Quebec mum on asbestos-death data

By ROBERT DAWSON
SPECIAL TO THE RECORD

NEW YORK — The Quebec Government has taken action to hinder the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine of New York from continuing its study of the death rates among Eastern Townships asbestos workers at Thetford Mines.

This government edict takes place against a background of conflicting studies on the health situation in the Quebec asbestos industry. On June 8, Quebec's Minister of Natural Resources Yves Berube announced that, according to a government study, only two per cent of Quebec asbestos miners suffer from asbestosis, a fatal lung disease.

But Dr. William J. Nicholson of the Environmental Sciences Laboratory at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine told scientists and government officials from a dozen countries at the International Conference on Health Hazards of Asbestos Exposure held last month at Rockfeller Centre that in the past 15 years, the mortality rates among asbestos workers with 20 years experience in Thetford showed that one out of three of the deaths were caused by asbestos-related disease.

In addition, Dr. Nicholson told reporters at the conference, "the Quebec government has stopped dead in its tracks any study of mortality among Quebec asbestos miners."

In January, 1978, that Mt. Sinai team of researchers, who have been studying the health situation in Thetford Mines for a number of years, were told by the Quebec government they would no longer have access to Quebec's registry of death certificates. The scientists protested to various levels of government, including a deputy minister of social affairs, but were told records would no longer be accessible to them.

The conference examined studies on asbestos disease in Finland, Sweden, Great Britain, South Africa, Italy, Holland, France, Puerto Rico, Canada and many parts of the United States. Dr. Nicholson said when the Mt. Sinai team started their research in Quebec during the Bourassa administration, they had full access to the death certificates, as is standard practise anywhere in the world when epidemiologists are preparing statistics on causes of death.

But shortly after the Parti Quebecois government introduced legislation to purchase Asbestos Corporation, in effect making the government a producer and promoter of asbestos

Sherbrooke would lose $2 million

O'Bready attacks Hydro

MONTREAL (CP) — Municipalities that run their own electricity distribution systems expressed mixed reaction Tuesday to Energy Minister Guy Joron's announcement of plans which may lead to the purchase of the systems by Hydro-Quebec.

Jacques O'Bready, mayor of Sherbrooke and chairman of the committee representing the 20 municipalities involved, said he is not opposed to Joron's plan to establish a committee to define conditions for the eventual acquisitions.

However, O'Bready is upset at Joron's announcement that the government plans to introduce legislation in the meantime to force the municipalities to charge their clients rates no higher than those of the provincially-owned utility.

In seven of the municipalities, the electrical rates are up to 25 per cent higher than Hydro-Quebec's standard rates, and Joron says the city governments may be using the rates to hide tax increases.

O'Bready said that in Sherbrooke's case, the city stands to lose the $2 million the higher rates bring in.

In Ste. Anne-de-Bellevue, on the western tip of Montreal island, town clerk Jacques Turgeon welcomed the prospective takeover, saying that the distribution system had become too expensive for his municipality to operate.

The municipalities involved also include Joliette, Jonquiere, Westmount and Beloeil.

Synopsis

A ridge of high pressure will continue to give fair weather in the western half of the district today and Thursday. A weak cold front will move across the lower St. Lawrence today spreading a few showers or even a thundershower in those regions. The sun will shine once again tomorrow in the wake of the cold front.

Constitution group to meet across Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The six-day old committee studying the Canadian constitution made plans at its first meeting Tuesday to begin hearings August 15 in Ottawa.

The committee expects to do most of its initial work in Ottawa, but will sit in other areas later. Its first few weeks will be devoted to submissions from government witnesses, organized interest groups and constitutional experts. The public will then be invited to make submissions.

"We're far from having settled all of the problems involved, but we've set a lot of things in motion," co-chairman Mark MacGuigan, Liberal MP from Windsor-Walkerville, said after the meeting.

The committee, made up of 20 MPs and 15 senators, met for about an hour in closed session to work out its schedule and discuss how to approach the task of advising the government on the kind of constitution the country should have. It was one of the few government activities scheduled for the first day of Parliament's 14-week summer recess.

The joint Commons-Senate committee was set up last week as the first stage of the government's plan to revise the 111-year-old British North America Act. Its first task is to review the constitutional proposals presented to Parliament last month by Prime Minister Trudeau.

WILL GO BEYOND

MacGuigan made it clear his committee intends to go beyond the government's constitutional package in its recommendations.

"The best service we can do this country is use our best judgment to advise the government how to procede. We don't necessarily have to accept just what is there (in the government package)."

Flora MacDonald (PC-Kingston and the Islands), a member of the committee, went a step further: "We don't look at the government bill as the one that's going to be passed. We're studying a broad general subject."

MacGuigan, who eight years ago acted as co-chairman for a similar joint committee for a new constitution, smiled when he told reporters "there is a pleasant irony in looking at this again."

The other co-chairman of that 1970 committee, Senator Maurice Lamontagne, is also repeating his role on the new committee.

MacGuigan said he expects more attention will be paid to the new committee's recommendations because the mood of the country has changed since 1972, when the previous committee finished its work.

Levesque raps Napoleon for Louisiana sale

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque threw a banquet for about 200 Franco-American visitors Tuesday, and took the opportunity to regale them with criticism of Napoleon Bonaparte for selling Louisiana to the United States.

Louisiana was explored and settled by people from Quebec, and the French colony there numbered about 4,000 by the middle of the 18th century, Levesque noted.

The colony's population swelled further after the Acadians were deported from what now is Nova Scotia in 1755, but then Napoleon sold Louisiana, and French culture was soon reduced to folkloric status upon integration into the United States.

Although the Quebec government has assisted Louisiana in trying to revive its French heritage in recent years, the premier said, the French renaissance is primarily due to the "remarkable tenacity" of the Cajuns and above all to "the extraordinary work of James Domengeaux."

Singers protest Canadian label

MONTREAL (CP) — Three of Quebec's leading pop singers say they don't want their work included in a recording of "The Greatest Canadian Authors" because they consider themselves Quebecers, not Canadians.

Felix Leclerc, Raymond Levesque and Gilles Vigneault appeared in Superior Court Tuesday to request an interlocutory injunction against several record companies which had wanted to distribute their work to coincide with the recentlyconcluded Canada Week celebrations.

The three obtained a temporary injunction barring distribution on June 28, and want the ban made permanent on the grounds that they have not given copyright permission for use of the songs.

It came as a shock, Leclerc testified, to learn that his name was being associated with the cause of "Canadian unity."

"We are just about to have our own country," he said. "And they (federalists) are making a mountain of publicity, shuffling the cards on the eve of the independence referendum.

"We've left the perfumed paths of poetry, and now we're face to face with hard reality."

Raymond Levesque said he had always been an advocate of Quebec independence and could not stand to see his name used as part of the Canada Week celebrations.

A worker at Henri Martineau's recycling plant weighs some of the three tons of magazines and newspapers deposited at the plant each week.

WASTE-PAPER RECYCLING BECOMES BIG BUSINESS

By DAVID VINEBERG

SHERBROOKE — Yellowish sand dunes usually remind one of the desert but an assortment of tires, bottles and cans nosing out of the soft ground reveal a wasteland known otherwise as the Sherbrooke municipal dump.

As the Record's dump correspondent, I am visiting Henri Martineau's paper recycling center located on a quarter-acre plot in the corner of the dump.

If you have ever wondered where the paper in that notebook that says "made with recycled paper" comes from or wondered where those old magazines you gave to the pollution drive went, this has to be the place.

All kinds of paper, from girlie rags to cardboard are strewn over the plant floor. Trucks back into the corrugated steel structure, barely able to raise their load without touching the ceiling.

Martineau, a stocky man in his late forties, knows exactly what's going on even though it appears to be sheer confusion. Walking easily over the paper-covered floor, around moving forklift and behind a dump truck, Martineau comes back with a handful of magazines.

Each week, three tons of magazines get deposited at his plant by local magazine distributors after the new editions come out. Playboy, Time, Popular Mechanics, you name it, it's on the floor.

The paper is divided into grouping according to quality and then loaded into a crude-looking baler. The machine crunches the paper -- heaven help anyone who gets in the way - and then workers nimbly wire the compacted paper into a bundle. The wire is tightened, forming compressed cubes which are then lifted by forklift truck to a scale.

The bales, weighing from 1200 pounds to a ton each, are then set aside for shipment to pulp and paper giants like Domtar and Consolidated Bathurst. Martineau said his business is very dependent on the pulp and paper industry and right now things are quiet in that industry.

Nonetheless, Martineau has 31 recycling centers in the province and he hopes to expand. He has sites in Montreal, Pont Rouge, Matane, Thetford Mines and Portneuf as well as other locations.

Martineau soon hopes to move out of his leased premises and into a new 117-acre site in Sherbrooke. The new plant will be fully automated and will employ 25 people, twice as many as he does now. Currently, 122 collectors, mostly small and local, bring paper to his plant.

Lack of space at the current plant has its disadvantages. The readied bales are kept outside and often paper flies out of the wiring when the wind blows. Martineau hires a worker whose sole responsibility is retrieving the loose paper.

Once settled in the new site, Martineau hopes to diversify into other recycling fields. The new plant will eventually be able to recycle aluminum, rubber, plastics and copper as well as making wood chips.

As far as Martineau's concerned, recycling is a growth industry with a good future. He feels Quebec's new environment policy can only help him.

Martineau has been in the recycling business since 1940 and he surprised me when he said his first customer had been the Sherbrooke Record when it was on Wellington St.

In the past his recycling plant has aided anti-pollution group campaigns. During Massawippi River Week, a trailer was placed at the Lennoxville IGA to receive paper. Martineau processed the 3.2 tons of paper gathered during the week, only a small fraction of his average weekly volume.

Appeals court blocks Treu bid

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal blocked the federal government's attempt Tuesday to raise the veil of secrecy over a court ruling that convicted Alexander Peter Treu of violating the Official Secrets Act.

A three-judge appeals panel unanimously rejected a federal motion to have the May 28 ruling by Judge Luc Trudel made public. They cited objections by Treu himself.

The judges noted it is was paradoxical for Treu to argue against his own "sacred right" to publicity while the government was seemingly trying to protect it.

But defence lawyer Michel Chabot argued forcefully that the ruling should not be published unless testimony given during his client's secret trial was also released.

Judge Trudel's ruling focussed on evidence supporting the conviction and would convey a distorted impression to the public unless the testimony referred to was also published, he said. The conviction is being appealed.

"People who read the judgment will say he is guilty, no doubt about it. I am appealing. The interest of justice . . . should, above all, be to protect my client."

Chabot accused Ottawa of playing politics in the case and of trying to draw the courts into its strategy of cooling the controversy surrounding the trial.

The federal prosecutor had originally requested that the judgment be kept secret.

The sudden change of mind came, Chabot said, because of fierce criticism of the Trudeau government's handling of the case by Tory MP Gerald Baldwin.

Gaulin... a spot in the 'Quebec limelight'

MONTREAL (CP) — By winning the presidency of the Centrale de l'Enseignement du Quebec (CEQ) last week, Robert Gaulin has guaranteed himself a place in the Quebec limelight.

As leader of the CEQ, the militant labor voice of 80,000 French-speaking teachers, he becomes one of the province's so-called Big Three labor leaders along with Louis Laberge, head of the 285,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor, and Norbert Rodrigue of the 200,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions.

The CEQ is also readying for province-wide negotiations with the government next year, so Gaulin's leadership is likely to affect labor relations in the period leading up to the Parti Quebecois's planned independence referendum.

Gaulin, 39, a veteran backroom strategist virtually unknown to the public, received support from an unusual coalition of PQ sympathizers, extreme leftists and conservatives to beat incumbent Yvon Charbonneau 333 to 281 at the CEQ's 26th general convention.

Indications are much of that support was an expression of disenchantment with Charbonneau, who headed the CEQ since 1970 and was responsible for its Marxist and anti-government image.

BACKS INDEPENDENCE

Gaulin, a former member of the New Democratic Party who describes himself as a socialist and a supporter of Quebec independence, said he won't allow any of his beliefs to get in the way of the union's priorities, particularly concerning next year's contract talks.

Observers say the PQ militants who flocked to Gaulin were disenchanted with the battles Charbonneau had been waging with the current government. With the referendum just over the horizon, they wanted to reduce the risk of a major confrontation over negotiations.

"Although Gaulin is really the same person politically as Charbonneau, he is perceived by many to be more moderate," said Donald Peacock, president of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers.

"As a result, I'm sure the Parti Quebecois cabinet is delighted . . . but they're going to get a shock, because Gaulin is his own man."

Gaulin, who managed province-wide contract talks in 1972 and again in 1975-76, was the CEQ member of the common front of labor unions that brought together the province's teachers and thousands of non-professional hospital workers for negotiation purposes.

NO BEER TODAY...

Last week an O'Keefe truck was crossing the railway tracks in Bedford when its frame gave away. No one was hurt, but 650 cases of beer had to be unloaded from the truck before it could be towed away. The job took three hours.

Occupational injuries probed

OTTAWA (CP) — Recent figures on work accidents show one Canadian worker suffers a disabling injury every 16 seconds.

Dr. Paul Rohan, a McGill University specialist on occupational health and safety, says in a 10-year-study on work accidents that 222 workers suffered such injuries every hour and 1,766, every day in 1976.

"Disabling work injuries have increased in Canada since 1968, with a peak in 1974 and moderate drops in 1975-76," he says. "The moderate drop since 1974 is most likely the result of job losses by employees with the least experience (and thus a high work injury frequency) who are the first to be laid off."

A total of 8.85 million injuries and 10,353 deaths resulted from work accidents during that period, his study shows.

"About one-third of fatalities from occupational diseases in 1975-76 were in manufacturing, while over half of the deaths occurred in the mining industry," Dr. Rohan says.

ONTARIO HIGHEST

Ontario accounted for nearly one-third of occupational deaths, Quebec 25 per cent, the Prairies and Maritimes 30 per cent and British Columbia 17 per cent, the report says.

"Indeed, accidents are the third leading cause of death in the world population as a whole, preceded only by cardiovascular (heart) disease and cancer."

Industries where injury rates were the highest included construction, wood and forestry, metallurgy, mining, chemical industry and trucking, the study says. No statistics were provided in the study.

Most frequently seen accidents resulted from handling heavy objects, falls, impact or collision, mishandling machinery or hand tools, burns, electrical hazards and poisoning.

Back and spine injuries topped the list for several provinces, Dr. Rohan says.

Moreover, the average total cost of work injuries amounts to more than $1.5 billion a year.

Although a Canadian centre for occupational health and safety was established by Parliament in late April, it is neither a government department nor a Crown corporation and will have no regulatory powers.

PROMOTE SAFETY

Labor Minister John Munro, responsible for the centre, says it is designed to promote health and safety in the Canadian work place.

Ontario carpenters walk out

TORONTO (CP) — About 14,000 Ontario carpenters went on strike yesterday and will remain off the job until at least Friday, a spokesman for the United Brotherhod of Carpenters and Joiners of America has said.

Derek Manson, a member of the union negotiation committee, denied the union has a tentative agreement with the Employers' Bargaining Agency.

He said a meeting in Kitchener late Saturday resulted only in a proposal from the employers.

On Saturday, William Stevanovich, chairman of the union bargaining committee, was quoted as saying negotiators for both sides had reached a tentative settlement but the strike could not be called off because of the holiday weekend and the number of union locals across the province.

However, in an interview yesterday from Cambridge, Stevanovich said there was no tentative agreement.

"Everybody was calling it something—tentative settlement, tentative agreement . . . let me say that after the meeting we had the final position of both parties."

NO DETAILS

No details of either proposal were released.

Manson said the employers' proposal goes before the union negotating committee today and before the union steering committee on Thursday.

A key issue in the dispute is the union's demand that jurisdictional disputes be settled by a union management board in Washington, D.C., instead of by the Ontario Labor Relations Board.

Union officials said money is a secondary issue.

Wages vary across the province by as much as $3 an hour. In Toronto, the hourly wage under the old contract is $11.55 an hour.

The union and construction associations have been bargaining jointly under new provincial legislation which requires province-wide bargaining by trades in the construction industry.

Final ratification of any contract by union membership might not occur for 10 days but the steering committee could send strikers back to work after Thursday's meeting if it approves the employers' offer.

Manson said the strike will not result in picket lines at all construction sites. In most areas, picket lines are set up only to notify other trades that carpenters are on strike and that no carpentry work is to be done, he said.

However, construction on at least two sites in Sault Ste. Marie halted yesterday when other tradesmen refused to cross carpenters' picket lines.

Energy tips for cottage owners...

For many of us the Canadian way of life means "getting away from it all" on weekends to a lakefront cottage, cabin in the woods, or ski chalet.

How can you save energy on these vacation and weekend excursions? Well, you can start by doing many of the things you do at home: watch the lights, turn off the TV, use the stove economically and so on.

You can try to economize on travel to and from your holiday spot. Maybe two families in the same area can share the trips - like a car pool. Here are more ways to save:

SAVINGS AT THE COTTAGE

BOATS:

If you're near a lake, chances are you own a boat of some type and if you have a family that enjoys water skiing, you need a larger and more powerful motor. But you don't have to use this big one all the time. What do you use to go fishing early in the morning? Or to go on a little sightseeing trip? A smaller motor is more economical and will get you wherever you want to go. Perhaps not as quickly, but you'll have more time to relax — isn't that the whole idea?

HOT WATER HEATER:

When you're heading home from the cottage be sure to turn off the hot-water heater. It's an energy waste to keep water hot that isn't needed, and it won't take long to heat up when you return.

HEATING:

Some heating units, particularly electrical ones, can be turned off at the unit; others have a thermostat that says "warm". If the weather turns cool, the heater will come on and this is a waste in summer if the cottage is empty. Check to see if your unit can be turned off completely; if not, switch it off at the main fuse-box.

FALL CLOSE-UP:

There are a few points to check when you leave for the last time in the fall if you don't use the cottage in winter. Drain the water from all taps. Defrost and unplug the refrigerator; be sure it's dry and leave the door slightly ajar. Turn off the main electric power switch as a double check that nothing has been left on.

