City Touches Reserve To Pay Off Accounts

Alderman Suggests That Other Employees Take Like Reductions to Firemen and Police

Relief Accounts

Council Not Responsible For Direct Relief Accounts Since Last Saturday

A request by the City Treasurer to use certain amounts from the reserve funds to pay off several accounts was discussed by the aldermen at the regular Wednesday evening meeting of Valleyfield Council. It was moved by Ald. Laroche and seconded by Ald. Miron that the following amounts should be taken from the reserve funds: Finance Committee, $206.95; Finance Committee, $2.05; Public Works Department, $245; day labourers, $3,500; Aqueduct Department, $1,000; Police and Fire Department for purchase of house numbers and street signs, $47; Police and Fire Department, Board for Chief of Police, etc., $400; Market Department, repairs to public scales, $94. Total, $5,250.

Report of the engineer regarding the necessity of purchasing 150 square yards of paving asphalt for Valleyfield Silt Mills Ltd. property, was read. It was moved by Ald. Miron and seconded by Ald. Gauthier that the President of the Roads Committee should have this work done immediately, the cost to be approximately $150, to be taken from the funds remaining from the total authorized in by-law No. 328.

Report of the engineer in regard to repairs to Police Station No. 2 was referred to the Finance Committee. The entrance to the Station requires being paved with asphalt, the cost to be $80. The Finance Committee will consider this latter question at their next meeting.

The engineer was asked to investigate the request sent in by Antonio Brousseau to construct a window in his shop. A letter from Dame Charles Maheu regarding removal of a pole from in front of her home was read. Ald. Hebert gave some information on the matter, and mentioned that it was the duty of the Bell Telephone Co. to remove the pole. Ald. Cholette saw no reason for removal of the pole in question.

Two New Buildings Under Construction in Huntingdon Town

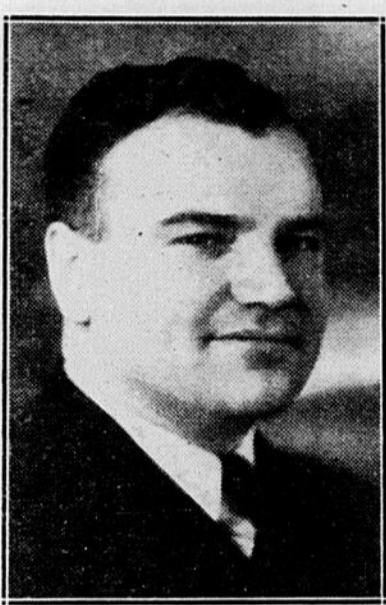

Building operations which have been at a low ebb in Huntingdon for the past few years promise to make a decided pick-up this year with two jobs under way and other prospects being seriously considered. F. H. Hunter has constructed a garage on Prince street and foundation is being built for a residence. W. E. Lefebvre is making extensive repairs to his property on Chateaugay street next to O'Connor Hall, occupied by his son, Austin C. Lefebvre. Ground was broken this week for a new gasoline station on the O'Connor property next to the garage. The McColl-Frontenac company had for some time been contemplating construction of a station in Huntingdon and this year they feel that conditions have improved sufficient to warrant this business extension. Roof repairs to St. Joseph's Church have been completed and painting is still being done.

STATE SENATOR INQUIRY ENDED

Chateaugay Man's Fate Will Be Decided by Conferees on June Nineteenth

Governor H. H. Lehman of New York State has summoned the State Senate to meet in special session at Albany on June 19th to judge the official conduct of Senator Warren T. Thayer, of Chateaugay, N. Y. Republican who charged with improper relations with the Associated Gas and Electric Company. A testimony for and against the Chateaugay legislator ended late Tuesday with the questioning of Federal Judge John R. Knight. The committee immediately went into executive session and decided to ask Governor Lehman to call the Upper House in special session to determine whether Thayer was guilty of official misconduct in killing "detrimental" bills while he was chairman of the Public Service Committee.

The 1076-page record of the testimony, brought out during the eight days of public hearings, will be sent to all members of the Senate immediately so they may study it and be ready to act when they come to Albany.

Judge Knight, a former Republican Senate majority leader, was called by Paul J. McCauley, counsel to the judiciary committee which investigated Thayer's financial transactions with the power company. As majority leader, Knight named Thayer chairman of the Public Service Committee, Jan. 12, 1925. Immediately thereafter Thayer negotiated with the Associated Gas and Electric Company for sale of the controlling stock in the Chateaugay Power Company, in addition to paying Thayer $175 a share for 236 1/2 shares of stock, the Associated agreed to pay him $3,600 a year for six years. The payments were begun in 1925 after Thayer had resigned as active manager of the Chateaugay Power Company.

At the end of the hearing, Committee Chairman William T. Byrne announced that former Senator Clayton R. Lusk, Thayer's counsel, would be the first to address the Senate when it convened. McCauley will speak second. Lusk had sought to make the final address. The committee allotted each counsel three hours for his summation and an additional half hour each for rebuttal. The Senate will then vote on two courses: Vote to remove Senator Thayer, vote to exonerate him. Should Thayer resign, and that possibility is mentioned there would be no need for the Senate session. The Republican publicly charged Thayer's relations with them during the hearing. "I don't think he would have been appointed chairman of the Public Service Committee," said McCauley with reference to his (Thayer's) relations with any public utility.

We May Well Ask What Is Discipline?

W. P. PERCIVAL, M.A., Ph.D., Director of Protestant Education

"Restraint and discipline, examples of virtue and of justice, these are what form the education of the world"—Burke. Discipline has long been closely associated with punishment. In fact, the two words are frequently regarded as interchangeable. The term disciplinary is generally associated with a stern master, one who will punish with little provocation. A disciplinarian of this type may be a parent, a teacher, or any other person having position and power. Discipline has also been closely linked with silence. A well disciplined child has been conceived to be one who never speaks until he is spoken to. Likewise a well disciplined adult is one in which silence almost always reigned. Stillness is also frequently thought of in this connection. In fact a favourite old-fashioned method of securing order was to make the pupils do their work with their arms behind their backs, straight up in their seats with heads backward and chests forward and remain perfectly still until all could hear the click of the pin when the master dramatically let it fall. If this sound could be heard plainly the trick had been successful and order was secured. An alternative method was to have the pupils sit with their arms crossed and their heads on the table. If the desired result could be obtained by either device the strain on the master's nerves was relieved and bedlam could be a loose again until the next occasion arose for a repetition of the operation.

Sometimes severe means were used to bring an unruly boy or class to order. Threats of bodily harm were frequently used to frighten the unruly. The rate masters would show that they were as good as their word. James Minor would be summoned to the front and given a sound thrashing. When the rod was used frequently with a schoolmaster, the rod was used to that of punishment that the seal granted to a grammar school with the letters patent of Edward VI represents a pedagogy in the act of laying it on the back of a child. The emblem of discipline and authority. Such ideas of discipline have relation to taboo and tribal custom. They are not the conceptions of present day thoughtful people. They are merely repressive. They are inclined to be the opposite of that which is intended. Satisfactory conduct can never be established upon a repressive culture. In the case of young children who do not understand should be coerced where their personal safety and that of others is concerned. But once they know the meaning of language they should be taught to make decisions to direct their conduct in a manner which will be in the interest of their future welfare.

External repression as a means of present day thought is not a very long time. Impositions by adults have been inflicted upon children until those who possess a spark have rebelled. These have unrelentingly after Thayer and do as they wish when adults are not looking. Many have done deeds that have brought them into conflict with the law. The discipline born of the young is not a matter of choice. At the young of fifteen and nineteen many of them have entered the criminal class. Recognizing the paucity of the advantages of such offenders there is little wonder that legal authorities to teach that every attitude towards these offenders and that they trace life histories before pronouncing sentence. Not alone the adolescents who are dull but, more must these wholly as full of vigour and energy have fallen into ways when the repressive influences were thrown off.

It is the business of modern homes and schools to instruct young people in self discipline. They must be taught that adequate adjustment to social living the individual derives the highest satisfactions and that those who do not conform to the social life will not reap spiritual, social or physical benefits. This cannot be learned by repressions, threats and punishments. Wielders of the rod are usually hated and despised. Advice from such lips falls on deaf ears. It is not difficult enough for people to listen to friendly counsel, but helpful suggestions from the loved and respected are frequently accepted and acted upon.

Excessive supervision must be avoided by those who would lead others to self discipline. Demanding stillness and long periods of silence is not a very wise plan. It is a trifling and giving a wrong emphasis to life. Parents and teachers who constantly oversee every action of the young lose their function as guides to conduct. It is far preferable to let the child do things which one has duties to perform, some of which are pleasant and some unpleasant, but that honour demands that none shall be shirked and all must be faithfully accomplished for the mutual welfare.

A high type of discipline is to be found where everyone has learned to be intent upon some desirable end. In such a situation, no one can take place in such an atmosphere. A laugh may be heard on occasion, but it will be subdued if the class has caught the proper spirit. The lesson is not a matter of rote. The student will be ready for the rights of others will have been acquired. Freedom will reign, but a freedom that is conditioned by the general weal. Children in such a school move about the classroom to help and receive help.

Mischief is found by the idle, not the busy hands. The instructor that can breathe the breath of life into a subject and make children desire to work at it is the best teacher. The student of nature study or the master who can expound the wonders of science will have attentive listeners that will not be easily bored. Grandpa's adventures never have to think of external discipline.

Not the imposed discipline of an hour or a day is the important need but the production of an internal discipline that will be a rock of ages upon which a person can rely when storm and trials break over his head. Day after day, week in and week out, the tact, patience and self-control of the student must be exercised in the production of well balanced characters. Few children will form any good habit after one experience; nor will they be able to resist temptation if helped until the seventy times seven of which the Master spoke.

On Sunday during the day two Provincial Officers visited the different hotels throughout the city. With two exceptions the proprietors were caught selling liquor. In one instance the same hotel was visited twice and fined twice. Early Sunday morning Mr. Boyer crossing the baseball field in Bellefleur noticed the body of a man lying on the ground. He immediately notified the local police. On arriving at the scene it was evident he was dead and shortly after he was identified as Leon Ory, an employee of the Balmoral Hotel. Coroner Caza was called and ordered the body removed to the morgue, where an inquest was held Monday morning. A verdict of death from syncope was rendered. The deceased was 51 years old and left the hotel shortly after eleven Saturday night.

