Fifty-Fourth Year

World News In Brief

Donegal, Republic of Ireland, June 12. —(Reuters)—Police, after all-night questioning of fishermen in the Culladuff area of northwest Ireland, said today they expect to make arrests "any time now" in connection with an English trawler off the Donegal coast.

James Richard Wayman, 52-year-old skipper of the 93-ton trawler Lock Esk, arrived at Campbelltown on the Scottish coast Sunday with a 22-calibre bullet wound in his thigh. He said three motor fishing boats, each containing about 20 Irishmen, had raked his vessel's decks with rifle fire.

Tokyo, June 12. —(AP)—The death toll reached 34 Sunday in a landslide which overwhelmed a gang of Japanese railroad workers Friday 60 miles northwest of Tokyo. One more body was recovered. Searchers fear 16 more bodies are beneath the pile of mud and rock.

Singapore, June 12. —(Reuters)—Two British army officers were killed last night when terrorists ambushed their jeep on the Rawang road, north of Kuala Lumpur.

Taipei, Formosa, June 12. —(AP)—News reports today said 70,000 nationalist guerrillas had started a drive against communists near the borders of Hunan and Kwangsi provinces in south China.

The guerrillas were reported to have over-run large areas between Suining in Hunan and Shanchiang in Kwangsi.

The news accounts said the Reds withdrew eastward toward the Hun-Kwangsi railroad and were digging in to meet feared attacks on the line itself.

Pretoria, South Africa, June 12. —(Reuters)—Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts "spent a poor night and in consequence is rather tired this morning," an official bulletin said today.

The 80-year-old former Prime Minister has suffered a pulmonary embolism. He caught pneumonia earlier this month.

Today's bulletin said: "His doctors feel it most necessary to stress that in his illness there are bound to be good and bad days for some time."

Indianapolis, Ind., June 12. —(AP)—Capt. Eddie Rickbacker, first world war air ace, says he thinks flying saucers are real. Rickbacker, president of Eastern Air Lines, told a reporter Sunday: "Too many good men have seen them. And if they exist, you can bet they belong to the United States air force." Air officials have insisted they have no such equipment.

Lake Success, N. Y., June 12. —(AP)—The United Nations trusteeship council tackled the Jerusalem international control problem again today.

Indications were that the council would wash its hands of the dispute and send it back to the U.N. Assembly for more argument and new directions.

Airplane Crash At Hamilton Takes Two Lives; 20 Others Die In East Over Week-End

St. Laurent Urges Start On Seaway

Canton, N.Y., June 12. —(AP)—Another appeal for action on the St. Lawrence seaway and power project was made by Prime Minister St. Laurent at the convocation of St. Lawrence University here Sunday.

The Canadian Prime Minister, receiving an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, said Canadians "are getting rather impatient about the delay" in starting the project which he said would benefit all parts of the continent.

Elaborating upon a similar appeal he made recently, Mr. St. Laurent declared:

"I said we in Canada were getting rather impatient. After all, it is 18 years since the first agreement which we were ready to carry out failed to get sufficient support in the United States Congress, and it is nine years since we made the second agreement.

"Our need in Canada is urgent, particularly for more electrical energy. If the Niagara diversion treaty can be quickly ratified by your Senate, that will help; but both countries need, and we in Canada certainly want, to get ahead with the larger scheme."

The Prime Minister also called for co-operation in defence production and said the devastating Manitoba floods have given new urgency to the problems of conservation and flood prevention in the middle of the continent.

Mr. St. Laurent remarked that he had received an honorary degree only a few days ago from St. Louis University; now he had one from St. Lawrence. "I am just a little afraid that since my name happens to be Louis St. Laurent—some pronounce it St. Lawrence—there may be a good many people who will think I must be totally lacking in modesty in allowing this to occur."

Rain Checks Fires In Newfoundland

St. John's, Nfld., June 12. —(AP)—Begrimed Newfoundland firefighters found an ally in rain during the weekend, but they still kept a wary eye today on outbreaks that threatened two settlements.

Showers last night and a light rain today held in check a blaze that crept within four miles of Grand Falls, home of the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company, a big paper-making outfit.

Another wall of flame was halted less than three miles from the northeast port of Lewisporte, where 2,000,000 gallons of high-octane gasoline for the nearby Gander airport is stored.

Fire hose was strung along the main streets of Grand Falls. Volunteers also were at work to create a water reserve at Windsor, across the Canadian National Railway from Grand Falls.

Another outbreak flared briefly yesterday behind the defence lines—in the paper mill's No. 2 conveyor or near stacked pulpwood. It was brought under control by mill workers.

Between the highway and the swollen lake are scores of year-round homes and summer camps. Many have water above floor level.

Outboard motor boats are tied to back-door steps, or to tree trunks along the road. Commercial tourist camps have lost much normal summer business.

The same situation is reported to exist throughout the wilderness of the Rainy Lake area.

Because there are fewer year-round and summer residents, the private loss in northwestern Ontario is less. However, some lakeside camps—usually built in gentle, sloping beaches instead of high rock—are flooded. A few cabins were washed away when a log dam broke at Clearwater Lake, 40 miles northwest of Fort Frances.

Most damage in Ontario has been to lumber and fishing industries and the Canadian National Railways.

Mrs. Robert Adam Of Sherbrooke Dies After Accident On Montreal Highway—Granby Man Is Found Drowned.

Toronto, June 12. —(AP)—A plane crash killing two persons at Hamilton was among a long list of week-end accidents across eastern Canada. A Canadian Press survey today listed 22 deaths—12 were in Ontario and 10 in Quebec.

Traffic accidents topped the list with 10 dead, while nine persons were drowning victims. Two died in the plane crash and one man was fatally injured in a paper mill at Cornwall, Ont.

George Isaac Reine, 43, formerly of Weyburn, Sask., and Miss Jean Pentel, 19, formerly of Brantford, Ont., were killed when their light plane was caught by a strong gust of wind and dashed into trees as it came down for a landing at Hamilton airport.

Reine, who had been working in Hamilton for seven years, had about 100 hours' flying time, said an official of the Peninsula Airways Company, which owned the plane. Miss Pentel was a flying student but had never flown solo. They had made a flight to Centralia, near London, and were returning to Hamilton when the crash occurred. They were only about 100 yards from the airstrip when the wind caught the machine.

The traffic accidents were topped by a collision at Montreal that took three lives. Jean-Louis Bisson, 17, Robert Turgeon, 21, and

LOCAL WOMAN KILLED
Granby, June 12. —Mrs. Robert Adam of 34 Princess street, Sherbrooke, the 22-year-old wife of a grocery store proprietor, died in the hospital here early this morning as the result of injuries received in a three-car collision last night on the Montreal highway about one mile west of Abbotford.

Mrs. Adam was thrown out of the 1949 Dodge, in which she was a front seat passenger, after the impact of the collision forced open the door.

Names of the driver and passengers of the other car, a 1936 convertible Chevrolet, were not available. They were described only as "Montrealers."

Following the initial collision the Chevrolet careened into another automobile about 50 feet down the highway. No other persons were injured.

Mrs. Adam, in company with her husband, her brother-in-law, Rene Adam; her mother-in-law and father-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Adam, and her two young children were returning from a visit to relatives in St. Hyacinthe and Farnham when the accident occurred about 8:30 o'clock last night.

Mrs. Adam was rushed to the Granby Hospital where she died early this morning. Provincial Police are making an investigation into the accident.

Raymond Denis, 19, was fatally injured when their motor-car collided with another and then smashed into a tree.

Ernest Jackson, 4, died at Montreal from injuries received in a car accident Friday. Dan Gallagher was killed when a car overturned at New Liskeard, Ont., and Fred Wingfield, 50, was killed by a car at Toronto early Sunday.

Mrs. Bernice Chevalier, 25, and Arthur J. O'Sullivan, 30, were killed and the woman's husband, Herman Chevalier, was injured when a car plunged into a ditch near Chatham. At Leamington Ferro Ghetti was fatally injured in collision between a car and truck.

The 10th traffic victim was Keith Abrams, 27, of Kingston, killed when a truck collided with a tractor-trailer at Cornwall.

A young Montreal couple, Arthur Girard, 20, and Cecile Lafleur, 24, were drowned on a fishing trip Saturday at St. Hippolyte, Que., 40 miles north of Montreal. Roland Genereaux, 19, was drowned at Rigaud, Que. The body of a man about 45 years old was recovered from the St. Lawrence at Sorel, Que. The body of Joseph Richard, 27, was found in the Lachine canal at Montreal, and the body of Leon Beauvais, 44, was found in the Yamaska at Granby.

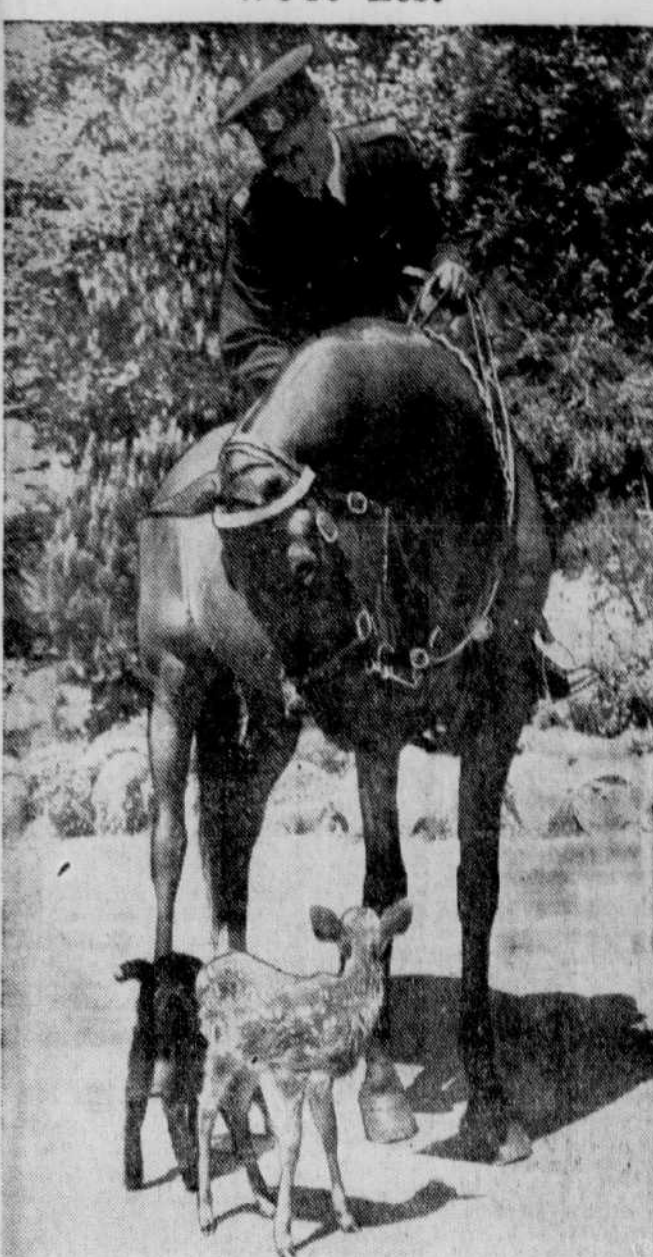

Five-year-old Larry Evey was drowned Sunday at Pointe au Baril, near Parry Sound, Ont. The body of a woman about 70 years of age was recovered from the Don river at Toronto, while the body of James Dwyer, 74-year-old trapper missing for several weeks, was found in a small lake near Sudbury.