SAVINGS IN THE KITCHEN

One of the biggest energy consuming rooms in your home is the kitchen. It's a good place to look for ways to save money. There are many promising appliances on the market to lighten your workload, but before you buy a new item, ask yourself three simple questions:

1. DO I REALLY NEED THIS APPLIANCE? How often will it be used? Could I share it with friends or neighbors? Can I do the job manually or with an appliance I already own? Is there an alternative that won't conserve energy?

2. CAN I AVOID THOSE ENERGY-DRAINING FRILLS? There's no doubt that I need the basic refrigerator and stove, but do I really need a butter warmer, an ice cube dispenser, an electric knife, or an electric toothbrush?

3. WHAT WILL THE APPLIANCE COST ME IN ENERGY AND CASH TO OPERATE? What's the power requirement over a year? Is there a more efficient unit with a lower operating cost?

At a time when energy consumption is important and many people are questioning the value of owning a lot of gadgets, take a moment to honestly assess your needs. Will a host of appliances really liberate you from kitchen work? These are questions of personal choice and only you can answer them.

ENERGUIDE

The Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is developing an energy-labelling program for consumers. In 1978, ENERGUIDE labels will begin to appear on all household refrigerators, stoves, clothes washers, dryers, freezers, dish washers, and air conditioners.

These labels will allow you to compare the monthly energy consumption of products before you buy. Watch for them.

There's an old expression 'Good things come in small packages' and today it has more meaning than ever. Bigger has been better for a long time, but we're beginning to see the folly of this logic. It's time to stop buying the products that come in big, flashy packaging. We pay dearly for all that over-packaging.

Let's just look at deodorants, one product that many of us buy. Most packages contain perhaps five tablespoons of liquid. We pay for that. Then we pay the guy who designs the package — he understands and plays on our basic instinct to acquire, using all the right shapes and colours in his design. Next we pay for the clever advertisements that convince us we cannot live without this stuff in the gaily-coloured package. Then we pay for the materials that make up the package — and we pay for them more than once. What becomes of the cellophane or plastic wrap, the cardboard box, and the plastic or glass container with its little roll-on ball? Or the aerosol cans which, until recently, have used a gas propellant that disrupted our environment? These packages don't just quietly decompose and revert to the soil — no, they are made of durable and usually non-biodegradable materials that last long after you've rolled on that last drop of Secret or sprayed that last gasp of Right Guard.

If all adults in the Sherbrooke area buy and dispose of three or four deodorant containers in a year, we're up to half a million appealing little pieces of garbage. Now deodorants are but one product sold to us in wasteful packaging — try to think of others... And think before you buy them... Do I really need this? Which brand comes in the most economical and ecological package? Obviously, we must buy our daily needs in containers. But these containers could be recycled — either reused in their present form or crushed, melted, or shredded to be made into something else.

Beer bottles are a fine example of good packaging. These bottles are uniform in size and shape so any brewery can reuse any beer bottle sold in Quebec — it's a simple matter of putting on a new label. These bottles are used an average of twenty times. This makes much more sense than the one-way beer cans which wind up in your garbage or, worse, on the roadside after one use. You may not be a beer drinker, but all of us buy soda pop or fruit drinks and these almost always come in "one-way" containers.

We must refuse "one-way" or "no deposit-no return" whenever we can. And we must tell our merchants and manufacturers that we want returnable containers.

Some containers are handy to keep. Plastic ice cream and margarine tubs can be reused for storing food in your fridge, holding food waste until you can put it out on your compost heap, storing kids' crayons or Lego or puzzle pieces. Glass jars are handy for home-made jellies, herbs from the garden, or odd buttons. But we can't possibly keep ALL of these containers — we'd be swimming in them in no time. If we multiply all the non-returnable packages in your garbage can times the number of households in the Sherbrooke area, we begin to see that we ARE swimming in them. Our dumps are full of perfectly good containers that represent lost energy and resources.

Unfortunately, there are no facilities for recycling in this region — we will have to demand them. We must tell our merchants and manufacturers that we want recycleable packages and recycling systems. We must tell them we don't want any more waste in the manufacture of packaging that goes straight to the dump, which is already too full.

The first step is to think before you buy, the second is to think before you throw things away and the third, is to contact the community Conservation Centre in your area to find out more about recycling and energy conservation.

Husky comment "inappropriate"

TORONTO (CP) — The head of Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. says he doubts there is basis for a statement by the president of the Toronto Stock Exchange that 45 per cent of the people were left in the cold in the Alberta Gas acquisition of a 35-per-cent interest in Husky Oil Ltd.

Robert Blair, president of the Calgary-based company, says in a letter to Pearce Bunting, president of the Toronto exchange, that the comment by Bunting last week was inappropriate.

Bunting had said he was concerned "that for whatever narrow legal reasons, 45 per cent of the people were left out in the cold."

Under rules of the exchange, a company that has acquired 10 per cent of the shares of a chartered Canadian company such as Husky is obliged to restrict additional purchases to five per cent of the issued stock or make a formal take-over offer to shareholders.

Grape-growers battle herbicide

VANCOUVER (CP) — Angry vineyard owners in the grapegrowing country of south central Washington state are battling grain farmers' extensive use of the herbicide 2,4-D which they say has led to crop losses running into the millions of dollars.

Snake River Vineyards in Pasco, Washington's largest grower with 10 per cent of the state's total grape crop, lost $1 million last year due to 2,4-D spraying by area grain farmers, vineyard manager Gary Scrimsher said this week.

"Farmers are bitter and they're mad—every year it's the same story," he said.

Wayne Steele of Pasco said 2,4-D consistently has cut his grape crops by at least half for the past seven years. This year his damage is the most extensive ever.

"Growers in B.C. and Washington should get together because we can't go on taking these losses and not knowing what the effect is on our health," Charlotte Steele said.

IBM moves for mistrial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Citing a jury deadlock, International Business Machine Corp. asked this week that a mistrial be declared in the $1-billion anti-trust suit filed against the computer giant by Memorex Corp.

The motion is being considered by U.S. District Court Judge Samuel Conti.

It said the six men and five women jurors have been unable to reach a "reasoned verdict after full consideration of all the evidence, and that any verdict that would result from further deliberations would not reflect the conscientious judgment of each individual juror, but would be the result of a capitulation of judgment to the more adamant faction within the jury, whichever that should be."

Joron announces Hydro plan

QUEBEC (CP) — Energy Minister Guy Joron has announced a plan which he hopes will lead to the purchase by Hydro-Quebec of 20 municipally-owned electrical distribution systems valued at an estimated $150 million.

Joron said Tuesday that a committee has been set up to define the evaluation criteria and the conditions for acquisition of systems in Sherbrooke, Joliette, Jonquiere, Westmount, Ste. Anne-de-Bellevue and Beloeil, Que.

The criteria established by the committee will be the basis of future negotiations between Hydro-Quebec and the municipalities involved, he said.

B.C. beer strike continues

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia drinkers can expect some relief from the current beer drought this week, a Liquor Distribution Branch (LDB) spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman said the LDB ordered 100,000 cases of Schlitz beer from the United States, and the branch is also "taking all we can get" from Olympia beer, the only other U.S. beer listed by the LDB.

Hotel managers contacted Monday said they expected the suds to be in their pubs today.

Meanwhile, the strike-lockout in the province's beer industry continued. There have been no talks between breweries and the union since Wednesday when Molson employees voted 99 per cent in favor of rejecting the brewing industry's last contract offer.

The lockout, involving four breweries, began June 8 after union workers at Carling went on strike May 26.

Galt group raps education policy

Green paper 'unspecific'

By PAT TRACY

The recent green paper on education is "couched in terms which, whilst appearing to substantiate certain statements, are in fact anything but specific," says a study group from AGRHS.

In remarks made to the public hearings on the paper at McGill on June 15, Peter Brown, on behalf of the School Committee of Alexander Galt Regional High School, said that the PQ government's plan for reforms in secondary education "could be rather premature."

While the school committee agreed with several proposals included in the paper, they were opposed to the emphasis placed on a move toward "distinctive personalities" in schools while at the same time restricting the power of the local school boards.

"That our schools - Alexander Galt Regional High School and Richmond Regional High School - already have the distinctive personalities so ardently desired by the authors of the green paper, is due entirely to the fact that inadmissible expenditures can now be financed at the local level. In short, the adoption of (the appropriate working hypotheses) is as retrograde, not progressive."

The green paper stresses parental involvement in all aspects of school life. While the local school committee feels that this is perhaps the document's greatest asset, they warn against "passing that point where involvement would become interference."

"...we do not consider parental involvement in study days to be practical. The decision-making powers of parents should be confined to rulings upon the type of information to be stored in a student's file and where severe disciplinary measures are required. These are areas where the rights of students are naturally invoked and the parent is automatically involved since the majority of students are legal minors."

One of the possibilities examined in the green paper would be for one regional body to have jurisdiction over a number of public services which would include education, health, leisure, housing, public transportation and planning development. The local committee "is adamant that education should be the sole concern of a governing body and should not be included as one area of responsibility competing for funds and priorities" with other areas.

Likewise they oppose the elimination of taxing power of the local school boards. The group would like to see increased board responsibility in the areas of course content, textbooks and school leaving examinations.

The brief goes on to explain that the school committee is satisfied with their current board structure and that it could be used as a model for the entire province. Under the present board organization all groups such as school committees and staff councils all have direct access to the Board. Other committees also exercise "disinterested control".

While the school committee is in favor of increased instruction in a second language, they stipulate that "there must be no reduction in time for first language and mathematics teaching to compensate for this."

Another provision of the green paper is to extend the length of the technical and vocational program from two years to three. In the past graduates from these programs have had difficulty getting recognized by the appropriate parity committees. According to the brief, there is no indication that the extension of this program would increase recognition of the students.

The school committee feels that use of a French lexicon, where applicable, and French instruction in certain subjects would be beneficial for these students.

The group objects to the minister of education being the supreme authority. "This causes us grave concern, particularly in matters of evaluation. We consider this contrary to the aims of the green paper in which the local character of the school is stressed."

Where to begin?

This young North Bay student is looking a mite confused as she confronts her first day of immersion in another culture.

A group of 22 students and their teachers from North Bay, Ontario, arrived at Le Triolet school Monday for a two-week-long exchange program. During the program, financed by a federal government grant, English and French students will be paired to learn more about each other's language and culture. Through various activities such as visits to a zoo and camping trips, the children will be taught words and phrases in their second language. This program is one of two at Le Triolet; the seniors plan to visit North Bay later in the summer.

Voyageur running despite strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Intercity bus service went on more or less normally Tuesday despite a strike by 130 ticket agents, switchboard operators and messengers that partially shut down the Voyageur terminal here and forced bus companies to operate from the adjacent street.

Pickets arrived to prevent vehicles from entering or leaving the station yard in the city's east end early Tuesday morning, but company officials said that even with passengers boarding in the street, there were only minor delays.

"We haven't missed a departure yet," Voyageur sales director Roland Besner said.

Joffre Bridge repairs begun

SHERBROOKE (PT) — The Joffre Bridge across the St. Francis River will undergo renovation beginning July 4. The repairs, which will cost about $374,958 not including the repairs to the viaduct, will involve changing the pavement, the railings and the lighting fixtures.

The bridge will be reduced to one or two lanes and motorists are asked to be patient and observe the speed limit of eight mph. No heavy vehicles will be permitted on the bridge while renovation is going on.

Dixville water safe again

QUEBEC (PT) — The provincial environment protection service has announced that residents of Dixville no longer have to boil their drinking water. Recent bacteriological tests conducted by the protection service, indicate that the water is now safe for drinking.

Meanwhile, the director of the service reminds municipalities that they must keep a close surveillance on operations related to the disinfection of drinking water.

Border swim program underway

ROCK ISLAND (CT) — The Three Villages and vicinity Swim School began their eight weeks of water safety and swimming instruction at Salem Lake Beach, June 26.

Although the executive, under the presidency of Albert Simoneau, have been endeavoring to have the bus which picks up the youngsters cross the Border to Stanstead and Beebe and Rock Island, the permit has not yet come through from the Transportation Department. The committee is continuing their action and will announce the outcome when it is confirmed.

The total registration for the day was 180 youngsters.

Oralie Palin of Newport is in charge of the beach and teaching American Red Cross skills; Robin Smith is in charge of teaching Canadian skills. Other staff include Lorille Beauregard, James Curtis, Richard Parent, Jacques Vachon, Brad Moss and Mariette Beaulac.

The project will cost about $5,000 to operate the season.

Gaz du Quebec issues warning

SHERBROOKE — Following the termination of its propane air gas distribution service Sunday. Gaz du Quebec, Inc., directs its former customers to refrain from removing gas piping and equipment still in place.

The price of a two-storey, four bedroom brick house, five to eight years old, 2½ bathrooms, family room with fireplace, and two car attached garage remained at $76,000.

The house price survey, published three times a year, reflects Royal Trust's estimate of "fair market value" and is based on opinion and data from across Canada.

EX-MAYOR BUREAU HEADS CHU DRIVE

SHERBROOKE — Well-known businessman and ex-mayor of Sherbrooke, Marc Bureau, has agreed to chair the former patients fund-raising committee for the Sherbrooke University Hospital Center, set up to invite former patients to support the objectives of the Fondation du CHUS Inc.

President of Bureau & Bureau Inc., and Vice President of the provincial marketing body known as Les Magasins Prestige Ltee, Bureau notes that "during the past ten years, research and education conducted by the Faculty of Medicine, in addition to the very sophisticated instrumentation and equipment used at the Hospital Center, have contributed considerably to the high quality of the health care services provided to patients at the CHUS."

"However, budgetary constraints imposed by the government are such that there is danger that this level of service cannot be maintained. It is urgent that the funds required to renew essential scientific equipment and to develop existing or future services be found. This is the objective that the Foundation of the CHUS has set for itself."

Mr. Bureau who for many years was very active in many associations in the diocese of Sherbrooke, feels confident that the "Foundation can count on the generous support of patients to insure the quality of services that all should rightfully expect to receive." He would like to remind former patients that "if the CHUS has helped them, their thanks can help others.

The main objective of the Fondation du CHUS Inc. is to secure funds from each level within our society in order to maintain the CHUS in its dual role as both a highly specialized health care institution and as a teaching hospital.

To this end, the Foundation solicits and accepts donations, bequests and other voluntary contributions. Funds will be allocated according to the requirements for equipment and human resources, as expressed by the CHUS Board of Directors. The Foundation will provide funds for the purchase of replacement equipment, for the development of new services or the expansion of existing services and clinical research projects.

Park renamed after Bureaus

From now on, the Sherbrooke parish of Marie-Reine-du Monde park will be Parc Bureau—the city of Sherbrooke's gift to the Bureaus, about 1,000 of whom gathered here this past weekend to celebrate their 300th anniversary.

Although Sherbrooke provided a large Bureau contingent, they also came from other parts of the Eastern Townships, as well as the Beauce, the Mauricie, New York, New Mexico, California, Haiti, Brazil and even Nantes, France, which is the family cradle.

The family get-together celebrating 300 years of history would have done proud by their ancestor, Louis Bureau dit Sansoucy, who arrived in New France from France. Family members ranged from plain country folk to world travellers on a large scale, the diversity of backgrounds and characters more than substantial material for lively conversations over the two-day period.

Weekend claims three

Accidents claimed three lives in the Townships over the holiday weekend. Roger Judge, 25, of Lennoxville died Saturday after his car went out of control on Route 143 between Lennoxville and North Hatley. Judge, who died in Hotel Dieu Hospital, was alone in the car when it went off the road and struck a guard rail.

Shannon O'Brien, of Sutton died accidentally on Friday, however a spokesman for the Surete Quebec in Dunham would not release the details until the official report had been completed.

Paul Bernard Goodhue, 34, of Frelighsburg was killed instantly when his plane lost a wing and crashed in a field near St. Mathias Saturday. Goodhue was performing solo acrobatics when a wing broke from the plane and caused the accident. The plane landed near a house, but no other injuries were reported.

Constant change marks retarded kids' program

By PAT TRACY

Two years after its humble beginnings, the MAS-MEQ project — an education program for retarded children in the Eastern Townships — is still changing constantly, but staff and teachers now feel secure, knowing that they are doing the right thing.

Under the plan, sponsored jointly by the Ministry of Social Affairs and the Education Ministry, the Eastern Townships Regional School Board has taken responsibility for the education of the residents of the Butters and the Dixville homes. The ETRSB has rented space wherever they could get it, and classes are held for the children in Dixville, Magog and Sherbrooke.

A number of students were also sent to Alexander Galt, but according to Josee Rourke, principale of the program, this is not working out as well as they had hoped.

The residents are divided according to potential and social levels and attend classes suited to them. A few teachers and staff members remain behind at the homes to instruct those children who cannot leave. Ms. Rourke stresses that these classes do not concentrate on academics, but rather on life skills such as independence. "Many of these people are capable of existing in the community, perhaps not on their own, but in group homes," she said.

Since the beginning of the program, Butters staff has noticed a change in the children. Ms. Rourke attributes this to the enthusiasm of the staff and the fact that the students are getting away from the home as well as the program itself.

Garnier School in Sherbrooke is being used by the Butters Home as a learning centre for low functioning children. Although the program there began with Butters residents only, children from the community were admitted this year.

Donna Houseman is involved with the developmental program for these children at the school. Norman Houle, a sensory motor developmentalist from Montreal, has examined the residents to determine their learning potential. From this evaluation, he has designed an individual program to cater to each of the student's needs.

Ms. Houseman and her co-workers will begin implementing the programs during the summer.

Anyone interested in giving some of their time to the project should contact Josee Rourke, Coordinator of Special Education, at the ETRSB offices, 257 Queen Street in Lennoxville. Staff members suggest that the volunteers be physically active because the program will involve a lot of crawling and creeping with the children.

Golden eggs

Up until two weeks ago, Charles Marion was the victim of a kidnapping with more questions to it than a New York Times crossword and Gould was a quiet backwater of a town somewhere between Sherbrooke and Megantic.

Since then, an unprecedented tourist boom has hit Gould, as more than a thousand people a day streamed into the town over the weekend. Local stores and services are blooming under this injection of cold cash into the local economy, while others are kicking themselves for not getting in on the ground floor the day the news of the hideout's location broke.

Meanwhile, Mr. Marion has become a true 1970's hero, the stoic survivor of 82 hellish days in a dank pit in the middle of nowhere. While there are those who question a middle-aged, sedentary banker's ability to stay alive under such conditions for 12 weeks, let alone retain his sanity, many see Mr. Marion's sojourn in the tiny dungeon as a testimonial to man's ability to survive if he wants to.