ADVENTURES OF GRANDPA GOOD

Athelstan Play One of Most Enjoyable Ever Presented in This District

Grandpa's adventures were certainly interesting and it was a pleasure to judge by the loud acclaim with which it was received, the play in the Munro Hall, Athelstan, on Friday night has been one of the most successful ever staged in the district.

The action took place in the reception room of a dancing academy. It concerned the visit to an old friend and his wife (Fred Hutchings and Mrs. Harold McCaffrey) of a boyhood chum, (Audley Anderson), who came to his old pal for help out of a serious situation. The grandfather (James J. Lefebvre) made a substantial allowance to his grandson (Audley Anderson) which had been latterly increased due to his supposed marriage. The grandfather was paying a hurriedly surprise visit to his grandson and the latter had to produce a wife. His friend agreed to loan his wife temporarily, a dancing instructor (Miss Anne Wilson) and a policeman (Allan Mack) became rather friendly when the latter arrives to inform the household that they are engaged to be married. Grandpa's adventures never have to think of external discipline.

Not the imposed discipline of an hour or a day is the important need but the production of an internal discipline that will be a rock of ages upon which a person can rely when storm and trials break over his head. Day after day, week in and week out, the tact, patience and self-control of the student must be exercised in the production of well balanced characters. Few children will form any good habit after one experience; nor will they be able to resist temptation if helped until the seventy times seven of which the Master spoke.

The play was well staged and showed evidence of thorough training. Audley Anderson played his role with veteran ability. To the newcomers in the roles of Grandpa and his wife reunited and the policeman and dancing instructor, having a side laugh affair the play closes. The comedy throughout is supplied by the Danish maid.

The event was under the auspices of the Athelstan United Church W.A. and W.M.S. The hall was taxed to its capacity and all asked to help for the presentation. Entertainment was given by the French brothers with Mrs. Reese, accompanist.

St. Louis Man Died In Field

Coroner Decided That R. Archambault Death Was Not Accidental

A report was current here Tuesday to the effect that a man had been accidentally killed at St. Louis on Monday afternoon. Information was secured Tuesday night that the man had died a natural death. Robert Archambault, 36, who resides about two miles west of St. Louis of Gonzague village went out to the field about two o'clock Monday afternoon to do some harrowing. At supper time he did not come home and when they went to call him noticed the horses wandering about the field. Members of the family went to the scene and found the young man dead, his body lying across the harrow. Medical aid was summoned and the Coroner notified. There were wounds where he fell on the harrow but Dr. O. E. Caza said that in his judgment these were not sufficient to cause his death. He suffered from a heart condition and it is surmised that he dropped dead as he stooped to hitch the horses to the harrow. Archambault is unmarried and lived with his mother and family.

Fish And Game Club Definitely Organized

Ninety Boys In St. Joseph's Choir Heard on Sunday

A boys' choir of ninety voices assisted by their teachers and the men's choir sang the Mass of the Angels at St. Joseph's Church on Sunday. This special musical program was carried out in honour of Pentecost Day. During the winter and spring months the boys were trained by Prof. Arthur Brassard of Montreal, choir director when the Church of the Ascension, Westmount. Their singing on Sunday was a revelation and keenly showed what could be accomplished in a short time by a good director. Prof. Brassard is now giving private lessons at the Chateau every Thursday and has a number of pupils. At the conclusion of the series of lessons to the boys of the Chateau, Prof. Brassard and a few of the adult choir members congratulated and extended thanks to the Professor for the valuable services which he rendered St. Joseph's Parish.

Approximately Four Hundred Persons Attended Meeting Called to Hear Talks by Provincial Officials

Films Screened

County Association Already Has Paid up List of Sixty Members

The meeting in connection with the organization of a fish and game protection association took place in the O'Connor Hall on Thursday evening, July 12th adults and twice as many children were present. The organization executive appointed at recent meetings had arranged with representatives from the Province of Quebec Fish and Game Protective Association to be present. The officials of the organization who came to Huntingdon from Montreal were the President Col. H. A. Stewart, the secretary E. A. Carter, Messrs. Ivers, Crepin and Dr. Montpetit. Through the courtesy of the C.N.R. a number of beautiful scenic films were screened showing fishing scenes in the Niagara and Jasper Park regions. At the conclusion of the screening of the movies, President Oney permitted the children to return home, whilst the business meeting ensued. During the early part of the evening Dr. Douglas and orchestra provided instrumental music which was indeed enjoyed by all.

Compton and Mayoh refereed.

The local branch in no way would contribute money to the Provincial Association, but if the local branch got into financial difficulties they in turn would want to know of it, and arrange to have the accounts of indebtedness liquidated. Being affiliated with the Provincial Association would also save the cost of incorporation fees and charter expenses.

Frank Cott Band Playing Ten-Day Engagement Here

Frank Cott and his eight-piece band are playing a two weeks' engagement at the Huntingdon Chateau. This orchestra has of late been playing at the Edgewater Beach Inn, Pointe Claire. Following their short engagement here they will go for the summer season to the famous Lucerne resort. Frank has a snappy musical repertoire and one which is equally at ease with classics as with modern dance music. Concert music is played during the evening dinner hour and on Sundays. One of the members of the orchestra has a cello valued at $5,000 which had been formerly used by his father in the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra.

REPORTS FRUIT CROP DAMAGES

Conditions in This District Declared Better Than Elsewhere in Province

Conflicting reports on the damage to fruit crops by the severity of last winter have been given from five apple-growing districts of the province. Growers of Chateaugay, Rouement and Abbotsford report "tremendous damage" to orchards in their vicinity, some of the estimates being that this year's crop would be down 50 per cent from the 1933 figure. Oka and Hemmingford, on the other hand, state that the damage had not been exceptional. Charles E. Petch of Hemmingford, who has an orchard of about 3,000 trees, has expressed the opinion that farmers in other districts might be exaggerating their losses, and claimed that many trees were being cut down as "dead" which would recover if left alone until the warm weather advances. In his own orchards, said Mr. Petch, no trees had been utterly destroyed although the damage to buds would affect the crop of the current year; for this district generally he estimated that only one per cent of the trees had been killed. Despite Mr. Petch's optimism, however, fruit growers in other districts are very definite in their reports that the unusual frosts of last winter have caused tremendous damage. Professor T. G. Bunting, Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, said that fruit-growing areas all over Canada had been seriously affected.

Graphic Portrait Given in Stevens Price Spread Hearings on Aspects of Our Economic Life

The Central Bank Weekly Review Ottawa Affairs Written For Gleaser By Wilfred Eggleston

A graphic portrait of the present unequal combat between the primary producer and some of the other contestants in our economic life was dashed off by Major W. W. Kennedy, Conservative member for Winnipeg, in the middle of one of the Stevens price-spread hearings last week. The farmer, he said, was a mob armed with scythes and clubs' attempt to do battle with a highly mechanized force equipped with machine guns. Major Kennedy had been sitting there at the committee listening to these harrowing tales of farmer destitution and subjugation, until he couldn't stand this bitter analogy.

What's the remedy? the members of the committee, other parliamentarians, economists and reformers, for this goose ought to be cut. Give the tobacco growers the power and the right to form a 100 per cent growers' pool. Then they could take turkey to the Imperial Tobacco company or anyone else. If the tobacco companies wanted to buy for 14 or 16 cents a pound, they could say: "No, this stuff costs us 25 cents a pound minimum to produce, and we won't move a pound for less."

Such is the picture these people have of the new scheme of things when Mr. Weir's bill comes into force, and marketing schemes flourish in this tobacco industry. "Ah, but," you interrupt, "What's to stop the tobacco companies importing their needs?" "The tariff," say these members. The Marketing Board, working in conjunction with the tobacco growers, could place a virtual embargo on raw leaf or finished tobacco until the raw was over. One might go further, and ask, feebly, "What about the consumer?" But without going any further, it is clear that one way to fight monopoly would be with monopoly, and the devil take the hindmost. Well, possibly that's the solution. Many members are sure it is, and they are not all on one side of the House. After hearing what some of the big growers and monopolies have done to the stockman, the rancher and the farmer, it is only human nature to think that what's sauce for the goose ought also to be sauce for the gander. It's odd how inconsistent our business practices come to be, though, one must mention in passing. A few

This being the largest number taken in a raid in the city since 1928. The Fort Covington Choral Society concert last night, Tuesday, came to a dramatic close when one of the members of the musical troupe dropped dead on the stage.

The hall was filled and the audience was enjoying the numbers. It was the fourth number on the programme and as Mrs. Edward Martin, a talented musician, walked onto the stage to play a duet, she dropped dead. She was sixty-seven years of age. Mrs. Martin was the daughter of the late Dr. Wyatt of Fort Covington and has been staying with her aunt, Mrs. Abe Creighton. Her home is at Pond-du-Lac, Wisconsin. Empire Day Empire Day—what does it signify? Is it just a day, a holiday, the birthday of the late Queen Victoria, or does it not mean more than that? Does it not mean a day set aside to say "Rule Britannia—Britons never, never, never shall be slaves."

Empire Day is not a mere local holiday, not a holiday to be marked by any particular sect or nationality. It is not a day that any one living in Canada can say, this is your holiday; inferring that it means naught to them, and they should continue with their daily labours. It is quite true that Empire Day was first regarded as the birthday of the late Queen Victoria who reigned over the British Empire from 1837 to 1901. She was indeed a remarkable Queen and as a symbol of fidelity to her the whole of the British realm set aside this one day of the 365 to mark her birthday, and do honor to her. Her son, King Edward the VII, known as "The Peaceful," acknowledged the greatness of his revered mother and late Queen. King Edward knew well that the nation as a whole appreciated the keenness and greatness of the late Queen therefore it was her birthday that was continued to be celebrated to mark a day of respect and loyalty to the British Crown under whose regime we have so much to be thankful for, and be proud of the fact that we form a portion of the Empire.

