent personality. A book could be made of the anecdotes which centre round his name. Perhaps the most characteristic relates to a season when Western farmers were getting only 35 cents a bushel for wheat. The C. P. R. President remarked to a friend that in his opinion they were being robbed by the grain dealers, and the latter suggested that the C. P. R. organize purchases at a better price. The idea appealed to Van Horne who secretly formed an agency to buy wheat at 50 cents per bushel. Wheat poured to the prairie depots in such quantities that there were insufficient rolling stock to handle it. Political enemies of the great corporation photographed the piles of bags on station platforms to illustrate a campaign of condemnation of the company's failure to serve the farmers, unaware that the C. P. R. itself owned the grain. Van Horne, laughing in his sleeve, made a novel use of the photographs by sending them to Europe to prove the overabundance of the prairies, and stimulate immigration.

Though American by birth, Van Horne proved himself a most steadfast and patriotic Canadian. There were those who opposed the construction of a line through the rocky wilderness of Northern Ontario, and urged an international route via Sault Ste. Marie and St. Paul. In

Through the building of the C. P. R. Canada grew out of parochial conceptions to ideals of nationhood. In perspective the courage of the original political and financial sponsors assumes vast relative proportions. But we believe that the present generation of Canadians is at heart not less courageous, less enterprising, less steadfast than the generation of 1881. —(Toronto Saturday Night.)

On Saturday evening the United Church Hall was filled to listen to the Wesley United Players in their comedy "Climbing Roses."

Miss Marion Walsh is to be congratulated on the splendid handling of the comedy. Unstinted approval was given the players who did remarkably well.

A cast of fourteen kept the stage alive with interest which evoked repeated applause. The gist of the piece centered around the successful efforts of a middle class family to hold their own against the taunts and fibes of would-be aristocrats who happened to be neighbours of the "Roses."

Affected social distinction received a well earned rebuff and placed the "Roses" on a society level with the "Warrens."

The comedy was given by special arrangement with Walter H. Baker & Co. and under the auspices of the Managers of the United Church.

LUMBAGO?

A pain in the lower part of your back can torture you. But not for long, if you know about Aspirin! These harmless, pleasant tablets take away the misery of lumbago, rheumatism, neuralgia, headaches, toothaches, and systemic pains of women. Relief comes promptly; is complete. Genuine Aspirin cannot depress the heart. Look for the Bayer cross, thus:

From the outset the success of the C. P. R. has been due not merely to the unique executive capacity of its Presidents, but to their ability to select and work harmoniously with subordinates of high capacity also; and to produce an esprit de corps that permeates and increases the efficiency of the entire system. At the present time it is salutary to contemplate the history of the C. P. R. Its path has not always been one of roses, but the story of its past gives a warrant for the most abiding faith in Canada's future. It started with a capitalization of only $25,000,000, backed by the government of a poor and sparsely settled country, which hardly realized the magnitude of the task to which it had set its hand.

The usual games and refreshments followed and a very pleasant time enjoyed by all the young folks.

The teachers and officers of the S. S. also had a short business meeting and appointed a temporary pianist to act until Miss Hazel Macfarlane has entirely recovered from her illness. Definition of a Snob

Thackeray's definition of a snob is a classic of its kind. It expresses very neatly the characteristics of that regrettable type of person. "A snob is that man or woman who are always pretending, before the world, to be something better—especially richer or more fashionable—than they are. It is one who thinks his own position in life contemptible, and is always yearning and striving to force himself into one above, without the education or characteristics which belong to it; one who looks down upon despises, and overrides his inferiors, or even equals of his own standing, and is ever ready to worship fawn upon, and flatter a rich or titled man, not because he is a good man, a wise man, or a Christian man; but because he has the luck to be rich or consequential."

ATHELSTAN S. S. CONVENTION

Interesting Programs.—Miss Janet Doxsey and Rev. P. N. Caven, Principal Speakers

A very successful convention was held in Athelstan on Wednesday afternoon and evening, May 6th inst. A very good representation from the various Sunday Schools in the district were present. Mr. James M. Wallace of Powerscourt, presided at the afternoon session, also in the evening until the report of the nominating committee was given by Miss L. V. Paul, when it was announced that Mr. Stanley Arnold had been elected to that office. Mr. Arnold was then called to the chair.

Rev. C. A. Haughton of Dundee conducted the worship service at the afternoon session. Rev. J. H. Woodside of Kensington conducted the same at the evening session, while the Athelstan choir ably assisted. Greetings were brought from the Religious Education Council by Miss Janet M. Doxsey, Children's Work Secretary. The ladies of the United Church in Athelstan very hospitably entertained all present. Supper was served at the close of the afternoon session. Both from a social and intellectual viewpoint the Convention was a feast of good things; the only regret is that more of the Sunday School workers and parents of children in the homes are not able or do not attend and afford themselves of this splendid opportunity of learning the methods of religious instruction etc. from such capable leaders as Miss Janet M. Doxsey and Rev. P. N. Caven.

Afternoon Session

In the afternoon a lively and very interesting discussion, led by Miss Doxsey, followed the report from the four different Sunday Schools represented in the district, on various branches of their work. It was noted that there exists at present no Teachers' Training classes. This lack of instruction, however, may be greatly overcome by the Correspondence Courses which are available to all who wish to take them. The demonstration lesson taught to a group of six Juniors by Miss Doxsey was a very fine illustration of how a class of children may be approached, their attention held, and a story presented to them in such an interesting way that much of it will surely remain in their minds long after, arousing them to nobler purposes, guiding and strengthening them.

