

Layoffs hit

TORONTO (CP) — William Blundell, president of the country's largest appliance manufacturer, will lay himself off for a week without pay in March.

Not only Blundell, but all Camco Inc. vice-presidents and general managers and most of the Toronto-based company's professional staff will be laid off along with blue-collar workers.

Senegal and Gambia now Senegambia confederation

DAKAR (AP) — Without fanfare, the west African countries of Senegal and Gambia today became the confederation of Senegambia.

Senegalese President Abdou Diouf entertained President Dawda Jawara of Gambia in Dakar on Sunday at a cultural "Senegambia evening," the only celebration to mark the merger.

The Senegalese population of 5.8 million is almost 10 times that of Gambia, but the two countries are ethnically linked, speak the same local languages and are mostly Moslem.

Diouf is president of the new confederation and Jawara the vice-president.

The merger resulted directly from an attempted coup in Gambia last July while Jawara was in London for the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer. He invoked a 1965 mutual defence treaty with Senegal and Senegalese troops put down the rebellion. The coup leaders fled to neighboring Guinea-Bissau.

Gambia, a former British colony, is a strip of territory between 10 and 15 kilometres wide along the Gambia River and is surrounded on three sides by the former French colony of Senegal.

Both countries will retain their identities and governments, but a joint cabinet will be formed, the armed forces, economic and monetary systems will be merged and communications and foreign relations will be co-ordinated.

The treaty also provides for the creation of a joint assembly. Two-thirds of the members will be selected by the Senegalese parliament and the rest by the Gambian parliament.

"You can't lay me off. I quit!"

Ryan survives leadership test

MONTREAL (CP) — A two-day meeting of the Quebec Liberal party's general council ended Sunday in another test of Claude Ryan's leadership, and although he survived the test, his future as party leader is still in doubt.

A last-minute bid to hold a leadership review in May instead of September, as scheduled, was defeated.

About 30 of the 400 delegates voted in favor of the motion, but a significant number abstained in the show-of-hands vote.

In a closed session on Saturday, delegates accepted a motion calling for the members to throw their support behind Ryan until September.

But late Sunday, Taillon riding president Nicole Petit called for an immediate mail-in vote by party members on an early leadership review because she was tired "of all the complaining in the hallways but the refusal (of those complaining) to say anything in public."

Delegates gave Ryan a standing ovation after the motion was defeated and several began chanting "Ryan, Ryan."

But the decision of the delegates not to hold an early leadership review left some members saying the party will be crippled by uncertainty over the leadership issue.

In other developments, delegates overwhelmingly voted in favor of a motion calling for a reaffirmation of the party stand on language rights.

The motion reiterated the party's guarantee that Quebec's English-speaking minority be able to "direct and manage its health and social services and its educational institutions in its own language."

'RESPECT RIGHTS'

"Minority rights must be respected," Ryan said. "Especially with regards to the anglophone community, which in addition to being an integral part of Quebec's heritage, speaks Canada's other official language and the everyday language of this continent."

The move was apparently carried out to ease anxieties of English-speaking Quebecers who have criticized Ryan's recent stands. He especially came under attack when he called on his party Oct. 2 to support a motion by the Parti Quebecois criticizing Ottawa's plans then to unilaterally patriate the constitution.

Gabr asks government to match $250 million

By Anthony Ross

NORTH HATLEY — Saad Gabr says he will spend hundreds of millions of dollars to help the economically depressed Eastern Townships, but he wants the federal, provincial and municipal governments to participate too.

In the posh surroundings of his Lake Massawippi home, Gabr announced Saturday his plans to start a $10 million industrial-development fund for the Eastern Townships, to which he would contribute $6 million. The North Hatley developer asked six MPs, one MNA and two mayors present at the press conference to contribute another $4 million from among their governments.

"We have done a series of studies and they have shown that future development must include the wider scope of the Eastern Townships and not just the North Hatley region. This is why I am proposing this plan," said Gabr. "North Hatley cannot grow any more unless the suburb of Sherbrooke and the whole Eastern Townships is included in the infrastructure."

Gabr said the time for waiting is over and some action must be taken. "I cannot do all of this myself. I must have the help of the government and private investors as well."

30 executed as Syria plot uncovered

Syrian authorities have rounded up hundreds of dissidents and executed 30 to 50 officers after uncovering a military plot to overthrow the government of President Hafez Assad, western intelligence and Arab sources said Sunday.

The Syrian government has issued official statements denying any coup conspiracy.

Western sources in the Middle East said the plot was uncovered when dissidents in the Syrian armed forces approached an unidentified officer loyal to the Assad government. Arrests began in the first week of January and executions of some plotters followed, they added.

"They (the plotters) had planned to have air force units bomb the Republican Palace in Damascus during a meeting of the Baath party leadership while tanks rolled into the capital," said a western intelligence source, who declined to be identified by name or station.

The Kuwaiti newspaper Al Qabas on Saturday reported Maj.-Gen. Naji Jamil was executed last week in Damascus in connection with the coup plot and said 150 army officers were arrested.

Moderate salary demands, MacEachen says

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians must ask themselves whether they are ready to make the sacrifices necessary to maintain free enterprise or opt for a controlled economy, Finance Minister Allan MacEachen said in an interview published today in Le Devoir.

MacEachen told the newspaper he has made "heroic efforts" in trying to hold down government spending to back up the Bank of Canada's anti-inflationary policies.

But he added that it is now up to Canadian workers to moderate their salary demands.

"Wage settlements reached by the American administration were nine per cent last year and 4.9 per cent this year. That's quite different from our case."

"I'm not saying that unions, or employees, are responsible for inflation, but it is high time we ask ourselves whether wage settlements are not beginning to put extra pressure on inflation."

MacEachen warned employers and unions that high wages may price Canadian goods out of competition. "It seems to me Canadians should seriously re-examine their behavior, and the consequences of this behaviour on their own jobs."

GROWTH CONTROLLED
 He defended the government's monetarist policy, saying the growth in money supply has been kept under control despite pressure from high interest rates in the United States.

Indications are that inflation will start going down in the second quarter of 1982, he added.

On the growing number of jobless, MacEachen said unemployment is the result of the recession Canada finds itself in at the moment, and that unemployment insurance was set up precisely to deal with such turns of the economy.

"I'm not saying that unemployment insurance is a substitute for a job but society has decided that there are some times when this kind of 'cushion' should be available to soften the shock of unemployment, to reduce the suffering which accompanies it."

MacEachen also defended his budget, which has been criticized throughout the country.

"All the representations made to me before the budget asked for the elimination of even major programs like child allowances or the Department of Regional Economic Expansion," he said.

