INTRODUCTION.

THE original design of this enterprise was a Manual of the events connected with the settlement of the Township of Stanstead; but, with the advice of friends, it was thought best to attempt a History of the entire County.

At the first, one hundred pages would have been deemed sufficient to contain all that could be said or written in relation to the settlement of the County; but the materials have increased as the work has progressed, and it would have been easier to have written a larger volume than to have compressed the materials within their present limits.

The compiler is among the very few survivors of the pioneers of Stanstead County. His earliest recollections are associated with the beginnings of many of the early settlers, with whom he has sustained a part, though perhaps an humble one, in clearing away an almost entire forest, and in bringing this, our favored land, to its present state of prosperity. He would hope that other individuals may be induced, from convictions of duty to posterity, to gather up the fragments of the early history of the remaining localities of these Townships.

Having passed the time allotted to man in this world, and beginning to feel the infirmities of age, he has relinquished the labor of publication to the Rev. John Lawrence—with entire confidence that additions he may see fit to make to the book will be satisfactory to the public.

B. F. HUBBARD.

Stanstead Plain, P.Q.,

July 15, 1874.

In addition to what Mr. Hubbard has stated respecting the History of Stanstead County, now going to the press, it may be said that it gives me pleasure to contribute in any measure to the completion of a work which has taken much of his time and strength during the later years of his life, and which promises so much good fruit to those for whose gratification and profit he has labored.

He has written in a plain, clear style, well adapted to the subjects treated. Indeed there is little room for other than simple, truthful words, such as he has used. The arrangement is convenient, and quite satisfactory.

The portions giving incidents, adventures and experiences of individuals and families first on "the Frontier," and settling in the wilderness, have the freshness of close personal conversation, showing how facts, the realities of human life, often exceed the wonders of fiction and romance.

The number of families noticed is very large, and the sketches, it is hoped, will be found correctly drawn.

Anything added to the book (or in revision omitted) will, it is thought, be acceptable, as helping to secure a favorable recognition from the public, and render it of greater value to the present and coming generations.

PART FIRST.

EARLY HISTORY AND SETTLEMENT.

The Territory known as Lower Canada, Canada East, or the Province of Quebec, had been explored and partially occupied by the French before the close of the 16th century—some of the settlements having been antecedent to the New England colonies. The French settlements had, however, been confined mostly to that part of the valley of the St. Lawrence lying between Lake Champlain, Montreal and Quebec, and this territory had been divided into Seigniories for the purpose of representation in the government of the viceroyalty of France. This state of things continued until the close of the French war, in 1759, when the entire territory of Canada was ceded by the King of France to the British Government. In 1763, all the country lying north of the Western Lakes and the parallel of 45 degrees, north latitude, was set off by Royal Proclamation of George the Third, and distinguished among the British Colonies in America as THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC. This Colony was placed under the administration of a Governor and a Council appointed by the Crown. In 1790, the Province of Quebec was, by Royal Enactment, divided into the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, known afterwards as Canada East and Canada West, but after the lapse of more than a century from the time of the conquest, or in 1867, a confederation of the British Provinces in America was formed, in which Lower Canada was denominated "THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC."

In 1792, Lower Canada was subdivided into districts, counties, circles, or towns, and townships. Previous to that time, the territory of the Eastern Townships had been the hunting and fishing grounds of the St. Francis Indians, and no lines of demarcation had been drawn. The surveys were begun in 1792, and completed mostly before the close of that century.

The first Provincial Parliament of Lower Canada was organized in 1793, under the administration of Lord Dorchester, viceroy or Governor General. It was constructed on a basis similar to that of the Home Government—the Royal Prerogative being vested in the Governor and his Council, who were appointed by the Crown, and a House of Assembly of fifty representatives of the people—the districts and counties furnishing their appropriate numbers. In the division of the Province into counties, the seigniories of St. Ours and Beauville and all the territory lying east of the Richelieu River and north of the parallel of 45 degrees, north latitude, and extending south-easterly from the borough of William Henry to the eastern boundary of the Province were comprised in

THE COUNTY OF RICHELIEU.

The population of this newly formed county was, at the first, confined mostly to the old French settlements. A few enterprising families from New England had found their way into the Eastern Townships before the close of the past century, but isolated as they then were, they had little to do with Representation.—Indeed they were comparatively unknown to the administration, and, for a time, "every man did as seemed good in his own eyes."

From 1793 to the close of that century, beginnings had been made in the settlements on the eastern shore of Memphremagog Lake—at Judd's Point, Magog Outlet, Georgeville, and the Lake Shore, south from Georgeville—also at Stanstead Plain, Rock Island, East Hatley and Barnston. Beginnings were made in Bolton and Potton about the same time.

In the meantime there had been a liberal disposition manifested by the Crown and the provincial Governments in behalf of the settlers of the Townships, and large grants of land were made to companies and individuals with the view of encouraging settlement. About the beginning of the present century, associations were formed for obtaining grants of wild lands. Their petitions were favorably received. Two companies were started in Hatley—one by Capt. Ebenezer Hovey, and the other by Col. Henry Cull. These two companies received together a grant of 23,943 acres, March 25, 1803. Grants amounting to 7,197 acres were subsequently made to Moses Holt, Hon. W. B. Felton, and others.

The charter for Stanstead was obtained in 1800. The grant, amounting to about 20,000 acres, was made to Isaac Ogden, Charles Kilbon, Johnson Taplin, Israel Wood, Andrew Young, Abraham Friolt, and others.

In 1810, 107 lots, containing 21,406 acres of the wild lands of Stanstead, were granted to Sir Robert Shore Milnes. Lesser grants were subsequently made to other individuals.

Among the associates of Barnston were Robert Lester, Robert Morough, Joseph Bartlett and Clement Drew. Their grant, which comprised 20,000 acres, was made April 11, 1801. Grants were afterwards made to other individuals; among these were the Philips' Lands. These have been a source of litigation in our Courts of Justice for many years.

The Township of Barford, though settled at a comparatively recent date, was early parcelled out to individuals. A charter was issued April 15, 1802, granting 20,000 acres to Isaac Clarke, Abner Woofed, Thomas Ferguson, Hannah Vaucamp, James Green and their associates.

The parties comprising the different companies of associates were generally poor. Only one or two in each company were able to sustain the expense of obtaining their charters. These men did as many would do at the present time. They reserved "the lion's share" for themselves, surrendering but one lot of 200 acres to each of the others. The land thus secured by Isaac Ogden, in Stanstead, and by others in the other townships, were sources of wealth to their owners. Many of the original grantees sold their lots and left the country, but a great number are still occupied by the descendants of those grantees.

In some instances the grants that were made to Government officials and other individuals proved a curse rather than a blessing; for not being practically acquainted with "roughing it in the bush," they exhausted their capital, became poor, and were compelled to leave the country. Large amounts of money were expended in clearing land and in other improvements to very little purpose. Several families had come in from the States and had made beginnings upon what were then unclaimed lots, with the hope that they would be allowed to retain them as first settlers; but some years afterwards the authorities at Quebec, not having been apprised of the circumstances, had made appropriation of their farms to Sir Robert Shore Milnes and others. In after years, some of the original emigrants were able to buy back their farms at an upset price, but others were compelled to dispose of their "betterments" as they best could, and leave the country. In many cases vexatious and expensive lawsuits have been the result of the enforcement of the claims of the original grantees or their heirs.

In the early days of the settlements the inhabitants had access to each other and the surrounding country, only by paths through the woods. An Act had been previously passed by the Provincial parliament, for making and repairing roads and bridges under the supervision of a Grand Voyer, but it was not till their number and their means increased, that the early settlers could avail themselves of the privilege of establishing roads. The laying out of highways was attended with much expense. The Grand Voyer for the County of Richelieu then resided in Montreal. The following was the tariff allowed for his services in laying out the early roads in Stanstead County:—

For Publishing Petition	$1.00
" Travelling expenses	53.60
" Attending Meeting of Petitioners	3.00
" 6 days time at $2.50 per day	15.00
" Visit to the place and examination	6.00
" Proces Verbal and description of Plan	8.00
" Copy of Proces Verbal and Enregistrement	3.00
" Homologation of Proces Verbal	4.00
" Order for Publication of Proces Verbal	1.00
	— 94.60

Besides these charges there were usually contingencies which brought the amount up to $100. Bridges had previously been built across the Narrows, Barlow and Negro Rivers, and causeways of logs were laid in different marshy plains. Some of the roads which had been cut out and partly worked before the advent of the Grand Voyer were afterwards adopted by regular survey.

The first advent of the Grand Voyer was an affair of some note. Indeed, the Grand Voyer was a great man—weighing 300 lbs., avoirdupois. An ox team was sent to bring him and his attendant from Shefford. Prince Albert did not in more modern days, probably, produce a greater sensation.

Highways were laid out in Stanstead, Hatley and Barnston in 1808, and worked by assessment upon the inhabitants. Emigration from the New England States was steady, but the number of Europeans was comparatively small. For many years, however, there was but little consolidation or union of effort in the settlements; each neighborhood in the different townships managed its own local affairs, and formed a kind of community in itself, working its own roads and sustaining its own schools. Churches were organized in different localities, but the religious element was far from being a prominent one in society.

The want of Courts of Justice was a grievance which was long felt by the early settlers. A few magistrates were here and there appointed, and these were to a certain extent serviceable in preserving the peace of the community; but all matters of civil process had to be carried to the courts at Montreal or Three Rivers for adjustment. This state of things subjected the honest and industrious man to imposition and losses—inasmuch as he often chose to suffer wrong, rather than seek redress from a tribunal so far distant, and attended with very great expense. These inconveniences might, however, have been productive of some good; for lawsuits were rare—men of litigious propensities could not upon the slightest provocation expose their neighbors to the rigors of the law with the same facilities as in more modern days. There are not unfrequently found in our communities individuals of this stamp, who by their frequent appearance as plaintiffs in our courts of justice prove conclusively that the law, like many other blessings, may be perverted to a prolific source of evil.

For many years, no alteration was made in the judiciary of the townships, but in process of time, Commissioners' Courts were established in all the towns and parishes that petitioned for them—thus affording an easy and expeditious way of collecting small debts. These Courts have been continued under various modifications to the present time.

As nothing had occurred to check the progress of the settlements up to 1812, they had attained to a good degree of strength and prosperity. The population had increased a hundred fold, and men of enterprise had laid the foundation for large fortunes by trade and otherwise. During the American War of 1812-1815, a check was given to emigration from the south, and some of the timid settlers sold out and left the country. The cold seasons of 1816 and 1817 rendered the prospects of the country discouraging, and things for a time seemed to be going backward, but changes for the better occurred, and accessions to the population have been gradually made.

In 1821, a sub-division of districts for judicial purposes was made, and a part of the county of Richelieu was included in "The Inferior District of St. Francis," in which Sherbrooke was selected as the place for building a Court House and Jail, and holding Courts of Justice. This was one step in the right direction. In 1828, an Act was passed by the Provincial Government, by which the previously existing counties were sub-divided and new ones constituted—Stanstead, Hatley, Barnston, Barford, Bolton, and Potton, were taken off from the County of Richelieu, and formed

THE COUNTY OF STANSTEAD.

The immediate result of the creation of new counties was an increase of the number of members in the Provincial Parliament—of these, Stanstead County furnished from one to two. Among its representatives, up to 1847, were Hon. Ebenezer Peck, Hon. James Baxter, Marcus Child, Esq., Col. Wright Chamberlain, and Col. John McConnell.

A new division of Counties was made in 1847, in which the Township of Magog was constituted from the north-western part of Hatley and the north-eastern part of Bolton, and this new township with the remainder of Hatley, and Barnston, Barford and Stanstead, form the present COUNTY OF STANSTEAD. Since that time, this County has been represented by Col. John McConnell, H. B. Terrill, Esq., Hon. T. L. Terrill, Albert Knight, Esq., and C. C. Colby, Esq.

From 1828 to 1841, little change was made in the management of the general affairs of the County, or in the local interests of the different towns. In 1841, an ordinance was passed, under which District Councils were established—the Wardens of these Councils being appointed by the Governor General, and the Councillors elected by the different townships and parishes in the district, the different townships or parishes electing one or two members, according to the amount of their population.

The first District Council of Sherbrooke was formed Sept. 7, 1841, Hon. Edward Hale, Warden. The townships in Stanstead County were each represented in this Council. Among the advantages derived from this administration, were the surveying and establishing of roads; which prerogative had been confined to the Grand Voyer.

The Act constituting District Councils was repealed in 1845, and Township Councils and Parish Councils were introduced—each township or parish to elect seven councillors. In 1847 this Act was repealed, and another was passed, which gave rise to the system of County Councils. In forming these councils each township furnished its appropriate numbers. The Act constituting the County Councils has been subject to various modifications, but it remains essentially unchanged to the present day. The same may be said of the township and parish councils—the county councils being a kind of tribunal for the arbitration of difficulties in the township councils.

TOPOGRAPHICAL VIEW.

BOUNDARIES.—The boundaries of the present County of Stanstead are Orford, Ascott, Compton and Clifton on the north; Compton and Hereford on the east, the parallel of 45 degrees which separates it from Norton, Holland and Derby, in Vermont, on the south; and Lake Memphremagog and Bolton on the west. The entire county comprises an area of about 410 square miles, or about 263,000 acres.

FACE OF THE COUNTRY.—There are few parts of our country, perhaps, that present a greater variety of surface than Stanstead County. The land on the eastern shore of Memphremagog Lake and extending through Hatley, on the west side of Lake Massawippi, is hilly and broken. The most prominent elevations are the hills west of the Narrows and Bunker Hill, near Fitch Bay.

The courses of Barlow, Negro and Coaticook Rivers are marked by uneven banks and hilly ground which generally extends about a mile on each side. The greatest elevation in the eastern part of the county is Barnston Mountain. In many places the surface is undulating, and resembles the rolling prairies of the west, with no prominent hills. On Barlow and Coaticook Rivers are small but valuable meadows, varying from a quarter of a mile to half a mile in width. The greater part of the hilly ground is adapted to cultivation or pasturage: and with the exception of a small tract of marshy land near the outlet of Lake Massawippi, and a section of some 800 acres west of the Lake, called "The Burnt District," there is but little waste land in the county.

SOIL AND PRODUCTIONS.—The soil in its native state was highly fertile and productive. The hills and higher grounds were covered with a heavy growth of maple, beech, birch, white ash and leverwood; and the lower lands produced elm, basswood, cherry, butternut, poplar, hemlock, spruce, pine, cedar, fir and tamarisk. The expense of clearing varied from $10 to $15 per acre. Crops of Indian corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley, buckwheat, potatoes, turnips, peas, beans and grass were sure and abundant. Potatoes were largely manufactured into whiskey. Many of the early settlers supposed that, like the Western prairies, the strength of the soil would always continue; and their principal object was to extend their clearings. The consequence was that most of the county was stripped of its most valuable timber, leaving only very limited reservation for sugaries, firewood, building materials, &c. Experience has shown that much of their best timber has been destroyed, and their farms impoverished to very little purpose. Many of these farms would now command a higher price in the market if no improvements had been made upon them.

The value of real estate has increased with the general prosperity of the country. At the beginning of the present century, the price of wild lands varied from one dollar to two dollars per acre. Very many of the farms of the early settlers would now command from $25 to $50 per acre.

MINERALS.—Until within the few past years, but little attention has been given to the geological and mineral resources of the county. Granite and limestone of a superior quality are abundant in Stanstead and Barnston. Soapstone has also been found. As our limits will not admit a particular description of the geological features of the several townships, the reader is referred to the Report of Sir William Logan, late Provincial Geologist.

STATE OF SOCIETY.—The state of society in the townships has been subject to changes similar to those experienced in new settlements generally. Let the reader imagine a colony of families or individuals from different countries and walks in life, thrown promiscuously together under circumstances of mutual interest and dependence, and he will form a pretty good estimate of things at the beginning. Every man was then "as good as his fellow," and distinction or caste was comparatively unknown.

For a long time, the early settlers formed a kind of brotherhood, and the friendships which began in the days of their hardships and privations were continued during the remainder of their lives. In their visits to each other, made with ox teams, often to the distance of six miles through the woods, they doubtless experienced a satisfaction much greater than is usually enjoyed in the more splendid visits of modern days.

As the forests began to disappear and the circumstances of the people improved, they naturally sought to avail themselves of the privileges enjoyed in other parts of the country. Their first step was in the right direction—the introduction of schools as good as could be sustained at the time. Social libraries were started in some of the towns, and were a great benefit. Some of the families of the early settlers had been favored with the advantages of a good English education, and these, in general, furnished teachers for the pioneer schools. Some of these families had brought in a few books, and these were read and re-read throughout the different neighborhoods. For many years, the Bible, Bunyan's Pilgrim, Dodridge's Rise and Progress, and Watt's or Wesley's Hymns, formed the entire library of many of the most wealthy families. The old-fashioned toy books, with coarse wood cuts, such as The New England Primer, Jack the Giant Killer, Valentine and Orson, Mother Bunch, Blue Beard, and Tom Thumb, were sought for and prized by the children and youth of that age, vastly higher than the neat periodicals that are now poured, like an avalanche, into the laps of the rising generation. Reading in those days was, like study, conducted under difficulties, but it was thorough. Books were read and re-read with attention and profit.

The organization of Christian Churches followed the introduction of schools. The people, coming as they did from different countries and localities, were different in their religious training and belief, but, for the most part, they united in sustaining the ordinances of the gospel in accordance with their own views.

The foundations of society having been laid, its progress has been commensurate with the growth and prosperity of the settlements. As the circumstances of the people improved and their means increased, their attention was turned to those moral improvements that are inseparable from the enjoyments of civilized life. The character of the schools improved, the influence of the gospel began to be felt, newspapers and periodicals were circulated, public spirit and enterprise increased, and during the past forty years, the state of society in Stanstead County has compared favorably with that of any part of Canada or the New England States.

EDUCATION.—The early settlers of the different townships had, as has been before remarked, taken their first steps in the right direction. Schools were started in all the neighborhoods where fifteen or twenty children could be gathered. As early as 1800, some three or four of these schools were in operation in Stanstead—as many in Hatley, and one or two in Barnston. The schools were kept in the most central log houses or barns in the different neighborhoods, and were generally taught by the best educated young men and women in the settlements—three months in the summer, and as many in the winter—the wages of the teachers varying from $4 to $7 per month, and this paid mostly in grain or in articles of clothing of domestic manufacture. Spelling, reading, writing, and arithmetic were the only branches taught. English Grammar and Geography were sciences of a later date. These, though small, were the nurseries in which very many who have been distinguished in public and professional life in our own country and elsewhere, first learned to lisp their A, B, C. As the settlements increased in numbers and strength, school-houses were built, competent teachers were employed at increased wages—the higher branches of a thorough English education were introduced, and as early as 1818, the schools in Stanstead County ranked among the best in any of the towns in Canada or in Northern Vermont. These schools were sustained by the people, and the teachers “boarded around.” The compiler remembers his experience in this line, and the reminiscences of other early teachers would probably fill many pages.

In 1800, an Act was passed by the Provincial Parliament, authorizing the establishment of Schools under what was termed The Royal Institute. For many years, this Act was comparatively a dead letter in the townships—few of them having the ability to comply with its requirements. By the provisions of this Act, any township or parish, could by petition receive from the Legislature the sum of $240 as an annual salary for the teacher of a grammar school, upon the condition that a house furnishing ample accommodations for the school and for the family of the teacher should be built by the people. One of these schools was started in Hatley in 1818, and another in Stanstead, about the same time; but they were comparatively short lived—continuing a few years—and no better than the best district schools of the time.

During the succeeding ten years little change occurred in the condition of the schools of the county. From the first there had been a liberal disposition manifested by the Government for the encouragement of education in the townships, and, in 1829, the Elementary School Act was passed. This Act, with some modifications, has continued in force to the present time. Commissioners were appointed, the different townships divided into districts, those districts multiplied, and grants made for building new school houses, and for the support of teachers—each school receiving $80 per annum. This sum was generally sufficient to pay the wages of the teachers of the winter and summer schools—the inhabitants merely providing for the board of the teachers, firewood and the other contingent expenses.

The following statistics, as supplied by Henry Hubbard, Esq., Inspector of Schools for the District of St. Francis, will show the present number of schools in Stanstead County :

“ For the Scholastic Year ending July 1, 1867, there have been in operation within the limits of Stanstead County, seven High Schools or Academies receiving Government aid—three in Stanstead, viz., Stanstead Seminary, at Stanstead Plain, and the High Schools at Cassville and Georgeville; one at Barnston, one at Coaticook, one at Hatley, and a Model School at Magog. These schools report an aggregate attendance for the year, of about four hundred and twenty pupils. There has been in addition to these an independent School in connexion with the Episcopal Church at Coaticook.

“ Of English Elementary or district schools, there have been seventy-six in operation: twenty-nine in Stanstead, twenty in Barnston, one in Coaticook, five in Barford, thirteen in Hatley, and eight in Magog. The total attendance at the schools in Stanstead was 976, in Barnston, 555; in Coaticook 45; in Barford, 139; in Hatley, 425, and in Magog, 23; total, 2,353; thus making the whole number of schools (of all kinds), 84; total attendance, 2,833. The number of schools in operation and the attendance vary a small per cent. from year to year.”

MILITARY SERVICE.

In 1802, Sir John Johnson was appointed Lieut.-Colonel of the third battalion, Eastern Townships Militia. The able men were gathered. Companies were formed, and officers appointed. They met once or twice in a year. Their “trainings” were usually held in the largest openings in the settlements. The men appeared upon parade in their homespun, every-day clothing. Some with old army guns, some with old fowling pieces, and some with guns “without locks, stocks, or barrels!” Some of the officers of these companies had had experience in military affairs; but most of the others, like the privates, might have presented the appearance of "the awkward squad," in a regular drill.

Three companies were organized in Stanstead in 1803. The Officers were Charles Kilborn, John Ruiter, and Thomas Friolt, captains; Andrew Young, and Thomas Fyler, lieutenants; Johnson Taplin, ensign, and Benjamin Kilborn and Richard Copp, sergeants. This company numbered about 50.

One company was formed in Hatley in 1807. Ebenezer Hovey captain; Simon Kezar, lieutenant; and Jesse Wadleigh, ensign. It numbered about 50.

A company was formed in Barnston, in 1805. Joseph Bartlett, captain; John Heath, lieutenant; Levi Locke, ensign; George Aldrich, sergeant. Had about 50 men.

In 1812, there were seven companies in Stanstead, four in Hatley and three in Barnston. In the American War of 1812-1815 each of those companies supplied some 5 men by draft for the British forces. A cavalry company had been formed, and these, with most of the militia were employed at different times in the frontier service.

Subsequent to the Peace of 1815, but little attention was given to military affairs. One training or muster each year having been deemed sufficient. This state of quietude was, however, broken by the Rebellion of 1837-1838.

Although the operations of the Insurgents had fairly begun in 1837, no positive outbreak occurred upon the frontier until January, 1838. In the meantime, a volunteer company had been formed comprising recruits from Stanstead, Hatley, Pottou and Bolton. The officers were Alex Kilborn, captain; J. Langworthy and H. Mears, lieutenants; J. S. Walton, ensign; and J. W. Martin, sergeant. This company did good service. Among their exploits was the following, as related by J. S. Walton, Esq., their ensign:

"A simultaneous attack had, as it appeared, been planned upon all the towns and villages along the line or frontier of Lower Canada and many parts of Upper Canada, on some night in January, 1837. About one hundred men, principally from Stanstead and Barnston, gathered on the night in question at Derby Line for the purpose, as some of them afterwards stated, of burning the village of Stanstead Plain, and disarming the Volunteers of Captain Kilborn's Company. They were mustered near the flag staff on the brow of the hill, overlooking Rock Island by one Blanchard, who had printed a paper at the line for circulation in Stanstead and

Compton counties, with the view of stirring up the people to revolt. This worthy man was chosen to lead this gallant band to charge upon the unsuspecting people on 'the Plain,'—for so little was danger apprehended at that time, that no guard was kept, either day or night. Before making an effectual demonstration, it was thought best by those brave men to send a reconnoitering party to the Plain, and Blanchard and some three or four others are reported to have visited most of the buildings in the village and to have recommended an immediate attack, as there were no "lions" in the way. A part of the company were opposed to burning the village, and some of them did not exactly like to risk the attempt of taking the muskets from the volunteers, lest they, themselves, might be taken. A good deal of time was spent in discussing preliminaries, until one after one, the company began to drop away; and before day light, all had disappeared, verifying the lines:

"Full one hundred gallant fighting men Marched up a hill, and then marched down again!"

The invasion of Potton was not quite so barren of results.—A part of Capt. Kilborn's volunteers lived in Potton, and the writer, as color sergeant, was ordered to that place to drill them. He started about daylight of the morning succeeding the above-mentioned gathering at Derby Line, but quite ignorant of what had been passing there. While on his way, after crossing the Lake, he was asked by several persons if Stanstead Plain had not been burned the previous night. On receiving his reply in the negative, they expressed great surprise, as they had learned that morning from Troy, Vt., that not only Stanstead Plain, but all the principal villages on the frontier of Canada had been burned. It afterwards appeared that a party of about thirty-five, the most of them residents of Potton, had gathered at North Troy, and being there joined by a few reckless sympathizers, and led by a desperate character by the name of Hadlock, who had resided in Stanstead, all armed and provided with sleighs, drove into Potton, with the intention of robbing the volunteers of their muskets. They commenced their operations at the house of a very quiet man, Charles Hand, who lived near the line. He gave up his musket, seeing that resistance against 30 or 40 armed men would have been useless. Having accomplished this gallant exploit, they next called at the house of Mr. Ralph Elkins, who lived two or three miles from the line. Salmon Elkins and his wife, an aged couple, then lived with their son, Ralph Elkins, who had two sons who were volunteers. Like truly loyal British soldiers, they refused to surrender their arms to a set of lawless brigands, and with their father repaired to the upper loft of the house — The lads planted themselves at the head of the stairs, with their weapons loaded, and the father with a heavy bludgeon placed himself on the stairs, ready to strike down any one who should come up, if the boys missed fire. The Rebels were warned that the first man who attempted to go up would be shot down. For some time no one ventured to ascend. In the meantime, threats were made outside of firing the building. At length the foolhardy Hadlock said with an oath that he was not afraid, and should go up. He had no sooner stepped upon the broad stairs, at the bottom, than both of the lads fired, and the contents of one of the muskets were sent through his body. He fell, and expired in a few minutes.

This tragical event seemed to take the courage out of the whole party. They placed the dead body of their companion in a sleigh and drove back to North Troy, threatening, however, to return and hold the place. Couriers were despatched to the neighboring towns where volunteers were stationed, and to Headquarters in Montreal, and in a short time, 400 or 500 volunteers from Sutton, Brome, Stanstead and Sherbrooke, arrived at Potton to meet and repel the invaders, should they again dare to cross the border. But beyond threatening, no further hostile demonstrations were made upon the frontier of Stanstead county.

The company of volunteers mentioned in the preceding pages remained in service until late in the spring of 1838, when they were discharged.

Soon after the intended uprising in Montreal and the attack of insurgents upon the loyalists at Beauharnois in November, 1838, Col. Robert Nickle was sent by Sir John Colborne to superintend the operations of the frontier forces at Stanstead. A company of infantry was again formed: Alexander Kilborn, captain; M. Dixon and C. A. Kilborn, lieutenants; James Sweeney and Coffin Quimby, sergeants.

A cavalry company was soon after formed which did good service: Israel Wood, captain; J. W. Martin and H. B. Terrill, lieutenants. Another cavalry company was subsequently organized: John Gilman, captain; Samuel Gilman and E. D. Whitcher, lieutenants; and T. L. Terrill, orderly.

Soon after the arrival of Col. Nickle, it was ascertained that a party of disaffected Canadians and their American sympathizers was organized in Barnston, and that they held nightly meetings for drill under the command of Lovell McKeech and Asa Hollister both living in Barnston. Col. Nickle accordingly issued a secret order for the arrest of these two men (the country then being under Martial Law,) and entrusted the enterprise of their arrest to Capt. Kilborn of the Infantry, and Lieut. Martin of the Cavalry. They selected ten men each from their respective companies, and after seeing them well mounted, divided into two companies or parties. Capt. Kilborn's party were to go in search of McKeech, and Lieut. Martin was to arrest Hollister. The two parties left Stanstead Plain quietly one at a time after dark, and met for rendezvous, some two miles north of the village. In accordance with this programme, the two parties took different routes, and were to meet at Negro River. McKeech was not to be found, but they succeeded in arresting Hollister, who took the matter very coolly, and requested the privilege of changing his clothes; but on reaching his bed-room, he dodged out at a back door and escaped. Capt. Kilborn being vexed at the loss of their prisoner dismissed all the men and ordered them to return home. In the meantime, he and Lieut. Martin remained a while near Hollister's house, but when from the report of a gun and other signals, they found that men were gathering at no great distance from them, they thought discretion to be the better part of valor, and about mid-night started for home. On reaching Mosher Corner, they were fired upon by some 20 men from behind the fences and from an old cellar. Capt. Kilborn, though severely wounded, started his horse upon the run reached home, and gave the alarm. He had seen Lieut. Martin fall from his horse, and from the number of shots fired supposed he must have been killed, and that the party would not have made this demonstration unless they had been fully prepared to carry out their previous threat of burning Stanstead Plain. Such a panic as that caused by the arrival of Capt. Kilborn on that eventful night has never before or since been witnessed in Stanstead. An attack was hourly expected; messengers were despatched to Hatley, Compton, Lennoxville and Sherbrooke, and before ten o'clock the next morning a military force of 1000 men was on the ground. In the meantime, Lieut. Martin escaped unhurt. His horse had received a shot in his head and had fallen; but he extricated himself and run for his life. He succeeded in reaching a house where he passed the remainder of the night unmolested. His horse had been kindly cared for by a neighbor, and early the next morning he set out for home. He was met by his wife, accompanied by a cavalcade of the military and friends who had gone with the intention of finding him, whether dead or alive. Capt. Kilborn recovered from his wound, and in a few weeks resumed the command of his company.

In the spring of 1866, the frontier towns were alarmed by threatened invasions from parties connected with an association in Ireland and America, known by the name of Fenians. As the operations of this organization are matters of general history, it may suffice to say that it presented for a time, a formidable appearance, comprising much of the Irish element in Britain and America. A part of their plan was to send detached parties mustered in the United States through different frontier towns into Canada, to overrun and to plunder the inhabitants and get possession of the country. The Provincial Government, having been apprised of their movements, despatched troops to the different frontier posts. In the meantime, parties of those desperadoes, numbering from 200 to 2,000, invaded our frontier in different places in Canada West, and at St. Armand, P. Q. In most of those places, they were promptly met and repulsed by the Canadians troops. Similar attempts were made some three years afterwards, which resulted in entire failure. The Stanstead frontier was at times threatened, but, beyond threats, nothing occurred to disturb the peace of the community.

MAILS AND ROUTES.

Many years elapsed before the pioneers of the Eastern Townships enjoyed the advantages of postal communication with other parts of Canada and the United States.

The first mail route opened in this part of the country was from Wells River to Derby Line, Vt., in 1812. Previous to that time, the towns upon that route had been supplied by a post-rider who came to Derby Line twice in each month, and, as his business increased, extended his trips through Stanstead, Barnston, Hatley, and Compton. He was employed in circulating the Green Mountain Patriot and the North Star, then published at Peacham and Danville, Vt. These were almost the only newspapers read in the settlements for many years, and the sight of a Quebec or Montreal paper was a very rare occurrence.

From 1800 to 1817 there were no regular mails through the Eastern Townships. Whenever despatches were sent from the Government, special couriers were employed, as also with returning documents. In 1817, a mail route was opened from Stanstead to Quebec, via Melbourne, with a weekly mail which was carried on horseback. Post-Offices were established at Stanstead, Hatley, the "Lower Forks," now Sherbrooke, and Melbourne. In 1824, a weekly mail was started between Stanstead and Montreal, via Copp's Ferry, now Georgeville, and Magog Outlet, where Post-Offices were opened. The expense of the conveyance of this mail was sustained in part by individuals living on the route. Another weekly mail was subsequently started between Stanstead and Montreal, via St. Johns, and these two mails supplied a regular communication with Montreal and Western Canada for many years. In 1833 semi-weekly mails were introduced, and since that time, the facilities for mail correspondence have steadily increased, and the greater part of Stanstead County is now in daily communication with the principal towns in Canada and the northern cities of the United States.

LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

In 1823 Silas H. Dickerson started a weekly paper, "The British Colonist," at Stantead Plain. This paper was a very respectable sheet for the time, and, as it was the only one then printed in the Eastern Townships, it obtained a large circulation. Politics and party were then matters of mere name. Up to that time, the attention of the Provincial Government had not been fully directed to the requirements of the increasing Settlements of the Townships. The particulars of the organization of the new District of St. Francis furnished materials for the columns of Mr. Dickerson's paper; and it might have been well, perhaps, if he had been contented with printing those particulars. The Presiding Judge of the newly constituted Court, though a learned and worthy man, was peculiarly sensitive and tenacious of his own professional dignity. Mr. Dickerson had been trained in the school of American Republicanism, and in some of his editorials had animadverted rather strongly upon the decisions of the Judge in particular cases. His comments, though just, perhaps, in the main, were ill-timed, and brought him into direct collision with the Judge. The Judge was arbitrary, and he was unyielding.

Suffice it to say that he was repeatedly fined and imprisoned for "Contempt of Court," and followed for some three years by the Judge with unrelenting persecution and severity. His property became reduced, and he was compelled to relinquish the enterprise of his paper, and leave the country. He returned to Stanstead in after years, however, and for some time sustained the office of Collector of Customs for that Port.

THE STANSTEAD JOURNAL.

This newspaper, published at Rock Island, was commenced in 1845. The enterprise was started under circumstances of discouragement by LeRoy Robinson, who still remains its proprietor and editor.

Other undertakings of a similar kind had been tried and had failed for want of patronage, but Mr. Robinson had brought to the work a practical knowledge of the business, health, industry and perseverance. The result has been a success. The journal has acquired an extensive circulation, second, perhaps, to none in the Eastern Townships, and ranks among the best of our country papers.

THE COATICOOK OBSERVER.

This paper was started at Coaticook in 1870. It is a highly respectable journal and has a good circulation,—is now published by Hunter Bradford.

TOWNSHIP OF STANSTEAD.

The name Stanstead is of Anglo-Saxon origin. In almost every nation, and among all classes of people names of persons and places have been more or less descriptive of the character or qualities of the individuals or localities to which they are applied.

The noun or word which denotes a locality is often combined with an epithet, descriptive of some circumstance, quality, or natural production of the place. To show in what a variety of connections a simple word of this kind is found a few examples are subjoined in which STONE is a component syllable—Stone, Stondon, Stonchim, Stonehouse, Stonton.—The Anglo saxon orthography is STAN—whence Stonage, Stanwix, Stanford, Stanfold, Stanbridge, Stanstead,

From the Imperial Gazetteer it appears that three places in England bear the name of Stanstead. It was from one of these places that the Township of Stanstead, and subsequently the county, derived its name.

The survey of Stanstead was begun in 1792 and completed in 1793. There is a legend handed down from the early settlers to the effect that, while at this work, the surveyors were in the habit of mixing more whiskey with their water than was consistent with strict temperance, and finding it difficult sometimes to keep either themselves or their compass at equilibrium, were accustomed to talk to the instrument telling it to "stand steady;" but, owing to their too frequent potations, were only able to articulate "STANSTEAD!" and that this circumstance gave rise to the name of the town. The question may, perhaps, furnish scope for the future researches of the antiquarian.