The address which Rev. P. N. Caven delivered at the evening session was entitled "Worship and Instruction." Weeds. In it he stated that as the weeds in the farmers' fields are many and of various types, so it is with those of worship and instruction. Therefore he would only endeavor to point out a few of the most common. Those commonly found in the worship period are: 1st. Unplanned Programme; 2nd. The same Leader; 3rd. The same order of service; 4th. Irreverence, subdivided, Irreverent Leadership, Irreverent Participation; 5th Review, (this latter most commonly found in schools where all classes study the same lesson). Weeds most commonly found in the Instruction Period, are: 1st. Poverty of Instruction; 2nd. Teacher Centred Lesson, (while it should be pupil-centred lesson); 3rd. Fear.

A solo by Mrs. Wood of Powerscourt, followed by P. N. Caven's address, after which Miss Janet M. Doxsey delivered an address entitled "Strengthen Your Stakes," which contained warning against trying to give religious instruction without a proper tightening of our ropes and strengthening of our stakes as the prophet Isaiah referred to. A number of methods suggested which will be helpful are, reading, study, discussion and correspondence courses.

Before the close of the meeting, Rev. J. H. Woodside moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speakers and all who took part in making the programme a success. Rev. C. A. Haughton seconded this motion, and it was unanimously upheld. Rev. J. H. Millar of Huntingdon then rose to move a vote of thanks to the entertainers who had so ably done their part. This motion was seconded by Rev. P. N. Caven of Montreal and also unanimously sustained. The meeting closed with a hymn and benediction.

School.—Some of us have the odd recollection of certain phases of our school days that were not conducive to love of school or school work, but the scholars who went to afternoon school one day last week seem to have enjoyed every minute of school-hours. The school mistress, Miss Muriel Pangborn, does not seem to have been too strict but what the "children" are willing to go back and even be "kept in" after hours. The "school" was a means of helping the work of the I. O. D. E. in this community and was thoroughly enjoyed by the ladies who numbered about fifteen or twenty.

Mother's Day.—Mother's Day was observed at St. Andrew's Church on Sunday, the pastor, Rev. W. T. Prittie, preaching morning and evening on the Mothers of Holy Scriptures and the present day mothers. In the afternoon the Sunday School had a special service at which many of the friends of the school attended. A regular Mothers' Day programme was gone through and the soloist of the afternoon was Mr. D. H. Reid.

Summer Visitors.—The houses which are available for rent are being rapidly taken up by the summer residents many of whom are old friends of this community.

Rockburn

A disastrous fire occurred Sunday afternoon on the Dumas Range, two miles north of this place when the barns on the farm of Medos Dumas were struck by lightning and totally destroyed, the fire being started in a most unusual manner. The buildings were all equipped with lightning rods but the bolt struck the fence some distance away and followed the wire to where it was attached to the corner of the barn, fire breaking out immediately. The grounding of wire fences as a protection to stock has long been advocated but the practice is seldom if ever followed and this seems to be a forcible demonstration of the advisability of doing so. The buildings were partially covered by insurance.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed in the Rockburn Church on Sunday next, and the Pre-Communion service will be held on Thursday evening.

Mr. Duncan Lindsay paid a brief visit at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Lindsay, recently.

Commission to Probe Milk Conditions

The dairy farmers in the Montreal District will be pleased to hear of the announcement made by the Hon. Adelard Godbout, Minister of Agriculture, Quebec, re his decision to appoint a commission to probe the Montreal Milk Conditions.

Today, the farmer receives 21c per gallon of milk, and the Montreal milk dealer gets 27c for delivering the milk to his customers.

Now this is not the worst feature of shipping to the Montreal milk dealers, for in the city are a number of milk distributors who are known as the little dealers.

The Hon. Adelard Godbout, Minister of Agriculture in appointing a commission is doing the farmer a justice to which they are all entitled.

How Women Lose Fat In England How would you like to lose unhealthy fat that you don't need and don't want, and at the same time feel better than you have for years?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent abdomen, and at the same time make your skin so clean and clear that it will compel admiration?

How would you like to get your weight down to normal, and at the same time develop that urge for activity that makes work a pleasure and also gain in ambition and keenness of mind?

Get on the scales to-day and see how much you weigh—then get a bottle of Kruschen Salts. Take one-half teaspoonful every morning in a glass of hot water, and when you have finished the first bottle weigh yourself again.

Now you will know the pleasant way to lose unsightly fat, and you'll also know that the six vitalizing salts of Kruschen have presented you with glorious health.

That's the way Englishwomen keep slim—why not you?

District News About Our Farms

Horse Breeders' Syndicate
With a view to promoting horse breeding and to encourage the grouping of those working with the same breed, the Department of Agriculture is assisting in the organization of syndicates of breeders of pure bred horses.

It is recognized by all who have at heart the improvement of agriculture that horse breeding is not receiving the attention that it should on the part of our farmers. It is therefore, the desire of the Quebec Department of Agriculture to assist in the rapid introduction of pure blood by purchasing in this country or abroad, a certain number of stallions and mares belonging to the three or four breeds recognized as being best suited to our conditions.

Syndicate Rules:
To take advantage of the benefits offered below, horse breeders' syndicates must conform to the following rules:—