We're sorry to see the uncontrolled hordes traipsing merrily through the underbrush and littering the area with chocolate-bar wrappers, used flashbulbs and the usual tourist detritus. Why could there not be an effort to preserve Mr. Marion's prison? At the very least, guides should prevent the masses from caving in the cunningly-constructed roof, which is bound to happen any day now if it hasn't already.

Like we said, Gould is enjoying a tourist boom. We can see the burgeoning of an entire industry surrounding the Marion kidnapping, from tours of the Stoke cottage and the Lennoxville and Stornoway dropoff points to where Mr. Marion was released, culminating in a visit to the pit.

Why kill the goose laying all those golden eggs?

JAMES DUFF

Canine lesson

Canada day was celebrated in varying fashions across this fair land last Saturday. Steel bands leading a parade down Montreal's St. Catherine St., three-legged races at Stanbridge East and Knowlton, Hans Steingruber and his band of merry-makers livened up East Farnham, while other types of festivities captured the hearts and minds of others throughout the Townships.

Ethnic and religious differences were forgotten during a day of civilized revelry, especially in the hearts of the children who are too young to understand the reasoning of those who wish to divide our magnificent country.

We found it rather enigmatic on the eve of our celebration of 111 years of existence to hear four avowed separatists singing along with a juke box as the machine pounded out "America the Beautiful". We could, however, understand their reasoning when the next selection was: "I Did it My Way."

Had they ever seen the "purple mountained majesty" of our Rocky Mountains, "the endless fields of grain" of Saskatchewan? The fog lifting along the eastern shore of Nova Scotia, the shimmering reflection of gold which gave the Bras d'Or Lakes of Cape Breton their name? The slow streaming majesty of the St. John River as it wends its way down through New Brunswick, the breathtaking descent into the village of Perce on the Gaspe coast which makes some of the breathless splendor of the Cabot Trail pale by comparison?

The 28-foot tides near the head of the Saguenay River? Montreal at night from an aircraft during the Christmas period with all the decorations throwing a glow of hope skywards? The Thousand Islands between Gananoque and Brockville at dawn?

The magnificence of that inland sea -- Lake Superior as the Laurentian Shield ends? Lake of the Woods, the undulating prairies through Manitoba and Saskatchewan to the foothills of the Rocky Mountains? The tremendous gash of the valley of the Fraser River cutting through to the Pacific?

All this is a part of our proud heritage which some would rend asunder in the name of preservation of culture.

We can recall in our teens looking out over a park in Kenogami where a flagpole stood front and centre. In the winter it resembled the hub of a bicycle wheel with at least fifty to sixty separate dog paths etched in the snow as the canine members of that society met every morning.

The same animals would have fought to keep a stranger off their territorial limits, yet met in peace every day in their ritual 'blessing' of the pole before they departed on their appointed rounds.

That's unity, friends. Maybe we could learn a bit from our four-legged friends!

If we all knew the majesty of Canada we would be more inclined to assure its continued survival as a single entity.

KEITH SPICER COMMENTS

Blazing saddles: West and the Constitution

Westerners, even more than most Canadians, would be content with a federal government that collected taxes more slowly and delivered the mail faster.

Reforming the constitution, they believe, belongs on the scale of importance laid down by late Saskatchewan premier Ross Thatcher: out of 100 priorities, the constitution would be 101.

That, until last week, was the accepted wisdom. But the scalded-cat reaction of all four western provinces to Pierre Trudeau's constitutional game plan points to new times. Home-on-the-range indifference is giving way to a Blazing Saddles commitment to change.

What, in outline, is the Prime Minister offering the West? However imperfectly, a chance to resist the two bugabears fuelling western discontent since John Diefenbaker was a boy: political feebleness in Ottawa and an eastern-colonized economy.

Westerners whose knee-jerk reflex to preambles and jurisdictions is to call them another sop to Quebec had better think again. Mr. Trudeau's proposals do very little for Quebec -- or at least to meet Quebecers' non-partisan wish to entrench their province's cultural uniqueness in some kind of special status.

This time, for perhaps the first time, Mr. Trudeau's proposals take dead aim on western wants and interests. Consider:

A new Upper House boosting western representation from 24 to 36,

Half of these 36 seats will be filled not by the Prime Minister (as in today's Senate) but by provincial legislature;

The new Upper House (House of the Federation) will have power to delay federal legislation hurting western (or other) interests. It will also be asked to approve appointments to the Supreme Court (enlarged partly to mirror western views) and to some regulatory agencies dealing with vital western interests;

Constitutionally binding federal payments to the provinces: Ottawa's repeated arbitrary cut-offs of such funds has bred the bitter view among western politicians that almost any new federal funding is a time-bomb for provincial budgets;

Did all this make the western premiers happy? Well, let's say constructively trigger happy.

In Manitoba, Tory premier Sterling Lyon played yahoo politics with the monarchy by twisting Trudeau's housekeeping changes for the Governor-General into "sliding towards the presidential system." Like Rene Levesque's local hero, James Richardson, he tried conning the folks in Flin Flon to think governments serving citizens in the language it taxes them in are agents of the devil.

Lyon also claimed the PM's proposed House of the Federation rested on "a Rube Goldberg-type of appointment procedure" because it let provincial opposition parties share recruitment with sitting governments.

But after all these Lyon's roars, the premier proved he had been hooked by Trudeau's initiative: he suggested a Manitoba legislature committee should tour the province (like the Lyon-reviled Pepin-Robarts Task Force on Canadian Unity?) to help Manitobans develop a negotiating consensus.

In Saskatchewan, premier Allan Blakeney sounded caution, but also willingness to make the constitution an urgent topic.

Mr. Blakeney worried mainly that the PM would proceed too much on his own to amend the constitution. He noted that Trudeau's proposals omit "important matters agreed to by the premiers... including resource taxation, communications and federal spending provisions."

But his broad reaction to Trudeau's proposals was discreet and almost charitable: some of them, he says, are "interesting and different." His tone, and his silences, hinted he views the proposals and Trudeau's three-year timetable as a reasonable start for horse-trading among reasonable men.

Alberta, as usual, reacted with a hang-tough defence of provincial rights. Intergovernmental Affairs minister Lou Hyndman disagreed that Canada is already one of the world's most decentralized federations. Alberta "crucially" wants "further dispersal and greater dispersal of decision-making powers to the provincial capitals..."

Hyndman claimed that Trudeau ignores three key Alberta viewpoints: the need for Alberta control of natural resources, backed by deep reform of the Supreme Court; an Alberta veto in any amending formula; and premier Peter Lougheed's recent proposal for 40 per cent provincial representation on federal regulatory bodies such as the Canadian Transport Commission and National Energy Board.

As for Trudeau's proposal for a top-to-bottom shakeup of the Senate, Hyndman dismissed this as "not a significant issue." Mr. Lougheed, who fears that any Upper House beefed up to represent regions would make his own role as Alberta spokesman less powerful, let on that he doubts Trudeau's Upper House changes would even be constitutional.

In spite of all, Hyndman agreed that Trudeau's blueprint "does begin the discussion on the renewal of federalism." In the grudging courtesies of Albertan diplomacy, that means Alberta will play ball -- toughly, but within Trudeau's game.

B.C.'s premier Bill Bennett, who in recent weeks has begun to sound like a man of some national vision, also weighs in with reservations about Trudeau's right to change the Senate. He insists further that recognition of British Columbia in federal institutions as one of five Canadian regions is non-negotiable -- a demand sure to annoy neighbor premier Lougheed who can barely concede that anything is equal to Alberta, much less more important than it.

Still, Bennett echoes the other premiers in avowing that Trudeau's proposals may be a convenient way of initiating genuine consultation.

From this western roundup, three facts emerge:

All the premiers now make a reluctant but on-the-record linkage between the constitution and solutions to the West's political and economic alienation;

Trudeau's proposals hit enough western nerves not to be damned as window-dressing;

With all their possible Rube Goldberg overtones, Trudeau's ideas and timetable are specific enough to draw all the premiers, kicking and screaming, into the full-blown discussion of constitutional practicalities which has eluded Canada for about fifteen years.

With all the howling, that's progress. Consider the constitution as the West's priority no. 99, counting down fast toward no. 1.

Whither freedom of choice?

Editor:

The following is a copy of a letter sent to the Montreal Gazette:

Dear Sir:

There seems to be a genuine dichotomy of thought between anglophones these days and it is perhaps a measure of the depth of their morale in today's Quebec. Can you imagine, that a political candidate, seeking to represent a county that is predominatily anglophone, suggesting that to seek freedom of choice is immoderate, even radical. I can recall just over two years ago, that over 600,000 Quebec citizens signed a petition via telegram to Robert Bourassa and Pierre Trudeau condemning Bill 22 and proclaiming freedom of Choice. I know it was in vain because those leaders ignored this dramatic act of committment, but it was still the right thing to do. I know that the parti Quebecois have come to power but it doesn't change one iota the need for free choice in Quebec.

And free choice doesn't only mean choice of language of education, it means choice of language in work, in signs, in dealings with your government.

And when I hear the suggestion that the problem in Quebec is not language it's economics, I challenge anyone to show me how we can reverse the tragic exodus of business, expertise, savings and our young people from this province without reversing the present coercive language climate created by Bills such as Bill 22 and Bill 101.

It will not change until all Quebecers understand that freedom of choice is now symbolic. It is said that Quebec will never be the way it was but I say it cannot remain the way it is, and no one will accept that change has occurred until these dreaded laws are repealed.

No freedom of choice is not radical, it's fundamental. It has been that same freedom of choice that gave Quebec the social and political climate that built the City of Montreal as one of the great metropolis' of the world. Its removal is destroying what has taken 200 years ago building.

And refusing to proclaim freedom of choice is not moderation it is cowardice; the same cowardice that was displayed by the anglophone members of the liberal caucus in 1974 when Bill 22 was introduced. If they had had the guts to resign in block at that time, it could never have been introduced and the tragedy we are now experiencing would never have been realized.

So this time, the anglophone must make his choice, not between radicalism and moderation; but between a fundamental need of a free society and resignation to the continued destruction of a community who have every right to be proud of their contribution and their achievement. It's a choice of standing up and being counted or copping-out. Make that choice in Notre-Dame-de-Grace.

Viet veterans still getting short shrift

WASHINGTON — We recently suggested that President Carter had neglected the veterans who served in Vietnam. the war America would like to forget. find jobs; others are languishing in ur rehabilitation centers and prison cell Carter's veterans programs, we reported, have failed.

Taking exception, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall dropped by our offices afterward to dispute our findings. Before we wrote the column, we had invited the Labor Department to comment; we are now happy to carry Marshall's belated response.

He claimed the unemployment rate for Vietnam veterans had declined by 47 percent during the past year. He also promised that the drive to find jobs for 40,000 disabled vets would succeed. As evidence, he offered a smorgasbord of statistics.

We are not wholly convinced. We had reported that Roland Mora, the assistant secretary in charge of veterans employment, had run up a more impressive travel bill than hiring record. He has now been eased out of his job because of a lackluster performance.

We have also obtained a confidential draft of a General Accounting Office study of the Labor Department's programs. The report confirms our earlier charges.

"Although many veterans benefited" from the job programs, the report declares, "much more could be done in those programs to find jobs and training opportunities for the veterans."

Federal regulations require that certain veterans, including the disabled, should receive preferential treatment in federal job placement. But the government examiners discovered that "special consideration was generally not given to priority veterans."

The report also claims that some of the impressive statistics, which Marshall laid before us, are inflated. In the case of certain employment training programs, states the study: "Data Labor provides to the Congress and the public on number of persons served by the program are inflated because (participants) are counted as new enrollments more than once, and priority veterans are counted in as many priority categories as are applicable..."

The auditors found "various degrees of double counting, with overstatements ranging from six to 74 percent... Some participants were counted as new enrollments as many as three times."

When we confronted Marshall with the GAO's findings, he told us the GAO, in his opinion, "could be unreliable."

Bottoms Up: Social drinkers across America tipped their glasses last week to a new report, which claims a little imbibing won't harm the health of most people. But there's a slight catch; we've discovered the report was financed by the U.S. Brewers Association.

The beer brewers, hardly advocates of temperance, gave $136,590 for research over three years to the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center of Oakland, Calif.

Kaiser-Permanente happily concluded that one or two drinks daily won't harm most indivuals and, indeed, that social drinkers may be less susceptible to heart attacks than teetotalers. The findings delighted the Brewers Association, which paid for them.

A spokesman stoutly defended the research. "We want to know as much as possible about the possible side effects of our products," he told our reporter Josh Levin. The brewers did not tell the researchers what to study or what their findings should be, said the spokesman.

Watch on Waste: The casino croupiers aren't the only ones raking in the bucks on the Atlantic City boardwalk this summer. Alan Ackerman, the university-educated, 27-year-old son of a well-to-do doctor, has managed to hit a $25,000 jackpot provided by the taxpayers.

The money was awarded to him under a program designed to provide jobs for the "unemployed, underemployed and economically disadvantaged." If Ackerman is not disadvantaged, he managed to qualify for the grant because he had been unemployed for 15 weeks.

The Labor Department bestowed the $25,000 upon him to lay a "braille trail" for the blind along the teeming boardwalk. This consists of magnetized metal washers nailed along the boardwalk's six-mile length. It ostensibly will enable the sightless to promenade the boardwalk confidently, with the use of special sensitized canes. Braille street signs and numbers are also being erected.

But according to Cecil Leon, who works with the blind at a local Lions Club Center, the Ackerman project is a boondoggle. Leon said the Lions Club initially backed the project, but withdrew its support, because surveys showed the blind rarely used the boardwalk. When they did, they preferred to have an escort.

Footnote: Ackerman did not pocket all the taxpayers' money. He hired a "visually handicapped" white woman to serve as a "blind instructor and laborer" and two blacks to help lay the "braille trail."

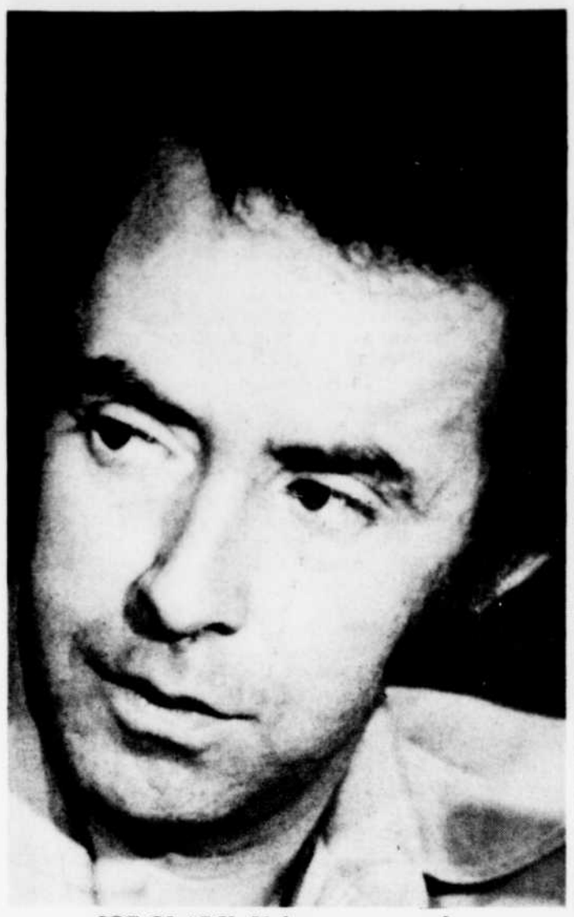
Joe Clark: Trading anonymity for holiday



JOE CLARK: Unknown no more?

WINNIPEG (CP) — It's boarding time for a flight to Saskatoon and the stewardess stares quizzically at a lean, ruddy-faced man in a brown suit waiting to enter the plane.

"Are you really Joe Clark?" she asks, not in awe but out of curiosity. The man grins and nods.

"We heard from other people you were coming aboard," she says.

Now into his third year as Progressive Conservative leader, Clark says he has shrugged off the anonymity that had him dubbed "Joe Who" after the February, 1976, party leadership convention.

It's one reason, he says, why he needs to get out of the country for a holiday—he is going to vacation in France for a few days later this month.

"You lose your anonymity as a party leader," Clark said in a recent interview. "I need a rest, I need time away. I've tried to do it in Canada, but naturally a lot of people want to come up and talk."

NO PRIVACY

"The seclusion available to most Albertans in Ontario and other parts of Canada is not available to me."

Does he now feel sympathy for Prime Minister Trudeau, whose frequent vacations abroad have been unmercifully criticized by Conservative MPs? Clark says he was never among those who were critical.

"I think he and I and a lot of ministers and Ed (New Democratic Party Leader Broadbent) share a problem made more difficult with television in the House of Commons. We're a little better known."

In airports, many faces light up with recognition when Clark passes. A few, bolder perhaps, venture to chat briefly or to wish him luck. Some, like Hugh Williams, a Whitehorse hotel operator and brother of Toronto Maple Leafs player Tiger Williams, offer to work for the party.

Williams says Clark, as a Westerner, can understand the problems of the Yukon.

Clark says after his election as party leader he was forced very quickly to get used to the idea of leading a large and important organization.

Ruling forces death-row rethink

WASHINGTON (AP) — For numerous lawyers and state legislators in the United States, the Supreme Court's latest capital-punishment ruling means new required reading.

For 99 death-row prisoners in Ohio, the decision means a reprieve from the electric chair.

Invalidating Ohio's death-penalty laws this week, the highest U.S. court reduced the U.S. death-row population by one-fifth. It also gave all states a clearer look at what the justices will require of death-penalty laws.

"This was an important case, not only because of the numbers involved, but for future litigation," said Jack Boger of the New York-based Legal Defence Fund, one of several organizations waging a national battle against capital punishment.

In a pair of Ohio cases, the court ruled 7 to 1 that the state's capital laws do not permit "the type of individualized consideration of mitigating factors" to escape being ruled unconstitutionally cruel and unusual punishment.

LAWS STRUCK DOWN

In 1972, the court struck down all existing death-penalty laws, ruling that they had been applied capriciously and arbitrarily.