The Township of Stanstead, which includes the villages of Stanstead Plain, Beebe Plain, Rock Island, Georgeville, Fitch Bay, and the Lake Shore, Glines' Corner, Griffin's Corner, Marlow, Ruiters' Corner, Magoon Point, Brown's Hill, Cassville, Boynton, Amy Corner, Newville, and Caswellboro' settlements, is situated on the eastern shore of Memphremagog Lake, in 4 degrees 55 minutes east longitude from Washington. Its other boundaries are Magog and Hatley on the north, Barnston on the east, and the parallel of 45 degrees north latitude, which separates it from Holland and Derby in Vermont, on the south. Its extreme length from east to west is about eleven miles, and its breadth from north to south is ten miles, comprising an area of about 110 square miles, or about 70,000 acres.

LAKES AND RIVERS.

Lake Memphremagog, about two-thirds of which lies in Canada, forms the western boundary of Stanstead, and extends northerly nearly through the entire county. It lies in a semicircular form, partly among the mountains and partly in the valley which runs obliquely across the northern portion. The waters are limpid and remarkably clear, except in the seasons of the spring freshets, when the streams are swollen with the mountain torrents from the high surrounding country. Its principal tributary streams are Barton, Black, Clyde, John's and Cherry Rivers, and Marlow, Lewis, Gale, Taylor, Lee, Rollins, Perkins, Ward, Tuck, and Thompson's Mill Brooks. Magog River is the only outlet. This river, with a north-easterly course of about 20 miles, forms a junction with the St. Francis River at Sherbrooke, and thus the surplus waters of the lake are conveyed into the St. Lawrence. The extreme length of the lake from north to south is about 33 miles, its breadth varying from one mile to three miles. The water is in many places shallow, but very deep in others, having been sounded in some instances to the depth of sixty fathoms. The deepest place yet ascertained is near the foot of Owl's Head, which measured one hundred fathoms. Steamers drawing five feet of water have for many years made daily trips from Newport, Vt., to Magog Outlet and back during the Summer and Fall. Captain George W. Fogg commanded the Mountain Maid, the only steamer used on the lake for many years, and was distinguished for his kindness and courtesy to his passengers. The stopping places on the route were Harvey's Landing, the Mountain House, Georgeville and Knowlton's Landing.

During the few past years, this lake has been a resort for tourists from the United States and from different parts of Canada. Travellers are generally pleased with the scenery of the lake and its surroundings. They seldom fail of climbing Owl's Head. This mountain is the highest, except one, in the Eastern Townships, and its summit affords a clear view of the country south of the St. Lawrence from Montreal Mountain to the St. Francis River.

In passing down the lake from Newport, Vt., a fine view is presented of Indian Point, a promontory in West Derby, so called from its having been for some time the residence of the family of an Indian known among the early settlers as Captain Jo. He had in former days sustained the position of Chief, in his tribe. Whipple's Point, on the opposite shore, affords an interesting view. Province Island, lying partly in Vermont and partly in Canada, containing about 100 acres mostly cleared and improved, was the property of the late Carlos Pierce, Esq. There are several small islands in its vicinity, among which is Tea Table Island.

After passing Province Island, the surrounding country presents the appearance of an extended amphitheatre with the lake for its centre. Prominent to view on the east are Blackadder Point, so called from a family who settled upon it; Bodwell Point, now known as Cedarville, and Magoon Point, formerly called Black Point, and on the west, Owl's Head, Sugar Loaf, Gibraltar Point, and in the distance, northerly, Bolton and Orford Mountains.

Whetstone Island, near Magoon Point, contains about forty acres—some twenty-five acres of which have been cleared and improved. It derived its name from a quarry which furnishes whetstones said to be equal in quality to any imported oil stones.

SKINNER'S ISLAND, opposite Magoon Point and near the eastern shore, has been distinguished in fiction as a refuge for smugglers in the American War of 1812-1815—inasmuch as it has been selected by several of our modern story-tellers as the place where various scenes of robbery, murder, and love have been enacted. This island contains about ten acres—rocky and barren—is principally a granite ridge—a reef of which extends to Minnie Island, a distance of about twenty rods. Skinner's Cave, said to have been the smugglers' retreat, is an opening in a granite ledge above high water mark, and extending some fifty or sixty feet into the ledge—about eight feet high and about eight feet wide.

MINNIE ISLAND, containing about half an acre, rocky and barren, was long the fishing ground of David Heath.

Long Island, near the eastern shore, and opposite the place of the Hon. C. D. Day, contains about forty acres. It consists of a long and broken ridge of rocks—the south part of which is granite. The surface is in some places thinly covered with dwarf pines and shrubs. It is a place of resort in the "blueberry" season. The only object worthy of particular note is the "Balance Rock," a granite boulder of some ten or fifteen tons, poised upon a high ledge of the same kind of stone.

ROUND ISLAND, in this vicinity, contains about ten acres—surface broken, and covered mostly with white birch and dwarf pine.

MOLSON'S ISLAND, containing about fifty acres, and near the eastern shore, opposite the farm of A. W. Boynton, is broken and uneven. A part has been cleared and improved. Mr. Molson has built a house and barn, and the premises furnish a good sugar orchard.

Lord's Island contains about twenty-five acres, mostly cleared and furnishing good pasturage. It lies midway from east to west in the lake and about two-and-a-half miles below Georgeville. Stephen Lord made the first clearing and improvements. There are, also, other large islands in the vicinity of Magog village and other parts of the lake—some of which are used as fishing grounds.

LONG BAY, a branch of Lake Memphremagog, extends northeasterly from Whetstone Island about two miles. Its average breadth is three-fourths of a mile. About the year 1848, a transient man by the name of Sprague came from Vermont, appeared to be partially deranged, but was known to possess some $3,000 in bank notes, which he carried about his person. He spent several weeks—alternately at Stanstead Plain and Georgeville. Some time, late in the summer, he left his boarding place at "The Plain," as was supposed, to go to Georgeville, but was never seen alive afterwards. In the following spring, his body was found floating on the deep water of Long Bay. He had doubtless been waylaid and murdered. There was a deep cut in the neck, and wounds in different parts of the body. Weights had been fastened to the body with silk handkerchiefs, but the stones had worn through their covering and dropped. Different parties were suspected, and legal proceedings instituted. Two or three men were arrested, and though the public mind was strongly impressed with the belief of their guilt, they were discharged—the chain of circumstantial evidence not being considered complete.

A strait of about half a mile in length called "The Narrows," connects Long Bay with FITCH BAY. Fitch Bay has an average breadth of three-fourths of a mile, and extends two miles north-easterly, or a little beyond the concession line between No. 21, 5th range and No. 21, 6th range. This bay derived its name from Colonel George Fitch, an Englishman of some note who was among the early explorers of the township. Though not immediately connected with the operations of the surveying party, he appears to have been identified with their movements. He explored Long Bay and Fitch Bay, and Bouchette's map of that part of the town was probably constructed from his plan.

Col. Fitch was a genial, pleasant companion, and a lover of fun and jokes. Among the anecdotes related of him is one in which he "met his match." At the time the surveyors were engaged in running the concession lines east of Long Bay, he proposed to Joseph Kilborn a trial of the extent of their eye-sight for a wager of some five gallons of rum for the party. The challenge was accepted and the compass set and sighted. Col. Fitch made the first trial and pointed out a large tree as being the farthest object he could discern. When Mr. Kilborn made his trial, he admitted that he could not see any further than to the tree in question; but he insisted that an accurate measurement of the length of their noses (his was a very long one,) and the distance of their eyes from the compass sight should be made, and the result was that

Mr. Kilborn won the wager by the distance of more than half an inch! Col. Fitch died at Missisquoi Bay in 1799. The first male child born in Stanstead received his name—George Fitch Copp.

LOVERING POND, about seven miles in length, with an average breadth of three-fourths of a mile, lying partly in Stanstead and partly in Magog, is connected with Fitch Bay by Lee's Mill Brook.

HUBBARD POND OR CRYSTAL LAKE, in the vicinity of Stanstead Plain, is about three-fourths of a mile in length, with an average breadth of one-fourth of a mile. Some 20 acres of land on the eastern shore have been appropriated for a public cemetery. There are two or three other small ponds in the town.

RIVERS.—Barlow River has its rise from a pond in Holland, whence it runs through the south-west corner of Barnston, and entering Stanstead about one mile north of the Province Line, takes a south-westerly course for about a mile to the Caswellboro' Settlement. Here it receives a branch of some five miles in length rising from Barnston Pond, then takes a north westerly direction about two miles to the Ox Bow, on the farm of J. M. Hubbard. It then takes a south-westerly course about two miles further to Rock Island, whence it continues about due west, along the Province Line, to Beebe Plain, whence making nearly a right angle, it runs about three miles almost due north to Mack's Mills, and then taking a north-easterly direction continues its course through the remaining part of the breadth of the town, and empties into Macsawippi Lake in Hatley after a serpentine course of nearly twenty miles. Some valuable mill seats are still occupied at Rock Island, Mack's Mills, Smith's Mills and Woollen Factory, and Libbie's Mills. Before the forests had been cleared away, this river was much larger than it now is, and was well supplied with fish, which were often taken in large quantities. The Colby farm, containing about 1000 acres, is situated on this river. It has large and valuable meadows.

The survey of Derby, Vt., was made in 1780, or about twelve years before that of Stanstead. Mr. Whitelaw, who afterwards constructed a map of Vermont and New Hampshire, was at the head of the party, and a man by the name of Barlow was among the surveyors. While engaged in running the northern line, they found that their stock of provisions was exhausted, and Barlow was sent off through the woods to Wells River for a supply. On his return, he found his friends encamped on the hill south of that part of the river which runs in Derby, and opposite the present railway station at Rock Island. They were thirsty and hungry, and were so overjoyed with their supply of a bottle of rum and provisions that they unanimously declared that the name of Barlow should be given to the river.

NEGRO RIVER, which derived its name from a family of negroes known by the name of Tatton, who settled upon its banks in Barnston in 1804, takes its rise in Holland, runs through Barnston, and after a course of about two miles across the north east corner of Stanstead, empties into Barlow River in Hatley. It has several good mill seats in Barnston, and Colby's Mills in Stanstead. Boroughs' Falls on this river afford a picturesque and highly interesting view.

FACE OF THE COUNTRY.—The surface of Stanstead is diversified, but mostly lies in undulating or rolling swells, with no prominent hills. The top of Narrows Hill and some parts of the adjacent Lake Shore Settlement are the highest elevations, and Bunker Hill, near Fitch Bay, is next in height. The land near the Lake and between the Lake and Fitch Bay is in many instances broken and uneven, but is generally well adapted to cultivation and pasturage. Many of the farms have valuable sugaries. The surface on the banks of Barlow River is in some instances broken and irregular, but capable of cultivation. There is but little waste land in Stanstead, and it is not surpassed by any of the Eastern Townships in richness of soil and in agricultural resources.

The Lake Shore south of Georgeville, extending to Magoon Point, furnishes several large quarries of excellent limestone. Between Fitch Bay and the south-western boundary of the town, extending easterly to Beebe Plain, are extensive developments of granite of a superior quality. There are also other quarries of limestone and granite in different localities, which have been worked. No mineral deposits of sufficient importance to pay the expense of working have as yet been found. The Silurian rocks form the foundation strata of the western part of the town, and the Devonian, consisting of limestone and clay slates, with protrusions of granite, predominate through the eastern part; hence it will be seen that the surface of the different parts of the town must furnish soils corresponding with those of similar formations elsewhere—subject only to the result of drift or other accidental deposits.

The forests, in their native state, presented a grand and luxuriant appearance—the high lands being covered mostly with maple, beech and birch, interspersed frequently with spruce ridges, hemlock and white ash. The lower lands produced cedar, hemlock, spruce, fir, tamarisk, brown ash, elm, leverwood or ironwood, basswood, butternut, and poplar; white pine was found in some instances, but it has long since disappeared. There is no place in the Eastern Townships that was richer in building materials and lumber of all kinds than Stanstead, and there is certainly none where more recklessness has been exhibited in their destruction. The result has been that the town is comparatively stripped of its most valuable timber, and the wood lands that remain are a very inadequate supply.

For many years potatoes were the principle crop, some farmers cultivating ten acres, others twenty, thirty, or forty acres, with an average yield of from 150 to 200 bushels per acre. The potatoes were manufactured into whiskey, which then brought from 40 to 50 cents per gallon in the markets; a bushel of potatoes generally yielded about a gallon. In some instances the whiskey trade was profitable; but its general tendency was to exhaust the farms and blight the prospects of the early settlers. * * * * Those days of darkness have, however, been followed by brighter ones, and for many years the town has been steadily increasing in wealth and prosperity. Stanstead now occupies a prominent position among the agricultural districts of our country. The township is well adapted to grazing, and affords extensive pasturage and hayfields; its wealth has been derived from its exports of beef, pork, butter and cheese, and cattle and horses.

The sugar maple, which predominates in the higher lands, furnishes a supply of sugar equal, in most cases, to the wants of the community. How great soever the desire of the early settlers might have been for enlarging their clearings, they mostly reserved sugar orchards. Some of the original orchards are still worked, but in most cases the trees have decayed and have been replaced by a second growth.

The process of sugar-making in early days was no sinecure. The sugar season usually began about the first of April, when, in most cases, the snow was from three to four feet in depth. The primitive sugar places were set with troughs, made usually from the fir, by cutting trees some fifteen inches in diameter into blocks of about two feet in length and splitting them through the centre.

These troughs held about a pailfull, and a good chopper would make fifty of them in a day. Large troughs made usually from hemlock, and holding from forty to fifty pailfulls, served for storage. These troughs seldom lasted longer than through two seasons. In the early part of the season the sap was carried in pails to the boiling place on snow shoes. This spot was generally near the centre of some 200 or 300 trees. The process of boiling was simple. The snow, sometimes four feet deep, was cleared away a sufficient space, posts or crotches were set and a pole laid across them; a large tree was then felled, which served as the foundation for a fire; as fast as it burned away, the fixings were removed; firewood was then no object; the sugar-makers being desirous of clearing their land and getting rid of the timber. Their principal difficulty was in obtaining kettles for boiling; but notwithstanding their imperfect arrangements, they often made from 400 to 500 lbs. of sugar in a single season.

Within the past half of a century, sugar-making has been much improved; the troughs, gathering pails, sap-yoke, snow shoes, and small kettles, have been superseded by substantial buckets, holders or large tubs and convenient modern boilers; and in almost every sugar lot may be seen a neat and appropriate building for securing the articles in use during the year, for storing a good supply of dry wood, and furnishing a comfortable shelter for the workmen. Much of the maple sugar now made is equal in quality to the best muscovada or crushed sugars in the markets.

STANSTEAD PLAIN.

This Settlement, comprising an area of about nine square miles, was begun by JOHNSON TAPLIN. Some two or three families had found their way through the upper part of Vermont, then a wilderness, and had located near the west-end of the pond at Derby Centre. Among these was the family of the Hon. Timothy Hinman, whose log cabin afterwards became a stopping place for the pioneers of the Eastern Townships. Mr. Taplin and his family were fifteen days in getting through the woods from Newbury, Vt., where they had previously resided, to Mr. Hinman's, where they arrived March 5, 1796. Mr. Taplin beat a snow-shoe path from Derby Centre to Stanstead Plain the next day, and on the following day, March 7, drew his children through on a hand-sled, crossing the river on the ice. His wife accompanied him and carried a large bundle of clothing. They went to work, and after clearing away the snow, which was four feet deep, put up a temporary shelter with poles and hemlock boughs, in which they passed the night, and though in the midst of a dense forest, and at least six miles from any settlement, they doubtless enjoyed a degree of comfort and independence which a monarch might have envied. During the two following days, they brought in the remainder of their effects on the hand-sled and made some improvements in their cabin. This cabin was located westerly from the present main street, on the bank of a ravine which passes through the centre of the village from east to west, where is still found a spring of excellent water. They remained in this shanty until Fall, when they built a log house on the south side of this ravine, and opposite the site of the present Catholic parsonage. Mr. Taplin began his clearing where the present Catholic church stands, and partially cleared some three acres in the spring and summer of 1796. This was then the only opening in the eastern part of the town. He afterwards built a small frame house, and his place soon became the resort of emigrants from the south. He gradually increased his business by bringing in different articles from the nearest markets and opening a limited business in English goods and New England rum, which he sold at almost fabulous prices. Stephen Borroughs lodged here the first night he came to Canada, and bought a lot of gilt buttons from Mr. Taplin which he afterwards returned, minus their tissue paper coverings. His first counterfeit bills were printed on this paper.—They were on the Haverhill, N. H., Bank—denomination $3. In 1800, Mr. Taplin received the grant of his farm, No. 3, 10th range, as an associate. A part of this lot was divided into building lots, and comprises the central part of the present village. Mr. Taplin afterwards sold out and settled at Fitch Bay.

In 1797, Capt. Israel Wood settled on No. 4, 10th range, adjoining Mr. Taplin. He afterwards received a grant of this lot as associate. The building lots comprising the north part of the village were taken from this farm. Jacob Goodwin made a beginning on No. 2, 10th range, in 1797, but soon after sold his "betterments," and left the country; some of his descendants settled in other parts of the town, but they are mostly dead or have left the country. Reuben Bangs made a beginning on No. 5, 11th range, in 1797; cleared some 25 acres, and sold to Phineas Hubbard in 1803. Selah Pomroy pitched lots No. 3 and 4, 11th range, in 1798, and settled adjoining his brother-in-law Reuben Bangs. About that time, James Bangs settled on No. 6, 11th range, and sold out to Hazen Pomroy in 1819, and removed to Ohio.

Andrew Young was one of the associates, he drew No. 4, 9th range, and afterwards purchased Nos. 5 and 6 same range. Samuel Pomroy settled at Derby Line in 1797, and started a clothier's shop, within the limits of the village of Rock Island. Jonathan Morrill began on No. 5, 10th range, in 1801, and sold to Augustine Hibbard in 1806. In 1804, Charles Kilborn settled at Rock Island. Phineas Hubbard settled on No. 5, 11th range, in 1804. Levi Bigelow began trade at Derby Line in 1805, and soon extended his operations through the present limits of Stanstead County. Heman Bangs and William Salisbury began to trade about the same time. Jonathan Gordon pitched No. 1, 12th range, in 1800, but sold out soon after; some of his descendants are now living in Hatley.

In the meantime, the settlement of the village progressed but slowly, for until 1807 there were but three houses within its present limits. In 1808, the road was cut through the forest where the main street now runs, the travel having previously been by a crooked path considerably to the west. Wright Chamberlain opened a store in 1809, and was soon followed by Zabdiel Thayer, and Henry and Elijah Curtis; these have all died or left the country.

Ichabod Smith and Wilder Pierce opened a store in 1813, and subsequently separated and built brick stores; that of Mr. Smith has since been taken down, but that of Mr. Pierce is now occupied with the Custom house and the Eastern Townships Bank. Other parties engaged in trade, about that time, but soon sold out and left the country. The settlements in the township and in Hatley and Barnston had in the meantime been rapidly increasing and "The Plain" had become rather a general market. Trade was then profitable; and among the different merchants who established themselves in the town, only two failures occurred during more than half a century. In many cases large fortunes were amassed, which were afterwards invested in western speculations, and the amount of money thus furnished by Stanstead capitalists would seem incredible, considering the circumstances under which it was acquired. In the early days of the settlement, the transportation of goods was attended with much inconvenience and expense, owing to the bad state of the roads and the distance from the markets. Many packages of English goods and heavier articles were brought from Montreal and from the South on horse back, and merchandise of all kinds commanded high prices.

Calico, which could not now be sold for more than 12 or 15 cents per yard, then brought from 84 cents to $1.00; and dresses made from this material, six yards of which was considered an ample pattern, were a luxury, coarse and homely as it was, which was prized by the young ladies of those days as highly as the finest and most costly fabrics are at the present time. Cotton goods, such as shirtings and sheetings, which are now sold at from 8 to 20 cents per yard, then brought from 50 to 75 cents per yard, cut nails were sold at 25 cents per pound, 9 by 7 window glass at 12½ cents per square, and other goods in proportion. In the case of a man who had opened a store in a neighbouring town, he was asked at what rate per cent. advance he sold his goods. His reply was "four per cent." The enquirer thought this was hardly a paying business, and told him so. He said he did not know exactly what he meant by per cent., but that he sold his goods at "four times the price they cost him." This could not, perhaps, be taken as a fair estimate of all the trade of those days, but the leading merchants generally started manufactories of pot and pearl ashes which then commanded high prices in the English market, and took in salts of lye in payment for their goods, thus realizing a large profit both ways. The salts were made by boiling the lye of hard wood ashes to such a consistence that when cold it might be carried in a trough or basket. In this condition the salts were carried to the manufactories, sometimes on sleds; but as sleds were rare, a less expensive vehicle was usually adopted. The market price for salts was variable, ranging from $3 to $6 per cwt., but they could always be sold at a fair price, and for cash. The credit or barter system of those days increased the price of goods. The usual terms of trade were that payment should be made in grain or other kinds of produce in the month of January, following the purchases, which if the customer failed to do, he was required to pay cash and interest within the succeeding year. Not having the fear of the "Maine Law" before their eyes, the early traders were accustomed to do a wholesale and retail business in rum, brandy, gin, whiskey, and other distilled spirituous liquors; and in those days of "temperate drinking," almost every one, high or low, rich or poor, indulged in these beverages; and the account books of the merchants shewed frequent instances of long columns of charges of rum, brandy, gin, whiskey, and ditto, against individuals in good standing and of high respectability. In addition to the large quantities of foreign liquors that were sold, there were at one time not less than twenty-six distilleries for the manufacture of potato whiskey in the town, and these turned out at least 3000 gallons of whiskey, each, annually. A considerable part of the quantity thus made was disposed of at Montreal and other markets, but the amount consumed at home told fearfully upon the prosperity of the settlement. The Temperance Reformation of subsequent years changed the aspect of this traffic, but not before many of the early settlers had become habitually intemperate, some of whom found the drunkard's grave, and others were stripped of their property and compelled to leave the country. In looking back to those days of darkness and gloom, it is pleasant to realize that the fires of those distilleries have long since been quenched, and that the traffic in distilled spirits as a beverage is now regarded as a nuisance.

During the time of the American War of 1812-1815, the inhabitants of Stanstead and Derby maintained a strict neutrality and continued their previous friendly relation to each other. As they had together and alike shared the difficulties and privations incident to new settlements, and as nothing they could do could affect the general issue between the two Governments, they succeeded in maintaining an interchange of visits between families, and, to a very great extent, their previous business intercourse. Smuggling was, indeed, carried on by parties on both sides of the Line; but this did not disturb the quiet and harmony of the two towns.

In 1855, Stanstead Plain was set off by the Provincial Legislature as a separate corporation, comprising lots numbers 2, 3, 4 and 5 in the 9th Range, and lots numbers 2, 3, 4 and 5 of the 10th Range of lots in the Township of Stanstead—the whole being supposed to contain an area of about three square miles. The present public buildings are a Wesleyan church, of which mention is made elsewhere, a Roman Catholic church, an Episcopal church, a Congregational church, a town hall, an academy, a district school house, 2 hotels, 4 stores, 2 groceries, a druggist's shop, a silversmith's shop, a tailor's shop, 3 blacksmith's shops, a carriage shop, 2 harness shops, a shoemaker's shop, a bank agency, a registry office, a post office, a telegraph office, a custom house, a masonic hall and a tin shop. There are four practising physicians, six advocates and seven clergymen. The number of houses is about 100, with a population of about 800. Among the elegant residences may be mentioned those of A.

The enterprise of the new Wesleyan church was begun in 1864. Mrs. Carlos Pierce performed the ceremony of laying the corner-stone in 1866. The building was completed in 1868, when it was in due form dedicated and ceded to the Canada Conference, under the auspices of the Rev. W. M. Punshon, L. L. D., the exercises of the meeting having been conducted by the then superintendent of the Circuit, the Rev. E. B. Ryckman.

In the cavity of the corner-stone were deposited a brief account of the early settlement of the township, and the origin of the church enterprise, a copy of the Deed of Conveyance to the Conference, samples of the different coins of money then in circulation, and copies of several periodicals and newspapers of the time. To the historian of after years, these statistics may, perhaps, serve as a starting point.

ROCK ISLAND.

The settlement of this village was coeval with that of Stanstead Plain—both having been begun about the same time. In 1798, Selah and Samuel Pomroy, brothers, came from Massachusetts. Selah settled on No. 4, 11th Range, in Stanstead, where some of his descendants still reside. Samuel made a beginning on the bank of the river in Derby, about ten rods south of the Canada line. The State of Vermont had been surveyed previous to that time, but the line of demarcation had been so imperfectly defined that the early settlers hardly knew at first, whether they were in Vermont or in Canada. In process of time, however, as the settlements on the frontier began to increase, the parallel of 45 degrees was supposed to have been ascertained, but it was not finally determined till many years afterwards.

Mr. Pomroy cleared at first about an acre in a dense forest of heavy, dark timber, and built a log house, which served as a stopping place for emigrants from the New England States to Canada. The first tree that was fallen on the Canada side of the river, was a large pine—the stump of which is still preserved as a relic. This tree stood upon the northern bank of the river, some twenty rods below the present main bridge, and furnished the shingles that covered the roof of Mr. Pomroy's house, and the house of Mr. Taplin, at Stanstead Plain.

For more than a year, Mr. Pomroy had no neighbors nearer than Mr. Taplin, at Stanstead Plain, and Mr. Hinman, at Derby Centre. In the meantime he gradually extended his clearing to some five acres, which took in the present business part of the village of Derby Line, and afterwards built a house directly on the line—one half in Vermont, and the other half in Canada. This house was a place of resort for the early settlers of Stanstead and Derby—between whom the most friendly relations were sustained. Some of the Canada settlers were in debt when they left the United States, and from prudential motives did not choose to cross the parallel of 45 degrees. To meet the requirements of this class, a line was painted across the floor, dividing the two countries. Debtors and creditors could enter at separate doors—meet, and exchange friendly greetings, but there was “a gulf between them.”

In 1801, Mr. Pomroy started a clothier's shop, on a small scale on the north side of the river, about fifteen rods above the present main bridge, and, in connection with his brother Selah, carried on the business for two or three years. Some years afterward he sold his property at Derby Line, and removed to Montreal.

In 1800, Daniel Lee pitched No. 1, 10th Range of Stanstead, made a small clearing on the east side of the river, and built a log house. He afterwards relinquished his “betterments” to James Paul, who sold out to Jedediah Lee in 1804. This property was afterwards owned by his son, Erastus Lee, and is now in the possession of A. P. Ball, Esq.

In 1802, a temporary bridge, leading from Stanstead to Derby, was built across the river. This bridge has since been frequently rebuilt, but the location has not been materially changed. Previous to that time, the only crossing place had been a ford, some forty or fifty rods above the Falls.

In 1803, Col. Charles Kilborn who had previously drawn lots numbers 1 and 2, 9th Range of Stanstead, came on and with his brother-in-law, Andrew Young, cleared two acres on the north side of the river, put up a grist mill and a saw mill, and, to secure a water power, built a dam across the main stream at the head of the Falls, and cut a canal across the curve of the river which took in an area of some 4 or 5 acres. This canal furnishes a most valuable water power,—it supplies several mills and foundries, and might be rendered available for many more. The territory cut off by the curves of the river received the name of ROCK ISLAND, and takes in the principal business part of that village.

These mills were the first started in the south-east quarter of Stanstead. Col. Kilborn moved his family in 1804, and for a few years they were the only occupants of "the Island." They had, in the meantime, extended their clearing to some 50 acres, and Jedediah Lee had cleared about the same amount on the east side of the river.—These clearings took in the south part of Stanstead Plain.

"The Old Yellow Store" was built in 1809, by Hon. Timothy Hinman. It was first occupied by Nehemiah Colby, of Derby. The property has passed through various hands and is now owned by the heirs of the Hon. P. Baxter. The store has been successively occupied by Baxter & Chamberlin, Baxter & Edmonds, Judd, Bates & Holmes, Judd, Bates & Wood, Baxter, French & Haskell, P. & J. W. Baxter, and Porter & Wiley.

In 1810, Jedediah Lee built a large house on the east side of the river. This house was then considered as rather in advance of the times.

In 1815, Otis Warren built a large shop, using the water power from the canal, and carried on for many years an extensive business in wool carding, and in the manufacture of the various kinds of machinery required in the settlements. Mr. Warren sold to Harris Way in 1837 and removed to Montreal. Levi Mattison started an iron foundry in 1815, but soon sold out and left the country.

In 1818, Alexander Kilborn built a house at the south end of Stanstead Plain, into which he removed with his parents, who remained until the time of their death. He afterwards built at an expense of more than $30,000, but sold out to Carlos Pierce.

In 1823, Freeman Haskell purchased from the Kilborns the entire water power of the canal, with the saw mill, grist mill and clothier's works, and built a linseed-oil mill. He began with good prospects, but was unfortunately killed by falling against the saw in his mill. His arm was cut entirely off, and he survived the accident but a few days. His brother, Sylvanus C. Haskell, succeeded him in the business, but soon after sold out and left the country. Carlos F. Haskell, the son of Freeman Haskell, was five years old at the time of the death of his father. His mother, a woman of energy, had trained him in business habits; and at an early age, we find him engaged in trade, first as clerk, and afterwards as principal. He was cut down in the midst of his years, but not before he had laid the foundation for a large fortune. He built "The Mammoth Store," was succeeded in the business by C. H. Kathan.

In 1827, Harris Way purchased from the heirs of Freeman Haskell the clothiers' shop and a greater part of the other property, and subsequently bought the shop and other real estate of Otis Warren. Mr. Way continued in business until 1855, and then sold out to Ozro Morrill.

In 1828, Stephen Foster, in company with Col. J. Langdon, of Montpelier, Vt., built a store upon the site of that now occupied by the Spalding Brothers. They continued the business until 1833, when Col. Langdon withdrew, and Levi Spalding came in. In 1844, Mr. Foster withdrew, and since that time the business has been in the hands of the Spalding family. It may be mentioned here that Mr. Foster was the first merchant in the Eastern Townships that abandoned the sale of distilled spirits.

Other stores have been built and occupied by different parties, prominent among whom have been Ozro Morrill, Austin T. Foster, W. H. Holmes, Holmes & Morrill, Cass & Jondro, and Charles Morrill.

Three brothers, John, Samuel and Stephen Reed started a paper mill about 1832, and for a few years sustained a large and profitable business in paper, books and general stationery; but the abundant supplies of those articles from the southern markets at very low prices, and the general depression of the times, compelled them to relinquish the enterprise. They had built at an expense of $5,000. The property has since passed into the hands of Ozro Morrill.

In 1834, Walton & Gaylord printed the various school books used in the townships. Webster's and Marshall's Spellers, Emerson's and Adams' Arithmetics, The Canadian Reader and a Geographical and Historical View of Canada. These books were used in our schools for several years. Mr. Gaylord afterwards started the making of paper hangings with good success. Mr. Walton removed to Sherbrooke, where he started "The Sherbrooke Gazette," one of the best local papers in the country. This paper is continued to the present time.

From 1834 to 1840, but little change occurred in the settlement. Willard Wood, Benjamin Wyman and others were actively engaged in business and acquired property. Charles Pierce, an enterprising mechanic, built extensively, and laid the foundation for a large business in the manufacture of boots and shoes. He died suddenly, and the business passed into the hands of Austin Foster. Hon. Portus Baxter built a store which has been successively occupied by Butler & Gilman, Gilman & Holmes, Gilman & Jones and George R. Holmes.

From 1849 to 1850, there were few changes. The limits of the village were gradually extended to the north, and across the river, taking in an area of nearly a square mile. A few enterprising traders and mechanics begun during this time—among whom were A. A. Barry, David White, Stilman Ray, E. Eastman, David Libbee, A. W. Morrill, and C. W. Drew. The Stanstead Journal, a weekly paper which was started by L. R. Robinson in 1845, has been continued to the present time. In later years George James bought the stand occupied by Benjamin Wyman, and carried on an extensive business in tanning and making boots and shoes. He afterwards sold out to Ozro Morrill, and the business has since been continued by Morrill & Judd. Among the latest business men have been A. W. Ovitt, T. & H. A. Pierce, L. C. Bates, J. H. Holton and Carpenter Brothers.

The present limits of the village contain 8 stores, 3 groceries, 3 boot and shoe factories, 2 cabinet shops, 2 planing mills, a door and sash factory, an iron foundry, a grist mill, a machine shop, a last and shoe peg factory, a blacksmith's shop, a tailor's shop, a harness shop, a hatter's shop, a drug store and jeweller's shop, a book store, post-office, and hotel, a printing office, a school house and about 50 dwelling houses. Population about 450.

For more than a quarter of a century, the business of this village was tributary to Stanstead Plain, but during the past 25 years it has been in the ascendant. The facilities for water power will ever render it an eligible business place, and with the advantages of The Spar connecting with the Conn. & Pass. and V. M. Railway, it is probably destined to occupy a prominent position in the commercial operations of our country.

BEEBE PLAIN.

This settlement was begun by David and Calvin Beebe in 1798. The name of the village is commemorative of these men. The earliest settlements within the present limits of the village were mostly on lot 1 in the 7th Range of Stanstead. This lot was bought by Sampson Davis from David Beebe about 1802, and sold back to him some time afterwards. Subsequently, the two lots, numbers 1 and 2, 7th Range, passed into the hands of Zadok

Steele. No. 1 was afterwards purchased by Solomon Steele, and No. 2 by Sanford Steele, two of his sons. These farms have passed into other hands, and are now owned by Anson Beebe, John L. House, Horace Stewart, Samuel Bigelow, and one or two other parties. Jesse Willey purchased some 10 or 15 acres, built, and engaged for a time in mercantile business but sold out to John L. House and removed to Derby, Vt.

For many years, the settlement presented the appearance of an opening of some 100 acres in a dense forest, in which might have been seen one or two low frame houses, and some six or eight log cabins; but, like many of our modern towns, it has during the past quarter of a century grown to be a thriving and prosperous village, and is distinguished for the wealth and enterprise of its inhabitants. The completion of the M. V. Railroad forms a new era in the history of Beebe Plain. From its local advantages it bids fair to become a large and flourishing village, and second, perhaps, to none upon the frontier.

In 1872 Beebe Plain was set off from the south-west quarter of the township of Stanstead, by Act of the Provincial Parliament of Quebec, and constituted an independent Municipality.

LINEBORO'.

This settlement is but a part of Beebe Plain. It derived its name from the post office lately established upon the the Boundary line between Canada and Vermont. It is a railway station. Its interests will, probably, be hereafter identified with those of Beebe Plain.

BROWN'S HILL.

This settlement was begun in 1800, by two brothers, Theophilus and Sherborn Brown. The neighborhood was then a dense forest—no clearings nearer than Stanstead Plain and the Lake Shore and the beginning of the Nine Partners of Cassville. In 1799 Thomas Ayer had begun on No. 9, 1st Range of Hatley, at the place known as Ayer's Flat. In 1803 Amos Shurtliff and Willard Ayer moved their families in from New Hampshire. They were followed, in 1806, by Levi Brown and his family, and in 1807, by Jonathan Foss and Benjamin Bartlett. Eleazar Clark, Asa Cole and Thomas Cole came in with their families from Vermont in 1810, and John Brown and his family in 1818.

The early settlers of this neighborhood were generally active and enterprising men. Like the pioneers of Cassville, they had to carry their bags of grain on their shoulders to Fitch Bay and thence to West Derby by water to mill, or go some 15 miles through the woods. As they had made their beginnings without negotiating for titles, they were obliged many years afterwards to purchase their farms from the assignees of Sir Robert Shore Milnes, to whom the original grant had been made. Changes have occurred in this settlement during the past half century, but many of the farms are now occupied by the descendants of the first settlers, with many of whom the compiler was well acquainted. They were mostly self-made men, but for sterling worth and integrity they were surpassed by few in any country.

CASSVILLE.