A Cordial Welcome awaits all visitors at

- 1.—To be organized as a breeders' syndicate in accordance with the breeders' syndicate law (ch. 59, R. S. Q. 1925).
 - 2.—To consist of at least ten members who agree to become proprietors of a purebred registered mare. All the members of a given syndicate must raise the same breed of horses.
 - 3.—To provide for themselves, either by purchase, borrowing or renting, the services of a registered purebred stallion of the same breed as the mares kept by the syndicate.
 - 4.—Each member must construct, in accordance with the specifications of the Live Stock Branch of Quebec, a box-stall and an enclosure nearby, in which to keep the stallion, or the young foals.
 - 5.—Each member of the syndicate must subscribe a sum at least equal to the price of the animals which he wishes to buy, and pay on account at least 40% of the amount subscribed. Requests for the organization of a syndicate must be addressed to the Live Stock Branch at Quebec, specifying the breed selected by the members.
- Benefits offered by the Department of Agriculture:
1.—The Department will loan, without interest, 60% of the purchase price of breeding horses, up to a total of $4,000 for one syndicate. Payment of this must be made in four equal annual instalments, the first coming due one year after the organization of the syndicate. The loans will be made upon the receipt of the registration certificate of the animal purchased, of the vendor's invoice, and of a declaration showing that the syndicate has itself paid 40% of the purchase price. A contract will be drawn up between the Department of Agriculture and the authorized representative of the syndicate, giving the proper guarantees of payment of the Department.
2.—The Department agrees to give an annual grant of $200. for a period of four years to maintain the stallion serving the syndicate, provided that the said stallion be approved by the inspectors of the Department and that he be kept to the satisfaction of the latter.

Considerable demand is being experienced by Ayrshire men in Western Ontario with the result that quite a number of animals have changed hands recently, several of them to new beginners.

Mrs. E. J. Davis of Toronto, Ont., reports that during the past week her herd manager, Alex. Wallace, sold a cow to Mr. Victor Ross of Toronto for his farm at Pickering and a heifer to Wm. Elliott who recently established a herd of Ayrshires at Brampton, Ont. H. P. Bingham, Georgetown, Ont., got a promising young bull from the snow cow Barr Juno, Imp. and a yearling heifer.

F. C. McKenzie of the Dominion Live Stock Branch purchased six Advanced Registry Class A. Ayrshire bulls in Western Ontario during the past week for the Department of Agriculture's Bull Loaning Policy. Two each came from the herds of J. L. Stansell, Stratfordville, Ont., and F. C. Biggs & Sons, Glen Campbell Farms, Dundas, Ont., whilst one each came from H. A. Smart, Simcoe, Ont., and J. Stewart Hyde, Dundas, Ont.

The yearling Ayrshire bull, Bridgeview Top Gallant which won the Cup at Sherbrooke Exhibition last year as the best calf exhibited by a Boy or Girl (98 calves, all breeds, competing) has been sold by Stanley Doig, Lachute, Que., to Lakeside Farm, Phillipsburg, Que. for $550.00. This bull was bred by Melvin Begg & Son, Moose Creek, Ont., and is by that well-known winner Howie's Elegance, Imp.

A series of Ayrshire Club field days, Judging and Type demonstrations will be held during the month of June as follows: Banner Counties Ayrshire Club, June 3, at Lt. Col. J. B. Maclean's, Puslinch, Ont.; Toronto District Ayrshire Club, June 4, at Lt. Col. Harry McGee's, Islington, Ont.; Grenville-Dundas Ayrshire Club, June 11, Hamilton and Niagara District Ayrshire Breeders' Club, June 16, at Glen Campbell Farms, Dundas, Ont.; Central Ontario Ayrshire Club, June 17, at T. J. Hume's, Cobourg, Ont.; Generey Ayrshire Club, June 18, at A. Watt's, Lancaster, Ont.; Southern Counties Ayrshire Club, June 19, at the Frank Harris' farm, Mount Elgin, Ont.

Canada's largest Ayrshire herd, and one of the largest dairy cattle herds in the country, is that owned by the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. of Trail, B.C. This herd numbers 440 head and supplies the workers in the mines and smelters at Trail and Marysville, B.C. with milk.

Within the past week or two six Ayrshire men were started off with cattle from the Marysville section of that herd. These men between them purchased eleven females and six bulls.

Hiring Farm Labor and Leasing a Farm

In another section of the Gleaner appears a short article dealing in generalities pertaining to a "Landlord and Tenant." It tells of the rights of each and their respective obligations. This week we reproduce two forms which are recommended for use by farmers in "hiring labour under contract" and in cases where "farms are rented." Subscribers who follow the advice given in this series of articles will find them beneficial either for present day or future uses.

"Rome of the North"

The country which today seems to stand at the crossroads of Europe is Czechoslovakia. To many this name is a "terra incognita," but when the eye picks out Prague, Carlsbad, Marienbad, Franzensbad and Pilzen, it is immediately recognized as an old haunt of tourists. Prague was a favorite city with George, Chateaubriand, George Sand, Prevoist and Brandes, who praised it as "the Rome of the North." Here is the famous Hradcany, ancient seat of the kings of Bohemia and now the residence of the President. Here also is the majestic Gothic cathedral of St. Vitus and the beautiful Charles bridge over the Vltava. The most striking is the resorts in the Tatia mountains.

Canada's Oldest House

Canada's oldest continuously occupied house stands in the little village of Sillery, a suburb of the city of Quebec. The mansion, as it once was, is nearly three hundred years old, having been built in 1637. The father and founder of Sillery and its mission was the Commander de Sillery, a great Frenchman of his time, a favorite of the French court and for a long time a leading ambassador of the king of France, following which he took holy orders as a Jesuit, and thus became one of the early missionaries to New France.

Landlord and Tenant

Leases

Leases are contracts by which one party, called the lessor or landlord, gives to a second party, called the lessee or tenant, possession of land or other real estate for a fixed period of time, receiving in return for the use, possession and profit thereof a fixed compensation called the rent.

Duration:—A lease may be for life, or for a term of years, from year to year, by the month, at will, or by sufferance.

A Lease for Life terminates with the death of the lessee or tenant or any person specified as such in the lease.

A Lease by Sufferance of the landlord exists when a lease for a term of years has expired and the tenant is allowed to remain in possession. Such possession in some Provinces may be terminated without notice.

A Lease at Will is one which exists only during the will of the landlord and may terminate at the will of either party, as the rights of possession on the part of the landlord or the rights of abandonment on the part of the tenant may justify, or by the death of either party, or by sale of property, or by due notice. Statutes usually regulate this notice in each State.