At Cornwall, Ont., Leo Murphy, 36, died Sunday from injuries received when crushed in a paper drier at the Howard Smith paper mill there.

U.S. Congress Is Anxious To Strengthen Defences

Washington, June 12. —(AP)—President Truman's assertion that Russia is preparing for war stepped up Congressional efforts today to get American defences ready for any crisis.

At the same time, however, two Republican Senators suggested that Truman's blunt talk about Soviet intentions would be aimed in part at minimizing public attention to the communists-in-government charges of Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep. Wis.) and others.

Republican Senators Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska and Owen Brewster of Maine said they did not disagree with the President's Saturday statement in St. Louis that the Russians "have preached peace" but devoted their energies to fomenting aggression and preparing for war.

But Wherry, Senate republican leader, noted that the President had nothing to say about subversive activity at home.

"It is just as important to clean out the communists in our government as it is to stop their expansion abroad," he said.

"The President is properly concerned with the whole threat of communism, at home and abroad. Personally, I don't think they can be separated. Any subversive activity in this country is obvious."

By official United States estimates, Russian strength today includes:

1. An army with 175 divisions ready for combat, and the ability to increase this to 300 divisions within 60 days and 500 in a matter of months. Together with satellite armies, Russia can muster 400,000 tanks.

2. An air force "whose strength in nearly all categories is now the largest in the world." It includes long-range bombers.

3. The world's largest submarine fleet.

4. The ability to produce an atomic explosion.

Western military men say the apparent long lead held by the United States in atomic bomb production, plus the capacity of the U.S. air force to deliver the bombs, is preventing Russia from seizing Western Europe.

But they add that there now is practically a military vacuum in Western Europe, which invites aggression. They predict that this vacuum will cause a war if it is not filled by the time Russia has a substantial stockpile of A-bombs and a peak of military strength.

When that will be, no one outside the Kremlin knows, but it has been estimated at some time about 1953.

Imperial Press Conference Delegates Move To Ottawa

Montreal, June 12. —(AP)—Imperial Press Conference delegates leave tonight for Ottawa at the conclusion of the second round of their meetings in several Canadian centres.

The first was in Quebec where most overseas delegates landed last week from the Empress of Scotland.

The 80 delegates, 64 from Commonwealth countries and the rest from Canada, will be received at city hall here this afternoon and will be guests at the Newspaper Association of Canada at a luncheon they will visit the Montreal Men's Press Club in the evening.

While delegates are touring the city, their wives will be received by the Montreal branch of the Canadian Women's Press Club.

The only woman delegate, Hon. Mabel Strickland, O.B.E., member of the St. John council of Malta and publisher of The Times of Malta, and Lady Violet Astor, St. John Ambulance Brigade's county president for Kent, England, will be guests of honour at a reception by the Brigade's Quebec branch.

Lady Violet is the wife of Col. The Hon. J. J. Astor, publisher of The Times of London, head of the British delegation to the I.P.C. and chairman of the E.P.U.

Delegates attended a garden party Sunday at the suburban Dorval home of J. W. McConnell, publisher of the Montreal Daily Star and associate newspapers, and then

Canada Buys More UK Coal And Steel

Ottawa, June 12. —(AP)—Canada is setting post-war records in purchases of British coal and steel and thus increasing the flow of dollars to Britain.

A. E. Bryan, Canada's commercial councillor in London, in a report to the trade department, says Canada's purchases of U.K. steel and steel products are "most encouraging."

His report, published in the June issue of the department's foreign trade magazine, estimates that Canada bought 66,000 tons of steel and steel products from the U.K. in 1949—an increase of more than 100 per cent over the 31,000 tons purchased in 1948 and about 400 per cent over the 17,000 tons in 1947.

He estimated that 1949 sales of steel to Canada gave Britain a return of $7,000,000 and stated that Canada in 1950 already has placed contracts for more than $15,000,000 worth of British steel to be delivered this year.

Indicative of British recovery is the greater exports of coal to Canada, at a time when coal figured extensively in U.K. bilateral trade deals with some European countries.

Mr. Bryan said that in 1949 Canada purchased 306,000 tons of British coal, an increase of about 90 per cent over the 163,000 tons in 1948. The 1949 purchases were more than 600 per cent greater than the 48,000 tons Canada purchased in 1947.

The coal sales jumped in value from $1,800,000 in 1948 to more than $10,000,000 in 1949.

United Church Development Is Outlined On Anniversary

Toronto, June 12. —(AP)—The act of union placed the United Church in the main stream of a great Christian, Protestant intellectual movement, Rt. Rev. Willard

SERVICE HELD HERE
In Sherbrooke the anniversary of church union was observed at a special service held last night at Trinity United Church. Congregations of all the United Churches in Sherbrooke, Lennoxville and the vicinity joined in this service of praise, thanksgiving and Christian witness.

The speakers, representative laymen, told of the influence the three uniting churches, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian, played in the growth of the United Church, Canada's largest Protestant denomination.

Kenneth Nourse, of Richmond, spoke on behalf of the former Congregationalists, Sen. Charles B. Howard, on behalf of former Methodists, and W. S. Richardson, of Lennoxville, on behalf of former Presbyterians. David Kilpatrick, a student for the Ministry, was the fourth speaker.

Special music featured the service, provided by an augmented choir, the Plymouth male quartet, and Miss Jean Seath.

Brewing, Moderator of the United Church, said Sunday.

He spoke at a rally in Maple Leaf Gardens marking the 25th anniversary of the United Church. A similar rally will be held at Winnipeg June 22.

The Gardens were packed with 15,000 persons for the main anniversary ceremony here, while observances were held throughout the church's 6,494 preaching places across Canada.

The Methodist, Congregational and most Presbyterian churches were united by an act of Parliament passed June 10, 1925. A service in the old Mutual Street arena here 25 years ago marked the birth of the church.

"No one could have known then that in a short time the world would begin to fall to pieces," said Dr. Brewster. "How the separate churches would have weathered the crisis of depression and war, no one knows. But the United Church met and served and survived worthily. It was good that the three great churches should have grown together before the world began to fall apart."

He said the church now is "strangely united" in the vast and varied Canadian territory. There was no observable cleavage of doctrine and policy between groups or conferences or presbyteries.

A massed choir of 1,500 voices was augmented by the Mendelssohn Choir and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra under Sir Ernest MacMillan. Three former Moderators were present with Dr. Brewster—Very Rev. George C. Pidgeon, the first occupant of the office; Very Rev. Peter Bryce and Very Rev. James Endicott.

Assisting in the service were Rev. A. R. Bagg of the Newfoundland conference; Rev. R. D. Tannahill of the Saskatchewan conference; Rev. Mitsui Kawabe of Japan and Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

PACK FREEZE PLAY IS TRICKY
By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

When you freeze the pack, your chief object is to prevent the opponents from getting the discard pile. In many situations, you do not expect to get the pile yourself. Some times you hope to meld out before either side gets the pile. In other cases you hope to use up the cards of the stock pile before either side can get the discard pile.

When you freeze the deck very early in the play of a hand, you cannot expect that the hand will come to an end very soon. It is only reasonable to expect that one side or the other will manage to get the discard pile stack at such a time, you must be sure that you or your partner will get the pile rather than the opponents.

When you freeze the pile early in the play, it is usually because the opponents have made their initial meld and your side has not.

However, it is not always wise to freeze the pack in this situation. For example, suppose one of the opponents takes the first large discard pile and makes his initial meld. If he manages to keep about 20 cards in his hand, it would be very foolish to freeze the pack against him. It would be very difficult to stop him from getting the pile in a very short time. The reason is simple and logical: with 20 cards in his hand, he has far more pairs than you or your partner have with only 11 cards in your hands.

In other words, you freeze the pack not only because the opponents have made the initial meld, but also because in so doing they have reduced the number of cards in their hands. For example, an opponent with only five cards in his hand has a much smaller chance of getting the discard pile than you have when you hold your full hand of 11 cards.

Even this is not the full story. It is a dangerous business to freeze the pack when you need 120 points for your initial meld. You may feel confident that you can keep the opponents from getting the discard pile for several rounds of play, but can you also be sure that you can accumulate 120 points during that safety period? If not, the pack will eventually get away from you.

Q—My score was over 1,500 points but then went below 1,000 as a result of a losing hand. Do I still need 90 points for the initial meld, or do I go back to melding 50 points?

A—When your score goes below 1,500 points, you go back to needing only 50 points for your initial meld.

Q—When a player melds out, is he entitled to add 50 points to his score if he holds four black threes? A—No. There is no special bonus for black threes. Nevertheless, they are very useful cards and are well worth having.

Q—Does the canasta have a value besides its bonus value? In other words, are the seven kings in a canasta also counted for 70 points in the card count?

A—Yes. You get 500 points as a bonus for the natural canasta of seven kings. Then you also get 70 points for the card count of those seven kings.

Mr. Jacoby is unable to answer individual questions on Canasta from readers. However, he will include the most frequently asked questions in his column.

Indo-China's Emperor

result of the assurance last month of Anglo-American military and economic aid.

Reports in usually well-informed diplomatic and military circles here indicate that it is hoped that this assistance will include:

Economic aid of $50,000,000 to the three kingdoms of Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos, in the proportion of 5-3-2, to be expended chiefly on transport, building plant and agricultural machinery.

Military equipment worth $100,000,000 to be allocated to France, and the three kingdoms and administered by a joint committee with French casting vote.

As France bears the burden of Indo-China's defence against aggression and the internal revolt of the Viet Minh, it is said, French forces will get the bulk of direct military aid, Viet Nam having the major share of the remainder.

Military aid is expected to include, as a first instalment during 1950-51, 150 United States light tanks, 50 British light tanks, field, mountain and anti-aircraft guns, and other equipment.

How far French defence of Indo-China would be integrated with a general defence plan for the whole of southeast Asia is not known, but the recent interchange of visits between Gen. Harding, French command-in-chief, and senior American staff officers, suggests a combined plan.

Ray Milland is up to his "Lost Weekend" trick of hiding bottles. Only now, as an AA graduate, he's hiding them from Joan Fontaine, a Broadway stage actress turned alcoholic in "Mr. and Mrs. Anonymous."

George Stevens, who is producing and directing, wants it known, however, that the picture is not a clinical documentary. "It's a romance," he explains. "Boy meets girl." Complicated by the fact that Ray has a wife, Teresa Wright.

"It's my most staggering role," quips Joan, who has three big drunk scenes. She admits the part is difficult. "It's not comedy or tragedy—it's in between." Ray, as a reformed Lost Weekend, is functioning as her technical adviser.

"And doing a good job, too," says Joan. "He's given me two good pointers on comedy timing and the drunk's philosophy that he's sober and everyone else is out of line."

In their first scene Ray finds Joan in a hotel room with a bottle. There was talk of hiding it in a chandelier—a la "Lost Weekend," but the idea was discarded because of the certain laugh.

But there's certain to be a laugh when Joan asks Ray if he drinks too much and he replies firmly: "I did."

She says: "I've discovered that people are just as interested in religion as the movies."

Delores del Rio, who runs the other way when her swains start talking about rose-covered haciendas, is a Mexico City blase with former Hollywoodite Lew Riley.