This settlement comprises about six square miles, and was begun in 1799 by an association of emigrants from New Hampshire, who were known as THE NINE PARTNERS. Their names were Simon Cass, Theophilus Cass, Abraham Cass, Wm. Tripp, Wm. McCleary, John Langmaid, James Moses, James Locke, and Abraham Libbee. They began their clearings in 1799, and moved their families in 1800. On their return home in 1799, they carried with them a large number of sable skins they had taken during the summer. These were made into caps, muffs, tippets, &c., and were of substantial service to themselves and their wives in after years. When they came in with their families, the country was an unbroken wilderness. They had to cut their way for their teams, and were two days in getting from Stanstead Plain to the place where the Cassville Church now stands. They built a shanty in that vicinity, in which seven families lived together until they could build log houses for themselves. No blacksmith nearer than Brownington, Vt., and no mills nearer than West Derby, where a small clearing had been made and a grist mill and saw mill had been built. The only way they could get bread for their families was to take their bags of grain upon their shoulders and carry them through the woods to Fitch Bay, a distance of some six miles, and then take a canoe, and row up the Lake to Duncansboro', (now Newport, Vt.) the distance of about 20 miles, where they would again shoulder their bags and carry them to the mill about two miles further. The men usually took their turns in doing the milling of the neighborhood, each would carry his bag to Fitch Bay, and then one of their number would take a canoe and proceed down the Lake with his cargo, and when arriving at Derby Landing, opposite Newport, would carry the bags one at a time to the mill. By the time he arrived with his second bag, the first would be ground; and thus by carrying both ways, he generally succeeded in accomplishing his business and returning the same day. In building their first houses, they had to work at equal disadvantage, for having neither boards nor nails, they had to here planks for floors and to cover their cabins with bark, or fasten shingles with wooden pins, as they best could. Glass windows were "few and far between." These inconveniences were only lessened as the settlement increased. The lands in the north part of the town were at that time unchartered, and the settlers went on and made improvements without negotiating for titles to their farms, supposing that they would be allowed to retain them on account of their early settlement. In the meantime, the authorities of Quebec, having little knowledge of the state of affairs, had made grants of those lands to Sir Robert Shore Milnes and others connected with the administration of the Government.

This was the case particularly with the settlements of Cassville and Brown's Hill. The grant to Sir Robert Shore Milnes was made in 1810, and the others about the same time; but it was not until some 15 or 20 years after, that the claims of the real owners were enforced. The owners or their assignees were generally fair with the occupants, setting their lands at their supposed value in their wild state, varying from $1 to $4, per acre. Most of the occupants were able to buy at the upset prices, but some were obliged to relinquish their betterments or dispose of them as they could. The early settlers of Cassville were generally upright and conscientious men, and, if honest and successful industry and unquestioned piety are virtues to be commended to there, posterity there is much cause for gratitude, if not for pride.

FITCH BAY.

Among the early settlers of this neighborhood were the Gustin, Davis, Taplin, Rickard, Doloff, Packard, Lee, Hoover, Clefford and Shurtliff families. The locality was then known as "the Head of the Bay," but was sometimes distinguished by the not very euphonious name of "Sucker City," from the abundance of that kind of fish taken from the Bay and its inlet brooks.

A post-office was established here in 1855, which was named after the first explorer of the Bay, Col. George Fitch. The name of Fitch Bay was then adopted for the village. For many years, the settlement presented the appearance of an area of some four square miles of dense forest of heavy dark timber, dotted here and there with small openings. As several families had made beginnings within the limits of the present village, the ground was gradually cleared, and mills and manufactories were introduced, the water power from Lee's mill brook furnishing ample facilities. Within the few past years, a respectable village has arisen, in which are two churches, a school-house, two stores, a post-office, a gristmill with three runs, a saw mill with planing machines, a cabinet shop, a carriage and sleigh shop, two blacksmiths' shops, a harness shop, a boot and shoe shop, and an iron foundry. The number of dwelling houses is about forty-five.

RUITER'S CORNER.

This settlement comprises about four square miles, and consists of some 20 neat farm-houses. It derived its name from Capt. John Ruitter, of whom mention is made elsewhere. This settlement comprises a school district.

GRIFFIN'S CORNER

Derived its name from one of its early settlers. The settlement comprises an area of about four square miles—contains about 50 farm-houses. In the early days of its history it was a place of some little promise, but can hardly be called a village. The present public buildings are a church, a school-house, a blacksmith shop, and a tavern.

THE MARLOW SETTLEMENT.

In 1799, John Gustin, jun., Elisha Miller, Wm. Lanphier, John Gustin, sen., Josiah Gustin, and Abijah Mack, of Marlow, N. H., made a tour through the woods, a distance of 150 miles to Stanstead, and, after examination, decided upon locating near the Lake Shore. They had brought apple seeds, and planted three nurseries: one at Magog Point, one on No. 9, 4th Range, and the other on No. 6, 6th Range. Several fine orchards were afterwards produced from them.

In March, 1800, John Gustin, jun., Abijah Mack, and Elisha Miller, returned again to Stanstead with a two-horse team, loaded with farming implements and other necessaries. They were followed by Caleb White and Dexter White. These five put up a shanty which they occupied together until Fall.

Having found that there were several unclaimed lots in the vicinity of their encampment, they agreed that, before exploring, the choice of the different parties should be determined by lot. The numbers were then put into a hat and drawn. It was somewhat remarkable that every one was pleased with the lot that had fallen to him.

In the meantime these pioneers had purchased a yoke of oxen, a cow and a grindstone in common, and in June began their operations—each beginning a clearing of his own.

They had previously sowed and planted a piece of ground which they had hired on shares, and their share of the crop furnished them with provisions for the ensuing year. In the Fall they secured their harvest, built a log house on the premises of Abijah Mack, and returned to their friends in New Hampshire. The next winter, 1801, Abijah Mack and Elijah Miller moved their families in, and in March following, Caleb and Dexter White returned. They all resumed their labors upon their farms, and were made comfortable in Mr. Mack's cabin.

The Spring was unusually forward. Abijah Mack sowed two bushels of wheat in March. No crop has been sown so early in the Eastern Townships since that time. Their labors that year were rewarded by an abundant harvest. Gustin, Miller and Caleb White built log houses on their own premises. Comfort Carpenter and Simeon Glidden built a grist mill and a saw mill near the present site of Smith's Factory on Barlow River. Constant White, a millwright from Charlestown, N. H., superintended the work. He settled in Stanstead.

In February, 1802, John Gustin and Caleb White moved their families in. The first part of the winter had been unusually open—no sleighing until the latter part of February. They improved the first fall of snow and started; but a thaw came on and left them on bare ground, almost at the beginning of their journey. The women and children had to walk over many of the rugged hills for which Vermont is distinguished. Mr. Gustin's ox team was thirteen days on the road, and the horse team was eleven days. This long journey served in some measure to render their log cabins acceptable homes. They were pleased with the attentions paid them by their new neighbors who came to welcome them—each seeming desirous of cheering and encouraging them by a particular relation of the difficulties through which they themselves had passed. They soon found that they were all engaged in the same enterprise—that they were placed upon a level and moved as equals, and that their interests were in a great measure identified. Consequently, the early settlers soon became strongly attached to each other, and the foundation of future society was thus gradually formed.

In the meantime, Hosea White had come in and made a beginning on the east half of No. 11, 5th Range. In April, 1802, Rufus Lanphier, Daniel Miller, and Benjamin Bingham, settled in the neighborhood. In 1804, Ira Miller settled on No. 7, 4th Range, with his brothers Elisha and Daniel. In 1805, Elias Mack purchased a part of No. 6, 4th Range, on which he located. In after years, his two brothers, Asa and Franklin Mack settled on No. 13, 4th Range. These were the last emigrations from Old Marlow to Stanstead. The name Marlow was given to the settlement as commemorative of the native town of its first settlers.

The beginning of the settlement was attended with much prosperity. A log school-house was built in 1805, and in 1817, a new house, much in advance of the times. This house has since been destroyed by fire. For many years the Marlow school ranked among the highest in the Eastern Townships. Many of the teachers of this school are still living, and some of them enjoy high positions in society.

The Marlow settlement comprises an area of about four square miles, extending easterly from the Lake Shore to the Griffin Corner settlement. It contains some thirty or forty neat farm houses, and a school house. The land ranks among the best in the Township.

SKETCHES IN BRIEF.

BY ELISHA GUSTIN, ESQ.

Our knowledge of the ancestry of "The Gustin Families" is very limited. Tradition says that two brothers of that name settled in America—one in Connecticut, the other in Maine. Samuel Gustin, a descendant in the third generation of the Connecticut branch, was a Baptist clergyman; married Mary Thomas; six sons and three daughters were the issue of this marriage; four of the sons were in the Army of the American Revolution; Samuel, the eldest, died of small pox; John, the second son, was among those who captured General Burgoyne; Josiah, the third son, was taken captive by the Indians at the battle of the Cedars—was taken to Montreal and afterwards exchanged. Elisha, the fourth son, was a "mighty hunter." In one of his excursions, hearing a cry from a favorite dog, he hastened to his relief, and found him under a large log which partially secured him from the jaws of a large panther that was standing over him, with his attention engrossed in cat-like play with his victim. "Uncle Lish," as he was called, sprang forward and grasped the panther by the tail, and by a violent jerk brought him to a "right about face." At this critical moment, his companion fired and killed the panther. John, the second son, followed the sea for several years, but afterwards settled upon a farm in Marlow, N. H., where he passed the remainder of his life. He married Lydia Mack. He lived to the age of 71 years. She died July 20, 1847, aged 101 years. Their children were Clarinda, John, Lurany, Sebre, and Abijah. These all married and had families—a part of those families settled in Canada.

John Gustin, jun., eldest son of John Gustin, as before mentioned, was born in Lyme, Conn., Sept. 27, 1768. He was a good English scholar, and excelled as a mathematician, and was for many years employed as a practical land surveyor. In early life he married Esther Way. In 1802 they settled in Stanstead—were useful and valuable members of the community.

WILLIAM MACK, ESQ.

All of the Mack families in America are supposed to be descendants of three brothers that came from Scotland early in the 17th century, having been compelled to leave that country on account of religious intolerance and persecution. As these men were proscribed, and a price set upon their heads, it has been difficult to trace the genealogies of their descendants. In 1755 Ebenezer Mack was ordained a Baptist preacher in Lyme, Conn. He married Abigail Davis. Their children were William, who married Ruth Gee, Abigail, m. Wm. Gee, Lydia, m. John Gustin, Zophar, m. Phebe Miller, Lurany, m. Zacchens Beebe, John, m. Grace Howard, Silas, m. Mary Brown, and Elizabeth, who married Ripley Bingham. Some of the descendants of these families settled in Stanstead. The Mack, Gustin, Miller, Beebe, Bingham and Ball families were directly related to each other by marriage.

WILLARD MACK, M. D.,

Was the eldest son of Abijah Mack, and came to Stanstead with his parents when about 7 years old. His early opportunities, like those of other young men of the settlement, were limited; but he had acquired a good English education, and taught in various district schools with acceptance and usefulness. He studied medicine under the direction of Drs. Whitcher and Colby, and graduated at the Medical Department of Yale College in 1819. He commenced practice in Stanstead, and was soon employed in the neighboring towns. Though young he had attained to a high stand in his profession, but he was cut down in the prime of life and usefulness. A severe cold, the result of exposure in his long winter rides, settled upon his lungs, and he died of pulmonary consumption, October 9, 1822, aged 28 years.

With many of the sciences and much of general literature he was familiar—was a proficient in the use of musical instruments—was well instructed in the principles of Masonry and rendered much valuable assistance to Golden Rule Lodge, of which he was a highly esteemed member. In his religious belief he was a Universalist.

ELISHA GUSTIN, ESQ.,

The eldest son of John Gustin, jun., came to Stanstead with his parents when a lad. He was from childhood an apt and promising scholar, but, with the exception of some assistance from his father and Mr. Harvey, one of their teachers, he may be said to have been self-taught. He had to labor constantly upon the farm, but, whether at home or in the field, a book was his companion. In this manner he succeeded in mastering the different branches of an English education, including the higher mathematics. He was early appointed to the office of magistrate, and sustained a prominent position in public affairs. He died March 28, 1868. In his religious belief he was a Universalist.

GLINES' CORNER.

This settlement derived its name from James Glines, one of the early settlers. It comprises an area of about one square mile, and contains about 20 farm-houses and a school-house.

THE LAKE SHORE SETTLEMENT.

(Communicated by Osmond Boynton.)

This settlement was begun in 1800, by the Merrill, Jewett Baird, Daily, Peaslee, Geer and Brown families.

No. 14, 1st Range, was occupied for some years by Samuel Brown, and, after passing through different hands, is now the property of Hon. C. D. Day. The place is distinguished for neatness and beauty of scenery, and bears the name of GLENBROOK.

No. 15, 1st Range, pitched by Isaac Brown, passed eventually into the hands of Hon. C. D. Day.

No. 16, 1st Range, was pitched by Elijah Baird—is now the property of Alexander Molson, Esq. Mr. Molson has built a splendid residence near the Lake Shore. His place is known by the name of FERN HILL.

No. 17, 1st Range, an associate lot drawn by Silas Peaslee in 1800. Upon his death and that of his wife, some 25 years afterwards, the property fell into the hands of their son-in-law, Luman Cheney. Mr. Cheney and his wife died in 1832, and the property was purchased by A. F. G. Channell, who sold to David Jewett, who sold to Abraham Boynton, who took possession in 1839. This farm is now the property of his eldest son, Adams W. Boynton.

No. 18, 1st Range, was pitched by a Mr. Norton, and, after passing through various hands, is now the property of William Davidson.

No. 19, 1st Range, was settled by Isaac Brown, and, after having changed owners some nine or ten times, is now the property of Henry Chapman, Esq., of Montreal. Mr. Chapman has built an elegant country residence. His place exhibits a degree of artistic taste and comfort which is seldom exceeded in our country. It is known by the name of BELLE MERE.

No. 20, 1st Range, being but a small part of a lot, was thrown in as a part of No 20, 2nd Range. This part was pitched by Elijah Geer, and after passing through several hands was bought by Alex. McEwen.

No. 21, 1st Range, was settled by William Winslow. He lived about two years with his family and then mysteriously disappeared from the settlement. No traces of him have ever been discovered. The farm is now the property of Alex. McPherson.

Nos. 22 and 23, 1st Range were settled by the Jewett family from Lisbon, N.H., and, after passing through various hands, became the property of W. N. Wood, who gave it the name of Woodland.

GEORGEVILLE.

The present name of this village was adopted in 1822—the settlement had been previously known as "Copp's Ferry." The first settlement was made by Capt. Moses Copp in 1797. He had previously located in Bolton, but sold out and began upon a site near the centre of the present village. Elijah Baird had made a beginning about a mile to the south, and Jeremiah Lord, about a mile to the north. With these exceptions, the whole extent of the Lake Shore from Magoon Point to Magog Outlet was an unbroken forest. Mr. Copp long preserved the stump of the first tree he fell as a memento.

In the early stages of this settlement, its local situation rendered it a prominent place of business. It then commanded the trade of the western part of Stanstead, the western part of Hatley, and a large extent of territory on the western shore of the Lake. Several individuals engaged in trade and amassed large fortunes; among these were Joshua Copp, James C. Peaslee, and Chancey Bullock.

In process of time, however, as the country became gradually opened, much of the business of this village was diverted to other localities, and Georgeville has for several years remained stationary. The present village numbers about 40 dwelling-houses, 2 churches, 2 hotels, 2 stores, a post office, a stages, team-boat, and express office, a blacksmith's shop, a tanner and currier's shop, and a boot and shoe manufactory.

NEWVILLE.

This settlement comprises an area of about four square miles, consisting of lots numbers 17, 18, and 19 in the 13th and 14th Ranges of Stanstead.

It contains about 30 farm-houses and a school-house. Among the early settlers were the Fox, Ladd, Swain, Whitecomb; Sawyer, Jones, Norris, and Libbey families.

CASWELLBORO.

This settlement in the south-eastern corner of Stanstead contains about 10 dwelling-houses and a school-house. The Worth, Parsons, and Caswell families were among its early settlers.

FORESTS AND CLEARINGS.

HATLEY.

(Communicated by E. H. Le Baron, Esq.)

This township derived its name from a village of the same name in England. The survey determining its original boundaries was made in 1792. The subdivision into lots was made by James Rankin in 1795. The work was badly done. The division lines of the lots in the different concessions run in a zigzag direction, and some of the concessions are longer than others. In the eastern part of the town, there are twenty-eight lots in each concession, but in the western part the numbers diminish. The original limits of the town extended from Memphremagog Lake and Magog River on the west; but, in 1847, that part of Hatley lying west of the Tenth Concession Line was set off, and now forms a part of the Township of Magog. The present boundaries of Hatley are Magog and Ascot on the north, Compton on the east, Barnston and Stanstead on the south, and Magog on the west. Its length from north to south is ten miles, and its breadth from east to west is eight miles, giving an area of about eighty square miles, or about 51,000 acres.

LAKES AND RIVERS.—Massawippi or Tomifobi, lying near the centre of the town, is about nine miles in length, with an average breadth of about one mile. It has a crescent form, extending north-easterly and south-westerly from the west end of No. 4, 23rd Range to No. 8, 3rd Range. The water of Lake Massawippi is pure and transparent. The shores and bottom are generally sandy or covered with gravel, and free from marshes or bogs. In the early days of the settlement, fish of different kinds, such as shad, black salmon, maskilonge, pike, bass, mullet, and sturgeon, were abundant, and were often taken in large quantities. The fish thus taken formed no inconsiderable part of the sustenance of the families of the pioneers of Hatley. The building of mill-dams across the Massawippi and St. Francis rivers in later years, seems to have prevented the passage of sturgeon, salmon, and shad, up those rivers, and they are now seldom found in the Lake. Large quantities of pike, pickerel, and salmon-trout are, however, taken, especially in the spawning season, by torch-light and the spear; the best fishing-grounds being near the outlet and inlet of the lake. Two persons would often take three hundred pounds weight in a single night; but the result has been that the fish of different kinds have measurably disappeared from the Lake. The late Protective Act of the Provincial Parliament has had the effect of preventing the taking of fish during the spawning season, and it is expected that there will soon be a plentiful supply.

The principal inlet to the Lake, is Bacon River, which is formed by the junction of Barlow and Negro Rivers, about two miles south of the Lake. The only outlet is Massawippi River, which runs through the north part of Hatley in a north-easterly direction and empties into the St. Francis, about one mile above the present village of Lennoxville, or about eight miles from its source.

These rivers and the country around the Lake had long been the hunting and fishing ground of the St. Francis tribe of Indians; and after the advent of the white settlers, companies of twenty-five or thirty Indians were often seen encamped in the vicinity of the Lake for the purpose of fishing, trapping sable, coon, mink otter and beaver, and hunting moose and deer—all of which were then found in abundance. In later days, the forests have been cleared away, many interesting Indian relics have been found—such as stone arrow-heads and stone tomahawks with a groove for the handle. Nine of those tomahawks were ploughed up in the spring of 1861. They were found in a pile together. The origin of the race that first traversed this country must ever remain a mystery.

For many years after the settlement of the whites, the Indians continued their visits to the Lake and its surrounding country. They generally came early in the Fall and departed late in the spring. The writer remembers well their bark canoes and the many pleasant rides he had in them. The Indians were uniformly quiet and peaceable, unless irritated by injustice from the white men, or when heated by strong drink. As a general thing, the early settlers had far less trouble with the Indians than with many of their Yankee brethren.

LITTLE MAGOG LAKE, lying partly in Hatley, Magog, Oxford, and Ascot, is a beautiful sheet of water, about four miles in length, and varying from half a mile to three-fourths of a mile in breadth. The Magog River passes through it in its course to the north. It has two tributary streams—one from the north and the other from the south. There are several small streams that empty into the Massawippi Lake, but which are not worthy of particular notice.

FACE OF THE COUNTRY, SOIL AND PRODUCTIONS.

The surface of that part of the town east of the lake is generally undulating, with no prominent mountains or hills. With some few exceptions, the soil of the various farms will compare favorably with that of any part of the Eastern Townships.

From the head of Massawippi Lake south-westerly to Fitch Bay, a distance of about four miles, is a ravine through which runs a small stream. A canal connecting Fitch Bay with Massawippi Lake might be constructed, and following the course of this brook, a passage for small steamers and other boats to the outlet of Massawippi Lake might be secured. This canal may perhaps be made at some future day. On the west side of this ravine is a ridge of land, known by the name of Bunker Hill, which, as it approaches the head of Massawippi Lake settles down into gentle slopes and declivities and then unites with the mountain on the west side of the Lake. This mountain is about four miles in length. Its eastern slope near the lake is steep, and in some places precipitous. In some few cases, the hills have been cleared and cultivated, but the remainder are covered with trees and furnish many excellent sugaries. The land west of the mountain is in some places undulating, but in others, nearly level. It is generally settled. The mountain is a place of general resort in the blackberry season.

Pic-nics are frequently got up here by the young men and maidens of Hatley and the adjoining towns for the double purpose of profit and pleasure. About two miles north-west of this mountain and east from Memphremagog Lake is a tract of some eight hundred acres of land that was covered with a heavy growth of spruce, pine, and tamarisk, but which was destroyed by a fire some 40 years ago—leaving only the blackened trunks of a few of the largest trees standing. The soil was in many places burnt almost entirely off. This almost barren waste is now covered with blueberry bushes, and is the yearly resort of many from almost every part of the country. Hundreds of bushels of these berries are annually gathered. Many French Canadian families devote their whole time to the business during the season, and camp in rude shanties on the ground. They find a ready sale for the berries in the neighboring towns.

MINERALS.—Deposits of iron, copper, and gold have been found, but not of sufficient value to defray the expense of working.

CHARLESTON, OR EAST HATLEY.

The Parish of Charleston, formerly known as East Hatley, was constituted and set off from the south-eastern part of Hatley and the northern part of Barnston by Act of the Provincial Legislature in 1818. The name, Charleston, was commemorative of Rev. Chs. Stewart, D.D., Bishop of Quebec.

The first settlement within the limits of this parish was made by Thomas McConnell, Jr., about 1800. Among the early settlers were Levi and Jabez Hall. For many years, the settlement presented the appearance of an opening in the forest of some 200 acres, with two small frame houses and three log cabins. In 1808 Robert Vincent built a small store, and began business in connection with Levi Bigelow, of Derby, Vt. Other families came in soon after—among whom were those of Ebenezer Bacon and Dr. John Weston.

In process of time, the settlement began to assume the appearance of a village, and during the American War of 1812-1815 was a place of business of some importance, particularly in the trade of salts of lye, pot, and pearl ashes. Mr. Vincent continued in trade more than twenty years.

He was a man of strict integrity, but not a successful merchant. Hollis Smith was associated with him in business some two or three years, but afterwards removed to Sherbrooke, P.Q. William G. Cook began in 1823, and continued in trade several years, and acquired a large property. Among the later inhabitants of the village were the families of Luther Hall, William Grannis, John Grannis, Major John Jones, Lovinus Kathan, Japheth Le Baron, J. L. Pool, John Woodward, G. W. Kennedy, Dr. F. D. Gilbert, Cyrus Whitcomb, and H. Haseltine.

This village now consists of an Episcopal church, a Methodist church, an Episcopal parsonage, a Wesleyan parsonage, an academy, one tavern, two stores, a post office, a blacksmith shop, a tin shop, and about 30 dwelling houses. Much of the business that was formerly done here has been transferred to Compton, Massawippi and North Hatley.

MASSAWIPPI, OR WEST HATLEY.

About 1800, Stephen Boroughs settled at the place now known as Borough's Falls in Stanstead, and a road was cut soon after from that place running through Hatley, east of Massawippi Lake, and the laying out of this road few years afterwards was the beginning of the present village of Massawippi. Simeon Cole had previously made a small clearing, and Appleton Plumley had built a saw mill. A grist mill was built soon after by Daniel Bacon. Stephen Burbank, one of the early settlers, bought the mills and built a distillery, and other distilleries were started in the neighborhood.

The evils entailed upon the community by these nuisances, were long severely felt. Through the confirmed influence of strong drink, many of the early settlers sunk to the most abject poverty, and were compelled to sell out and leave the country. The Mill Privilege below the present village was bought by Samuel P. Harvey, of Compton. He built mills, and in 1842, purchased the mills of the Burbank Estate, and built the mill now in operation in the village. Simon Kezar was then the only trader in the place. In this year, a clothier's shop, a blacksmith shop, and a shoemaker's shop were started, and a full store of goods was opened by Knight & Demick. In 1843, a tannery and three or four new dwelling houses were built. Since that time, the village has gradually increased in number of buildings and wealth. It now (1874) contains one church, one tavern, two stores, one tannery, a grist mill, a sawmill, a post office, two cabinet and wheelwright shops, two blacksmith shops, a tailor's shop and grocery, a harness shop, a boot and shoe shop, and about 40 dwelling houses, and numbers about 175 inhabitants.

NORTH HATLEY.

This settlement can hardly be called a village. There are a few neat farm-houses in the vicinity of Massawippi Outlet. A store has lately been built and a post-office established, and several new dwelling-houses are being erected. As a railway station it is probably destined to become a place of some importance. Branches of the Le Baron and Wadleigh families are now its principal inhabitants. Col. Henry Cull was among the earliest settlers of the neighborhood.

MAGOG.

The territory which now constitutes the Township of Magog was set off in 1847 by Act of the Provincial Parliament from the eastern part of Bolton and the western part of Hatley, and was organized into a municipality in 1855. More than half a century had passed since the time of the settlement of Ralph Merry at the Outlet. A more particular mention of Mr. Merry will be made hereafter.

Since that time a flourishing village has arisen. The present village of Magog, the northern part of which formerly belonged to the Township of Bolton, is built mostly on the street that crosses the river, and another that crosses this street and runs along the northern bank of the river. The river where it runs through the village is about 15 rods wide, and in the first half mile from the lake has a fall of about 25 feet, thus affording a water power amply sufficient for the operation of mills and factories upon a large scale. Mills and woollen factories had early been built, and in process of time, the Outlet had become a place of importance, particularly in the lumber trade, and in woollen, iron, and other manufactures. The village still continues to increase in prosperity, and numbers among its inhabitants several enterprising and wealthy men. The Mountain Maid, a small steamer, made daily trips from Magog Outlet to Newport, Vt., for many years. The Lady of the Lake, a splendid boat, built in 1867, and others now ply between those places.

The present village of Magog comprises about 100 buildings—including two churches, an academy, five stores, and two hotels. Besides these, there are two saw mills with circular saws, and planing machines, one grist-mill with three runs, a door, sash and window blind shop, a rake and snath factory, two cabinet shops, a carriage, sleigh, washing machine, and churn shop, two blacksmith shops, one wool carding and cloth dressing shop, three boot and shoe shops, and tailor's, jeweler's and milliner's shops.

During the past few years, the natural scenery around the village and along the eastern shore of the lake has been receiving artificial embellishment by families of wealth from the cities, who have made purchases of summer residences, and have done much in the erection of elegant buildings and in adorning their pleasure grounds.

BARNSTON.

The name of this town, like most of the other English settlements of Canada, was derived from a place of the same name in England. Its boundaries were determined by Royal Warrant in 1792, and are Compton and Hatley on the north, Barford on the east, the parallel of 45 degrees north latitude, which separates it from Holland and Norton, in Vermont, on the south, and Stanstead on the west. It is about ten miles in length and ten miles in breadth, and comprises an area of 100 square miles, or about 64,000 acres.

The survey dividing the town into lots was made in 1796, under the supervision of Jesse Pennoyer, Esq., of Compton, P.Q.,—the concession lines running north and south, and the range lines east and west. In the disposal of the lots, as of the other townships, one-seventh part was selected from different portions for the benefit of the Protestant Clergy, and another seventh part was reserved as the property of the Crown. These lots in both cases were designated in the surveyors' diagrams. They were not to be sold, but leased for terms of twenty-one years. In after years, many of these lots were pitched and improved, but before the expiration of the first twenty-one years, the Crown and Clergy Reserves were offered for sale and were mostly purchased by the original occupants.

FACE OF THE COUNTRY.—With the exception of Barnston and Pinnacle Mountains and the lands in their immediate vicinity and along the banks of the Coaticook and Negro rivers, the surface of the town presents an undulating appearance, with gentle swells and declivities, resembling in many places, the rolling lands west of the Mississippi—the higher lands and valleys running in a north-easterly and south-westerly direction. The highest of these elevations begins near the centre of the town, and extends about six miles north-easterly to Compton. The surplus waters even of the smaller springs are conveyed into the Coaticook River on the east, and into Negro River, on the west—to the distance in some instances of four miles. With the exception of Compton and Stanstead, this township is not equalled by any other in the country in richness of soil or the quantity of land adapted to cultivation. There is, indeed, little waste land in the town, as the most broken parts of its surface furnish good pasturage and sugaries. Granite is abundant in the vicinity of Barnston Mountain and in other parts of the town. Limestone is found in some places, but no minerals of importance have yet been discovered.

The first opening of the forest in Barnston was made by Capt. Joseph Bartlett, in 1796. Mr. Bartlett had previously resided in Danville, Vt. He started off on foot, late in the summer of 1796, and, after spending two or three days in the country around Stanstead Plain, pitched No. 12, 8th Range of Barnston—his nearest neighbors being the families of Mr. Taplin at Stanstead Plain, and of Capt. Ebenezer Hovey at West Hatley. After falling two or three acres of trees and putting up a log shanty, covered with bark, and without a floor, he returned to his family in Vermont. In the spring of 1797, he again set out for Barnston, accompanied by his second daughter and two elder sons. On their arrival at Stanstead, they sent back their hired team, loaded the hand-sleds they had fitted up with such articles of furniture and clothing as they could carry, and started off through the woods on snow-shoes. The snow was nearly four feet deep. Sally, the daughter, donned a pair of snow-shoes and fitted up a pack which in more modern days would have been ample load for the strongest young man, and in this manner they succeeded in reaching their future home. Mr. Bartlett and his sons began their operations by clearing off the timber he had previously fallen, and succeeded in getting in a small crop in the course of the spring. He was poor, and having no provisions in prospect until their crop could be harvested, was under the necessity of returning to Vermont and "hiring out" to get a present supply. In the meantime, he had arranged with a man in Derby for a temporary supply for the children, and had paid him for carrying the provisions through to Barnston; but, from dishonesty or carelessness, they were not forwarded. In the meantime, the children were reduced almost to starvation. For several weeks they had to subsist entirely upon leeks or wild onions, scraped birch bark, and such fish as they could take from the brook, and without salt. The return of Mr. Bartlett in August, with a plentiful supply of provisions, was hailed with joy by his famishing children. It is needless to say that the family were never again reduced to similar straits. Their little crops afforded an abundant harvest, and they were soon enabled by patient and persevering industry to have a comfortable home and a plentiful table in the wilderness. Previous to the return of Mr. Bartlett, the boys and their sister had succeeded in making some three or four hundred weight of salts of lye, which were afterwards exchanged for provisions. The father and the children remained together until the following winter—extending their clearing and improving their premises. In January, 1798, he again returned to Vermont, and moved in the remainder of his family. They stopped a short time at Stanstead—sent back their hired team, and again set out for their new home,—carrying their goods through on hand sleds. They were two or three days in effecting this last removal. Mrs. Bartlett was placed on a hand-sled with her babe of four months old, tucked up carefully with bed-clothes, and lashed or tied on the sled to prevent being shaken off in going over the rough road. Mr. Bartlett and a son returned the next day to take in the two young girls and some furniture. He put the two girls and a part of the goods on one sled, and the young man took the remainder. The weather was intensely cold, and before they had reached their home, the lad had become so chilled and tired that he entreated his father to let him lie down and rest a while in the snow. Knowing that to lie down and sleep under these circumstances was death, the father deposited a part of their loading in the woods—made the girls as comfortable as he could on his sled, and with a beech switch drove his son before him until they reached home. It was a fearful ordeal, but the life of the boy was saved. When they reached the house, he dropped down senseless. Several weeks elapsed before he recovered his usual strength and health.

Capt. Bartlett did not long remain "monarch of all he surveyed." He was soon followed by others from Vermont and New Hampshire.

Levi Baldwin, a native of Connecticut, was the second pioneer of the settlement of Barnston. He made a beginning in 1798 on No. 15, 16th Range, and moved his family in early in 1799. Their experience involved many hardships and privations; like their early neighbors, they were often reduced to very great straits for provisions while clearing their farm. Bread, the staff of life, must be had daily, at whatever price; and they were often obliged to go the distance of 10 and 20 miles and bring home bags of flour or meal upon their backs. During the first summer, while waiting for their crops to grow, they improved the time in making salts of lye for the purpose of buying bread. While engaged in that business, they had to subsist upon leeks, birch bark and fish. They succeeded in making about 16 cwt. of salts, which were worth at that time about 50 dollars. Having no team of their own, they entrusted the salts to a neighbor, who took them to market. On his return, he told them that the salts were worthless, and would not sell. Not satisfied with the statement of the man, Richard Baldwin, one of the sons, a lad of some 17 years, went to St. Johnsbury, where the salts had been taken, and found that they had been sold at $4 per cwt. In the meantime the man had invested the money in Indian corn at one dollar a bushel, and brought the corn to Stanstead Plain and sold at the rate of four dollars per bushel. Without knowing the circumstances at the time, the Baldwins bought a bushel of this corn, for which they had to pay eight hard days work in falling trees.

BARNSTON CORNER.

The earliest settlers of this neighborhood were the Buckland, Parker, Converse, Cleaveland, Bartholomew, Davis, Norton, Cutting, White, and Bellows families. In the early days of the settlement, there were no regular roads through the towns. In 1804, a path had been cut through the woods from Stanstead Plain to the Aldrich, Clement, Mosher, Heath, and Locke settlement, now known as Mosher Corner, and soon after extended to the Bartlett, Baldwin, Hill, Child, and Bickford neighborhood. From this path, another was subsequently cut through, running north-easterly to the Bartholomew place, now known as the Davis Farm, and this was for several years the end of the road. These routes were with few alterations adopted and afterwards laid out by regular survey. Two roads running northerly and southerly across the town were laid out by the Grand Voyer in 1810, and two running easterly and westerly, soon after. The crossing of two of these roads forms the site of the present village of Barnston Corner. Previous to 1825, the settlement consisted of some 15 or 20 dwelling houses scattered over an area of about four square miles of forest with small openings. As the population of the different parts of the town increased, this locality became rather a central place of business, and for a time commanded the trade of the greater part of Barnston, the south part of Compton, and the new settlement of Barford. The Humphrey and Damon families and others of enterprise, came in about that time. The location of the Grand Trunk Railway in after years had the effect of diverting much of the business of this village to Coaticook, and but little progress has been made in the growth of the place during the past 15 or 20 years. John Mansur, the first postmaster, was appointed in 1832. Among the families of the later settlers were those of M. T. Cushing, Dr. N. Cleveland, Dr. N. Jenks, Eli S. White, and Page Remick. Among the successful merchants were Francis Judd, William G. Cook, A. A. Adams, John Thornton, S. B. Humphrey, and Hollis Shorey. The present village comprises about 50 dwelling houses within its limits. The public buildings are an academy, a Baptist church, a Wesleyan church, a tavern, two stores, a post-office, a telegraph office, a cabinet and wheelwright's shop, a blacksmith's shop, and a boot and shoe shop.

MOSHER CORNER, OR SOUTH BARNSTON.

This settlement, situated about 6 miles N.E. from Stanstead Plain, was begun about 1804, by the Aldrich, Bayley, Ball, Clement, Boroughs, Hanson, Heath, Locke, Mosher and Sprague families. The south-west quarter of the town, of which this locality forms a part, has progressed but little during the past half century. The greater part of the original settlers are dead or have left the country. There are, however, several thrifty farmers in the neighborhood, among whom are the Locke, Heath, Hanson, Clark, Boyle, Slater, McGookin, and Aldrich families. A post-office was established here in 1867, Francis Cooper, postmaster.

KING'S CORNER.

This is a settlement in the north-west part of Barnston, on the road between Stanstead Plain and East Hatley. Ira King, one of the early settlers, opened a tavern about 1810, and another hotel and store were afterwards built. For a time, Hiram Davis and branches of the King and Norton families were engaged in trade. The King family are mostly dead or have left the country. The neighborhood now contains the families of some 10 or 15 wealthy farmers.