The 24th of May has been enshrined as one of the legal holidays of the whole Empire. It is known today as "Empire Day" and not "Victoria Day." If the Empire sees fit that we who live here have a right to live in peace within the realm, it is but fit we should deem it right to acknowledge this privilege by observing "Empire Day" holiday. It is quite true certain lines of business must continue to be directed, but at the same time it is not necessary for everyone to open up his place of business for the sake of a paltry dollar, or so to speak, to keep even with the competitors. It is worth far more to any business man to know that he is living and working in a British country than to think he might be living in another land where tyranny rules. "Empire Day" in many respects might well be regarded as a day of thanksgiving, thanks to British Empire that our land is a land of peace and order. Here, man is privileged to worship as he wishes, if he is industrious and uses good sense judgment he will find nature and providence so kind to him that he is able to enjoy many of the luxuries of this age. Whilst we in the British Empire enjoy such liberties and privileges the same cannot be said of the populace in Germany, Russia, China, Japan, etc. So many countries are in a state of unrest that today we might well take a glimpse of what is going on in the world, and then express our thanks that we constitute a portion of the British Empire. A country is only what its people make it, and if we are negligent about honoring our Country the day will not be far off when we become a disorganized lot of folks. Let us now all honor our Empire by faithfully observing the 24th of May.

Bridge Dreams in Time Come True The dreams of the dreamer sometimes come true. His dreams may prompt him, when in his conscious state of mind, to direct his efforts towards achieving that about which he dreamed. Cornwall, the popular industrial centre of Eastern Canada, has a number of dreamers and men with alert minds in their conscious hours. The citizens of Cornwall have long figured that the N. Y. C. bridge crossing the St. Lawrence from Nyando to Cornwall should be a vehicle bridge as well as a means of a railway crossing.

As this bridge was the property of the New York Central railway, it was quite natural that they would not strain a point to aid vehicle traffic that was taking the bread and butter right out of the mouth of the railway systems. It was no wonder the railway held off from converting their bridge to such a traffic, yet when the railways appreciated that the sooner or later a vehicle bridge would be built near Cornwall, the N. Y. C. were big enough to admit their position and convert their bridge into one of dual purpose. The railway has certainly taken the proper attitude, for now this bridge will yield a financial return upon the investment, otherwise it was a big expense to the railway to maintain for the puffing bit of trade the railways receive today in comparison with years ago.

It was the alert brains of the men of Cornwall who conceived the idea of erecting a separate vehicle bridge extending from below Cornwall to St. Regis. This would indeed have been a handier bridge for those of us living in Huntingdon, for such a bridge would have landed in Quebec province in place of in New York State. As it is, a vehicle crossing has been arranged over the New York Central bridge from Nyando, N.Y., to Cornwall, Ont. A dream of the early autoists has at last come true for this bridge was opened to traffic last week. Its official opening is to take place on June 30th the first day of Cornwall's centennial celebration, when the Governor-General of Canada will officiate.

To those who drive autos or trucks to Montreal, they have long dreamed and visioned the day when a short cut from Caughnawaga to Montreal would be made possible through spanning the river with a vehicle bridge. The C.P.R., unlike the N.Y.C., were unable to provide a vehicle transportation roadway on the Lachine bridge; but within this district resides the Minister of Lands and Forests, the Hon. Honoré Mercier. Mr. Mercier had visions of a separate bridge for vehicles so that the farmers of his constituency might get to the metropolis of Canada to market the produce of their truck gardens. Today this Caughnawaga-Ville LaSalle bridge is erected and about to be put into actual use. The official opening will take place on July 1st or 2nd.

Two bridge dreams have come true in 1934. The big bridge dream in Valleyfield is that in not too many years a crossing of the St. Lawrence will be made possible upon the chainwork of dams, for the water diversion works of the Beauharnois Power Corporation. These dams connect one island with another, similar to the Nyando-Cornwall bridges. These islands when all connected by dams will mean that a comparatively narrow stretch of water would have to be spanned with a steel structure and so provide another vehicle bridge across the St. Lawrence River. The Beauharnois Power Corporation project calls for the building of these dams each year, and that by 1937 all will be built but the final link. If by that date the Power Company requires the entire flow of the St. Lawrence river it is highly probable the company would acquire the right to dam this final stretch of water.

Today, we may say this is but a dream, but how many people thought the same of Nyando-Cornwall and the Caughnawaga-Ville LaSalle bridges only a few years ago.

When Money Biting off more than one can chew Is No Object has been a popular pastime not only with individuals but with governments as well. How many men built luxurious not to say palatial homes in the hey-day of prosperity with little or no thought given to the onerous obligations this would entail, especially in the event that business conditions should suddenly shift into reverse. Borrowing may be legitimate but it also implies ensuing responsibilities, such as interest payments and capital refunds—this is the point which seems to have escaped the attention of many people—the day of reckoning which inevitably follows, as the night follows the day.

In Ontario, a group headed by the late Sir Adam Beck decided the province should be "blessed"—no doubt with the implication that the quantity of taxes is a matter of secondary importance—that the taxpayer has been placed on this earth to pay for some demagogues pet scheme—it was consequently decided that the people should be "blessed with public ownership." Unlike other organizations which consider it good business ethics to learn to walk before they can run; the Hydro magnates in their sapient deliberations decided that walking was too slow and tedious a process so they proceeded forthwith to spend money in a lavish and reckless manner. Customers were served at less than cost for many years, a procedure which manifestly endeared the Hydro to the hearts of the people—cheap electricity of course, but what became of the losses incurred? They were obviously being charged up to the people with the result that today we find (according to the most recent Year Book) that the bonded debt of Ontario amounts to $500,000,000 whilst that of Quebec is only $92,000,000. Like a great many others, the Hydro executives probably thought that prosperity was a permanent feature so they built right and left, bought power sites, entered into contracts for the purchase of power, they even gave away free of charge, quantities of water heaters, in a frantic effort to increase consumption of current. But the fact remains that all these expenditures have increased the per capita debt in Ontario to a much larger extent than that of Quebec. Consequently from the point of view of dollars and cents which of the two is better off! The problem which interests us all, is not particularly "how much am I paying for electricity" but rather "how much is it costing me to live." Granting that electric service is cheaper in a certain place than it is in another, but if on the other hand taxes in the one locality are so much higher that they more than offset the lower rate—then where is the advantage of "cheaper" electricity? If it costs a business firm more money than the order is worth, then that order was hardly worth seeking—this sort of business does not pay anyone.

Another fact which should not be lost sight of, is that the Hydro contributes nothing towards the upkeep of the country—it pays no taxes. The privately owned companies on the other hand pay their full share of the costs of administering the affairs of the nation. What would Hydro rates become if this government undertaking were burdened with taxes! And what would the proponents of public ownership in Quebec have to say about rates if the private companies were relieved of taxes? The savings effected in this way would have its repercussions in further rate decreases equivalent to the sums we actually disburse in taxes.

As a well known statesman once said "the people of Ontario have decided in favor of public ownership—that is their affair—but we in Quebec believe and know that private ownership, properly regulated is more equitable and functions in the interests of the majority." Let us bear in mind one very important point which is the following: If public ownership became a fait accompli, the government would be forced to increase taxes in order to compensate for the losses which the public treasury would sustain through the disappearance of the private companies.

Murder On Most of our highways are the scene of our highways each year of pitiful and tragic accidents. Here and there one finds two or more cars overturned, smashed beyond recognition, a blood smeared bit of roadway, bruised or tearful people and the usual crowd of gaping spectators. Presently is heard the sound of a gong and in the distance the awesome ambulance, doctors and nurses with grave means going about their duties of patching up the unfortunate victims. Someone is badly hurt, someone will never return home, a few minutes previously, had been in good health. At the inquest the result is often summed up in a curt statement: "Excessive speed or tried to pass the other car on a curve or hill—verdict of accidental death is hereby rendered."

Surely the thought of the great sorrow which such accidents cause, the instinct of self preservation ought to be sufficient to make the motorist exercise at all times, the greatest care and prudence. At this season of the year thousands of people whose cars had probably been laid up during the winter months, are driving once more, consequently this implies that the chances of accidents are greatly multiplied. Such being the case, it is imperative that motorists be more careful. It is useless to content oneself with saying: "I will do this and that" for mere resolutions are not sufficient unless they are put into practice.

It is of the utmost importance that the car be inspected and gone over by a reputable mechanic. Brakes and steering gears should always be in the best of condition and no less important are the tires upon which depend the safety of many lives. Worn out tires will cause skidding and furthermore they are apt to blow out, without the least bit of warning thus rendering the car unmanageable. In the second place, one should drive at a moderate rate of speed, and never attempt to pass other cars when one's vision is obstructed. For example passing on a hill or curve is a highly dangerous practice and should be religiously avoided. Cutting in on a line of a traffic is another sure way of inviting trouble. Attempting to beat the train at a crossing has never proved a healthy pastime nor is it conducive to longevity. There are stop signs at these railroad crossings and one is supposed to observe the rules of the road or take the consequences. Then there are those who fairly boil at the sight of a traffic officer—the one man whose presence on the road has probably saved more lives than one realizes. Let us respect this guardian of the law—he has been given the task of running down the dangerous drivers—a thankless and hazardous calling under any circumstances and one which should commend itself to all right thinking citizens.

Let us do our bit in quelling riotous motorists. We can do that by being courteous, sensible and by observing not only the letter but the spirit of the law. Until schools close, motorists should be particularly cautious when approaching school zones—Children are heedless, they do not know danger, let us therefore protect them by avoiding all possibility of accidents. Can we not all co-operate in promoting safe driving—in making it a pleasure instead of a dread—in reducing the number of accidents?

Waits Fifty Years

The constancy of a woman, now over eighty years of age, who has waited for 50 years for the return of her lover, was revealed by a radio message from Stockholm asking for news of the whereabouts of a sea captain or of any of his relatives. Behind the wireless message is the story of the woman who waited. At 26 she was betrothed to a sea captain in 1884. Their friendship lasted until 1884, when the man left Sweden, leaving behind him the girl who waited for his return. The captain never came back, and now his old sweetheart, ill, and about to undergo an operation, wonders if he or his family might not be in want. She has, therefore, made a will in his favor, and directed that search should be made for him. The long years of silence and separation are forgotten. All she can think of is whether her betrothed is in want. "We were so happy during those four years," she says. "I cannot bear to think that he is suffering poverty. There is a little legacy coming to me and I want him to have it when I am gone."