Ann Richards has slumped down to Venus measurements again after her stork date and is resuming her career after a year's absence from the screen. . . . Leon Errol's illness has RKO worried. There's talk of Billy Gilbert replacing him in the two-reeler comedy series.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By BILLY ROSE

THE INCOMPLEAT ANGLER

When I was a kid on the East Side a couple of hundred years ago, a sidewalk was a lot more than a strip to walk on; it was something to dream on, tap-dance on, pitch pennies on and scribble philosophical sayings on, of the sort not found in Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations." However, to Gimpy Myers the leader of our gang, a sidewalk was none of these things—it was primarily something to fish through.

To put a fine point on it, what Gimpy fished through was not the sidewalk itself but the iron gratings over cellar windows and subway ventilation shafts. And what he fished for, with the aid of a blob of tar dangling at the end of a string, was everything but fish—coins, picture buttons and other bits of treasure which had fallen through.

There were two occupational hazards, however, which used to annoy this Izaak Walton of the asphalt—cops and dogs. Cops, because a subway fisherman attracts crowds and crowds, as a rule, attract pickpockets; dogs, because Gimpy's exposed rear was an invitation for a quick snack, and on several occasions neighborhood mongrels had given it the full and painful treatment.

As he grew older and more ambitious, Gimpy did less and less angling on the lower East Side where the droppings, and therefore the pickings, were slim. Instead, he invaded the lush territories to the north, and finally settled on the gratings near the Union Square subway where, if the streets were not paved with gold, at least the ventilation shafts yielded a reasonable amount of silver.

The cop on 14th Street in those days was one Ike Fogarty, a cynical gent who always suspected that while Gimpy was fishing in the subway, an accomplice was fishing in the spectators' pockets. But he was never able to pin anything on the kid, and this irked him so much that he finally threatened to pull him in for obstructing traffic the next time he caught him.

Gimpy took the hint and went back to Delancey Street—that is until one May morning when the sun was doing its stuff and going to school was out of the question. At his suggestion, our gang headed north on the prow for cigar bands, and on 14th Street we saw a woman get out of a taxi, suddenly clutch at her throat, and then stoop over and peer through a grating near the curb.

"Lost, some'n, lady?" Gimpy asked her.

"A locket," said the woman. "It isn't worth much, but it has a picture of baby."

There were neither cops nor canines in sight. "I'll git it fer ya," said Gimpy.

From a Prince Albert tin he took a chunk of tar and held a match under it until it was sticky. Then he lowered it on a string and began to maneuver it over the locket.

At that moment, Officer Fogarty rounded the corner. "This time I'm runnin' ya in," he said. "Playin' in hookey and obstructin' traffic at one and the same time."

"I'm only tryin' to git this lady the pitcher of her baby," said Gimpy.

In exactly one minute and 46 seconds, our leader delicately eased the locket through the grating, pulled it free from the tar and handed it to its owner.

"Thanks," said the woman. "It's the only picture I have of baby."

"Let's get goin'," said Fogarty. Stalling for time, Gimpy said to the woman, "Wouldja min' if I took a look?"

"Not at all," she said, and snapped open the locket. Inside was a picture of a mean-looking pekinese pup.

"That ain't no baby," snarled Gimpy. "It's a lousy dawg."

"Watch your language, young man," said the woman. "Baby's won more blue ribbons than you have fingers and toes."

Gimpy slowly stuffed string and tar back into the empty tin and dropped it down the grating. Then he turned to Fogarty.

"Okay, copper," he said. "Do ya duty."

Safety Trophy Presented To Canadian Johns-Manville At Asbestos Ceremony

Asbestos, Que.—June 12.—In its efforts to promote social justice modern management is constantly trying to find ways to improve the general welfare, Karl V. Lindell, manager of Canadian Johns-Manville Jeffrey Mine, declared here yesterday. Mr. Lindell discussed aims and obligations of modern management before Canadian Johns-Manville employees, their families and the townspeople of Asbestos who attended a ceremony here marking the presentation of the John T. Ryan Regional Safety Trophy to Canadian Johns-Manville for the safety record it established at the mine in 1949.

The trophy, consisting of a bronze plaque, was presented by A. O. Dufresne, Deputy Minister of the Department of Mines of the Province of Quebec. Others who attended the ceremony included the Mayor of Asbestos, Albert Goudreau, M.L.A.; G. K. Foster, Vice-President and Production Manager for the Asbestos Fibre Division; R. H. Taschereau, Chief Inspector of Mines; and representatives of the clergy of both parishes.

Mr. Lindell congratulated the employees on their achievement and told them that the trophy was symbolic of their co-operation and teamwork.

After pointing out that the Company had spent more than a million dollars in recent years to safeguard employees from accidents and to protect health, Mr. Lindell said he was most happy that the employees were co-operating with management in an effort to make their Company the safest and healthiest to work not only in the Province of Quebec but throughout Canada.

"It is the duty of modern management to dedicate itself to the public welfare and the common good," Mr. Lindell said, adding: "modern scientific management must be guided by the moral law and the golden rule. It recognizes man's right to more than the mere means of subsistence, his right to associate with his fellowmen and his right to possess and use property."

"Modern management is equally concerned with industry's human relation, with the dignity of man and with the harmonious co-operation of men and machines and it is constantly striving to improve the standards of living of the wage-earner and his family."

"The enterprise system which has enabled us to accomplish so much is still not without its ups and downs but because the carburator and brakes need adjusting there is no reason to condemn or try to destroy what is otherwise the finest car in existence," Mr. Lindell said that modern management is in agreement that any abuses in a system must be eliminated if the common good is to be served. He warned, however, that this should be done within the framework of free enterprise.

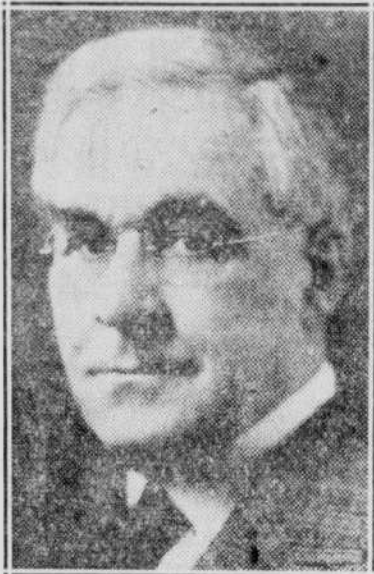

Discussing relations between

This is the sight which greeted Elly Heber and her husband when they came back to their home in Point Douglas, Winnipeg, after a three-week evacuation. The flooding Red River ripped off boardwalks, twisted gates and fences, dumped the backyard full of rubble, and left its filthy mark as high as the step-ladder along the side of the house. (Photo)

HAS BIRTHDAY

JOHN F. HACKETT, K.C., who is receiving congratulations today on the occasion of his birthday.

Housewife Tells Of Hours Spent Putting Flooded Home In Order

Mrs. Henry Heber of Winnipeg's Point Douglas district was one of 100,000 evacuees from the Red River flood zone. Her home was flooded. A week ago she brought her family back to Winnipeg and started the clean-up job. Now, in a series of four Canadian Press stories—this is the first—she tells what housewives all through the Red River valley face.

By ELLY HEBER
 Winnipeg, June 12.—The taxi stopped in the muddy street and there I was—home. From the front it didn't look too bad. I hadn't seen it for weeks and I knew the water was six feet deep in the street at one time. The front gate was washed away. Half the driveway gate was twisted and ripped from its hinges. Mud and debris filled the front yard.

But it wasn't nearly as bad as some I'd seen on the way down. I carried my bags over the twisted, broken board walk. The front door wouldn't open. At the back it was much worse. Lumber, linoleum, scrap tin, mud, chicken feathers, somebody's walk and just everything imaginable was dumped there as if a gang of kids had had a busy Halloween.

I was just sick. The back door was stuck, too, so I got a chunk of wood and hammered it down. I was almost afraid to look at the rooms. My first thought was: My God, what a mess! My next was: How much worse it could have been! The floors were thick with slimy mud, so slippery you couldn't walk. About 10 inches up the wall the white and yellow wallboard was crusted with black stuff. Above that the walls were still wet for a couple of feet with soaking up the flood water. The smell was terrible. But most of the furniture, propped up on chairs and planks, was all right. The floors were buckled and heaved, but not nearly as bad as if they had been hardwood. Softwood takes more water than hardwood. The kitchen was bare except for our big cooking range. It was such a mess my husband and I threw it out. In the bedroom the big bed sagged with the weight of the water in the mattress. All the wood work and veneer around the bottom peeled off at a touch. By this time I began to think that Henry and I might be able to salvage something. When I went into the bathroom I almost laughed. There, in the middle of the filth was the tub, clean and white on the inside and caked with mud on the outside. Henry and I, in rubber boots and old clothes, crept around, using the walls for support to keep from slipping. Neither of us could think of anything to say. Finally Henry said: "Well, mother, let's get at it."

That afternoon, June 5 (may I never forget it) we threw all the rotted linoleum into the back yard. With a shovel and stable broom we scraped the thickest of the silt out to the back, then got a hose (our water was back on though we hadn't any lights) and just let the whole place have it for an hour or so. We scrubbed and scraped until 10 o'clock at night and then went back to Isaac Brock school, where we and the four kids were staying after coming back from Wapella, Sask. The next day—last Tuesday—Walter came over with us. He's 13 and wanted to help. The first thing he did was rush out to the back porch to see if his bike was all right. All it had was a few rusted spokes. Just before we left the house May 6, when the dike broke, he'd been delivering papers on it in a snowstorm. That bedroom of ours—it's only 8 by 12 feet—took two solid hours of scrubbing. By that time we were beginning to see daylight and to realize how lucky we were compared with people even on the same street. Our house has a high foundation. Some of the low places had as much as three feet of water over the floors.

Harmony Band Holds First Outdoor Concert

The Sherbrooke Harmony Band opened its 1950 season of outdoor concerts last night at Dufresne Park. In the absence of Sylvio Lacharite, this year's series will be conducted by Harry Long.

Featured on the program were the two Sherbrooke soloists who won the semi-final auditions in the Quebec Band Association contest for young musicians of the province. The winners, Serg. Garant and Paul Pigeon, will play at the Band Festival in Granby, June 18, in competition for two prizes, a month's free study in New York under the supervision of Leona May Smith, noted American trumpet virtuoso; and a $500 scholarship to the Ethan Allan Music Camp in Vermont.

The concert included Cole Porter songs arranged by Robert Russell Bennett, variations on Old Black Joe (Foster-Smith), Paul Pigeon, trombone; Smoke Gets in Your Eyes (Kern); Clarinet Concerto No. 2, 1st movement (Von Weber) Serge Garant; Excerpts from Carmen (Bizet); Voices of Spring (Johann Strauss); Choral Prelude—Wachet Auf—(Bach-Chiffarelli); Two Marches, Sanapee, On the Camps (Edwin Franko Goldman); Bamboula and Carnival Day in New Orleans (John Morrissey).

St. George's Guild Holds Sale And Tea

Lilies and more lilies everywhere brightened the appearance of St. George's Hall, where the Parish Guild held its annual sale and tea.

Mrs. J. Morrison, president and Mrs. O. Burt, first vice-president, received the guests and Mrs. G. Noonan acted as cashier. Both upper and lower halls were used. In the upper hall were the sales booths, decorated with lilies and lilac crepe paper. The largest booth formed a "V." On one side was displayed the fancy work and useful articles. Miss L. Molloy, Mrs. R. Pearson and Mrs. A. Baker were in charge.