WAYVILLE OR WAY'S MILLS.

This settlement, or small neighborhood of substantial farmers, derives its importance from its manufactories. The Way and Kollister families were among its early settlers. The buildings are a store, a grist mill, a saw mill, and a carding, spinning and weaving factory. From its local advantages, it is probably destined to become a business place of some importance. A post-office has lately been established, E. S. Southmayd, postmaster.

NEW BOSTON.

This settlement was begun about 1810, and was indebted to some Stanstead wag for its name. It comprises a few lots in the south west corner of Barnston. Samuel Burbank, William Blasdell, and some of the descendants of the Hartwell family were among the early settlers.

COATICOOK.

For many years, this settlement formed a part of the wild lands of Barnston. Richard Baldwin, jr., had made a small clearing in the forest, about 1840, and two small log-houses had been built. In 1842, Horace Cutting built a store and started business in connection with Marcus Child, Esq., who afterwards sold his property in Stanstead and removed to this place. A post-office was established in 1844, Mr. Cutting, postmaster. The name of the office suggested by Mr. Child was afterwards adopted as that of the village. For some years the settlement progressed but slowly; but the advantages derived from the location of the Grand Trunk Railway, the eastern portion of which had been completed, and which passed directly through the village, rendered it at once a place of importance, and its growth has been unprecedentedly rapid. Its local advantages and ample water privileges have been improved by active and energetic men who have contributed much to the growth and prosperity of the village. Among those may be mentioned Richard Baldwin, jr., Marcus Child, Horace Cutting, Lewis L. Sleeper, A. A. Adams, John Thornton, Dr. Benjamin Damon, and Amos K. Fox. The descendants of the Baldwin and Cleveland families of Barnston are among the business men of the place.

For many years after its settlement, the boundaries of the village had not been defined. In 1863, a plan of its present limits, made by Charles Merrill, was submitted to the Provincial Legislature, and Coaticook was constituted a municipality, separate from the township of Barnston. This new corporation comprises an area of about four square miles. The Coaticook river runs through it from north to south, and is so very tortuous, that a line following its course would measure nearly four miles before leaving the precincts of the village. The southern part of the village is now the centre of trade, but with its water-power and facilities for manufactories, the northern part must eventually be in the ascendant.

The present public buildings are an Episcopal Church, a Wesleyan Church, a Free Will Baptist Church, an academy building with a town hall, an Episcopal select school house, a district school house, seven stores, three hotels, one apothecary's shop, three blacksmiths' shops, a harness shop, a furniture shop, a machine shop, a saw mill, a grist mill, a tannery, a door and sash factory, a churn and washing machine factory, a hand loom factory, a mowing machine and rake factory, an iron foundry, a match factory, a post-office, and a telegraph office. The present number of dwelling houses is about one hundred and fifty; new streets are being opened, and settlement is rapidly increasing. To the historian of after years, the foregoing brief account may perhaps serve as a starting point.

BARFORD.

This township contains eleven concessions of seventeen lots each, is 10 miles in length from north to south, and about 6 miles in breadth, from east to west, and comprises an area of about sixty square miles, or about 38,400 acres. Its boundaries on the north are Compton and Clifton, Hereford on the east, the parallel of 45 degrees north latitude, which separates it from Norton, Vt., on the south, and Barnston on the west.

The survey determining the limits of the town was made in 1792, and the division into lots was made in 1801, the concession and range lines running in the same manner, and being a continuation of those of Barnston.

The surface of Barford is diversified. The Coaticook river runs through the town from north to south. The meadows along its banks are small but valuable. The remaining part of the town is hilly, and in some instances broken and uneven. The soil is rich and productive, with but little waste land. The farms in this town are not surpassed by any in the county in adaptations to cultivation and pasturage. To the traveller, the settlement presents the appearance of a number of neat farm houses with comfortable surroundings along the course of the river and in other localities. Drew's mills, now Dixville, a small village on the Coaticook river, is the only place of business in the north part of the town. Here are a grist mill, a saw mill, a carding and clothier's shop, a post-office, and a store. A village has been started at the boundary line in the southern part of the town with favorable prospects. A small French settlement in the eastern part of the town is yet in its infancy.

A large share of the wild lands of this township was early parcelled out to Government officials and other individuals. About the year 1810, a grant of 2,500 acres was made by the Governor General to Mrs. Hannah Vaucamp, of whom mention has been previously made. With more energy than prudence, she commenced operations for settlement upon a large scale; suffice it to say that, after expending some $5,000 in clearing land and making roads to very little purpose, she relinquished the enterprise and returned to Quebec, where she died. This property was afterwards purchased by Dr. Ward, at a price much below its real value. Dr. Ward has since made valuable improvements on the premises.

Although this township was surveyed as early as the beginning of the present century, many years passed before any settlements worthy of note were made. Stanstead, Hatley and Barnston were the first points of attraction to emigrants; and it was not until the most eligible farms in these towns had been taken up, that attention was called to the forests of Barford. Indeed, many of the first settlements were made by the children of the pioneers of Barnston. Among these were the descendants of the Child, Baldwin, Cleaveland, Parker and Drew families. Leonard Martin and his family came in from Peacham, Vt., in 1823. Their children are settled mostly around them. Harba and Marcus Child, Esqs., grandsons of Harba Child, of Barnston, are among the most prominent public men of Barford. One of the descendants of the Drew family built the mills that still retain his name. This property has lately passed into the hands of Richard Baldwin, Esq., of Coaticook. Deposits of copper have been found in the eastern part of the town, but not of sufficient importance to justify the expense of working.

SQUIRE HOWE.

Was among the early settlers of Barnston. His father, Caleb Howe, had settled near Fort Dunmore, now Dummerston. That country was then new, and after the opening of the French War, the inhabitants were subject to frequent depredations from the Indians. Such was the insecurity of the place, that the women and children were kept in the Fort—the men cultivating the meadows in the daytime with their muskets by their side, and prepared to retreat into the Fort on the appearance of the Indians. Mr. Howe and two of his neighbors were surprised by an ambuscade of the Indians, while hoeing corn, and killed on the spot, and the Indians succeeded, by stratagem, in getting into the Fort, the women and children falling an easy prey. Among their captives were Mrs. Howe and her children. They were marched off through the wilderness to Lake Champlain, whence they were taken to Montreal, where after a delay of some months, they were ransomed and suffered to return home, after having passed through many hardships and sufferings. Squire Howe was four years old when the family were taken by the Indians. The Indian who claimed him as his property seemed to cherish a feeling of peculiar spite and malignity towards him during the whole of their journey. Often when the little fellow sunk down from fatigue or exhaustion he would rouse him by striking him on the head with the handle of his hatchet. The marks of this savage brutality were plainly to be seen during the remainder of his life. In his early youth the compiler examined the head of Mr. Howe, who was then an old man, and long and deeply indented scars were distinctly felt and seen. He settled in Barnston in 1804. Several of his descendants reside in that town.

ANTIQUITIES.

The relics of tribes of Indians, living anterior to any of whom we have knowledge, and who must have traversed our country at a very remote period, have already been noted in our account of Stanstead and Hatley. Relics of later years have, however, been found, which seem to have been connected with the exploration of the forests of our country by the English or French during the middle and the latter part of the past century. In 1800 Isaac Drew, one of the early settlers of Barnston, found, while hunting in the woods, a brass kettle embedded in the ground. He had stumbled over it by catching his foot in the bail. On raising it he found that the bottom was gone, but, being an ingenious mechanic, he made from it an excellent old-fashioned warming-pan, which has since remained as an heirloom in the family of one of his descendants.

In the township of Barnston unmistakable traces have been found of the fate of a part of the company commanded by Major Rogers, sent from Londonderry, N. H., in 1758, by order of General Amherst, to destroy the Indian village of St. Francis. This company took their route by way of Lake Champlain and the rivers. They reached the settlement, and in the absence of the warriors, plundered and set fire to the village—the old men, women and children falling an easy prey. The act was retaliatory, on the part of the whites, for injuries done by that tribe to the inhabitants of New Hampshire: but in the sequel it proved to be dearly bought revenge; for the warriors, who had been out upon a hunting excursion, soon returned and were almost immediately upon their trail. Such was the haste with which they were pursued, that they were fain to drop their plunder and escape as they best could. They were overtaken on the north bank of Magog River, and a sanguinary battle was fought on the ground that now forms the north part of the village of Sherbrooke. The slaughter on both sides must have been fearful, judging from the relics discovered in after years. Major Rogers and a few of his men succeeded in making their escape, and taking the course through the wilderness west of Memphremagog Lake, they reached their homes, after passing through almost unparalleled hardships and sufferings. In their haste to escape, some plunged into the river and attempted to cross near the place where the G. T. Railway Bridge now stands. Not one of these men lived to tell the tale of his sufferings. A part were drowned, and the others escaped the tomahawk and scalping knife only to perish in the wilderness. Wounded, wet, and exposed to cold, hunger and fatigue, they followed the highlands through Ascot and Compton, until they reached the south-western part of Barnston, where, being exhausted by their accumulated sufferings, they laid down, as it appears, to die. * * * * * For more than a century, their fleshless skeletons were suffered to bleach in the forest, until they had been long covered by a soil made from the leaves falling from the trees. In clearing up that locality many years afterwards, relics were found, which, like "the testimony of the rocks" in modern geology, determine the fate of these unfortunate men. In one place human bones were ploughed up, and musket barrels with locks and brass trimmings—in one instance the lock shewing that the gun had been discharged—the remains of powder-horns, clasp-knives, a razor, silver knee buckles and shoe buckles, remains of Indian mocassins, beads and other trinkets, camp kettles, musket balls and flints. In falling a large maple tree in Barford a gun barrel with the iron and brass work of a musket was found imbedded in the wood near the centre of the tree. The question may be asked, "How did it get there?" The probable solution is that the gun was left standing against a small tree, in which was a seam which secured it from falling, and in process of time grew around and covered it—the wood part decaying from exposure to the weather.

In collecting the substance of the following sketches, the compiler has enjoyed the pleasure of visiting most of the surviving pioneers of Stanstead County. Some had attained the age of more than 90 years—had served in the French War, and in the War of the Revolution; and in recounting experiences of by-gone days, their faces would light up with the ardor of youth, and, like Goldsmith's hero, they would "shoulder the crutch and show how fields were won." These men form an important link between the past and the present, having lived during one of the most important epochs, perhaps, in the history of the world. With the events of the French War, the American Revolution, the French Revolution, War of 1812-1815, and the career of Napoleon Bonaparte, they were familiar. They had seen the territory of the United States increased from a few British Colonies to a mighty nation—had been partakers of the hardships and privations attendant upon the work of opening out the forests of Canada, and had watched with wonder and admiration the numberless improvements of the age; and some of them almost expressed the wish that they could have a drink from "Rip Van Winkle's Flagon," and wake up a hundred years hence.

While much praise is due to the memories of our fathers, our mothers should have their appropriate share. They were a class of women that seldom find a parallel in modern days. Our fathers, indeed, toiled, but they were sustained and cheered by the patient, self-sacrificing and untiring industry of our mothers, who, by their intelligent, quiet influence, rendered their homes comfortable and happy, and who were instrumental, mainly, in moulding the characters that have distinguished many of their posterity. From several of these "mothers in Israel," the compiler has received valuable assistance in his work.

BY SAMUEL HOYT, ESQ.

My father, Samuel Hoyt, Sen., was a distinguished hunter, and used often to join the St. Francis Indians in their excursions around the Memphremagog Lake. He found them uniformly honest, upright and peaceable, except when under the influence of strong drink. In such cases, he was sometimes placed in rather equivocal circumstances, and was under the necessity of opposing force with force; but, in general, he had far less trouble with the Indians than with his white brethren. They sometimes hunted in company, and at other times agreed upon a division of the ground. Engagements of this kind were honestly kept by the Indians.

BY A. B. JOHNSON, ESQ.

Among the pioneers of the county of Richelieu, was Jonathan Johnson, Jr. He served in the American Army in the time of the Revolution, was taken captive by the Indians, at the battle of Ticonderoga. A party of Indians had previously taken six or seven American prisoners, who had succeeded in killing their captors and making their escape. Mr. Johnson and six others were supposed by the Indians to be the party who had killed their companions, and their capture was in accordance with the customary system of revenge of the tribe. Mr. Johnson and his comrades were taken into the forest, and preparations were made for their death by burning by a slow fire, the captives themselves having been compelled to gather and prepare the wood for their own funeral pile. One of the number was a freemason, and in this extremity, he made the signal of distress. Providentially, the chief, or leader of the Indians was a mason, and this circumstance saved their lives. Through his influence, they were released from the stakes to which they had been bound, even after they had begun to feel the scorching effects of the fire. The authority of the chief did not extend any farther than the preservation of their lives; for during their subsequent course, they were treated with the utmost cruelty. Their route was down Lake Champlain and through the woods, to Montreal. At Montreal, they were subjected to the ordeal of "running the gauntlet." In this operation, the poor fellows had to make their way between two rows of Indians, squaws, and children—receiving their blows, or dodging them as they best could. This process was often repeated for the gratification of their tormentors, who seemed to take a fiendish delight in inventing new tortures, often compelling their victims to hold their fingers in red hot pipe bowls until the ends were in many cases literally burned off. Some of Mr. Johnson's fingers were so burned that the nails never again grew upon them. At one time during their pilgrimage, they travelled nearly forty days without any sustenance except the roots and berries which they gathered as they went along. As their route was through American Territory, the utmost quiet was observed by the Indians, and although they often encountered a plenty of wild game, they did not dare to hazard the firing of a gun.

From Montreal, Mr. Johnson and his comrades were taken to Quebec, where they were ransomed by the British Authorities, and held as prisoners of war. They were kept at Quebec three years, or until the general peace of 1783, when they were discharged and permitted to return to their homes in the United States. Mr. Johnson carried the scars and other marks of brutality he received from the savages to his grave. He settled in Hatley in 1802.

BY COL. JOHN MCCONNELL.

My father, Thomas McConnell, Jr., came to Hatley in 1796, and began on the shore of Memphremagog Lake, but subsequently removed to No. 6, 1st Range, and was one of the earliest settlers of the present village of Charleston. He was a man of energy, and, like Nimrod of yore, "a mighty hunter." Many of his exploits in that line would be worthy of note. In one of his solitary excursions in the almost boundless wilderness of the neighborhood, he had killed a large moose, but before he had finished the operation of skinning, night came on, and it was nearly dark. He was then at a great distance from any settlement, and had no resource but to camp out. The evening was mild, and wrapping himself snugly in the skin, with the hair inside, he laid down in the snow, and in the arms of the drowsy god, soon forgot his toils and his cares. During the night, the weather had changed, and the morning was intensely cold. When he awoke, he found that he was encased in a covering from which he could not extricate himself; and it was not until the perspiration and warmth of his body, caused by his desperate exertions, had measurably softened his covering, that he was able to cast it off. It was nearly night of the next day before he set out for home. Like the fox in the fable, he thenceforth adopted the maxim of never getting into a scrape without having well considered how to get out of it.

BY CAPT. SIMON BEAN.

My uncle, Capt. Simon Kezar, was very fond of hunting, often traversing the almost unbroken-forests of Stanstead and Compton counties. Often in the days of my childhood and youth did I listen

"Whene'er he spake of most disastrous chances
Of hairbreadth 'scape and imminent deadly peril."

In one of his solitary excursions late in November, 1801, he took his gun, a supply of ammunition, an axe, a number of steel traps, a stock of provisions, and directed his course easterly to the Coaticook River; but not finding game to his satisfaction, continued his route up the river towards the pond at its source—in which region he had learned from the Indians that moose, deer, beaver, otter, and muskrat were plenty. As this tour was one of exploration, he left his traps and provisions in the woods in Compton, and taking his axe and gun and a supply of bread and meat sufficient for his dinner and supper, he started on up the river. In the afternoon, it began to snow, but he continued his course onward into Vermont several miles beyond the boundary line; the storm increasing and the night coming on, he thought it best to retrace his steps. The snow was falling fast, and this with the darkness of the night soon compelled him to stop. He had not time to make a camp, but set fire to a dry stub, and stood up all night under a leaning cedar near it, the snow continuing to fall fast all the time. In the morning, it had attained to the depth of two feet and a half, and continued to fall. He worked his way down the river, but his progress was very slow. The depth of the snow not being the only difficulty with which he had to contend—the trees and underbrush were loaded down with damp and heavy snow. He was then at the distance of at least thirty-five miles from his camp in Hatley, and became convinced that he should not be able to reach it, and must direct his course to one of the other settlements. The distance to the opening of Mr. Hinman in Derby he was certain was much less; and although he had no means of ascertaining the precise direction, he changed his course, and travelled all that day, and at night, drenched to the skin by the snow melting from the heat of his body, prepared to rest until morning. He trod down the snow, made a large fire from dry wood, and without having eaten anything during the day, laid down upon a bed of boughs with his back to the fire, and soon fell asleep. In the night he was awakened by the scorching effect of the fire—it having burnt the back part of his coat entirely out. During the night, the storm had abated, and as soon as it was light the next morning, he again set out. The snow was then three feet deep, and his progress slow and difficult. At about nine o'clock, the clouds broke away and the sun appeared. He then realized that it was indeed "a pleasant thing to see the sun"—inasmuch as he was assured that he was travelling in the right direction. Hope brightened, and he climbed a tree to take an observation, but no clearing or smoke from any point could be seen. Desponding and almost despairing, he continued his toilsome and painful journey until about eleven o'clock, when he came to a small opening. On brushing the snow from the stumps, he found that the trees had been recently cut, and that timber had been hewn on the spot. Cheered by this prospect, he proceeded with renewed energy, and soon after came to a hut where he found a woman with a family of small children. The husband had left home previous to the storm. By this time, he was nearly famished from hunger and fatigue; but after a slight repast, the best that the family could afford, he started for Mr. Hinman's place near Derby Centre. On the way, he met the man at whose house he had breakfasted, and another man with a team, breaking out the road. He staid at Mr. Hinman's that night, and the next day succeeded in reaching his camp in Hatley — much to the joy of his friends. His brother and some of his neighbors had started in search of him, but soon abandoned the attempt—believing that he had perished in the storm. His traps and provisions remained suspended from the limb of a tree in Compton until the following spring.

Among many reminiscences of my uncle, I might mention that in the month of December, soon after he settled in Hatley, he fell with his own hands, 30 acres of trees of heavy growth—a feat which few modern choppers can accomplish.

BY E. H. LE BARON, ESQ.

About the year 1802, a Mr. Bowen and his wife settled on the hill near the east end of No. 3, 6th Range of Hatley. After remaining four years at that place, they removed to No. 22, 3rd Range. In effecting their removal, Jonathan Cox took the family and their effects into a canoe, and rowed down the lake to the outlet, whence they went on foot to their new home. When on their way down the lake, they discovered upon the surface of the water an object which glistened and appeared to move. On approaching nearer, it was found to be a large black salmon basking in the rays of the sun. Mr. Cox allowed the canoe to drift quietly alongside without disturbing the repose of the "sleeping beauty," and succeeded in grasping her in his arms and depositing her safely in the canoe. In the meantime, the antics and demonstrations of his captive would have done honor to any modern circus-rider. The fish, when dressed, weighed about twelve pounds. Mr. Bowen left the country in 1815.

In the winter of 1798, Chester Hovey, then a young man, was sent by his father, Capt. Ebenezer Hovey, to Montreal with a span of horses and a sleigh for nails and other materials for building, and a supply of family groceries, including a barrel of rum. In crossing the lake on his return, his team broke through the ice near the foot of Owl's Head, where the water is nearly three hundred feet deep. He had barely time to cut the harnesses and clear the horses before the sleigh went down. He immediately slipped a halter around the neck of one horse and succeeded in drawing him out. He then attempted to get the other out, but was unable. Thinking further effort useless, he threw a blanket over the horse he had saved, and chilled and almost frozen, started for the eastern shore. After going a few rods, he heard the neighing of the horse left in the water, and resolved to make one effort more to save him. This time, he succeeded, and although drenched to the skin, and his clothes frozen stiff with ice, he reached home without further difficulty. The sleigh, with its load, remained at the bottom of the lake during the three following years, when it was fished up—all, except a few bags of salt. The barrel of rum was found entire, and was thought to pay amply the expense of the fishing.

BY MRS. ROXANA FLANDERS.

My father, Capt. Ebenezer Hovey, came to Canada in 1793, and pitched on the eastern shore of Memphremagog Lake at the place now known as Judd's Point, about three years before the survey of this locality was made. After making a small clearing and putting up a log shanty, he returned to Vermont, and in March, 1794, again set out for his new home with an ox team carrying his wife and eight children, with bedding, provisions, &c. They were accompanied by Joseph Ives, Joel Ives, Isaac Rexford, and David Chamberlin with their wives and children. They came by the way of Missisquoi Bay, and were seven days in getting through the woods from Frelightsburg to Memphremagog Lake. The snow was deep, and the women and children suffered much from cold and fatigue. When about half way through the woods, they found that they had eaten all their bread; but as necessity is the mother of invention, they succeeded in finding a ledge of rocks, where they made a temporary oven, in which they baked a supply of bread sufficient for the remainder of their journey. Beds were fitted up on their sleds for the women and children, but the men had to camp upon hemlock boughs in the open forest, sleeping as they best could—feeding their teams with browse and the small allowance of fodder they were able to bring with them. Their route for the greater part of the way was through a trackless wilderness. They had to cut and break their road. The larger streams were generally frozen, but the smaller ones and the marshy grounds were more open. Their teams often stuck fast in the mire, and they had frequently to help each other out. In many instances the women and children were compelled to unload and wade through the deep snow and water. In this manner, they progressed until they reached the end of their journey, Mr. Hovey's log cabin in Hatley. For a time, the different families managed to live together, but as soon as the snow went off, they set about making dwellings for themselves and began the work of clearing the forest. They were prospered, and as their circumstances improved and the settlement increased, the log cabins were superseded by neat and substantial frame houses and out-buildings. In 1804, my father removed to No. 11, 3rd Range of Hatley, and subsequently purchased several other lots. Three of the original farms remain in the possession of his descendants, but the remainder have passed into other hands. Among the inconveniences and privations of the early settlers was the want of comfortable clothing, especially for the winter season. Unlike the experience of the Israelites in their pilgrimage through the desert, their garments would wear out, and new ones had to be provided—the carding, spinning, weaving, and making up, all to be done within their own families. Coloring at the first was not regarded as a matter of much importance. Flax and tow formed the cloth for their summer clothing, but they often suffered for want of warm garments for the winter, as but few sheep could be kept on account of wolves and bears. These inconveniences were only lessened as their circumstances improved, and when from the increase of the settlements, carding and clothier's mills, and spinning and weaving factories were introduced into the country. My mother died in October, 1829. My father died, April 24, 1836.

BY MRS. LEMUEL FISH.

In the winter of 1795, my father-in-law, Joseph Fish, with his wife and their eldest son, Lemuel, then a babe of eight months, left their home in Reading, Vermont, and with an ox-team loaded with their household stuff and a limited supply of provisions, found their way through the woods to Durham, P. Q. After remaining a short time at that place, they sent back their team and set out on foot to seek a home on the eastern side of Memphremagog Lake—the mother carrying her babe all the way in her arms, and the father loaded with a pack of no small dimensions. After crossing the Lake and staying a day or two at the log cabin of Capt. Hovey, they directed their course to a place on Negro River, about a mile below Boroughs' Falls. Here they put up a temporary shanty on a rising ground near the river. The place is still known as "Shanty Hill." They were poor, and their hardships and privations were for many years very severe. Some time elapsed before they were able to clear land sufficient to raise their bread, and a still longer time before they could get their grain ground into meal. During the first seven years of their experience, there was not a grist mill within the distance of twenty miles from their dwelling. From 1795 to 1802, they pounded their grain in a large mortar made from a heavy block of maple. For variety, they sometimes boiled and ate their wheat and Indian corn whole. The supply of fish from the lake and river was abundant and contributed materially to their support. From 1802, their difficulties began to lessen. The wooden mortar was thrown aside, (although long preserved as a memento,) and they enjoyed the luxury of loaves baked from well-ground flour. The shanty had, meanwhile, been superseded by a substantial log house of limited dimensions, and which furnished them with a comfortable home. In 1795, Mrs. Fish was playfully called "the handsomest woman in the town," there being no other woman in the settlement. In the mean time, their family increased, and, by industry and economy, their means increased; and after residing some seven years in this locality, they removed to No. 9, 1st Range of Hatley, which lot Mr. Fish had drawn as an Associate. Here they passed their last days in comfort and prosperity, and lived to see their children and grandchildren well settled in life, and with hardly an exception sustaining respectable and useful positions in the community. All the families are exemplary members of the different Christian churches.

BY MRS. N. TAYLOR.

My father, Jeremiah Lovejoy, moved with his family from Danville, Vt., to Hatley, in March, 1797. There was then no opening at Derby Line, and but one house on Stanstead Plain. After leaving Stanstead Plain, we found an unbroken forest until we reached the opening of Joseph Fish, in Hatley. We remained with the family of Mr. Fish about a week, enjoying their hospitality and kindness, and then crossed the river on the ice, and moved into a log house, twenty by ten feet, with a stone and stick chimney in the centre and a fireplace on each side. In this cabin, two other families, viz., those of Samuel Fish and Ephraim Moore, found a home with us—making in all, six parents and fifteen children. Mr. Moore and his family remained a few weeks, but we did not leave until Fall. In the meantime, my father had made a small clearing, and sown and planted a crop, from which he raised a supply of provisions for the winter. He put up a log house during the season, covering it with long shingles. This was a splendid dwelling, compared with our previous one. We moved in as soon as the roof was covered and a sufficient part of the floor of hewn split logs was laid for one bed—no windows or chimney. It was about the middle of October. The day was stormy, with a heavy fall of snow. Mother made a fire against a temporary stone back in one corner of the cabin and cooked our supper, while father went back for the cow and the remainder of our furniture. By this time the children "were as hungry as bears." The kettle of hasty pudding was made, and rather than wait for the return of father with the cow, we chose to eat at once. We had each selected a clean spruce chip, on which mother gave us our supper of pudding and maple molasses. This was our first meal in our new home. Our beds were made of hemlock boughs spread over that part of our dwelling where the floor had not been laid. In this cabin, rude and homely as were its conveniences and surroundings, we enjoyed a happiness equal, if not superior, to that of the owners of any modern residences with the most costly furnishings. After laying the remainder of the floor and building a stone and stick chimney, father fitted up windows. This was done by cutting holes through the walls, in which he put square frames, covered at first with raw sheepskins strained on like a drumhead. Mother's outfit had been rather above those of her neighbors. After fitting up shelves on one side of the dwelling, she was able to display a set of twelve pewter plates, two large platters, and three basins of the same material. These were kept burnished after the old puritan style; next followed a number of wooden plates and bowls, which were for common use. For special occasions, she could furnish a table with six teacups and saucers, and as many white earthen plates, two pitchers, and a sufficient number of pewter teaspoons. Happy days of primeval simplicity! Well do I remember the old log house. Father had "caulked it with moss and plastered it with clay," and with ample fires built against the stone back, we could bid defiance to cold and care. Father improved the winter season in falling ten acres of trees, and after the usual process of "limbing and burning" in the Spring, planted among the logs Indian corn, beans, potatoes, squashes, pumpkins, cucumbers, and melons; and after our crop was harvested, we "fared sumptuously every day." We then considered ourselves rich. Our stock consisted of two cows, a pair of three year old steers and ten sheep. For these we had no pasturage but the wide forest around us, in which they often wandered far from home. Through the blessing of Divine Providence, we were not molested by wolves or bears. Led by the tinkling of the bell worn by one of the cows, father usually found them without difficulty; but in rainy or cloudy weather, he often came near losing himself in the woods. To avoid this dilemma he fitted up a large hollow log near the house, and one of the boys pounded upon it at intervals with a mallet. This was rather a novel mode of telegraphing, but answered the purpose. When winter came, our cattle were gathered home; and without any shelter except what nature gave them, were fed in a spruce grove near the house, and contented with their supply of corn-stalks, browse and other fodder, came out in good condition in the Spring. This arrangement continued until we were able to build a log barn and he el, and enlarge our clearing so as to furnish hay and pasturage. By the time our stock had been wintered and father had sowed and planted his crop for the second Spring, our supply of provisions was exhausted, and he was under the necessity of going to Vermont and hiring out to get bread. During his absence we had to subsist upon very short allowance. The day before his return, mother had cooked the last morsel of food in the house. She made a small quantity of porridge from a handful of beans, and this served for our dinner and supper. The next day we had nothing to eat. In the evening, father returned, bringing a bag of cornmeal upon his back. A kettle of hasty pudding furnished us a good supper, and as we gathered around the family altar that night, thanksgiving to the beneficent Giver of our mercies might have been heard from the happy few in our humble dwelling. The meal which father had brought, with the milk from one of our cows, supplied us until the harvest season, and, from that time, we never again experienced the want of good and wholesome food. We raised a small crop of flax, which, with our wool, we worked into clothing—carding, spinning, weaving, coloring, and making up, all within our own family. Our summer clothes were made from flax and tow. The cloth, called tow and linen, was taken from the loom, and without bleaching, made up and worn, until, by washing, it had become white. We then colored our dresses with white maple bark and copperas. Mother was particular in having us neat and tidy on the Sabbath. She washed our clothes on Saturdays, and by pounding them on a flat stone or the surface of a smooth log with a mallet, they had a glossy appearance. No family in the settlement was better dressed than ours: Boys and girls, whether large or small, went to meeting barefooted. The young men and maidens generally carried their stockings and shoes in their hands, and would put them on before entering the place of worship, and take them off as soon as they came out. Our straw hats and bonnets, though coarse, were sufficiently fashionable. The winter clothing of father and the boys was made on this wise—the woollen cloth was taken from the loom and put into a barrel with soap and water, and felled by pounding with a pestle. It was then colored with butternut bark, and made into trowsers, jackets, and spencers, as occasion might require. Our garments were homespun, but they were substantial and comfortable. Compared with the more ample dresses of modern date, they might have been considered behind the times; but it is much to be doubted whether the mothers of the present age would, if thrown upon their own resources and industry, be willing to make the efforts we did to sustain themselves and families respectably in honest poverty. Notwithstanding the disadvantages to which we were subjected, the table linen, pocket handkerchiefs, coverlets and other articles made by the mothers and maidens of those days would compare favorably with many of the best modern fabrics.

We had no schools nor ministers of the Gospel, but we had the Sabbath. Far away from the sound of "the Church-going bell," and the privileges of the sanctuary, we enjoyed the Divine presence and blessing in our day of rest. Several families had moved in about this time from the States, among which was that of Stephen Boroughs, of world-wide notoriety. He had previously been a Congregational preacher in Massachusetts, and he expressed a willingness to preach, if the settlers would meet. Their first meeting passed off favorably, but his second effort was not attended with so good results. His words were solemn and impressive; but no sooner had he closed the exercises of the meeting than he started off with a company of young men and boys, and spent the afternoon in a fishing excursion on the Lake. We did not ask him to preach again.

Among the early settlers of our neighborhood were the families of Samuel Fish, William Taylor, Jacob Taylor, Abraham Wells, Daniel Martin and Samuel Reed. These families continued to meet for divine worship in their different dwellings. Their meetings were usually conducted with reading, prayer and exhortations, by the professing christians who were present. Our singing, though not suited perhaps to the tastes of modern critics, was with the spirit and from the heart. Well do I remember the thrilling interest with which we used to join in singing Watts' and Wesley's hymns in the old tunes of Windham, Complaint, Sherburne, Northfield, Concord, Delight, &c.

The early settlers had generally enjoyed but limited opportunities of education, but they were desirous that their children might have those advantages that had been withheld from them. From the smallness of their number and their poverty, they were not able to sustain a teacher longer than two months in the summer, and two in the winter. The schools were generally taught by the best educated young men and women of the settlement—their wages varying from $3 to $7 per month, paid mostly in grain or in articles of clothing of domestic manufacture. These were primary schools in their fullest extent. Webster's Old Speller Webster's Third Part, and a few sheets of writing paper, comprising the outfit of the Scholar. Arithmetic, English Grammar and Geography were sciences of a later date. During the summer, the older boys and girls were kept out to assist in the work of the farm, or in the domestic arrangements of the family. In the winter, these might have been seen wending their way through the woods and the deep snow, with no other road but the path they themselves made, to the distance often of two miles, with such of the smaller children as could work their way through the snow drifts. On their arrival they might have been seen depositing their caps, hoods, mittens, dinner baskets, &c., in some corner of the room, and, after warming themselves well before a fire on which a quarter of a cord of wood had been piled taking their seats, upon rough boards or hewn split logs laid upon blocks of wood, and conning over the mysterious but valuable lore of spelling and reading. Writing was acquired under greater difficulties. There was usually but one window in the room, under which a temporary shelf or desk was made, and the larger boys and girls took turns in occupying it with paper not much better than our common wrapping, ink from the bark of the white maple, and the primitive goose quill. Many of the scholars thus educated have since been distinguished in public life in our own country and elsewhere.

In the fall of 1802 the small-pox broke out in the settlements, having been introduced, as was supposed, from the French settlements on the St. Lawrence. The disease spread through Hatley and the neighboring towns. Dr. Whiteher was fully employed in Stanstead, and we had no physician in Hatley. Stephen Boroughs had some knowledge of medicine, and he rendered himself more useful in this department than in that of theology. He set to work with untiring energy, and in almost every instance treated the disease successfully. Only three deaths occurred in Hatley.

From 1811 to 1814, the spotted fever prevailed throughout most of the settlements of the Townships, and swept off many promising young men and women and children in Hatley. In the Winter of 1843, several of our strongest men died of Erysipelas. With these exceptions, the neighborhood has been generally healthy, and subject to as few diseases as any part of our country.

In looking back upon the events of the past three fourths of a century, I seem to awake almost as from a dream. The transformation of the country can hardly be realized. Everything is changed. Instead of an almost boundless forest dotted here and there with small openings, large and well cultivated fields are presented, with a very limited reservation of woodland for sugaries and fuel; and on or near the sites of the primitive log cabins, elegant residences, with corresponding outbuildings, have arisen. The whistling of the railway locomotive and the clicking of the telegraph are heard. Truly this has been an age of progress! If the possibility of these improvements had been suggested in our younger days, we should probably have said with one of old: "Behold if the Lord would make windows in heaven, then might these things be!" I am now nearing the close of my earthly pilgrimage, and by the mercy of God, through the merits of my Redeemer, am looking forward to a glorious and happy immortality beyond the grave.

BY MRS. GRACE ABBOTT.

My two brothers, Ephraim and Paul Hitchcock settled in West Hatley in 1800. The next year, I followed them—being at that time about 20 years of age. I kept house for my brother Paul for some time, and afterwards married Abial Abbott, Jr., son of one of the first pioneers of Hatley.

In common with most of the other early settlers we had little to rely upon but strong hearts and willing hands, and the blessing Divine Providence. Our privations and hardships were severe, but we were sustained by the hope of better days to come, and in process of time we enjoyed a comfortable home in the wilderness, and had acquired a good property.

In 1814, my father's family sustained the loss of three of their number by the spotted fever. This disease, which assumed a most malignant type, and which seemed for a time to baffle the skill of the physicians of the country, prevailed to an alarming extent, and swept off many promising young people and children from the different settlements. Many of those who recovered were rendered partially, or entirely deaf. The disease usually commenced with chills and general prostration sudden and severe pain in the head and stomach, and vomiting. The brain soon became deranged, and generally continued in that state until death, purple spots or blotches appearing and covering the surface of the body.

EPHRAIM HITCHCOCK.