Four years later, the justices ruled that the death penalty may be a constitutional punishment for convicted murderers but struck down several state laws it said were too inflexible in considering life and death.

Now, the court has attempted to hone its 1976 rulings, but in so doing has left unanswered capital-punishment questions that likely will return:

—Whether the death penalty is constitutional for convicted murderers who took no part in the actual killing or those who never intended to kill their crimes' victim.

—Whether recent bans on all mandatory death sentences should make room for an exception for murders committed by prisoners sentenced for life or by escaped prisoners who had been serving life terms.

—Whether the death penalty is permissible for minors, and whether death-penalty laws that preclude jury participation in sentencing are constitutionally valid.

LAW IN DOUBT

Acting without explanation, the justices have also cast doubt on the validity of Arizona's death-penalty laws.

They sent back the case of a condemned murderer to the Arizona Supreme Court for restudy in light of the Ohio rulings.

Boger said the high court had found Arizona's law similar to Ohio's in that it precluded consideration of all mitigating circumstances and therefore was invalid.

The Supreme Court also let stand separate state court rulings which had invalidated death penalty laws in Pennsylvania and New York.

Mideast peace talks resume

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — President Carter is getting the Israelis and the Egyptians back to the negotiating table this month, but the Egyptians expect the United States to force Israel to make concessions.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Anwar Sadat agreed during U.S. Vice-President Walter Mondale's visit to them this week to resume the face-to-face negotiations which Sadat broke off Jan. 18.

Foreign Ministers Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel and Moshe Dayan will meet in London with U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance about July 18. One qualified Egyptian source said his government looks on the meeting as a two-day one-time-only round of talks without a commitment to continue talking.

"We agreed because Carter was insistent and because we wanted to satisfy the Americans," said the source.

"But everything has a price," said another senior Egyptian source close to the Sadat-Mondale meeting in Alexandria Monday. "We expect a political price from the United States."

Sadat has repeatedly said he would not resume direct talks with Israel until the Israelis bring "new elements" to the impasse resulting from Begin's insistence that the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip are Israeli territory and Sadat's insistence that Israel must agree to give them up.

35th anniversary

BIRCHTON — June 25 was a very nostalgic and happy day, full of many "Do you remember's?", when Nick and Heather Turchyn were hosts to all of the Hugh Maitland Patton-Gladys Moore family, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Cotton with Jimmie, Donnie and Ross of Hemmingford; Mr. James Patton, Montreal; and Heather herself and Nick to celebrate the 35th Wedding Anniversary of their parents and grandparents.

Hugh Patton and Gladys Moore were married in Montreal in 1943.

After the family dinner, when the table was centred with an artistically decorated cake, the motifs being yellow roses on a white background, created by Mrs. Goode of Sawyerville, the family tangible gift of a Grace-Gregoire hand-painted picture of a scene of one of the beauty spots of Gladys' beloved "Down Home", was presented to the guests of honour by two grandsons, Jimmie and Donnie Cotton, and the message of loving greetings befitting the occasion was given to his grandparents by Ross Cotton. Deeply moved, the Patfons expressed appreciation of the family dinner, affection and gift.

Mrs. Patton's sister Muriel, Mrs. Basil Prescott and Mr. Prescott joined the celebrants for the afternoon and supper on the lawn.

Your many friends, Hugh and Gladys, join in wishing you many more years of contented companionship.

Produce prices continue steady climb

French-fries almost were a delicacy in June as produce prices continued to increase along with meat prices.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows potato prices jumped in several of cities.

In Quebec City, potatoes increased $1.70 to $3.18 for 10 pounds. They went up $1.58 in Ottawa, $1 in Montreal and 50 cents in Toronto.

Industry spokesmen say produce prices have been high as last season's crop has been running out. Prices should drop with the arrival of fresh produce.

As beef prices continue to rise, consumers are switching to chicken and pork. The increased demand is reflected in higher prices for chicken and pork.

PORK MAY DROP

A spokesman for the pork industry said, however, pork prices should drop in the next few months.

The survey of the monthly food basket is conducted in the same supermarkets in each of 12 cities on the last Tuesday of each month.

It includes one pound each of sirloin-tip roast, all-beef wieners, centre-cut pork loin roast, top-grade chicken, ground chuck steak (medium ground beef), frozen cod fillets, topgrade butter, tomatoes, frozen green peas, drip coffee and apples.

Also included are one dozen medium-sized eggs, one quart or one litre of whole milk and a 24-ounce can of halved pears.

The survey is not intended to provide a city-by-city comparison since the product sampling is small. It shows price trends in specific stores for a limited number of items many families might purchase.

The latest price checks show:

Ann Landers says

See a psychiatrist

Dear Ann: I'm a 20-year-old female, very happy with life, in love with a terrific guy. My childhood was normal and I have a great relationship with my parents. So what's the problem?

I have a fear of telephones. Whenever I hear the phone ring my body tenses up, my heart races a mile a minute and my voice becomes shaky. I am very self-conscious about this, which makes me more nervous than ever.

I work part-time in a store and told my employer about this hang-up. He has been very understanding. The only time I have to answer the phone is when no one else is around -- and thank heavens, this is almost never.

I can place a call without any trouble -- it's answering that shakes me up. How can I conquer this crippling nonsense? — Ma Bell's Stepchild

Dear Child: Buried somewere in your subconscious is a very unpleasant experience related to a ringing telephone. Perhaps, long ago, you or someone close to you received some horrible news via the phone. You need to dredge up that terrifying experience and talk about it. I recommend therapy. If you can't afford a psychiatrist, check the mental health clinics in your area. (Look in the phone book.)

Dear Ann: I work in a one-man law office -- just me and my boss. When someone phones and my boss is out of the office, I've been instructed to ask, "What is this in regard to?" so he will know what the call is about before he returns it.

You would not believe some of the answers I get -- for example: "That's OK -- I'll tell him when he calls," or, "It's personal." Or, "He knows." Most of the time he does NOT know!!

Also, when a new client calls for an appointment, I'm supposed to ask, "What is this in regard to?" so I'll know how long the appointment will last and the type of information sheet to prepare.

I've met with some very stupid responses, such as, "When he sees me, he'll know." Or, "I told him already," or, "Never mind." Don't these people realize that eventually I'll KNOW all about their case or problem since I'm the one who will be working on it?

How can I get the message across that I'm not being nosy -- just following instructions? — Le-Gal

Dear Lee: If they get huffy or obnoxious, simply tell them (as you told me) that you need the information so you can help your boss give them better service. Explain that if he knows in advance what the client wants it will work out to everyone's advantage.

Dear Ann Landers: I wrote you a letter last week and tore it up. After I read the darned thing I realized it was full of whining and self-pity. I've written you several letters that I haven't mailed but just writing them did me a world of good.

Today's letter is going into the mailbox. It's a long overdue expression of appreciation. You helped me when my children were small and you helped me when they were in their teens. You helped again when they married. (I clipped out your rules of "Do's and Don'ts" for in-laws.)

You cleared the air in our home when hurt and resentment and misunderstanding clouded our thinking. There were times when we just couldn't get together on this issue or that, and then you'd print something in your column that hit the nail smack on the head and set everybody straight.

Just keep on doing what you're doing. People need an impartial, clear-eyed outsider who can send them in the right direction. That's you, Ann. — Grateful In Kalamazoo

Dear Mazoo: What a sweet way to end the week. Thank you so much.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Case of sliding slipcovers

By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — I am having a problem with some slipcovers I made out of cotton tablecloth and drapery material. They look nice but keep sliding off of the cut velour-covered sofas every time someone sits on them. I have small children and would like to use the slipcovers for a year or two. Is there anything I can do so they will stay in place? — M.W.

DEAR M.W. — Perhaps the material itself has something to do with the sliding. It may not be woven firm enough for such use or may be of a combination of fibers that make it slick and slippery.

The sofa cushions should hold the body of a cover in place IF they were made with plenty of play in the back to be pushed down between the back and seat. If there are no separate seat cushions the children will cause constant disarray even with play in the back. Perhaps you could attach some of the sticking fasteners in the proper places to help hold them. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — We used to have wall-to-wall carpeting in the bathroom but after a year of bathing small children the carpet got so wet that it mildewed. We had to take the carpet out and put down linoleum. Now when I bathe the children I place an old beach towel in front of the tub. It gets wet and I just hang it on the side of the tub to dry. Sometimes when it is very wet I stick it in the dryer. But the towel saves a lot of mopping up. — VICKIE

DEAR POLLY — An elderly lady told me to put a big dab of bacon grease in the hole when planting tomatoes outside. I think the grease attracts ants and they loosen the soil around the roots as they work at removing the grease. Up to half a cup of grease for each plant works fine. — CAROL

DEAR READERS — This is a completely new idea to me but it is intriguing and would be fun to try. The bacon grease might be put around just one or two plants the first time and then compare those plants with the others. — POLLY

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

How long can he live?

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a very worried wife. Can you give me an estimate of how long a man who is 59, and weighs 210 at 6 feet tall can continue to drink excess alcohol? He was a so-called moderate drinker until about eight years ago. Now he consumes a pint of whiskey and a six-pack of beer every day within two hours in the evening and maybe eats and then falls into bed. How long can he expect to survive at this rate?

DEAR READER — If your description is correct this man is an alcoholic and needs help. He can look in the yellow pages of the telephone directory under alcohol and find the organizations within his community that could be of help to him.

You might also ask him to read The Health Letter number 1-4 on alcohol which I am sending to you. It outlines most of the medical problems that alcohol causes. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

There is no way to predict how long he can survive with this habit. Individuals have different levels of tolerance. Cirrhosis of the liver (scarring of the liver) is the sixth most common cause of death in American men and of these 60 percent are caused by excess use of alcohol.

In the amounts this man drinks, alcohol can also cause high blood pressure, heart disease and many other severe medical problems. It should never be forgotten that alcohol is a cellular poison.

The unfortunate aspect is that an individual may be developing progressive, serious liver disease and not have a single symptom. There may also be changes in the heart muscle fibers which cause no symptoms until the heart muscle actually starts to fail, causing fluid to accumulate in the lungs and sometimes elsewhere in the body. Prolonged abuse of alcohol can lead to serious liver damage which is not always reversible.

He can get help. I know that you come from a large enough community to have a full compliment of facilities to help people with alcohol problems.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could I have a cosmetic operation on my abdomen? I do not like folding that extra skin in a girdle. I've had all of my children. The last was born at age 41. Nothing I have ever done has shrunk this skin in the slightest. I want it cut off. I asked doctors and they never give me an answer. Would you tell me please?

DEAR READER — Of course you can have it cut off. All you have to do is to find a plastic surgeon who does cosmetic surgery and have him review the problem with you. It's not too uncommon for women to have this done. When the skin has been grossly stretched, even at a young age, it oftimes does not shrink completely back to normal even after a person has lost all of the excess fat. As a rule of thumb, if the excess skin is still there after toning up for a year after all the weight loss has occurred, it's probably not going to shrink anymore.

Frankly because I think girdles are not really conducive to good abdominal tone or health, I would rather see a woman have cosmetic surgery for this problem than to spend the rest of her life wearing a girdle. But that is a personal opinion.

Mrs. Ginette Petrocco
At Dominion, I can see how much I'm saving. With Dominiprix the difference is easy to see. When you can see 30-37 cents difference and 40 cents on an article, that says a lot. I really notice how it all adds up when I see how much I save at the checkout counter.

Mrs. McGowan
we're saving a few cents here and there. It helps us because everything's getting so expensive now. Oh I much prefer shopping at Dominion

Mrs. Victoria Alexander.
It was nice to see prices going down for a change
After comparison shopping at another major supermarket, I couldn't find anything cheaper than at Dominion.
I found savings of 2 or 3 cents on smaller items and on larger items, I was surprised to find some which were 40 or 50 cents cheaper at Dominion.
I like Dominiprix because I know how much I save

Mrs. Claudette Villemure
I shop regularly at Dominion. I have noticed the new ways to help shoppers save. The prices are lower. When I go to other stores I compare prices and it is cheaper here. I always come back to Dominion

Mrs. John Corso
When I shop I look for Dominiprix specials. I think the Dominiprix is excellent. I find there's definitely a saving. I comparison shop quite a bit, and I find that I do save at Dominion. On just four items that I checked out, I saved 70 cents

HOLIDAY CUISINE

Cottage cheese, yogurt, fruit, lettuce and vegetables were made for each other. This week you will find many of these products among this week's best nutritional buys.

Cottage cheese is — and has long been — a favorite with diet conscious people because of its high nutritive value and low calorie content. It is versatile and goes great with fruit and vegetables.

Any colored fruit or vegetable looks appetizing against the snowy whiteness of cottage cheese. Try radishes, shallots, green pepper, oranges, tomatoes, strawberries, all small berries, plums, melons, etc.

This weekend try something different. Why not have a "Cottage Cheese Salad Plate Contest"? Give a prize for the most nutritive, colorful and unusual salad.

Don't forget yogurt — it's delicious as a sauce over fruit or use it as a dip with vegetables.

Here are some additional complements to cottage cheese: all crisp vegetables, lettuce, fresh or dried fruit, nuts, seeds, herbs. Create your own tasty combinations!

The first round of bidding was routine; the second bordered on the insane. East had no cause to bid two hearts (his length and strength — such as it was — was in the opponents' suits) and South, instead of being delighted at the prospect of defending against two hearts, charged ahead into two spades.

But East was not finished. His double of two spades was brash and unwarranted. How did he expect to defeat such a contract? West, knowing his partner's penchant for doubling opponents into game, ran to three hearts. North bid three spades and the irrepressible East doubled again.

After West won the opening heart lead, he switched to a trump which was won by dummy's king. Declarer cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. He led a small club to dummy and West had to split his honors. The ace took the trick.

Declarer ruffed a diamond in his hand and led the jack of clubs which West won with the king. West returned a heart and declarer ruffed with the jack.

Declarer now had six tricks. He cashed the 10 of clubs, the seventh trick, ruffed another diamond, the eighth trick, and there in dummy was that beautiful ace of trumps.

East had paid well for his irrepressibility.

Girl Scouts hold Court of Honor

DERBY LINE (IH) — The Derby Elementary school in Derby Line was recently the scene of a very pleasant evening when some 240 family and friends of Girl Scouting in Derby and Derby Line gathered for the Court of Honor events.

The evening opened with the presentation of the flags ceremony that included The Pledge of Allegiance, all joining to sing America and Senior Scout Sue Place spoke the Scout Prayer.

Mrs. Sue Watson was Mistress of Ceremonies and introduced the youth group leaders. She also talked about Juliette Low who started Girl Scouting in America. She quoted Mrs. Low who said "a badge is a symbol that a girl has done the thing it stands for often enough, thoroughly enough and well enough to be prepared to give service in it." Skills are important, said Mrs. Watson, but what a girl learns about herself and about making decisions and about coping with unexpected situations will be of lasting value to her.,

Then began the presentation of awards to the 2nd grade Brownies who were recipients of a membership star showing the girl has been a Brownie one year and the green disc behind the star that means she received her star while a Brownie: Troop 247 Derby Line to Julie Marsh, Sharon Cote, Kristi Routhier, Tina Parent, Tina Lawson, Beccy Wilson, Tracy Farrand, Jackie Nelson, Elizabeth Ruskaup, Rhoda Bowen, Kerrie Smart, Tiffany Currier. Their leaders are Pierrette Marsh and assistant Claire Currier.

The 3rd grade Brownies participated in the Fly - Up ceremony and received the following awards, membership star with a green disc - 2nd Brownie B. Patch Wings and Girl Scout pin. The ceremony is very impressive as they "fly up over a bridge to be met on the other side" by a Girl Scout and welcomed into the Girl Scout troop.

The 3rd grade Derby Line Brownies were Patricia Musgrove, Lori Fish, Amy Lavallee, Rebecca Provost, Shelly Greenwood, Kathi McIntyre, Karen Robertson, Mary Place, Karen Baker and Loretta Harmon. Leader, Barbara Musgrove.

The 3rd grade, Derby, were Karen Whitcomb, Jennifer Rhodes, Kim Bates, Jennifer Gale, Debbie Fortin, Tammy Gray, Monique Turgeon, Leader, Carole Greenwood, assistant, Fran Batchelor.

Junior Girl Scout Leaders, Ruth Nelson and Tina Routhier in their annual report of activities had this to say: "Our 4th grade girls have met with us each week in our homes and worked on different activities." Twice they have visited the people at the Michaud Manor and presented the residents (senior citizens) a small handmade gift. At Christmas time they went caroling at two local Rest Homes and in the area of shut-ins. The girls have been busy during the year working on various badges both in their groups and independently. A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Curtis and Mrs. Camanche for meeting with the girls to work on certain badges.

Presented with membership stars were Heather Haines, Marlene Moss, Colleen Hayes, Carrie Olgiatti, Carmen Camanche, Danielle Cote, Tracy Sherlaw, Kristi Collins, Jennifer Nelson, Jill Watson. Health Aid badge: Jennifer Nelson, Kristo Collins, Jill Watson. Cooking badge: Colleen Hayes, Carrie Olgiatti, Carmen Camanche, Jill Watson, Kristi Collins.

My Home badge: Colleen Hayes, Carrie Olgiatti, Danielle Cote, Tracy Sherlaw, Heather Haines, Marlene Moss, Carmen Camanche, Jennifer Nelson, Jill Watson, Kristi Collins.

Mrs. Maurice Souliere reported on the fifth and sixth grade scouts. Badges were presented as follows: Carmen Amyot, collectors; Donna Porter, My Home; Melanie Fogen, Collectors; Joyce Metros, Collectors; Outcook, back yard fun, troop camper; Sharon Souliere; Backyard fun, outdoor cook, troop camper, collectors, dabbler and the Sign of the Arrow. Margaret Place, Rhonda Brewster and Denise Guyette received their membership pins. Carmen Amyot and Joyce Metras advanced to Cadette Scouts.

Laura Messier, the Cadette Girl Scout Leader presented membership stars to Cheryl Messier, Cindy Clifford, Karen Gale, Heather Walsh, Norine Stetson and Sheila Guyette. Cheryl Messier also received the Hikers badge.