On the other side were the prizes. Mrs. A. Jones and Mrs. F. Spry were the salesladies. Mrs. E. Burbridge and Mrs. M. Smiley looked after the food table which was well patronized and soon disposed of. On the other side of the hall plants and flowers were sold by Mrs. E. Crawford and Miss D. Sterling.

Mrs. E. Bennett looked after the tickets for the quilt, which she had made and donated to the Guild. The winning number was 221 and was won by Miss C. Loveland. Ten was served in the lower hall, which looked very attractive with its decorations of lilies and honeysuckle. Mrs. L. V. Parent and Mrs. F. Pattison, assisted by Miss A. Baker, were in charge of the decorating and Mrs. L. M. Watson was the tea convener. The tea table was centered with a large white china tureen filled with lilies and others flowers on a mauve background. On the other side, Mrs. G. Shaw and Mrs. A. Merrill did the honors. The small tea tables had small vases of honeysuckle and sweet rocket, and the guests were served by Mrs. F. Pattison, Mrs. L. Parent, Mrs. C. Waite, Mrs. R. Blake, Mrs. J. Povey and Miss Thomas.

In the kitchen were Mrs. G. Giroux, Mrs. W. A. Bown, Mrs. W. Fisher, Mrs. J. Pearson and Mrs. E. Atto. The weather was ideal, and the many guests made it a very successful event.

There will be a short meeting of the Guild on Wednesday, June 14, to wind up the business of the first half of the year.

Official Opening Of Ayer's Cliff School Took Place On Friday Night

The handsome red brick building in which present and future Ayer's Cliff students will hold classes is a far cry from the little red school house of former days. The official opening of the Ayer's Cliff Consolidated High School took place in its large auditorium, Friday night, June 9.

Guest speaker for the evening was Dr. W. P. Percival, M.A., Ph.D., LL.D., Director of Protestant Education. Dr. Percival's address was mostly directed to the children in the audience. He explained that the new school could never have been built were it not for the combined efforts of the gentlemen on the platform.

"These people saw a vision," the speaker said. "It took courage on their part to bring it to life because I know the opposition they received."

Dr. Percival also explained several of the improvements which the new school had over the old in terms that made even the smallest child sit up and listen. He mentioned that cross-lights in rooms were hard on the eyes and that window-sites in the new classrooms had been chosen with care. He spoke also of the new blackboards which were built slant-wise in order to prevent the glare that had sometimes made it difficult to see writing on the old ones.

In closing Dr. Percival spoke of the new building as a step in the progress of Ayer's Cliff and therefore as also a part of the larger scheme of world progress.

"The critical thinking of the destructive form is the easiest type of all thinking. It is practically not thinking at all," he said. "Life is a co-operative venture, and it is important to make the lives of these boys and girls better." Dr. Percival asked for a show of hands from the children—those who would rather be in the new school than in the old. All the children put up their hands. The speaker was thanked by Dr. C. S. Harris.

Arthur H. Slack unveiled a plaque in honour of Dr. Cecil L. Brown at the commencement of Friday night's program.

"You all know Dr. Brown," Mr. Slack said. "He came here when Ayer's Cliff was Ayer's Flat. He has always been interested in education and has been a commissioner for schools since the day the Ayer's Cliff school was a one room affair. This plaque pays tribute to one of Ayer's Cliff's citizens and the work he has done for education."

In closing the speaker said that

Dr. W. P. Percival Officially Opens Extension To Knowlton High School

Knowlton, Que., June 12.—Dr. W. P. Percival, Director of Protestant Education, officially opened the new extension of the Knowlton Composite High School in a ceremony attended by some 300 educators, distinguished guests, students and relatives, here Saturday evening. The ceremony was held under the joint chairmanship of L. M. Knowlton and R. Eric Fisher.

In his official opening address Dr. Percival outlined the destruction by fire of the old school building, the transfer of the student body into a temporary school building and the events which led to the construction of what he termed "one of the finest public schools in Canada."

Dr. Percival paid tribute to the Knowlton School Board and the late Hon. Johnathan Robinson, M.L.A. Brome County, whose efforts, he said, had much to do with the construction of the new school. "Following the destruction of the old school certain people conceived ideas which were too big to keep inside their heads," Dr. Percival said. "A dream—the construction of a school where students may take courses according to their abilities—has become a reality."

Stressing the need for the construction of more schools of the same calibre Dr. Percival said: "Actually a child may be taught on a log in an open field, but not 400 of them. The results achieved from such a school as this more than justify the erection of such an exquisite building." The speaker was introduced by co-chairman, Eric Fisher, and thanked by Dr. Arthur S. Douglas, a member of the Knowlton School Commission.

Preceding Dr. Percival's address greetings were extended by Warwick Fox, M.L.A., Brome County. The Mayor of Knowlton, Carl McClay, James Rennie, M.L.A., Huntingdon, representing the Protestant Committee of the Council of Education, M. Dunsmore, Principal of Granby High School, and Dr. C. N. Crutchfield, Principal of the Shawinigan Technical Institute.

J. Edward Perry, M.A., Principal-Supervisor of Knowlton High School, and Dr. Douglas, made brief remarks following those of Dr. Percival.

An inspection of the school succeeded the ceremony.

Others who attended the ceremony were: Merton C. Tyler, B.A., Assistant Principal of Knowlton High School, Lee A. Boyd, John W. Martin, J. A. Jolley, Alfred Pearson, all members of the Knowlton School Commission; Rev. T. E. R. Nurse, E. E. Dennison, ex-supervisor of Knowlton High School; Dennis Gerin, M.L.A., Stanstead; Dr. Harris, Chairman of the Stanstead County School Board; and Lawrence Wright, Secretary of the Brome County Central School Board.

SUMMER HAZARDS

Commenting on the number of drowning accidents already experienced this season, the Province of Quebec Safety League has issued the following list of simple instructions for cutting down fatalities:

Keep calm and think clearly when in a dangerous situation.

Know the weather conditions that make it unsafe to go out in a small boat.

If uncertain about the weather, follow the advice of a competent judge of the weather. When it is necessary to go out in a boat in a fog, carry a compass. When in a small boat, stay away from strong currents, high waves, and a strong undertow.

Make sure that the boat is in good condition before starting out.

Do not overload the boat.

If you cannot swim, stay out of small boats.

If a rowboat, canoe, or sailboat capsizes, hold on to it, for it makes a good life preserver. Paddles, oars, and cushions filled with air are also good life preservers.

When riding in a small boat do not move about or change seats.

Children should get permission before going out in a small boat.

Do not accept foolhardy dares.

Keep your weight low and centered in a canoe to prevent its capsizing.

Make certain that conditions are safe before going swimming. Know about such things as tides, currents, undertows, and whether there are holes, rocks, submerged trees, etc.

If you have a bad heart, fainting spells, and the like, do not attempt to swim.

Overcome unjustified fear of the water.

To enjoy swimming safely one should develop skill in the water and good judgment.

INFLATION AND ROBBERY

During his hectic years in the field of active Canadian politics, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen was known for his agility in turning the perfect phrase and although he has long since abandoned the hustings, some of his recent declarations on economic problems indicate that he still possesses this ability to a marked degree. In a speech calling for the return to the gold standard, he termed inflation a "subtle and sinister invasion of the assets of the people." He emphasized that it was sinister largely because it was subtle.

Inflation serves to convince a substantial portion of the people that they are prosperous because they have lots of dollars, but they forget that this prosperity is only relative because the greater the degree of inflation, the greater the deflation in real values of the dollar. As prices go up, the purchasing power of the dollar goes down. Even today it is estimated that it takes $1.62 to buy as much as the pre-war dollar would do.

Admittedly inflation does mean that some get rich, but this is generally at the expense of their fellow-citizen. This is not new but is part of the long history of inflation.

The greatest gainers by inflation—or at least the smallest losers—are those in vocations and enterprises where the returns can keep pace with the inflationary trend, or even move in advance of it. But even for these inflation is dangerous, because if deflation follows they are liable to be hit hardest and fastest.

In European countries, where inflation has been more frequent and disastrous, wise men put their money in property and other forms of investment which ride the crest of inflation. One does not have to look outside his own community to see how wise and profitable it would have been to buy property at 1939 prices.

People who suffer greatest from inflation are those on fixed incomes. Prices go up but their incomes do not. Others who are at a disadvantage are people whose incomes, even though they may increase somewhat, never can catch up with prices.

Inflation also affects those who have invested in insurance, annuities, bonds and other forms of saving against their old age. They find, for instance, the $10,000 they planned would keep them for their last few years is now worth actually $7,000 or less. And the longer the inflation prevails, or the greater it gets, the more pronounced the situation will become.

Mr. Meighen is unusually well informed about finance and money values, in addition to being a smart speaker, and it would be difficult to improve upon his "subtle and sinister" phrase.

Press Comment

"DOMINION DAY"

St. Catharines Standard

When the Fathers of Confederation chose a title for Canada, they went to the Psalms, 72:8: "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth." And, having regard to the geography of Canada, there never could be a better descriptive than that contained in the Psalm.

Are the people ashamed to have July 1 called Dominion Day? Why change the name to "Canada Day"? Why were only four ministers out of a cabinet of 18 in the House when the vote was recorded 73 to 39 against any change? The Ottawa Journal regards this movement against every tie and every British tradition as "one of the ugliest, most barren and meanest things in our midst." Why has a little group been urging change after change in severance of all things British? In strident language, the Ottawa paper submits:

"The answer, as every Canadian not warped by a narrow, meaningless, nationalism knows well, is that there is nothing—nothing except a political immaturity and an inferiority complex which expresses itself in the childishness of such things as this 'Canada Day' bill. Canada today is as free as the winds that sweep her hills. Yet there are a few among us who seem to think that we can be free only if we blot out every trace, every memory, every association, of everything that is British. They are willing that we should have association with other nations in UN, in the Atlantic Community; they seemingly want nothing of anything which suggests association with the British Commonwealth, with the Crown, with Great Britain. Nothing of unity with things which stand as the most honorable, the most generous and the most fruitful for dignity and decency in all of the story of co-operation among men."

Brooke Claxton, Paul Martin, L. B. Pearson, were all absent when the vote was taken but Drew, Coldwell and Low, leaders of the other three parties, were all on hand, and voted against "Canada Day."

CANSO BRIDGE

New Glasgow News

Cape Breton is showing signs of impatience over failure of federal and provincial authorities to get work started on the Strait of Canso bridge. That is understandable. All over this continent there are bridges over wider stretches of water than this one—long since conquered by engineer and rigger. After getting agreement in principle on the need of having the structure built, following a struggle extending over many years, it is natural Cape Breton should want a start made in the minimum of time. Nor is there any justification for what looks like more stalling. Anyone who has waited for the ferries can appreciate Cape Breton feelings on the matter.

URGES LIGHT KEEP SHINING ON LEWIS

Detroit Free Press

It didn't take long after the death of Rep. John Lesinski, Democratic chairman of the House Labor Committee, before there was a complete reversal in the case of Lloyd H. Sidener, the Illinois coal miner.

Sidener, it will be remembered, as president of his local, called for a back-to-work movement in accordance with the Federal Court injunction against the recent coal strike. John L. Lewis, in response to the injunction, gave verbal orders to resume work, and at the same time flashed some hidden signals instructing the men to defy the court.

Sidener, for obeying the law instead of Lewis, was kicked out of the union and fined $50,000. And when Rep. Andrew Jacobs, a member of a Labor subcommittee, proposed to subpoena Lewis, as part of the investigation of Sidener's case, Lesinski angrily cancelled Jacobs' call.