Ephraim Hitchcock and his wife settled on No. 6, 4th Range of Hatley, in 1796. During the first summer, he was obliged to bring all their grain and flour on his shoulders from Memphremagog Lake, and was suffering severely at the same time from ague and fever. Their food for the principal part of the first summer was fish and such vegetables as they could gather from the forest. With enfeebled health, coarse, and often scanty fare, in the midst of a dense forest, sixteen miles from any regular settlement, overtasked with clearing their land and in tending their small growing crops, nothing but the anticipation of brighter days in the future, could have sustained them. Joseph Fish and his wife had moved in some time previously, and Mrs. Fish improved the first opportunity that occurred to visit Mrs. Hitchcock. Their beginnings were about four miles distant from each other. They were then the only women in the southern part of Hatley. They were, of course, rejoiced to meet, and although strangers, a friendship began, which continued during the remainder of their lives. But where is the woman of sensibility who would not feel mortified to confess to an esteemed visitor who had come miles through the woods and swamps to see her, that she had not a morsel of food in her house? Necessity is, however, the mother of invention. Mrs. Hitchcock went out and gathered a few cowslips, which she boiled and salted. These, with a cup of tea, of which she found a small package, furnished their repast. This was the first female visit in Hatley—and although the circumstances might have been unfavorable, no one since that time has probably been made with more heartfelt joy to all parties.

SAMUEL REED.

Samuel Reed married Prussia Hitchcock—they were natives of Vermont. In the winter of 1798, they accompanied his brother-in-law, Paul Hitchcock, to Canada, with an ox team carrying a few articles of furniture and a small stock of provisions. After long and toilsome journey through the woods, they succeeded in reaching the opening of Mr. Hitchcock, in Hatley. In the meantime in prosecuting their journey through the rough woods of Northern Vermont, Mr. Hitchcock at one time lost his balance, and was run over by the oxen and sled. His leg was severely wounded, and he had to ride during the remainder of the journey. Many weeks passed before he recovered from the effects of the injury. Mr. Reed was a carpenter and house joiner, and hence, his family was of the migratory stamp. They remained in Hatley about one year, and afterwards, we find them making improvements successively in Compton and other neighboring towns. They were useful and valuable members of the community. He died in 1839, aged 68 years.

APPLETON PLUMLEY.

Appleton Plumley purchased the betterments of Simeon Cole. He built a saw-mill, but soon sold out to Daniel Bacon, who built a grist-mill adjoining the saw-mill. Another grist-mill was afterwards started at Massawippi, on which "hangs a tale." Jesse Wadleigh, a strong and athletic man, had brought his grist to the mill. The miller was all attention—put the grain into the hopper, and went below to hoist the gate, but the mill would not start. He examined the machinery, but it would not go. He then shut down the gate and went up stairs where uncle Jesse sat quietly smoking his pipe. Thinking that the joke had been carried sufficiently far, uncle Jesse explained the matter. He had grasped the upright shaft with all his strength, and was able to stop the entire machinery. The family of Mr. Plumley are mostly dead or have left the country.

EPHRAIM WADLEIGH.

Ephraim Wadleigh, with his wife and four children, settled on No. 10, 2nd Range of Hatley, in 1801. They were natives of New Hampshire. They came about 150 miles with an ox team, mostly through a new country, and were fifteen days upon the road. The land comprising the Old Episcopal Church, upon the hill, was a donation from Mr. Wadleigh in after years.

The Wadleigh families have been generally distinguished for energy and enterprise, and some of them have occupied prominent positions in the community.

COL. HENRY CULL,

Was born in Dorsetshire, England, in 1753. He was the youngest of a family of ten children. His brothers were most of them distinguished as officers in the British navy. Among the descendants of the families of his sisters was John Angell James, whose memory and praise are in all the churches. Mr. Cull pursued a course of mercantile studies at London, and engaged in business with a commercial firm of that city. After remaining some years in this business, he removed to Quebec, where he continued in trade until the close of the past century. About the beginning of the present century, he, in company with some twenty-five associates, obtained a grant of wild lands for settlement. The two charters, viz., those of Capt. Hovey and Col. Cull, comprised, together, 23,000 acres—an amicable division of the lots was made, and all parties were satisfied. Mr. Cull was, however, unfortunate in the selection of his own residence. He selected a large block of land at the outlet of Massawippi Lake in view of settling near his friend, Jesse Pennoyer, Esq., who had previously located in the western part of Compton. Like most European emigrants of his stamp, Mr. Cull was unacquainted with the practical manner of "roughing it in the bush." The greater part of his farm proved to be wet and cold, and was the poorest land in the township. With a capital far exceeding that of any of the other pioneers, he went on and made an extensive clearing and other improvements at great expense. The result, as might have been expected, was, that a large amount of money had been expended to very little purpose. Several of the early settlers of Hatley, Stanstead, and Barnston, who were then poor, but have since become wealthy, were glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of earning three shillings and four pence per day and their board, falling trees and clearing this farm. Owing to preliminary delays, Mr. Cull did not move his family in until 1806. He early received the appointment of magistrate, and that of Lieut.-Colonel of the third battalion of the Eastern Townships' Militia. His educational advantages had been much in advance of most of the other settlers. He was a correct scholar, and was familiar with the literature and most of the sciences of the age. He brought a well chosen library of some 500 volumes, comprising the best of the British classics, ancient and modern history and valuable miscellaneous works. There were then but few books in the settlement, and several of the most intelligent families in Hatley are the descendants of those whose tastes were formed from the use of this library. Mr. Cull was prepossessing in his address and manners, a genial companion, an efficient magistrate, and a popular military officer. He was in the Frontier service during the American War of 1812-1814, and by his prudent and judicious course, assisted by the influence and co-operation of others, quiet and harmony were in a good degree preserved on both sides of the Line. He had the confidence of the Government in a high degree, and had he been more selfish, could have secured for himself almost any personal advantages he might have asked. In his religious belief, he was an Episcopalian, but was not permitted to enjoy the ordinances of that church until near the close of his life. He was a kind husband and father, and was much respected in the community for his uprightness and hospitality. He died January 8, 1833

MOSES BEAN.

Moses Bean pitched and began on No. 13, 2nd Range of Hatley, in 1798. He had brought a supply of provisions in his knapsack, and this, with his axe and a few dollars in change, formed the inventory of his property. He commenced operations by falling 4 or 5 acres of trees. Jesse Wadleigh and Taylor Little made beginnings in the immediate vicinity that year, and they together put up a shanty, in which they kept "bachelor's hall" for the two following years. In 1800 they each built log houses on their own premises. In 1802, Mr. Bean married Betsy Kezar, she had come to Hatley with her brother, Cap. Simon Kezar, jr., in 1800, and was the first school teacher employed in Hatley. They experienced the hardships and privations incident to new settlements, but, by persevering industry and economy, succeeded in acquiring a large property. Their family homestead is now owned by their eldest son, Simon Bean, Esq.

THE WOLF HUNT.

In the summer of 1840, the settlement of Stanstead was infested by wolves, particularly in the west part of the town. The wolves had been traced to a swamp south-east from Fitch Bay, and notice for a general hunt was given. On the morning of the appointed day, a party of more than 1000 men from different parts of the town assembled, and armed with guns, pitchforks, &c., surrounded the swamp, enclosing an area of about 12 square miles. The men were placed within hearing distance of each other, and were instructed to march straight forward towards the centre of the swamp, and to communicate with each other by concerted signals. As it was intended to surround the wolves near the east shore of the bay, the men upon that part of the circle remained nearly stationary, while the others advanced towards the centre of the circle. With these arrangements they began their march, and for a time pursued their course with regularity; some confusion afterwards arose, but they succeeded in coming to a close circle about half a mile east of the bay. The circle was about 20 rods in diameter, and strict orders had been given not to fire; no wolves were found, but seeing a deer, several of the most excitable ones shot at him without effect, and the result was that two promising young men, James F. Wood, and James Merrill were mortally wounded, Wood was killed almost instantaneously, and Merrill survived but a few hours, the deer escaped.

BY CAPT. RICHARD COPP.

My father, Capt. Moses Copp, was a native of Massachusetts, and was drafted into the service, in the American Revolution, when about 17 years old. He was with the American Forces at the time of the capture of Major Andre, and the discovery of the treason of Benedict Arnold. In 1785 he married Anna Mills. They resided in Warren, N. H., until 1796, when they came to Canada and pitched a lot in Bolton, which he afterwards drew as an Associate. Being a "stranger in a strange land," my father had some little difficulty in getting into the Association. He attended the meeting of the Commissioners, but not knowing the necessity of a proper certificate of character and qualifications, had not brought any. From this oversight he came very near losing his claim in the Company. At the place of meeting there was a good deal of rum, and noise, and fighting. In one instance two or three cowardly bullies were pitching into a poor sickly man. This was more than my father could bear, and, being a strong and muscular man, he at once laid the rowdies sprawling, and carried the sick man to a place of safety. After this demonstration the Commissioners decided that his credentials were amply sufficient. My father remained in Bolton until 1797, when he crossed the Lake and located on No. 26, 2nd Range of Stanstead, at the place which forms the centre of the present village of Georgeville. Not a tree had been fallen within the limits of that village and there were but two clearings upon that part of the Lake Shore—those of Elijah Baird and Jeremiah Lord. My father built the first boat that ran upon the Lake, and for many years our village was known by the name of "Copp's Ferry." He was early appointed captain of militia and was esteemed an upright and useful member of the community. He died in 1833. His wife died in 1845.

My brother, Joshua Copp, early displayed a genius for trade. When quite a boy he started on foot for Montreal and brought home a package of goods upon his back. He fitted up a shanty, sold his stock, and bought anew; and in this way he soon acquired a respectable capital. Suffice it to say, that he became a successful merchant, and realized a large fortune. He afterwards removed to Burlington, Iowa, where he died.

BY EDWARD WORTH.

I am a native of Cabot, Vt. Came to Stanstead with my brother, Joseph Worth, in 1798, at the age of 10 years. In 1817 I married, and settled on No. 3, 8th Range of Stanstead. Among my early recollections is the appearance of Stanstead Plain as covered with a growth of heavy timber, the central part being mostly maple, beech and birch; the outskirts hemlock, spruce and fir; and a dense cedar swamp on the west. My brother Joseph and Capt. Andrew Young were at one time neighbors. They each had a flock of sheep, and the two flocks were accustomed to run together in the woods. In the fall of 1802 the neighborhood was infested with bears that did much damage among the sheep. They made a raid upon our flocks at one time—killed some five or six, and drove the remainder through the woods to the south part of Derby, where they were found and driven home. My brother afterwards removed to the vicinity of Caswellboro, where some of his descendants still reside.

BY CAPT. ANDREW YOUNG.

I was born at Whitehall, N. Y., Nov. 5, 1771. Came to Stanstead in 1798, received the grant of No. 4, 9th Range, as an Associate, and afterwards purchased Nos. 5 and 6 of the same Range. Married and settled on No. 6 in 1803. Besides the work of clearing my farm I assisted my brother-in-law, Col. Charles Kilborn, in building his mill at Rock Island, in 1804. The first bridge connecting Rock Island with Derby Line Village was built in 1802. The Narrows bridge was built the same year. The settlement of Beebe Plain was begun in 1800 by the Beebe and House families. The first death that occurred in the town was that of a Mr. Beebe, who was killed by the fall of a tree. The first births were those of George Fitch Copp and Leonard Clarke. The first appointed magistrate was Gardner Green. As there were no resident Catholic or Episcopal clergyman during many of the first years of the settlements, the want of proper authority for the performance of the marriage ceremony was a grievance which was severely felt by the inhabitants. "As it was in the beginning," marriages and intermarriages would occur in the families of the early settlers; and the parties were under the necessity of either crossing the Line into the settlements of Northern Vermont, or to go through the woods, to the distance of 60 miles, to the older settlements of Canada, to meet the emergencies of their case. In this dilemma resort was had to the magistrates. They were not, of course, legally authorized, but under the circumstances, they assumed the prerogative, and some 200 couples were married in this manner in Stanstead. These marriages were afterwards legalized by a special Act of the Provincial Legislature. In later days this prerogative has been extended to all the ministers of the different Christian denominations.

RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS.

The following sketches obtained from Church Records, Clergymen and other individuals, will show the rise and progress of the different religious societies of Stanstead County.

EPISCOPALIANS.

The first missionary of the Church of England to the County of Stanstead was the Hon. and Rev. Charles Stewart, D.D. He came from England, and arrived at Quebec, Oct. 21, 1807. His first field of labor was at St. Armand, Missisquoi County, and in addition to the labors of that station, he established churches in Eaton, Sherbrooke, Lennoxville, Hatley, Stanstead and others of the Eastern Townships in the early days of their settlement.

STANSTEAD.

There were few of the early settlers of Stanstead who had been educated under the influences of the Episcopal Church, and it was not until their numbers increased by accessions from the States and England, that they were able to form themselves into a society. Through the influence of Rev. Dr. Stewart, the Rev. Richard Knagg was sent as a missionary to this station in 1819. The mission was an entire failure. Mr. Knagg retired in 1821, and no attempt was made to revive the interests of the church in Stanstead until about 1845, when the settlement of the Plain was occasionally visited by Rev. Mr. Doolittle, of Lennoxville, Rev. Mr. Reid, of Compton, and Rev. Mr. Jackson, of Hatley. In 1849, the attention of the Bishop of Quebec was directed to the station, and Rev. Henry G. Burrage, the successor of Mr. Jackson in Hatley, proposed to devote a part of his time to the society in Stanstead. This arrangement was adopted, and in February of that year, Mr. Burrage began to hold divine service in an upper room of the Brick Store formerly owned by Francis Judd, Esq. Mr. Burrage continued his labors with success until 1851, when a church was organized.

In his return made to the Bishop for 1852, Mr. Burrage gave as the average attendance at Public Worship on Sunday, from 50 to 69, and the number of communicants from 15 to 18.

Mr. Burrage was succeeded in 1857 by Rev. W.L. Thompson, who had been sent by the Colonial Church Society as a missionary to Stanstead Plain. It was during his incumbency that the present Episcopal Church edifice was erected, and much praise is due to him for his untiring labor and effort in the prosecution and completion of the enterprise. Mr. Thompson was followed by Rev. Henry F. Darnell, who after remaining about two years, removed to St. John, P. Q., and Mr. Thompson returned to Stanstead. He remained some two years longer in the ministry, and was succeeded by Rev. A. A. Allen, who was followed by Rev. J. Early. Mr. Early was succeeded in 1872 by Rev. A. J. Woolryche. The present incumbent 1874 is Rev. George Thorneloe.

HATLEY.

The origin of Episcopacy in Hatley was coeval with that of Stanstead—the Rev. Dr. Stewart, the pioneer clergyman and missionary of that denomination, having begun his labors in that place in 1817. As the early settlers of Hatley were mostly natives of Vermont and New Hampshire, and unacquainted with the doctrines and modes of worship of the Episcopal Church, Dr. Stewart soon set to work with untiring energy and perseverance in gathering a congregation and organizing a church. It is much to be regretted that the records of this organization have been lost. The first entry made by Dr. Stewart in the Parish Register was that of a baptism made on the 8th of February, 1818. The last entry was a marriage on the 16th of October, 1819. During the incumbency of Dr. Stewart a large and commodious church edifice was built upon the hill about a mile and a half north of the present village of Charleston—the expense of which was paid in part by the inhabitants, but mostly by himself. This building has since been remodeled, and is now occupied by the Adventists. In process of time, the people of the village finding this church an inconvenient place of worship, decided upon the erection of a new one, and a convenient church was subsequently built on a pleasant site in the village. Few men have perhaps performed more labor and under more self sacrificing circumstances than Dr. Stewart did in Hatley. His energies were directed not only to the moral, social and religious improvement of the people of his own immediate charge, but were extended throughout the entire circuit of the Eastern Townships. As he was unmarried, he made his home with the family of Ebenezer Bacon, Esq., during the time of his stay in Hatley. With this family, his name is a household word. They found him ever the kind and sympathising friend and judicious counsellor, and cherish his memory with reverence and affection.

In 1819, he was appointed visiting missionary in the diocese of Quebec, which then embraced the whole of the Province of Upper Canada.

Rev. Thomas Johnson became the successor of Dr. Stewart in 1819 and remained until 1830, and was followed by Rev Christopher Jackson, who continued in charge of the church until 1848, when from ill health, he was compelled to retire from the work of the ministry. He was succeeded by Rev. Henry G. Burrage, who remained in the ministry of the church until 1872, when he was followed by Rev. A. J. Balfour, who is the present incumbent.

From the absence of the church records, as before mentioned, we are not able to give particular statistics of the church in Hatley.

BARNSTON AND COATICOOK.

In 1862, Rev. John Foster was sent by the Bishop of Quebec as a permanent clergyman for Barnston and Coaticook. Up to that time, there had not been a single church edifice belonging to the Episcopal Church within the limits of his charge. In October of that year, a commodious church edifice was completed at Coaticook, and the Divine blessing seems to have attended the labors of Mr. Foster. The Episcopalians are increasing in numbers and respectability in and around Coaticook. A neat and substantial brick building designed for a school of a high grade, to be conducted under the auspices of the church, has been erected at Coaticook.

The Episcopal Church was organized at Coaticook in 1862. The number of communicants in 1867 was 56.

An Episcopal Church has been organized at Georgeville, Rev. John Thornloe is the present incumbent.

METHODISTS.

Among the first Methodist preachers that came in from the United States, were Rev. J. R. Crawford, Rev. E. Sabin, Rev. T. Branch, and a Mr. Wells. The first appointment from the New England Conference on record, was that of Rev. Joseph Fairbanks, in 1804. About that time, a class was organized at Copp's Ferry, (now Georgeville,) Richard Packard, leader; T. A. Packard, Sally Packard, Artemisia Bullock, Miriam Bullock, Wm. Bullock, jun., Jeremiah Lord, Lois Lord, and Nancy Lord. Among the early preachers was an elderly man, known as "Father Carpenter." Mr. Fairbanks was succeeded in 1805 by Rev. S. Chamberlain, who was followed in 1806 by Rev. Philip Ayer. Rev. Levi Walker was sent to the Stanstead Circuit, then known as the St. Francis Circuit, in 1807: Rev. Charles Virgin in 1808, and Rev. Squire Streeter in 1809. From 1810 to 1812 the Circuit was supplied by Rev. R. Hayes and Rev. S. Briggs. Up to that time, Rev. Asher Smith, a local preacher, had labored with much usefulness in Stanstead and in other parts of the county. In 1812, Rev. Samuel Luckey and Rev. J. F. Chamberlain were sent from the New York Conference, but their appointments were withdrawn on account of the war, and no other preachers were sent from the States until 1816, when Rev. B. Sabin was sent. The next appointment on record was that of Rev. S. B. Hascall and Rev. S. Norris, in 1819. They were succeeded in 1820 by Rev. Phineas Brandall. That year, the Stanstead Circuit was set off to the British Conference. Since that time, the records of the society can be distinctly traced. Many of the following particulars have been supplied by Rev. John Borland :—

In 1821, REV. JOHN HICK was sent by the Missionary Committee of the British Wesleyans to labor in Stanstead. Since that period, we are able to trace with accuracy and fulness the persons and labors of the Wesleyan missionaries who have been appointed to this Circuit or Mission. Mr. Hick, the first of this order, was an able and highly acceptable minister of the Gospel. He ministered not only to several congregations in Stanstead, but occasionally, also, to others in the towns adjoining. In accordance with the itinerant system prevailing in the Methodist Church, Mr. Hick was removed at the end of two years, and was appointed to Kingston, Ontario. The success of his labors and the strong hold he had gained on the affections of the community in general, led them to hail with pleasure his re-appointment to them in 1831. During his second term of residence he suffered the distressing bereavement by death of his wife who was buried according to her long cherished wish in the cemetery near Stanstead Plain.

In 1823, REV. RICHARD POPE became the Wesleyan minister of the Circuit as the successor of Mr. Hick. His period of service was extended over four years. A very extensive revival of religion which occurred under his ministry was, in all probability, the reason of this then extraordinarily long protracted stay. In 1827, Mr. Pope was removed to Quebec, where, his health having failed, he located. He resided in that city until 1832, when he became a victim of Asiatic cholera.

In 1827, REV. JAMES KNOWLAN became the successor of Mr. Pope. His time of ministerial service expired in 1829. He was a native of Ireland, and, having been destined for the Bar, was educated for that object. His talents as a preacher or a controversialist were of the highest order, and when circumstances combined to arouse a naturally sluggish temperament, efforts of extraordinary power were sure to follow.

The REV. JAMES BOOTH followed Mr. Knowlan in 1829. It was during the incumbency of Mr. Booth that the Wesleyan Brick Church of Stanstead Plain was erected. To him belongs the praise of planning and superintending the work. At the time of building, this house was considered rather in advance of the times, at least for the country. Suffice it to say that it served as a commodious place of worship for more than thirtyfive years.

Mr. Hick's second appointment to Stanstead was in 1831, and terminated in 1833. Then commenced that of the REV. WILLIAM SQUIRE. Mr. Squire's period, like that of Mr. Pope, was one of four years. A similar reason led to this—a remarkable revival of religion, distinguished as "The forty days' meeting." The extension of the work rendered it necessary that a colleague should be sent to assist Mr. Squire in his labors. Rev. John Raine and Rev. T. Campbell were sent. Mr. Raine's ministerial course was comparatively a short one. He labored with success until 1844, nearly completing his tenth year, when through death he entered the faithful minister's reward. Mr. Campbell - wards located at Hamilton, Ontario. Mr. Squire's ministry in Stanstead, as indeed it had been in every other place where he had labored, was that of an earnest, enlightened and eminently endowed servant of the Lord. In every case success, in a greater or a less degree, attended his efforts. It is a fact of rare occurrence that for many months, while in Stanstead, he preached four times each Sabbath day, besides several times on the week days, though far from possessing a strong and robust constitution.

In 1837, the REV. THOMAS TURNER received an appointment to Stanstead, and at the close of his term in 1840, was permitted by the Missionary Committee to return to England, the place of his nativity.

In 1840, REV. ROBERT COONEY, D.D., was appointed for Stanstead. His period extended to 1843. It was during this time that the doctrines of the sect called "Millerites" or "Adventists" were introduced into the neighborhood. Their prevailing belief was that the end of all things was then really at hand, and that the second coming of Christ would occur in 1843. Intense excitement and the most extravagant excesses were the consequence. As several of the members of the Methodist Church had fallen in with the views of "those who had turned the world upside down," the situation of Dr. Cooney was peculiarly trying. He sustained his position, however, with faithfulness, submitting his ways to God. His term of service expired in 1843.

The REV. HENRY LANTON was the colleague of Dr. Cooney from 1840 to 1841.

The REV. JAMES BROCK, the successor of Dr. Cooney, commenced his labors in Stanstead in 1843, and closed them in 1846.

The REV. EDMUND S. INGALLS succeeded Mr. Brock in 1846, and remained two years. Mr. Ingalls is a native of Dunham, P. Q., where, having been converted through the instrumentality of the Methodist Ministry, he united with that Church, and entered the Ministry in 1835.

The REV. JOHN BORLAND followed Mr. Ingalls in 1848, and remained until 1851. Mr. Borland is a native of Yorkshire, England.

His first advent to Stanstead was distinguished by a revival of religion, the fruits of which remain to this day.

In 1851, REV. JOHN TOMKINS was appointed to the Stanstead Circuit. His period of service extended to June, 1855. Mr. Tomkins is a native of Herefordshire, England. His early religious training was in connection with the Church of England, but at a mature age he was induced to attend the ministry of the Methodists, and having united with that Church, was soon employed as a local preacher.

His last confessional appointment was to the Hatley, P. Q., Station, in 1866. Having married in Stanstead, he decided to spend the evening of his life with the relations of his wife and his other friends in that place. Since the time of his retirement from active service, he has occasionally supplied different congregations in Stanstead, and has been instant in season and out of season in doing his Master's work; and is now, at an advanced age, awaiting the faithful minister's reward. As a preacher, he is plain, practical, and richly evangelical. The seed which he has sown has been watered by prayer, and will in due time doubtless, spring up and bear fruit to the honor and glory of God.

THE REV. MALCOLM McDONALD followed Mr. Tomkins in 1855. He is a native of Scotland, but came to this country when quite young. His early religious training had been in connection with the Presbyterian Church ; but, on becoming a subject of converting grace through the instrumentality of the Wesleyan Methodists, he was led to join their communion.

From an attack of hemorrhage of the lungs, he was compelled to withdraw from the ministry in 1857. He afterwards located at Stanstead Plain, and officiates occasionally as health may permit. During his active life, he had filled some of the most important offices in the Canada East District.

REV. W. H. BAKEWELL, succeeded Mr. McDonald in 1858. His term of service extended to 1860. His labours in Stanstead were attended with but little good. " Tekel " might have been written upon the borders of his garments.

The return of REV. JOHN BORLAND, in 1860, was a pleasant era for the church. He continued to labor with much acceptance and usefulness until 1863, when he was followed by the

REV. JOHN TOMKINS, who received a second appointment to the circuit. His term of service extended to 1866. It was during his second term of service that the project of the new Wesleyan Church was started. The old brick church had begun to decay, and it was thought desirable to build a new one. Subscriptions were obtained, and preparations for building upon a large scale were made. In 1866 Mr. Tomkins gave way to the appointment of

REV. W. R. PARKER.

It was during his incumbency that the new church was really begun and finished. Much praise is due to him for his untiring exertions in the progress and completion of the work. A revival of religion attended the first year of his ministry, and several were added to the church.

In 1867, a division of the circuit was made. The northern part was set off, and called the Cassville Mission ; the southern part remaining, as heretofore, the Stanstead Circuit.

The REV. E. B. RYCKMAN succeeded Mr. Parker on the Stanstead Circuit, in June, 1869. In September, of that year, the new church was ceded to the Canada Conference with the customary forms, and dedicated to the worship of the Triune God.

THE REV. WILLIAM HANSFORD succeeded Mr. Ryckman in 1871. He was a native of Dorsetshire, England. Was employed by the Methodists as a local preacher in his own country at a very early age. At the age of 25 years he united with the Canada Conference, and, after filling important stations in Canada West and Canada East, was sent to Stanstead. When at Perth, Ont., he experienced the distressing bereavement of the death of three of his children within the short space of four months. "They were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in death they were not (long) divided. In 1874, he was returned for Stanstead as Governor of the new Wesleyan college and superintendent of the Circuit; the Rev. W. A. Allen having been sent as his colleague in 1873. The labors of Mr. Allen have resulted in a very extensive revival of religion.

THE GEORGEVILLE CIRCUIT.

Georgeville in the early history of Methodism in this portion of the Eastern townships, formed a part of the Stanstead Circuit, and was supplied with religious ordinances by the ministers appointed from time to time to that station. For an interval of several years, the ministrations of the Wesleyan Church were withdrawn, and the people were dependant for spiritual improvement upon such means as circumstances afforded. In 1838, this lack of service was met by regular visits from Rev. S. G. Phillips, of Bolton, and, at the close of that ecclesiastical year, a petition numerously signed by the inhabitants was sent to the Conference, requesting the appointment of a minister to that station. In answer to this call, the Rev. Edwin Peake was sent. During the incumbency of Mr. Peake, a neat and commodious church was begun and completed. Mr. Peake was succeeded in 1861 by Rev. John Davis, who was followed by Rev. John Thorne-loe, who subsequently left the ministry for that of the Church of England. Mr. Thorne-loe was succeeded by Rev. John Stewart, who was followed by Rev. Moses M. Johnson. Rev. Osborne M. Lambly is the present incumbent. Other preachers have occasionally supplied this station.

BARNSTON.

Among the early settlers of Barnston were the Baldwin, Cleaveland, Kilborn, Wheeler, and Boroughs families, who were Methodists. Their meetings, like those of the other primitive settlers, were held in the cabins and barns of the settlement. The first meeting of the Methodists was in the log cabin of Josiah Boroughs, in 1803, Rev. J. R. Crawford officiating. Subsequent to that time, the settlement was supplied by regular appointments from the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who were sent to the St. Francis Circuit by the New England Conference. In the meantime, Rev. David Kilborn, an itinerant preacher in New Hampshire and Vermont, had frequently visited his brother's family in this town, and had improved those visits in preaching in the different parts of the circuit. Although he was preceded by some one or two preachers, he may be justly termed the apostle of Methodism in Barnston. He was a native of New Hampshire, and was licensed to preach in 1805. Was made a presiding elder in 1815, and occupied high positions in the church during the remainder of his life. He died July 13, 1865.

A passing notice of SAMUEL DUNBAR may, perhaps, be due. He was a colored man; of his early history little is known. His family were among the early settlers of Barnston. He possessed good natural abilities, and had acquired the rudiments of a common English education. In common with many of his race, he early excelled in playing the violin, and had been extensively employed at the balls and merry-makings of the country; but having experienced religion under the preaching of the Methodists, he threw away his fiddle and devoted the remainder of his life to Christ. His after-life was distinguished by fervent and sincere piety, modesty and simplicity. He had been licensed by the M. E. Conference as a local preacher, and his labors in public, and in administering the consolations of religion to the sick and the dying, were abundant and were attended with much success. He was greatly respected and beloved.

After the transfer of the operations of the St. Francis Circuit to the British Conference in 1821, the church in Barnston was supplied occasionally by preachers from the neighboring towns and from the United States. The station was first taken up by the British Conference in 1827, when Rev. THOMAS TURNER was sent as a supply. He was followed by Rev. John P. Hetherington, who remained until 1829, and was followed by Rev. J. Graham, Rev. H. Lanton, Rev. John Raine, Rev. E. Botterel, Rev. M. McDonald, Rev. J. B. Selley, Rev. Thomas Campbell, Rev. John Johnson, Rev. William Hume, Rev. Richard Garrett, and Rev. William Andrews, the most of whom had appointments in other stations. In 1856, Rev. John Davis, who had previously supplied the Georgeville Circuit, preached a part of the time in Barnston. He was followed by Rev. John. Walton, who supplied Barnston and Hatley, and remained until 1859. He was followed by Rev. J. B. Forsyth, Rev. S. G. Philips, Rev. Benjamin Cole, Rev. John Salmon, and Rev. John Evans. These all held appointments at Barnston, and some of them at Coaticook, which had been set off as a separate station, and where a neat and convenient church edifice had been erected. A new Wesleyan Church has lately been built at Barnston Corner.

HATLEY.

During the days of the early settlement of Hatley there were comparatively but few Methodist families in the town; these few were supplied occasionally with preaching by those ministers who were sent from the New England Conference. Many years elapsed before a Wesleyan Church was organized in this settlement.

After the transfer of the St. Francis Circuit to the British Conference by the New England Conference in 1821, Hatley was supplied by missionaries sent from England to the most prominent stations. These men extended their operations to different portions of the surrounding country, and in labors they were abundant. Mr. Hick, Mr. Pope, Mr. Squire, and their successors in Stanstead, had regular appointments in Hatley. In 1838, Hatley and Compton were set off as a separate circuit, and were supplied successively by Rev. E. Botterell, Rev. John Tomkins, Rev. E. S. Ingalls, Rev. B. Slight, Rev. Thomas Campbell, Rev. William Andrews, Rev. M. McDonald, and Rev. J. B. Selley. A change was afterwards made, and in connection with Barnston, the church in Hatley was supplied successively by Rev. John Davis, Rev. J. Walton, and Rev. J. B. Forsyth, until 1863, when Hatley became a separate circuit, and was supplied by Rev. Wm. Scales, who was followed successively by Rev. W. W. Ross, Rev. John Tomkins, Rev. Mr. Rowsom, and Rev. J. Clipsham.

CONGREGATIONALISTS.

Among the early settlers of Stanstead were a few families from Massachusetts and New Hampshire who had been trained under the influences of Congregationalism. These were followed by others of that denomination, but many years elapsed before their numbers and strength became sufficient for forming themselves into a society. Their first meeting for public worship was in 1796.

in the log barn of Capt. Israel Wood, which stood near the site of the present Congregational Church on Stanstead Plain. Rev. John Taplin, brother of Johnson Taplin, officiating. The congregation numbered some ten adults and as many children. In 1804 the settlement was visited by Rev. James Hobart, of Berlin, Vt., who having a sister married and settled in the west part of the town, improved the times of visiting her by preaching in the different neighborhoods during the following twelve years.

From 1810 to 1816, Rev. Luther Leland, then settled in Derby Vt., preached a part of the time in Stanstead. The meetings were usually held in the Old School House, which stood at the north end of the Plain, on the road leading easterly from the main street. When there was no other preaching in the neighborhood, the Congregationalists usually met here, and the meetings were conducted by the professing christians present. A Church was organized in 1816—the ministers assisting in the services were Rev. James Hobart, Rev. Chester Wright, Rev. David Sutherland, Rev. Luther Leland, and Rev. James Parker. The original church members were Levi Hooker, Mrs. Levi Hooker, Miss L. Hooker, Mrs. Amanda Smith, Miss Mary Ward, Dr. Israel Whitchee, Mrs. Dolly Whitchee, Mrs. Catherine Hubbard, Moses Montague, Mrs. Susan Montague, John Brown, Israel Brainard, William Arms, Pliny V. Hibbard, Reuben Bangs, Daniel Ludden, Mrs. Hannah Ludden, Mrs. Clarissa Nash, Adam Noyes, Richard Smith and Ephraim Clark. Many of these worthies were among the truly excellent of the earth, and their memories are hallowed by the most endearing associations.

The newly organized Church was supplied with preaching occasionally by Rev. Luther Leland and other ministers from the northern part of Vermont until the following year, 1817, when Rev. Thaddeus Osgood became their pastor. The Old Union Meeting House which stood at the junction of the road leading south from the Moulton neighborhood with that leading from the Plain through Cassville, had been completed the previous year, and by common consent of the proprietors, the Congregationalists were allowed to occupy it. The prospects under which Mr. Osgood began his labors were favorable. The appointments of the Wesleyan preachers from the South had been suspended, and the Methodists and Free Will Baptists united in sustaining the meetings. The congregations were large, and things went on prosperously for a time; but ere long, roots of bitterness sprang up and bore their appropriate fruit. Mr. Osgood was a moderate Calvinist; but as a part of the Church were ultra in their views, their differences were submitted to the arbitration of a council. The session continued two days. The Old Union Meeting House, which could furnish seats for 1500 persons, was filled to overflowing. The sympathy of the public and of the greater part of the Church and a majority of the council sustained Mr. Osgood—a small minority of the council voting for his dismissal. The disaffected members withdrew, however, from the meetings, and, for a time, attended the ministry of Mr. Leland, in Derby. Few men have been better known in the Eastern Townships than Mr. Osgood. His history is one of much interest, but our limits will permit only a very brief sketch.

At an early age, he began business in Massachusetts, and was on the eve of marriage with a lady of great personal attractions and merit. She was suddenly removed by death. For a time, he was but the wreck of himself. He afterwards recovered his health and reason, and having become a subject of Divine Grace, in a revival in his neighborhood, he determined to devote the remainder of his life to the service of his Redeemer. At the age of 28, he engaged in a course of preparatory study, and during his 30th year studied theology under the direction of Dr. Lathrop, of West Springfield, Mass. He was then ordained as an evangelist. His subsequent life was useful in an eminent degree, and he performed an amount of labor not surpassed by any individual since the days of Brainerd, Wesley, and Whitefield. He crossed the Atlantic many times and had travelled the entire circuit of the United States and the greater part of Canada and the Lower Provinces mostly on horseback. His efforts were directed especially to the improvement of the young, and to him belongs the praise of organizing the earliest Sabbath Schools in the eastern part of Canada. He was peculiarly happy in his efforts, and may justly be said to have been instrumental in moulding the character of many who have since been distinguished for usefulness. His motto, like that of Wesley, was, "The world is my parish;" and feeling himself circumscribed in Stanstead, he resigned his charge in 1818. He died at the advanced age of 84 years.

Soon after the resignation of Mr. Osgood, the Union Meeting House was occupied by an Episcopal Missionary, and during his stay of two years, the Congregationalists attended his meetings. In 1821, Rev. John Hick was sent by the British Wesleyan Conference to the Stanstead Circuit. The Congregationalists attended during the stay of Mr. Hick and his successor, Rev. Richard Pope, and then proposed a preacher of their own denomination for mutual support.

