

Men From Chateaugay Barracks Assist in Hunt For Escaped Italians

Officers and Men Show Value of Good Training By Their Efficiency and Quick Dispatch

Preparing for action was evidenced at Chateaugay Barracks, late Friday evening, following the Lowney Caravan entertainment. Approximately an hour after the entertainment, word was received at Chateaugay Barracks of the three escaped Italians from St. Helen's Island Internment Camp. The call to Chateaugay Barracks, was for men to go out and search for the escaped Italians.

The officers were in their Mess quarters when the call came. Visitors were also in the Mess, and to them it was quite evident something was wrong. The officers left with quick dispatch, leaving the medical and dental officers and the few civilians who were guests at the Mess, to see that the wives of officers got to their respective homes. Not a soul was told what was actually the cause of the sudden call. Within a very few minutes, a real stir was about the various huts, for there was saw the soldiers wearing their tin hats, and with full equipment, all lined up awaiting instructions. The trucks were drawn up ready to take the soldiers off on the hunt for the three escaped Italians.

This was not the only stir about the Camp, provision had to be made for feeding the soldiers who went out on duty for the night. They had to be fed when on the job, and how they would be away from the Barracks, was an unknown quantity. The soldiers had but forty minutes of sleep or none at all. However, they headed out for the border line road in the Hemmingford area. Search parties were sent home, for it was then known just about what area the three wanted prisoners were located in, and that enough R.C.M.P., Provincial Police, soldiers from St. Johns, Farnham and Chateaugay Barracks were sufficient to complete the hunt.

The R.C.M.P. operated under Inspector J. R. Lemieux while the military operations were directed by Major Arthur White, assistant adjutant-general for Military District No. 1.

The three escaped Italians were imprisoned at St. Helen's Island. They were not Italian soldiers, but civilians, who had been interned here and came to Canada from England. Late Friday afternoon, there was a swim parade for some 50 prisoners, and although heavily guarded, three managed to escape.

DOG TRAILS TRIO

First clues to the direction the fugitives had taken came when "Perky" famed kept-scented R.C.M.P. police dog picked up the scent of the men on St. Helen's Island and led his master, Constable S. Langlois, to a bus stop on the highway. This fitted in with the report of a Provincial Transport Company bus driver who told of three men answering the description of the wanted men who had disembarked from his bus at St. Luc, not far from St. Johns.

As the manhunt got into full swing Friday night, authorities announced that they were confident the prisoners would be recaptured within 24 hours, and they were only a few hours out in their estimate.

In the dragnet that was spread through the St. Johns area, every highway and side road was patrolled, every farmhouse, gasoline station, barn and other building searched, and every truck and automobile stopped and examined. Many of the soldiers covered between 10 and 20 miles on foot and worked throughout Friday night and most of Saturday without taking any time off.

One of the most interesting facts to be determined, it is stated, is how the prisoners obtained the civilian clothes in which they made their escape.

The three men, Mario Casti, 24; Emilio Rosa, 30, and Bambino Salvia, 28, were arrested by a motorcade of the 34th Company of the Canadian Provost Corps on the main highway leading to the United States border about four miles the other side of St. Johns. This was brought to an end one of the most intensive manhunts ever held in the Montreal district, involving the use of hundreds of soldiers in addition to Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Provincial Police and border patrols.

JUMP INTO DITCH

The fugitives were spotted by the patrol just after coming out of the woods on to the highway. They jumped into a roadside ditch to hide when they saw the car but they had been seen and were quickly taken into custody.

Offering no resistance, the prisoners were reported to be quite philosophic about their recapture. Although they carried a sum of Canadian money in their pockets, the amount of which was not disclosed by the military authorities, they had been afraid to use it to buy food and had been subsisting mainly on green apples. As one officer put it, "They'd had about enough of it when we picked them up."

At the time of their arrest they had apparently been attempting to move toward the border through woods and fields coming out on to the highway now and then to get their bearings. It was during one of these sorties that they were recaptured.

Taken to the headquarters that had been set up for conducting the search at the barracks in St. Johns, the men soon afterward were returned to St. Helen's Island.

Cigarette Limit Set For Soldiers Overseas

Canadian military authorities, seeking to provide a more equal distribution of cigarettes received from home by Canadian soldiers overseas, ruled yesterday that no one man may keep for his individual use more than 1,000 a month.

Should he receive more than that number he will be required to surrender them to his Commanding Officer for distribution among men not receiving that quota.

The Daily Mail said the order was designed to stop "illegal trading" of cigarettes which Canadian soldiers allegedly had been selling in districts where they are billeted.

Huntingdon Loses Double Header Games

On Saturday afternoon, Kensington Beavers extended their winning streak by defeating Huntingdon Royals 19-16 in one of the best girls' softball games of the season, at Low Lodge, Huntingdon. Clair McCallum started for Huntingdon with a home run in the first inning, while her sister, Eileen, made a sensational catch late in the game.

The second game was contested between R.C.A.F. No. 9 Repair Depot, St. Johns, and a Huntingdon All Star aggregation, with the Airmen coming out on top 8-3. Andy O'Connor, former Huntingdon star, pitched for the locals. The losers made their three runs in the 9th inning, with B. Senecal starting the hitting with a home run.

Learn Proper Uses Of the Union Jack

During wartime and on special occasions when the national flag is being used more frequently than usual, many questions arise as to its correct use. It is the spirit of loyalty that prompts the display of the Union Jack and the occasion for its use are many and varied, so it perhaps may not be amiss to publish information and directions in concise form which have been drawn up by the I.O.D.E., which may prove of interest to citizens in general.

The Union Jack is the official flag of Canada and should be the one flown in Canada.

The Red and Blue Ensigns with the Coat-of-Arms of Canada in the fly are intended for use afloat and on official buildings outside of Canada. The flag should not be hoisted before sunrise nor remain up after sunset.

In hoisting the flag, the broad white stripe in the cross of St. Andrew should be above the red stripe of St. Patrick on the side of the flag next the mast head; if reversed it is an indication of distress.

The flag should be carried upright and not allowed to touch the ground. When placed at half-mast, the flag should first be raised to the mast head and then lowered.

When used for indoor decoration the flag should never be below a person sitting.

It should never be used to cover a table, box or desk, except at a military religious ceremony and nothing should be placed upon it except the Bible.

In regard to the National Anthem "God Save the King," a final clause is added: "Whenever the National Anthem is played or sung, all persons within hearing stand at attention, men with heads uncovered.

Cracker Jacks Present Excellent Show at Barracks

Entertainment Sponsored by Makers of Lowney's Chocolates Well Received—Cast Composed of Professional Entertainers

Lowney's Caravan, featuring the Cracker Jacks, presented one of the finest variety shows that has yet been staged at Chateaugay Barracks' Drill Hall, on Friday evening.