But the man who was expected to succeed Lesinski as chairman is Rep. Graham Barden, of North Carolina, who voted for the Taft-Hartley Law, and might not be as considerate of Lewis' feelings as Lesinski was. If Jacobs renews his plea to have Lewis testify, Barden might back him up.

This, of course, is a development for which Truman has no stomach. It would set a bad example.

So, with Lesinski hardly in his grave, there is a quick about-face. Sidener is given his job back, and the fine is waived.

That, however, should not close the case. It happened once; it might happen again if union racketeers are permitted to ignore the law and to hold life and death power over their members.

The FBI and the NLRB are investigating the Sidener case. They should continue until the whole story of Lewis' double dealing is revealed. Let the light shine on this union demagogue who holds himself superior to the law of the land.

A SOUND ECONOMY

Victoria Times

Further striking evidence of the current prosperity of this Dominion may be seen in the disclosure that Canadians in the past four years have put away no less than $3,000,000,000 as savings in one form or another. Each year they save some $4,000,000 more than in the previous year—a condition which certainly indicates no abatement of the prosperous tide. It will not be forgotten, of course, that inflation must account for a certain proportion of the gains, but even with this reservation it is apparent that the normal rate of saving is being more than maintained, which suggests that the general parity of individual income and expenditure is far from being imperiled.

The fact that such vast sums are being set aside, of course raises the question of the use to which they are being put. Obviously the money does not lie in vaults until claimed by the depositors. The fact is that the banks, trust companies, insurance companies and other agencies which receive the money lose no time in investing large amounts of it in the forms of loans to business men and industry in general which aid in the development of the country. Housing mortgages and similar advances encourage home building. Bond issues for public works and other projects are given support. The small saver, although he looks no further than his local bank branch or his insurance company office for disposal of his funds, in reality helps to provide the financial sinews of his country. His resources, pooled with those of other wage earners, return a profit individually and in the mass. The saving of $3,000,000,000 in four years is no small achievement. It is at once the evidence of, and a major contributing factor in, our continued prosperity.

The Record Short Story

THE LIFT

By EMMA S. FORSTER

The desert road lay before Eve Marsh's harassed eyes . . . a shimmering ribbon of hot sand under a blistering sun. The desert and the heat . . . they'd meant healing for her sick young husband. There had been two long, grueling years of isolation, this climate and her constant care and vigilance. Steve Marsh was growing stronger, the specialists had promised. Steve Marsh was growing stronger, browner, younger with every passing day. In another month, the Marsh family would return to their home and to Steve's business in the North.

The visiting doctor had told them the glad news a few days ago. Eve walked on and remembered that long-ago day when she had come out to this desert country with her sick husband, a baby son in her arms and a little daughter hanging to her skirts.

What toll had been taken by the restless nights of Steve's pain, by the countless meals and formulas mixed with laundry and cleaning, Eve had found in her mirror just before she started plodding up this road.

She had been hysterically shocked by the present picture and helplessly depressed by the rapidly approaching future.

Steve was going home eager to take up where he had left off with their old crowd two years before. She shuddered at her appearance and cringed at the idea of facing their friends again.

Steve Marsh was grateful for Steve's restoration to health. She never regretted the long nights and busy days. She was humbly grateful for Steve's recovery and their two fine children. But she was miserable over the way she looked.

At this minute, she was suffering a little remorse over running out on her family. Steve's gay whistle as he started getting up boxes for packing things to ship, the children's demanding clamor and her look into the mirror were just more that she could take.

She hoped the little Mexican girl would be more efficient than she looked and that she could manage the house until she returned. Now that they knew the time of their exile would be short and that the budget could expand a little, Steve had told her to get some help, to ease up a little before they went back.

Eve smiled wryly as she remembered the girl's appearance this morning when she came in answer to her advertisement for a maid. Slim, alert, dressed in red velvet and high heels, she had announced she'd just "come in from L.A." But Eve had clutched at her with desperate hands and encouraging words and rushed out of the house as if demons pursued her.

Back came that look in the mirror, and Eve shivered. Her hair was long, stinky; her face, weathered and burned; a silk sheer dress yanked out of long-packing, wrinkled; her eyes, still started from jumpy nerves. Finding that Gila monster in the shed when she went to get this dress from the trunk was the last straw.

In this palace which the emperor has made his headquarters. He prefers to dispense with ceremony and get down quickly to business.

When Bao Dai recently received the new prime minister, Tran Van Huu, and his cabinet at Dalat, he welcomed them in a 237-word speech in which he stressed that the policy of the new government should be deeds not words.

The prime minister took the hint. In less than 300 words, he outlined his policy, echoing the emperor's determination to fight Viet Minh communism.

This change, in strike contrast to the verbose but timid exhortations of his predecessors in office, is regarded here as reflecting the increased confidence felt here as a

"At the biggest and best beauty shop in town please," said Eve. The cowboy laughed. "Might have known without asking. We men are all alike."

"Don't mention it. There was a twinkle in his gray eyes as they stopped in front of the shop. "It's been a pleasure . . . I know how to pick 'em."

"I wonder what he meant by that crack," thought Eve as she went into the shop. "I suppose I shouldn't have accepted the ride."

She shrugged and forgot him as she said to the neat operator, "The works . . . everything."

She sank back into soothing hands and fragrant oblivion. Later . . . hair silky and free, face softly moist and evenly powdered, why even her dress felt less wrinkled . . . she walked out of the shop. She looked into the windows until she reached the hotel. She went in and took a wall table, gave her order and was eating leisurely when she heard someone say pleasantly:

"Well, baby, how nice you look."

That same cowboy was smiling down at her again as when he'd offered to bring her into town. He quirked an eyebrow upward as he asked:

"Care to dance? I'm not too good at it, but would you care to try?"

The dining room joined a patio and Eve could see rearmeters and other cowboys from the ranches dancing as the orchestra played popular tunes.

Eve did care to try, if only to prove that she had not forgotten. She danced back into the past, and her partner had to thank her twice before she came back from her trance of memories.

"Are you fixing to go home?" he asked. "I'm fixing to shove off for the ranch and I'd drop you at the crossroads."

"You're very thoughtful," she paused a moment. "But . . . will you have room? Won't there be other passengers?"

"No one else," he assured her. "I came in for supplies today."

They drove back through the warm afternoon in companionable silence. Eve was realizing that life could still be fun, too. She was realizing she hadn't been broken by her service . . . but fortified, strengthened.

Her chin lifted a little with pride. Irrefutably, she still possessed charm. Well, she'd been picked up, hadn't she?

She came out of her daze as the driver stopped for her to get out. "Thanks again for all your kindness today, and . . . good-by," she said, extending her hand.

"Don't mention it, baby," he answered with his slow kind smile. "I'll always be glad to give you a lift."

"A lift?" She repeated it softly, a half smile easing up into her eyes.

"A lift . . . oh, bruuuuu-utler! You'll never know!"

Eve Marsh waved a gay farewell to the cowboy in the bright plaid shirt as she ran down the road to the cottage, the children . . . to Steve.

Indo-China's Emperor Believes In Getting Down To Business

GEORGE'S GENEROSITY CAN BE DECEIVING

"Do you know," said Generous George, "you've been so nice to me lately that I really feel like doing something for you. As a small token of my esteem for you I will let you have this trick free, gratis, and for nothing."

"Don't do me any favors," growled West. "I've had some of your gifts before."

West didn't know exactly what to suspect, but he was right to be suspicious. He knew from experience that George was most dangerous when he was apparently giving something away.

The situation in question was the very first trick of the hand. West had led the jack of spades, whereupon Generous George, who was playing the South hand, had made a little speech. George then played a low spade from the dummy.

A close examination of the hand shows that George had not been so generous after all. The play of the low spade from dummy, although it appeared to give up a spade trick to West, actually assured the contract.

It didn't matter what West led at the second trick. West dared not touch the trumps, so South was able to ruff his diamonds with dummy's trumps.

West shifted to the queen of diamonds since he correctly feared that a second spade lead would set up a trick for South.

George took the king of diamonds and dummy's top clubs. He next cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond in dummy.

He returned to his hand by ruffing a club and ruffed his last diamond in dummy. He then cheerfully gave up two trump tricks to West, making his contract.

If the queen of spades is played from dummy at the first trick, East wins with the ace and returns his singleton trump. This allows West to win two high trumps and lead his last trump.

Now South is doomed. He has already lost three tricks and must lose one of his low diamonds. The king of spades offers a discard for one of the diamonds, but the removal of all the trumps prevents South from ruffing any diamonds in the dummy.

It is interesting to note that East could not defeat Generous George by overtaking his partner's jack of spades with the ace. That would set up dummy's king and queen of spades, after which declarer would need no diamond ruffs.

Lutheran's Bishop Urges Co-Operation

By ENDRE MARTON

Budapest, June 12.—(AP)—Hungary's largest diocese of the Lutheran church has a new Bishop who favors co-operation with the country's communist-led government.

The new prelate, Rev. Laszlo Dezsery, 36, succeeds Lajos Ordass, who last month was released from prison after serving almost 20 months of a two-year sentence for currency speculation. He had been removed from office by a special church court April 24.

(Both Ordass' conviction and his removal from office were protested by the Lutheran world federation. He was convicted of failing to report a $500,000 gift from American Lutherans. The federation said the gift amounted to $200,000, that it was transmitted through the Hungarian national bank, and that it thus became a matter of record.)

Dezsery in 1948 attacked Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, head of Hungary's Roman Catholic hierarchy, as a representative of "royalist, feudal absolutism." Mindszenty is serving a life sentence for treason. As Lutheran Bishop Dezsery took office, Hungary's Roman Catholic Bishops in a new pastoral letter replied to a recent speech in which education minister Jozsef Raval threatened abolition of religious instruction in secondary schools and curtailment of Catholic orders of monks and nuns.

The Bishops urged parents to re-

Former E. T. Resident Dies In Toronto

The sudden death of Mr. Earl P. Sutton, of coronary thrombosis, occurred on April 20, at his home in Toronto, and was a great shock to his family and friends.

He was born in Barnston, Que., on August 27, 1884, and was the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Sutton.

On August 31, 1904, he was united in marriage to Miss Julia Gill, of Coaticook, Que., and lived in that town for several years, leaving it to enlist during the first World War. He served with the 117th Battalion, being wounded in the battle of Ypres.

On his return, he and his family moved to Toronto, where he was employed by the Toronto Tramways Co.

At the funeral, held in the chapel of the Trull Funeral Home, many friends and many beautiful flowers bore testimony to the love and esteem in which he was held. An organ solo was played, the hymn being a favourite of his, "The Old Rugged Cross," and Mrs. Chapman Clifton paid tribute to his sacrifices for his country.

Six friends, employees of the Toronto Tramways Co., acted as pall bearers, and he was laid to rest in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

The family have the sympathy of many friends in this loss. Surviving him are his wife, one son, Stewart Sutton and Mrs. Sutton, one daughter, Marion, (Mrs. Horton) and Mr. Horton, and eight grandchildren.

Those who knew Mr. Sutton best, know of his high regard for all that was good in his fellowmen, his loyalty to all ties that bound him to his family, and country, his deep convictions, and his kindly nature. The lines of Whitfield's poem, seem a fitting tribute to one who has passed so suddenly from this life to another:

"He is not dead, and I will not say That he is dead; he is just away. With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand, He has wandered into an unknown land."