A Lease for a Term of Years begins and ends at a certain specified date. Under the latter the tenant possesses greater privileges than under either of the two former.

Written or Unwritten—A verbal lease for one year or under is valid in all the Provinces. And so also is a lease for a term not exceeding three years when completed by entry. A lease for a term exceeding three years must be in writing and under seal, and in British Columbia, Nov Scotia, Alberta, Yukon and North-West Territories it must also be registered. In Quebec a lease for a term of more than one year must be registered. In all the Province a lease for a term of more than seven years must be in writing, under seal and recorded.

Essential Specifications in a written lease are: dates, names, rent, description.

The Date fixes the beginning of the lease. Where no date is mentioned the time commences ordinarily with the delivery of the lease. This, however, is not always conclusive if another date can be proven.

Names—The law recognizes only one Christian name and the surname. If a party assumes a false name he is nevertheless responsible. The landlord deals with the man, not with the name.

The Rent—Rents may be payable in other valuable besides money; the amount should, however, always be stated. If not stated, the law will allow the landlord what the use of the premises is reasonably worth.

Description of Premises—The lease must describe the premises. It need not be in full detail; any general description that will identify the property is sufficient. The parts and appurtenances that ordinarily belong to such premises are included.

Who Cannot Give a Lease—A husband cannot make a lease which will bind his wife's property after his death. A guardian cannot give a lease extending beyond a minor's majority which the minor cannot annul if he wishes, but if he does not annul it the tenant is bound by it. Under the common law a married woman cannot lease her property, but under the statutes of most Provinces she can. A special statute supersedes the common law.

A minor cannot make a valid lease, but can become a tenant. Students under age hiring rooms come under this class.

Rights of Landlord
Subletting and Assigning Lease—The landlord can prohibit his tenant from subletting the premises, or any part of them, or from assigning the lease, by stating the prohibition in a special clause of the same.

Tenant Breaking the Condition—If the tenant has broken the condition of the lease by subletting the premises, the landlord, if he accepts the rent due, knowing of the subletting, cannot remove the tenant.

Right to Inspect Premises—The landlord has the right to enter upon the premises to ascertain whether there is any waste or injury done, after first giving notice of his intention.

Making Repairs—Unless expressly covenanted the landlord is not obliged to make the necessary repairs. If a tenant wishes his landlord to make special repairs during the term he must stipulate for the same in the lease. But if the landlord does agree to make all necessary repairs and fails to do so, even that does not relieve the tenant from paying rent.

Notice to Quit—In case of a tenant at will, or one who holds over after the expiration of his lease with the consent of the landlord, a notice to quit is necessary to compel him to give up his possession. This notice must, as a general rule, be given at a date before some "rent day," and distant from it by the usual period at which rent is payable. Thus, if it is payable monthly, there should be a month's notice ending on the day when the rent is payable. The time for giving notice, however, is usually fixed by statute in the different states in order that summary proceedings for possession may be commenced. If the rent is in arrears, only a brief notice is required. In most of the Provinces this is fixed at from five to fourteen days. Such notice need not be made to end upon the day when rent is payable.

Refusal to Vacate—If a tenant refuses to vacate the premises after the termination of his lease, from any cause, the proper and safest way for the landlord, as well as the cheapest, is to get him out by process of law, or by a sealed lease to a third party, who can legally claim possession.

Rights of Tenant
Some of the rights of tenants are embodied in the above statements of the rights of the landlord.

To What a Tenant is Entitled—In taking possession of the premises the tenant is entitled to all the privileges and appurtenances to the property in all their details without being expressed in the lease.

Sale of Property—The landlord affects the tenant's rights by selling the property, if he has a written lease. Such sale must be made subject to the rights of the tenant.

The Right to Sublet—A tenant can sublet the rented premises or any part of them, unless expressly prohibited from doing so by the terms of the lease. He, however, remains responsible to his landlord, unless the latter accepts such third party as his tenant in place of the former and releases him in writing.

Lease Assignable—A tenant's lease is always assignable unless it contains restrictions to the contrary. Such an assignment, however, to be fully legal must be under seal. The assignment may be for a part or the whole of the original term, but if for less than the original term, then it is properly subletting.

The Subtenant—The subtenant bears no relation to the tenant of the original landlord and must pay him the rent. The tenant in turn whom he has rented is his only landlord. In the case of an assignment of the lease with the assent of the landlord the new tenant becomes the tenant of the original landlord and must pay him the rent.

Repairs—A tenant cannot make repairs upon the property rented and deduct the amount paid out from the rent, for that would be in effect compelling the landlord to do it.

Making Improvements—For improvements that become part of the premises, or such as cannot be removed without injury to the same, the tenant can claim no allowance from the landlord; but a tenant may remove from rented property articles which he has placed for use in some trade, such as engines or other machines, or even in some cases of buildings erected for the same purpose, or articles for domestic use, such as furnaces, shelves, gas fixtures, etc. Of course his personal property a tenant can remove any time at pleasure.

Right to Quit—Where the renting is for a definite time no notice from either party to the other is necessary, as the landlord has the immediate right of possession as soon as the time expires; so the tenant has also the right to vacate at that time without giving notice to the landlord. Where, however, no limit of time is set a notice from either party is required—a month's notice in case of a "monthly tenancy," and six months' notice in case of a "yearly tenancy."

Effects of Mortgage—If after renting the landlord should mortgage the property, the mortgagee's rights would be subject to those of the tenant holding a lease in writing (duly recorded if necessary under statute), and a sale or foreclosure could not disturb the tenant's possession.

Duties of the Landlord
1. It is the landlord's duty to see to it that his tenant has the quiet enjoyment of the premises and is not disturbed by any one having a better title to the same than the landlord.