The entire cast is made up of professionals, who travel to and from training centres in Quebec and Ontario by bus. Although the show in Huntingdon was put on in the Drill Hall, the equipment of the Caravan consists of an elaborate collapsible stage that can be set up outside. A large attendance, consisting of many civilians, enjoyed the entertainment, which is produced by "Red" Foster as a feature of Lowney's Young Canada Club.

Joe Carr, general master of ceremonies, introduced the various stars and entertained the audience between acts.

Among the stellar attractions of the show was Clair Rouse's "One Man Band." Mr. Rouse is a highly talented musician who captivated the audience with his melodies played on new and old-time instruments. He evoked much laughter and applause when he depicted a Scotchman playing the bagpipes, producing the sound effects with an instrument similar to a violin. Mr. Rouse was a feature attraction at Ormstown Exhibition a few years ago.

Rex Slocombe, wizard magician, made the audience gasp with sur-

Londoners Demand 2nd Front

A crowd which the Press Association estimated at 60,000 jammed in Trafalgar Square, London, Eng., on Sunday, and shouted approval of immediate opening of a second front even though it might mean another Battle of Britain.

Dr. Leslie Haden Guest, Labor member of Commons from Islington, said:

"It might mean another Battle of Britain or an attempted invasion of Britain and hardships such as the people of these islands have not had to endure before.

"Are you ready for all this?" he asked.

A mighty "Yes" arose from the crowd.

Rust, editor of the banned Daily Worker, was chairman of the meeting which heard many speeches, including one by a Canadian private, Constantine Olsnik of Toronto, who fought for the Republicans in the International Brigade in the Spanish Civil War and has seven brothers in the Soviet Army.

Meanwhile, at Pontypool, Ernest Bevin, Labor Minister and member of the War Cabinet, declared in a speech that those who shouted for a second front were "feeding" Hitler and Goebbels by creating division in the country.

"Our friends of the left who shout this slogan are creating the very condition we all want to avoid... I do not want to see about a second front but help the Government all you can so there shall be no shortage anywhere," he pleaded.

Bevin said Russia "might be driven back and lose territory but I am confident it will not break the Russian armies."

Retires From Bell Telephone Co. After 37 Years Service

Mr. R. E. McWhinnie, who has been in charge of the Maintenance Department of the Bell Telephone Co. at Huntingdon, has just been retired after 37 years in the service of that company. The reason for his retirement is on account of ill-health, which condition he has suffered for the past several years.

Mr. McWhinnie was born and raised in Ormstown, and was in South Africa in 1905, previous to his joining the staff of the Bell Telephone Co. in April, 1905, and was stationed at Ormstown. He came to Huntingdon in 1921, as assistant in the Maintenance Department, he served in this capacity for three years and then took charge, which position he has held until his retirement. Mr. McWhinnie was married to Miss May Goides, of Ormstown, in 1912, and has seven children, three sons and four daughters. Two sons, are in the army, Cyril in England and Merle at Chateaugay Barracks, Huntingdon.

Approximately eight years ago, Mr. McWhinnie became an Alderman of the Huntingdon Town Council and is still serving in that capacity. He has always been interested in public affairs and local matters, and was President of the Huntingdon Hockey Club for several years, a sport he is particularly interested in.

Effective from July 15th, 1942, Mr. McWhinnie was made a life member of the Telephone Pioneers of America, and will receive a certificate and identification card. A letter from Mr. Harold Bowen, Plant Superintendent of the Bell Telephone Co. for Quebec, says in part: "During the many years we

Thresher Gang Sugar Watched by Board

Although the sugar rationing regulations permit farmers' wives to purchase extra supplies of sugar for the feeding of threshing gangs and certain other groups of farm workers by means of purchase vouchers obtainable at retail establishments, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board urges that reason should govern these applications and that, wherever possible, sugar should be used to approximate the ordinary individual ration allowance for the number of men concerned.

It has been found that in certain instances applications have been made for sugar for such feeding in unreasonable and excessive quantities. In these cases the suggestion is being made that, in view of the desirability of sugar being conserved by every means possible, the estimate of prospective consumption should be reduced to reasonable quantities.

In cases where the "gang" consists merely of a number of neighbours who combine to carry out farm work, ration officers suggest that any surplus of sugar which they should be made available from their own rations.

It is further pointed out that any individual making use of the purchase voucher for the purpose of supplying threshing gangs may later be required to justify the use which has been made of supplies so obtained. All of these purchase vouchers will be carefully scrutinized with a view to detecting possible abuses.

As the ration office views the matter, the provision in the rationing regulations permitting farmers' wives to apply for extra sugar to feed threshing gangs cannot be seized upon as an excuse to obtain excessive supplies, part of which may be used for other purposes, and a careful check is being made to prevent such an abuse of this concession.

SAYS NEXT 80 DAYS AMONG GRAVESTONES EVER FACED

Aldershot, England.—Oliver Lyttelton, Minister of Production, said in a speech that Britain has been shipping 50 tanks weekly to Russia and to date has fulfilled her contracts with the Soviet Union for supply of other war materials.

He added that Britain by the end of May "actually shipped 11 per cent more aircraft than had been promised up to the end of June."

"We do not allow considerations of our own safety to stand in the way of supplying Russia with arms," Mr. Lyttelton said.

"At no time since the Battle of Britain have we stood in graver peril: It would be fool to deny that these 80 days in front of us are some of the gravest we ever faced."

Navy Considering Blacking Out Towns and Villages Along the St. Lawrence

Plan to Arm Merchant Ships With Larger-Caliber Guns to Combat U-Boats

Permanent nightly blackouts of towns and villages around the shores of the entire peninsula of Gaspé; the south shore of the St. Lawrence river as far west as Riviere-du-Loup, and the north shore from Seven Islands to Tadoussac is under consideration by the Department of National Defence for Naval Affairs.

Tentative plans for the blackout were formulated following the second U-boat attack in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, as revealed in the House of Commons by Navy Minister Macdonald. Details as to when the blackout plan will be put into effect were not disclosed.

Reason for the blackout of coastal towns and villages is to lessen the danger of submarine attack on international convoys bound for British and European ports sailing down the St. Lawrence. Experience of United States coastal areas has shown that a blackout or "dimout" has greatly reduced the efficacy of German submarine action.

Other plans are being formulated by the Department of National Defence to combat enemy action in the Gulf and the St. Lawrence river.

Chief among these is to arm merchant ships with larger-caliber guns than they carry at present, in order that they can have the advantage when trading shots with even the larger and more modern types of Nazi submarines.

The action is being taken in the light of experience and to overcome criticism in marine quarters that German subs have in some instances been able to outrange and damage Canadian ships with shellfire, while they themselves were virtually immune from danger.

SOVIET ACK-ACK DOES TRIPLE DUTY

Huntingdon, Wed., July 29th, 1942

There is no substitute for thorough-going, ardent, sincere earnestness.