And let us dream how very fair It needs must be, since he lingers there.

I cannot say, and I will not say, That he is dead. He is just away."

He has wandered into an unknown land.

Television Suicide At Baseball Game

Houston, Tex., June 12.—(AP)—Houston television followers heard 50-year-old laundryman commit suicide last night at a Texas League baseball game.

Stanford B. Twente shot himself to death as he sat beside telecaster Dick Gottlieb in a press box at Buffalo Stadium. The shot was heard over television and throughout the stadium.

Seconds later a TV camera focused on Twente's slumped form.

Tom Maes, justice of the peace, was among those watching the game on television. He returned an inquest verdict of suicide without leaving his home.

Police had a report a half-hour before the shooting that Twente had told a waitress he was going to kill himself and to watch me at the end of the fifth.

The shooting occurred as pitcher Don Stephens, of Houston, stepped to the plate to start the last half of the sixth inning against Tulsa.

Twente died in a hospital about two hours later.

Twente appeared at the television booth and told Gottlieb, "I got something to tell you."

Gottlieb waved the man away and continued narrating the game. Twente seated himself between the announcer and the TV engineer, Lee Bennett. Just as Bennett started to get Twente to leave the box, Twente pulled a pistol, shot himself and fell across the engineer.

Gottlieb told his audience: "Ladies and gentlemen, a tremendous thing has just happened. A gentleman has just shot himself. I return you now to the studio."

Two minutes later the telecast of the baseball game was resumed.

the plaque for Dr. Brown was in appreciation of the work he has done for the Ayer's Cliff community as Member of the Local School Board and Protestant Committee.

Dr. Brown thanked Mr. Slack and the community for their expression of good will. "I retired from the municipal council and remained as commissioner for schools, and in that I have been very happy," he said. "The educational problem is a troublesome one. Ayer's Cliff would be nothing more than a wide space in the road if we didn't have a school. The school makes the community—we can be proud when we look back and see what we have done through the years."

Dr. Brown also spoke of the advance made by science in the last few years. He felt it was too bad the humanities had to suffer. "Nothing has ever replaced them," the speaker said. "For purposes of peace the world has come rather to a stand-still and perhaps now some of the humanities will come back."

"It is from Greece that we received our democracy. The Greeks were intelligent, they were philosophers, they obeyed the laws, and they were fond of sports. Children often do not know what to do to be stable in this day and age. It is hard to get them acquainted and adjusted to their surroundings, and all this can be learned from the ancients. Men today have a tendency to think collectively rather than individually and they must learn that this type of thinking is not progress."

Dr. Brown also mentioned that though the central board did not take an active part in the building of the school it was always behind those who put the plan into action.

Children in the front rows of the auditorium Friday night were particularly quiet during the address of their principal, Miss Annie A. Howse. She too directed many of her remarks at the children themselves, and spoke of them as living growing plants. "A farmer," she said, "works with the plants environment to ensure its healthy, happy growth."

"If we had a school like this a few years ago I don't think I would have dropped out in grade XI," one boy had remarked rather wistfully, Miss Howse said.

Denis Gerin, M.L.A., told the children of the little red school which had existed in his time and brought them greetings from the government.

"We are living in a pretty nice country," Mr. Gerin continued. "Is there another province where a speaker of another race and religion would be invited to address English Protestant school-children?"

Mr. Gerin offered a prize to the pupil making the most progress in French.

Chairman for the evening was James E. Walker. The invocation was pronounced by Rev. Harold Boomhord and the benediction by Rev. C. H. Jensen.

Controversy In Dog Derby Arises

London, June 12.—(AP)—The dog-gondest betting controversy in years may arise from this year's dog derby.

The fuss focuses on red wind, red-hot favorite for the canine classic, to be run at White City Stadium here June 24.

The big question is: red wind really red wind, or is he a ringer? His owner, Frank Davis, along with Frank's two brothers, Aaron and Sidney, is accused of conspiracy to substitute another animal to run in place of the greyhound he originally entered in the derby.

The "brothers' trial will be heard in the session opening June 20, but likely won't be completed by post time.

Fans have been backing the dog they knew as Red Wind, who had beaten its price down to 2-to-1 before Davis was charged. Now the question arises: if "Red Wind" wins, and it's proved the dog is a ringer, will the bookies have to pay up?

White city authorities say they will, and one of London's biggest off-the-course betting firms, (Sherman's, Ltd.) agrees.

"Even if it were proved that the dog was not Red Wind we should pay out on it—if it won—because members of the public would have backed it in good faith, and we have accepted their bets," a company spokesman said.

Other firms aren't so sure they'd pay all winning bets. If a fraud has been perpetrated, and a

R. M. Fowler Declines To Testify

Montreal, June 12.—(AP)—R. M. Fowler, president of the News-Press Association of Canada, said today that "would be no useful purpose to be served" in his testifying before a sub-committee of the United States House of Representatives.

His position was made known in a letter to representative Emanuel Celler, chairman of the House judiciary committee. A sub-committee on study of monopoly power has been investigating the newspaper situation and will open hearings June 19.

In a letter dated June 2, Mr. Celler invited Mr. Fowler to testify. A copy of the letter and reply were made public by Mr. Fowler today.

Mr. Fowler drew attention to a letter he wrote Feb. 8 inviting Mr. Celler's committee to come to Canada to study Canadian newspaper production.

He said the only reply was a Feb. 25 letter in which you . . . indicated it might well be that the committee could accept my invitation after the adjournment of Congress."

"I have had no further word from you as to the committee's decision, although I noticed a statement of yours released to the press in April that you did not need to come to Canada to be already in advance of the information you wanted."

"There have also been statements ascribed to you in the press charging that Canadian newspaper firms and Canadian provincial governments had participated in price-fixing arrangements against U.S. publications and that Canadian manufacturers had created 'artificial scarcities' and were 'curtailing production'—all this some weeks in advance of your newspaper hearings."

"In these circumstances, there would be no useful purpose to be served by my coming from Canada to appear before your committee."

Last Thursday Mr. Fowler made public correspondence with Franklin D. Schurz, chairman of the Indiana Daily Press Association's newspaper committee, and an 18-page brief of newspaper conditions.

He said the Canadian newspaper industry has been falsely accused of creating "artificial scarcities by curtailing production," failing to expand facilities and of "riding the gray train when they know the price is too high."

He said the Canadian newspaper price index level is still substantially below that of general United States commodities and has risen less than 2 1/2 per cent since 1948.

bookie suspects some of the bets he's covered were placed by those who knew of the fraud, he might decide to accuse the better of conspiracy and take the matter to court.

Though cases of introducing ringers have occasionally been proven in dog racing history, there's probably never been so much money riding on the sleek nose of a possible impostor before.

Bookies reckon it in scores of thousands of pounds.

Trading Dull On Livestock Marts Today

Montreal, June 12.—(AP)—Trading was fairly dull as prices held mainly steady with last week on Montreal livestock markets today.

Offerings were 923 cattle, 167 sheep and lambs, 1,231 hogs and 1,422 calves.

Cattle receipts included around 500 steers and heifers. One mixed load of choice and good heavy steers brought 28.50, good ones 27-28 and a few medium at 25-26.

A few good heifers brought 26. Good cows were a shade easier at 20-22. Good bulls sold at 20-23 and common 15-20.

Calf receipts were heavier and prices slightly easier. Good and choice suckler calves were 25-27, a few at 28, common and medium 16-23.

Sheep ranged from 8-16 according to quality. Lamb and hog prices were not established.

Airplane Crash Continued From Page 1

raging waters of an Allegheny river spillway took four lives Sunday but river men who refused to quit rescue efforts in the face of terrifying odds pulled four others to safety.

One river man, 50-year-old Hull Wright, died a hero.

He tried desperately to save six persons who rode over a 11-foot dam in their 25-foot cabin cruiser 15 miles northeast of Pittsburgh.

The four who survived a night of horror were battered and beaten.

They clung to the cruiser as it bobbed in the foaming, swirling spillway. For seven hours they watched scores of rescue attempts fail.

A blimp, a seaplane and even men in a rowboat tried to reach them.

Just as it seemed their cruiser would capsize, they were pulled to safety by the volunteer crew of a small river towboat piloted by a veteran skipper who willingly took his chance with fate. He won his gamble—and lost his boat as it overturned.

There were six on the cruiser when it missed a lock and went over the dam.

Wright and his boss, veteran lockmaster James Woffenden, went to their rescue in an 18-foot skiff.

The small craft was smashed to pieces and Woffenden and Wright jumped to the cruiser.

Then, one by one, the four who perished began going overboard, Woffenden said:

"It was a nightmare . . . I tried to get everybody to hang on tight and wait for help but it wasn't long before one of the women was swept overboard. The next was Hull. Then another woman fell in. Finally a man disappeared. That left four of us."

Authorities listed the lost, in addition to Wright, as: Mrs. William Fisher, 29; Mrs. Carol Kreig, about 30, wife of one of the rescued, and William Lahey, Jr., about 25.

In the field of U.K. cutlery and hardware, Canada's purchases went up from $2,700,000 in 1948 to $3,000,000 in 1949. Canada's purchases of U.K. electrical goods climbed from $2,200,000 to more than $3,000,000.

Derby Academy Takes Honors In Essay Contest

Derby Line, June 12.—Three of the four grand prizes in the United Nations Essay Contest, sponsored by the Rotary Club of the Boundary, went to Derby Academy students, with one prize going to a student of Stanstead College. The prizes were given out at the regular Monday evening meeting of the club held at the Del Monty Hotel. Ten of the twelve students, who won prizes at their schools were present for the meeting, and the speaker was Milton Brown, of Willoughby Lake.

Earl Heath, chairman of International Service for the club, gave out the prizes, and explained that all twelve essays had been prize winners in the schools co-operating. Ayer's Cliff Academy, Derby Academy and Stanstead College. The essays were numbered one to twelve, and the judges picked the winners by numbers without knowing who wrote any of the essays. The judges were Rene Monty, John Sanction and Earl Heath, and their decision was unanimous.

The first prize of $10, went to Miss Evelyn Storey, of Derby, for her essay, titled, "The U.N.—Voice of Liberty." Miss Joan Goodfellow, of Stanstead College, won the second prize of $5, for her essay, "The United Nations Organization"; Third prize of $3, went to Miss Barbara Jenne, of Derby, for her essay, "The United Nations—It Will Be Effective"; the fourth prize of $2, was awarded to Miss Theresa Novia, of Derby Line, a student at Derby Academy, for her essay, "The General Assembly of the United Nations."

In giving out the prizes, Mr. Heath expressed his appreciation of the splendid co-operation of the schools, and his belief that the knowledge of the U.N. that the

The speaker of the evening gave a forceful and fine talk on relations between the U.S.S.R. and the western Powers, highlighted by personal experiences in Russia and the Near East. Milton Brown stated that the attitude of Russia was such that the only thing she thoroughly understood was force, and that the other powers must do everything possible to show her that they meant business. In speaking of the United Nations, Mr. Brown said, "There have been wars for 6,000 years. The U.N. has been in existence five years. Sometimes it acts like a five-year-old child, but how can we expect it to accomplish in such a short time what we have been unable to do in six thousands years? A third world war is not inevitable. It can be prevented. But it takes

"There are times when I feel very sorry for our Ambassador to the U.N., Warren Austin, when I think of his having to listen to the diatribes of Vishinsky, and I wish it were possible for him to appoint John L. Lewis, as his deputy, for a little while. Mr. Lewis knows the tactics of Vishinsky and I would like to be present, when they were debating with each other."