The senior Girl Scouts, Derby Line, Pam Jenne, Susie Place, Heidi Walsh, Edna Favreau, have been active the past year was the report of the leader, Ann Aldrich. She noted the girls made hospital favors; attended the Senior Planning Board meetings in points of the Vermont State; assisted in rummage sales, and each has her own special project, teaching in a Sunday school, singing in a church choir, assisting with special Ed. students. Gatherings and cookouts at Merrybrook, held a meeting on bicycle preparations for a trip. Edna Favreau graduated this year and the girls gave her a surprise party at Merrybrook and presented her with small gifts she will need during her next college year.

The program terminated with the Scouts Own Candlelight ceremony. While lighting the candles the Scouts sang "Kumboya", then after all were lighted Mrs. Ann Aldrich read the poem "A candle is but a piece of string", the Scouts sang their song "Peace" and ended with Taps, to round out another year of Girl Scouting.

A special welcome was given to Pat Kasperzat, Field Director for District two who complimented the Leaders and Scouts on their achievements and spoke in general about Scouting in America.

TREND-WATCHERS STUDY BYELECTION

MONTREAL (CP) — Political trend-watchers will be studying today's provincial byelection in Notre Dame de Grace where Liberal favorite Reed Scowen faces his main challenge from David DeJong, an independent who wants a return to "free choice" in language matters.

Despite a forecast of sunny skies and warm temperatures, turnouts at the 160 polls are expected to be light because many residents are on vacation. Few electors took advantage of two days of advance polling earlier this week. Polls open today from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Scowen and Liberal leader Claude Ryan have stressed in a letter to electors that the byelection "will be the first time since Nov. 15, 1976, that any group of voters has been called on to pass judgment on the present government."

The byelection will also be the first opportunity voters in the mainly English-speaking west-end riding have had to pass judgment on Ryan's recent election to the Liberal leadership.

The riding is a traditional Liberal stronghold but the party's majority dropped in 1976 because of a substantial vote against the Liberal government's language legislation.

Although most political observers concede victory to Scowen, DeJong hopes he will win the protest votes that went in 1976 to the Union Nationale and the Democratic Alliance.

DeJong, a 53-year-old medical researcher, has accused the provincial Liberals of "maintaining separatist policies" and says there is no need to protect the French culture in Quebec.

Government backs solar energy

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government will spend $380 million over the next five years to encourage development of energy from the sun, garbage and forests, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday.

Gillespie told a news conference the government will buy more Canadian solar-heating equipment and offer special incentives to the forest industry to turn its waste products into energy.

"We have designed a federal purchase program which will create a market for Canadian (solar) companies which will help bear the risks of technological innovation and which will contain strong incentives to cost effectiveness."

Manufacturers will be encouraged through government purchase of solar-heating systems, he said. This program will begin gradually, increasing to about $50 million in annual capital purchases by 1984.

Gillespie also said the government's objective is to double, to seven per cent, the contribution of wood and urban wastes to the national primary energy budget by 1985.

Most of the increase would come from waste wood at mill sites at harvest time, he said.

The over-all energy program, he said, should result in a new Canadian industry with additional jobs.

SEES PROMISE

"Prices will be set at home rather than abroad and there could be good opportunities for selling the product in export markets."

Gillespie said the government's objective is to create an unsubsidized Canadian solar industry, "and it must be done within the next five years or we've lost our chance."

"We see no reason why equipment for solar heating can't be designed and manufactured in Canada by Canadian firms," he said. "We see no reason why an industry whose 1990 sales are expected to be between $400 million and $800 million in Canada alone should not be a domestic one."

Rondeau trial postponed

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — The trial in the case of Gilbert Rondeau was continued to August 1st in Granby when he appeared in sessions court here yesterday.

The 49-year-old independent MP for Shefford faces charges of having conspired with one or more persons to commit arson and to having committed arson in a two storey wooden frame dwelling he owned in Bromont on Dec. 20, 1976.

Judge Louis Denis Bouchard consented to the remand following representations from Crown attorney Claude Noiseux and defence lawyer Paul Lesage.

"We had all our witnesses assigned" Noiseux said, "The defence informed me they had assigned their's for tomorrow. Despite prolonged promises from the Ministry of Justice we have only one court room available and it will be occupied by practice court tomorrow. I therefore suggest the trial be heard in Granby beginning August 1st and through to the 4th in such time as required."

"Eyewitnesses were assigned and we were ready to proceed," Paul Lesage said. "Considering the circumstances we have no objection to continuation on the date suggested by the Crown as we feel the trial should be completed without further delays."

Crown Attorney Noiseux agreed it was in the interest of all concerned the trial should begin and run to its completion without further interruption.

Jacques Harbec of Granby who is also charged with conspiracy to commit arson and arson and Jean Bernier also of Granby who is charged with a single count of arson will have new trial dates fixed when they appear in sessions court here July 11.

Mating season blamed for mauling

TORONTO (CP) — The owner of a trained bear that mauled to death the owner's woman companion says his only possible explanation is that bears are unpredictable and sometimes go wild during their mating season.

McKigney said in an interview he cannot understand why the seven-foot, 463-pound black bear named Smokey attacked Lynn Orser, 30, on Sunday in the Aurora, Ont., home she shared with McKigney.

Stones fans run amuk

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Stage hands swung two-by-fours to fend off Rolling Stones fans who invaded and tried to vandalize the stage Tuesday after a 90-minute program by the British rock music group.

The field at Rich Stadium was left littered with garbage from about 72,000 fans who attended a 6½-hour concert which included three warm-up acts before the Stones came on.

After the Stones refused audience shouts for an encore, about 300 persons stormed the 20-foot-high stage, tearing down a chain-link fence and throwing bottles.

Beirut ceasefire collapses

BEIRUT (AP) — Syrian troops and sniping Christian militiamen battled in Beirut for the fifth day today following the collapse of another ceasefire.

The Syrians fired a one-hour tank and rocket barrage shortly before dawn, and by mid-morning the Christian militiamen were sniping at Syrian positions along the whole five-kilometre line between the Lebanese capital's Moslem and Christian halves.

Bar proposals 'not parallel'

BRUDENELL, P.E.I. (CP) — The Canadian Bar Association's document on constitutional reform will not parallel the proposals offered earlier by Prime Minister Trudeau, Association President Jacques Viau said Tuesday.

Viau, chairman of the association's constitution review committee, said in an interview here his group has been working for almost a year on a report and had formed opinions and tentative proposals before Trudeau announced his plans.

Witnesses flock to Olympic site

MONTREAL (CP) — About a quarter of the 88,000 Jehovah's Witnesses here for a five-day international convention have crowded their tents, trailers, mobile homes and campers onto an east-end field near the Olympic Stadium.

Dust was billowing over the grounds Tuesday as vehicles— mostly bearing American licence plates— streamed through the gates and filed along one of six avenues or 35 streets that have been temporarily laid out in the 110-acre field.

Soleil journalists picket

QUEBEC (CP) — Journalists and editorial support staff at Le Soleil, who voted Monday to end a 10-month strike, picketed the newspaper one last time Tuesday before returning to work.

PSBGM gets $4 million less

MONTREAL (CP) — The Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal was awarded a budget of $91 million for the coming school year at a meeting of the Island School Council of Montreal on Tuesday—$4 million less than the board had asked for.

The Protestant board's request for a $95-million budget was based on calculations that 43,438 pupils would attend its schools.

Newfoundland legislature disrupted

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The 120-day session of the Newfoundland legislature was adjourned Tuesday night in a surprise move that left most government legislation untouched and a series of corruption charges unanswered.

"They haven't the courage to carry on," Opposition Liberal leader William Rowe said after the adjournment.

"It's another example of the total collapse of the ability of this government to deal with the major problems facing this province."

The increase was 21 per cent from last year.

The federal agency said the number of persons drawing benefits in the week ending April 15 was 948,000, down four per cent from March but up nine per cent from April, 1977.

Average weekly benefit paid was $110.33, up from $101.18 in April, 1977.

Red Brigade kneecappers strike

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Two members of the Red Brigades shot an executive of Italy's largest rubber company in the leg today, continuing the terrorist organization's campaign against businessmen and government officials.

Gavino Manca, 45, was shot three times by a man and a woman as he was leaving home for work. He is head of Pirelli Rubber's planning and foreign relations division.

Police said his condition was not serious.

Puerto Ricans charged

SAN JUAN (AP) — Two Puerto Ricans were held on kidnapping charges today after abandoning their siege in the Chilean consulate without winning any of their demands.

The armed man and a woman accomplice surrendered Tuesday after holding two hostages for 20 hours. They demanded the release of four Puerto Rican nationalists jailed in the United States and cancellation of the U.S. Independence Day celebrations on the island, but all they got was a statement from U.S. Attorney-General Griffin Bell.

Sect members held

BOMBAY, India (Reuter) — A Canadian, an Argentine and three U.S. men, members of the Hare Krishna Hindu religious sect, were arrested Tuesday on charges connected with the death of Indian film dancer Dilip Malhotra.

Monday, police charged another U.S. resident, Randolph Evan Scein, 27, general manager of a Krishna society temple and residential centre northwest of Bombay, and two Indian guards with murder.

Pot fumes hit White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The young man wearing cutoff jeans, no shirt and long, straight hair took a puff on the half-smoked marijuana cigarette.

"On every other day of the year you would get busted for smoking a joint," he said. "Not today. We're having a party."

The young man was one of about 1,500 people who celebrated the July 4 U.S. Independence Day on Tuesday by protesting restrictive U.S. marijuana laws at a smoke-in at Lafayette Park, across the street from the White House.

ASBESTOS

products, the Mt. Sinai researchers were cut off from access to the death certificates.

"We have gotten full co-operation from everyone except the government of Quebec," said Dr. Nicholson.

In preparation for the conference, the Mt. Sinai team succeeded in updating their study of Thetford workers, but only at great cost of time and money.

Because the Quebec registry of death certificates was closed to them, they had to employ staff to track down relatives of deceased miners one by one to obtain permission to see copies of death certificates. In some cases, relatives had moved away and had to be traced. In each case, the whole situation had to be explained to the relatives of the deceased worker, often over long-distance telephone, and the death certificates had to be obtained one by one.

In some cases, Eastern Townships doctors co-operated with the Mt. Sinai team in furnishing them with death certificates, in defiance of the government edict.

The reason given for Quebec policy about-face is that the province has a responsibility to "protect the privacy" of the deceased miners, but Dr. Nicholson said. "We study death certificates as part of research to prepare tables of statistics. The statistics are anonymous - we do not invade privacy."

The suggestion was raised that the Quebec Government is trying to protect something other than privacy. The Quebec national assembly - after forced closure of debate - recently passed a law authorizing the expenditure of $250 million to set up the Societe Nationale de l'Amiante, which would then purchase Asbestos Corp. of Thetford from General Dynamics.

Asbestos Corp. has the worst dust levels of any asbestos mine in Quebec, and the workers' union in Thetford has warned the government that they may have to spend $100 million to install new equipment and clean up the pollution levels in the mine and mill. The union will be negotiating with the new owners - the government - on health conditions and compensation.

Resources Minister Berube, in announcing the government study showing a low rate of asbestos disease in the Townships mines, said these new statistics mean it will not cost as much to eliminate health hazards in the asbestos industry, because the study shows that the dangers of asbestos have been greatly exaggerated (by the doctors from Mt. Sinai in New York.).

He said a disease rate of only two per cent, will make it easier for the government to achieve its aims to improve health and safety in the industry because the government study made it clear for all to see the problem is not as serious as had been thought.

Labor Minister Pierre-Marc Johnson added that the Quebec study was "the most exhaustive study ever done on asbestosis."

This statement, when repeated to a group of scientists at the New York conference, brought laughter.

The Quebec Government study consisted of X-rays of 6,785 asbestos workers from Oct. 1975 to the end of 1976 by several doctors who are not renowned as experts on asbestos disease.

The study was insignificant compared to the dozens of studies presented at the international conference. For example, Dr. Irving J. Selikoff's study of asbestos insulation workers in the United States and Canada followed the health situation of 17,800 workers over a period of 10 years. The study included tracing all of the workers, interviews with many of the workers and their families about smoking habits and the type, amount, and duration of exposure to asbestos; X-rays, examination of death certificates and autopsy material, and electron microscope examination of lung tissues.

The study concluded that, of the 3,000 insulation workers who have died over the past ten years, 50 per cent of the workers in the United States and 52 per cent in Canada died of asbestos-related diseases. The 14,000 surviving members of the union can expect a similar death rate - one half of them will die of asbestosis and cancer.

Reporters tried to find out why there is such a difference between the study done by the Quebec government, showing that only two per cent of Quebec asbestos workers have contracted a fatal disease, and the dozens of studies done by independent researchers in many other countries, showing death rates from 25 per cent to 50 per cent.

The difference is in the data used and the questions asked by the studies. The Quebec report announced by Yves Berube was a study of all workers in the asbestos industry in Quebec at a given moment in time. The study did not include workers who were too sick to be at work, it did not include workers who have retired, it did not include workers who left the asbestos industry and got other jobs at the first sign of a cough or a chest pain, nor did it include victims of cancer - even though cancer kills far more more asbestos workers than asbestosis.

But the study did include 18-year-old workers hired two weeks previously. Because asbestos disease shows up an average of 20 years after the first exposure to asbestos, it is a foregone conclusion that a study of workers exposed less than 20 years ago will show no asbestos disease. The Quebec government study was practically guaranteed to show a low rate of disease among asbestos workers, because the average time since onset of exposure to asbestos was 17 years - three years before asbestos disease could be expected.

Dr. Nicholson says "It's as if they did a study to find out how many people get gray hair - and then examined young people. Of course, the study proves that very few people get gray hair."

It has not been explained why the study, completed in 1976, when the Parti Quebecois was a critic of the asbestos industry, was not made public until 1978, when the PQ government is looking at ownership of an asbestos industry.

The study done by Doctors Nicholson, Ruth Lillis and Selikoff presented at the New York conference reports that one out of three workers with 20 years experience in Thetford dies of asbestos-related disease. The lung cancer rate among Thetford workers is 252 per cent higher than the Canadian national average. The rate for all types of cancer increased by 20 per cent from the 1961-66 period to the 1972-77 period. In the dustiest mining and milling operations at Thetford, the lung cancer rate is 419 per cent higher than the Canadian national average.

Dr. Nicholson told reporters these statistics would be even more appalling if compared to average rates of cancer in rural areas. The Townships, being a rural and small-town area, should have a cancer rate significantly lower than the national average, which includes large urban areas where cancer is more common.

The rate of death by asbestosis in Thetford is double the already-disastrous rate among American asbestos workers. Thetford workers also suffer from mesothelioma, a disease which is always associated with asbestos or similar fibers, and which is invariably fatal within an average of 12 to 18 months after it appears. Townships asbestos workers also have high rates of cancer of the stomach, colon and rectum, which might be connected with the fact that the drinking water in Thetford Mines contains up to 178 million asbestos fibers per litre.

Furthermore, the Mt. Sinai researchers reported dust levels in which Thetford asbestos miners work are an average of 400 per cent higher than the Quebec legal limit of five fibres longer than five microns per c.c. of air.

The legal limit for asbestos exposure in the United States and Great Britain is two fibres per c.c. - two and a half times more stringent than the Quebec law. But a recent British study which was discussed at the conference shows that even with a legal rate of two fibres per c.c. of air, one out of four asbestos workers dies of cancer or asbestosis.

As a result, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration of the U.S. Government has recommended a new standard of 0.5 fibres per c.c., and the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, another branch of the U.S. Government, has recommended a standard of 0.1 fibres per c.c.

But scientists at the New York conference warned that even with a standard of 0.1 fibres per c.c., asbestos workers would still inhale hundreds of millions of asbestos fibres every day, because the standard does not take into account fibres shorter than five microns, which are by far the most numerous and perhaps the most lethal.

They pointed out that exposure to asbestos for as little as one month can cause cancer, and they warned that there is no known safe limit for exposure to asbestos.

Houston strikeout king whips Reds 3-1

When Sparky Anderson says an all-star team couldn't beat J. R. Richard on his better nights, believe it.

Anderson speaks from a position of authority, since many of his Cincinnati players will be on this year's National League allstar baseball team.

"That guy's awesome," said the manager after watching the Houston strikeout king whip his Reds 3-1 with a four-hitter Tuesday night. "Nobody has a chance in the world against that guy when he's hot.

"He's overpowering. When he's right, he's unbeatable and tonight he was unbeatable. Good thing he's not always like that."

Richard, the major league leader in strikeouts, improved his total to 145 with nine against the Reds.

In other games, San Diego Padres beat San Francisco Giants 7-5, Los Angeles Dodgers defeaed Atlanta Braves 4-1, Chicago Cubs topped St. Louis Cardinals 7-5, Pittsburgh Pirates swept a doubleheader from Montreal Expos 3-1 and 4-3 and New York Mets trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 4-0 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 3-2.

Terry Puhl, a native of Melville, Sask., hit a leadoff triple in the first off Cincinnati starter Tom Hume and scored on Dennis Walling's fielder's choice grounder. Walling singled in the Houston third, moved to second on Enos Cabell's single and scored on Jose Cruz's RBI single.

Padres 7 Giants 5

San Diego's Dave Winfield hit a first-inning grand-slam homer and Eric Rasmussen and John D'Acquisto protected the lead to give the Padres their victory over slumping San Francisco.

The triumph was the fourth in a row and 12th in the last 15 games for the Padres, who went above the .500 mark at 41-40. The National League West Division-leading Giants lost their third game in a row and eighth in the last 11.

Dodgers 4 Braves 1

Don Sutton and Bob Welsh combined on a five-hitter and Dusty Baker led the Los Angeles attack with two doubles and a single as the Dodgers beat Atlanta. The victory was the fifth straight for the surging Sutton and improved his record to 9-6.

The Dodgers got all the runs they needed by scoring three times in the fourth inning against Preston Hanna, 6-5. Lee Lacy, who replaced third baseman Ron Cey after he was hit in the face by a pitched ball, singled to lead off the eighth, stole second, and scored on Baker's second double of the game. Sutton gave up a homer to Gary Matthews in the ninth before needing relief help from Welsh.

Cubs 7 Cardinals 5

Bobby Murcer's leadoff home run in the fifth inning snapped a 4-4 tie and sparked Chicago over St. Louis for the Cubs' eighth triumph over the Cardinals in as many meetings this season.