"That wasn't acceptable and I increased taxes instead. But the general thrust of my budget went along with what they were asking for."

Reception lukewarm for TV show

NEW YORK (CP) — Let Poland Be Poland, the pro-Solidarity TV show produced by the U.S. government's official propaganda agency was beamed to a mostly critical world audience Sunday.

Although the response from the Soviet bloc was predictably caustic, even at home the program's reception was lukewarm at best.

The 90-minute special was broadcast to a potential TV and radio audience of 400 million, although U.S. officials estimated the actual audience at 90 million.

It followed Saturday's international day of protest against the martial law clampdown in Poland which drew mostly small crowds in Canadian, U.S. and Western European cities.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass called Sunday's television special "a repulsive orgy," a "foul enterprise" and "a crude ideological provocation against Poland."

Warsaw Radio described it as "a propaganda event without precedent" and "crude interference in Polish affairs."

DISTURBS EUROPEANS

However, it was the show-business aspects of Sunday's program — which featured several widely-known U.S. entertainers — that drew criticism in West Germany, the Netherlands, Denmark and Britain.

In the United States, where Congress approved a special exemption to allow domestic showing, few Public Broadcasting Service stations telecast the event as it was fed. Officials at others said they had not decided whether to show the program.

Many of the PBS stations that did broadcast the program inserted disclaimers at the beginning and end, explaining that the show was produced by the U.S. International Communication Agency, the government's official propaganda arm. The ICA is not allowed to broadcast its productions in the U.S. without special permission.

In Canada, the program was carried by the Toronto-based Global Television Network, while the CTV network made the show available to its affiliates but did not broadcast it as a network program.

Thousands of people gathered at International Solidarity Day demonstrations across Canada on Saturday, protesting the imposition of martial law in Poland.

The biggest rally was in Toronto where more than 1,200 assembled outside city hall to hear speeches from politicians, community leaders and labor leaders in support of the Polish labor union Solidarity.

Jan Kaszuba, president of the Canadian Polish Congress, called for a trade embargo on Poland and the Soviet Union.

"Food should be sent to the people, not to the government of Poland," he said.

Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Paul Godfrey delivered an emotional speech urging the crowd not to remain silent on the crisis.

"We will shout and scream and, if necessary, fight for the people of Poland," he said to the crowd.

Many people carried banners and placards claiming the government betrayed Polish Canadian voters.

The reference was to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's statement that martial law in Poland was probably preferable to civil war or a Soviet invasion.

Poland's martial law government stepped up security today as it moved to impose politically-explosive price increases of up to 400 per cent on many basic consumer goods.

The security clampdown is tightest in Gdansk, where 14 people were injured and 205 arrested in the first major outbreak of violence reported in Poland in six weeks.

Meanwhile, witnesses said groups of special police have moved into several Warsaw hotels and travellers said the main north-south highway between Warsaw and Katowice had been closed to civilian traffic, possibly to clear the way for troop movements.

Previous attempts to impose major price increases on consumer goods have led to rioting that eventually forced the Communist authorities to back down.

U.S. government workers blackmailed by Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Post says Israeli intelligence agencies have tried to bribe and blackmail U.S. government workers stationed in Israel in an attempt to obtain sensitive information.

The newspaper based its account on classified American documents captured when Iranian militants took over the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The documents have since been published in paperback form by the Iranians. The Post said it obtained copies of the paperbacks from freelance journalists when they returned from Iran. The Boston Globe has also published excerpts from the books.

The part about Israeli intelligence activity was in a purported copy of a Central Intelligence Agency survey entitled "Israel: Foreign Intelligence and Security Services." The newspaper quoted intelligence sources as saying the version published by the Iranians appeared to be a faithful reproduction of the original 47-page documents.

Nachman Shai, press spokesman at the Israeli Embassy in Washington, refused comment, as did CIA spokesmen.

The report describes several attempts by the Israelis to get information from U.S. government employees.

DESCRIBES INCIDENT
"In one instance, Shin Beth (the counterespionage branch of Israeli intelligence) tried to penetrate the U.S. consulate general in Jerusalem through a clerical employee who was having an affair with a Jerusalem girl," it said.

"They rigged a fake abortion case against the employee in an unsuccessful effort to recruit him. Before this attempt at blackmail they had tried to get the Israeli girl to elicit information from her boyfriend."

The report added that there had been "two or three crude efforts" to recruit U.S. Marine Corps guards "for monetary reward."

It also describes a series of telephone taps and hidden microphones installed by Israeli agents at offices and residences of U.S. personnel in Israel.

Despite the accounts of attempts to spy on U.S. personnel, the report has many approving references to Israel's intelligence operation, which traditionally has maintained a good relationship with its counterpart in the U.S.

20 more die in San Salvador guerrilla raids

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Army troops killed at least 20 people here early Sunday in what El Salvador's regime called raids on leftist guerrilla hideouts followed by fighting. Relatives of many victims called it an unprovoked massacre.

Residents said as many as 27 men and women, most of them in their teens and 20s, were killed during the pre-dawn sweep by about 200 government troops through San Salvador's working-class district of San Antonio Abad. Three sisters were raped before they were shot, their mother said.

"The soldiers said I had nothing to worry about as they took my daughter away," said Mirian Villanueva, the mother of another of the victims. "A short time later we started hearing gunfire."

"It was a horrible massacre," declared a third woman, who said the soldiers dragged her son and daughter from the house and shot them. Most of the residents who spoke declined to be identified for fear of their own lives.

A Defence Ministry communique said 20 people were killed and five army soldiers wounded in what it called "confrontations" during the search for rebel hideouts in San Antonio Abad, near the slope of a volcano on the capital's northeast edge.

The communique identified the dead as members of the Farabundo Marti Liberation Front, a coalition of leftist groups fighting to topple El Salvador's U.S.-backed ruling junta. The struggle has cost more than 35,000 lives since the junta seized power in an October, 1979, coup.

The army's First Brigade command post displayed rifles, machine-guns and anti-government propaganda it said were taken from the homes of guerrillas in San Antonio Abad.

"The operation was a success," the communique said. "This action was a result of training and professionalization of our officers and soldiers."

Teen gets life for slaying of mother, two brothers

MEDINA, Ohio (AP) — A teenage girl was convicted Saturday of murdering her mother and two brothers with her father's gun, then stealing the family car to drive to Canada with her boyfriend.

The jury of nine women and three men deliberated more than 13 hours on Friday and Saturday to find Teresa Bickerstaff, 18, guilty of three counts of murder, three counts of aggravated murder in the commission of a robbery and three counts of aggravated robbery.

Common Pleas Judge Phillip Baird withheld sentencing until a presentence report is completed.