President Maurice Moore presided at the meeting, and the speaker was introduced by Earl Heath. David Goodell expressed the club's thanks to Mr. Brown for his inspiring talk. Present as visiting Rotarians at the meeting were Claude Willard, past president, of the Boundary Club, and now a member of the Sherbrooke Club; Gene Bryant, Richard Croudis, Frank Jenne, Harry Rice and Lynette Wells of the Newport Club; and the speaker, Milton Brown, a member of the St. Johnsbury Club. The Doctor Says

REGARD POLIO WITH CAUTION; NO NEED TO BECOME HYSTERICAL

By Edwin P. Jordan, M.D.

The fact that polio, or infantile paralysis, so often strikes without warning and in other ways seems to behave so mysteriously has made people much more afraid of it than they ought to be. For example, last year more than 42,000 cases of polio were reported in the United States.

Although the largest number ever to be recorded in a single year, this was only a very small part of the population. Furthermore, only a few victims died and only about half of those attacked had any permanent paralysis. No one knows why this should be and it is one of the curious aspects of the disease.

In fact, no one can predict when a bad year for polio is due or what areas may become most seriously involved. Also, some years the death rate is higher than in others and in some years the numbers of those suffering permanent paralysis is greater than in others.

In comparison with many other diseases, polio is not a serious cause for death. Whooping cough and measles, which far too many people consider to be mild and unimportant diseases, cause more deaths than polio. Of course, this does not lessen the importance of polio, but it does mean that people should not become hysterical about it.

Recovery Chances Good
Only a small proportion of those stricken with polio dies from the disease. Only about one-half of those who are attacked suffer permanent paralysis and in many cases this is not serious and recovery from it is almost complete. Until mid-summer or early fall it is often extremely difficult to tell whether that year's polio will be serious or not. The first reported cases generally come from southern sections. As summer progresses, the disease appears more frequently in the north, and it is often only then that the severity of the epidemic can be truly measured. In any event the watchword for anxious parents should be reasonable caution without hysterical fear.

WATERLOO

The Kiwanis Club of Waterloo met on Tuesday evening at the Canada Hotel as usual with a small attendance on hand to witness the film shown. This film was sponsored by the Bell Telephone Co., of America, and featured an actual rehearsal of the "Bell Telephone Hour," a half hour radio program, featuring Don Vorhees' orchestra, and Ezio Pinza and Miss Theobom, contralto. It showed how a program is carefully timed, practiced and rehearsed, and the informal attitude among the great stars. The half hour film ended with a shot of the actual radio performance. It was a most interesting film, and one which music lovers appreciated. Ezio Pinza, one of the greatest basses the world has ever heard, was at his very best in this film and sang two of his better known solos. The duet with Miss Theobom was from Don Giovanni, and it was beautifully done. One guest, Mr. F. S. McKergow, of Montreal, attended the meeting. Some questions were put to the club, but due to the small attendance, could not be definitely decided, and were left in abeyance until next week, when there will be a celebration of "Father's Day," and the fatherless members will take complete charge of the meeting.

Missionary From Jhansi, India, At St. Andrew's Church, Upper Melbourne

Upper Melbourne, June 12. — Under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, Miss Lily Simpson, of Jhansi Mission Field, in India, visited St. Andrew's Church, Upper Melbourne, on Tuesday evening, June 10, before a most appreciative audience.

Miss Simpson gave a very interesting talk on the situation in India, as it is today. She explained, that under the new independence, India was now in two sections the Republic of India, and the Dominion of Pakistan.

The area covered by the Jhansi Mission Field embraces a population of eight million people, with only fourteen missionaries to bring the Gospel message to them. Jhansi, the headquarters of the mission is a town of 130,000 situated in the heart of India.

Miss Simpson has spent 22 years on the Mission Field in India, and although upon the declaration of Independence to India the missionaries had fears of being forced to leave their work, they now find, under the new regime fields opening up, which had formerly been closed to them. Therefore, declared Miss Simpson the need and call to the church is greater than ever.

Her address was illustrated by a collection of Indian curios, and the display of three native costumes, the Sari, the Punjabi and the Mohammedan.

Miss Simpson expects to return to India in October of this year. Mrs. W. Evan Melver, president of St. Andrew's W.M.S., presided. Miss C. J. A. Farquhar and Miss F. C. MacKenzie lead the devotions and Mrs. Fraser Converse gave the closing prayer.

An open discussion followed, at which time the ladies of St. Andrew's W.M.S. provided a cup of tea.

Mr. Brown thanked Miss Simpson for her message, and expressed the assurance that all who heard it, would be more conversant with, and alive to, the need of the spreading of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the waiting millions in the great land of India.

Milk Drinks Keep You Fresh

FLAVORFUL MILK SHAKES, as cool as an evening breeze, pack plenty of nourishment.

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Hot? Bedraggled with the heat? Then remember that milk shakes are cool as a breeze—but a little more nourishing.

Try this when the spirit wilts. Crush fresh strawberries, sweeten and chill (or use frozen berries slightly defrosted). Blend the berries with whipped cream and use as a topping for a tall glass of cold milk.

The big point about milk refreshers aside from their cooling qualities is their nutritional value. Like all dairy foods, they are rich in proteins, riboflavin and calcium and also contain vitamins. Let the youngsters drink all they want. Serve them with crisp packaged cookies. Make them with all the fresh or frozen fruits available.

Pink Milk Shake (Serves 4)

Six tablespoons honey, 1 cup of crushed strawberries, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 3 1/2 cups milk, 1 cup crushed ice.

Combine honey with crushed strawberries and lemon juice. Add ice and milk; shake or beat vigorously and serve immediately.

Old-Fashioned Banana Milk Shake (Serves 6)

Five medium ripe bananas, 1 quart milk, 6 tablespoons molasses, 1/2 teaspoon salt, nutmeg.

Peel bananas. Mash with a fork until smooth and creamy. Add milk, molasses and salt. Blend thoroughly with whisk or rotary beater. Pour into glasses, sprinkle with dash of nutmeg and serve with crisp cookies.

dent, was in the chair and conducted a short devotional period. The report of the rummage sale, given by Mrs. Lewis Dunsmore, showed it had been very satisfactory. The treasurer, Mrs. John MacDonald, reported on the good financial condition of the Society and a substantial sum of money was voted to the board of managers. Tentative arrangements were made for the reception to be held following the induction of the Rev. W. Ross Adams, on Wednesday evening, June 21. For the purpose of renewing kitchen equipment, each member was asked to bring a dish towel to the next meeting, which will be held at the home of Mrs. George Wells, on the first Wednesday of September.

Following the business session, refreshments were served on the large and attractive porch, when the hostess was assisted by Miss Helen Ballantyne, Mrs. A. A. Turnbull and Mrs. George M. Dick. Mrs. A. C. Davidson presided at the tea table, covered with a lace cloth and beautifully arranged with early summer flowers. Prior to departure, Mrs. Turner, on behalf of the members, thanked Mrs. Stenson for their delightful pleasure trip.

Working Mothers Create Problem, Children Suffer

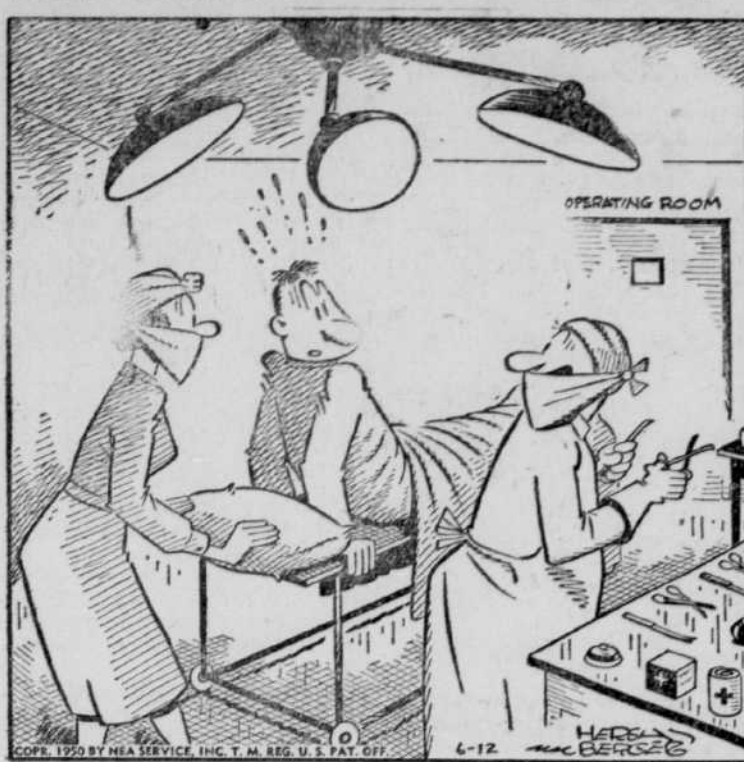

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Leamington, England — Q—
Working mothers are a new problem for British school-teachers. Children who arrive late for lessons, untidy and without their dinner money, are generally those whose mothers go out to work.

"In nearly every case we find it is these children who are generally the most unsatisfactory," Miss C. M. Scott of Liverpool told a conference of head teachers.

The trouble simply is, said Miss Scott, that in many cases women prefer work outside the home.

FUNNY BUSINESS

By Herschberger

"Don't worry—I'm banking on this being my first successful operation!"

WEST SHEFFORD

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dunlavy received the congratulations of their many friends on the occasion of their thirty-third wedding anniversary on Tuesday, June 6.

Sheffordians are interested in hearing that Mr. and Mrs. DeLorme plan living in Knowlton.

They'd rather do office jobs than look after junior.

"Many children leave home in the morning without having seen their mothers. They have to get ready for school themselves and prepare their own breakfasts."

Miss Scott recited lines written by the Bishop of Rochester:

"Bless the clean clinic which weighed me with care,

"And the nursery school teacher who toothcombed my hair,

"And the youth movement leaders, so careworn for me,

"But my mother, God bless her, she never sees me."

Playgrounds Full

Miss F. Dickinson, also of Liverpool, said that every day, wet or fine, she found the playground full of children sent to school early because their mothers worked.

Another problem is that the mother is not home to welcome her children back.

"Some children go to play centres, but many run wild in the streets and it is probably during this time the seeds of juvenile delinquency are sown," Miss Dickinson said.

"These mothers are doing irreparable harm."

She told the conference that one girl, asked to write an essay on her dearest wish, wrote: "My wish is that my mother need not go out to work."

The conference passed a resolution recognizing the need for more production. The resolution acknowledged that in many homes the woman is the breadwinner, but deplored that so many mothers do full-time work.

I guess I do use Nickel

"Bacon, meat, canned vegetables and fruits are all processed in plants where gleaming Nickel alloys keep them clean. And salt—you know how it rusts most metals. 'Monel' equipment is used in the salt refinery too because it lasts longer, keeps the salt pure."

"My sheets and pillow cases come back from the laundry white as snow because 'Monel' equipment is used in washing them. 'Monel' does not rust or stain. It wears longer."

"The heating elements of my toaster, range and percolator all last longer because they are made of Nickel alloys. My knives, forks and spoons are made of a silvery metal composed of nickel, copper and zinc, then silver plated."