Mets 4-2 Phillies 0-3

Pat Zachry tossed a two-hitter and Lee Mazzilli blasted a grand-slam homer in the eighth inning to pace New York over Philadelphia in the first game of their doubleheader.

Jose Cardenal's pinch-hit, two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning gave the Phillies a victory in the second game.

PIRATES SWEEP EXPOS

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Chuck Tanner celebrated his own birthday, as well as that of the United States, on Tuesday by having his cake following a doubleheader sweep of Montreal Expos.

"The wins are the best present," said the Pittsburgh Pirates manager, who was presented with a cake on his 49th birthday following the two National League baseball victories by scores of 3-1 and 4-3.

Yet his afternoon was tempered by the possiblity the Pirates may be without ailing second baseman Rennie Stennett and outfielder Dave Parker in coming weeks.

Stennett had to leave the first game with recurring pain from an ankle fracture he sustained last season. Parker has a fractured cheekbone, the result of a collision at home plate Friday night.

"They'll both be examined by the doctor Wednesday," Tanner said of the possibility that both players might go on the disabled list. "I won't know until then."

There was also good news for Tanner as his club moved past Montreal into third place in the East Division.

In the first game, pitcher Bert Blyleven rapped a three-run double and scattered five hits over eight innings before leaving with a stiff arm.

"The arm's OK," Blyleven said following the game. "Let's talk about the hit."

Ellis Valentine's second-inning homer accounted for the only Montreal run.

With two out and the bases full in the bottom of the second, Blyleven hit his decisive double down the left-field line off loser Dan Schatzeder, 2-1.

Blyleven, 8-5 and the winner of his last five decisions, was relieved by Kent Tekulve in the ninth who also earned a save in the second game.

In the nightcap, Willie Stargell and Bill Robinson each homered and Omar Moreno added an inside-the-park homer.

Montreal's Tony Perez hit a pair of homers to account for all the Expos' scoring off winner Don Robinson, 5-2.

Stargell had a second-inning solo homer off loser Wayne Twitchell, 3-7, who also yielded the inside-the-park homer to Moreno and Robinson's two-run homer—both in the third.

Wallis belts in two homers, leads A's to 9-4 triumph

Joe (Tarzan) Wallis is a little different. He's happy he's with Oakland's Charlie Finley when most players are glad to get away from the unpredictable owner of the A's.

Since the A's acquired him from Chicago Cubs last month, Wallis has collected 18 hits in 49 at-bats for a .367 average—including six doubles and four homers—and driven in 12 runs in 14 games.

The 26-year-old outfielder had a pair of two-run homers and Tony Armas hit one to lead the A's to a 9-4 victory over Seattle Mariners on Tuesday night and into second place in baseball's American League West.

The A's vaulted past Texas Rangers, who lost to Chicago White Sox 2-1, and moved one-half game behind California Angels, who bowed to Kansas City Royals 4-3.

California, Oakland, Texas and Kansas City are separated by 1½ games in the nip-and-tuck West while the White Sox are 4½ games out and Minnesota Twins trail by six after trimming Milwaukee Brewers 7-2.

The Brewers dropped into a second-place tie with New York Yankees in the East. The Yankees were rained out in Boston while Baltimore Orioles downed Cleveland Indians 6-4 and Toronto Blue Jays trounced Detroit Tigers 9-2.

The A's jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Larry Murray walked and Wallis homered. In the second, Jeff Newman doubled, Armas homered, Mike Edwards doubled and Glenn Burke singled to make it 5-0. Wallis' second homer came in the eighth.

"It's been a great Fourth of July," Wallis said. "We said before the game that we were going to start out with a bang. We wanted to start our fireworks in the first inning and it just turned out that way.

"I'm sure happy that Charlie Finley got me over here. He's done more for me in one move than anybody has. I'm deeply indebted to him."

Royals 4 Angels 3

George Brett doubled in the bottom of the ninth inning and Clint Hurdle singled him home with the winning run as six-foot-seven rookie pitcher Rich Gale increased his record to 8-3 with a five-hitter for the Royals. Joe Rudi and Don Baylor homered for the Angels while Pete LaCock connected for Kansas City.

Major league all-stars named

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball's top hitters— Boston Red Sox slugger Jim Rice and Minnesota Twins' Rod Carew—head the 1978 American League all-star starting lineup announced by commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Rice, who leads the majors in home runs and runs batted in, will be making his first All-Star Game start in the outfield, while first baseman Carew, the league's No. 1 vote-getter and baseball's top hitter for average, will be making his 12th start in the annual midsummer contest.

The 49th All-Star Game will be played July 11 at San Diego Stadium.

Also selected by the fans as starters for the American League squad were second baseman Don Money of Milwaukee Brewers, shortstop Fred Patek and third baseman George Brett, both of Kansas City Royals, catcher Carlton Fisk of Boston and outfielders Richie Zisk of Texas Rangers and Reggie Jackson of New York Yankees.

Carew, Fisk, Brett, Zisk and Jackson all were elected starters in 1977, while Money and Patek were be making their first starts.

Carew, the major league leader in the all-star voting in 1977 with a record 4,292,740 ballots, again paced the American League with 4,010,136 votes, easily outdistancing his first base competiton.

The Minnesota star has been named to the squad every year since he has been in the major leagues. From 1967-1975, he was the second base electee and he has been selected as the first baseman the past three seasons.

Borg demolishes Mayer

LONDON (AP) — Thunder rumbled and lightning flashed over Wimbledon's tennis courts Tuesday night, and Bjorn Borg demolished Sandy Mayer of the United States with thunderbolts of his own.

The Swede, trying for a third straight Wimbledon title, won 7-5, 6-4, 6-3 to move easily into the men's semi-finals.

As the skies darkened and the thunder became louder, Borg hit the ball with tremendous power as if determined to finish the match before the deluge.

He just managed it. Two minutes after the two left the centre court the heavens opened and the covers were spread over the grass.

American Jimmy Connors crushed Raul Ramirez of Mexico 6-4, 6-4, 6-2 while Vitas Gerulaitis won a see-sawing thriller with fellow American Brian Gottfried 7-5, 4-6, 9-7, 6-2.

And Tom Okker of the Netherlands, the only unseeded player still in contention, upset Romanian Ilie Nastase 7-5, 6-1, 2-6, 6-3.

Grand Prix suit adjourned

MONTREAL (CP) — A $3-million suit launched by Ontario's Mosport race track against Grand Prix of Canada and Labatt's brewery was adjourned indefinitely Tuesday when neither side showed up in court to contest the case.

Neither Mosport officials, nor the race organizers, nor any of their lawyers appeared before Superior Court Justice John Nolan. The adjournment means the plaintiffs will have to make a special request to put the case back on the court rolls if they want to continue.

Mosport had claimed breach of contract when Grand Prix of Canada, a subsidiary of Labatt's, announced plans to hold this year's Formula I auto race race at a track to be built on Ile-Notre-Dame, part of the former Expo 67 world's fair site in the St. Lawrence River near Montreal.

Although there was some initial opposition from environmentalists here, the plan for the Ile-Notre-Dame site has the backing of Montreal civic authorities.

Five-year-old finishes marathon

JUNCTION CITY, Kan. (AP) — Five-year-old Bucky Cox stands only three feet, 10 inches tall, but he's a giant in the marathon world.

A Grade 1 student from Lawrence, Kan., Bucky might have put his name in the world record book Tuesday by finishing the 26-mile, 385-yard Sundown Salute marathon in Junction City in a time of five hours, 25 minutes and nine-tenths of a second.

Some 100 runners of all ages entered the race, and 68 completed the course. The youngster, who turns six next week, finished 64th.

Stephen Brumit of Slater, Mo., a runner at Central Missouri State University, won the marathon in a time of 2:50.56.

Temperatures were in the 30s and the heat took its toll on the runners. The favored Bob Busby, a teacher at Oak Park high in Kansas City, was forced to leave the race at the 24-mile mark.

Marathon records are all unofficial, but the California-based publication, Runners World, has reported two five-year-olds in times of 4:56.36 and 6:56.39.

Ray Foster, research psychologist with the Bureau of Child Research at the University of Kansas and trainer for the young distance runner, said the times are all unofficial because the courses they were run on are not certified.

Bucky's time will also stand as unofficial pending certification of the Sundown Salute marathon course. Coordinators of the race have applied for official certification and expect to receive notice on the application by late fall.

CFL exhibition season ends

A wily old veteran and a highly-touted rookie combined Tuesday night to derail British Columbia Lions as the exhibition season concluded for six Canadian Football League teams.

Tom Wilkinson, a 35-year-old veteran entering his eighth season with Edmonton, and Warren Moon, the 21-year-old hero of last year's Rose Bowl game while at the University of Washington, find themselves battling for the No. 1 quarterbacking job with the Eskimos. And on the basis of Tuesday's performance, it's anybody's guess who's got the inside track.

Both signal-callers passed for a pair of touchdowns and Moon ran for a fifth as the Eskimos routed British Columbia 46-1, handing the Lions their first loss after three successive victories in pre-season play.

Elsewhere, Winnipeg Blue Bombers nipped Ottawa Rough Riders 28-27, while Montreal Alouettes held on to defeat Toronto Argonauts 27-24.

The CFL exhibition schedule winds up tonight with Saskatchewan Roughriders playing host to Calgary Stampeders.

The Eskimos opened camp with the quarterbacking job a three-way battle between Moon, Wilkinson and holdover Bruce Lemmerman. However, that all changed June 17 when Lemmerman sustained a broken collar bone in a 26-14 win over Toronto—sidelining him for at least three months.

On Tuesday, Wilkinson connected on short touchdown passes to George McGowan and Don Warrington, while Moon hit newcomer Tom Scott twice, sandwiched around his one-yard run late in the third quarter.

Placekicker Dave Cutler converted all five Edmonton touchdowns and added a pair of field goals and four singles—two of them on kickoffs. Punter Hank Ilesic accounted for Edmonton's other point on a 69-yard single.

The visitors' lone point came on a first-quarter single off a wide field-goal attempt by Lui Passaglia.

The Eskimos, who finished the exhibition campaign with a 2-2 mark, had 23 first downs, compared with 14 for the Lions. Edmonton rushed for just 63 yards but amassed 328 through the air. British Columbia's ground game netted 110 yards and the Lions gained a further 204 via the pass.

At Winnipeg, quarterback Ralph Brock teamed with wingback Rick Koswin on a 56-yard pass-and-run touchdown with less than five minutes remaining to give the Bombers their third win in four starts. Ottawa's John Hay, who had connected on four earlier field-goal tries, missed on an attempt from the Winnipeg 39 on the final play of the game.

Gord Paterson and Jim Washington got the other Winnipeg touchdowns, while placekicker Bernie Rouff contributed two singles, a pair of converts and field goals from 26 and 32 yards.

Art Green, back with the Riders after an unsuccessful stint in the National Football League, got a first-quarter touchdown for Ottawa which finished the exhibition campaign with only one win in four games. Quarterback Condredge Holloway added a second-quarter TD in the see-saw contest.

The Alouettes ran their record to 3-1 as they held off a fourth-quarter rally which saw the Argos score 10 points.

Rookie Ken Starch got touchdowns for Montreal in each of the first two quarters and wide receiver-quarterback Gerry Dattilio added another for the Alouettes in the fourth quarter. Don Sweet converted all three TDs and added two field goals.

Terry Metcalf and Peter Muller had the Toronto touchdowns, while Ian Sunter kicked three field goals, a pair of converts and a single.

EAGLESON CLEARS IIHF VOTING HURDLE

SERMIONE, Italy (CP) — Alan Eagleson cleared one hurdle Tuesday in his efforts to pave the way for the Canada Cup to become a tournament sanctioned by the International Ice Hockey Federation.

The IIHF voted to change its system of tabulating votes at the congress in session here. Where previously an absentee vote was considered a "no" vote, now only votes taken by those present will decide an issue.

The change clears the way for a proposal to be made to the congress later this week which would make the Canada Cup, similar to a tournament first held in 1976 when Canada was able to use its best players, an official IIHF tourney every four years.

Eagleson, chairman of Hockey Canada's international committee and a voting delegate at IIHF meetings, said he was appalled at the voting procedures.

COUNTED NO-SHOWS

"In effect, they counted the abstentions in their votes as nos. That meant that if my proposal had 31 yeses and only one no along with 31 abstentions, it would be defeated."

There are 63 voting delegates here from 30 countries. At Eagleson's suggestion, the delegates voted Tuesday morning to accept a simple majority vote providing at least three-quarters of the delegates are present.

Eagleson and other Canadian hockey delegates here were concerned that countries in the B and C pools would abstain from voting since Eagleson's proposed schedule of major events, which already has been endorsed by the IIHF executive, does not affect them. Canada plays in the A pool.

If the Canadian proposal is accepted by the IIHF in a vote expected Friday, next year's world championship in Moscow in April would be followed by a Canada Cup in September 1979, the Olympics in 1980, world championships in 1981 and Canada Cup 1982, followed by the worlds in 1983, Olympics 1984, worlds 1985 and Canada Cup in 1986.

ECONOMIC MOVE

Eagleson and Canada's other official voting delegate here, Gordon Renwick of Cambridge, Ont., president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, agreed such a format would ensure Canada's best players would be available for international tournaments every four years and that the profits from these tourneys would go towards financing Canadian teams at the world championships.

What do you think of the price of BEEF?

Quite expensive isn't it? Let's just hope this situation doesn't last too long! But till then, what could be done?

We think many customers will still be interested in buying beef, because of personal taste and mostly if we can offer it on special, much lower than the regular price. This week for instance, the Round Steak is available at $1.88 per pound instead of $2.68.

Naturally it isn't the special price of not so long ago, but an 80¢ saving per pound is more than appreciable. In the actual circumstances, we consider that taking advantage of a special on beef, represents quite a margin between avoiding it completely or, buying it at any price.

Obviously there are other alternatives such as pork, poultry, veal, fish, etc. All of this remains a matter of taste and that's why we'll continue suggesting our different weekly specials, at the lowest prices possible, including beef!

"I know I'm going to miss it"

Ulverton bus driver retires after 26 years

During the last thirty or forty years our schools have grown in size, facing an ever-increasing number of students to travel greater distances to receive an education. Twice a day students in rural (and sometimes urban) areas board a bright yellow bus for a ride which can last anywhere from 10 minutes to two hours. During that period of time their safety is almost entirely in the hands of the man at the wheel of the bus. Given the enormous responsibility, the awkward working hours and the modest salary, one wonders at the fortitude of the men who, year after year, continue to transport their noisy, hyperactive and infinitely precious cargo.

By NICK FONDA

During the last quarter century Wilfred Patrick has been a man of many faces.

Wilfred's was the face that peered up from underneath a car or truck or tractor at the small garage in Ulverton; his was the face that couldn't be seen behind the wheel of the big green snowblower opening the back roads of Ulverton after a winter storm and, perhaps most important, Wilfred's was the face that smiled good-morning to kids as they boarded the big yellow school bus every day.

After seven years on the snowplow, 15 years at the garage and 26 years behind the wheel of a school bus, Wilfred Patrick is retiring.

"I have very mixed feelings right now. I've enjoyed driving the bus and I've always had very good kids on my runs. I know I'm going to miss it." Wilfred was farming when he tendered for the job of driving students from Ulverton to Richmond. He drove them by car for the first four months and then somebody discovered his car was overloaded and he was given a bus.

"Now, I've never had an accident," said the Ulverton native, "but I have had some close calls. I once stopped on the highway to let a student off. He got off the bus and walked, as he was supposed to, in front of the bus and at that moment I looked in my rear view mirror and saw a tow truck, pulling a car, charging right through. I honked the horn, the student stopped -- luckily -- and the truck whipped right by the bus. If that child had taken a step out from the bus he'd have been killed."

The problem of drivers respecting the flashing lights on buses isn't as bad as it used to be. "It was bad several years ago," said Wilfred, "especially on the highways. I started stopping closer to the center of the road to try to discourage people from passing.

"During the last few years the police have started cracking down on drivers who don't respect a stopped school bus. The driver of the tow truck for example ended up paying a fine. He went off the road several miles ahead and I caught up to him. We exchanged words and then I reported him to the police and he got a $75. fine." A small price to pay when one considers a child's life could so easily have been lost.

Wilfred had more than one close call because of bad drivers. "This also happened to me on the highway: I stopped to let some kids off the bus. A car was behind me and it stopped the way it was supposed to but there was a second car following behind it. The second car rammed into the one behind the bus and pushed it forward. We were lucky -- nobody was hurt but there was quite a bit of damage to the body of the bus."

Some accidents are humorous, at least in retrospect. "There was a lad in Ulverton who, after he got off the bus, would jump on his bike and follow the bus through the village. At the time I had one stop which was very irregular, I'd make it once a week perhaps. One day the lad was pedaling his bike furiously, racing the bus when I made this irregular stop. The boy had his head down and ran smack into the stopped bus and broke the rear window. The boy wasn't hurt but his bike needed some straightening out."

Wilfred Patrick stands in front of a school bus... he's been driving for 26 years.

Wilfred says that although he's never had an accident, there've been several close calls.

One of the major complaints from kids about school buses is an almost total lack of comfort: the buses tend to be cold in the winter, hot in the summer and bumpy year round. "The kids have a point," said Wilfred, "buses could be fitted with more comfortable seats, and in my opinion could also be made somewhat safer. A bus is a difficult thing to make safe because passengers are constantly getting off and on but I think that arm rests would keep more kids in their seats. In the time I've been driving buses certainly haven't grown any safer... in the end the bus driver is the real safety factor."

Wilfred is acknowledged by his fellow drivers at Richmond Regional High School as a good driver. He has a perfect driving record after 26 years on roads which are often rough and sometimes treacherous. "There's no doubt that good and bad habits can be learned, but I tend to think that the qualities that make a good driver are in you at birth."

While it's difficult to pinpoint exactly what it is that makes one driver good and another bad Wilfred lays a lot of stress on defensive driving. The more time a driver spends worrying about the other guy, the less time he spends doing foolish and possibly dangerous things. Wilfred, who drove across Canada on one, feels that motorcycles can go a long way towards making a driver think defensively. "You have no protection on a bike," he pointed out, "and because of that you tend to be a lot more careful than you might be in a fast car."