Dog Falls 700 Feet and Lives

After falling 700 feet over the side of the Spiekgogel in the Austrian Alps, a Pomeranian waited 30 hours in the cold and snow until he was rescued. He was with a party of skiers who, reported his loss when they reached a shelter hut at night. Next morning the hut owner was lowered over the cliff, but the rope was too short. After an all-day search for a longer rope a man was again let down, and rescued the dog. All the time they were being hauled up the animal gratefully licked the face and hands of his rescuer. The pet was unharmed.

Empts Suicide

Forty-four suicides in 22 months is the grim record of the great harbor which spans the harbor of Sydney, Australia. Since it was opened in 1932, this bridge, with its drop of 185 feet to the water, has exerted a terrible fascination upon prospective suicides. One of the most pathetic of recent cases was that of Jeremiah Michael Sullivan, an unemployed ex-serviceman, aged 67, who left behind a note saying: "I am leaving unceremoniously, because I have decided to greet my friends through a barred enclosure at a mental hospital."

Looust Walls for Argentina

Argentina has ordered hundreds of miles of very smooth galvanized iron sheeting to be used in building walls across the country to stop invading locusts. The sheeting will cost $2,500,000 and construction expense will be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Government plans to fight the locust when he is a crawler before his wings develop. It is then that he begins his devastating march. A polished wall of iron sheeting will prove too smooth to climb, and if the locusts crawl along the barrier they eventually will land in a trap. Men will be stationed there with rakes to get the unwelcome visitors into large pits, where they will be destroyed.

Fight in Dark

Thousands of naked men fought for emblems of good luck during the age-old "nude" festival at the Temple of Kwannon at Saïdaiji, Japan last month. It was full moon, and 50,000 pilgrims were assembled. At 2 a.m. the drums throbbed. All lights went out, and the chief priest flung two little wands—symbols of good luck—into the thick of the crowd. For an hour, in pitch darkness, the thousands of naked pilgrims struggled. Then triumphant shouts told the crowd two men had gained the coveted tokens. The festival was at an end.

Women Duped

Housewives in the suburbs of Seattle are victims of a new kind of confidence trick which has just been put into practice. Dressed as a tradesman's messenger a smiling young man calls at a house, says that he has just delivered some goods at a neighbour's house, but that the neighbor has not sufficient change. She wants to know if you can oblige her with a small loan," says the bogus messenger. If the trick works that is the last seen of the messenger and the loan.

Song Fits Plight

Driving a little too fast for safety, Joseph Pittis, New Philadelphia, O., lost control of his car, which overturned in a ditch. More shaken than hurt, Pittis crawled out of the wreckage congratulating himself on his narrow escape, when he caught the strains of music from the radio set in his car, still in operation. Someone was singing the song, "I'll Be Glad When You're Dead, You Rascal You."

Lucky Delay

The parish priest at Rolano, a little village on the slopes of Mount Adlesole, Italy, was late for Mass. The congregation stood outside, for the church was locked, then at last the priest arrived, put the key in the lock and turned it. Just at that moment the roof, weighed down by an accumulation of snow, fell in with a terrific crash.

Record for Fathers

Wesley Stewart, 67, Selkirk, Ontario, became a father, grandfather and great-grandfather all in less than a year's time. His great-grandchild, Louis Brooks, is older than his own child, Mildred Stewart, by six weeks. A great-grandchild older than his great-grandfather is rare enough to receive special mention.

Die Same Day

It turned out that the marriage vow, "Until death do us part," meant something in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Weirman, near Youngstown, Ohio. Both died on the same day last month, the husband, aged 84, at 10 a.m., and his wife, 81, at 9:30 p.m. They had been married 56 years.

Fire Test for Uncle

Four year old Howard Styles was convinced his uncle, Captain John Wynn, of the Evanston, Ill., fire department, was the best fireman in the world and did not hesitate to tell everybody about it. John Stevens, his playmate, was inclined to doubt Howard's word and a heated argument followed. "I'll show you that my Uncle John is the best fireman in the world," Howard exclaimed and took John upstairs, where he touched a lighted match to the curtains in a bedroom, then called his Uncle John to turn in a fire alarm. His uncle was there in a jiffy with the fire department equipment and the blaze was put out in a very prompt and convincing manner. What happened to young Howard after the fire was extinguished is another story.

Woman Sexton for 50 Years

Miss Jane Blake claims to have established a record in serving as sexton and parish clerk in Emery Down, England, for 50 years. She and her father, who lived to be 92, had occupied these positions ever since the church was opened. Because they had seen six clergymen fill the vicarate, her church work holds her greatest interest, and although she is 74 she goes to church every Sunday and feast day to toll the bell. "I don't think that the young people of today are any worse than we were because they don't attend church on Sunday," she said, "but I should like to see more youngsters attending divine service."

Pulls Extra Tooth

Before Mrs. Helen Garrett, of Roebing, N.J., got into the dentist chair of Dr. William Mallas, she showed him the three teeth she wanted pulled. Later, while she was under the anesthetic, the dentist pulled a fourth tooth he thought should come out. Now Mrs. Garrett charges the pulling of this fourth tooth, unauthorized by her, started an infection which left her an invalid. She has sued the dentist for $65,000 damages and her husband asked $20,000 for loss of his wife's services. There is no money in dentistry at that rate.

Money in Slogans

Two years ago, Mrs. Jane Christian, wife of an Omaha accountant, won a slogan-writing contest. This whetted her appetite and she began entering all similar contests she read or heard about. In these two years she has won 22 such prizes, including three automobiles within three months by writing 128 words. Other winnings were a grandfather's clock with radio enclosed, an electric food mixer, waffle iron, percolator and other useful household equipment. Several hundred dollars in $25, $10 and $5 cash awards have come her way because of her facility in the use of words. Altogether she has won $3,000 in cash.

Tour by Buggy

Not having a car did not keep Mr. and Mrs. Albert Martz, Topeka, Kan., from visiting relatives in eastern states they had not seen in years. They made the trip by horse and buggy, taking plenty of time. At Hamilton, Ohio, they visited a sister of Mrs. Martz she had not seen in 13 years. In Cincinnati, they visited Mrs. Martz's father whom she had not seen in 23 years. At that point they had driven 1,000 miles. Now they are in Pennsylvania visiting other relatives.

Steamer Sold for $10

The wreck of the steamer, Oakford, which was stranded off the Island of Texel, near Amsterdam, Holland, on January 18, with the loss of 10 lives, has been sold for $10. After refusing the offer of a Dutch lifeboat, to take them ashore, the captain and nine members of the crew attempted to leave in their own boat, which was swamped.

Tall Thermometer on Way

Construction of a colossal thermometer in Paris has been started and shortly its 325 feet of temperatures will be flashing throughout the day. It will be controlled by a small master thermometer, as the huge Eiffel clock is controlled by a diminutive edition of itself. The entire thermometer will be 984 feet high, only a foot lower than the Eiffel Tower.

Expensive Cure

Living in a Seattle hotel, Mrs. Catherine Pfeinger, a widow, finally discovered the cause of her unhappiness. She had too much money. Having her wealth turned over to her in the form of thousand-dollar bills, she burned 15 of them in her hotel room and now declares she is happy once more, all her troubles and sorrows forgotten.

Woman, 102, Never on Train

Mrs. Ned McHugh, who died recently in Tullyhanna, Ireland, at the age of 102, remembered the potato famine and the night of the "Big Wind," which devastated many areas in the country. She never had travelled by train or automobile. A teetotaler, she ascribed her longevity to moderation in everything and freedom from sorrow.

Culture Mania

A good public library within reach has proven a boon to a Billings, Mont., man, aged 70, who for 2 1/2 years, Mrs. Henry E. Garber, Billings' librarian, reports during these 30 months this man has taken out and read 2,000 books by actual count, an average of more than two a day. That did not leave him much time to look for work.

Ready for Twins

Getting ready for the stork's visit, Mr. and Mrs. James Barnes, living on a ranch near Albion, Neb., ordered a baby mattress from Omaha. The company made a mistake and shipped two. A few days later came a message from Barnes saying they would keep both mattresses. The stork had brought twins.

Who Pays Taxes? A statistician has estimated that if you smoke a day you pay the government $22 a year in taxes.

Now this computation is interesting in itself, but its real pertinency derives from the understanding it affords of the whole tax structure.

Last year the Treasury received revenue, to pick out a few items at random from club dues, theatre admissions, matches, tires and inner tubes, toilet preparations, articles made of fur, jewelry, watches, clocks, opera and field glasses, etc.

Back in 1920, Sidney Smith wrote of the schoolboy who whipped his taxed top, of the youth who managed his taxed horse with a taxed bridle on a taxed road, and the dying Englishman pouring medicine which had paid 7 per cent into a spoon that had paid 15 per cent.

And yet you'll continue to hear: "The tax burden has nothing to do with me."

Without Honest Guidance Naught Shall Prevail

CONFIDENCE! Trust! An implicit reliance in the honesty and integrity of a public government set up by the popular vote is necessary if we are to maintain the democracy of government by the people for the people.

Have we got that in Canada? Do we accord to our rulers our whole confidence?

What effort has been made to restore confidence in the Department of Finance since the Sugar Steal? It is but a year ago since a heavy tax of 50 per cent was placed on sugar, a tax of $40 a ton.

But when the morning of that day when the tax was imposed the opening hour of ten o'clock there was not an ounce of sugar in factory or warehouse.

Trucks had emptied every sugar warehouse in Canada and spirited away the last bag of granulated or brown sugar. Not enough left to make a stick of candy.

Has any explanation ever been offered to the people? Not an x. Those awful Conservatives! Wait a minute, children. Wait a moment.

Impunity does not lie with any one party. A third party is the outward sign of rotteness in the State of Denmark, as was a two-party government is concerned.