Forty-three years of research have uncovered hundreds of uses for Nickel in the United States and other countries. Now Nickel exports bring in millions of U.S. dollars yearly. These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees and also help pay railwaymen, lumbermen, steel and iron workers and other men and women making supplies for the Nickel mines, smelters and refineries.

SHERBROOKE ATHLETICS WIN TWO, LOSE ONE OVER WEEK-END

A's Down St. Hyacinthe 10-8 And Split With Granby; Two New Players

Sherbrooke Athletics downed St. Hyacinthe 10-8 Saturday evening on the Saints home ground and yesterday split a double-header with Granby Red Sox. The Red Sox won the opener in Granby against the loop-leaders 6-2 in the afternoon, but last night at the Park Avenue Stadium the A's eked out a 3-2 win.

Lou Knerr scattered eight hits, gave up six bases on balls, and struck out five to chalk up his victory. Pinelli started on the mound for the Red Sox but was lifted in the 8th for a pinch-hitter. He allowed seven hits, walked one and struck out two. His teammates, however, committed three errors compared with one for the A's, which proved the difference of the ball game.

Granby left eleven men stranded on base while the A's left only five men on base.

The locals picked up their first run in the second inning. With two out, Hanson singled, then McMackon batted out a triple to score Hanson. Pascual grounded out to end the inning.

In the third frame the locals tallied another run. Knerr grounded out but Canizares, Martin and Gladu singled. Gladu's single brought home Canizares. Martin was tagged out at second and Garcia grounded out to end the inning.

The locals tallied their final run in the sixth inning when Gladu, after being given a base on balls, scored on an error.

The visitors picked up both runs in the fifth. Latshaw was given a base on balls and then Kimball drove the pellet over the left field fence.

In the afternoon game at Granby, Mains went the route for the winners and allowed eight hits. Frank Sabino, who the A's have purchased from St. Johns, was the loser.

OTHER GAMES

St. Johns Braves came up with a wild third inning in their opener against Farnham Black Sox and before the inning was over had counted 11 runs. They finally went on to take a 16-7 victory. Roy Tinsley, Farnham's ace right-hander, was charged with the defeat. Ernest Burke, who took over in the second inning from Jean Lewis, got the win.

The Sox came back to take the nighter by a 6-2 count behind the eight hit hurling of Nick Sevald. The Braves used three pitchers in this contest who were clubbed for a total of 13 base hits.

Drummondville Cubs and St. Hyacinthe Saints also split, the Cubs taking the initial contest 10-3 and the Saints the second game 4-3.

On Saturday, St. Johns blasted Granby 11-5.

THIS - AND - THAT: Amedee Roy, business manager of the local club, announced today that pitcher McGurk has been released. At the same time Mr. Roy reported that Carl Luebert, college student at Syracuse, has been signed. Frank Sabino, former St. Johns hurler, has also joined the A's. Kimball, Monteiro and Bentley, were the only players to hit safely twice last evening. Big Lou Knerr, who tossed last night's win, was in control throughout most of the game and should chalk up several more wins before the season is over.

Ben Hogan Wins U. S. Open Tourney After Triple Playoff; Mangrum Second

Ardmore, Pa., June 12—(P)—The boss man of golf is back. He's back with two sound legs, a new pin-hungry quality to his golf shots and a determination that marks him as one of the great masters.

The latest chapter in the fantastic Ben Hogan saga was written Sunday down the fairways and across the tricky greens of Merion's east course.

"He's the greatest of them all," acknowledged Lloyd Mangrum, a tough old pro himself, after being beaten in the 18-hole triple playoff for the 50th United States Open Championship.

A steady stream of pars and birdies was flung at Mangrum and George Fazio in the extra round. Hogan, moving briskly on legs once battered in collision with a 10-ton bus, fashioned a methodical one-under-par 69 to win easily.

Mangrum, 35-year-old Texan playing out of Niles, Ill., shot 73, counting an unfortunate two-stroke penalty for bleeding a bump off his ball, and Fazio, a balding 37-year-old home pro from Washington, registered 75.

Hogan thus picked up the strings of a championship skein interrupted by an automobile accident Feb. 2, 1949, on a highway near Van Horn, Tex. It was feared he might never walk again.

"My legs are okay and I wish we could get everybody to forget them," the little man said after his victory. He resents pity. He dislikes being regarded as a freak.

He won the open championship, he said, not with his legs but with his head and a putter he started to throw away.

Detroit Tigers Beat Boston Twice While Yanks Nip Browns 1-0, 4-2

The Red Sox won't win the pennant this year," the man said. "They fold up against the strong clubs."

The man was a Boston baseball writer who was made after Boston had buried St. Louis Browns under a record 29-4 count last Thursday.

"Why don't they do that against New York or Detroit?" he asked. "Know why? They wilt under pressure."

There is no denying that the Red Sox have had miserable luck against first-division clubs this season. In 23 games against the Yankees, Tigers and Cleveland Indians, the Sox have won nine and lost 14. That's a cellar-like .394 percentage.

To make matters worse, Joe McCarthy's men apparently have lost their magic winning touch at home. With one-third of the campaign gone, they've dropped 11 games in Fenway Park.

Red Rolfe's Tigers heaped insult upon injury Sunday when the league-leaders used two left-handers who pitched nine innings apiece. Southpaw Hal Newhouse scattered 10 hits to beat Boston 6-2 in the opener. Lefty Ted Gray allowed only four hits in nine in-

"I played safe throughout the tournament," he related. "I never took chances, never tried for birdies, always went for the green instead of the pin."

The putter he used in his blazing journey around the 6,694-yard, par-70 layout was a blade job he had decided to discard.

Ben rammed home a 50-footer for a birdie duce on the 17th and rolled home a tough seven-footer for his par on the last hole.

The big incident occurred on the 16th. While it didn't, on the surface, affect the outcome it added a bizarre touch to the exciting playoff.

Mangrum said he saw a little bug crawling on his ball. So he picked it up and blew it off. Then he sank the putt—a 20-footer—for his par four. He was one stroke back of Hogan at the time.

An alert official penalized him two strokes. That gave him a six. The rules say a player cannot pick or clean his ball.

"See, I didn't know that, I didn't know it meant a live thing," Mangrum said afterwards. "What if it had been a snake?"

Hogan, coming back to tie for the title at 287, ripped off 15 pars, two birdies and went over on only one hole—the eighth—where his caution backfired. He drove with an iron, hit a trap and took a five.

Ben, now 37, is not thinking of retiring, although his wife Valerie, who has made a living constantly with him since 1937, is ready to settle for a place in the country.

"I'm going to keep on playing—but not quite as much," Hogan said. "I'll taper off. I'll play in the big ones and pick my spots."

Royce Gale Jr. Wins Waterville Tourney

Royce Gale, Jr., playing on his home course, fired a 78 to win the low gross in the Waterville Field Day on Sunday. It was the initial E.T. tourney of the season and sixty golfers participated.

There was one gross prize and three net prizes in each class.

A. Pepin, East Angus, won the low net in class "A" when he shot an 81 gross and minus his 9 handicap he had a 72 net. G. Penwell, North Hatley, had the same score, handicap and net as Pepin but lost the flip of the coin. F. Rudd, North Hatley, also had a 72 net with an 82 gross and 10 handicap.

Rollie Badger, Dufferin Heights, and D. Bell, East Angus, tied for net honors in class "B". Both shot 92 and had 19 handicaps but Badger won the flip of the coin. R. Caunter, Waterville, was third with 96 gross, 22 handicap and a 74 net.

H. Twyman, Waterville, had a 101 and minus his 27 handicap was able to take the "C" class honors with a 74 net. R. Bullock, Dufferin Heights, and D. R. Lavalliere, Waterville, also had 74 nets but had higher scores.

The Atlantic handicap system was used.

Prizes were presented to the winners immediately after the tourney by Gerry Miltimore, president of the E.T.G.A. Eric Swanson, club president and Harry Mariasine, vice-president, organized the event.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, June 12—(P)—Some day soon, Bobby Feller will join the select list of pitchers who have won 200 games. If there hadn't been a war, he probably would have been the 18th 300-game winner by now. In the three seasons before he joined the navy, Bob showed 24, 27 and 23 victories. In his first full season after he came back—1946—he won 26. It's reasonable to assume that Feller, at his fireball pitching peak, could have matched those figures or at least collected 100 victories in those four seasons.

A Veteran!

It's difficult to think of Feller, the speed pitcher, as becoming a cagy veteran. But he's nearly 32, and Marsh Samuels, Cleveland Indians' publicity man, says that one of Bob's greatest assets now is his knack of making the batters foul off good pitches. When he has control, he keeps them fouling until they finally swing at a bad one or let a good one go past—and there's another guy out.

Monday Matinee

James Junior Rogers, who pitched four no-hitters for Gurley, Ala., High this spring, has accepted a grant-in-aid from Georgia—as a footballer. Hialeah's grass race course is being rebuilt this summer to provide banked turns. Dave Williams, three-time golf champion of Chicago's Medinah Club, will be 70 years old in August. But he's serving his sixth term as handicap committee chairman to make sure the younger lads don't gang up on him. Dave didn't take up golf until he was over 40, and entered his first tournament at 51. He won his third club title at 64 and figures he's good for a few more attempts.

The King Ranch colt's great victory in the Belmont Stakes Saturday, where Hill Prince finished a disappointing seventh, still has the horse people trying to figure out what happened.

Middleground had won the Kentucky Derby, then ran second to Chris Cheneery's Hill Prince in the Preakness. Hill Prince took the Preakness so easily, most everyone thought he'd be a shoo-in for the Belmont.

The crowd that had made the Virginia-bred colt a 17-20 favorite watched in amazement as Middleground romped to the wire for a one-length victory over George Widener's Lights Up.

Some light may be shed on the situation June 24 in the 1½-mile Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct. Both Hill Prince and Middleground are eligible, along with five of the others in the Belmont field.

Hill Prince, a powerful horse, got away from Eddie Arcaro in the Belmont. Hill Prince found a hole on the first turn and shot through to take the lead with more than a mile to go.

Hill Prince led to the top of the stretch, where he tired with a quarter-mile to go. His clocking for the first 1½ miles was a scorching 2:02 1-5. Middleground's time for the 1½ miles was 2:28 3-5.

Middleground won $61,350 of the $91,950 purse and raised his total earnings to $235,225. Those in the crowd of 39,152 who liked him in the mutuels got $7.40 for $2.

Golfers With Small Hands, Fingers Should Stick To Interlocking Grip

By GENE SARAZEN
Winner of Them All

Players with good-sized hands and fingers should use the Vardon, or overlapping grip.

If you have small hands and short fingers, as I do, however, my recommendation is to use that variation of it known as the interlocking grip.

In this grip, the little finger of the right hand is locked between the index and middle of the left, the index of the left between the little and third of the right.

Francis Ouimet was perhaps the best-known champion who used the interlocking grip.

I don't know if Francis at any time tried to change to the overlapping, but I did in the 1920s, when slump-ridden.

There is some danger of losing control of the club at the top of the backswing when you interlock. This was the error I made.

I lost tremendous distance when I changed to overlapping.

I wasn't able to accelerate my clubhead in the hitting area. My shots lacked punch.

So I went back to the interlocking.

When you have employed one grip for a number of years, your hands become geared to a certain response.

This makes it impossible to switch successfully to another.

I know of four top-notch golfers who changed grips in mid-career, and then faded out rapidly.

NEXT: The left hand is the guide.