America Reports

ON Thursday evening of last week, State Secretary Cordell Hull, of the United States, gave a carefully prepared review of the war as it concerned the States. It was the first of its kind since the States entered the present conflict. There were several outstanding parts to the speech which hit home to many of his listeners in his own and the other countries to which the speech was broadcast.

Characterizing professions of neutrality in such a conflict as "Absurd and Suicidal," he pictured the world-wide war as a test of the calibre of nations and individuals. "There is no surer way," he said, "for men and for nations to show themselves unworthy of liberty than, by supine submission and refusal to fight, to render more difficult the task of those who are fighting for the preservation of human freedom—unless it be to align themselves freely and voluntarily with the destroyers of liberty." "Liberty is truly won only when it is guarded by that same watchfulness, the same courage, the same willingness to fight for it which first secured it."

There is no doubt that Mr. Hull told his listeners just what he thought of the isolationists and those who would fight at home when attacked, in his speech, although he did not mention any particular group by name. As a further emphasis of the latter point we quote further excerpts from the speech:

"There is no surer way for men and nations to show themselves worthy of liberty than to fight for its preservation, in any way that is open to them, against those who would destroy it all." A further quotation is this: "We shall send all the aid that we can to our gallant allies. And we shall seek out our enemies and attack them at any and every point of the globe at which the destruction of the Axis forces can be accomplished most effectively, most speedily and most certainly. . . . However long the road, we shall press on to the final victory."

In the above two statements there is plenty for the anti-conscriptionists in Quebec to ponder. There is plenty for them to think over as regards to why we should fight a battle overseas and not within our shores. "And we shall seek out our enemies and attack them at any and every point of the globe," no mistaking the meaning of this. There is no mistaking the fact that the States is carrying out this part of it, otherwise, why send their troops to Australia, Egypt, Ireland, and other parts of the far flung British Empire? The United States is not bound to protect the British Empire, it needs only to protect itself and its possessions. Why does it do it? Because the leaders in the United States know that if the enemy is broken down thousands of miles from the shores of the United States, the liberty of the peoples on this side of the Atlantic will be best preserved. If final victory can be won by the United Nations, then the peace and liberty of the whole world can be restored. This is not a selfish attitude, such as the "No" voters would have it in this country, those who are only thinking of themselves, those who would have any other person go and fight rather than take their share in the winning of victory. It is truly as Mr. Hull said, "A test of the calibre of nations and individuals."

We shall not win this war by waiting at home until the enemy appears on the horizon. We must go out and attack the enemy wherever he is, beat him at his own game. This cannot be done foolishly, but must be part of a well developed and thought out plan, we must be well equipped, be sure of our ground and the outcome, it must not be another Norway, Dunkerque, Hong Kong, Singapore or the other casualties we have already faced. The end of the road after an attack must be final victory. All these things Mr. Hull pointed out in his speech, not quite in this form, but with the same meaning. Mr. Hull is convinced that we shall win and he also voiced some changes which would have to be made after we had won, but first and foremost he said we must win the war.

Much of Mr. Hull's speech can be taken to heart, there was nothing which would prove that the United Nations had gained the upper hand, or that they were ahead in production of war materials. There was much to urge the people on to greater things, and to give courage. "The States has entered into the war on a truly all-out basis, it is our duty in this country to co-operate and make our war effort even more total. The time is gradually approaching when this will be the case, we must be ready to do our part."

Hitler and Russia

THE war seems to have confined itself at the moment to the opening of a second front, and the fighting on the Russian front seems to be such, that the Red Army is falling back against the tremendous onslaughts of the Nazi foe. The Germans seem to be gradually encircling the southern portion of Russia around the Caucasus, that vital part where oil may be found and where the wheat fields of the Ukraine would yield valuable booty to the invading army. It would also seem that Hitler has abandoned his idea of taking Moscow, in this new drive, and is confining his activities to getting the oil and wheat in the south. If predictions of the arm-chair generals are true, then he also hopes to make his way through Iraq and Iran into Palestine and meet up with Rommel's forces in Egypt as well as to make possible contact with Japanese forces somewhere in Africa. If this were to take place, the United Nations' forces in that part of the world would be completely encircled. This would mean that those possessions to the East—India, Australia, New Zealand and so on would also be cut off. The Mediterranean, with Gibraltar, Malta, Alexandria and other points would be practically sealed. The way would also be opened for a Japanese invasion of India and Ceylon.

If one views the situation through these eyes and if such developments can take place, then the situation in Russia is critical indeed. While the prize of oil holds much for Hitler, the possible further gains may hold much more. It would be almost like cutting the world in two, with the possibility of the enemy widening the cleavage. It would give the enemy the hopping off point of Dakar, from which point they could send planes to this continent and to the Panama Canal zone. With Argentina and Chile still among the neutral nations of the South Americas, it is hard to say just what assistance might be obtained in that direction, if such a thing became possible.

If Hitler is able to win the Caucasus battle, it is estimated he will be able to get vast quantities of oil that will considerably improve his position for further conquest. He will also get valuable land to provide food for his armies and an outlet by sea. It is no wonder then that the German armies are putting up such a strong and determined fight to win this region.

It is also no wonder that there is such a clamor for a second front to relieve pressure on the Russian front. If all is at stake that appears to be, a second front may be the only means of salvation for the United Nations. The position on the Russian front is grave, the Germans gaining more ground despite the stubborn counter attacks and resistance of the Russians. Rostov is threatened badly, if it has not already fallen, the next big centre in line appears to be Stalingrad. The Caucasus besides yielding the oil is also the centre of a gigantic manufacturing area, which would mean much to the Germans in the persecution of the war.

In London, England, an immense demonstration for a second front was staged. The crowd asked when they wanted a second front, shouted NOW! The Russians are appealing every day for a second front. Time is the vital factor in all these movements and there is no doubt that no time is being wasted to put methods into effect which will help the Russians and thwart the Germans.

The India Question

MUCH concern is being felt these days regarding the situation in India and the disobedience campaign of Mahatma Gandhi. This campaign, Gandhi has described himself, as "open rebellion." A resolution is to go before the whole of the group of followers, on August 7th, for ratification, and there is every indication that it will be approved.

Sir Stafford Cripps has appealed to the United States in a recent broadcast for sympathy with Britain and understanding of her position in the matter. He said to yield to Gandhi would mean chaos and disorder. It was as much in the interests of the United States as to Britain and China that India remain a safe base for operations against Japan.

India insofar as Britain is concerned has always been a source of worry and many are inclined to think that its loss would not be badly felt whatever happened. But there is the fact that another source of supply for many articles we need, would be lost, as well as a base for operations in the far east. Every loss in that part of the world means more difficulties in communication with our colonies—Australia and New Zealand, not to mention other points, and China. To maintain order in India would mean the sending of large numbers of troops and equipment, and it would also give the Axis powers much matter for propaganda. This they could use to induce the remaining neutrals to fall in with them. Such small matters appear to have little or no significance, but really they mount up and add to the difficulties already to be encountered.