2. The landlord must not render the tenant's occupation uncomfortable by erecting anything like a nuisance on or near the premises.

3. If not otherwise provided for in the lease, it is the landlord's duty to pay the taxes, ground rent, or interest on a mortgage that may exist.

4. The landlord is not bound to make repairs or allow the tenant for repairs which he may make unless especially agreed for in advance and so stated in the lease.

Duties of the Tenant
1. The tenant must take such care of the premises that others may not be injured by any neglect of any part of it.

2. The chief duty of tenant is to pay rent. If no time for possession is fixed, then he is only obliged to pay for time he has occupied; but if under any agreement for a certain term he will have to pay for that term.

3. He is expected to keep the premises wind and water tight and repair all damages made or suffered by him. Natural wear and tear he need not make good.

4. The tenant is obliged to return the premises to his landlord at the end of his term undiminished in value by any willful or negligent act of his. This requires him to replace broken doors or windows, or such other articles as may have been broken by use, neglect or accident.

CHAPTER XX

Morning came to "Uplands" with a high, smothering fog; the encircling mountains were lost to view, and the canyons undulated with the milky folds of the soft and cloudy billows of the mist.

Stanley, taking an early walk about the farm after a long and restless night, noted, as he had noted a thousand times, that the comfortable domestic life of barns and sheds proceeded placidly, unchecked by the apparent stoppage of all nature's forces.

He loved his home, the man thought, with a pang of keen affection. After the feverish discomfort of the night, the walking and and dozing, always with a sense of impending misfortune upon him, he had risen disconsolately; no use to try to sleep, there was no more sleep in the world.

But now this early rising, and those lost hours, seemed nothing. He was here, well and strong, and even healthily hungry, and in this new day anything might happen.

Something did happen, almost immediately, for Margaret and Jim came abruptly about the corner of the big hay barn.

Margaret followed the child slowly, but without hesitation. The fog had curled her rich dark hair into a cloud about the softly-olive forehead, her face was pale and looked strained and weary; there was a spiritualized quality about her whole appearance that instantly appealed to Stan, and her dark blue eyes managed a smile as they met his.

"I slept horribly," she said, in answer to the concern in his eyes. "And you did, too," she added quickly.

"Hardly at all," he answered, smiling down at her. "But I always love to get up early," he continued philosophically, "and I feel fine. But how about you? You fainted, last night?"

"Yes, I know," she said, flushing hotly, but meeting his eyes squarely. "I suppose I was more tired than I knew! It used to be a bad habit of mine, but I've not fainted for years."

"You frightened me, when you fainted," Stanley said, with a sort of timidity. Their relationship seemed to him to have appreciably altered since the arrival of Shirley's telegram. "The—look in your eyes," he said, "and then that sudden collapse! It made me realize just what you are to me."

"Stupid thing to do!" she said, anxiously and hurriedly. "It all came over me, suddenly—"

"It came over me, too, Margaret," Stanley said, watching her closely. "I felt for the first time that we love each other, that you and I are to be man and wife."

Margaret raised her eyes, brimming with slow tears, and smiled at him uncertainly.

"That was it, wasn't it, Margaret?" he asked. "You knew then that it was love, between you and me, didn't you?"

"Yes," she said in a low tone. "I knew then that it was—that."

"And you knew there never could be anyone else in my life, dear?" Stanley said. "I'll wait, and I'll give you all the time you want. But it's you and me now, Margaret against all the world."

"You and me," she whispered, her lips trembling. "What about—her?" she asked, with a glance in the direction of Shirley's room.

"I'll manage her!"

"You know, of course, that I am not free, Stan?"

"You told me that," Stanley smiled at her encouragingly. "But you could be free, Margaret?"

"Only by breaking my oath!" she reminded him quickly.

A moment later, in silence, Stanley followed her into the sunny dining room.

"Just the same, I can't help being happy, Margaret," Stan said. "I cannot help feeling that everything is going to come out all right."

"The main thing," she said, with an adorable upward flash of blue eyes, "the main thing is all right."

"You mean our liking each other?" He leaned close to her as he spoke, and the look in his bronzed, boyish face, made her heart flutter suddenly.

"I thought that would never come to me again," Margaret said.

"And you are sure, now?" he asked, in the same tone.

"Sure?" she echoed, faintly interrogatory. And with her odd smile she added, "Ah, my dear!"

"We will be happy here, Margaret," he pleaded. "You and I, and our boy and our farm."

"If one dared to think of it, even!" the girl said. "Shirley will feel—may feel all the more reason for hurrying the wedding, now," she added.

"I don't see why. It might work the other way," Stan said, reflectively. "But either way, it doesn't matter, for I shall have to tell her the truth."

"You're going to do that?" Margaret asked.

"I have to, now."

"Couldn't Shirley make it very hard for you, Stan?"

"Oh, she will!" he said serenely. "She might sue, you know."

"Not with Theobald dying. She talked to me last night about securing her share of his money. She said, in so many words, that she wouldn't let a man's widow."

"She might easily be, in one of those Eastern States. Shirley got her divorce here."

"But Stan, if her husband dies, does her alimony stop?"

"I don't know. I never thought of that. I suppose it does unless he leaves it to her in his will, which, said Stanley, positively, "I know he won't do."

"Then, Stan, with only her own money—a few hundreds, she told me—and no alimony, and possibly losing the prospect of marrying you, isn't there a chance that she may fight?" Margaret asked.

"What—to marry me?"

"Well, it has been done."

"Yes, but Shirley wouldn't do that!" Stanley said, laughing uncomfortably. "I—I've known her all my life, there's no harm in her," he added.

"I am a prospective widow, you know. I have some excuse!" she reminded them, with a whimsical smile. "My dear," she added, to the company in general, "isn't it pitiful? I've been thinking about it all night. Poor Cuyler—he isn't 40 yet, you know, and he has the constitution of a lion!"