Bickerstaff was charged with murdering her mother, Donna Bickerstaff, 38, and her brothers, Fred, 14, and Kenneth, 13, on Aug. 29, 1980.

Medina County Prosecutor Gregory Happ said that Bickerstaff shot her relatives with her father's .357 Magnum pistol, then stole the family car and fled to Canada with her boyfriend, Eric (Scooter) Davis of Cleveland.

HOUSE BURNED

The Bickerstaff home in rural Harrisville Township was set on fire after the shootings, prosecutors said.

Last May, Davis was convicted of aggravated murder, theft and aggravated arson in the case and is serving three concurrent life terms in the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility.

Bickerstaff confessed to police when she and Davis were arrested as they returned to the United States through Detroit in October 1980. A tape recording of the confession was played at her trial.

However, on the witness stand, Bickerstaff denied she fired the fatal shots. She said she confessed to the shootings to protect Davis, who she said had saved her from a life of prostitution and drugs.

She testified that she decided to confess to the killings because "Scooter was older and he was black."
"It would be harder on him."

We're subsidizing Candu reactor users — activist

WINNIPEG (CP) — Taxpayers are subsidizing users of the Candu nuclear reactor both inside and outside of the country, an anti-nuclear activist said Sunday.

Gordon Edwards said Ontario Hydro is the only Canadian beneficiary of the $6 billion spent since the 1940s creating the Candu technology.

"Be proud, you're helping Ontario ratepayers," Edwards told an audience at the University of Manitoba.

He was also critical of proposals to sell Candu reactors to foreign governments and said taxpayers took a $130-million loss on a sale to Argentina.

Only subsidiaries of international companies which manufacture reactor parts make money on such deals, Edwards said.

"The Canadian government is supposed to be representing the Canadian people, not some powerful industrial lobby in the halls of Parliament."

Edwards was part of a panel that also included representatives of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. and Ontario Hydro.

John Melvin of AECL accused Edwards of preaching doom and gloom.

David Blaine, an Ontario Hydro research official, said nuclear power is more economical for provinces that have to burn fuel to generate electricity.

He said nuclear power is half the cost of coal as a fuel for generating stations in Ontario.

Fires kill six

MONTREAL (CP) — Six Montreal area people lost their lives over the weekend in three separate fires at their homes.

Police said a young man and his wife died Sunday in hospital after their mattress caught fire as they slept in their house on Leon Trepanier Street in north-end Cartierville.

Their identities were not made public.

Nathan Cymbler, 77, collapsed and died early Sunday morning, apparently of a heart attack, in the smoke-filled corridor outside his apartment on Goyer Street in the Cote-des-Neiges district.

Police said four other residents of the apartment block were sent to hospital suffering from smoke inhalation in that fire. The cause of the fire was not known.

Saturday night, a young mother and her two young children burned to death when their home in Candiac, a suburb on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River, was gutted.

Fire department officials identified the victims as Ghislaine Dubois, her four-year-old daughter Melanie and two-year-old son Marc. Neighbors in the other half of the semi-detached home were able to escape before their home also was destroyed.

Police said they were investigating the possibility the fire began in a fireplace.

Hospital still overcrowded

MONTREAL (CP) — Notre Dame Hospital in central Montreal Sunday delayed re-opening its emergency clinic for new patients because the clinic is still overcrowded.

Closed since Thursday, the ward was supposed to have re-opened for new cases at 4:30 p.m. EST. But officials decided to keep it closed another day because there are still patients on stretchers in the hospital's corridors waiting for a bed.

Hospital officials hope to be able to serve new patients today. There is a waiting listing of 2,500 people.

Condo fire takes 24 homes

MONTREAL (CP) — Residents of a condominium complex in suburban Kirkland were forced to leave their homes in near-blizzard conditions Sunday as a fire they thought had been put out earlier in the day erupted again and destroyed 24 homes.

Four hours after firemen were first called to the row of town houses to put out a small fire, flames flared up again and spread quickly throughout the complex as gusting winds fanned the flames.

Don't tax benefits: Tories

OTTAWA (CP) — Taxing the employer portion of health and dental insurance premiums could lead to young, healthy workers leaving them and the costs skyrocketing, says Michael Wilson, federal Progressive Conservative finance critic.

Wilson, MP for the Toronto-area riding of Etobicoke Centre, said on the CTV television program Question Period — broadcast Sunday — there are about 10 million workers with dental plans and about 15 million with extended-care health plans.

Increase Crowsnest rates: CN

OTTAWA (CP) — Immediate changes to the Crowsnest rate structure and double-tracking west of Portage La Prairie, Man., are needed to save Canada's grain industry and railways, an unreleased CN Rail report says.

The report, obtained Sunday by Broadcast News Ltd., paints a bleak picture of the industries' futures, warning that traffic rationing could become a reality by 1985 and CN Rail could become "non-competitive and eventually non-viable" without increased rail capacity and a new freight rate plan.

CANDU upset over sale

OTTAWA (CP) — Preparing to bid today on the sale of a Candu nuclear reactor to Mexico, the Canadian industry is upset at the three-year delay in signing a contract for the sale of one to Romania.

Romania agreed three years ago to buy its first Candu reactor and in July said it wanted a second. But contracts have yet to be signed for either and industry spokesmen say the delay is damaging the Canadian industry.

Auto workers won't concede

TORONTO (CP) — In a continuing tough stand against the major automakers, the Canadian council of the United Auto Workers has unanimously reaffirmed it will not accept contract concessions now or during negotiations for new agreements this summer.

Poll condemns Olson payoff

VANCOUVER (CP) — A majority of British Columbians condemn the $90,000 money-for-bodies deal made with mass murderer Clifford Robert Olson, says a public opinion poll commissioned by The Province.

They want the money recovered and a public inquiry into the payments, says the poll, a random telephone sample of 604 eligible B.C. voters by the morning newspaper in consultation with Canadian Facts, a marketing research firm.

Police suspect more murders

VANCOUVER (CP) — The RCMP have a "gut feeling" that mass murderer Clifford Olson killed more people than the 11 he is convicted of, says assistant commissioner Don Wilson.

But Wilson said police have no evidence of further crimes and can only hope that long years in prison will persuade Olson to talk.

He said the RCMP have in mind many crimes with which Olson might be connected.

Drivers bribe officials

WINNIPEG (CP) — At least 100 Manitobans have paid employees of the province's motor vehicles branch for drivers' licences, says the provincial registrar of motor vehicles.

Peter Dygala said his department may never know the total number of drivers' licences that were improperly obtained because records are routinely destroyed after two years.

"No one can really say," he said in an interview. "We don't know how long this practice was going on."