Looking over the years and at the trouble India has caused Britain, the worth of the country does not seem enough to bother about. It has already caused the loss of numbers of British lives and has been a bone of contention as long as can be remembered. There are a number of loyal subjects among the natives of India, but there are also a number of fanatical tribes who have continuously stirred up strife and disunity.

Gandhi says they will fight against the Japanese if they try to invade their country and they will also fight against the British if they try to defend it. With such an attitude what can be done? Britain knows that they cannot stand against a Japanese invasion, yet British authorities are loth to use force in order to make these people see the error of their ways.

During the time that Britain has ruled India much has been done to improve conditions for the people and for the country. The City of Delhi stands as a shining example of this. It is one of the most beautiful, yet modern cities in the world today. Much has had to be accomplished to make this city what it is, many obstacles had to be surmounted. In it the Hindu as well as the foreigner enjoy full liberty and freedom, as it is accorded wherever the Union Jack flies.

YOU CAN keep it flying!

And speaking of cost . . . it's going to take billions of dollars to keep our priceless British Flag flying. Our soldiers and sailors need ships, planes, and tanks in increasingly large numbers. We at home are asked to supply these ships, planes, and tanks by putting at least a small part of our income into War Savings Stamps every pay day.

Thus, while thousands of our boys are giving up their lives for their country, all we are asked to do is lend—not give—our Government the money it needs to finance the war.

This can't be called a sacrifice, for each time we invest in a War Savings Certificate in 1942 we're insuring ourselves an income for after war years.

War Savings Stamps can be purchased easily at post offices, banks, and many stores, or through a pay-roll savings plan at your office or factory.

So remember . . . when you see the Flag flying, that you can keep it flying by pledging at least a part of your income for War Savings Certificates for your own sake and your country's sake!

CHATEAUGUAY, BEAUHARNOIS and HUNTINGDON COUNTIES

From Manuscripts of
 The Late ROBERT SELLAR

REV. JAS. CROMBIE (Continued)—They had been without a minister for over 20 years, always hoping to get a Gaelic one, and had given a call to Frazer, who, however, went to Indian hands. After all their waiting, they told me they had to put up with a Scotchman. As they did not think it worth the while to go to church unless the service lasted three hours, I began at Genesis, and went right on, expounding, and had reached Isaiah when I left for Smith Falls. The people in coming to church dressed as they had done in Scotland—old men in matches, girls with nappies, and men in shirt sleeves. There was only one cloth coat among them, and it was blue with brass buttons, his old wedding coat. Of their honesty and worth I cannot say too much. Rev. Wm. MacPherson, who I met when I went to Lanark County, but I heard much of him. He was of rare energy and indefatigable in his duties. The worst said of him was that he was anxious in gathering money. He enjoyed to his death a $100 a year allowed out to the millwrights and, turning to the Old Kirk, drew also from the clergy reserves. When he died he left a little fortune. His sons were all clever and had a strong scientific bent. They rose in life, though intemperance was the cause of more than one. With Dr. Kemp and Frazer to translate, I was sent by Presbytery to investigate a charge of witchcraft in Winslow. The people were all decent and the accused was a highland looking woman, about 40 years of age, with a spell on her neighbors' cows, so that they did not give milk. We could not persuade the people that the charge was a preposterous one. They wanted her deposited from the membership.

JAMES BROWN, Port Lewis, son of Thomas, born March, 1822. Uncle James was the oldest of family, a stonemason by trade. He had a son, who never came to this country. On visiting America, I am pretty sure, was the writer of his appointment found a ship had been wrecked and crew had perished after practising cannibalism. This led to leaving stores on island and two men, Nelson was not of the 17th. He came after. David Brown, who bought cow lived nine miles back of Beaudefite. Bullard lived where Stalker does now. Stanley Bagg owned the lot of Holmes and Leblanc was on it. Uncle left the settlement for Quebec in 1823 or 24. Adam Patterson, I am pretty sure, was not of the 17th. Robert Higgins made no clearance and moved to Athelstan. Arch. Fleming made a clearance but did not build. Do not know where he went. Hart put up the logs of a house and left. Robt. Allan from an expression on board ship was called "Eminent danger." I was baptized by the minister at Lancaster, there being no nearer minister.

PETER OUTTERRSON—I came from the Lammertsons and was born on May 11, 1806, and emigrated in 1829. I hired with Bowron at $100 a year. The second year, with Thos. Barlow, I made the road to the Portage, for which the government had given a grant. In 1831 I took the job, assisted by Robert McKittick, of blasting out 60 feet of rock at the mouth of canal for $80, but was allowed $20 more and lost at that. The stone as I blasted them, I sold at 12¢ per foot to build the Robinson house where Methodist church stands. In 1832 I moved to my lot in Hinchinbrook. There was no road from Athelstan and the track along the Hinchinbrook was such that you had to swing around the worst holes by creeping along the bank and swinging by the hazel bushes. In 1833 the settlers cut out the road; they had to do their own half for nothing, but were allowed $10 for other half. Buck's was our most convenient mill and we got to it by a blazed track to the lot concession. Bowron laid out a road from where the old Methodist church stands to the lower bridge, intending to lay out lots on east side, but for some reason did not do so. I built the grist mill and it was I who drew up the sawmill when torn away by the ice.

MRS. OUTTERRSON—I was brought up from Montreal by Bowron in August, 1827. The canal was then dug, for I sailed on it often in a canoe. Where B's house stood, was known as "the green" and a pleasant place I thought it was. Joshua Lewis and Miss Ames taught the S.S. in the old schoolhouse. Many of the scholars came in their bare feet even when it was too cold to be comfortable. I don't know exactly why B. got on so poorly. He came to Canada when 14 years old and worked at digging wells and the like for a long time. There was no waste in the house for they lived plainly. He was a poor manager and always kept a number of men about him. I am sure he cheated him of his due share of the mill profits. The family spent a great deal on jaunts to the city. Benj. Lewis had his store in the old building opposite Bowron's when I came, and lived about it.

MR. O—I was born at Leithholm and the Rev. Mr. Taylor was our neighbor and friend. We settled from Leith in the Harmony. I having a letter to Sir J. Kempt from Sir David Milne, for whom I had been working, Bowron's favourite attitude was clapping a stick behind his back. His exclamation, "Confound it all!" The Boy's store school cost $300. There was a watchmaker in Huntingdon named Katten, Smith, the sadler, Bowron lowered the dam at the village I heard in 1825 to avoid litigation. Smith did the millwright work in the new Huntingdon mill and was paid $1500.

Opinions of Others...