This proposal was not accepted, and they withdrew from the Methodists and again held their meetings at the old school house at Stanstead Plain. Deacon Reuben Bangs died in 1822, and Deacon Hooker having left the country, Selah Pomroy and William Arms became their successors. The meetings were regularly sustained, and when not supplied with preaching, were conducted by the deacons. In 1828, Rev. A. J. Parker, who had completed his theological studies and received his licensure, was invited to supply the church for a few months.

He afterwards settled in Danville, P.Q., where he was pastor of the church in that place, during nearly half a century. Mr. Parker was followed in 1829 by Rev. Andrew Rankin, also from New England. He was followed by Rev. Joseph Gibb, from Banff, in Scotland. The brick church at the north end of the Plain was completed in 1829. Mr. Gibb was installed pastor of the church early in 1830. Up to that time, the church had gradually increased in numbers and strength. They were united in their call to Mr. Gibb, and for a while, prosperity attended them. Mr. Gibb was an eminently endowed and useful minister of the gospel—as a theologian, he was excelled by few of the age. He had published several valuable treatises upon christian doctrine and practice, among which were a Dissertation on the New Covenant, Directions for Searching the Scriptures, and an Epitome of the First Principles of the Christian Religion. These books were well written, and were read with interest. By the majority of the church, and by the community in general, his worth and merits were measurably appreciated; but difficulties arising, partly from misapprehension, but mostly from the misguided policy of a faction, so wrought upon his sensitive mind that he sank under them, and died in June, 1833, in the prime of his strength and usefulness. His memory will be cherished by many with reverence and affection. After the death of Mr. Gibb, a part of the church members withdrew, and the remainder found themselves unable to sustain a minister. They were supplied successively until the fall of 1834, by different clergymen of the Hampshire County, Mass., Association. Among them were Rev. Mr. Clapp, of East Hampton, Rev. Mr. White, of South Hampton, and Rev. Mr. Beaman, of North Hadley. In the fall of 1834, Rev. A. O. Hubbard was sent by the A. H. Missionary Society. He remained until the fall of 1835. The church at that time was small and much divided, but the labors of Rev. Mr. Curry from Montreal, resulted in measurably adjusting these differences, and in June, 1836, Rev. L. Sabin was sent by the A. H. M. Society. Mr. Sabin remained until June, 1837. During this year, the church enjoyed a season of comparative prosperity. The meetings were well attended, and some additions made to the church. There were at that time a good number of intelligent laymen, and the Prayer Meetings and Conferences were peculiarly interesting and profitable. Among these were the deacons, Selah Pomroy and Phineas Hubbard, Joseph and David Gibb, both of whom afterwards became distinguished ministers of the gospel, and who were early removed to a higher and holier sphere of usefulness, Dr. Henry Hayes, who died in the service of his country in the war of the late American Rebellion, and Phineas Hubbard, jr. Mr. Sabin was succeeded by Rev. R. V. Hall, who remained in the pastorate until 1854, or more than 16 years. In 1854, a small church was organized in the neighborhood of Brown's Hill, called the North Congregational Church, of which Mr. Hall became the pastor. Mr. Hall afterwards settled in Newport, Vt. The North Congregational Church has since been remodeled, and is now in charge of Rev. L. P. Adams. In the meantime, the old church at "the Plain" had broken up, and the Meeting House remained closed until 1856, when the church was re-organized, and supplied by Rev. James Hay, who had been sent by the Canadian Cong. Missionary Society. The number of church members comprising the new organization was 25. Deacon Phineas Hubbard had died in 1842, and Deacon Selah Pomroy in 1856. Sanford Steele, John Christie, Stephen Allen, Quartus Pomroy, and John Moir, were the appointed deacons of the new church. Mr. Hay remained until 1858, when, from severe labor and feeble health, he was obliged to resign his charge and remove to a milder climate. He afterwards labored successfully as a missionary in Australia.

About this time, the new church sustained an almost irreparable loss by the death of Deacon Steele, a man of highly cultivated intellect, sound judgement, and sincere piety.

"But ere his sun had reached its noonday height,
Its glories sank in everlasting night."

In the fall of 1858, Rev. Alexander Macdonald was installed pastor of the church. After that time, C. W. Cowles and Joseph Cheney were appointed deacons. Deacon Allen died soon afterwards, and Deacon Christie in 1864. He was a native of Banffshire, Scotland,—had been an active and useful member of a church in his native country, of which Mr. Gibb had been the pastor. From the strong desire of enjoying the privileges of his ministry during the remainder of his life, he had followed Mr. Gibb to Stanstead. He was a man of exemplary piety, and by his consistent life exerted an influence which was felt and will be long remembered in the neighborhood where he lived. He possessed a clear and sound judgment was familiar with the literature and many of the sciences of the age, and as a critical biblical scholar was excelled by few—whether laymen or clergymen.

Mr. Macdonald was succeeded by Rev. John Rogers, who was installed in 1865, and closed his ministerial labors in the spring of 1873. The church is now without a pastor. Rev. L. P. Adams still continues in the pastorate of the North Cong. Church, is settled at Fitch Bay, where a neat and commodious church edifice has lately been erected.

BAPTISTS.

Barnston.

Among the early settlers of this town were the Bartlett, Griswold, Bellows, Sutton, Jewett, Parker, Smith, White, and Hibbard families. These were Baptists. They were occasionally supplied with preaching by ministers from the New England States, but their meetings were generally conducted by their deacons—among whom were J. Griswold, P. J. Sutton, and J. Bellows.

About the year 1812, Elder Roswell Smith settled in the north part of the town, but after preaching four or five years, left the country. A church had been organized about that time, but after the lapse of a few years, it disbanded. In 1833, a new church was formed, consisting of some twenty members. In the meantime, preaching had been occasionally supplied by Elders John Ide, Harvey Clark, Marvin Grove, and others.

Several other members were soon after added, and the church was supplied for one year by four preachers alternately—Bros. Downs, Powell, Mitchell, and Baldwin. At the close of that year Bro. Baldwin removed his family to Barnston—was ordained pastor and remained in charge of the church about four years. He was followed by Elder A. H. House, who was succeeded some two years afterwards by Elder James Green, who continued in the pastorate until 1853, when he was followed by Elder H. T. Campbell, who was succeeded in 1856, by Elder James F. Ferguson, who remained until 1864.

For many years, the meetings of the church were held in the dwelling-houses and school-houses of the settlement, and it was not until a recent date that a meeting-house was built. Elder Israel Ide, like St. Paul, was by occupation "a tent maker," or in modern parlance, a carpenter and joiner. During the time of his stay in Barnston and Barford, he contracted with the society and built a neat and commodious edifice at Barnston Corner.

Barford.

The origin of the Baptist Church in this town is of recent date—the Church having been organized in 1837.

Elder Israel Ide was ordained as pastor in 1838. He was succeeded in 1847 by Elder Joseph Chandler. Mr. Chandler is the present incumbent. The Church is in a prosperous state.

The second Baptist Church of Barford was organized May 20, 1863. The assisting ministers were Elders J. Chandler, A. Gillies, J. F. Ferguson, and J. Lorimer.

Elder Alvin Parker was ordained pastor of the Church at the time of its organization.

Stanstead and Hatley.

The first Church organization within the present limits of Stanstead County was that of the Baptists, October 28, 1799. Abial Abbott, David Jewett, Moses Wells, Richards Packard, Ephraim Clafin, Francis Brown, Amasa Merriman, Martin Adams, Japheth Le Baron, Betsey Le Baron, Ruth Abbott, Mary Adams and Polly Chamberlin, united in forming a church. In after years, some of these individuals, with their families, went over to the Free-will Baptists and the Methodists. The Society held their meetings alternately in the dwelling houses of the early settlers along the Lake Shore from the present village of Georgeville to Magog Outlet, and were occasionally supplied with preaching by Elders Hibbard, Rogers, Butler and Marsh. Elder Marsh afterwards moved into the settlement, and supplied the Church three or four years. The increase of members was gradual. In 1817, they numbered about seventy-five. They were supplied principally by Elder Harvey Clark for nearly twenty years. He left about 1830, but occasionally visited and supplied the Church a few years longer. From 1833 to 1837, Elders E. Mitchell and J. Baldwin supplied. In 1837, Elder Mitchell located near Georgeville, and since that time has sustained the pastorate of the Church, which has passed through the changes experienced by other Christian denominations in the country.

FREE-WILL BAPTISTS.

Stanstead.

In 1802, the settlement of Stanstead was visited by Free-will Baptist preachers from New Hampshire and Vermont. In 1803, Elders Robinson Smith and Joseph Boody gathered a Church of about twenty members.

From 1803 to 1806, the newly-formed Church enjoyed the occasional preaching of the Gospel, and additions were made to their number. In 1804, Elder Avery Moulton received license, and was ordained in 1806. This year, the old log meeting-house was built. William Moulton, Avery Moulton, Daniel Heath, William Rogers, and others, sustaining the expense. William Moulton was licensed to preach about that time. The compiler remembers the old log meeting-house. It was about 30 by 25 feet, built of unhewn logs, with one window on each of three sides, a stone back and stick chimney, and the door on the other side. Total expense probably about $75.

In 1811-12, the Church enjoyed a revival under the labors of Elders Avery Moulton and Robinson Smith. Among the accessions from this revival were the Cass, Locke, Wallingford, and Wallace families. The revivals extended to the Church in Hatley.

In 1823, the Wheelock, Vt., quarterly meeting held a session in Barnston, the result of which was a revival which extended to Stanstead. Among its fruits were Abial, Thomas P. and Albanus K., sons of Elder Avery Moulton, and several of his daughters. Up to this time, the Church had not enjoyed the privilege of a regular ecclesiastical order, and they connected with the Wheelock quarterly meeting.

Elder Abial Moulton was installed pastor of the 1st F. W. Baptist Church of Stanstead, July 22, 1834. It was during his incumbency that the Act authorizing the ministers of the F. W. Baptist churches to officiate at marriages and funerals, and to keep registers, was passed.

In 1835, the first Stanstead F. W. Baptist Church enjoyed a revival, and 36 were added to its number. This revival was followed in 1840-41, by another which bore good fruit. Up to this time, the Church had steadily increased, until the seed of the doctrine of the Second Advent, as promulgated by William Miller, had been scattered broadcast, and had taken deep root in many of the F. W. Baptist churches—some of these churches, however, remained steadfast—among the faithful, was the church of which Elder Ab'ial Moulton was pastor.

The summer of 1848 was a season of revival in the Cassville neighborhood, and several were added to the Church. The Free-will Baptists and the Wesleyan Methodists then united in building a Union meeting-house—each party to occupy it their due portion of time. This house was built principally from the materials of the old Union House erected in 1816. Elder Abial Moulton contributed liberally to the enterprise, and to him belongs the praise of superintending and completing the work. This Church has lately been ceded to the Canada Wesleyan Conference.

Hatley.

Christopher Flanders may be justly termed the apostle of the F. W. Baptist Church in Hatley. Though a layman, he possessed gifts of a remarkable order—was frequently called upon to officiate at funerals, and to administer the consolations of religion to the sick and the dying. His labors in connection with those of Rev. J. B. Crawford, a methodist misionary from New Hampshire, Rev. Avery Moulton and others, from Stanstead, resulted in 1802 in forming the nucleus of the Free Will Baptist church of after years. Deacon Taylor Little and Ephraim Wadleigh were among the first converts. The settlement was visited occasionally by Elder Joseph Boody, Robinson Smith and others, until 1809, when Elder R. Smith moved in with his family. Prosperity seemed to attend the Church, and revivals were frequent. In the meantime, Elder Avery Moulton had removed from Stanstead to Hatley, and his labors were greatly blessed for the good of the Church. In 1811, a general revival commenced, and extended to a good degree through the community. In 1823, the connection between the church and the Wheelock, Vt., quarterly meeting was dissolved, and an organization with the Stanstead quarterly meeting was formed. The Church at that time numbered about 25 members. No particular changes occurred for many years. In 1836, Amos Tyler, a methodist preacher, settled in Hatley, and united with the F. W. Baptists. He preached some 4 years, and was followed by Elders Richard Parks and K. R. Davis, under whose ministry several were added to the Church. Rev. Abial Moulton preached often in Hatley. In 1840, Rev. Richard Parks was installed to the pastorate. He was followed in 1842 by Rev. Chester Heard, a licentiate from Eaton, P. Q., who by request had moved into the town;—soon after his arrival, several were added to the Church, but a dark day came, Millerism shook the Free-will Baptist Church to its foundation. Though young in the ministry, Mr. Heard sustained his position with a discrimination above his years, and has lived to realize the fruit of his labors in the comparative restoration of the Church in Hatley to its primitive state. About 1847, Elder Zebina Young settled in Hatley, and since that time he has been a co-worker with Mr. Heard, the utmost harmony of feeling and effort subsisting between them. The present number of members is about 75.

Barnston.

A Church had been early formed, which at a later date was supplied by Elder Abial Moulton and others, who labored with a good degree of success. In 1832, Elder Erastus Harvey, from Vermont, commenced preaching,—a revival soon followed and resulted in reconciling past difficulties and restoring order in the church. In 1835 a revival began and extended through the different parts of the town. In this revival Elders Harvey, Christopher Page, Abial Moulton, and T. P. Moulton were prominent and useful laborers. The number of Church members at that time was 120, and prosperity seemed to attend them. Elder Harvey had located in the town and for a number of years he labored with usefulness.

In 1842, a small Church of 11 members was formed by Rev. Abial Moulton, a part of the members residing in Barnston and the others in Barford. In 1854 they took the name of the Coaticook Church, and were supplied by Rev. A. Moulton, Rev. G. Sawyer, and others; enjoying a good degree of prosperity. June 27, 1855, Rev. Thomas P. Moulton was installed pastor. The following year, a neat church edifice was built at the expense of $2,300, including bell and other fixtures. This church occupies a pleasant site in the village of Coaticook.

UNIVERSALISTS.

Many of the families of the early settlers of the south-west quarter of Stanstead were Universalists. These were followed by others who located in different parts of the town. Their first meeting was held in the old Marlow school-house, the Rev. William Farewell, of Barre, Vt., officiating. For several years meetings were occasionally held in the different neighborhoods with preaching from Rev. J. Huntingdon, Rev. Joab Young, Rev. James Babbitt and Mr. John Gustin. In 1830, Rev. Joseph Ward settled at Griffin's Corner, and soon after a society of Universalists was formed which included the greater part of the advocates of that belief in the town.

This society held meetings, mostly, at Griffin's Corner, and were supplied with preaching for a few years, but afterwards disbanded. There are several influential men in the different townships of this belief. Many of their preachers have been distinguished for talent.

The number of Universalists in Barnston, Hatley and Magog is large; but no regular associations have as yet been formed in those places.

ADVENTISTS.

The views that distinguish this denomination were introduced into Stanstead County by the Rev. William Miller, of Low Hampton, N. Y., in 1835. In 1842 Rev. Josiah Litch and Rev. Columbus Green held a series of meetings in Stanstead and at Derby Line, and camp meetings in Hatley.

The belief of their proselytes was that the final consummation of all things would take place in April, 1843. Intense excitement and fanaticism were the result. In the fall of 1842, a number of families banded together, and took their bedding, provisions, &c., to the old Union meeting-house in Stanstead, where they intended to remain until the spring of 1843, when they believed the last trumpet would sound. A few even went so far as to prepare their ascension robes.

From the failure in the calculations of Mr. Miller as to "the time of the end," many of his followers apostatised, but a large number continued steadfast. From "the signs of the times," they viewed the event of the Second Advent of Christ as very near. In 1845 meetings were held at Derby Line and at different places in Stanstead County. In 1857, a church of 40 members was organised at Derby Line, of which the Rev. John M. Orrock became the pastor. A Church was formed at Fitch Bay in 1862, Rev. D. W. Sornberger, pastor. Churches have been formed in other places.

ROMAN CATHOLICS.

Stanstead.

The origin of this denomination in the County of Stanstead is of recent date. Many years had elapsed before their numbers became sufficient for the organization of churches. Their early meetings were held in the dwelling-houses of the different Catholic families, until 1859, when a purchase of two acres of land from No. 7, 11th Range of Stanstead, was made by the Bishop, on which a church was subsequently built. In 1842, the Bishop accompanied by the Rev. Messrs. P. Lafrance, C. H. Morrison, and J. Barret consecrated the church and burial-ground, and the name or title given to the mission was "The Sacred Heart of Jesus of Stanstead." In 1848, the Rev. J. B. Champeaux was sent as a resident missionary. He labored with acceptance and usefulness, and succeeded in gathering a large Church. In the meantime, as their numbers increased, and the interests of the Church required a more central place of worship, it was thought expedient to relinquish the church they had thus far occupied and to build another at Stanstead Plain. A purchase of eight acres of land from No. 3, 10th Range, was made in 1850, and a church edifice was soon after erected. This church stands upon the site of the first frame-house built in Stanstead, and contains some of the original timbers of that building.

The time of the incumbency of Mr. Champeaux extended to 1851. He was assisted during the last year by the Rev. M. Pieté. Rev. T. Thibodier was sent in 1851, and was followed in 1852 by Rev. H. Bienvenue, who was assisted by Rev. J. A. Singer. Rev. O. Peltier was sent in 1853, and was followed in 1855 by Rev. H. Millier who had Rev. J. J. J. O'Donnell for a colleague. Mr. Millier left in 1856, and Mr. O'Donnell occupied the station until 1859, when he made way for the appointment of Rev. M. Pigeon. Mr. Pigeon was followed in 1861 by Rev. L. N. O'Dominique, who retired in 1862, when Rev. A. D. Limoges received the appointment which he filled with success and usefulness. Rev. L. Z. Mondor was for some time colleague to Mr. Limoges. Rev. M. McAuley is the present incumbent.

The increase of the Roman Catholic population and churches has been very great during the past quarter of a century. In 1839 the Church numbered but 75; in 1871 there are upwards of 1000 communicants.

Coaticook.

Previous to 1863 the labors of this mission were sustained by the Rev. Messrs. Daly, Germaine, and Browne. During that year, an eligible tract of six acres of land on the eastern bank of Coaticook river was purchased, and a neat and commodious church edifice erected. The number of communicants in 1863 was 120; in 1871, probably 500.

Barford.

The first missionary to this station was the Rev. James Daly. His term of service extended from 1856 to 1858, when he was succeeded by Rev. E. Germaine, who was followed by Rev. J. Browne. Rev. E. P. Gendreau was sent in 1862. In 1863, the charge of this mission was assigned to Rev. J. B. Chartier, who was assisted that year by Mr. Gendreau and subsequently by the Rev. Messrs. A. Desnoyer and J. Gravel. The mission has since that time been under the supervision of Mr. Chartier.

The number of communicants in 1862 was about 50, in 1871, probably 300.

Boundary Line.

A church edifice was built at this station in 1866 through the efforts of Mr. Chartier. The mission was begun in 1861, by Mr. Brown. Number of communicants in 1871, 500.

Magog.

In 1860, the Catholics at Magog purchased about three-fourths of an acre of land in the north-western part of the village, upon which they built a neat and convenient chapel, 50 by 36 feet. The expense, amounting to about $1,000, was raised partly by subscription, and partly through the exertions of an excellent lady residing at Magog. This chapel was dedicated in 1861 by His Lordship Bishop Jas. Laroque. The number of members confirmed at that time was 26. The first missionary was the Rev. A. E. Dufresne, who was followed successively by Rev. A. D. Limoges and Rev. Z. Mondor. Rev. F. X. Poulin is the present incumbent. This church is in a prosperous state.

STANSTEAD SEMINARY.

The lot comprising the site of this institution was given by J. Langdon, Esq., of Montpelier, Vt., and Wm. Grannis, Esq., of Stanstead. The building was begun and completed in 1829. The estimated cost, $2,500, was divided into shares of $25 each. The shares were all sold, but the estimate was not sufficient to finish the building, and the deficiency, amounting to $700, was made up by equal donations from Ichabod Smith, Wilder Pierce, and James Baxter.

In 1830, a grant of $800, was made by the Provincial Legislature to this institution. This allowance was afterwards reduced to $400 per annum. In 1855, an additional grant of $300 was made. The amount, $700, was received one or two years, but it gradually diminished. The allowance of 1872 was about $300.

For many years, this and the Academy at East Hatley, were the only classical schools in the Eastern Townships. Stanstead Seminary has always sustained a high literary character, and has furnished instruction to a very large number of students, many of whom have been successfully employed as teachers. Many, also, have been distinguished in public and professional life.

The directors for 1865 were: I. Smith, Wilder Pierce, Carlos Pierce, C. C. Colby, B. F. Hubbard, George Pomroy, and J. P. Lee.

The following persons have successively been employed as teachers:—

CHARLESTON ACADEMY.

This Institution is co-eval with Stanstead Seminary—both having been founded the same year and under similar circumstances. In the commencement of their operations, the two institutions seemed to fraternise, and as evidence of their good feeling, the Stanstead people proposed to their Hatley brethren to make the academy at Charleston a school for young men, and that at Stanstead a seminary for young ladies during the five following years. This proposal, which offered Hatley a material advantage, was not accepted.

The academy is a neat, substantial two-story building, with a cupola, and bell—stands upon a rising ground, commanding an extensive prospect, and has a lawn, which, beautified with shade trees, affords a pleasant and valuable ornament to the village. The expenses of the building, amounting to about $3,000, were paid by subscriptions from individuals and donations from the Rev. Dr. Stewart and others.

The Academy at Charleston, like that at Stanstead, was endowed by grants from the Provincial Government. For some time this school received $800 per annum. This sum was afterwards reduced to $400, which is now reduced to about $200.

MAGOG ACADEMY.

This Institution was founded in 1856, by Ralph Merry, Samuel Hoyt, Calvin Abbott, M. W. Copp, E. D. Newton, A. B. Johnson, Charles Turner, George O. Somers and others.

The building is pleasantly situated in Magog village, on the northern side of the outlet—built of wood, two stories high. The property and interests of the Institution are vested in a board of five trustees, who are chosen annually. In 1857 a Model or Normal school was organised with a yearly grant of $80 from the Provincial Government. This grant has been continued to the present time.

BARNSTON ACADEMY.

The plan of this Institution was originally that of a Model or Normal school. The building was begun and completed in 1851, under the supervision of the Rev. James Green and N. Jenks, M.D. The expense of the enterprise amounted to $1200, of which $600 was paid by a grant from the Provincial Legislature; the remainder was made up by an assessment upon the municipality.

The building, a neat and commodious one, is of wood—two stories with a cupola and bell. The school has been well sustained, and its literary standing has been highly respectable.

COATICOOK ACADEMY.

This Institution was begun in 1852. A grant of $150 per annum was then made, but for a time the Academy was identified with the District School. A large building was erected in 1864, with ample accommodations for a Town Hall and for both departments of the school, on a pleasant eminence in the village. The cost of the building, $2500, was paid by assessment upon the Corporation. T. T. Shurtliff, contractor.

A neat and substantial brick school house was built in 1866. This Institution is the property of the Episcopal church, but is open to other denominations.

GEORGEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL,

Was established December 27, 1854. The original legislative grant was $200 per annum, but has been subject to discount—will probably soon be discontinued. Among the trustees have been Increase Bullock, Esq., Levi Bigelow, Esq., Dr. S. S. Kendall and L. P. Merriman. Among the teachers have been John Monro, William Ives, Henry Hubbard, J. L. Terrill, Hazen I. Bullock, A. H. Moore, Malcolm Tuck, Adelia Arms, Naomi C. Hubbard, Marcella O'Connor and Lucy M. Gillies.

STANSTEAD WESLEYAN COLLEGE.

At a meeting of the Directors of Stanstead Seminary in 1865, a plan was proposed to raise by subscription and otherwise, the sum of twenty thousand dollars, and erect buildings suitable for an institution to supply the place of Stanstead Seminary, and furnish the facilities for a thorough collegiate education. A committee was appointed to raise the funds, and Carlos Pierce, with his accustomed liberality, proposed to donate ground for the site of the buildings. The enterprise of the new Wesleyan Church had, in the meantime, involved an expense much greater than was at first anticipated, and the Directors were compelled to abandon the project.

In the winter of 1870-1871, a few Wesleyan ministers met at Sherbrooke, P. Q., and discussing topics relating to the moral progress of the country, it was proposed to start a plan for securing a college for the Eastern Townships. The suggestion was at once adopted, and a meeting of friends called, the result of which was the issue of a Prospectus setting forth the necessity and design of a collegiate institution suitable to the wants of the present day for youths of both sexes—the minimum amount to be raised for the enterprise $20,000. A Joint Stock Limited Company, with shares of $25 each, to be formed, and managed by a Board of twenty-one Directors.

At this meeting, Rev. J. Wakefield, Rev. E. B. Ryckman, Rev. G. Washington, Wesleyan ministers, with Col. B. Pomroy, G. Williams, Esq., W. R. Doak, Esq., and E. Lawrence, Esq., were constituted a Provisional Committee, with power to determine the location of the College—subject, however, to the approval of the Canada Wesleyan Conference. Compton intimated its readiness to subscribe $10,000, but Stanstead, notwithstanding its pecuniary embarrassments, offered $15,000. The project was brought before the Conference in June, 1871, and met their entire approval. The location of the College at Stanstead was confirmed and the Rev. William Hansford was assigned to that Station with the view of promoting the interests of the enterprise. Among the stipulations were—that the institution could not go into operation before the minimum sum of $25,000 should be raised—that it should be proprietary—that the affairs of the Joint Stock Company should be managed by a Board of twenty-one Directors, seven of whom to be Wesleyan clergymen, and appointed yearly by the Conference; the remaining fourteen to be chosen yearly by the shareholders, seven of whom to be lay members of the Wesleyan Church, and the Chief Officer or Governor of the College to be appointed yearly by the Conference.

The canvass for raising the $15,000 that had been pledged for Stanstead and its vicinity involved much effort and perseverance on the part of Mr. Hansford and other individuals, but it was successfully completed in the month of August, 1871. The canvass was then extended by Mr. Hansford and his clerical assistants through the Eastern Townships and also through the cities of Montreal and Quebec and the frontier towns of Ontario. The first Stockholders' meeting was held in Stanstead, December 19, 1871, when the "Stanstead Wesleyan College Association was organized, —Rev. Wm. Hansford, President. In October, 1872, it was found that subscriptions to the amount of $25,000 had been secured, and a meeting of the Shareholders was convened. The contract for the building was awarded to G. W. Bryant, Esq., of Sherbrooke, P. Q. He at once commenced operations, and the corner stone was laid with appropriate ceremonies by the Rev. William Morley Punshon, LL.D., then President of the Canada Wesleyan Conference, on the second day of December following. December 24, 1872, the College was incorporated by Act of the Provincial Parliament at Quebec.

The first Board of Directors were Rev. S. D. Rice, D.D., Col. B. Pomroy, Charles W. Pierce, Esq., Rev. G. Washington, A.M., Stephen Foster, Esq., C. C. Colby, M.P.P., Rev. Geo. Douglass, LL.D., W. L. Thompson, Esq., Wm. Sawyer, M.P.P., Rev. Wm. Hansford, Hon. T. L. Terrill, A. A. Adams, Esq., John McLaren, LL.B., John Meigs, M.D., Rev. J. M. Hagar, M.A., Rev. Leroy Hooker, W. H. Lee, M.A., C. W. Cowles, M.D., A. P. Ball, Esq., James Macpherson, Esq., and Rev. J. Wakefield.

The Officers of this Board were Rev. Wm. Hansford, President; Col. B. Pomroy, Vice-President; A. P. Ball, Esq., Treasurer; W. H. Lee, M.A., Secretary.

Rev. W. Hansford was appointed Governor of the College in 1873 and re-appointed in 1874.

MASONIC.

Golden Rule Lodge.

About the beginning of the present century Freemasonry became general through the United States; and Lodges were opened in most of the towns and country villages.

In 1803, Lively Stone Lodge, No 22, was organized and opened at Derby Line, where many of the leading men of Derby and Stanstead met and held fraternal intercourse. The Charter members were Hon. Timothy Hinman, W.M.; Luther Newcomb, S.W.; Rufus Stewart, J.W.; Ebenezer Gould, Eliphalet Bangs, Elijah Strong, Nehemiah Wright, Timothy Rose, Levi Aldrich, Leobens Chase and Charles Kilborn.

The most friendly relation was sustained between the brethren on both sides of the line until the time of the American War of 1812-1815. At that time politics were predominant on both sides of the line, and the Canada brethren deemed it expedient to withdraw and to have a lodge of their own. A Charter was obtained from the Grand Lodge of Freemasons of England, and GOLDEN RULE LODGE, No. 19, was installed at Stanstead Plain, February 23, 1814. Phineas Hubbard, Esq., W.M.; Ezra Ball, Esq., S.W.; Timothy Rose, Esq., J.W.; Oliver Nash, Secretary; James Weston, Treasurer.

As the most amicable intercourse had all along subsisted between the two Lodges, they were able conjointly to interfere and to prevent much of depredation and plunder upon the frontier that might otherwise have occurred, so that a good degree of order and harmony was maintained between the inhabitants on both sides of the line.

From the high estimation in which Masonry was then held, applications for admission were numerous. Although character was always carefully scrutinized, many were admitted who brought discredit upon the brotherhood. This yielding or compromise was the first error in the management of the Lodge, and was afterwards a prolific source of evil.

In accordance with general custom, spirituous liquors were introduced into the Lodge as "refreshments." This was their second error. Many of the brethren, however, were opposed to the measure and were among the first to join the Temperance Movements of after years; but others continued their homage to "the enchanted cup," and were expelled from the Lodge.

The termination of the war in 1815 produced depressing changes in the business of the country. The circulation of money, which had been abundant, was suddenly checked, and a very great scarcity followed; applications for membership in the Lodge became less frequent, and its finances were seriously affected by the scarcity.

From 1815 to 1818, the affairs of the Lodge continued prevailingly in a prosperous state. Amongst its presiding officers were Selah Pomroy, Esq., W.M.; Elias Lee, W.M.; Isaac Whitcher, M.D., S.W., and Elisha Gustin, J.W. In 1818, a Mark Lodge with an unlimited charter was organized in connection with Golden Rule Lodge. The Mark Lodge soon became a flourishing institution, comprising most of the influential members of Golden Rule, Lively Stone, and Rural Mark Lodges—the last of which had been established in Hatley. The funds arising from the Mark Degree were for a time kept separate from those of the Blue Lodge, but annual reports and regular settlements were neglected, and the result was—their affairs became involved, and a large deficiency was found in the treasury. This was the third important error in the institution.

In 1821, a Royal Arch Chapter was opened at Stanstead Plain. The officers were Hon. Wm Howe, H.P.; Ichabod Smith, K.; Wilder Pierce, S.; Wm. Verback, C.H.; F. W. Adams, P.S.; M. F. Colby, R A.; C. S. Haseltine, G.M., 1st V.; Marcus Chi'd, G.M., 2nd V.; Wm. Arms, 3d V.* * *

But little change occurred in the administration of affairs until 1823, when the meetings of the lodge were removed to Georgeville. During this year, a rivalry which had for some time subsisted between the cities of Montreal and Quebec resulted in severing the masonic relation heretofore existing between them, and in the organization of a new Provincial Grand Lodge for the District of Montreal, by which Golden Rule was required to be represented in that body, and to return their warrant and jewels, James Peaslee was appointed to transact the business, which he performed successfully; the result was that the jewels were returned to Golden Rule, and a new charter issued where it was designated No. 6 Provincial Registry and 785 English Registry. The lodge began to work under this dispensation in 1824, and during the following three years nothing of particular importance transpired. Among the presiding officers were James C. Peaslee, Chancey Bullock, Joel H. Ives, Joshua Copp, Sebre Mack, Franklin Mack and Ephraim Wood.

The history of James C. Peaslee is an instance where moral power obtained distinction under the strongest physical embarrassments and difficulties. Having lost his right arm when a boy, the pain of amputation brought on "lock jaw," and he was never able afterwards to move his lower jaw. The only way in which food could be introduced was by breaking out his front teeth. He remained in this state during the remainder of his life. He was the son of a poor widow, and feeble and helpless as he was was literally driven from his maternal home by a brutal stepfather. By the sympathy and assistance of a few friends, he was placed at school where he succeeded in acquiring a respectable English education. He afterwards taught in various district schools. Metallic pens were then unknown, and he had to hold his quills between his knees and shape their points with his left hand. With his scanty wages, he began to buy and to sell, and by saving all, succeeded in process of time in building up a business equal to any in the county, and amassed a large property. He died a few years ago in Illinois.

In tracing the history of Golden Rule Lodge, we find that it experienced, in common with other institutions of the kind, the disastrous effects of the Anti-Masonic excitement of the time. This excitement, under the form of a political engine, was instrumental in closing nearly all the lodges in North America—hurling from office every mason who would not renounce the order—silencing ministers of the gospel, and pursuing the brethren even into their domestic circles with unrelenting persecution and severity. Under these circumstances, the brethren of Golden Rule surrendered their charter, pronounced their valedictory, and disbanded. Little did they imagine, at the time, that twenty long years would intervene before the institutions would be revived.

* * * * *

In 1846, a number of superannuated masons met accidentally at Derby Line, and were deploring the extinction of Golden Rule Lodge and the consequent dispersion of the craft. Many of the members had withdrawn during the time of the Anti-Masonic troubles—some had left the country, and others had “passed that bourne from which no traveller returns.” The result of their deliberations was the calling of a meeting to reorganize the Lodge.

Such was the influence of the Anti-Masons, even at this late date, however, that they had to maintain the utmost secrecy in their movements; and, indeed, female curiosity had, in two or three instances, nearly developed their mystery; but they succeeded in effecting their meeting, which consisted of thirteen superannuated masons—formerly members of Golden Rule and Lively Stone Lodges. The decision of the meeting was the reorganization of Golden Rule, and a petition signed by twenty-two of the brethren was sent to the Grand Lodge at Montreal for a new dispensation.

In the meantime, the jewels, books, furniture, &c., &c., of the old lodge, which had remained at Georgeville since 1829, had been brought to Stanstead Plain. Their petition for a dispensation was granted, and Joseph Breadon, M.D., was instructed from the Grand Lodge at Montreal to invest the officers and install the Lodge. Their charter proved to be the same document as that granted by the Duke of Sussex to Elisha Gustin and others in 1824.

Golden Rule Lodge, No. 517 E. R., and No. 8 P. R., was installed in due and ancient form by Dr. Breadon, in 1849. The officers were Elisha Gustin, W.M.; Samuel Reed, S.W.; Stephen Haseltine, J.W.; Franklin Mack, Secretary; M. Bachelder, Treasurer;

William Verback, S.D.; Asa Gaylord, J.D.; W. R. Andros and Joseph Brown, Stewards; and Stephen Reed, Tyler.

The emotions of the brethren at their first meeting may, perhaps, be better felt than described. In looking back through the twenty long years and contemplating the changes time had effected, not only among the fraternity, but in the affairs of the entire country, they found themselves much in the predicament of poor Rip Van Winkle when awaking from his long sleep. Politics and the general state of society had changed, and they themselves had changed. From young men in the prime and strength of life, they found that age, old age was fast creeping upon them. With subdued feelings, "mournful, yet pleasing to the soul," they separated—realizing the full enjoyment of reunion and the truth of "Behold how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

From this date, the interests of the Lodges steadily progressed, and soon attained a prominence never before occupied in the Eastern Townships.

In 1848, an attempt was made to recover the records of the old lodge, which had been mislaid or lost, but without success.