Dygala refused to confirm or deny statements made by a department employee, who refused to be identified, that would be motorists paid as much as $1,000 for a driver's licence and $100 to $150 to pass a written examination.

Search warrants quashable

WINNIPEG (CP) — Up to 63 per cent of search warrants issued in some Canadian cities would be quashed if contested in court, says the chairman of the Canadian Law Reform Commission.

Frank Muldoon quoted a commission survey of seven cities which showed Edmonton and Montreal with the highest incidence of warrants that would have been quashed, while Vancouver had the lowest.

Farmers abuse loans

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP) — Provincial loan agency officials should have more power to investigate an applicant's ability to care for livestock before getting any money.

A Moose Jaw agricultural board says that Farmstart — a provincial agency that provides loans for farmers — has been abused by some individuals who borrow funds for their livestock operations, but do not give proper care to their animals.

Cattle belonging to one Farmstart applicant were seized recently and sold after 64 animals were found starved to death.

Marriage contracts invalid

EDMONTON (CP) — Slap-dash marriage contracts entered into only days before a wedding are not enforceable.

"That's duress," Mr. Justice V.W. Smith told Alberta lawyers attending the mid-winter session of the Canadian Bar Association. "I don't think it's enforceable."

He said many marriage contracts are a good idea, but those signed under pressure will probably not hold up in court. Most lawyers at the meeting agreed with the justice.

Union protests economy

FREDERICTON (CP) — About 600 union members marched on the New Brunswick legislature to protest unemployment and high interest rates.

Larry Hanley, president of the New Brunswick Federation of Labor, called on Premier Richard Hatfield to take the concerns of the gathering to the first ministers' conference in Ottawa.

No government representatives spoke to the demonstrators.

Reaganomics unfair: Poll

NEW YORK (CP) — Most Americans believe "Reaganomics" has helped the rich and hurt the poor, results of two recent public opinion polls show.

The latest Associated Press-NBC News poll, however, also shows that a majority believe President Reagan's economic program will eventually have a "trickle down" effect to help middle and lower income classes.

D.J. dies on the air

BERLIN, VI. (AP) — Radio announcer Rusty Parker, who suffered a heart attack on the air and was aided by a passing doctor, died Sunday in hospital, officials said.

Parker, 55, had collapsed Friday in the middle of his early morning radio show on WDEV, prompting an employee of the Waterbury station to tell another worker: "Call an ambulance."

That order inadvertently was broadcast over an open microphone and was heard by Dr. John Valentine, who was driving past the station on his way to buy doughnuts. Valentine rushed inside the radio station and began administering cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

"Instead of taking the thruway like I usually do I got off to get the doughnuts," Valentine explained. "I was listening to Rusty on the radio and driving by the station and I heard him choke. And then I heard someone else say, 'Call an ambulance.'"

Parker had been taken off the critical list Saturday and listed in serious condition.

The officials said the affected area in Davao del Norte province was under two metres of water. More than 700 people sought refuge on higher ground.

Hanging returns to India

NEW DELHI (AP) — Two convicted murderers were hanged here Sunday, the first executions in the Indian capital in more than four years.

The men were hanged at New Delhi's Tihar Jail for the 1978 murders of the teenaged son and daughter of an Indian naval captain. The executions were the first since 1977, when a man was hanged for burning his wife and four children to death.

Iranian currency low

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran will continue to ration essential goods including food and fuel in order to save hard currency, Minister of State Behzad Nabavi said Sunday.

He also accused the U.S. of not meeting its obligations under the agreement that led to the release of 52 American hostages on Jan. 20, 1981.

Nabavi was quoted by Tehran Radio as saying the U.S. owes Iran between $3.5 and $4 billion in Iranian funds, frozen in American banks after militants stormed the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in November, 1979.

Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat says in an interview with a U.S. weekly newsmagazine that Israel is planning to attack his forces in southern Lebanon before April 25.

The interview published Sunday by Time magazine coincided with a state-run Israeli Radio report that a former Zionist leftist member of parliament had confirmed that some Israeli leftist politicians had arranged to meet with Arafat in Damascus, Syria, last June.

Highwater investment may total $500 million

"All I have been hearing," he said, "is that this area needs jobs and money to help it develop. I am willing to provide some of this money, but I cannot do it alone."

He said he believes he has shown his good faith in the region by trying to develop the depressed downtown area of Sherbrooke with his project to turn the former La Salle centre into a luxury shopping and tourist centre, and the Auberge des Gouverneurs into a convention centre.

Besides his plan for the La Salle shopping centre, to be renamed Place St. Francois, Gabr said he is also going to build an electronics plant in Granby and invest $250 million into the former Space Research Corp. complex in Highwater. The 565-hectare site which he purchased for $1 million last spring will be used as a facility for satellite and ballistics research. This is partially dependent, he says, on the government coming up with an additional $250 million.

Local members of Parliament Irene Pelletier, Jean Lapierre, Andre Bachand, Claude Tessier and Alain Tardif, MNA Real Rancourt and mayors Jacques O'Bready (Sherbrooke) and Ruth Taylor (North Hatley) all seemed cautiously in favor of the project. Although none was willing to make any firm commitments beyond "study".

This position seemed to exasperate Gabr momentarily: "Wait, that is all I hear. I want to eliminate the word 'wait' from the dictionary." But he eventually toned down, saying all he was asking was for the elected officials to study the proposal, and there was no definite deadline for their answers. "Businessmen have deadlines," he said, "and I am not a businessman, but a developer and an engineer."

During the lengthy press conference Gabr offered his services as industrial commissioner to the City of Sherbrooke for the salary of $1 per year. Citing a press report of a comment by Sherbrooke's industrial commissioner, who was quoted as saying he would believe another one of Gabr's projects when he saw it, the North Hatley millionaire said, "How can a man in this position say this? Mr. Mayor, I offer my services for $1 per year." When asked for his references for the position, Gabr quipped, "My mistakes in North Hatley are my references."

O'Bready replied that the wealthy developer should "fill out the forms and bring them in on Monday."

Gabr suggested to the politicians they should contribute multiples of two years of unemployment insurance benefits and he would then create any number of jobs. "Give me two years of unemployment benefits, I will create any number of jobs and you will get it all back in taxes." He said Canada is the country of the future, but we must work for it.

None of the politicians had an answer for this proposal except that they would study it. None of them was aware of what the press conference was about beforehand. "We had a caucus meeting of the federal Liberals, at my place this morning," said Sherbrooke M.P. Irene Pelletier, "but we had no idea about what would be discussed at this press conference."