EVERYBODY ON AN ALL-OUT WAR EFFORT

Many people seem to be full of assurance that nothing will ever happen to them in this peaceful country of Canada. Somehow or other they are confident that it is immune from attack by the enemy. Consequently there is no desire to change the status quo. The flight of the refugees from the overrun countries ought to make us realize the seriousness of this world war, and imbue in us enthusiasm to do everything we can to further the war effort. Did we ever stop to think that for us there will be no other country to flee to? We couldn't go to the United States, because if we were attacked, that land would be defended invaders also. We would just have to stay where we are. The possibility of attack is real and not just a vague dream. If we have been thinking that our last resort would be to follow the example of the refugees of Europe and the Far East, it is time we changed our thinking. We have got to keep the invader out of our country. And that means an all-out war effort for everybody.—Selected.

WEEK IN OTTAWA

The passage of bill 80—the man-power mobilization measure—through third reading in the commons by a majority of three to one occasioned no surprise. The cleavage between supporters and opponents of the bill was already quite clearly marked, and showed very little change from the vote on the second reading. When the final count was taken in the commons one might hear a remark in the gallery such as: "There's one change. That member voted differently last time," but such changes were rare, and the bill which gives the government power to conscript men for overseas service will shortly become law. If it is decided to bring in conscription it will be done by order-in-council, with the Prime Minister applying to parliament for a vote of confidence in himself and his administration before the compulsory service for overseas is brought into operation. The debate on conscription is now finished in the commons as far as this war is concerned. That is the idea, but there is, of course, the possibility that something will be said about it again in case it is introduced and a vote of confidence requested by the government. That is for the future to disclose. The Prime Minister and other party leaders in the final stages of debate on the bill made urgent appeals for unity in the Canadian political and racial ranks in the face of the enemy. It was not an appeal that ask the impossible. There are those who differ in opinion as to the differences of tradition, culture, race and language which prevent the whole citizen body of Canada being turned out of a mould and these differences will continue to give quantity and charm to Canadian life. No one would deny that the farmer of Quebec for example gives an enviable simplicity and virility to the life of this country. We may rightly hope that the racial differences which enrich the life may long continue, but the culture of Quebec as well as that of the other provinces of Canada can thrive only in freedom, and it is freedom itself that is in deadly peril at this moment. If there is not unity that is endangered. If we lost that war there might well be unity in Canada but it would be the unity of the lockstep. It is much better to put together in freedom. That is obviously the alternative.

DEBATE ON HONG KONG

A debate on the Hong Kong report has been promised and may occur any day. There appears to be a danger that this distressing affair may be thrown out of its true perspective. If there was something wrong about the way the expedition was trained and equipped, and if these shortcomings might be perpetuated in future expeditions, then of course the remedy must be sought and put into effect. If, however, the expedition was soundly trained, and if the shortcomings were due to the nature of the terrain, then it is in training, if we may not be carrying our training on this side of the water into the higher brackets of instruction, then this should obviously be changed, but Hong Kong is not the place to make an incident, however tragic that incident may be in this struggle of nations, continents and hemispheres. There may be a few square pegs in round holes in headquarters at Ottawa as there undoubtedly are in commands in other countries but the disparagement of "brass hats" is a genuine disservice to the interests of Canada. These men, many of whom have spent their entire lives learning the intricate art of warfare, are doing everything that is in their power to the service of Canada and the cause of the allied nations. Without these trained men at headquarters we wouldn't be able to carry on.

Jam Made Under Sugar Quota Even Better, Experts Claim

Department of Agriculture Home Economists Issue Tested Recipes

One of the big war jobs facing women in town and country this summer is canning, jam and jelly making.

It has always been considered a good thing to put up fruit and in good variety in next winter's diet but this year the clatter of preserving kettles has a patriotic ring. Nowadays it is vitally necessary to conserve food, for no-one can tell what calls will be made on Canada by the United Nations at war.

Fruit has to be put up this year under the sugar rationing order laid down by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. This allows 1 1/2 pounds of sugar per pound of fruit for canning, and 3/4 pound of sugar per pound of fruit for jam and jelly making. This, of course, means per pound of fruit as it is purchased, or picked from the trees, not after it has been pitted and prepared for the preserving kettle. In order to get the special canning sugar ration, the grocer must be told the weight of fruit which is being "put up" and the purchaser will be asked to sign a special voucher for the sugar bought.

Miss Laura Pepper, chief of the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture reports that many women write to her office asking if it is possible to make a good jam that "keeps" within the sugar quota. "Our answer to that is emphatically, Yes," says Miss Pepper. "In fact, we feel that these new jams made on the sugar allowance are not only better for health but they have a truer fruit flavor and better color than the old-fashioned 'pound for pound,' or sweeter still, 'a cup for cup' jam."

For days, that have extended far into the evenings, experts of the Consumer Section have been working hard testing out recipes made under the new sugar orders. Here are some of those which they have approved and according to Miss Pepper if the directions are followed exactly, housewives can rest assured that their products will be good:

Raspberry Jam
3 quarts raspberries
3 cups sugar
Crush fruit and simmer 10 minutes. Then add sugar and cook until thick—about 25 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars and when cool, seal with paraffin. Yield: Approximately 2 1/2 pints.

A delicious jelly-like jam may be made by putting 2 tsp. cider vinegar with the sugar in the above recipe. It produces a slightly tart jam.

Black Currant Jam
2 quarts black currants
1 1/3 cups water
4 1/2 cups sugar
3/4 cup honey
Top and tail the black currants. Simmer the fruit and water for 10 minutes. Add sugar and honey and cook about 15 minutes or until thick. Pour into hot sterilized jars and when cool, seal with paraffin. Yield: 3 1/2 pints.

This makes a thick, jelly-like jam.

Black Currant Jelly
To each quart of black currants add 4 cups water. Crush currants and boil until soft and mushy. Strain juice through a moist jelly bag. Measure juice and boil for 6 minutes. For each cup of original juice add 3/4 cup sugar. Yield: Approximately 2 1/2 pints.

Dried Eggs by Million On Sale in Britain
London.—The British Minister of Food, Lord Woolton, disclosed that millions of dried eggs would be on sale in this country, the British radio reported.

The dried eggs, in tin equivalent to twelve eggs, have come to us from the United States, Canada, Australia and the Argentine, it was stated.

Already 19,000,000 tins equal to well over 200,000,000 eggs have been distributed to the shops.

Lord Woolton described the new dried egg distribution as the largest piece of food reorganization that had been done during the war.

32-YEAR COURTSHIP ENDS IN MARRIAGE
Houston, Tex.—William E. Bergin and Miss Hazel Del Beal, of Anacostia, Mont., met for the first time in 30 years but recognized each other instantly. They were married last night. The engagement, Bergin said, had lasted 32 years. Dependancies had postponed the marriage repeatedly but "I've been getting letters from her for 30 years."