"I also find," he continued, "that young kids pick up a lot just by watching people drive. A lot of the kids I used to drive to school are now grown up and they're out on the roads driving themselves. This may sound strange but I've found that kids who used to sit up front in the bus are good, safe drivers while the ones who used to ride in the back of the bus are just the opposite."

For seven years Wilfred, in addition to driving the school bus, was also running the snowblower for the municipality of Ulverton. "When the municipality first asked me to clear the roads I said no; I had the bus route. They were looking for a driver though and they agreed to let me work on the roads and drive the bus as well." During the winter Wilfred was often getting up at 3 a.m. and working on the roads till 7 when he started his bus run. Back home from school at 9 he'd get back on the plow and, in the case of a bad storm, he might spend the entire day clearing and re-clearing roads. "I don't need much sleep," he acknowledged with a smile.

During the last 15 years Wilfred, working out of his small garage in Ulverton, has repaired more than his fair share of cars, trucks, tractors and farm implements. Much like doctors of a byegone era, Wilfred was a mechanic who made house calls. It is, after all easier to move a man to a broken tractor than a broken tractor to a man.

Strangely enough, his mechanical expertise was never required while driving a school bus. Aside from a stalled bus with a dead battery which called for an unorthodox starting procedure (the bus was jacked up and a wrench used to set the rear wheels spinning) Wilfred's only experience with mechanical failure found him in a position from which he could do nothing. "I once had some brake problems on a bus. I was under the impression that the brakes had been fixed but I suddenly found myself going into a sharp corner with no brakes at all." By using the hand brake Wilfred made the corner and eventually got to his destination.

What does a man who's been successful in three careers do upon retirement? "I don't know," said Wilfred. "I don't have any plans right now. Maybe I'll sit at home and maybe I'll travel." Travelling in Quebec is no more dangerous than elsewhere in Canada, he says: "Quebec used to have bad drivers but despite their reputation they're really no worse than any other."

There's no doubt that if all Quebecers drove like Wilfred Patrick, our reputation would soon change.

One-man play's a very lonely experience

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Being the only actor in a full-length play is somewhat like being a long-distance runner.

"It's a very lonely experience," says Richard Monette, the single performer in this season's Stratford Festival production of Judgement.

The Montreal-born actor, interviewed shortly before Judgement's North American-premiere on the Avon Theatre stage June 9, described his role in the play as "a marathon."

"I'm on stage for close to two hours. There's no relief, no intermission, no comedy, nothing but the experience itself."

And that "experience" may shock and repulse some members of the audience.

"That's what is so difficult about this play. I have to rely on the audience's good will. They have to come in and really want to sit and listen and follow this experience. Really, the audience has to do 50 per cent of the work."

IMPRISONED BY NAZIS

The play, written about five years ago by young English playwright Barry Collins, was inspired by an incident in wartime Poland. Several Russian officers were captured by the Nazis and left imprisoned in a small underground monastery cell when the Nazis fled from advancing Russian troops.

After more than a month, they were found by their countrymen. Only two were still alive, insane. They had survived by killing and eating their companions. Both were shot by the soldiers who discovered them.

Collins has fictionized this incident by presenting one of the survivors as sane. The play consists of this survivor addressing the audience as his judges, telling them the details of what he and his fellow officers experienced during their imprisonment.

It's the first play in the festival's 26-season history to be recommended "for adult audiences only."

Monette said that when he first read the play he was both shocked and moved by it.

LACKS SENSATIONALISM

"My first question was, would it be legitimate to subject an audience to this? I decided it would because, although the subject matter was revolting to a certain extent, I didn't find it sensationalistic in any way. Also, what I liked about it was its anti-war statement."

Originally, he had been approached to do the play at a small theatre in Toronto.

"After reading it, I took it to Robin (Phillips, the festival's artistic director) and I said to him: "Will you direct this? If you direct it I will do it; if you don't direct it I won't do it.'

Jaws sequel "even more horrific"

"Jaws 2" by Hank Searls, Bantam paperback, $2.25, 293 pp.

Chief Martin Brody of the Amity, New York police department is in for another long, hot summer. The blockbuster of a novel, "Jaws", by Peter Benchley, which became the rage in the summers of '74 and '75, has now been sequelized as "Jaws 2", written by Hank Searls, from a screenplay by Howard Sackler and Dorothy Tristan.

Searls's novel has returned to the quiet resort town of Amity, on Long Island Sound, where Chief Brody, (played by Roy Scheider in both the original film and sequel), is besieged by problems on the sea, under it, and ashore. Perhaps memory fails, but in spite of its being a sequel, Searls's "Jaws 2" appears to be more tautly written, and far more suspenseful than Jaws The First.

"Jaws 2" promises to be even more horrific than the original, as early as the ichthyological information, from Richard Ellis's "The Book of Sharks": "accumulated data indicate that in all species of sharks, the females grow larger than the males...". Immediately we are made aware that this second set of jaws is larger, and more insatiable than her predecessor, due to the about to be born baby sharks she is carrying.

Mrs. Shark goes about her survival instincts with robot-like indifference, and seems to have a more accommodating palate than Jaws 1. Scuba-divers, bikini-clad water-skiers, seals, sonar spheres dangled by helicopters, and a group of children in a sailing regatta, are all prey for the Terror of Amity in "Jaws 2".

Searls follows the same format as Benchley did, in that he provides as much technical data about sharks and their habits as an interest reader can digest, while the suspense level is maintained by a series of shocking events which promise to yield some exciting cinematography.

As an action novel, the Jaws sequel is a step above the original because the romance angle between Ellen Brody, the Chief's young wife, and Matt Hooper, the Wood's Hole Marine Biologist has been dropped, as has any very sustained attention to on-shore problems about the town's future.

There is a sub-plot involving gambling and big-city mafiosi, but it is never allowed to usurp the pregnant shark as the central, and domineering "character". As Mama shark goes about her cold-hearted savagery, the town of Amity is being threatened by the knowledge that some sharks may be territorial, which brings Chief Brody's vocation into jeopardy, as the resort town once again faces the prospect of deserted beaches. Further complications involve a vacationing, trigger-happy police Sergeant from Flushing, and the children of Brody.

Whether "Jaws 2" will surpass "Godfather II" as an economical sure-fire merchandising gimmick will be up to the summer of 78's movie crowds to assess. "Jaws 2", the novel, appears destined to repeat the bonanza of the first novel, with the Bantam paperback now into its sixth printing and counting.

Photography highlights Pretty Baby

By HOLLY LEVINE

A photograph is often mistaken for an exact reproduction of a captured moment, imprinted forever. But a photograph makes a definite statement about the scene it has seemingly only recorded. Through the art of the photographer and chemicals used in the dark room, details can be enhanced or blurred out of focus. The viewer is often unaware that he is looking at a deliberate distortion, or alteration, of the actual scene. That is the essence of good photography.

Pretty Baby, directed by Louis Malle, creates a similar impression. It appears to simply record the story unfolding on screen, but it also gently guides the viewer through a highly structured development. The photography - Sven Nykvist is the director of photography - is mesmerizing. It is easy to watch the film as if in a dream, so slow and serene is the pace. Pretty Baby takes its time, and its impact is absorbed slowly, like water under an oriental rug. The good photographer awaits the moment when his subject loses grip on the cover of inscrutability and inadvertently exposes his personality to the camera's eye.

Most of the film takes place in the lavish, almost "unreal", interior of a New Orleans brothel, circa 1917. Violet, played by Brooke Shields, is the 12-year-old daughter of Hattie, Susan Sarondon, one of the very pretty prostitutes in the house. Violet is being brought up by Madame Nell, a hard-headed, cocaine-sniffing old woman, who is fully aware of the gold mine she has in her possession. Frances Faye, who plays the Madame is delightful; her remarks are priceless, her face a marvel.

Violet seems eager to make her debut as a working member of the household, whereby she will gain final admission to the adult world. The film is composed of contrasts, as Violet fluctuates between childhood and womanhood, one moment chasing lizards or playing dolls, the next posing for the photographer Bellocq or chatting up a customer. Bellocq, unconvincingly played by Keith Carradine, is loosely-based on a real character of that name who lived in New Orleans in those high energy days of jazz and crazy living. The real Bellocq was a lonely, deformed man, always regarded with horror by his prostitute models, whom he paid to photograph. Pretty Baby's Bellocq has traded in physical grotesqueness for an emotional dispassion that is curiously out of place in the earthy world of whores, wealthy men and abandon.

At first, Bellocq's idiosyncracies are regarded with disbelief by the girls. He blends into the surroundings quickly, though, and they lose interest in him, calling him Papa, as a dubious sign of affection. He is always there, photographing them when the light is right, consumed with a fanatical dedication, or observing the action from a corner when it is too dark to take photos. He never expresses sexual interest in anyone, or any interest except getting pictures taken when the light is good. Violet, accustomed to being the centre of attention, demands the same treatment from Bellocq. He insults her petulant vanity by constantly maintaining that she is still a child.

His perception of her confusion, living as she does between two worlds, does not protect him from falling eventually under her spell. When given the chance, Violet is helpless to prevent herself from choosing the childhood that is rightfully hers. Bellocq masters his anguish at losing her by withdrawing into the detached, passive world of photographer, and watches her leave. As Violet stands before another camera, held by another man, her beautiful face conveys a myriad of emotions and one wonders whether she will find her childhood after all.

The film succeeds in drawing the audience into the world of one of Storyville's high class brothels. The contrasts delineated between the house, full of laughter, pretty women and music, and the cold, moralistic outside world are mercilessly depicted. It is possible to overlook these aspects of Pretty Baby, and to enjoy the film solely for the surface beauty of the characters and the photography. The more powerful beauty of the film, though, lies in the compassion and understanding with which the unconscious dilemma of a child and the conscious ones of those around her, are portrayed.

The subject matter of Pretty Baby has offered opportunities to sensationalize the film. The only people to succumb to the temptation however, have been members of various censor boards across the country. It is unfortunate that Pretty Baby, which bears no traces of obscenity, should be so interpreted by some. See Pretty Baby. It is the most beautiful film to be released this year.

Richmond County Historical Society plan events

(Publicist for Society)

This year the Richmond County Historical Society is planning a more active summer than usual. Events will be of two kinds - those that take place at the Museum and those in which the society plans to participate.

The Museum, situated on route 243 at Melbourne, Que., is open from 2 to 5 p.m. every day, except Tuesday and Wednesday. Misses Vicki Blouin and Debbie Eastwood, our two bilingual guides, are in attendance Mondays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. Members of the Society act as hosts and hostesses on Sundays.

Events taking place at the Museum are listed below.

A display of lights and lighting has been on view and remained until July 3. This display co-incided with Heritage Week and included candles, oil lamps, gas lamps and early electric lights. Tea, coffee and cookies were served free of charge to the visitors.

An exhibition of horse-harness making equipment will remain set up at the Museum from July 20 to July 31. On July 22 and July 29 Mr. Adam from Windsor will be present to demonstrate the obsolescent trade of harness-making.

Dolls of all kinds come to the Museum on August 6 and stay until August 16. On the opening day, an expert doll-maker, Mr. Shigeo Suwa, a well-known artist in his native Japan, will be at the Museum to show visitors the art of "shimotsuke shibori" or doll-making. Mr. Suwa fashions the dolls from a special paper which he himself prepares. These exquisite little creations stand from twelve to eighteen inches high and some of them will be for sale. The doll exhibit closes the summer's events at the Museum.

Activities in which the Society will participate started on July 2 when members and friends visited the Shefford County Historical Society's Vittie Memorial Library at 66 Dufferin Street, Granby. The theme of the exhibit was Trades, with particular emphasis on the history of the bicycle. Tea and coffee were served and after leaving there, we proceeded on Route 112 to Waterloo, continued on Route 243 to the Paul Holland Museum in Knowlton, home of the Brome County Historical Society. The theme there was Cottage Crafts. Members and friends who are interested in forming a cavalcade for this and any future museum visits are asked to be at the Museum in Melbourne at noon and to bring a picnic lunch. Those who wish to go by themselves are welcome to do so. If possible, take an identification, such as your R.C.H.S. membership card with you.

On July 22, the Missisquoi Historical Society will be receiving visitors in the Cornell Mill Museum at Stanbridge East on Route 202, three miles east of Bedford.

On August 6, it will be the turn of the Richmond County Historical Society to entertain. After watching Mr. Suwa make his paper dolls visitors can go the covered bridge about two miles from the museum and from there to the Denison Mill which was built in 1850 and renovated in 1975-76 by James and Francoise Quig. As well, the J. Armand Bombardier Museum, which portrays the history of the ski-doo, is located in nearby Valcourt.

On September 10, Compton County Historical and Museum Society will welcome societies from the surrounding areas. Located on Route 210 at Eaton Corner this museum will have on view an exhibition of Transportation and Communication. On the same day, the Sherbrooke Historical Society situated at Howardene Park, 1304 Portland, will be open. Visit the Museum on the ground floor and then go upstairs to the Archives where Miss Marie-Jeanne Daigneau, Archivist, will welcome her many friends and acquaintances.

For further information call: Mr. Eckhard Rothe, 819-569-9551, ext. 213; Mr. Denis Cloutier, 514-378-9077; or 514-372-4500; Mrs. Lois Callan, 819-889-2426; Miss B. McAdams, 819-845-4223 or 567-5281.

As well as visits to museums, the Society is arranging a trip to Three Rivers on July 15. Buses leave the museum in Melbourne at 8 a.m. and leave Three Rivers for the return trip at about 5 p.m. A guided tour of the city will include the La Verendrye Monument, the Duplessis Monument, the Anglican Church and the iron works. Dinner will be served at "Le Cachet", a restaurant in a beautiful setting. The price for the day's activities is $10.00 to reserve a place for yourself and your friends contact, before July 2, if possible: Mrs. MacNaughton, 826-2293, Richmond; Mrs. A. Mrs. A. Hatcher will be delegate to the County meeting in August hosted by Milby Branch.

Convenors for supper at Grace Christian Home were Mrs. E. Marlin, Mrs. Annesley and Mrs. Butler. They received a hearty vote of thanks.

Meeting adjourned and a musical program prepared by Mrs. Butler and Mrs. Sims opened with the singing of O Canada. Cindy Sparkes and Karen Warnholtz, accompanied by Lois Sparkes, entertained with two vocal duets. "The Country Kids" orchestra, Charleen Smith, piano, Kathy Musty and Craig Drew, accordion, Marlene Harvey and Scott Lowd, violin, played several selections which were much enjoyed with audience participating in choruses. Nancy and Karen Little entertained with vocal duets with guitar accompaniment. Little Melanie Johnston played two piano solos in a very pleasing manner. Susan Fearon was heard with pleasure in several solos, with Mrs. Little accompanying. Program concluded with the Country Kids leading in a sing-a-long. Mrs. Fearon thanked the young entertainers for their excellent performances.

The supper bell called us all into the dining room where a turkey salad supper was enjoyed by all, after the pronouncement of Grace by Mr. Fisk.

Must make mention of Mrs. Drummond's canary. He sang along most harmoniously with the entertainers, reaching all the high notes with joyous abandon.

Mr. Fisk thanked the ladies of the W.I. for their visit. This is an event we W.I. members look forward to and enjoy each year.

ADS School committee meets

DANVILLE (JE) — The last meeting of the School year took place in the Staff Room at A.D.S. Elementary, on Thursday evening, June 15.

The Chairlady, Janet Element called the meeting to order. Eleven members were present. In the absence of Eleanor Besmargian, the head teacher Brian Woods acted as secretary. The minutes of the May 11th meeting were approved after the correction of one item.

The treasurer's report was reviewed for the year, and a satisfactory balance was arrived at. Several bills were paid concerning the Graduation supper which took place the following evening.

The business of the meeting - Mrs. Element thanked the members who kindly brought in food to the last School Board meeting at A.D.S. She also gave a report on the final Parent's Committee meeting and also gave the last minute details for the Graduation supper.

Mrs. Gertrude Lazda gave a detailed report on the Workshop she attended at the Home and School Convention in May. Several members had attended, but gave their reports at the previous meeting.

Mrs. Joan Pye distributed reports of her Perceptual Motor Program. A motion of thanks was given to Joan and her team.

Janet Element was thanked for the work she has done during the year, and she in turn, thanked the members for a very enjoyable year. She hopes that some members will continue another year, as the second year is always easier, in her case it being the third.

The meeting was adjourned by the chairlady and the members exchanged pleasantries about the past year.

A delicious lunch was served by the host, Robin Mallory.

The General Meeting will be held on September 21.

Masons Climb Owl's Head

STANSTEAD (IH) — For many years generations of Masonic lodges have visited Golden Rule lodge, No. 5 Stanstead and climbed majestic Owl's Head mountain, a tradition established more than a century ago. Golden Rule Lodge A.F. & A.M. Stanstead, is 175 years old. It was on June 24, 1858, that the first meeting of the Lodge was held atop of Owl's Head mountain and Alexander Murray initiated "above the clouds".

In celebration of the 175th anniversary of the Lodge, on June 24, 1978, there were 195 Masons present from 60 different Lodges in eleven Grand Jurisdictions.

Among those to speak briefly at the Mountain top gathering were Fraternity from England, India, The Philippines, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Alberta, Ontario, New Brunswick and Quebec Lodges, all very well represented. The gathering included a large delegation from the French speaking lodges in Montreal, La Loge des Coeurs Unis initiated in 1870, now having a membership of 216; Denechau, initiated in 1905, now membership is 130; La Loge Renaissance, initiated in 1947 and has 68 members; La Loge Delta, the newest initiated in 1972 and has 38 members.

Something new was added this year and much enjoyed by all, a musical interlude provided by R.W. Brother Rodney Wilson of Athol, Mass., who played his accordion, an unusual feature of the meeting. Brother Wilson led an enthusiastic sing-along with the Fraternity assembled prior to the meeting, their voices reaching out from all sides of the 2,425 feet above sea level mountain.

Brother Wilson's playing added to the opening ceremony, also, by playing O Canada, The Star Spangled Banner and God Save the Queen. Brother Wilson's son, Brother Warren Wilson brought with him Brother Richard C. Clark, also from Athol, who is totally blind. Brother Clark is a happy, well adjusted self-sufficient individual who negotiated the slippery rocks almost as well as many of his Brethen who had perfect eyesight. He is presently Junior Warden of his lodge in Athol.

The session upon the mountain was conducted by the officers of Golden Rule Masonic Lodge of which W. Brother Donald W. Prangley is Master.