Gabr reiterated the need for a viable airport in Sherbrooke to aid the economic development of the region, and while his group of companies could not supply all the money, he said they would provide studies and professionals to solve almost any problem that might crop up.

Gabr said the Highwater operation would be reopened to continue the high altitude satellite and ballistics research which had been carried out by the former owner, Gerald Bull. Bull was sentenced to six months in prison and fined $10,000 for shipping arms illegally to South Africa. While Gabr acknowledged Bull is the world's leading authority in this area of research he said he had no thoughts of hiring him.

Gabr confirmed that he is also interested in purchasing Valleyfield Chemicals, an explosives plant which also belonged to Bull that went bankrupt shortly after Space Research.

Gabr said he offered the federal government $60 million for the plant that supplied the fuel propellant for Space Research's cannon-launched shells. But Gabr said the government insisted he first pay the $8 million that Valleyfield owed the government in loans.

The research satellites would be launched from cannons and Gabr said he is presently involved in designing new cannons for this purpose but the actual launching would not take place in Highwater but in Barbados or elsewhere in the Caribbean. But he said Highwater would be the place the satellites and cannons were designed and built.

Also at Saturday's press conference further plans were unveiled for the development of downtown North Hatley. Architect Alexander Henderson displayed sketches of the downtown area, which will include a shopping area with a variety of boutiques, the present marina, a small conference centre and a new gas station to be located where the old Texaco used to stand.

Henderson said these plans are preliminary and he could not place a price tag on them at the moment. There was also a plan for a technology centre to include classrooms, laboratories and offices, which would occupy about 60,000 square feet. This design will incorporate the use of active and passive solar heating as well as the utilization of the earth's heat (portions of the project would be underground).

The plans were drawn up without an actual site in mind, although Henderson said a southern exposure is necessary because of the use of solar energy. The technology centre has been designed to fit into the rolling countryside and there is a possibility of incorporating housing facilities into the plan as well.

Henderson said the cost of this project could not be reasonably estimated without a site but he gave a gross ballpark figure of about $10 million.

When asked if the plans were destined for the Virgin farm, Henderson said he had no idea, and reiterated that the plans were based on the needs of the centre and not on a particular site. "When this project was drawn up the Virgin property had not been sold," he said.

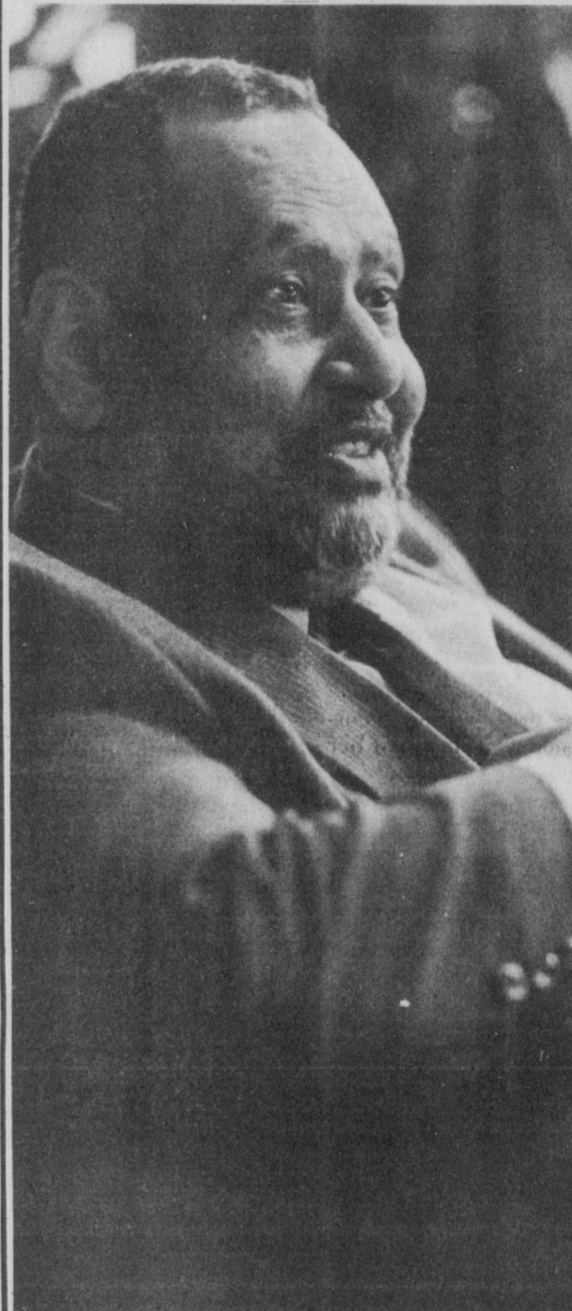

Gabr explains his latest plans at a press conference in his North Hatley home over the weekend. The mayors of North Hatley and Sherbrooke Ruth Taylor and Jacques O'Bready were also present.

He began as a scrap dealer...

By Charles Bury

NORTH HATLEY — Saad Gabr has come a long way.

At a press conference at his luxurious home here Saturday, Gabr confirmed a long-standing rumor that he had his start in business as a scrap dealer in Egypt after the Second World War. And starting with a few surplus military vehicles, he has built his holdings into an empire worth at least several hundred million dollars.

Saad Gabr... many acquaintances, few friends

"They were all new, we didn't have to go out on the desert and take apart abandoned equipment," he said, "and what you got for one cent you could sell for a hundred dollars."

Gabr got his engineering education at a technical school which later became a Cairo university. And from there the sky was the limit.

When reporters asked about another common North Hatley rumor, Gabr denied that much of his money came to him because he was related by marriage to the president of Pakistan. He said his wife was not related to the president, but that he knew him (the Pakistani head of state) "very very well". He said he had many influential acquaintances in the Muslim world, including the Pakistani finance minister, who had visited him in North Hatley, the King of Morocco, and several high-ranking members of the Saudi Arabian royal family.

Gabr said that he had known assassinated Egyptian president Anwar Sadat "quite well", but he was not a friend. "I have many acquaintances," he said, "but I have no friends."

He said his money was in a "trust" set up shortly after the Second World War. But he refused, as usual, to say how much he is worth. "It can't be that much," he joked, "after all, I am here today asking for help." But the help he was asking for from both governments was to match dollar-for-dollar the $250 million he wants to spend in Highwater and the $6 million he has offered to invest in a regional development corporation.

Gabr's lavishly appointed home in Hatley Acres includes major living rooms on the first and second floors with an estimated combined seating capacity of 250. The public areas of the home and at least some private apartments are finished with velvet carpeting on the walls and ceilings, and the floors are covered, in some places two or three layers thick, with Persian carpets. When he bought the house it was a summer residence only one-fifth its present size.