Hark back to the days of the transition in the liquor trade, to the nights when every liquor warehouse in Montreal was feeding and filling trucks at the back door when new regulations were being pasted on the front door.

Those were the happy days for the man who could afford a big deep private cellar. Were there any leaks to show the wide one where the stream would flow? The sugar leak was by comparison to the hard liquor leaks as molasses in January to boiling sap. Bad cess to it!

These villains may attack our sound banking system and threaten our industrial and mercantile structure, but the Canada Senate got two new Senators from the purloiners of the emptied warehouses and distilleries in these ancient narrow thoroughfares in Montreal from whence we get our sugar, our raisins and all the concoctions that go to awaken us from the deep slumber of rabid partisanship.

These thoughts come to me as I sit by the window at Westmount Park, and I offer them to you in the hope that you will in future choose the man and his lifelong principles, and not even be befooled by a man who builds a church hall on the proceeds from the crackling coal you burn in your inglenook.

An Unsigned Letter

UNSIGNED letters are the bane of a publisher's existence. No matter how great the desire to give publicity to all views received, the line must be drawn at most anonymous missives. But here is one which appeared in the Kiwanis Magazine which can be regarded as an exception to the rule, for the timely inspiration it contains. It reads:

"Yesterday morning I saw a boy, a very ordinary and quite ragged boy, down on his knees alongside a dog, on his knees alongside a dog. He was sobbing and crying. Alongside the boy was the limp remains of a big white dog. The picture threw me off my stride for the entire day. Throwing me off my stride is not important, but it is not pleasant to recall that a boy's heart had been broken.

"Of course the boy will get over it, and there are lots of dogs, but the older I grow the more I realize that it is not a little thing to break a boy's heart, even temporarily. I am a grown man and in 1926 I lost a pointer. Whenever I think of Mickey and his great brown eyes, my own eyes fill up. They are doing it, and I wouldn't be a damned bit ashamed if there were ninety-seven million people watching me.

"A lot of dog killings are avoidable. Of course, some cannot be avoided, but a lot of them can. I have driven nearly forty thousand miles a year for some years, and I have never hit a dog. At the expense of a couple of bent fenders and maybe a few feet of brake lining, I have always avoided hitting them. They respond to the tooting of a horn very well, and I have slept better because I have no broken-hearted boy on my conscience.

"If I were a writing man and had a page or two to fill with editorials, I would write an editorial about driving so as to avoid hitting dogs. If you had been with me you would have written two editorials. I know what you must think about dogs and boys' hearts.

"Why don't you write an editorial?" The editor of the Kiwanis Magazine didn't write an editorial. He just published a letter. That was editorial enough.

Freedom of Speech

IN the last year or two there has been an unusual amount of talk about the right of free speech. And there has been an unusual amount of free speech. Some of the speech has been so free that it has taken away a lot of rights from honest people. Along with the talk about freedom of speech there has been an equal amount of crying for freedom of the press. Reading some journals there seems to be no question of the freedom of the press. In recent years Canada has seen an unusual number of journals published in this Dominion with countless innocent and inoffensive people slandered and abused. With all the loose talk all too common these days in certain quarters and with so many journals apparently little more or less than blackmailing sheets, it seems impertinent and offensive to have so much cry for free speech and the freedom of the press. Freedom of speech and freedom of the press are precious tokens of liberty won at much cost in the years that are gone. But listening to so much that is spoken and reading so much that is published, it is difficult to understand how some people and some newspapers can muster the audacity to ask for more liberty.

The principle of free speech and the safeguard of a free press have long been accepted by the people in general as the inalienable rights of British people. And it must be said that the only danger of the loss of freedom of speech or the freedom of the press comes from those who shamefully abuse these privileges. When license parades under the name of liberty, freedom is truly endangered. There are rights that are even greater than freedom of speech or freedom of the press. There is for instance the right of the individual to be free from shameless slander and wanton malice. Anyone who will make a catalogue of the recent instances where so-called freedom of speech and freedom of the press have brought suffering and sorrow to innocent people—men and women and even children—who were with-threatened through their own abuse. —Porcupine Advance

Prices That Are Right The question as to what are right prices dates back many centuries. No doubt under the shadow of the pyramids of Egypt the seller and the buyer argued often on whether the price tag told a lie. In different periods men have had different ways of arriving at what they considered right prices. It is held that previous to the latter part of the nineteenth century the moral side of his question was given more consideration that it receives today when prices are regarded, perhaps, too much of an economic question.

We should fare ill, however, if so large an element as the moral element is felt to be, were left out of consideration. The economist may look on our social order as an industrial mechanism, but he will have difficulty in persuading the vast majority of our citizens that there is not a right and wrong even in matters that pertain to price. Popular opinion is likely to agree with that of an expert who recently defined right prices as "prices which will make goods move." The mere possession of a commodity does not always give the possessor the right to charge whatever he pleases. He may charge all the traffic will bear, but the public has of late taken a somewhat wholesome interest in seeing to it that the traffic isn't made to bear too much. It has been known to do its buying in places where the traffic is made to bear a little less.

As the public becomes more and more exacting in its demands that prices shall be right, it becomes more and more the problem of the seller to convince the buyer of the reasonableness of his prices. As long as we can maintain flexible and competitive markets free from artificial control, it will be increasingly difficult for the seller to push goods at any but the right prices. —Kingston Whig-Standard

They were winners over Grade IX and X and won by default from Grade XI who with their examination work were unable to undertake a debate at the present time. As a reward for their efforts their teacher, Mrs. Lindsay entertained the members of the winning teams to a sight-seeing tour of Montreal on Saturday last. Those who went on the trip were Penelope Bradshaw, Bernice Todd, Donald McClintock, Burton Cairns, Lyman Roberts and Melvin Graham, also members of the teams were unable to accompany their companions on this enjoyable tour.

Minstrel Show

Augurs Success

organizing Minstrel Shows of a high order. This minstrel show is not made up of not a slash, but every number is one of melody, harmony and clever wit. Miss Sellar and Mr. Montie are both willing to admit that as far as they can see the troupe are well trained and there will be no dull moments for the audience.

For two hours or better the programme will be run through with snap.

The programme will include choruses in which there are 23 male voices, viz: Messrs. George Dixon, Stanley Popek, Fred Langevin, J. H. Demers, Dr. A. R. Douglas, J. B. MacMillan, P. J. Lefebvre, James Lefebvre, C. W. McClatchie, Charles Reid, A. H. West, P. T. Baldwin, G. C. Stark, A. Hey, Dr. J. E. Caza, W. E. S. McNair, P. J. Montie, Gordon Ferry, Charles Hyde, S. Rudcock, Alex. Tomlinson, Stanley Hampson and the Interlocutor who is E. C. Martin.

The endmen will be Messrs. F. C. Montie, Alex. Tomlinson, W. E. S. McNair and Stanley Popek. A Minstrel show without an extra would just be missing, so Mush and Puke and their lively music will present an exhilarating act. The principals being Sanford McNair and Paul Baldwin.

The proceeds from this Big Minstrel Show will be devoted towards defraying the debt of the Curling Rink. The rink is a distinct asset to the community, so that is just one more reason why the Minstrel Show should be doubly well patronized. The curlers have always been noted for giving good value for the money asked, for any entertainment they sponsor, and this Minstrel Show is no exception. The admission fee is to be 50c and when one considers what training and efforts have been put forth to make this, the outstanding show for years past, and years to come, it seems a very reasonable charge to make.

After the Minstrel Show the Frank Cott Orchestra from the Chateau will provide music for a dance in the hall. For this dance the admission fee is to be the low figure of 25c per person. The hall will undoubtedly be well crowded.

Obituary

The late Mrs. Antoine Castell
Once more Dewittville is called upon to mourn the passing of a much loved and respected citizen in the person of Mrs. Antoine Castell. Mrs. Castell who was formerly Miss Meline Monique was a daughter of the late David Monique and his wife Miss Gratton.

Mrs. Castell was a very ambitious and industrious woman. She was a sincere friend to those in trouble and was always ready to help anyone in need. There are few homes in Dewittville where Mrs. Castell was not a familiar figure. Having no family of her own she brought up her brothers, Nelson, who lived here all through his schooling and until the Dewittville factory burned. She has been a great sufferer throughout the greater part of the winter, but never complained and always talked to those who came to see her of the time when she would be up and able to help again. She was cared for by her brother, Mr. Frank Monique and her niece, Miss Tena Monique.

Besides her neighbours and two brothers, Frank of Montreal and Peter of Michigan, and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral service was Saturday morning in St. Joseph's Church, Huntingdon, and interment in the Roman Catholic cemetery.

RUSSIA AND ITS CONDITION

Mrs. Frank Dickie Who Lived There Several Years Relates Experiences

On Friday afternoon, May 18th in St. Andrew's Hall, Chateaugay Basin, an address was given by Mrs. Frank E. Dickie on "Russia." Having lived in Russia for several years very recently, the speaker was able to give her information first hand, illustrating her subject by many personal incidents.

On Friday afternoon, May 18th in St. Andrew's Hall, Chateaugay Basin, an address was given by Mrs. Frank E. Dickie on "Russia." Having lived in Russia for several years very recently, the speaker was able to give her information first hand, illustrating her subject by many personal incidents.

Starting with pre-war Russia Mrs. Dickie described conditions as they were then, telling mostly of the finery and mansions of the nobility, then the war, and the downfall of aristocracy. The speaker stated that it was a very common occurrence, at that time, for many families to live in the same house and probably one room alone would be allotted to each, one of the families very often being the past owners of the mansion and were now jeered at by the common people who shared the building. In speaking of conditions at present, Mrs. Dickie told of how very systematic everything is and things are arranged for the people to the very finest point. Food, for instance—each person is allowed a certain amount per day and no more. There is positively no buying-in of supplies for several days, or a week, but a daily trip must be made to the market and stores. Clothing is made for service and warmth, not style and the average Russian woman cares very little for her appearance. The Russians are very earnest readers and public libraries are installed so that everyone, both old and young, may take advantage and learn as much as possible to his or her advantage. Beside the address, Mrs. George MacMillan welcomed the guests and acted as speaker on behalf of the Woman's Missionary Society under whose auspices the afternoon was held. Then Miss Patience Reid gave a piano solo. The address was followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. J. R. Dickson and a piano solo by Miss Lorna Herbert. Mrs. David Lang thanked the speaker and assisting artists, and refreshments were served.