"Think of Cuyler dying—it's had the strangest effect on me," said Shirley frankly to the company. "I'm that way—I'm too soft. Everyone knows how Cuyler treated me, and how hard I tried to stand by him, and yet now—I feel all broken up, honestly I do!"

"You idiot! You ought to hate him," said Constance Hyde-Brown.

"Oh, I know it!" Shirley agreed quickly. "But I'm no good at hating! I'd go to him, yes I would, if I thought it would do him the least good," she added, with a little emotion.

"Yes, I would!" she repeated quickly. "Stanley's lean, reddened face broke into an incredulous grin."

"You and Stan get married and take in New York on your honeymoon," Willis Hyde-Brown suggested, with the levity of his generation. Stanley's face had grown grave, and he said briefly:

"Pretty good place for you to keep away from, Shirley!"

"My dear," Shirley said placatingly. "Cuyler doesn't need me. I was merely saying that if he were alone, or in trouble, I'm just fool enough to rush to him. No brains," said Shirley of herself, pathetically. "Horrible, horrible fog!" she said, in an attempt to change the subject. "Well, we can play bridge and forget poor Cuyler and his apoplexy."

"They did play bridge, from ten o'clock until a late luncheon hour, but Cuyler's name persistently crept into the conversation, and it was obvious that Shirley was softening toward him, was growing pensive and introspective, as the hours went by. She called Stanley from her room, in the late afternoon, and he went to her doorway.

"Tanny, is there talk of tea?" asked Shirley, who was on a broad couch beside the window, with a fat soft rose-silk comforter over her.

"Will you have some tea?" he asked.

"Would it be a horrid bother?"

"My, no! And some cake?"

"No no cake, said Shirley judiciously. "But ask him if he could make me a little toast, with caviar. Stan? What are you doing, big boy?" she asked, sleepily, as he came over toward her.

"Why, we were just going to take a little turn round the place. There's no let-up to the fog, it's like a rain, and Mrs. Hyde-Brown said she felt all muggy."

"Let them go without you, dearest, and come back and have a little tea-party just with me!" Shirley coaxed prettily.

Stanley did not hesitate, although she could hardly have proposed anything less inviting. He had been dozing, with the rest, after the early afternoon rubbers, and now he longed for the fresh cool outdoor air and the hour of exercise.

CHAPTER XXI

Shirley was curled in her cushions and her rose-colored cover; she loved to preside at the 5 o'clock ceremony and often said that tea was her favorite meal. But to Stanley it only waster the nicest hour of the day and spoiled his appetite for dinner.

"To get up and put your boots on and come out for a walk would do you a lot more good than this mess!" he could not resist saying.

"Oh, darling, let's not develop our characters!" Shirley pleaded, dimpling at him naughtily. "Who went?"

"Jim and the Hyde-Browns and Margaret," Stanley answered.

"And you wish you were with them, of course?"

"No—no. But I do get so darned stupid in the house all day!"

"Well, you're going to stay with me, now!" Shirley said. "Stan, she added, suddenly serious, biting into a damp little sandwich. "I've been thinking all day. You don't know what this means to me! Stan, do you think I ought to go on to New York?"

"Go on to New York?" he echoed, astonished. "Why should you?"

"To see poor Cuyler," said Shirley solemnly.

"To—what an idea!"

"No, but listen, Stan. If he loves me and if he wants me?" Shirley asked, almost in tears. "It's just got on my nerves," she said pathetically. "That poor boy, alone with a lot of nurses and doctors—no one that belongs to him, or cares if he lives or dies!"

"My dear girl, you're just working yourself up about this," Stanley said, in disapproval.

"Yes, but that's not all Stan," Shirley said, discouraged but not diverted. "There's—there's all that money."

"I don't see what that has to do with you," Stanley said.

"You mean as your wife? Yes, of course. But do let's be reasonable, dear," begged Shirley. "I know how you feel, Stan," she said. "But just listen to me! There are millions there or a million, anyway. If I go on and just see the poor boy and explain to him exactly why I had to divorce him there's no reason why it should not mean a comfortable slice of it for me. Now is there? You know, having her own money is a mighty nice thing, for a woman, Stan. Six or seven hundred thousand, say, would be nothing to him and it would make a difference—now wouldn't it?—to me. It would mean that we were really rich and you have to have so much nowadays. Stan—I won't lie about it

I hate lies. I've had two thousand a month and the minute I marry I haven't a cent—it isn't going to be easy for me, my dear, or for you either. And this is so simple and I know Cuyler so well and ten to one there's some other woman there—he might even marry her the last minute! So, truly, I do think the wisest thing would be for me to go."

She paused, all reasonableness and appeal. "What do you really advise, Stan?" she asked.

"I should suppose that of all persons in the world—" he began, coldly. "That I'm the last one to be there?" Shirley finished eagerly.

"But Stan, dear, you're wrong. I never felt that way about Cuyler. If it was some other man—some man I'd never been married to, say," Shirley explained, "then it would be out of the question! But after all, I'm Mrs. Cuyler Theobald. Stan, you're a business man, you must see that it'd be absolute madness for me not to go. When you consider how terribly hard it is to get money in this world, and how frightfully expensive everything is now—honestly, it seems to me it would be perfectly silly—"

"And then your idea would be to come back and be married?" Stanley asked.

"Well, what else?" she asked, faintly alarmed. "But there is just one thing I want you to promise me, Stan," said Shirley, jerking herself a little nearer him. "And this you must promise me, because my entire life depends upon it. Now I'm going to say a word against Margaret Yorke."