Solid sterling silver cigar boxes, gold and silver furnishings and jade and silver ashtrays complete the decor. Two matching English crystal chandeliers in the downstairs fireplace alcove (large enough to seat about 30 people and with a half-cord of logs on the hearth) are said by a Gabr insider to be valued at "at least $100,000 each."

But all is not perfect in the best of all possible North Hatley worlds. One highly-placed Gabr employee said Saturday a recent power failure had left the compound without heat or light. "That big fireplace," he said, "we couldn't even get it going. We almost froze to death."

Richmond residents fear spring flood

By Steve McDougall

RICHMOND — Eleven months ago, on the night of February 22, 1981, an early thaw of ice on the St. Francis River near here caused the river banks to rise and residents found their downtown core under five feet of flood water. Property damages reached the millions of dollars, and hundreds of residents were left homeless.

And these same residents could find themselves going through it again this year.

Since the flood most residents have received little compensation, though they did encounter flooding of a different sort — promises galore from the Quebec government to rebuild the town and prevent the flooding from occurring again. But none of those promises have been kept.

At the time the provincial government was gearing up to fight a provincial election, so they sent Transport Minister Michel Clair from neighboring Drummond county to promise that the government would compensate homeowners and businessmen and help to rebuild the downtown core.

When he talked to the victims Clair termed the compensation program "a gift from the government, not free aid or compensation" and he implied that the program would be speeded if PQ-candidate Denise Skoropad of Asbestos was elected, clinching the county for the first time for the PQ.

The following week Premier Rene Levesque repeated the would-be generosity, telling a group of 150 victims the flooding "wouldn't happen again" if he was re-elected, and hinted that Skoropad "should be given a chance."

"All we ever said we would do as a party, we have," he assured the crowd. "We feel you can trust us this time."

But, Skoropad lost the election by just over 200 votes to Liberal Yvon Vallieres, leaving local PQ campaigners frustrated.

Soon after the Parti Quebecois was swept back into power, huge government deficits brought severe budget cuts which cancelled many promised programs, including building dikes, dredging, and rebuilding Richmond's downtown core. And much of the compensation destined for businesses and homeowners for government shortsightedness in letting the flooding take place has still not arrived.

The problem became even uglier when many residents found themselves ineligible for compensation and with few funds to relocate their families.

Many were forced to return to their homes and apartments with the smell of oil and dirt permeating the walls, floors and most of their personal possessions.

A small scandal arose 11 days after the flood when the town of Richmond, which had still not received any government funds for the victims, threatened to close down a privately-run halfway house for alcoholics and drug addicts which had offered to house over 30 residents who refused to go back to their heavily soiled homes.

Most of these victims were welfare recipients who had no savings to spend on temporary accommodations and were being poorly treated by authorities, who termed them "freeloaders".

Most important was the promise by Environment Minister Marcel Leger, halfway through the election, to build a system of dams on the banks of the St. Francis to prevent future flooding.

He pledged $900,000 to the town on March 27, 1981, while campaigning in the county. Little of that money has arrived and it remains to be seen whether any dam system will ever be built.

Presently, MNA Yvon Vallieres has arranged a meeting with Leger for later this month to try and muster up funds to start work on the dam system.

But Vallieres has pointed out that there is no guarantee that no further flooding will affect Richmond.

This is bad news for the numerous businesses which lost thousands of dollars in inventory, not to mention several businesses that went under as a result of the poor compensation system and subsequent poor economic conditions in the area.

And it will mean that people in the downtown core, most of whom live in old, low-rent apartments because they are on fixed incomes, will have to bear the brunt of floods again this year.

Fire destroys Moe's River house, barn

MOE'S RIVER (SM) Compton, who lost to be revived by his consciousness when he fell from the roof of the house where he was fighting the flames.

According to Compton fire chief Paul Lessard, Bourgault was thrown from the roof by a small explosion in the adjoining barn-garage. Lessard said the explosion was probably caused by the gasoline from a small snowblower in the barn.

Injured in the blaze was volunteer fireman Laurin Bourgault, 35, of hour which spread the flames easily. Fire authorities are still investigating.

Two fire trucks and 10 firemen from the Compton station arrived within 30 minutes of the start of the blaze and it took several hours before the flames were under control.

The firemen were hampered by gusts of wind up to 50 miles per

Simple ways

There are 59 pages of general information referring to Bell Telephone services in the front of the directory serving Haute-Yamaska and Haute-Richelieu. The first page is entitled SECOURS-HELP with spaces left vacant for fire, police, ambulance, and other vital numbers. Fire emergency numbers in English are listed on page 73 in the usual type face which might make it difficult for older people to read, especially in an emergency.

Of course we're coming back to the New Year's Day fire which claimed one life at the Woodacres Hotel in Knowlton's Landing when there was a delay in contacting the Austin Fire Department located in another area code region. The Haute-Yamaska listings include others for certain fire departments if the main number can't be reached, notably two for Rougemont and one for Mansonville. There is also a Zenith listing for calls in the territory served by the Austin department. Bolton Centre and South Bolton, both of which are serviced by Austin, aren't listed. That's fine for residents, but what happens if a stranger happens to spot a fire and doesn't know where to call?

A Bell spokesman suggested it would cost approximately $100,000 to implement and operate a single-number service for our sector of the 514 area, and municipalities would have to bear the brunt of the costs. Hardly likely in a time of budgetary restraint.

There are a couple of relatively simple and less-onerous ways of upholding and possibly improving fire-protection services. Bell could list the appropriate fire department numbers in bold face type on page one of the directories, and, in such cases where the services cross area codes, include the appropriate numbers, Zenith or other. But each municipality — at least — must be included.

The other solution would require the cooperation of towns, fire departments and possibly service clubs. Decals with the appropriate emergency numbers posted next to all public telephones would certainly eliminate confusion in times of peril. Then again possibly Bell could include the same information with an extension of its long-distance instructions list. It's too late to do anything about the one life lost last month, but let's do everything in our power to make certain another similar fiasco doesn't mar the horizon in the future.

Anglican-RC accord significance hidden

By Frank Mackey

LONDON (CP) — The cobwebs of history were disturbed recently with the announcement that Britain and the Vatican are establishing full diplomatic relations, bridging a rift that has existed since the 16th century.

But it may be some time yet before the full significance of that move, coupled with the imminent visit of the Pope, becomes clear.

The Jan. 16 announcement was widely saluted as the end of a break that began in the 1520s when Pope Clement VII refused to allow King Henry VIII to divorce Catherine of Aragon. That was sealed in 1570 when the Pope excommunicated Queen Elizabeth I and asked her subjects to depose her.