Members of the Highlands Hockey Club held a dance in the Chateaugay Boating Club on Saturday evening, May 19th. Burns and his orchestra supplied the music and a favourable crowd turning out to mark the occasion as successful.

The Boating Club will open officially on May 26th when the first of the season's regular Saturday evening dances will be held and seven more such dances will be held from May 26th to September 15th inclusive. Herb Morrissey and his orchestra are contracted to supply the music for the season. A Lending Library is being installed with a large selection of the popular books of the day. No-club members may use the library upon payment of a library membership fee and books will be rented at the rate of 2c per day. A large concert hall victrola has been donated to the club, which will be placed in the dance hall so that members may dance every evening in the week.

A concert under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers Association was held Wednesday evening, May 16th, in the Julius Richardson School Hall. The following artists took part: Piano solo, Mrs. Louis Smith; vocal selections, Mrs. Jarvis Arnold; reading, Mrs. I. W. Gilbert; vocal selections, Mrs. A. Williams; violin solo, Mr. A. Barrow accompanied by Miss D. Barrow; songs, Miss Olga and a recitation, Mr. Yarnell; vocal selections, Mrs. J. R. Dickson; reading, Mr. Norman Ashley; humorous songs, Mr. J. R. Dickson. Miss M. McClellan, president of the Association.

Athelstan

The May meeting of the United Church of Christ Fellowship Society was held Thursday afternoon in Munro Hall. Mrs. A. Mack conducted the devotional period, the subject being Jesus and His friends. Plans were made for the Home Helpers meeting to be held in June. The Christian Stewardship and Temperance Secretaries gave interesting items on their departments. The study for the day was "The Growth of Christian Fellowship" dealing with conditions in China. A splendid bale of children's and women's garments was packed and forwarded to the supply secretary.

Mrs. E. A. McHardy entertained the Powerscourt Women's Association on Wednesday afternoon at her home. There was a good attendance of members and visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wilson of Ogdon, Utah, are guests this week of Mrs. Wm. Hay and family. Mr. Wilson was a delegate to the Convention of Railway Conductors, recently meeting in Toronto.

KNEES WOULD LET HER DOWN

Rheumatism For 12 Years
Here is a letter that goes to prove that even rheumatism of long standing can be relieved by the right treatment:—
"I have been a sufferer from rheumatism for some 12 to 14 years now and have foolishly taken no steps to relieve it. My particular form of rheumatism seemed to take the use out of my hands and knees. The latter would suddenly give way and let me down unless a chair or table were handy. All at once, I determined to give Kruschen Salts a trial—a bona fide trial—and now I feel a recreated being. I can scarcely believe that so short a time ago I was hobbling along with a stick."
—Mrs. M. L. P.
Kruschen is effective against rheumatism because its six salts stimulate the liver and kidneys to regular action. When these organs are working efficiently they rid the body of excess uric acid. And when uric acid goes, those aches and pains go, too.

Members Agree That Actual Combat Unequal

(Continued from page 1.) years ago we were tremendously disturbed about combines, monopolies, restraints of trade, price fixing, and the like. We made laws against them, with heavy penalties. Now, when we find these monopolies destroying the primary producer, we elect to create a lot of new laws, price fixing, withholding from the market, restraining trade, and so forth.

The other solution, chiefly being offered by the Liberals, is not to give the farmers machine guns but to take these lethal weapons from the distributors and the manufacturers. Break up the combines. Stop the restraints of trade. Give the farmer the benefit of real competitive trade both for his buying and selling. If the combines have been built up through the aid of tariff walls, tear the walls down again.

What modification of either of these methods may be introduced by the present government is not clear. Hon. H. H. Stevens, in an interview last week, said that the fact that the proposed legislation announced by Premier Bennett in the tobacco act, contain any measure based on the Stevens committee findings was not to be taken as a sign that none was coming. When the committee reports, it will unquestionably propose some action, and the session will probably last another six or eight weeks, it is not unreasonable to suppose that something will be done. The Premier has shown plenty of courage in dealing with situations.

This session will go down into history, presumably, as one in which the public was given a series of lurid and startling glimpses into the way our present system works during a number of industries. First it was the needle trade, then the meat packing, then the tobacco industry. A sickening series of disclosures have been made concerning starvation wages, defiance of minimum wage laws, primary producers selling their products for ruinous prices, a few manufacturers waxing rich, others, it must not be forgotten, going to the wall, paternal salaries for a few big fellows and scandalously low ones for a lot of little fellows. In normal times these matters get a passing mention of the shoulder from most citizens, who accept the fact that men are not made equal. But that fat profits should blossom on the squalor and misery of a widespread depression has aroused as much moral indignation as war profits did.

Central Bank Proponents of a publicly-owned central bank made a last effort to give Canada an institution of that kind, but the banking committee turned down the idea by 17 to 13, with all Conservatives massed against it. Premier Bennett, in an address which did not go on the record, made some interesting observations about the difficulty of doing the fair thing by public ownership in a country where party politics was prevalent. He referred to the making of appointments, and as much had very little to say about the selection of responsible heads of public services, which, under the respective acts, were supposed to be selected by the government of the day. Instead, the party in power. Suppose a vacancy occurred at the head of some important utility. A privately-owned concern would, presumably, choose the ablest and fittest man obtainable for the job. But a public appointment, Premier Bennett confessed, would have to pass over much more insistent tests. The man's party politics, religious race, occupation and geographical location would, he suggested, figure much more prominently than

No Other Remedies Did Him Any Good Until He Discovered Dodd's Kidney Pills Which Made Him Well.

Mr. Major Says Dodd's Best On Market. Richmond, N. S., May 22nd (Special) "I developed a pain in my back which bothered me more or less for about a year," writes Mr. John T. Major, a well known and respected resident of Cape La Ronde, Richmond, N. S. "Different Remedies were recommended to me, but none of them I tried did me any good until I used Dodd's Kidney Pills. They certainly fixed me up fine and I think they are the best on the market." Dodd's Kidney Pills have been relieving kidney troubles in Canada for nearly half a century. They have afforded relief in many cases where ordinary medicines have failed. Dodd's Kidney Pills purify the blood, and pure blood carried to all parts of the body means new health and increased energy all over the body. ALL-BRAN RELIEVED HIS CONSTIPATION

Delicious Cereal Brought New Health to Mr. Bartholomew. We quote from his voluntary letter: "I had considerable trouble with my stomach. Digestion was left of the question, I got medicine which gave me only temporary relief. "Then I thought of taking ALL-BRAN. I started eating a cereal dishful two or three times a day. "It has been over a year now since I ate that first dish of bran, but from that day to this I have had the pleasure of enjoying the proper functioning of the digestive organs."

"Thanks to ALL-BRAN, I still eat it regularly and like it better all the time."—Lester Bartholomew (address furnished upon request). Constipation is usually due to lack of "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to promote elimination. ALL-BRAN supplies both, as well as iron for the blood.

"The 'bulk' in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Certainly this food is more natural than the laxative 'patent' medicines. Two tablespoons daily will usually overcome most types of constipation. With each meal in chronic cases, if not relieved this way, see your doctor. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Reports Fruit Crop Damage (Continued from page 1.) Arthur N. Laberge of Chateaugay, stated that in his district the damage had been considerable. In his own orchard, Mr. Laberge said that he had cut down 200 of his 500 best trees; he has 3,000 trees in all, but most of them are young saplings which have just begun to bear. Of the older trees, nearly half were dead.

The varieties of apple to suffer most were the Fameuse, St. Lawrence and Scarlet Pippins, said Mr. Laberge. The Macintosh Reds had weathered the winter fairly well. Asked whether his own experience was typical, Mr. Laberge was of opinion that he had suffered a little more than the general average, but that several fruit farmers were even harder hit. He could not estimate the probable loss beyond saying that it would run to thousands of dollars.

Regain Your Normal Figure

Common sense will do far more for you than any so-called panacea. Just live sensibly. You don't need to starve yourself. Eat enough to satisfy the demands of your body, but just be careful not to eat as many sweet, starchy foods, such as potatoes, sweet desserts, fat meats, etc. Don't just take it for granted that there's nothing wrong with your eliminative system because your habits are regular. Regularity deceives thousands who, if they only realize it, could enjoy perfect health and proper weight all the time. Once or twice each week enjoy a bracing, sparkling glass of Andrew Liver Salt. Andrew will help Nature to effect complete elimination, and so will help your body to throw off unwanted and unhealthy pounds. The occasional sparkling glass of Andrew Liver Salt will purify and invigorate your whole system and ward off the "lifty lift" of indigestion, prevent those days of heavy body weariness and periodic attacks of headaches and irritations. Buy this common-sense way to achieve a normal, attractive figure. Eat moderately and take Andrew occasionally. Ask your druggist for Andrew Liver Salt. In tins, 35c and 60c. New, large bottle, 75c. # The Gnome Mine Mystery

by Paul de Mar

Roger was not a little chagrined to find that the drawing-room when he arrived at the Brents. During the dinner he had the uncomfortable feeling of being on the "outside," due no doubt to the indisputable "inside" position occupied by the engineer. Clyde Brent referred to him on every point of discussion and his practice of slapping shoulders to show his approval, in Scranton's case had merged into patting words with oily deference. However, this did not disturb Roger's mind as much as the fact that in Stanley Scranton he saw a bidder for the favors of Miriam.

"What brings you to New York, Roger? Should think from the rumors coming this way it would be rather a busy time for you at the mine. I hear you've encountered high grade?"

Before he could make any rejoinder, Miriam, her blue eyes very bright, broke in impetuously:

"High grade! How thrilling! That means you have a real mine!"

"Not necessarily," the true words came from her uncle, who glanced apologetically toward Roger.