C.W.A.C. Plans to Double Strength ...

Girls from every part of Canada, now serving in the Canadian Women's Army Corps are performing the important job of releasing able-bodied men for combat duty, as these pictures show. The Corps, which will double its strength within the next few months, is employing girls in many of the jobs available to their sisters in civilian life. In every department of the Army, women are proving they can work efficiently and well. The need for typists in the C.W.A.C. is pronounced. The pretty stenographer pictured at TOP was in the ranks a few months ago. Now she has been promoted to the rank of sergeant. She is shown taking dictation from Major Brown. All phases of Army life are familiar to the members of the Corps and at BOTTOM three members are shown working on one of the station wagons at St. Marguerite, P.Q. They are L. O'Connell, E. Reid and Vol's P. Robinson and E. Davis. Those interesting in joining can get information at the nearest recruiting office.

At the Movies ...

"Moon Over Miami" Hailed as Gay, Glamorous Musical

Miami, the glamour city of the South with its swaying palms, gleaming white beaches, and incredibly blue lagoons, provides the background for the music, laughter and romance of this most elaborate Technicolor musical. Appropriately titled "Moon Over Miami," the 20th Century-Fox hit teams Don Ameche and Betty Grable for the second time. The romantic duo of "Down Argentine Way" shares top-featured billing with Robert Cummings.

"Moon Over Miami" is a gay, turn-of-the-century tale of two sisters, Betty Grable and Carole Landis, and their aunt Charlotte Greenwood, who invest their $5,000 inheritance in the hope of realizing big dividends. It's an original sort of investment—a holiday film complete with expensive clothes and a luxurious suite at a swanky Miami Beach hotel. The expected dividends—a millionaire husband for Betty.

Betty poses as an heiress, Carole as her secretary, and Charlotte as her personal maid. The threesome is more than successful when Betty hooks not one, but two millionaires, Don Ameche and Robert Cummings.—So she thinks. Don, the one she falls for, turns out to be a play-boy fortune hunter bent on the same mission.

She then kicks herself into believing that she loves Bob, a bona-fide millionaire. But before they are married, Don turns up—and the stage is set for a finale which is refreshingly different.

Not only does "Moon Over Miami" boast of a star-studded cast which includes Jack Haley and Cobina Wright, Jr., but there are in addition eight numbers by master tunesmiths Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger. You are sure to come out whistling on these smash hits: "Kindergarten Conga," "Hurrah For Today," "Miami," "I've Got You All To Myself," "Loveliness and Love," "You Started Something," "Is That Good," and "Solitary Seminole."

To top these off are spectacular dance routines directed by Hermes Pan, who also appears in the "Kindergarten Conga" number, with Betty Grable. An unusual dance, the "Seminole Legend," features Jack Cole, one of the nation's finest interpretive dancers, and his company of sixty. The Condos Brothers, the National New York speciality team, do a whirlwind routine with Betty.

The screen play for "Moon Over Miami," which was directed by Walter Lang and produced by Harry Brown, was written by Vincent Lawrence and Brown Holmes. It was adapted by George Seaton and Lynn Starling from the play by Stephen Powys.

Showing at O'Connor Theatre, Sunday and Monday, August 2 and 3.

Aubrey-Riverfield

The Y. P. S. of Riverfield Presbyterian Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Reddick on Tuesday evening. The meeting was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Gruer and Burton Reddick. Plans were made for the morning service in Riverfield Church on Sunday, and also for their annual drive. At the conclusion of the business meeting all adjourned to the lawn, where games were played and refreshments served.

The W.M.S. met on Tuesday in the church hall when the programme for the day was taken by the Y.W.A. and Mission Band. For the Y.W.A., Mrs. Harold Robertson read a paper on "India Today" and Irene Carmichael gave a Glad Tidings item. Myrtle Cullen read a story for the Mission Band, and special music, "Sowing in the Morning," was rendered by the members.

Twenty-two members of the Y.P.S. enjoyed a picnic and drive on Saturday to Mr. C. Oney's summer home at Port Lewis. Needless to say everyone enjoyed the day's outing.

Sgt. R. Tanner and Mrs. Tanner, of Montreal, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Robertson. On their return they were accompanied by their nieces, Muriel and Myrtle Cullen, who intend spending a few days' holidays with them and with Mr. and Mrs. Page of Lachine.

Mr. John Whiteford returned home to Ormstown on Saturday, having spent several days with his daughter, Mrs. Edgar McKell. We are sorry to report that Mr. J. McKell is not as well as his many friends would desire.

Miss Opal Stacey, of Montreal, spent the past week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Stacey.

The Misses May and Irene Stacey spent last week visiting friends in Lachute, Que.

Mr. Leslie Orr spent the week-end in Montreal with his aunt, Miss Esther Craig.

The Misses Ruth and Hazel Reddick, of Montreal, spent the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Reddick. Shirley Reddick, who spent the past week visiting friends in Montreal, returned home Saturday.

Married in England SKIDMORE—MADDOCK

A very pretty wedding took place in Wiston, England, on June 13, when Betty, only daughter of J. A. and Mrs. Maddock, of Wiston, was united in marriage to Clyde, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Skidmore, of Delson, P.Q.

The bride, very lovely in white tulle and satin, was given away by her father. She carried red roses and fern. Miss Maddock was attended by her cousin, Miss M. M. Baguley, and Miss E. Jones.

The church was beautifully decorated with summer flowers.

Clyde L. Skidmore was his brother's best man, and Allan Maddock and R. Baguley acted as groomsmen. After the reception at Fuller's Cafe, Crewe, the happy couple left for a honeymoon in North Wales.

Small Change - Big Savings

Fashions do not have to be changed much, in order to save material. At first glance the girls pictured above appear to be wearing twin costumes, but closer examination shows that one jacket is longer than the other, one has extra pockets and flaps on them all. One skirt is wider than the other and has deeper pleats. These two ensembles show the simple ways by which cloth is being saved by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. In remodelling this type of jacket, one-quarter of a yard of material is saved, and in the skirt 3/8 of a yard.

DAHLIA'S WHATNOTS

The Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, has revealed that Canadian manufacturers will be unable to get enough raw materials from the U. S. to keep going. Business heads, therefore, realize the need for salvage and use of waste materials in their own plants and those of others.

"The truth of the proverb, 'Waste not, want not,' has been proved in every situation of life, from that of prince to maid, from national treasury to the stocking in the peasant woman kept her money. The housekeeper and farmer can learn that truth from Henry Ford.