Nothing worthy of particular note occurred during the following seven years. In 1855, a general movement was made by the principal Lodges in Canada for the establishment of a Grand Lodge in their own country. This movement was regarded as the harbinger of better days to come; for the exaction of dues and fees by the Grand Lodge of England had long been considered a grievous burden. In the meantime the movement of the Canada brethren for a Grand Lodge of their own was regarded as schismatic by the Grand Lodge of England. The question involved a meeting of delegates from the various Lodges in Canada, in which it was urged that the Canada brethren had the legitimate right of secession, and that the Grand Lodge of England had no right to follow them with claims of authority or jurisdiction. The result of this meeting was a compromise, by which the different lodges retained their charters and were dismissed from the Grand Lodge of England. Golden Rule was represented at this meeting by H. J. Martin and E. B. Gustin, in a manner highly creditable to the Lodge and themselves.

In 1856, the junior members succeeded in carrying a vote for the purchase of Robert Morris' Universal Library. The seniors were at first opposed to the measure. They thought the young men of the present age would do well if they equalled the founders of the Lodge in masonic skill and knowledge. The counsels of the young men, however, prevailed—the library was bought, and has been of great value to the institution. In this year, Past Master Gustin represented the Lodge in Grand Lodge at Hamilton, Ont., and Golden Rule was visited by the Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and several brethren from Montreal. The work of the Lodge, which is the Ancient York Ritual, met their entire approval, and the brethren went to work with the cheering hope that brighter days were in store for Masonry in Canada.

In 1857, a Dispensation was obtained by which the brethren were allowed to hold a regular communication on the top of Owl's Head Mountain once in each year. A meeting was held at that place in September, and an inscription commemorative of the event was cut in a rock upon the top of the mountain. The same year, the Corner Stone of the Episcopal Church of Stanstead Plain was laid with masonic ceremonies. The Royal Arch Masons obtained a Dispensation for a Chapter, and received this Charter that year. The officers for the Chapter were: Elisha Gustin, H.P.; E. B. Rider, K.; Jos. Woolley, J.; H. J. Martin, Scribe E.; William Verback, C.H.; A. Bodwell, R.M.; F. Mack, P.S., and E. Bodwell, Janitor.

A Masonic Hall was built at Stanstead Plain in 1860. In 1864, the Lodge celebrated its semi-centenary anniversary. Father Gustin was elected W.M. The meeting was largely attended—was one of much interest, as Mr. Gustin was one of the original founders of the Lodge. In 1870, Golden Rule dissolved its connection with the Grand Lodge of Canada, and united with the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and was classified as Number Four.

The affairs of the Lodge are now (1874) in a prosperous state—number of members more than one hundred and fifty. The Masters who have presided over the Lodge since 1846, have been: Elisha Gustin, Stephen Haseltine, E. B. Gustin, H. J. Martin, Andrew Bodwell, E. B. Rider, W. B. Colby, C. S. Channell, R. P. Stewart, Thomas Stevenson, Robert C. Parsons, and Horace M. Hovey.

PART SECOND.

GENEALOGICAL SKETCHES OF THE FAMILIES OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF STANSTEAD COUNTY.

THE FAMILY, ITS RELATIONS TO SOCIETY, AND GENEALOGY.

In date and form it is primeval, as divinely ordained in Eden by God, in the creation of man, male and female; and their union in marriage, whereby they became one flesh, was the first manifestation of the human race in social relations and duties.

The family is dual as to parentage, or persons joined in marriage, while primeval and a unit in form. Adam and Eve, the first, were also the only, persons created as progenitors of mankind. One man and one woman were thus divinely constituted the parents of the race.

Moreover, it is normal, as being the only established and lawful state of social union and life for mankind.

This union of man and woman, and state of those one in heart, obligations, and duties, is alone normal and adapted to the wants and welfare of the race.

The family is germinal, — the seed-bud or appointed means for the propagation of the human race. God blessed the man and woman created and joined in marriage by him, and said "Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth." Hence, "marriage is" not only "honorable in all," but the family state is the only one approved of God, and lawful to man, for the propagation of his species. While, therefore, the race germinates in the family, and is propagated from generation to generation, a thousand social relations, duties, comforts, and delights spring up therein to bless mankind.

The family is essential, as without it the world would be a mere chaos of human beings. The domestic state is indispensable to the health and comfort of mankind.

It is essentially necessary to that moral purity in the sexes required by God, and alone respectable among men. It is the substratum or ground-work of all social relations, domestic comforts, and good manners in society.

THE FAMILY A TYPE.

It is specially typical, as it foreshadows, — first: the School, in the nurture and education of children. Home education is all some children ever have. Second the State. Family government was the first known.

The father was a prince or ruler in his house, as Abraham and the patriarchs. Children were subjects of government, first in the family. Obedience to parental authority insures obedience in the State. Equity and law in the family are such in the State.

Third, the Church. Indeed, in the first ages of the race, piety, fear and worship of God, were confined to the family. Naturally enough has the father been regarded both a prince and a priest in his own house; and as far as children are trained in the love and service of God, so far is there hope for the Church of Christ.

The conclusion of the subject is, that the family, as constituted in man's creation and condition in Eden, is universal. Not for Adam and Eve only, and their posterity to the deluge; not for Noah and his sons only, in their generations,— but for the human race in all time, was the family state ordained, that every man and woman might share and enjoy its blessings. How else shall the people of our land and the world have homes? How else shall the tender and endearing relations of kindred be perpetuated? How, without the family, can domestic happiness be preserved in the earth?

GENEALOGY.

Marriage and parentage thus unite, in the providence of God, to form and maintain the family, which furnishes both the occasion and material for Genealogy, this being simply "an enumeration of ancestors and their children in the natural order of succession."

The most ancient and important record of the kind, unparalleled indeed in its nature, is the genealogical table given in the New Testament; extending, as recorded in one case, from Abraham, and in the other from Adam, to Christ, a period of four thousand years.

"Mary, the noble virgin of David's royal race," of whom the Saviour was born, terminates the long series of generations, which sustained by life-giving power, like a golden chain extends onward through the whole course of development preceding the advent of Christ. No other nation but hers could furnish such a genealogy; no other Book than the Bible publish it to the world.

For many years he was the only practising physician within the limits of Stanstead County, and he was often called to the settlements in Barnston, Hatley and Compton, as well as to those on the east and west shores of Magog Lake. As the country was then an almost unbroken wilderness, the labor and fatigue he had to endure were such as would have broken down many men of the present generation. In several instances he was called to go in the night, to the distance of 12 or 14 miles, and had to follow a guide through the woods on foot, by the light of a torch or lantern. He was distinguished for his kindness to the poor, often making long journies and furnishing medicines for the sick without any prospect of compensation. He died in 1832, after a successful practice of more than 39 years. His wife d. in 1866. They were members of the Wesleyan Church.

They were members of the Congregational Church. She d. Aug. 19, 1819. One child died young. He returned to Sunderland, and m. Mary Pomroy, of Williamsburgh, Mass. They had five children.

The Pomroy Families.

These families are of Norman French extraction. One of the barons, who came over to England in the days of William the Conqueror, had for his coat of arms, the inscription "POMME ROY," or Royal Apple," which was afterwards adopted by his descendants as a surname. The orthography has in some instances been changed, but all those families in America who spell their name "Pomroy," are supposed to be the descendants of three brothers, viz., Eldad, Medard, and Ammi Pomroy, who came from England in the 17th century, and formed part of the old Plymouth colony of Puritan memory. Eldad subsequently removed to Connecticut. The brothers married and had families, and their descendants are scattered widely over the United States and Canada. Some have attained to high positions in the army; and others in commerce and in the various departments of public and professional life.

Selah Pomroy, Esq.

SELAH, a great grandson of Eldad Pomroy, was born in Northampton, Mass., Oct. 7, 1775. In 1795, he married Hannah, daughter of Capt. Abel Thayer, of Williamsburgh, Mass. The ancestors of Mr. Thayer belonged to the old Plymouth colony. Mr. Pomroy and his wife settled originally in Brookfield, Vermont; removed to Stanstead in 1798, and located on numbers 3 and 4, 11th Range—then a dense forest—no clearings nearer than those of Johnson Taplin, and Israel Wood, at the Plain.

For many years Mr. Pomroy sustained the office of magistrate. He was variously employed in public affairs, and was distinguished for his regard for law and order and for his efforts for the suppression of intemperance. In 1843, his house, barn, and other outbuildings were set on fire and destroyed by an incendiary whom he had convicted and fined for selling spirituous liquors without license. In 1817, he united with the Congregational Church, in which, for more than twenty-five years, he sustained the office of deacon. Like "Barnabas," he was a good man, and his Christian example and counsels will be long remembered by those who knew him. His wife died in 1821. In 1823, he married the widow Mary Lawrence, of St. Johnsbury, Vt. She died in 1837. In 1839, he married the widow Harriet H. Buck, of Montreal. She survives him. He died Dec. 23, 1856.

Benjamin Pomroy.

BENJAMIN, 3d son of Selah Pomroy, was born Dec. 28, 1800. Received his preparatory training as clerk, with Ichabod Smith, Esq., at Stanstead, began mercantile business at Sherbrooke, P. Q., in 1823, returned to Stanstead in 1824, and married Lucy, daughter of Jedediah Lee. In 1830, they removed to Compton, where he soon after gave up trade and commenced farming. He served during the Rebellion of 1837, 1838, as Captain of the Queens Mountain Rangers, and subsequently received the appointments of Major of Militia and Colonel of the 2d Battalion of the County of Compton. He was one of the pioneers in the construction of the Grand Trunk Railway, and his name is identified with the rise and progress of many of the other railroads of our country. He was a prominent mover in the establishment of the Eastern Townships Bank; of which he was elected President in 1859.

This was the first chartered bank put into operation in the Townships. It is located at Sherbrooke; has an agency at Stanstead Plain; A. P. Ball, Esq., son-in-law of Col. Pomroy, is the manager of this agency. In 1854 he experienced a distressing bereavement by the death of his wife, under most afflictive circumstances. She was killed by being thrown from a carriage; the horse having been frightened by a train of cars passing near the highway. In his public and private life Col. Pomroy has been distinguished for his liberal donations to benevolent institutions and objects.

ton, for some time. He m. Mary M., dau. of G. P. Clapp, Esq. They were members of the Wesleyan Church. He d. Dec. 12, 1864. The organ in the new Wesleyan church of Stanstead was given as a tribute to his memory, by his brother Carlos Pierce.

HENRY G., b. June 9, 1827—m. Mary C., dau. of L. K. Benton, Esq. They settled on the family homestead. His farm ranked among the model farms of the county. He was active in promoting the agricultural interests of the Townships, was a liberal contributor to benevolent institutions. He and his wife were members of the Wesleyan Church. He d. Oct. 9, 1870.

JULIA ANN, b. April 5, 1829—m. George L. Goodwin, a merchant of Boston. They are members of the Wesleyan Church.

CARLOS, b. May 20, 1831. Began his career in business at a very early age. When very young, he was the subject of a very remarkable Providence. In 1848 a large granite store in Federal street, Boston, fell down with a crash, burying everything in its ruins. He had been employed in the store, and after the confusion was not to be found. A large gang of men went to work to remove the broken timbers and merchandise, but with little hope of finding him alive. After a while, faint groans were heard, and guided by the sound of his voice, they finally succeeded in rescuing him, more dead than alive; having been imprisoned for nearly five hours. When found, he was lying with a large bale of flannel resting on his legs, and protected from death by two beams which formed a sort of arch over his body. In his fall from the upper loft, his frock had been turned up over his head, and when he had reached the place where he was found, he was in danger of perishing for want of air. Happening to have a pair of scissors in his pocket, he managed to cut holes through the frock, sufficient to let in air to sustain life. When found, he was very much exhausted, though but little hurt. Several weeks elapsed, however, before he was able to engage again in business. Soon after this occurrence, he engaged in business with his brothers Charles W. and George, in Boston. June 24, 1858, he m. Mary Ann, dau. of Col. W. Mills, of Bangor, Maine.

Previous to the time of the late American war, he had steadily increased his substance, and from several investments and contracts which he made at that particular time, realized a large property. He returned to Stanstead in 1863, and bought the Kilborn farm and other pieces of land, amounting in all to 600 acres, which, with the buildings and improvements he made, involved an expense of $150,000. He was an amateur farmer, and his farm ranked among the very first in the county in cultivation and crops. He was a liberal contributor to the agricultural interests of the county; having bought and fitted the former Race Course of the village at the expense of about $5,000, which he gave to the County Agricultural Society as a place for their annual fairs, subject to the condition that in the event of the removal of the annual meetings to another locality, this ground was to become the property of the Corporation of Stanstead Plain, to be fitted up and improved as a public park. His donations to Crystal Lake Cemetery and other public improvements were liberal, and in his contributions to benevolent objects, he was ever among the foremost. In the erection of the new Wesleyan Church, which involved an expense of more than $60,000, he paid at least $50,000. He had, with several others, engaged in a large purchase of wild lands in Kansas. The business of obtaining a charter for a railroad to pass through these lands was entrusted mainly to Mr Pierce; and such was the labor attending his efforts that his over-taxed system gave way, and he died of brain fever, Aug 20, 1870.

In the Wesleyan church, of which he was a consistent member, he was distinguished for his efforts in sustaining the ordinances of the gospel, and for his interest in the improvement of the rising generation. He was, during the last years of his life, superintendent of the Sabbath School, in which his wife was a faithful teacher. Their memory will be long cherished in Stanstead.

EMMA FRANCES, b. September 17, 1832.—m Hon. Henry Keyes. She was his second wife. The name of Mr. Keyes is identified with the history of most of the railroad operations in Vermont during the past quarter of a century. He was a proprietor and Director in several; and for a long time President of the Conn. & Pass. Road, to the stock of which he was a heavy contributor. He invested largely in other roads, the supervision of which was entrusted to him. He filled successively the place of Representative from Newbury in the Vermont Legislature, and that of State Senator at Washington, and was the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1857. Had he seen fit, he could have occupied any of the prominent offices in the country. In his domestic life he was an affectionate and tender husband, and a kind and indulgent father. He was a member of the Congregational Church at Newbury; a liberal contributor for the support of the ordinances of the gospel, and among the very first in sustaining the benevolent institutions of the age. He d. September 24, 1870.

MARTHA, b. March 1, 1836—m. Isaac Butters, his third wife. He was for many years engaged in mercantile business in Montreal, from which he retired, and was a liberal contributor to the erection of the Wesleyan church.

DANIEL, b. June 20, 1796, m. Phebe F. Abbott. He came to Stanstead with his parents in 1804—served an apprenticeship in the cloth dressing business, and at the age of 21, settled at Andover, Mass. From a careful examination of the Fall in the Merrimac River, he conceived the plan of securing a water power in his own immediate vicinity, and keeping his project to himself, made purchases of all the lands he could secure near the proposed location. He then laid his scheme before several capitalists in Lowell. They at once joined in the undertaking, and a company was formed, called "The Merrimac Water Power Association," of which, he was the principal manager and agent. In 1845, an act of incorporation was granted by the Legislature of Mass. to him and his associates. From this beginning, the present city of Lawrence has arisen. He deservedly became the possessor of an immense fortune. Daniel Saunders, Jr., his son, was associated with him in the enterprise. He was educated for the profession of law, has been several times elected to the Legislature of Mass., serving in the House and Senate. He was Mayor of Lawrence at the time of the falling of the Pemberton Mills.

EUGENE C., b. January 17, 1860.

Charles A Richardson, Esq.

Was born in Quebec, October 16, 1804, where he acquired the profession of notary. In 1827 he married Jane T. McKay, of Quebec. She died in 1831. He came to Stanstead in 1829, and about 4 years afterwards removed to Lennoxville, where he m. Louisa B., widow of J. C. Butterfield, of Walpole, N. H. He was appointed Postmaster at Lennoxville in 1836, but resigned the office and returned to Stanstead in 1844. He holds the office of Registrar for Stanstead county. Was for some time Mayor of the village corporation. Three promising children were removed by death, and they are left childless. His family are Episcopalians.

The Terrill Family.

This family are the descendants, in the 7th generation, from Roger Terrill, of Puritan memory. He was among the pioneers of the settlement of Woodbury, Conn. in 1672. We find no record of this family, but he "begat sons and daughters," and his posterity are scattered widely over the New England States and Canada.

Joseph H. Terrill, of the 6th generation from Roger Terrill, was among the earliest settlers of the Eastern Townships. He came to Canada with his father in 1800, subsequently married Betsy, dau. of Capt Orsamus Bailey, of Eaton, P. Q. They settled in Sherbrooke, P. Q., where he died in 1859. Their children were H. Bailey, Timothy Lee, Frederick, Preston, William, Amelia, Eliza and Jerusha. Of these only two settled in Stanstead.

Family of H. Bailey Terrill.

H. BAILEY TERRILL, oldest son of J. H. Terrill, was born in Sherbrooke, P. Q., December 2, 1811. He pursued the regular course of English, Classical and French studies at Quebec; studied law under the charge of Messrs. Peck & Short, Esqs., at Sherbrooke; was admitted to the bar in 1835, and in 1836 commenced practice at Stanstead Plain. In 1851 he was elected to represent Stanstead county in the Provincial Parliament and began his political career with the most brilliant prospects of success and usefulness, but was cut down and died of Asiatic Cholera at Quebec, October 29, 1852, in the 40th year of his age.

Mr. Terrill became early distinguishad for his legal attainments and abilities, and at the time of his death was among the very first of the profession in Canada. His active and comprehensive mind seemed at once to grasp any legal point before him. With jurisprudence and with the politics of our country he was equally familiar; and, as an advocate, was a most formidable opponent. In person he was tall and elegant, rather inclined to corpulency; voice clear and pleasant; articulation distinct, and his address prepossessing and commanding. If he had lived to the usual age of man he must have become eminently distinguished in the highest departments of public life. In his private life he was tender and affectionate, kind and indulgent, and a valuable citizen. In early life he married Laura, dau. of A. Farnham, of Hardwick, Vt.

HAZZARD BAILEY, b. October 1, 1852.

Timothy Lee Terrill.

TIMOTHY LEE TERRILL, 2nd son of J. H. Terrill, was born in Sherbrooke, P. Q., in March, 1815. He pursued the study of law under the charge of his brother, H. Bailey Terrill, and was admitted to the bar in 1840. He joined the volunteer Forces in 1838, and remained in the service during the time of the Rebellion: settled at Stanstead Plain in 1844, and in 1850 m. Harriet, dau. of Col. W. Chamberlin. In 1852 he was elected without opposition to serve in the Provincial Parliament for Stanstead county and re-elected in 1854, 1856 and 1858. In 1854 was appointed Queen's Counsel, and in May, 1856, received from the Governor General the appointments of Registrar of the Province, Provincial Secretary and member of the Executive Council of the Province of Canada, which offices he resigned in 1857. From the failure of his health, he was induced in 1861, to retire from political life, after a successful career of more than eight years. He has for some time devoted his attention to farming, and is connected with the agricultural interests of the county.

Family of J. W. Martin.

JOSEPH WINTHROP MARTIN, of the sixth generation of the American branch of the family, is the descendant of an old family in Somersetshire, England. Members of the family came to New England as early as 1635, and located at Weymouth and Hingham. They united with the colony that settled Rehoboth in 1644, and Swansea in 1667, in the latter towns their descendants are still to be found, occupying the same farms possessed by their ancestors for over two hundred years.

In 1796, Mr. Martin's family removed from Rehoboth, Mass., into the then unsettled portion of northern Vermont, and finally located in Caledonia County. The subject of this sketch was born at St. Johnsbury, 12th January, 1801.

An elder brother having settled at East Stanbridge, L.C., where he still resides, Mr. M. concluded to follow him, and on the 1st May, 1822, he reached Stanstead, where he finally settled. For some time he carried on the saddle and harness business, but for many years he has devoted himself to farming.

On the 26th January, 1839, he was commissioned by the Governor General, Sir John Colborne, Lieutenant of Cavalry, which office he retained until the close of the Rebellion. While on an expedition, in command of Col. Alexander Kilborn, to secure some prisoners, they were fired upon by a company of men in ambush. Col. K. was dangerously wounded, and Lieut. M. escaped almost by a miracle; several balls grazed his head and body, and his horse shot under him, but owing to the darkness of the night, he succeeded in effecting his escape unhurt.

On the 28th February, 1845, he was appointed one of the Commissioners of Small Causes for the Township of Stanstead, and on 21st October of the same year he was appointed a Justice of the Peace, but declined serving. He was again appointed on the 11th May, 1860.

Mr. M. has at various times been a member of the County and Village Councils.

On the 3rd March, 1828, he m. Almira Deborah, youngest child of William and Deborah (Buell) Barter, of Rutland, Vt., and has had

His son, Henry J., is a resident of Washington, D.C., and his daughter Caroline Louisa, resides at home with her parents.

The Child Family.

Families of this name are found in Great Britain and are scattered widely over the United States and Canada. The orthography has in some instances been changed, but all those who spell their name Child or Childe probably sprang from the same source. We find the name Childe in England nearly as far back as to the time of the adoption of surnames in that country. The letter e has in most instances been dropped. The immediate progenitors of the subject of the following notice settled in Worcester, Mass.

Marcus Child, Esq.,

Came to Stanstead in the early days of the settlement, and was employed for a few years as clerk in the business of Levi Bigelow, at Derby Line. At a later date, he engaged in partnership with Dea. Levi Hooker in the business of drugs and medicines on Stanstead Plain. Mr. Child bought out the concern, and continued the business for several years. Was early appointed postmaster and magistrate. He succeeded in acquiring a large property, was one of the founders of Stanstead Seminary, and a liberal contributor to the interests of the Wesleyan Church. Was among the early members who represented Stanstead County in the Provincial Parliament.

In the Revolution of 1837-1839, he was identified with the Radical or Reform Party. For a time, he was among the proscribed, and was compelled to leave the country; but this party soon came again into power. Mr. Child returned, and was again elected to the Provincial Parliament for Stanstead County.

His interests had for several years been connected with the then new settlement of Coaticook. The name of its Post Office was given at his suggestion, and it was afterwards adopted as that of the Municipality. He removed to that place, a few years before the close of his life, and held the office of School Inspector for the District of St. Francis. He was "a ready scribe," and while at Stanstead, was Secretary or Corresponding Secretary for the Stanstead Bible Society, Stanstead Seminary, and other institutions of the kind.

In early life, he married Lydia Chadwick, a native of Massachusetts. Of their children, two only, survived to maturity: George M., who settled near Coaticook, and Elizabeth, who married Lewis L. Sleeper, Esq. She died in the prime of life and usefulness, much beloved and deeply lamented. During the last years of his life, Mr. Child and his family were connected with the Episcopal Church.

The Colby Family.

We have no authentic account of the ancestry of this family. Tradition says that two families of this name came from England in 1632, and settled in Old Salisbury, Mass. One of these families afterwards removed to Chester, N.H. SAMUEL COLBY, a descendant in the sixth generation from this family, m. Ruth French. They were natives of Candia, N.H. Settled originally in Thornton, N.H.; removed to Derby, Vt., in 1798, and were among the pioneers in the settlement of that town. They were intelligent and useful members of the community. Their children were NEHEMLIAH, who m. Melinda Larabee; SARAH, m. Dea. Wm. Verback; MOSES F., m. Lemira Strong; RUTH F., m. Dr. David French; and EMILY, who m. Dr. S. S. Kendall. Of these Moses F., only, settled in Canada.

Moses French Colby, M.D.,

Was born in Thornton, N.H., July 2, 1795. His early opportunities for education, like those of other pioneers, were limited to the common schools of the time; but he succeeded in laying the foundation of that knowledge for which in after life he was so eminently distinguished.

In 1814, he commenced the study of medicine under the charge of Dr. Newcomb, of Derby, Vt., attended the lectures of the Medical Department of Yale College in 1817, entered the Medical Department of Dartmouth in 1820, and graduated in 1821. Commenced practice in Derby, that year; was uniformly successful, but not being satisfied with present attainments, he relinquished his practice for a time, and, in 1828, entered the School of Practical Anatomy at Harvard College, where he pursued the regular course with attendance at the hospitals. During that time, he formed the acquaintance of Dr. Gould, the late President of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and one of the most eminent savans of the age, with whom he sustained an interesting correspondence for many years, some parts of which have been published. In this connection, it may perhaps be worthy of note that while a few months are now deemed by many as amply sufficient time to complete the education of medical men, Dr. Colby was willing to devote fourteen years of the best part of his life to this science. Indeed he was a student during the whole of his life. On his return from Cambridge, Mass., he again commenced practice in Derby; and such was his success, that his circuit soon extended over Orleans and Stanstead Counties. In 1832, he removed to Stanstead, and after having passed a rigid examination before the Medical Faculty at Quebec, and obtaining licensure, commenced practice. In 1837, he received the honorary degree of A. M. from Dartmouth College, and about the same time was elected a member of the Provincial Parliament for Stanstead County. He served during the time of the Rebellion as surgeon for the Militia and Volunteers of the County. At the close of the Rebellion, a union of the two Canadas was effected, and the election of the member for Stanstead County for the New Parliament was one of the most exciting events in its political history. The election was contested by Dr. Colby, the candidate of the Conservative party and Marcus Child, Esq., of the Liberals. The poll was kept open at Hatley twelve days; and during that time both parties worked with a desperation not exceeded in any election. The result was that Mr. Child had a small nominal majority, but the friends of Dr. Colby claimed a majority of legal votes.

The character of Dr. Colby was one of peculiar interest. While the science of medicine was his forte, he was familiar with the various branches of a liberal education. His contributions to the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal and other distinguished periodicals exhibit an acquaintance with the theory and practice of medicine much in advance of the age in which they were written.

In Northern New England and the Eastern Townships of Canada, he stood decidedly at the head of his profession, and his memory is cherished with respect and esteem. In his religious views, he embraced the doctrines of the Reformation, and exhibited the spirit of the Gospel in his daily walk and conversation, and was ever a liberal contributor to benevolent enterprises. July 10

1826, he married Lemira Strong, of Pawlet, Vt., b. May 9, 1806. Dr. Colby died May 4, 1863, aged 67 years. Mrs. Colby lives with her son C. C. Colby on the Plain.

CHARLES C. COLBY, b. in Derby, Vt., Dec. 10, 1827, graduated at Dartmouth in 1847; studied law. Commenced practice at Stanstead in 1855. In 1867, he was elected to represent Stanstead county in the House of Commons of the Legislature of the New Dominion of Canada, as convened at Ottawa, Ontario—was re-elected in 1871. Dec. 21, 1858, he m. Harriet H., dau. of J. Child, Esq., of Weybridge, Vt. She was for some time preceptress of Stanstead Seminary. The political career of Mr. Colby has been a prosperous one.

The Kilborn Family.

COL. CHARLES KILBORN was born in Litchfield, Conn., March 3, 1758. He was a descendant of Thomas Kilborn, who emigrated from England with his family in 1635, and settled in Weathersfield, Conn.

In the beginning of the American Revolution, the subject of this notice was drafted into the Continental service, though much against his own will. He served, however, through one campaign, and was engaged in several skirmishes with the British. He subsequently enlisted in the British army, and was taken prisoner in an engagement with a detachment of the American forces. He succeeded in making his escape, and, after a series of vicissitudes and adventures, found his way to Canada, on foot by a long route through an uninhabited country. Before peace was concluded he had become a captain in the British service. In February, 1784, he married Margaret Young. They afterwards resided 17 years at Caldwell's Manor, and two years at Alburgh; removed to Stansstead, in 1804 and settled on Rock Island, where he built a grist mill, a saw mill, a carding and clothiers, factory, and a linseed-oil mill.

He drew lots Nos. 1 and 2, 9th Range as an Associate, and purchased others, but lots and mills have passed out of the hands of the family.

At the commencement of the American war of 1812 Mr. Kilborn held the office of Major in the British service, and at the close of the war, retired with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel. He sustained the office of magistrate many years, and was a prompt administrator of justice, without fear or favor of party. The following incident is illustrative of his promptitude and energy. Some time in the early days of the settlement, the noted counterfeiter, Stephen Boroughs had begun his operations at the place now known as Boroughs Falls, and had fitted up a shop in his barn in such a way that there was no entrance into it except by a hole through the hay mow. His retreat having been discovered, Mr. Kilborn went with two others, to arrest him. As only one could go in at a time, he said to the others, "if he kills me, don't let him come out alive." At his entrance into the room, Boroughs presented and snapped his pistol, which fortunately missed fire Boroughs said it was the first time he had ever known the pistol to miss fire. By this time, Mr. Kilborn had things pretty much in his own way, and succeeded in bringing Boroughs and his deeds of darkness fully to light. A large number of spurious bank notes, and the implements for counterfeiting upon a large scale were found, and the nest was thoroughly broken up. Col. Kilborn died, June 19, 1834. Margaret, his wife, died Aug. 21, 1841. Their children were Lucy, m. John Savage; Betsey, m. Henry Curtis, Benjamin, m. Sophia Cooley; Alexander, m. Thankful Bungs; Sally, d. at the age of 17 years; Joseph, d. young, Mary, m. Daniel Remick;

Nancy, m. Stephen Cobb; Matilda, m. Eliphalet Bodwell, jr.; and Lydia, who m. E. F. G. Studdert.

COL. ALEXANDER KILBORN, b. April 5, 1791, m. Thankful H. Bangs. He early had a predilection for the military service, arose from the place of Sergeant to that of Lieut.-Colonel of militia. At the breaking out of the Rebellion in 1837 he had the command of a company of volunteers. In the winter of 1837-1838, while on his way to secure some prisoners, he received a severe wound in the abdomen, which very nearly proved fatal. He was one of the founders of Stanstead Seminary; 2 children, Susan L. and Charles A. Susan died Nov. 21, 1868, aged 53 years. Colonel Kilborn, d. April 20, 1872.

CAPT. JOSEPH KILBORN was b. in Litchfield, Conn., Feb. 15, 1771. Studied the art of surveying, and was appointed Deputy Surveyor of the Province of Quebec in 1792, and, as such, assisted in surveying nearly all the Eastern Townships. He was afterwards appointed Military Surveyor and Draftsman, with the rank and pay of Captain in the regular army. He died Nov. 15, 1814, aged 43 years.

The Lee Family.

These families are of English extraction, and, like the Browns and Smiths, are ubiquitous, being found in almost every part of Britain and America. The earliest record of the Stanstead branch is that Jedediah Lee deeded to his son, Elias Lee, in 1744, fifty acres of land in the town of Ellington, Conn., and that in 1745 Elias Lee married Sarah Royce, and settled on that farm. Their children were Sarah, Lucy, Mary, Elias, Daniel, Lucy 2nd, Jerusha, Ruth and Jedediah. Of these Jedediah and Daniel settled in Stanstead.

His early opportunities of education had been confined to the common schools of the settlement, but, in 1830, we find him among the scholars in the higher English and classical studies. He subsequently attended the Methodist Institute at Wilbraham, Mass—was licensed by the New England Conference, and, in 1833, engaged in the mission among the Indians west of the Rocky Mountains. His labors as a missionary have been noted in the Book entitled "Ten Years in Oregon," to which the reader is referred. He crossed and re-crossed the Rocky Mountains many times—"enduring hardship as a good soldier of Christ."—July 16, 1837, he m. Anna M.

March 12, 1845, "rejoicing in hope of the glory of God and a blessed immortality beyond the grave."

The Lee Families of Stanstead have generally been a prolific race, and their connexions by intermarriages are numerous and scattered over the county. Many individuals of these families have been distinguished for talents and enterprise; and, with few exceptions, they have all been active and useful members of the community.

The Morrill Families.

The ancestors of these families were of English descent, and were among the early colonists of Newhampshire and Massachusetts.

PAUL MORRILL, b. in Amesbury, Mass., m. Dorothy Blount, b. in Pembroke, N.H. They settled originally in Chichester, N.H.,—removed to Stanstead in 1803—and were much esteemed for their integrity and uprightness. Their children were William, Jonathan, Nathan, Isaac, Paul, David, Sarah, Abigail, and Joseph.

WILLIAM, eldest son of Paul Morrill, was b. in Pembroke, N. H., Sept. 22, 1768—m. Hannah Rogers, b. in Chichester, N.H., Nov. 9, 1773. They came to Stanstead in 1800, and settled on No. 15, 11th Range. Mr. Morrill soon succeeded in making a comfortable home for his family in the wilderness. He acquired a good property and lived to more than 96, at the time of his death, and his wife to be over 90. Their last days were spent with their son, Archibald Morrill, Esq., on the farm upon which they began in 1800. They retained their mental faculties to the last, and the compiler received valuable assistance from them in gathering up incidents connected with the experience of the early settlers.

Their children were Fanny, m. Moses Heath; Archibald, m. Mary Lee; Esenath, m. 1st, Nathaniel Tilton, 2nd Eli Bangs; Abigail, m. Eliphalet Cass; Dorothy, m. James Corrill and Jeremiah, who m. Azubah Lee.

MOSES WELLS, b. in Chester, N.H., Feb. 10, 1768. June, 1790, m. Mary Moore, b. in Goffstown, N.H., May 15, 1773. In the spring of 1798, Mr. Wells came to Stanstead on foot, and in the following summer returned and took his family with as many of their effects as they could carry on horseback through the woods to Duncansboro, now Newport, Vt., from whence they proceeded down the lake in a canoe to the place that forms the present village of Georgeville, then an opening of two acres in a dense forest. At that time there were but two other families in the settlement—those of Capt. Moses Copp and Richard Packard. The three families dipped their water from the same spring, and baked their bread in the same oven. The oven was built of stone, and stood "out of doors." Mr. Wells was the first blacksmith that began business in the township. He made all the iron work of Borough's Mill at Borough's Falls from heavy bar iron with his own hands, a work which few of our modern mechanics could accomplish under similar circumstances. The Boynton Families.

These families are of English extraction, and are scattered widely over Britain and America. The orthography of the name has sometimes been changed, being found Boynton, Boyington and Byington; but these different families have doubtless sprung from the same source.

MAJOR WILLIAM BOYNTON m. Mary Gibson. They were natives of Canterbury, N.H. Settled in Loudon, N.H.; removed to Bolton, P. Q., in 1795. In 1797 crossed the lake and located in Stanstead, near the place now called Libbee's Mills. This was about two years previous to the beginnings at Brown's Hill and Cassville, and the whole neighborhood was then a dense forest. They made a shanty on the bank of the river, covering it with hemlock boughs. While living in this shanty, their youngest son, Jesse P. Boynton, was born. When he was about a week old, there came a heavy shower of rain, which raised the water in the river so that it overflowed its banks, and reaching the shanty, floated the bed, Mrs. Boynton, "baby and all," into four feet of water. This happened in the night, and it was with some difficulty that Mr. Boynton succeeded in rescuing them in a canoe.

For some two or three years, they had to subsist mostly by hunting and fishing. Moose and deer were plenty in the forests and fish were abundant in the lakes and rivers. In the meantime, they gradually extended their clearing, and the family began to assume the appearance of a thriving colony. As early as 1805, they built a grist mill and a saw mill. These mills have since been rebuilt, and have passed into other hands. Major Boynton and his wife were respected and useful members of the community. He d. September 8, 1830; she d. December 5, 1831. Their children were Deborah, Edmund, James, William, John, Gardner and Jesse P.

The House Families.

The earliest account we can give of these families is that FRANCIS HOUSE married a Miss Hammond. They were natives of England, whence they came to America and settled in Salem, Mass. They afterwards removed to Fairlee, Vt., where, by a somewhat singular coincidence, they died of Spotted Fever within a few hours of each other. Their children were Francis, William, Esther, Sally, Hannah, John, Frederick, Benjamin and Grace. These all married and had families, who with scarcely an exception have been respected and valuable members of the communities in which they have lived; and many of them have occupied prominent positions in public life. Three only of the number settled in Canada. Francis, Esther, who m. Thomas Beebe, and Grace, who m. William Moulton.

The Stewart Families.

The earliest record we can find of these families is that JOHN STEWART came from Scotland to America about the middle of the past century; that during his passage he made the acquaintance of Anne Newton, whom he afterwards married. They settled in Brattleboro', Vt. Families of this name are found in England, Scotland and Ireland, and are widely scattered over the United States and Canada; but all who spell their names Stuart or Stewart, could probably be traced to the same source; as far back, at least, as to the time of James the First, King of England.