"I'm not condemning your property, Roger, just giving this piece of mine a lesson, in mineralogy. You see, my dear, turning to Miriam, "mining prospects may be deceptive things. They won't stand probing—like jewel-capped stones, for instance. It's sad but true, they mean years of effort—often, I'm afraid, wasted effort. Mr. Scranton will bear me out."

Stanley Scranton thus appealed to, flashed one of his mirthless smiles.

"My advice, Miss Branscombe, if you desire peace of mind, is to keep out of the mining game. As your uncle intimated, there's too much veneer."

"Dear me," Miriam emitted a light laugh, "I'm beginning to suspect Mr. Scranton has some dark secret up his sleeve concerning the Gnome."

"Nothing of the kind,"

Scranton's denial was so emphatic that a ripple of laughter went around the table, which did not add to his composure.

"Roger," Miriam flashed a smile at her fiancé, "put me down for ten thousand shares of Gnome stock, please."

"Miriam!" Clyde Brent's voice rasped angrily. "What nonsense is this!"

"Gambling spirit, come by honest-ly, Uncle dear. Don't forget I'm your niece. What's the price of your stock, Roger?"

"Seventy-five cents."

"What?" Clyde Brent laid down his knife and fork and glared at Roger in indignant amazement.

"Seventy-five cents? When did you jump from thirty?"

"Yesterday," replied Roger, a smile in his voice, "when the first allotment was oversubscribed."

"By gosh! I must hand it to you, young fellow. Didn't think you'd be so good. Had it in me," Roger anticipated with a laugh.

"By jove, I didn't—first allotment gone—well, well—No, I didn't think you could do it. By the way, wasn't it hole 235 you were probing when I saw you in Toronto?"

"Yes, sir."

"But I understood the samples assayed no value."

"That is so," confirmed Roger. "Nevertheless, we went at it again and won out."

"Hm." The shrewd eyes of the financier were on Roger. "Such persistence is very creditable. Yet surely it wasn't merely guesswork that caused you to put your drill back on a location that had shown nothing? Besides," with a frown, "how in the world could such a discrepancy occur in two sets of samples from the same spot?"

"Ah, thereby hangs a tale which I regret I am not at liberty to divulge at present."

Clyde Brent's underlip shot out in the old familiar aggressiveness.

"Of course, I have no desire to pry into your mine secrets, my dear boy, yet I must say, to a stranger your story of values would sound very questionable."

Roger flushed.

"The integrity of our board is above suspicion, sir," he replied a little stiffly, "and the fact that directors are the heaviest shareholders, confirms the 'eracity' of the report."

"I understand you, young St. Lambert and his sister are the controlling interests?"

"Naturally," responded Roger.

"Sister," exclaimed Miriam. "Has that charming blonde giant a sister? And is she as fascinating as her brother?"

"Are the French ever anything but fascinating, Miss Branscombe?" put in Scranton, with a malicious glance at Roger.

"Dear me, I believe you are concealing things, Roger."

"Not intentionally, I assure you," disclaimed Roger, flushing uncomfortably.

"I didn't think you could blush so becomingly," teased Miriam.

"Tut, tut, my dear," put in Brent. "Roger I suppose didn't think it worth while to mention a foreigner like that. It seems Eastern Canada is full of them."

A laugh broke from Roger. "Foreigner! Surely you are not serious, sir? The French-Canadians are the proudest race under the sun and very jealous of their British allegiance."

"Forsyth, can it be as a knight errant the young man doth ride forth so gallantly?" put in Miriam, her eyes very bright.

"No personalities were intended in my remark, Miriam," said Roger quietly.

"If your first allotment of treasury stock is taken up," interposed Brent, "you are, as the Scotchman would say, 'in fine fettle'."

"We've made a good start, sir."

"Hm." Clyde Brent's nose received a vigorous flip. "I don't want to discourage you, but I'm afraid you're laying in a lot of trouble for yourself, young man. Mind, it's my opinion—take it or leave it—but as I've always said, what are we on this old planet for if not to help one another? If you take my advice, you'll watch your step. You're dancing on a tight rope and don't know it."

Roger eyed his host in astonishment. "You make that statement in face of our recent findings?"

"To blaze with your recent findings. I told you before I know that property like I know my own door-step—better. I don't know what dark secret may lie under my doorstep, but I do know what lies under that gold camouflage of the Gnome. Do you want me to tell you?"

Roger was silent. In spite of himself the cocksure attitude of the other was not without its effect.

"The financier's race underwent a change. Some of the ferocity died out of his features. His manner was almost kindly as he laid a hand on Roger's arm.

"I was hoping you would take my advice and get out of that mining mess, but it may not be too late yet, you could do it. By the way, wasn't it hole 235 you were probing when I saw you in Toronto?"

"Yes, sir."

"But I understood the samples assayed no value."

"That is so," confirmed Roger. "Nevertheless, we went at it again and won out."

"Hm." The shrewd eyes of the financier were on Roger. "Such persistence is very creditable. Yet surely it wasn't merely guesswork that caused you to put your drill back on a location that had shown nothing? Besides," with a frown, "how in the world could such a discrepancy occur in two sets of samples from the same spot?"

MUTUAL LIFE OF CANADA LIFE

Reports Increased Business

April Sales Higher

The number of new policies paid-for in April 1934 exceeded by 30% the number for April 1933.

Policyholders Add to Insurance

Approximately 5,000 Canadians applied for and received Mutual Life insurance policies in amounts ranging from $500 to $120,000 and aggregating many millions, between January 1st and April 30th, 1934.

One-half of this business was taken by present policyholders—a splendid endorsement of the results of their original policies.

Payments to Living Policyholders Three Times Greater Than Death Claims

Death Claim payments in 1934 already total $1,128,954

Payments to LIVING POLICYHOLDERS in Dividends, Matured Policies, etc., in the same period amount to $3,745,438

An EXAMPLE of how MUTUALITY PAYS

The Budget Discussed

Translation of Speech Given in House of Commons by Maxime Raymond, K.C., M.P., For Beauharnois County

Mr. Maxime Raymond (Beauharnois): Mr. Speaker, I cannot find a more appropriate expression to describe the four last years of this government's administration than that used by the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Rhodes), in the course of his budget statement. After reviewing the present situation and seeking encouragement in statistics which a great British statesman, Disraeli, looked upon as one of the three gradations of lying—the minister praised the fortitude which the Canadian people had displayed "throughout their vicissitudes and sacrifices of these last years."

Years of sacrifices! Is truly what describes our existence under the present regime. Yet, the right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Bennett) had promised happiness to all in 1930. If we had only to deal with these inconsiderate pledges, but, since then, how many optimistic statements have been made in parliament and elsewhere? Each year the speech from the throne informed us that business was improving and prosperity was around the corner and, each year, the budget statement revealed a fearful increase in our national debt, a deficit which has become chronic in our current transactions, new liabilities incurred and additional charges; in brief, a bankruptcy balance sheet.

At a period, sir, when the people have more need to repose confidence in their governments, they require more than broken promises or words of hope without any foundation. They require acts to restore public confidence and to show that this government has proved incapable of accomplishing them.

The hon. member for Shelburne-Yarmouth (Mr. Ralston) and others who followed him in this debate, have made an analysis and a criticism of the budget. I only wish to make a few observations and point out to the house the danger and disastrous results of the policy inaugurated and followed for the last four years, which consists in spending and pledging Canada's credit disproportionately to her means, without first obtaining the sanction of parliament, but simply through orders in council and at times, under the sole signature of the Prime Minister; moreover, the danger and the consequences of a policy which favours large financial interests both local and foreign, neglects or refuses to protect the working class against every kind of exploitation or to help the farmers and which, after, unjustly throws the burden of a ruinous administration on the shoulders of the capable of supporting them. I intended to submit a few facts and draw from them certain conclusions which I deem of general interest.

From the very outset of his administration, the Prime Minister showed special solicitude for an old friend of his, the Canadian Pacific Railway, a solicitude which turned to gifts, loans without interest and finally a guarantee of $60,000,000 loan. In October, 1930, shortly after the election—it was perhaps the right time to show gratitude—the government on the authority of the Relief Act, made a present to the Canadian Pacific Railway of an additional sum of $209,196, making a total of $1,072,746, as recorded in the statement furnished by the hon. Minister of Labour, dated March 22, 1934. Yet this company was neither in difficulties nor hard pressed, since in 1930, according to its balance sheet, it realized, all current and fixed charges paid, a net profit of $38,381,000, and distributed among its stockholders dividends amounting to about $38,000,000, of which $32,000,000 went to foreign holders, the preference stock being held in a proportion of about 86 per cent by foreigners.

We had no funds to carry out urgent public works, as for instance, repairs to wharves, or to continue the work begun on the Canadian National, in Montreal, which would have afforded jobs to thousands of workmen and created a national wealth, but we had funds to make gifts to a friend, the Canadian Pacific Railway, and thus increase its wealth.

The dividends distributed abroad by this company did not increase by one cent the purchasing power in Canada. So much for gifts.

Let us examine loans without interest. In 1932 and 1933, the government, always under the authority of the Relief Act, the "signature in blank" and acting by simple order in council, loaned to the poor friend, the Canadian Pacific Railway—the distributor of magnificent dividends to foreign holders—a total amount of $2,447,222, without interest and Mining and Smelting Company—30-513 shares in 1933—bringing its investment from 305,587 to 336,500 shares, representing at the market price, in 1933, an amount of about $40,000,000.

To summarize, the loan of $60,000,000 to the Canadian Pacific Railway, of which the guarantee by the government was neither urgent nor necessary, as served to reimburse a total amount of $30,000,000 which had been used to pay dividends to foreign shareholders and speculate with the stock of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company.

These favours to a private company constitutes one of the most shocking abuses of the arbitrary and discretionary power which the government had parliament grant to it. This is the kind of abuse of power which tends to rouse the people who feel and patiently bear up with the sacrifices imposed on them for the last four years, and which have the effect of discouraging and engendering distrust.

Think of the farmer's plight who, during that time, not being able to meet his liabilities, was forced to abandon his land, which he had always farmed and which afforded a livelihood to his family. There are thousands of such persons who might have been rescued from ruin, if the government had simply pledged the credit of Canada for an even less amount than $60,000,000.