To some, though, the latest move is "political window dressing" since there have been diplomatic relations between Britain and Rome since 1914, even if the envoys did not enjoy full ambassador status.

Perhaps the fact that the political and religious implications are still unclear accounts for the absence so far of fiery public comment from the Protestant fringe.

BULL AN OBSTACLE

Expressions of concern have been focused to a great extent on the impossibility of a unification of the church of Rome and the Church of England "so long as the Roman Catholic Church persists in its view of the non-validity of Anglican orders," as set out in an 1896 papal bull, Apostolicae Curae.

Leaders of Britain's free churches have rejected the move on grounds that "it is a departure from long-established British political principle and will cause wide concern in Protestant circles," as well as because they were not consulted.

Insofar as it represents a step in closer relations between the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches, it may also affect the steps being taken towards closer ties between the Church of England, the United Reformed Church, Methodists and Moravians.

One of its more curious political aspects is that it would seem to have some bearing on the Irish question.

As a Daily Telegraph editorial teasingly suggested "incidentally, if niceties are to be preserved ought not the opportunity be taken to remove the undesirable anomaly whereby the papal nuncio in Dublin claims that his area of responsibility extends to Ulster?"

DIVIDE RESPONSIBILITY

The authorities have apparently sought to avoid conflict on the issue by stipulating that the nuncio in Dublin will be responsible for ecclesiastical affairs in Northern Ireland while the Vatican's man in London will be responsible for diplomatic and political matters in that troubled province.

Still, the Vatican does make it a practice to withhold recognition from states whose borders are not internationally agreed. This is used as justification, for instance, for not recognizing Israel.

Yet it does have an ambassador in Dublin, a fully accredited representative to a state and government whose constitution claims sovereignty over Northern Ireland.

Queen's visit will be on thin ice?

By Rod Currie

OTTAWA (CP) — It's a big if, but if the Queen comes to Ottawa next month for her first winter visit, one of her showpiece public appearances may be a sleigh ride down the Rideau Canal, the world's longest skating rink.

The main purpose of the visit, of course, would be to sign the proclamation of the new Canada Act in a Senate ceremony, but timing depends on how swiftly the British Parliament handles the legislation to patriate the Canadian constitution.

As of now, royal tour planners are making tentative arrangements for the weekend beginning Feb. 13, with the proclamation ceremony taking place Monday, Feb. 15 — the 17th anniversary of the Canadian flag.

A spokesman said various plans are being shaped and "some of these things will happen," although everything must be approved by the Queen.

As things stand, the Queen may attend a reception for some 100 media types Saturday evening, after the long flight from London, and then retire early.

Sunday she probably would attend Anglican service at Christ Church Cathedral and then, accompanied by Prime Minister Trudeau, lead a cavalcade of horse-drawn sleighs down the canal.

That's the final day of Ottawa's big annual Winterlude carnival and possibly the Queen might be invited to present prizes won during the 10-day event featuring races, barrel-jumping and ice-sculpture competitions.

With a nod to Ottawa's frigid weather, the Queen might make an abbreviated trip in a horse-drawn landau to Parliament Hill Monday. Usually VIPs travel from Government House on state occasions but the idea is to have her board the landau near the Chateau Laurier Hotel, around the corner from Parliament.

In the Senate, with Trudeau at her side, the Queen would sign the appropriate document, proclaiming the Canada Act.

Of course, if the Canada Act is bogged down for months, the sleigh ride is off.

The big kitchens at Government House are humming these days, feeding the hundreds of shivering guests invited to a traditional series of skating parties given by Gov. Gen. Ed Schreyer and Lily Schreyer. First some 300 members of the Parliamentary Press Gallery and the National Press Club and their guests were invited to skate, toboggan and sleigh-ride around the estate before being ushered inside for mulled wine and a lavish buffet, followed by disco.

Then two more parties were laid on — for MPs, senators and the diplomatic corps.

Diplomats are used to wearing formal garb when they receive an engraved invitation to Government House but on these occasions "sports clothes" are specified. Still, traditions die hard and many showed up in business outfits, ill-prepared for skating or tobogganing.

But Lily Schreyer coaxed a group of African and other diplomats, including Polish Ambassador Stanislaw Pawlak, to the outdoor curling rinks and gave them a few lessons in the sport.

Some others huddled near the giant bonfire, toasting marshmallows, until the party moved inside.

One guest at the press party was so impressed by the shimmering cherry cheesecake he asked for the recipe.

But it seems the chefs are so busy making the stuff these days they haven't had time yet to figure out the recipe, which must be calculated for household use from the giant-size batches whipped up in the vice-regal kitchen.

"We get requests for recipes from time to time," said a Government House spokesman, "and we comply if possible."

When William Brock, U.S. trade representative who holds the rank of ambassador, came to Ottawa to talk foreign investment, he made the traditional visit to the Commons to witness the daily question period.

He was hardly seated in the visitors' gallery when NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said the U.S. is "pursuing a disastrous economic policy in world terms." Why is it, he demanded of Prime Minister Trudeau, that Western European countries and Japan "have the political courage to take independent action for their people which this government simply does not possess?"

Brock's presence was noted and he stood to acknowledge the usual round of welcoming applause.

But not from Broadbent, who sat stony-faced.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan's trademark green cowboy hat is under close security.

Someone stole one — he is said to suspect a member of the press — and now he takes the new one even into committee meetings rather than trust it to the hatracks outside.

One night recently, during a heated Commons exchange, Tory House leader Erik Nielsen hurled at Whelan the ultimate insult:

"You are an embarrassment to everyone who wears a green hat."

....Dotted lines far apart....

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A federal-provincial transportation agreement was signed in St. John's on Saturday despite a squabble that kept Premier Brian Peckford and Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin from meeting face to face.

Pepin put his signature on the document, which commits the federal government to providing 75 per cent of planned expenditures of about $70 million, in a room at Hotel Newfoundland in downtown St. John's.

Peckford signed the paper in his office about 45 minutes later after it was delivered by a Transport Canada employee to Confederation Building, the provincial government's headquarters in the city's northeast area.

Both Peckford and Pepin blamed each other for the dispute over location of the signing. Each had refused to move to the location used by the other.

Peckford and Ron Dawe, Newfoundland's transportation and communications minister, said Pepin had agreed a week earlier to have the signing at Confederation Building.

But Pepin said at a news conference he understood it was "convention" that transportation agreements always be signed at Hotel Newfoundland.

REQUESTS CHANGE

Neil MacNeill, a special assistant to Pepin, said at the news conference that until Thursday it had been understood the signing would take place at the hotel but that on Friday Peckford had requested a change of site.