Frequenters of the Detroit river no longer see the 450 foot long sign which once stretched along the top of the Ford plant in Windsor. The 15 foot letters which made up the name of the company, along with the steel and iron which supported them, have been broken up and melted down to make vehicles of war. It is no new policy in the Ford plants to salvage all materials that could be re-used, but today the saving operations are being carried on more intense than ever. They are warping on waste, borings from drills, turnings from lathes, cuttings from milling machines, all are carefully saved. All loose steel stampings, sheet metal, and light stock go to a metal biter to be squeezed into bales and sent to the foundry as low carbon scrap for the electric furnaces. An idea of the magnitude of the sorting job can be realized if we remember that 18 different classifications of scrap iron and steel are used in the Ford foundry. Monthly totals show waste-fuel against waste—1200 tons of low carbon steel scrap, 350 tons of cast iron borings, and more than 1100 tons of steel turnings.

If the small nail finds its way to the melting-pot. All types of oil are reclaimed, and if unfit for re-use otherwise, serve on the roadways and yards to lay the dust. Wipers, greasy and grimy, make periodic trips to the plant.

If the small business or private individual cannot approach salvage on such an immense scale, yet they can imitate it in due proportion. Not only do people waste scraps, but they appear deliberately to do so, about making them. The Nazi is the agent of destruction. His collaborators include the carpenter who, searching for a whole board, walks over a remnant of another which would perfectly suit his purpose. In the same category is the woman who sends a large piece of cloth to get a wisp to polish the tea-spoons, while she tumbles over a bushel of scraps.

A recent report says: That such an atomic thing as the mist of paint is capable of being salvaged is not infrequently in one plant where each day hundreds of new army vehicles are spray painted. Water is sent trickling down the walls of the booths in which the vehicles are sprayed, catches in the excess paint. The paint is then reclaimed and re-used in the making of camouflage paint.

Efforts in salvaging old newspapers have been so successful that all immediate danger of a shortage is removed until further demands are made for newspapers. But there is still an urgent need for scrap rubber, steel and metal, rags, wrapping papers, paper bags, and bottles.

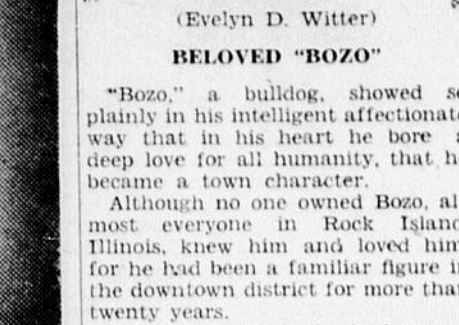

The "precious metal" used to be gold and silver, but the war has changed that, and now scrap iron has become "precious."

The old proverb "Waste not, want not," is now being prodded into people's minds, but thousands of people who are earning more than they ever dreamed of before the war, are indulging in reckless waste. It is positively terrifying to think of what form their attitude may be if the post-war period should bring an economic slump. Their witless extravagance is surely a poor preparation for re-constructive usefulness.

When we listen to stories of what our pioneer ancestors had to face during the early settlement of our own country, or that of Chateaugay, we feel pity, admiration and perhaps, unconsciously, the slightest little degree of complacency over the present advanced state of our community, forgetting how little we have done to bring it about compared to the hardships faced by our forebears. Gratitude, rare sentiment, we are apt to forget.

But let us not imagine that the days of Canadian pioneering are all over. In 1937 a line of cavalcade was seen entering Moosonee on James Bay. It was late winter. There was a tired dog team and a still more tired runner—a woman, and on the sleigh her three children, the eldest under eight. They had made a five-day trip from farther north

CHILDREN'S CORNER

(Evelyn D. Witter)
BELOVED "BOZO"

"Bozo," a bulldog, showed so plainly in his intelligent affectionate way that in his heart he bore a deep love for all humanity, that he became a town character.

Although no one owned Bozo, almost everyone in Rock Island, Illinois, knew him and loved him, for he had been a familiar figure in the downtown district for more than twenty years.

In all those years he had proved his true character. For example: Children liked to play with the good-natured dog. When their play became too rough, Bozo never showed signs of anger. He'd merely turn away and with a backward glance which clearly said, "That's enough now children," and then he'd walk away.

Because Bozo willingly offered his comforting companionship to all sorts of people he had many friends. Bozo's friends did all in their power to repay him for his faithfulness.

Two restaurant owners fed him every day. Bozo's special fondness for sweets was well known to the candy man who gave him tasty tidbits whenever he asked for them.

The laundry man was always glad to have Bozo's company as he made his regular route. At times when Bozo had a strong urge to see the town, he would wait in the truck early in the morning and perhaps ride with his friend all day.

The policeman who patrolled the downtown district saw to it that Bozo was allowed to sleep in the park during the hot weather. A night policeman provided him with a nice warm bed near a furnace all through the winter.

Another one of Bozo's very good friends was the captain of the Mississippi River ferry boat that carried passengers from Rock Island to Davenport, Iowa. Bozo was given the run of the boat whenever he chose to ride across the river.

One Christmas several of Bozo's friends gave him a handsome collar of which he was justly proud.

The year after that Bozo was picked up by the dog catcher because he had no license. The dog catcher did not know the dog very well, but like most people he sensed that certain trust and good will that Bozo radiated toward every one. Even a man, whose business it was to dispose of dogs could not dispose of this one! He called the police station about it. The police in turn told the patrolman, who told a downtown merchant, who bought the license and saved Bozo from the pound. This friend bought the license every year from that time on.

When Bozo's time was finally up, in April, 1942, he was laid to rest in the town's most fashionable pet cemetery.

Officer Bladel, who had so often helped Bozo across the busy streets when he had become too old to dodge nimbly between oncoming cars, says: "Some people say Bozo was just a lucky dog. But I say Bozo was a dog that had faith in all men, and believe there was plenty of good in every person he met. No man could resist a trust like that. That's why no one ever let him down."

18-yr.-old Girl Has Solution

Has Already Given up Silk Stockings, Wears None

Jacqueline Sprung, 18-year-old Toronto city hall switchboard operator, has the solution to the problem of how to meet the greatly increased income taxes. Her answer is a "Victory budget."

Miss Sprung who says she always tries to live on a strict budget, has designed one to absorb the increased "take" out of her pay envelope. Her salary is only about $14.40 a week, but her tax for 1942 according to the tables is $79.50.

Like hundreds of other working girls, Miss Sprung has already given up silk stockings. She wears none at all, not even padded ones, to work.

"It was a little embarrassing with bare legs at first," she said, "but most of the girls are doing it now, and it saves worry about runs as well as money." She saves leg paint for dances and parties.

Here is her victory budget:
Salary about $14.40 per week.

	Present	Victory
Board	$ 5.00	$ 5.00
Lunches	1.25	1.00
Café	1.00	.75
Cosmetics	4.00	3.70
Commodities	1.10	.90
Taxes	80	1.54
Entertainment	1.00	.76
War Stamps	50	.75
Total	$14.00	$14.40

VARIETY IN VEGETABLES

Harvest season brings a rich profusion of vegetables, but whatever the season, Canadian markets are filled with an excellent variety of vegetables. Eat them every day, cooked and raw, two or more kinds daily. Learn to eat new kinds, cooked in new ways.