An hon. member: Hear, hear! Mr. Raymond: The government boasts of borrowing at a reduced rate of interest. Why does it not reduce the rate of interest and improve the conditions of loans to farmers by virtue of the credit Mortgage Act? Millions of dollars are expended to provide for those who have deserted the land thus increasing the number of unemployed in large cities and becoming a heavy drag on the financial resources of municipalities, dominion and provincial governments. It is high time to think of setting aside some funds to retain on the farms those who are still there, and who instead of being a passive asset would become an active one for the state. Agriculture supplies 75 per cent of our requirements. The countryside supplies water free, a home, wood as a fuel, and even some of the clothes which are derived from the transformed agricultural products. These are the main necessities in life. It also contributes to increase the purchasing power and helps all the branches of economic activities which owe to agriculture the reason itself of their existence.

All agree that what is lacking to activate business is the purchasing power and it must first come from the farming class. The farmer creates the demand. The farmer does not depend on the merchant for a livelihood but it is the latter who depends on the farmer. Cultivation of the soil and factories will open their doors, workmen will find work and railways will be kept busy. Even if railways build new lines or cars, they will serve no purpose, as long as traffic is lacking. Although agriculture should receive our first consideration, it is the most neglected of occupations.

Money or credit seems scarce to help our own people, but the government finds some for foreign shareholders of the Canadian Pacific railway or for the government of Newfoundland. Again this guarantee of $625,000 in favour of a foreign government is an abuse of power. We thus decrease, for the benefit of others, our borrowing power which is not unlimited, and the day will come when our borrowing power will become restricted and less advantageous.

I wish to point out another example of abuse of power which will react considerably on the farming class. It is the tax exemption enjoyed by the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power, ever since it has been under the control of the Montreal Light, Heat and Power. The Beauharnois canal was, up to September 1932, the property of the company which had built it and it was utilized to develop electric power. The government, on the other hand, had the right to use it for navigation purposes. As proprietor, the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power was to pay the various municipalities its quota of taxes, because of the lands which it had purchased and other properties it owned. Since the control has passed into the hands of the Montreal Light, Heat and Power, the government has become very obliging. The canal property has been gratuitously transferred to it, including bridges and certain adjacent lands. The government has the same rights to utilize them in the operation of its water power plant, exactly as before—that is all it requires. The difference, however, is that government properties being exempt of taxes by virtue of the Municipalities Act, the company, while having practically the same rights, is now dispensed from paying taxes to the various municipalities.

The bridges are valued at more than $5,000,000, and there are about 10,000 acres which have become exempt of taxes, and the local farmers will have to portion out among themselves the taxes which the company should have paid. In one particular, St. Cecile, taking into account the valuation of one bridge, the five-sixth of the municipality valuation is thus exempt of taxes, so that the burden of all liabilities, will fall on the other one-sixth. This is another instance of the solicitude of the government for the large corporations to the detriment of the rural class.

Exemption does not stop there but goes so far as to allow the workman to be fleeced. Is there a more odious exploitation than the one by which the worker becomes the victim of coal importers? The government has prohibited Russian coal imports and it levies a duty on American coal. Thanks to such measures, the importers of English coal have formed a monopoly which affords them the opportunity of selling this article of necessity at an excessive price and thus make exorbitant profits. It was admitted that the profits in one year were about $400,000! Think of the profits for 1934, owing to the excessive cold we experienced; there was 25 per cent more coal consumed and prices were raised in February and again a few days ago. If there is a dealer, sir, who, because of the nature of the product he sells, should be restricted to a minimum profit for the welfare of the majority, it is certainly the importer of coal, owing to our rigorous climate which makes it an article of prime necessity. A profit of $400,000 did not seem large enough to these importers, and prices were raised this year, there was a freezing in one year who had the impudence of posing as a philanthropist! Since when does Mr. Webster sell his coal simply to keep his fellow-citizens warm and prevent them from freezing to death? When shall he cease to speculate on human misery? In January and February last there were, on an average, 1,275,000 people receiving the dose, so to keep them from starvation and freezing to death; what amount did the government contribute to purchase coal for these people and thus increase the profits of the importers? How long will the government tolerate such a flagrant abuse?

The hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Gordon) ordered an investigation by virtue of the Combines Act, which cost the country $40,451. It was held behind closed doors and the minister refused to divulge the contents of the report under the plea that it was detrimental to public interest. One helps a friend. Yet, another investigation was held in connection with the tobacco industry. The same plea was at first invoked. Finally, thanks to a by-election in Oxford South, the plea of public interest was discarded and the report was tabled in the house. However, in the case of coal, public interests seem to depend on Mr. Webster.

Surely it is not with expensive investigations, held behind closed doors, and a refusal to publish the findings, that the government will appease the public which knows that it is being fleeced. Efficient measures must be taken. If the existing laws do not contain any appropriate remedy, let new ones be enacted. Our statutes embody very severe laws against slight offences. Thus, according to the excise act, a person found in possession of the least quantity of alcohol, on which an excise tax has not been paid—what a crime!—is guilty of an offence punishable by a fine and imprisonment, with or without hard labour for a period of one to twelve months which is enforced. I once knew a good citizen who, during holiday time, had purchased a quart of whisky, on which no duty had been paid. He was thrown in jail; such cases are not left to the discretion of the magistrate.

Mr. Lafleche: He is not the only one. Mr. Raymond: The government (Continued on Page 8)

The Budget Discussed

Workers are no better protected against manufacturers who on the one hand take advantage of tariff increases, enacted by the government to maintain high prices and this permit large dividends to be paid, while on the other hand they take advantage of unemployment to further fleece the workers by not paying them sufficient wages to provide a livelihood. I already have had occasion to point out specific facts to the house; I shall quote others in support of them. In Valleyfield, at the Montreal Cotton Mills, a company which still pays a 7 per cent dividend to its stockholders, there are heads of families who work from six o'clock in the evening to seven o'clock in the morning at a rate of 9 cents per hour, with no prospect of finding work in the future; they pitifully wander through life depending entirely on public or private charity. For them, the foremost question is that of the right to work and live.

The government is very willing to protect manufactured goods, but it refuses to protect labour. Why did it not stipulate, when providing for tariff increases on manufactured products, that a man can only have to pay rational wages to the workers? The latter are entitled to wages which will provide them with a livelihood and will not let them starve to death. It is not with such a policy that a man can feed and clothe his family and, when winter comes, pay to Mr. Webster's company, thanks to the government's protection, an excessive price for coal.

There is a provincial statute which fixes the minimum wages for women. What happens? The Montreal Cotton Co. obliges young girls to sign a petition addressed to the minimum salary commission requesting that the company be exempted from such provision of the act and those who refuse to sign are dismissed.

The workman is no better dealt with in the distribution of taxes and his situation is becoming worse. Certainly, taxes are needed to fill the treasury, but the least burdensome way from an economic and social angle is to tax the rich. The rich must serve a truly useful purpose. Whence comes the greatest revenue? A perusal of the returns from taxes shows that during the fiscal year 1933-34 the amount of $271,000,000.00 was levied on the income tax; the balance for the most part came from customs duties, excise taxes and that on consumption, the latter alone amounting to $23,000,000.00.

Of all these imposts, the largest the most burdensome and unjust is the tax on consumption because it reaches everybody equally, without taking into account his capacity of paying and one's circumstance. One who is in utter want is placed on the same footing as the millionaire. One who is at the head of a large family is placed on the same footing as the single man. It is absurd to say that the most equitable taxation is the one which is portioned out according to the capacity of paying. However, the latter depends on the income of the individual.

The head of a family, the only bread-winner, who must provide for the livelihood of his wife and four children and who is paid by the Montreal Cotton Mills wages at the rate of 9 cents an hour for night work, has certainly not the means to pay a consumption tax on articles of prime necessity.

Mr. Lafleche: It is a provincial question.

Mr. Raymond: It becomes an impost on distress. In some cases, such as sugar, there is even an additional charge, which brought in $10,000,000 in less than a year; it was levied mostly on the poor people. The articles of luxury are taxed but not necessities of life. What purpose did these revenues levied partly on the distress of workers serve? One million dollars is expended on roads that does not feed a person; it also serves to pay the travelling expenses of ministers who, meanwhile, neither pay the consumer's tax nor a tribute to Mr. Webster.

Mr. Raymond: The taxes are at present, borne by the working classes and this is a flagrant injustice.

Mr. Lafleche: Did you make these remonstrances to the provincial government?

Mr. Raymond: I regret that I cannot reply to your question as I have but forty minutes at my disposal.

Mr. Gobeil: Are wages fixed by Quebec? Mr. Raymond: Yes.

Mr. Cardin: Ottawa fixes the tariff for which are derived the profits.

Mr. Raymond: I shall have later an opportunity of discussing this subject, but my friend will permit me to continue.

I have set forth, sir, a few phases of the present administration's policy. Let us draw the conclusions. The people are tired of the present government.

Mr. Gobeil: They are tired of Taschereau.

Mr. Raymond:—of this dictatorship exercised with arrogance, favoritism, and in an excessive way for the benefit of the corporations; it can only give rise to a feeling of distrust among the working classes. Confidence is something which is not enforced on the public through decrees, it must be won by meritorious deeds.

Mr. Gobeil: That was evident in Montreal.

Mr. Fafard: It is the university man who speaks!

Mr. Raymond: Will the hon. member for Compton (Mr. Gobeil) allow me to follow up my arguments? I am not in the habit of interrupting him and I would ask him to do likewise.

When we exist, close his eyes and when we are dead, the government has done since 1930, we soon realize that no relief has been applied to the difficulties in which the country is struggling.

What have become of our resources—referred to by the Prime Minister—capable of creating work and prosperity for all? They have not melted away! Instead of work, he substituted official unemployment with all its consequences and excesses.

He spoke of the respect due to parliamentary rules, no one more than him despises them. In times of crisis, one must close his eyes and stuff his ears but it is befuddling that measures taken or enacted be in accord with public feeling and the way to make sure of it, is to keep in touch with it through the sentiments of the people. Here, it is all jostling, one must vote on the