There was a time, for many years, when this annual pilgrimage was to climb the entire mountain bottom to top, then back, but always on June 24, regardless of weather conditions, so the climb has been in pouring rain and bright sunshine. Saturday, the weatherman provided a fine day. Times have changed, too, so that at least three quarters of the ascent is by chair lift and this enables many of the Seniors of the Fraternity to attend.

The fraternityship continued on Sunday morning, June 25, when a record number of Masons and their ladies gathered in the banquet Hall of the Masonic Temple in Stanstead for breakfast to total over 60.

Brother Patrick Deslandes did an excellent job of cooking the bacon and eggs. He was assisted by his young son and Brother Douglas Mayhew to serve, while Brother Louis Barber assisted in the kitchen. This too was a decided success with record attendance.

After breakfast, all gathered in Centenary United church, Stanstead, to join the Three Steeples congregation in a period of worship. The service was conducted by R.W. Brother Rev. A.B. Lovelace, whose sermon theme was, "Remember Thy Creator", giving it meaningful words from youth into old age, concluding with the words, "The body is the temple of the living God."

Mrs. A.P. Gordon was at the organ and the choir trio of A.J. Philip, Mrs. Barry Gallant and Mrs. Paul Duncan from Stanstead College added to the inspiring service by singing an anthem, "O Love of God".

The scripture Lessons were read by R.W. Brother E. Fidler, Past District Deputy, and R.W. Brother Gerald Colt, Past District Deputy.

Following the worship service, all mingled with the congregation in the Fellowship Hall where the ladies of Centenary church served coffee and refreshments.

This brought to a close another happy and successful weekend in the 175-year history of Golden Rule Lodge No. 5, Stanstead, a gathering of friends and fraternity.

Another historic event in the annuals of the Lodge history took place on the preceding Tuesday evening, June 20, when Brother J.H. Reginald Curtis was presented his 50-year jewel, with all due ceremony.

Couple honored at farewell party

BIRCHTON — On Saturday, June 17, the Community sat down to a bountiful pot luck supper, to honour Mr. and Mrs. Howard Picard (Howard and Reta), prior to their leaving to reside in Brampton, Ont.

At the appointed hour, Mr. Arthur Rogers escorted the guests of honour from their home, next door, to the Hall where they were greeted by Mrs. George Latewood, who pinned a pretty yellow-rose corsage on Reta and by Mrs. Arthur Rogers, who lapelled a red carnation on Howard and by Mrs. Murdo MacKinnon, who corsaged Audrey Waterman with an orangey-pink corsage of roses.

After Howard, Reta and Audrey took their places at the well-laden table, the tasty and varied dishes were served cateria-style, in quantities as suited each appetite, sometimes not too wisely for a good night's sleep a bit later.

Those seated with the guests of honour included their sons George and Leslie and their wives.

On behalf of the Community, Mrs. Jack Murray, after some touching and some humorous remarks, presented Howard and Reta with an artistically decorated purse. Howard and Reta each, with deep emotions, thanked the friends for the token and for the enjoyable Community evening.

Mrs. Audrey Waterman, who is moving along with the Picards, graciously expressed her appreciation of the attractive gold-coloured bracelet, and the best wishes expressed to her. When requested, Leslie offered an appropriate prayer.

A green and white cake was placed before the honored guests who together cut it. This delicious treat was served to all the gathering.

The rest of the evening was spent in chatting amid music by Mrs. Jack Drummond with her guitar, with her audience often joining in; and by Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Picard with his guitar; and how the rafters rang when George Picard sat down at the piano, and most of the folk gathered 'round', to the singing of many old favourites, even Old Black Joe, the Little Brown Church in the Wildwood, etc... etc... He Lives within my Heart.

The loss of the Picards is dulled a bit by the thought that they will be back in their home at a later date, when Howard retires and that Leslie and Margaret will be in the Picard home, and George's Picard tent is presently pitched on the Picard back lawn! May God bless them, and Audrey, with good health and contentment in their new surroundings!

AUTUMN RUNE

A wing-stemmed flower
rises out of the cleft of rock
above the dry brown grass.

Yellow climbs high onto the trees,
and I am one with the stone wall,
the road,
and the crows
vanishing into the red, setting sun;

I am one with the hawk hunting low over his fields, pure as early morning air.

Like the fat spider
I delight in the company of goldenrods and the presence of bees.

As time slows down, slows down... my mind is filled with what I cannot see.

Two-generation services at Creek Church

WEST BOLTON (BM) — The Creek Church has stood in its present location in West Bolton, on Brill Rd., since 1878.

Some of the members of its present day congregation are third and fourth generation descendants of the hardy men and women who gave of their time, talents and resources in the erection of the building one hundred years ago.

Among the congregation at the services held May 28 to June 4, representatives of two generations of the Inglis, Mizener and Quilliams families were present: Clayton Inglis and his daughter Marsha, Mrs. Norman Emmett; Byron Mizener and his son Roscoe; Stanley Quilliams and his son Robert.

These are three of the family names which have been connected with the Creek Church throughout its century of existence, also other names of the families connected with the Church throughout the years, are the Williams, Whitcher, Allen families.

During these services, Rev. Peter Joyce, Minister of the Knowlton-Creek pastoral charge invited these people to relate some of their personal recollections associated with the Church, also readings by Arthur Mizener and Mrs. B. Mizener.

Since Clayton Inglis, Stanley Quilliams and Byron Mizener are all of retirement age, some of their recollections went back to the era when members of the congregation went to Sunday services either on foot, by bicycle or by horse drawn vehicles. Also remembered were the kerosene lamps, the sulky wood burning furnace, the foot pumped high-pitched organ played by Laena Quilliams and accompanied by her father Hiram Phelps and by Frank Mizener who played the violin.

The Christmas tree was a big annual event for the children of the congregation. Whereas most of the boys and girls dreaded the arrival of that horrifying moment in the evening's program, when, by tradition, they were expected to stand up all alone in front of all those people and recite a Christmas poem which they had been trying for weeks to memorize.

They all looked forward with great anticipation to the arrival of Santa, who somehow always arrived at just the right time and who always found a bag of candy on the tree for each of them.

Prior to the year 1878 many residents of the Creek area held worship services at the local school house. They were a congregation of what was known as the Free Will Baptist Society. Feeling the need for a larger and more suitable accommodation they decided to build a church.

In April of that year, three trustees of the congregation, Stephen Whitehead, Daniel Witham and Henry Buckland purchased a piece of land from James Rooney for the sum of $25.00. The present church building was constructed on this site in the same year and became known as the Creek Church.

Rev. Rufus W. Collins from Vermont was the minister when the Church was built. It is not definitely known how long Rev. Collins remained here, nor when the congregation changed from Free Will Baptist to Methodist affiliation. However records beginning in 1885 lead us to believe the Creek Church became of the South Stukely Circuit that year. Rev. C.H. Lawrence was the minister. Forty years during the incumbency of the Rev. Charles Huxtable, the Creek Church became a member of the newly formed United Church of Canada.

The Creek Church remained on the South Stukely circuit until the departure of the Rev. W.H. Thompson in 1943. In that year, because of the shortage of ministers, the changing from horse to automobile transportation, the loss of the parsonage by fire or perhaps a combination of all, the South Stukely circuit was discontinued and the Creek congregation placed under the Knowlton Pastoral charge.

Guild meets

ABERCORN — On June 21st Marion Lahue was hostess for the All Saint's Guild of Abercorn. Meeting was opened by the President - Pauline Wilkins with all repeating the Lord's prayer. For the roll call instead of the items of interest there was an exchange of plant slips. As in the year past there was one plant that outshone the others so all decided to sell this at a silent auction. This plant was donated by Mrs. Garland, a beautiful shrimp plant in full bloom. Proud owner was Pauline Wilkins for the sum of $2.00 but not without a bit of excitement and luck as in most cases there is always two bids the same, so out came a deck of cards for cutting with Pauline winning by one point.

Minutes and financial report were read and approved by Ethel Riddel, also a thank-you note from Marion Lahue for the nice surprise birthday party that the other members organized with the help of friends and relatives. This was held at the W.I. Hall on June 5th. President told the group that the Sutton Valley Council representative had called on her for our support in their effort to put out a calendar with all group activities of the area. 10 dollars was pledged for this.

Harvest Tea date was set for Oct. 28th. Sec. told the group that from the 150-lb. bundle of drapery that was purchased last year for $20.00 netted a profit of $60.17 least $15.00 in articles made for the sales table last fall. for the sales table last fall.

The President also read from the minutes of the first Guild meeting formed in 1956. Of all the members at that time there were 3 still with the group, Gladys Payne, Arlene Rogerson and herself. Edna Garland joined the following year. Of course over the years some moved away and others have passed away.

Plans were discussed for the community picnic set for July 16th at 11 o'clock at the home of Pauline Wilkins.

Mrs. Riddel reported that she had the quilt all hand-sewn together, many thanks to her for this. It will be tied in the W.I. Hall in Sept. This day will be our regular meeting also.

Several articles were brought by Jeannette Gibson for our nearly new table. Many thanks to her as although she is not a member of the Guild she is one of our helping hands when it comes to making articles for the sale, baking and giving us a hand when the Harvest Tea arrives.

Instead of organizing a bus trip this year we plan a small outing by car sometime in Aug. perhaps take in the Antique show in Newport, Vt. with dinner at Troy, Vt.

Chance game was donated by Ethel Haggerty and won by Bea Courtemanche. The special sale was donated by Marion Lahue. This was home-made cookies so all were sold quickly netting us $6.00.

Next meeting will be held at the home of Arlene Rogerson in Abercorn. She will be donating the special sale.

Instead of the interesting items 4 members are bringing articles of interest and telling the history of it. This should add a change from the regular routine.

Meeting was closed with prayer and a delicious pot luck lunch was served.

MANSONVILLE (OJ) — St. Paul's Guild held their regular meeting in the Parish Hall on June 14 with a good attendance.

The President, Judy Armstrong opened the meeting with devotions from the Living Message.

Layreader Stella Collier was presented with a book of poems from the Guild. Several thank you notes were read. The sum of ten dollars was donated to the Vacation Bible School. A new stove and refrigerator have been purchased for the Hall.

Final arrangements were made for the Flea Market to be held on July 15, and a Hot Dish Supper on August 19.

The meeting closed with the Prayer Partner Prayer, and recessed for the summer months.

FOSTER — The St. James Evening Guild met with Mrs. Dot de Solla on June 8, with eleven members and one visitor present.

The president, Mrs. Reba de Solla, opened the meeting with prayer, followed by the roll call and reading of the minutes.

In the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. Muriel Whitehead gave the financial report.

Proceeds from the May 12 card party, including the drawing, amounted to $167.25. The sum of $173.00 was realized from the May 27 rummage sale. The corresponding secretary reported on cards sent and received.

Plans were discussed for the July 15 lawn social and for the wedding on July 22nd for which the guild will cater.

Mrs. Suzy Allen won the monthly drawing.

The July meeting will be one week early, on July 6, in the hall with Mrs. Elvia Johnson as hostess.

BOLTON CENTRE — The St. Patrick's Ladies Guild met on June 12 at the Bolton Centre Community Hall, with an attendance of 16 members and one guest.

The meeting was opened by the President, Mrs. Eunice Peasley, with all repeating the Guild Prayer.

The Secretary, Mrs. Brenda Louson read the minutes of the last meeting. The treasurer reported $140.00 from the Rummage sale.

Much discussion followed on the catering for a wedding in July. Also the report that the new church lights should be in soon.

The meeting was adjourned and a delicious lunch served by Helen and Jean Cousens.

Sutton Market draws crowd

SUTTON (KT) — The June 24, Sutton Saturday Market was, generally speaking, a successful day and held its own financially with last year, despite the extra celebrations, going on in the area.

A Dixieland Band, arranged at the last minute by a group of friends of Ted Snyder added much to its life and spirit. Mr. Snyder has been involved with the Market for a long time and music is his hobby and joy as with his fellow musicians, several being doctors of music. The group included drum, clarinet and trumpet and certainly delighted listeners over the two hours that they played. There will be further last minute features at the Market and so not publicised, which will provide much added interest.

Tony Price, a professional man whose hobby is painting on wood by a woodburning process will be there with his wife on a "spur of the moment" basis - he with a display of his interesting work and Mrs. Price with some of her excellent ceramics. The majority of the vendors are not professionals in the true sense of the word but may be classed as "professional hobbyists", whose work is diversified and skilled. An all season regular is Bromek Kochainski with his outstanding work in felt.

The Painter's Corner continues to attract a lot of interest. Among those exhibiting are Mary Martin, Dunham, Jean Cookson, Mansonville - whose lino and wood-cuts are excellent and beautifully executed - and Mariette Fortin - Ruiz who is exhibiting all summer at Orford.

The Sutton Valley Council particularly invites anyone in the mood to come down and have fun playing their particular kind of music, either as individuals or groups. The Market will be delighted to see you - you may get in touch or just come. Impromptu performers will add to the relaxed mood and make it fun for all!

Crafts Exhibition

MILAN — Many of this Community enjoyed the afternoon and evening at the Municipal Hall on June 11th, where on exhibition of weaving, macrame and pottery was held with a good display of weaving especially. This handiwork being the results of the winter clsses sponsored by "Canada at Work."

The children, as well as adults, were amused by Chatouille, the clown, who also played several tunes on the accordion and joined with a few others who had brought their musical instruments for entertainment.

Salads, sandwiches and sweets were enjoyed out on the lawn on such a fine evening.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McLeod showed slides and movies of the past and present, reminding many of the changes which have taken place and some which may have almost been forgotten. Monique Goulet expressed thanks to Mr. and Mrs. McLeod and all who had helped to make the event a success.

A "make-up" orchestra played and the young folk enjoyed dancing for the remainder of the evening.

Sweetsburg Ward

by John McCaghey

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — Don G. MacFarlane, of the Town of Mount Royal, pleaded not guilty to a charge of having intentionally used threats to induce Jean Baptiste Renault to commit a crime in the Town of Brome Lake, October 1977. He chose jury trial and preliminary hearing was continued to June 20.

Oscar Seney, of Cowansville, changed his option and pleaded guilty to counts of simple assault on the person of his wife and arson. Defence lawyer Claude Hamann told the court his client had problems with alcohol and had pushed his wife. "He tried to light a fire in the stove and, in all probability, due to his condition, dropped the ignited matter in a box beside the stove." He then said his client had joined Alcoholics Anonymous and suggested the sentence could be continued to September to allow the court time to study his conduct in the interim.

Crown attorney Yves Lagace said the facts cited by the defence were accurate and agreed to the deferral in sentencing.

Judge Bernard Legare told Senay to stay away from alcohol and future family arguments, otherwise he would land up behind bars prior to continuing his sentence to December 11.

A bench warrant was issued for Serge Marois, of Cowansville, when he failed to appear for sentencing on a charge of having stolen a doctor's medical kit at the BMP Hospital.

Rene Decelles, of Cowansville, changed his option and pleaded guilty to a charge of hit and run. Defence lawyer Pierre Gibeau told the court his client was insured and the damages had been paid. "It was an error of youth," he said prior to requesting his client be given an absolute discharge under terms of article 662-1 of the criminal code.

Crown attorney Lagace opposed the absolute discharge. Judge Legare fined the accused $100 and costs, in default 30 days, and allowed him a month to pay the fine and costs.

— Bench warrants were issued for Claude Michaud and Andre Hayeur, both of St. Hyacinthe, when they failed to appear for preliminary hearings on counts of theft.

Eric Patch renounced his rights to a preliminary hearing on three counts of having made indirect threats on the person of Ronald deFelice, and was cited directly to the assizes by virtue of article 476 of the criminal code with the consent of all parties.

Crown attorney Claude Noiseux requested it be noted he gave his consent due to the lack of an English language court stenographer.

A bench warrant was issued for Serge Marois, of Granby, when he failed to appear for sentencing on a charge of theft.

Andre Archambeault, Christian Lavalliere, and Daniel Hockhoussen, all of Cowansville, and Michel Lacroix, of West Brome, pleaded guilty at their arraignments on a charge of simple theft of wood in Dunham, May 20.

"My clients were celebrating St. Jean Baptiste a month early," defence lawyer Claude Hamann said. "The provincial roads department had cut some brush and trees and they appropriated a few to start a campfire. When they went back for a second load they were caught. It was poplar and had a possible total value of $10 to $15 and they are willing to reimburse the rightful owner. Considering those circumstances I feel the interests of justice would be well served with suspended sentences."

Crown attorney Noiseux said he had no objection to the suggestion of the defence if the young men were bound over to keep the public peace for six months and were ordered to effect restitution within 10 days.

Judge Bernard Legare imposed the sentence suggested by the crown.

Sunday School holds picnic

RICHMOND — A very successful day was spent on the St. Francis Elementary School grounds in Richmond, on Saturday, June 17, when 54 children, parents and guests assembled for the annual St. Anne's (Anglican) Sunday School picnic.

While waiting for all to arrive, the younger children amused themselves on the swings and slides while the older ones held a soccer-baseball game. Superintendent Mrs. Jean Storry, with the able assistance of Canon Walker and several mothers, organized several races for the children, including a relay, wheelbarrow, big and little, piggy-back, potato-on-a-spoon and a balloon contest.

Everyone gathered together to eat the picnic lunches they had brought. The King's Daughters Guild supplied each person with a soft drink and ice cream, which was very welcome on such a hot day. Following the meal, Canon Walker, on behalf of all the children, presented Mrs. Storry with a beautiful sprengeri plant in appreciation of her work and a sign of their love. Mrs. Storry thanked everyone and expressed her regret at losing Mrs. Sandra Pariseau and Mrs. Bev Hendershot as teachers, as well as the two Hendershot children from the Sunday School. She was pleased that Misses Vicky Jones and Lori Grainger, Mrs. Debbie Noble, Mrs. Laurel D'Anthenay and Mrs. Marion Coddington would be continuing with their work in the Sunday School.

The children continued their picnic with a rousing game of "Capture the Flag"; some children preferred the quiet of a handicraft session, while others played on the outdoor equipment. The afternoon came to an end, following the traditional foot races, and a prize for everyone participating.

The Sunday School of St. Anne's wish to thank Mr. Roland Dewar, vice-president of St. Francis, for his kindness to them.