"But Stan, dear, you're wrong. I never felt that way about Cuyler. If it was some other man—some man I'd never been married to, say," Shirley explained, "then it would be out of the question! But after all, I'm Mrs. Cuyler Theobald. Stan, you're a busi-

More than 5 Minutes Saved on the average Long Distance Call

The average time taken to complete a Long Distance call is now 2 minutes flat. In 1925 it was 7.3 minutes. It takes 5.3 minutes less time today than it did six years ago. In other words, you are saving more than two thirds of your waiting time through the efficiency of Bell equipment and employees and the cooperation of telephone users in placing calls correctly.

For speedy service place your Long Distance telephone calls like this:—

1. Call "Long Distance" and when the operator answers—
2. Give her the name of the town or city you are calling.
3. Then give her the number of the telephone you wish to call.
4. If it is a "Person to Person" call give her the name of the person you are calling.
5. Then give your own telephone number.

STOMACH TROUBLE

Discomfort in any part of the abdomen is apt to be blamed on the stomach. Those who frequently suffer from such discomfort usually say that they have "stomach trouble."

When the stomach goes "out" on the rampage, most persons place the blame on the last thing which they have eaten, and make up their minds that this or that food does not agree with them.

Whether or not we enjoy health does depend, to a considerable extent, upon the food we eat. We know that in order to have health, we should use a balanced diet, which includes milk and milk products, fresh green vegetables and fruits.

We know also that we should not eat to excess. It is not to be expected that the stomach can be abused by the excessive or indiscriminate use of foods or beverages without causing trouble. The abuse of any organ of the body leads to the breaking-down of that organ sooner or later. The whole body suffers as the result of such carelessness as trouble in one part affects the whole.

However, pain and discomfort in the abdomen are not, by any means, always traceable to the stomach or to the food taken.

The upset stomach may be due to worry, nervous strain or anxiety. The business man who rushes through his lunch, his mind occupied with office worries, and who does not take time to relax, will almost surely have his stomach "go back on him."

Loss of appetite, nausea and vomiting are the symptoms which usher in the onset of many of the acute diseases. In such cases, the stomach is affected by diseases which are attacking the body, and the stomach as one part of the whole body reflects these conditions. This is particularly noticeable when it is some other abdominal organ, such as the appendix or the gall-bladder, which is involved.

The stomach may be upset as the result of heart disease. In order to do its work properly, the stomach requires an adequate supply of blood. If this supply fails because of heart disease, digestion is interfered with, but the cause, in such cases, is to be found in the heart, not in the stomach.

These conditions are mentioned because they indicate that while we know that pain or discomfort in the abdomen means that there is something wrong somewhere, even if there is nausea or vomiting it does not necessarily imply that it is the stomach which is primarily at fault. It does mean that the real cause must be found and treated if the condition is to be corrected.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Inspiration of Great Song

Carrie Jacobs Bond, author of "The End of a Perfect Day," describes the circumstances under which the song was written as follows: "The story of the writing of 'The End of a Perfect Day' has been told many many times and in many many ways, but the truth is a very simple story. The inspiration came to me as I was viewing a wonderful sunset from the top of Mount Roubidoux in Riverdale, Cal. I had been motoring through southern California and we had been seeing many beautiful sights, but the glory of this sunset from the mountains was the most beautiful thing I had ever seen. I hurried back to the Mission Inn to get ready for dinner, and while dressing I thought how I wished I could express my thanks to those friends in some little way, just out of the ordinary, and almost at once came the words of 'A Perfect Day.'"

Cooling Milk On The Farm

By W. F. STEPHEN

We have reached the season when our dairymen are faced with the problem of cooling milk rapidly. In those sections where ice is stored, cooling milk in hot weather is not much of a problem, but there are sections where ice is not stored, and where it is required to cool milk even for the delivery before delivery. To cool milk to 50 degrees—the temperature required by most city regulations—requires some mechanical method of cooling to get the best results. For this purpose there are various types of milk cooler. Many dairymen, who have the privileges of electricity, are installing some mechanical type of refrigerator. There are several types on the market. This does away with the storing of ice and all its "muss."

The cooling of milk on the farm consists of more than setting the cans into a tank of water and allowing them to stand in water for a few hours. Milk should be cooled from about 93° to about 53° in order that germ life in the milk may not develop. For every can of milk at a temperature of 93°, about 8 gallons of water at 45° is required to cool each one gallon of milk to 53°.

Professor R. M. Washburn, Director, Dairy Produce Institute, U.S.A., has made some very interesting experiments on the cooling of milk. In test No. 1, the experiment was made with well-water, having a temperature of 50 degrees, which was flowing gently past two 8 gallon cans at once one of which was slowly and continuously stirred, and the other not stirred. The stirred can cooled more in ten minutes than the other in fifteen, but it took thirty minutes to reduce the stirred can from 98 to 56 degrees, while the unstirred can had only been reduced 73 degrees in the same time. With water flowing at a temperature of 48 degrees, the stirred milk was reduced from 94 degrees and 53 degrees in thirty minutes while the unstirred milk only reached 71 degrees.

Experiments with ice water were very much more satisfactory, although in the unstirred can with ice water at 41 degrees the cooling period was very much shorter and the unstirred milk took thirty minutes to reduce to 47 degrees, and the unstirred to 66 degrees in the same period. Therefore in cooling milk in the can it requires to be frequently stirred. Herein is where the use of a milk cooler does advantageous work, the milk running over a surface cooler through which cold or ice water is running, is more efficient and gives more satisfactory results.

Getting the milk cool enough by the time the milk truck arrives is no small job on many farms. Men are interested in eating breakfast at that time, as well as getting the milk down to the road-way in time. The writer, has had considerable experience, as for a number of years he was a milk shipper to Montreal. He highly recommends the use of a milk cooler. They are inexpensive and do efficient work. In securing a milk cooler, select one that may be easily cleaned. We have known of cases where cooling devices were used but were neglected and became instruments to carry disease rather than instruments of prevention.