Two of the sons of John Stewart above mentioned, settled in Derby, Vt. Rufus was a prominent man in the settlement, and took an active part in the management of public affairs; received the appointment of Major in the Militia; was one of the founders of Lively Stone Lodge. In early life he married Jane Fraser. She d. October, 1840; he d. June 29, 1846, aged 71 years. Their children were Harriet, who m. George Robinson; Maria, who m. Jacob Bates; Horace, m. Catherine Hinman; Nancy, m. Aaron Hinman, Esq.; Emory, m. Julia Daggett, and Jane, m. Martin Newcomb. Of these, Horace, only, settled in Canada.

John Stewart, brother of Rufus, settled in Derby, but after some 20 years, removed to the South. His children and their descendants reside mostly in the Southern States.

Family of Horace Stewart, Esq.

HORACE STEWART was born in Derby, Vt., September 25, 1804. He married Catherine, dau. of Hon. Timothy Hinman, b. October 26, 1806. They settled at Beebe Plain, in 1826. In early life he engaged in mercantile business, and was eminently successful. He was a careful financier, and riches seemed to flow into his hands almost spontaneously. He is now one of the wealthiest men in the county. Had he been ambitious of public distinctions he could, probably, have attained to any position of honor he might have wished, but he wisely chose the enjoyments of home and domestic life. To the interests of the village where he resides he has been a liberal contributor.

CHILDREN.

MARTHA M., b. April 28, 1831—m. Carlos F. Haskell. He was for many years engaged in an extensive mercantile business at Rock Island, P.Q. He d. July 2, 1865.

HOEL S., b. July 19, 1842—d. August 22, 1868.

The Steele Families.

The first persons known in America by this name were two brothers, James and Stephen Steele, who emigrated from England about 1640. They were both Congregational Ministers of the Puritan stamp. One settled in Tolland, and the other in Ellington, Conn. In later years, various families of the name have emigrated from Scotland and Ireland, but these omit the final e, in the orthography of their name.

Family of Zadok Steele.

ZADOK STEELE, a grandson of James Steele, above mentioned, was b. in Tolland, Conn., Dec. 17, 1758. At the age of 16 he enlisted into the American Army as waiter to his father, who held a commission in the Continental Service, in the time of the Revolution. He remained in the army nearly three years; and at the close of the term of his enlistment, commenced a settlement in the town of Randolph, Vt., then an almost unbroken wilderness. Here he was captured by a company of Indians who were on their return from the burning of Royalton—a town lying 10 miles south from Randolph. He was taken by the Indians to Canada; and, after passing through a captivity of two years, in which he experienced almost unparalleled hardships and suffering, succeeded in making his escape, and returned to the place he had previously purchased in Randolph. He published a narrative of his captivity and sufferings, to which the reader is referred. Feb. 10, 1785, he m. Hannah, dau. of Mr. William Shurtliff, of Ellington, Conn. In 1815, he came to Stanstead, and purchased the lots, Nos. 1 and 2, 7th Range, comprising the site of the village of Beebe Plain, and moved his family in, the following year. In 1825, he divided his property between his two youngest sons, Solomon and Sanford. He d. March 28, 1845, in the 87th year of his age. His wife d. Sept. 25, of the same year. "They were lovely in their lives, and in their death, they were not (long) divided." They were consistent and exemplary members of the Congregational Church.

CHILDREN.

ABIGAIL, b. in Randolph, Vt., May 24, 1787—m. E. Smith, Esq. He d. in 1842.

HIRAM, b. in Randolph, Vt., Feb. 1, 1789. In 1812—m. Abigail Keenan. They settled at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., where he sustained the office of Judge for the county in which he lived; and held other important offices. He d. in 1838.

HORACE, b. in Randolph, Vt., March 1, 1791. Studied law, and was admitted to the bar, at Montpelier, in 1820. His taste for literary pursuits induced him to relinquish, measurably, the duties of his profession, and for many years he sustained the editorial department of different newspapers in Vermont, New York and Ohio. He is now living with his 3rd wife, in Ohio.

ZADOK, JUN., b. in Randolph, Vt., Jan. 11, 1793. In 1822, m. Theda, dau. of Mr. Lemuel Wright, of Stanstead. They settled in Watertown, N.Y.

JAMES, b. in Brookfield, Vt., Jan. 25, 1795. Studied law at the Guildhall, Vt., and was admitted to the bar, in 1829. Commenced practice at Canaan, Vt., but subsequently returned to Guildhall, where he continued a lucrative business until 1851, when, from the failure of his health, he retired. He d. Dec. 6, 1857.

ROSWELL, b. in Brookfield, Vt., April 14, 1797. A successful merchant; was engaged in trade several years at Salina, N.Y. He d. of cholera, Aug. 12, 1834.

SOLOMON, b. in Brookfield, Vt., Aug. 20, 1799. Came to Stanstead with his parents in 1816. In 1832, he m. Eliza, dau. of Dr. Joseph Whyte of Banff, Scotland. His early years were spent in teaching. From 1836 to 1857, he held the successive appointments of commissioner for the summary trial of small causes and magistrate. He was a practical farmer, and had brought his farm of 280 acres into a state of high cultivation, but in the fall of 1856, his house, barns and out-buildings were destroyed by fire. He sold out in 1857, and removed to Derby, Vt. His 3rd son is a graduate of the Medical College of Philadelphia, and is a successful practitioner.

SOPHRONIA, b. in Brookfield, Vt., April 13, 1802—m. Harvey W. Carpenter, Esq. She d. in 1859; he d. in 1849.

SANFORD, b. in Brookfield, Vt., April 13, 1804. Settled upon the farm adjoining that of his brother Solomon. Dec. 14, 1835, he m. Mary, dau. of Benjamin Hinman, Esq., of Derby, Vt. He d. Sept. 4, 1856. Benjamin H. Steele, his eldest son, graduated at Dartmouth. Studied law, and became eminently distinguished in his profession, received the appointment of Judge of the Orleans County Court. He d. in 1872.

Hiram, the second son, served as captain in the army of the late American Rebellion. Sanford Steele was a model farmer, a kind husband and father, and an exemplary christian.

Joseph Foord, M.D.

We are not able to trace the origin and history of Dr. Foord. He was a well educated and successful physician. Had an extensive practice in Georgeville and the surrounding neighborhoods for years.

Nelson Cheney, M.D.

Was born in Barton, April 17, 1830. His early opportunities had been limited to the Common Schools of the town, but he acquired a good English education, and was for some years engaged in teaching. Having a predilection for the profession of medicine, he pursued his preparatory studies under the instructions of Dr. J. B. Mastee, of Barton, Vt., improving his leisure time while engaged in teaching. In 1859, he received his diploma from the Physico-Medical College of Medicine and Surgery at Cincinnati, Ohio. He commenced practice in Glover, Vt., afterwards removed to Georgeville, and subsequently to Beebe Plain.

Family of William Bullock, Esq.

WILLIAM BULLOCK, Esq., was born in Guilford, Vt., in 1770—m. Artemisia Wellman. They settled on Nos. 27 and 28, 2nd Range of Stanstead, near Georgeville, in 1801. Being among the very earliest settlers, they experienced the fortunes that attended the labor of our fathers in making for themselves homes in the wilderness. He early took an active part in the management of public affairs, having received a magistrate's commission and other offices of trust from the Provincial Government. With hardly an exception, his family have all been active and useful members of the community. He d. in 1828. His wife d. in 1836. Their children were William, Miriam, Biel, Thaddeus, Chauncey, Rectina, Samuel, Jesse, Artemisia, Increase, Noble, and Harriet. These all married and had families, and their descendants are widely scattered over Canada and the United States.

The progenitors of William Bullock, the subject of this notice, can be distinctly traced back to the time of the Norman Conquest in 1066, and some 300 years before the time of the introduction of surnames into England. We find the name and coat of arms of the family in English Heraldry. The insignia upon the shield are Three Bulls' Heads, and above the shield, a crest of five battle axes with the motto, "nil conscire sibi." In 1635, three brothers, Henry, Edward, and Richard Bullock, emigrated from England and settled in Salem, Mass. Richard Bullock removed to Rehoboth, Mass., in 1647, and from him, William Bullock was a descendant in the fifth generation.

TAYLOR WADLEIGH, b. in Fishersfield, N.H., Dec. 8, 1799. Was about three years old when his parents settled in Hatley. His early opportunities of education had been limited to the defective schools of the settlement, but his native good sense, shrewdness, and general observation enabled him to overcome in a great measure the defects of his early school training. Such was the clearness of his perception, that he seemed to grasp intuitively almost any subject presented to him, and in private discussion and in public debate, he was excelled by very few. He was a first rate farmer, ever ready to adopt improvements and to infuse a spirit of enterprise among his neighbors.

He early took an active interest in the politics of the country, and associated himself with the Radical Reform Party, and was active in the agitation which resulted in the Rebellion of 1837-1839. In the fall of 1837 he was arrested on a charge of high treason, and confined for a few weeks in Montreal Jail. On examination no evidence was adduced against him and he was set at liberty. He lived, however, to see the principles he advocated at least in part acknowledged, and the Government administered in accordance with his views of justice and right. The Ives Families.

These families settled in different parts of Stanstead County, are all the descendants of Joseph and Joel Ives. They were natives of Connecticut and came to Canada in 1793. We have no authentic account of their ancestry, but tradition says that they were among the early emigrants to the New England Colonies. Joseph and Joel Ives were men of energy, and their posterity, with hardly an exception, have been intelligent and useful members of the community, some of whom have occupied prominent positions in public life. We find them generally identified with the different branches of the Christian Church.

Family of John Weston, M.D.

JOHN WESTON, M.D., was descended in direct line and in the 6th generation from John Weston, who was born in Buckinghamshire, England, in 1631, and emigrated to America in 1644.

The subject of this notice was born in Rockingham, Vt., Sept. 20, 1780. He graduated at Dartmouth, and, after pursuing the regular course of medical and surgical studies at Keene and Hanover, N.H., received an honorary diploma from the Medical College at Burlington, Vt. He came to Hatley in 1810, and was soon after licensed by the Medical Board at Quebec. His practice rapidly increased, and for many years he was the only practical surgeon within the present limits of Stanstead county. He was successful in his practice, but the hardships and fatigue which he endured in his frequent long journeys, made often to the distance of 20 miles through the woods by almost impassable roads, would have broken down the constitutions of stronger men of later days. He was distinguished for his benevolence, often visiting the poor and supplying medicines without any prospect of compensation, but was cut down in the prime of strength and usefulness. His death, which was caused by a kick from his horse, occurred July 16, 1832. He was a consistent and exemplary member of the Episcopal Church, and his memory will be cherished by many with respect and esteem. Oct. 30, 1812, he m. Jane, dau. of Capt. N. Snow, of Compton, P.Q., b. Sept. 9, 1789.

JAMES TURNER, b. July 16, 1868.

HENRY TURNER, b. July 18, 1871.

Five of the children were born during the residence of the family in Sherbrooke. Of late they have lived on the place long owned and occupied by Erastus Lee, uncle of Mrs. Ball, enjoying a home of great value and comfort in Stanstead.

SLEEPER.—A family of this name came from England about the year 1700, and settled in New Hampshire. The branch of this family described in this sketch remained loyal to the Government of England during the struggle of the Colonies for independence, and H. Sleeper, then a child, removed early in life to Vermont, where he married Miss H. Batchelder. Not satisfied with the government and laws they came in 1801 to Canada, and settled on Lot 14 in the 10th Range of Stanstead. Mr. Sleeper was a captain of militia, and took an active part in the war of 1812 in organizing companies to defend the border against invasion.

This couple lived to see their ten children, five girls and five boys, grown up and settled in life.

No one in the community was more esteemed than Mr. Sleeper. He died the 23rd of September, 1849, at the age of 79 years.

His wife lived to see her great great grand-children, and died in Aug., 1871, at the age of 93.

The oldest child, a daughter, married H. Ives, of Hatley, neither of whom is now living. The second, a daughter, married T. Kimball. They removed to Wisconsin, where they both died. The third, a son, married Miss Davis. They moved to Lancaster, N.Y., Both are living. The fourth, a son, married Miss Davis, and settled in Wisconsin, where they now reside. The fifth, a daughter, married A. Pinkham, and lives in Stanstead. The sixth, a son, L. Sleeper, has taken a prominent position in the Province. He went early in life to Quebec for the purpose of obtaining a good education. He next commenced his travels in the United States, and, after visiting nearly all the great cities, spent two years in Oglethorpe University, Georgia. He then returned to Quebec and took an active part in organizing the High School of that city. After his connection with that institution ceased he joined the Quebec and Richmond Railway Co., and having contributed much valuable information to the Board he was appointed Treasurer. Operations being temporarily suspended, he left the Co. and commenced an investigation of the mineral resources of the Province. The love of geological and mineralogical research had developed itself at a very early age, and he now found an opportunity to gratify his tastes. He soon decided that the deposits of gold were of comparatively little value, and turned his whole attention to copper. He organized a mining company in Quebec, purchased a large amount of property on Harvey Hill, directed the operations of the mine for a considerable time with most favorable results, and finally induced the stockholders to sell to an English Co. That being advantageously disposed of he at once undertook without assistance to open and work the Acton mine. The discovery and development of this extraordinary deposit astonished the world, and none less than the Director of the Geological Survey of the Province. This triumphant result after years of toil and almost universal opposition to his theory created a wide-spread excitement.

At this period he saw his opinions, as embodied in numerous reports, verified—his energy and perseverance rewarded with ample provision for his family, and, disgusted with the speculations going on around him, disposed of all his interest and retired from the business.

His next step was to follow out a desire to spend the remainder of his life in his native county, and, looking upon Coaticook as a favorable point for the investment of capital, he chose that place as his residence. He has spent a large sum in utilizing the water-power, and has materially contributed to the rapid growth of the village. He has the confidence and respect of all who know him.

The seventh, a daughter, married E. Davis, and went to Missouri, where they both died. The eighth, a daughter, married J. Smith. They took up their residence in Galveston, in Texas, where he died. She subsequently married the Rev. W. C. Somerville, a thoroughly educated gentleman of the Presbyterian Church. They are now in Newport, Vermont. The ninth, a son, W. Sleeper, married Miss Cole, and lives in Coaticook, where he carries on an extensive business in the manufacture of farming implements. His skill and honorable dealing have given him a well-deserved reputation. The tenth, a son, J. Sleeper married Miss Carswell, and removed to Wisconsin where they are now living.

Mrs. ABIGAIL CASS.—The following is a synopsis of an account of the sickness and death of Mrs. Abigail Cass, published in the Boston Medical Journal in 1835, by Drs. M. F. Colby and S. Barnard:

Mrs. Cass was 28 years old when Dr. Colby was called to visit her in 1833,—had been five years married, had suffered severely from sickness in which the head had been much affected—stomach weak and irritable. She recovered and enjoyed her usual health until near the close of the year, when she was taken with severe pain in the head attended with delirium, and the power of vision nearly or quite suspended. After the violence of the attack had been subdued, her delirium subsided, she began to have turns of reverie or a state of sleep in which she talked much, composed poetry, prayed, exhorted, sung, etc.

When in her reveries, her eyes were always closed, her limbs had a convulsive movement, her breathing was laborious, and her frequent moanings and gestures indicated intense suffering, yet her conversation was lively and cheerful, often sarcastic and witty. Sometimes she would sing and pray and exhort in the most solemn and affecting manner.

Although she never had the slightest recollection when awake of what passed in her reveries, yet when in them, she remembered what had passed in former ones. She often supposed herself to be writing poetry, and would recite what she supposed she had written. She seemed always to be governed by the strictest regard to the truth, and if she made a promise, was sure to fulfil it. She once took a fancy to give a lecture on quackery, and appointed the time at 6, on the following Monday evening. Before the time appointed she had several paroxysms and intervals. Feeling curious to see if she would keep her appointment, and if she did, to hear her discourse, Dr. Colby visited her that afternoon. They supposed that the watch hanging in her room would be her guide, and determined to have tea before 6. They all left the room, but on returning, they found to their surprise she was concluding her lecture. She appeared to have been speaking some time with animation, and was greatly exhausted with her efforts. On being asked why she had commenced her lecture before the appointed time, she answered that she had not, but that the watch was twenty minutes too slow—which was found to be the case. She always seemed to possess an accurate knowledge of the true time when in her reveries, and when different watches were presented to her, would tell when they were out of the way, and how much.

After continuing an indefinite time in a paroxysm, she always awoke suddenly with an instantaneous and peculiar change in her countenance and in her manner of expression—so much so, that it was often remarked by visitors that she seemed to possess two distinct spirits, each in its turn presiding separate and uncontrolled by the other.

After her clairvoyance was established, it did not always appear necessary that her face should be turned towards an object to perceive it. When her head was turned to the back side of the bed in a dark room, she recognized persons the moment they came in and spoke of their dress. Books were handed her to read and to find passages, which she did very readily. The interposing of solid or opaque substances between her eyes and the book so as to render the passing of rays of light from one to the other impossible, seemed to have no effect in obstructing her vision—a hand, a folded cloth, a pillow, or a tea tray, and other objects were at different times held before the book without impeding her when reading, and without her appearing to notice that anything was in the way.

Setting aside her clairvoyance, many of the mental faculties seemed excited to the highest degree and to manifest powers that they were incapable of in a normal state. This was more particularly the case with ideality, wit, time, tune, and language. Wit, raillery, and sarcasm would often abound in her conversation, and her poetical effusions, which were far above what she was supposed to be able to do in her natural state, were chaste and generally of a highly devotional character. In her case, that part of the head where phrenologists have located the organs of these faculties was the seat of intense pain, and the skin over it was so exquisitely tender that the slightest touch would cause her to shrink as from the approach of a hot iron.

Among the remedies proposed, the warm bath at the temperature of 98 d. Fahrenheit was tried. When taken out she was entirely prostrated—so much so, that for a long time it seemed that the taper must expire in the socket; but when the powers of life had rallied, her head and stomach were much relieved, and her respiration was full and free. She soon, however, passed into a reverie when she immediately exclaimed—"I am blind! Before I was put into the bath, I could see very well and read any book, but now I cannot see at all!" From that moment, she lost her clairvoyance, and a gradual improvement took place in her health, but her convalescence was long and tedious. She recovered so far as to be able to attend to her household affairs for a few months, when she began again to decline, and died Oct. 31, 1835, aged 30 years.

NOTES IN BRIEF.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Mary Pomroy, second wife of Selah Pomroy, Esq., died April 17, 1837, in Stanstead.

At the time of her marriage, Jan. 14, 1823, she was the widow of Dea. Hubbard Lawrence, of St. Johnsbury, Vt., whom she married Feb. 22, 1801, and by whom she had nine children.

She was the daughter of Major Philip Goss, of Winchester, N.H.

Mother was the dear name of the surviving parent, and what is purer, more fixed, and enduring than a mother's love? She speaks only in accents of kindness. Her eye beams with tenderness and solicitude. Her hands minister day and night to the comfort of her offspring. Her kiss is the sweetness of parental affection. Her unceasing anxiety and untiring activity show that the world itself is less a portion to her than even a wayward child. Inestimable is the treasure of her counsels and reproof, her prayers and holy life, her parting blessing and dying testimony. Such was she whose death has been here noticed, such her love, such her life.

"Far, far beyond the reach of mortal ken,
No eye hath seen it, nor hath human pen
Portrayed the glories of that world above,
Whose very atmosphere is holy love.
Oh! 'twill be passing sweet, to meet the friend
We loved on earth, and there together bend
Before the throne eternal, and rehearse
Its untold glories in exalted verse."

"Clarissa Goss Lawrence, the beloved wife of Rev. Lucius Doolittle, minister of St. George's Church, Lennoxville, departed this life April 4, 1848, aged 45 years."

Louisa Lawrence, widow of Zelotes Hosmer, formerly of Boston and Cambridge, Mass., died July 2, 1871, in Hinsdale, Mass., aged 69 years.

Nancy Temple Wakefield, wife of Rev. John Lawrence, died suddenly of pneumonia, Jan. 6, 1871, in Reading, Mass., aged 42 years.

The last fifteen and a half years of her life were passed in the relations of wife and mother.

Such were the sweetness of her disposition and purity of her character, the accomplishments of education and graces of true piety, that she excelled in all that made her home a sanctuary and a delight; while the smile resting on her face in death was evident proof to what regions of light and bliss her spirit had gone.

" There the foot no thorn e'er pierces,
There the heart ne'er heaves a sigh,
There in white we walk with Jesus
All our loved connections by,
And to reach it 'tis a privilege to die."

THE BISHOP'S COLLEGE AT LENNOXVILLE, P.Q.

By a royal charter granted in 1852, this University was established and empowered to confer degrees in divinity, arts, law and medicine.

The Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor, Principal, and Professors of the College, with such persons as have taken certain prescribed degrees compose the Convocation of the University. The calendar for 1873 gives Hon. Edward Hale as Chancellor, and Hon. George Irvine as Vice-Chancellor. The course of study in the Theological department occupies two years, and students who have completed the same can have certificates as Licentiates in Theology.

To students residing in the College the annual expenses are from $180 to $200. Certain scholarships are in the gift of the College for the benefit of students Divinity Exhibitions, also, worth $150 each per annum.

The "Doolittle" scholarships are soon to be established, as provided by the late Rev. Lucius Doolittle, who was actively instrumental in the foundation, and one of the earliest benefactors of the College.

The Junior Department or College School was founded in 1857, and is chiefly preparatory to the course of study in College, though adapted so as to fit boys for any of the business pursuits of life. Board and tuition to be paid in advance.

The library of the College comprises about 5,000 volumes in theology and classical and general literature.

WESLEYAN COLLEGE, STANSTEAD, P. Q.

A museum containing curiosities from various countries, and specimens in Mineralogy, Numismatology, and Natural History, with philosophical instruments, &c., has a place in the main building of the College.

There are three terms in the Academic year. From the first Saturday in Sept. to Dec. 21st, or Michaelmas Term; from the third Saturday in Jan. to first Saturday in April, or Lent Term; and Trinity Term, from the first Saturday in April to the last Thursday in June, giving a month's vacation at Christmas, and two months at midsummer.

The sons of clergymen in the dioceses of Montreal and Quebec, residing in the school boarding-house, are admitted free of charge for tuition.

Prizes are awarded annually to the best students in their respective years, in classics, mathematics, and French, as found at examination in June.

THE WESLEYAN COLLEGE, STANSTEAD.

The building is of granite and brick, 142 feet in length by 52 in width, five stories high, with a wing of the same height 37 by 42 feet on the ground, and a central observatory, from which on all sides is afforded the most delightful range of views that can gratify the eye of the observer.

It has a capacity sufficient for the accommodation of the teachers, 200 boarders, and day pupils to the number of 100. The rooms and apartments are all large, well ventilated, and richly furnished.

The courses of study are such as to give a thorough English education, and prepare young persons of both sexes for College, with a special commercial and scientific course and a special course. Art, studies, &c., optional.

The collegiate department for young ladies offers an English course of three years, also a course of four years, taking in addition the modern languages, or another of same length, taking Latin and Greek in addition to English studies.

Modifications, so as to include any two of the languages pursued, are admissible.

Diplomas are given to the students completing honorably the courses of study in the ladies collegiate, the commercial, normal school, or industrial and scientific departments.

Special attention given to French, both as to reading and conversation.

Board and tuition to be paid in advance. Absence on account of sickness considered, and due allowance made.

A deduction of 12½ per cent. made in favor of the children of ministers of the gospel, also where two or more students attend from the same family, a reduction allowed.

The College year comprises four terms of ten weeks each, and closes June 29th, having holidays from Dec. 23 to Jan. 6, and vacation in summer of two months or more.

Correspondence may be addressed to the Rev. William Hansford, Governor and Secretary.

The location of this College is unrivalled for both natural scenery in variety and beauty, and for healthfulness. It is also conveniently situated for access, being connected with railways to Sherbrooke, to Montreal, to Boston, and to Springfield and New York.

THE BANK OF THE EASTERN TOWNSHIPS.

The year of incorporation of this Bank was 1855. The organization was completed in 1859, and its capital fixed at $400,000.

The officers of the Bank were:

Col. Benj. Pomroy, of Compton, President; Charles Brooks, Esq., of Lennoxville, Vice-President; William S. Foster, of Sherbrooke, Cashier.

In 1871, an addition of $100,000 was made to the capital of the Bank.

The increase in 1872 carried it to $750,000, and at the present date the Bank has a capital of $1,000,000.

With its central agency at Sherbrooke it has five branches at different places in the Eastern Townships, viz.,

At Waterloo, Wm. G. Parmelee, Manager.
“ Stanstead, A. P. Ball, Esq., “
“ Cowansville, W. I. Briggs, “
“ Coaticook, B. Austin, “
“ Richmond, A. J. Cleaveland, “

The first incorporated bank established in the Townships, its progress and present prosperity, show both the wisdom and regard for the public welfare of Col. Pomroy and others instrumental in the work, also, the safe and satisfactory manner in which the business has been conducted.

THE MASSAWIPPI VALLEY RAILWAY.

The charter for this railway was obtained through Albert Knight, Esq., for whose services in the Provincial Parliament a vote of thanks was tendered him at the first meeting of the Directors, appointed under the act of incorporation. At the same meeting held June 18, 1862, in Massawippi village, Col. Benjamin Pomroy was chosen President of the Company, D. W. Mack, Esq., Vice-President, and E. H. Le Baron, Esq., Secretary and Treasurer.

C. C. Colby, Esq., was chosen Managing Director. A meeting of shareholders was held June 25, 1863, when nine Directors were elected under the provisions of the charter, of whom Hon. A. T. Galt was chosen President, Col. Benjamin Pomroy, Vice-President; E. H. Le Baron, Secretary, and D. W. Mack, Treasurer.

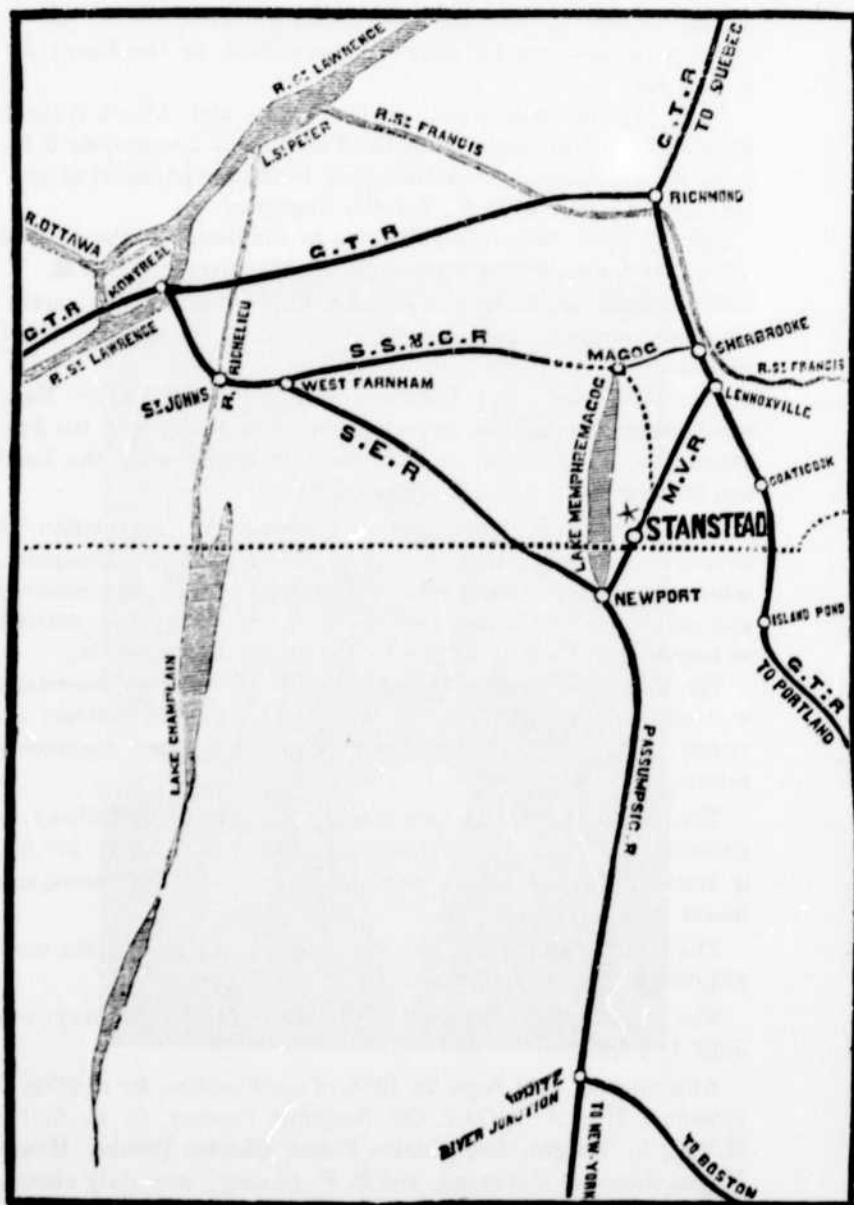

Albert Knight, C. C. Colby, and Carlos Pierce were appointed the Executive Committee for the management of business, subject to the approval of the Directors of the Company. April 28, 1864, a meeting of Directors was held which re-elected all the officers of the Company with the addition of Charles Brooks, Esq., to the Executive Committee.

In entering upon the business of construction, the line of railway was divided into three sections, the first beginning at the Province Line, the last connecting with the Grand Trunk Road at Lennoxville.

The Directors of the Company chosen Oct. 2, 1867, were the Hon. A. T. Galt, Col. Benjamin Pomroy, C. C. Colby, Albert Knight, Ozro Morrill, Charles Brooks, Gen. H. P. Adams, Stephen Foster and Carlos Pierce.

Jan. 14, 1868, Hon. A. T. Galt was re-elected President, and Col. Benj. Pomroy, Vice-President. Profile and map of spur, and report on location of main line to Ayer's Flat, were presented by Mr. Chamberlin.

The Executive Committee appointed at this meeting were instructed to meet a Committee of Directors of the Passumpsic R. R. Company, and negotiate with them upon the construction of the M. V. Railway, the running of the same, and all matters connected therewith, making the necessary provisional agreements—the same to be afterward submitted to the Board for ratification.

June 16, the same year, Carlos Pierce and Albert Knight were appointed to confer with the Directors of Passumpsic R.R., presenting resolutions, and arranging terms for payment of preliminary expenses of M. V. Railway Company.

July 30, 1868, there was submitted to the Directors the draft of a bond for leasing to the Passumpsic R. R. Company the M. V. Railway, also, one of an agreement for the construction, equipment and running of the same, and other matters connected therewith.

Hon. A. T. Galt, Col. Benjamin Pomroy, C. C. Colby, Esq., and Charles Brooks, Esq., were appointed to confer with the Passumpsic R. R. Company on all matters involved in the bond and contract above named.

This Committee subsequently reported the completion of arrangements with the Directors of the Passumpsic Company, which they were willing to accept, which report was received and adopted by the Directors of the M. V. Railway, and entered at length upon their records with the doings of the meeting.

The Vice-President, Col. Pomroy, and E. H. le Baron, Secretary were authorized and instructed to sign the bond and contract between the corporations when executed, and any other documents relating thereto.

The estimated cost of construction, &c., of M. V. Railway, or amount to be paid, was $800,000, viz., $330,000 in cash, $70,000 in stock of Company at par value, and $400,000 in first mortgage bonds.

The sum to be paid annually by the Company leasing the same $24,000 in gold, or its equivalent.

The time fixed for the completion of the M. V. Railway was July 1, 1870.

At a meeting held Sept. 30, 1868, of stockholders, for election of Directors, Hon. A. T. Galt, Col. Benjamin Pomroy, C. C. Colby, M.P.P., A. Knight, Esq., Carlos Pierce, Charles Brooks, Henry Keyes, Emmons Raymond, and B. P. Cheney, were duly chosen, who organized by electing Hon. A. T. Galt, President; Col. Benjamin Pomroy, Vice-President, and A. P. Ball, Esq., Secretary.

The Committee on Construction consisted of Henry Keyes, Emmons Raymond, and Col. Benj. Pomroy.

Sept. 29, 1869, the meeting re-elected the officers of the Company with Stephen Foster, Treasurer.

Sept. 7, 1870, a vote of thanks of the stockholders was given to Col. Pomroy, for his gratuitous services, and for the zeal shown by him in behalf of M. V. Railway Company.

A month later, the officers of the Board were re-elected, and Dec. 29, 1870, by vote of Directors, Col. Pomroy, Vice-President, and A. P. Ball, Secretary, were appointed and authorized to sign the contract of the M. V. Railway Company, and deliver the Railway to Conn. & Pass. R. R. Corporation.

The officers of the Company recently elected are Albert Knight, Esq., of Stanstead, President; R. N. Hall, Esq., Sherbrooke, Vice-President; and Stephen Foster, Esq., of Stanstead, Secretary.

The operation and management of the Railway have thus far been quite satisfactory to the public, and its increasing business and prospects are gratifying to those who gave time and money, and strength for its construction.

MAGOG.

The next work of the kind in the county, and greatly needed, is a railway from Ayer's Flat to Magog and beyond, giving access to the unlimited and unfailing water-power at Magog, which, for both quality and quantity, has nothing to compare with it in this section of the country, thus affording opportunity for business, which capital and labor would not be slow to improve.

COATICOOK.

All the advantages arising from its location on the G. T. Railway, Coaticook largely enjoys, and that increasingly every year. Other parts of the county are benefited, but Coaticook grows and is taking on new and larger forms of business, erecting more costly and commodious buildings and working up the water-power capital and enterprise of the place more and more, going quite in advance of any other part of the Townships.

A statement of the recent progress and present prospects of this place has been confidently expected in time for publication, but has not been received.

CLOSING WORDS OF THE PUBLISHER.

He is called to express his obligations to Col. Benjamin Pomroy, of Compton, for the pecuniary aid afforded in carrying the History through the press, without which the work could not have been done.

Interested alike in the labors of Mr. Hubbard, and the common advantage of the people of the County, it seemed to him that means should be used to publish the History, and bring it to the families for whose benefit it had been compiled, and it is hoped that something more than what is due Col. Pomroy will be received from the sale of copies published.

It has been the constant desire and aim to reduce as low as possible the cost of publication, and yet afford to subscribers and the public, a book in fair type, well bound, and having desirable embellishments.

The contents will be found quite reliable as to both facts and figures; while there is not, of course, that uniformity in style and language, nor such accuracy in the use of letters, words, and phrases, as mark the writing of certain authors of the age, to those most nearly interested it will, no doubt, be a very acceptable, and highly valuable book.

LONGEVITY.

The instances of persons living to a great age are many, as will be found by any one who looks for them.

They vary from 80 and 85, to 90 and 95, in frequent cases, while some have lived to be 100 years old or 105, and one Mr. A. F. J. Channel, who was born in 1748, and died in 1858, was 110 years old.

CHILDREN.

There is, too, a good proportion of families having a much larger number of children than is common at the present day. Those with 8 and 10 each are numerous. Some with 12 and 15 quite common, and a few with from 15 to 18 by the same parents.

INTERMARRIAGES.

Instances of members of two families intermarrying are quite frequent; no doubt, they were found both convenient and pleasant. So, too, for a man to marry sisters of a first wife, and three daughters of the same family, has not been found impossible.

The readers of this book will not fail to notice the additional interest given to it by the photographic prints or illustrations of Mr. West, of Derby Line, Vt.

Though mostly copied from others, and not taken from life, they are excellent likenesses of the persons whom they represent, and the publisher is happy to commend to the public the skill and success of Mr. West in his business.

THE COUNTY.

The progress, of business and enterprise has plainly depended very much upon the political changes and public improvements going forward.

The steady growth attending the labor on the farm has more than met the advance of work in the mills and shops, hence the farmers are the more hopeful class as to the prospect in the future. With favorable seasons they are sure of a good living and fair profits.

But there is a large field yet open to skill and industry, undeveloped resources and unoccupied privileges abound, and capital and labor have room to do their best.