WHY DIFFERENT KINDS
First on the list—dark green leaves, as kale, chard, spinach, beet and turnip tops, dandelion and mustard greens—rich in iron and vitamins. Lighter green leaves—as lettuce and cabbage eaten raw—crisp and fresh—good for Vitamin C.

Yellow vegetables—as squash, sweet potatoes, yams, carrots and pumpkin—fine for vitamin A.

Dried peas, beans, lentils—don't forget that they contain protein and can be substituted for meat once or twice a week.

Other vegetables—as green beans, green peas, lima beans, onions and celery—give you less minerals and vitamins but are good for you and are a change.

HOW TO BUY VEGETABLES

Buy vegetables in season—they are cheaper and fresher.
Choose bright, firm, well formed vegetables.
Buy beets with fresh green tops and thus having two vegetables for the price of one.
But by the pound rather than by the bunch, as carrots and broccoli; it is less expensive.
Vegetables with little waste, as string beans and spinach, are cheaper than green peas or lima beans even though they may cost a few cents more a pound.
HOW TO COOK THEM
Wash thoroughly, particularly leafy varieties, but do not soak in water for this removes some of the vitamins and mineral content.
Cook in the smallest possible amount of boiling salted water. Leafy vegetables usually have enough water clinging to them from the washing; for others about one-half inch in the bottom of the kettle is enough.
Vegetables are better undercooked than overcooked. Most people overcook. When you get used to undercooked ones you'll prefer them.
Whenever possible, cook vegetables in their skins; skin protects the mineral and vitamins.
Never add soda to vegetables; it destroys vitamins.
Save the water in which vegetables are cooked as an appetizer mixed with tomato juice, in soup or gravies. It contains much of the vegetable's mineral and vitamins, particularly the B family and C.
A postal request to the Health League of Canada, 111 Avenue Road, Toronto, Ontario will bring you a free vitamin chart and a booklet "Canadian Vegetables for Every Day."

HEALTH NOTES ...

Toronto—Until the year 1932 when the federal government reduced the grant to provinces for the present urgent need for exerting every effort to keep our citizens healthy and fit, we urge the Dominion Government and all Provincial Governments to co-operate in planning for legislation to ensure the pasteurization of all milk sold in Canada.

These measures, Dr. Bates stated, along with steady progress in other divisions of public health work, will lead soon to a national health programme, emanating from Ottawa, which will improve the physical status of all classes of people in Canada, cut down the enormous loss of time of industrial workers due to preventable illness, and sharply reduce the present high percentage of young men whose physical status prevent their entering the armed forces, and in many cases prevent their entering the services in Category "A."

Public health officers and other health officials from Halifax to Vancouver have been invited to express opinions on methods of implementing a co-ordinated nationwide plan for control of venereal disease, Dr. Bates said. Copies of the resolutions passed at the annual meeting of the Health League have been forwarded to these officials, along with copies of a survey on controlling venereal disease conducted by the Social Science Research Foundation of Washington, D.C. Significant of public sympathy to the increasing seriousness of wartime problems caused by social disease is that in Canada federal expenditures, by grants to the provinces, total only $50,000 per year while in the United States, under the famed surgeon-general Dr. Thomas Parran working in co-operation with President Roosevelt, federal grants total eight million dollars this year and more in subsequent years and the situation is now so well under control that medical authorities believe that there will be less venereal disease during the war than in the period immediately preceding it.

The resolution which is being forwarded to health authorities in Ottawa by the social hygiene division of the Health League, is as follows:

"THAT a co-ordinated programme for the control of venereal disease should be re-established in Canada and that it should involve the creation of a Venereal Disease Division in the Federal Department of Health, the establishment of suitable grants to the provinces and also grants for the purpose of proper education of the public through the voluntary association as was previously the case both in England and the Dominion of Wales.

In a broader field of national health, and general preventive measures aimed at improving national health and preventing epidemics, public opinion is being sought on the following resolutions:

RESOLVED, THAT the Association go on record as endorsing the Pasteurization of milk as a means of preventing milk-borne infections and as a means of conserving National Health.

FURTHERMORE, be it resolved, that we deplore the fact that only in one province of Canada has a law

Along the Air Waves

NATION BUILDERS

Canadian troops who are helping the farmers when they go on leave in Britain may think it a novel role for a soldier, but Canadian troops have always led a hand in communities in which they have been stationed, right from early pioneer days. Take the Queen's York Rangers, for instance, that gallant Regiment in whose honour CBC presents "Canada Marches" on Wednesday, July 29, at 10:15 p.m. EDT.

WARRIORS OF THE DEEP

Every Friday night in Montreal is Merchant Navy Night, the occasion for radio's tribute to the gallant men who change into heroes in the cold grey waters of the sealanes. CBC is presenting these broadcasts right from the Sailors' Institute and there are men in the audience who have known all that is frightful and dramatic that the sea can offer. On the first programme several weeks ago (Fridays at 8:05 p.m. EDT) the guest of honour was Frank Laskier, able seaman, heroic veteran of the present war, author and gentleman. It was Laskier who wrote "My Name is Frank" and who has given Canadians such compelling stories of the Merchant Navy over the air and in his writings. On CBC's Merchant Navy Programme he spoke of Britain at sea in 1942, and few will forget his words...

Joe saw the trading floor and for a pit of the Grain Exchange and the scene baffled him. "My never heard anything like it in my life." Politeness restrained him but he thought wild animals had more dignity than city folk, and he thought businessmen looked better on hunting trips. As for Joe, he took a train home to the wilderness quiet and a pair of nice, soft moccasins.

Wanted—Bi-lingual Horses

Mont Laurier, Que.—With the shortage of gasoline, the horse is coming back into his own in the woods operations of the pulp and paper industry, but bringing in his train a problem in linguistics. The majority of the horses used are shipped from Western Canada while many of the teamsters are French-Canadian. The horses simply do not understand the expressions used in the woods here.

A further complication is the large and sometimes colorful variety of different injunctions, commands and exhortations used by the teamsters. A move is on foot to try to standardize the commands and thereby reduce the mental wear and tear on horse and driver alike. This was one of the many subjects discussed last week at the instructors' course for woodsmen held at Venne Depot, 57 miles northwest of here, under the auspices of the Woodlands Section of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association.

Boys Find Bicycle In Chateauguay River
Following the usual custom each year, the sluice gates at the dam by the Huntingdon Mills, were opened, and the water in the river lowered. The purpose of this is to clean out the dam, and make repairs. After this had been done, some boys were playing in the river and found a bicycle on the river bed. The machine was much rusted and it is not known if it will be of use. The boys, however, were busy cleaning it up on Tuesday, in the hopes of making something of it. How the bicycle got there, or who it belongs to, is not known.