It is a good thing to have a dairy thermometer hanging in the milk house, where the attendant may always know the temperature of the milk, and keep it recorded. There never was a time in the history of our country when purchasers of milk, whether for human consumption, or for the factory, were more particular or demanded a better quality of milk from the dairymen as now. The consumer requires it from the milk distributor. The concentrated milk manufacturer, cheese and butter man are all demanding a high quality milk, as their markets demand a high quality product.

It therefore behooves all dairy farmers, not only to continue sanitary practices, but to improve on them. Three trees were planted and many other improvements made. Presents play.

On Friday, May 8th the children of the Gore school celebrated Arbor Day by holding their Mission Band in the morning, cleaning the school yard and making flower beds, and transplanting plants, afterwards enjoying their lunch outside. Three excursions were arranged to the woods, and a great many bouquets were arranged and presented neighbor ladies.

Franklin Centre

The W. I. had a social evening on Friday, May 8th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert McMillan. The W. I. members served a warm tea to 40 members and visitors. Mrs. R. C. Manning called the meeting to order. A half hour was spent in community singing. Wm. Whitehead gave two recitations followed by Dr. E. N. Moore, who gave a splendid address, dealing with the responsibility of parents and teachers towards safeguarding the health of the community. He emphasized the importance of an early diagnosis of all diseases common to children, as many of these diseases begin with a similar condition of cough or fever. He stressed the importance of careful attention to the child with such symptoms until it has been proven that he will not be a menace to the other children in the community. He also spoke of the value of medical inspection in the rural schools. The singing of the National Anthem brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

At the United Church on Sunday morning Mother's Day was observed by the Sunday School scholars. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with plants and flowers. A special program was prepared for the service. Mrs. R. J. Blair told the story "The Cap That Mother Made." The Rev. T. F. Duncan gave an impressive talk to what we owe to our dear mothers. The Sunday School scholars, along with their teachers, had charge of the morning service.

The Gore

W. M. S. meets. The Women's Missionary Society of the Gore Auxiliary was entertained at the home of Mrs. E. A. Mason on Thursday afternoon, May 7th.

The afternoon was spent in making children's garments, quilt blocks, one quilt was quilted.

A delicious supper was served by the hostesses to twenty-seven members, visitors and children. Total receipts, $6.85.

Mission Band meets.

The Sunday part of the Gore Mission Band met at Johnston's school, Friday afternoon. The meeting was conducted by Miss McGerrigle in the absence of the leader, Mrs. J. Rudock. The President, Muriel Graham opened the meeting in the usual manner. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Hazel Henderson. It was decided by the members to write letters to the children to whom they were asked to contribute their work.

Miss McGerrigle explained the story of "Jesus at the Home of Mary and Martha". The hymn, "Tell me the stories of Jesus" was sung. "Keeping up with the Ukrainians" was then read and explained by the teacher which proved very interesting. The meeting closed by all joining hands and repeating the Mizpah.

Mothers Day was fittingly observed in the United Church Sunday afternoon. The choir rendered the anthem "Mother's Prayers Have Followed Me." The Rev. F. F. Duncan told an appropriate story to the children, taking his text from St. John 2-12, "He went down to Capernium and his Mother."

Arbor Day held. On Friday, May 8th the children of the Gore school celebrated Arbor Day by holding their Mission Band in the morning, cleaning the school yard and making flower beds, and transplanting plants, afterwards enjoying their lunch outside. WOODSIDE STUD FOUNDED 1850

Howick Breeding Station Has Been Augmented With Three Thoroughbred Stallions

Elsewhere in this issue will be noticed the advertisement of R. R. Ness & Sons, The Woodside Stud, Howick. The Woodside Stud was founded in 1850 and since that time has continued to offer to the industry "a quality" that has done much to develop and maintain the interests of the horse in this district. It is easy to appreciate the continued efforts of the members of that firm, from time to time importations of Clydesdales have been selected in Scotland and brought into this district for the improvement of stock, these same horses have been exhibited at the larger shows of Eastern Canada and have done much to advertise the live stock of this district.

Knowing that the demand for saddle horses of superior quality far exceeds the supply and believing that there are in certain parts of this district a number of mares suitable for raising these horses R. R. Ness & Sons, with the co-operation of the Dominion Live Stock Branch, have formed a breeding station in this district. For this purpose three thoroughbred stallions are maintained and travelled throughout the district, an association has been formed by the Dominion Live Stock Branch for the registering of mares suitable to breed horses of the saddle type, this association will record these mares so they will know where colts of the saddle type can be obtained. It is the intention of the live stock branch to assemble these colts annually and have a show and sale when buyers from a distance will be brought in to purchase these colts.

We frankly admit that the demand for horses in the past few years has not been so brisk, yet even at the present time there is a demand for good big sound geldings of the heavy draft type and at prices that are very profitable to the farmer, unfortunately we have not enough of these good, draft, sound horses in this district to offer, even many of our farm horses will have to be replaced and there are not sufficient young horses being raised in the district for this replacement. The district of Beauharnois has been noted for its live stock, no district in the Dominion is better suited for the raising of both heavy draft and saddle horses for which profitable prices are practically guaranteed. The services of the very best of Clydesdale and thoroughbred stallions are offered at this time and it is to be hoped that the farmers of this district will co-operate to develop the interests of the horse in the district of Beauharnois so famous for its live stock of superior quality.

NOTICE TO HOLSTEIN BREEDERS—We have been notified that Mr. Jas. Rette, Chief Inspector, will be in this district about May 29th, to grade herds or heifers in herds already graded for Advanced Registration. Any breeders wishing to have their herds graded may notify G. C. Boyce, Athelstan, or M. M. McNaughton, Secretary.