But Peckford said afterwards that as late as Wednesday federal and provincial officials were still working on the assumption the signing would be at Confederation Building.

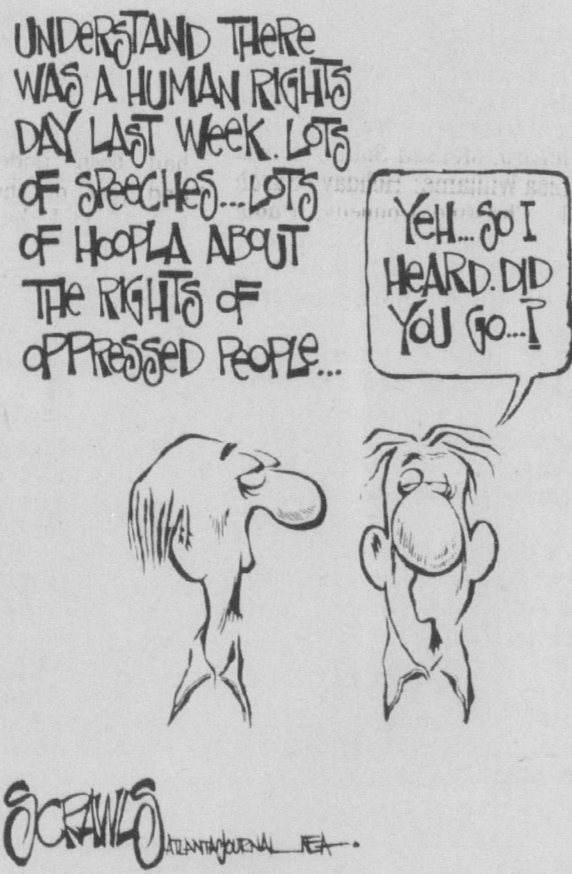

The agreement is the result of 15 months of negotiations, much of it acrimonious.

Both Peckford and Dawe said the 75-25 split is a victory for Newfoundland since the federal government had previously maintained it would pay only 50 per cent of the cost.

Pepin said the split arrangement really makes no difference since the federal government had its total fixed from the beginning.

Dawe said one of the most important aspects of the agreement is a memorandum of understanding for joint long-term transportation planning. This should help avoid sudden decisions by Ottawa to change ferry schedules and other arrangements without prior consultation with the province.

Largest single item is a three-year $48-million highway upgrading program. Work on the Trans-Canada Highway will cost $40 million and the other $8 million is to be spent on roads on the great northern peninsula.

Dialectic of gunplay troubling communist party

Gwynne Dyer

Many comrades have been troubled recently by the concept of the dialectical materialist gunfight. This is not surprising: the organs of the capitalist press are predictably distorting the recent events in the People's Republic of Albania, with shameless insinuations that the exchange of gunfire over the dinner table which led to the early demise of Prime Minister Mehmet Shehu was not in conformity with the principles of Real Socialism.

To the ideologically immature, there is a certain superficial plausibility in the argument that when President Enver Hoxha was provoked into shooting Shehu, his closest associate for 30 years, in order to emphasize the fallacy of his economic ideas, he was acting not as a Marxist-Leninist but as an Albanian bandit. The readiness with which this malicious slander was accepted shows how much basic ideological work is still to be done amongst the masses.

Objectively, it is clear that the elimination of Shehu was a historical necessity. Hoxha's trigger finger was merely the instrument of the Will of the Masses, purging society of an unhealthy element. If Shehu had managed to draw first, then we might have cause to re-examine this conclusion, but it is quite obvious that History is on the side of Comrade Hoxha.

Nevertheless, many of our younger and less seasoned comrades are dismayed by the fact that so many shooting incidents have occurred amongst the leaderships of Communist states in the past few years. The recent gunfire in Albania, for example, followed the pattern established in People's Afghanistan, where President Tarakki was liquidated by President Hafizullah Amin, who in turn was eliminated by President Karmal.

In the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen a few years ago, President Rubayya Ali was shot by his successor, President Abdul Fattah Ismail. For ten years in the People's Republic of China, practically everybody in the leadership was trying to liquidate everybody else, from Lin Piao and Mao down to the Gang of Four. We must boldly face up to the fact that some of these incidents seem to challenge the concept of socialist legality.

Most comrades' basic ideological difficulty is in understanding why there should be so much gunplay in the presidential palaces of Marxist-Leninist states. Their doubts are avidly fed by the lackeys of the capitalist media, who malevolently seek to equate these (admittedly forceful) exchanges of views between marxists with the decadent bourgeois shoot-outs of the Old West.

In unmasking their plots and refuting their filthy anti-Communist lies, let us not fall into the trap of arguing on their ground. We have no need to apologise for our actions. Comrades! It is our sacred duty to explain, defend and hold high the key ideological concept of the dialectical materialist gunfight!

Why shouldn't good Marxist-Leninists use pistols to decide their disagreements? We Marxists have always been on the side of Progress: did the capitalists expect us to remain in the era of the ice-pick forever?

And what could conform more closely to the principles of dialectical materialism than a gunfight? Is there anything more materialistic than a bullet? More dialectical than a pistol duel between the protagonists of correct and false ideological positions? But, some comrades will protest, how can we be sure that the supporter of the right line will get his gun out first? This merely shows the shallowness of their own ideological grounding: if History is on our side, then surely it can be trusted to ensure that the right line triumphs when the guns come out in the People's Place. Those who still have difficulty in overcoming their antiquated bourgeois qualms may take comfort in the fact that full-dress shoot-outs, with fusillades of bullets flying everywhere and perforated Cabinet ministers littering the floor, are largely confined to the poorer Marxist-Leninist states. The governments of the more developed socialist countries, after the first flush of revolutionary enthusiasm is past, no longer find gunfights an indispensable aid in the search for ideological truth.

In the Motherland of Socialism itself, for example, it is now a quarter-century since revolvers were last produced at a Politburo meeting. Even on that occasion, the actual shooting of the chief loser, the secret police chief and notorious American spy Lavrenti Beria, took place in the basement of the Kremlin, not on the nice carpets upstairs. Moreover, it took the more dignified form of a summary execution, rather than an unseemly gunfight.

Indeed, advanced Marxist societies may eventually be able to dispense entirely with dialectical materialist gunfights, and settle all policy disputes peacefully by sending the losers to run the Bratsk power station. We may confidently look forward to the time when the only guns needed in a Marxist-Leninist state will be those aimed at the workers.

For some of you who may not know, there is a "A" Stamp in the coil form, but not many post offices have it. It seems to be scarce. I have some but maybe more will turn up later. For some unknown reason there were three plates issued of the "A" stamps. Maybe because it will be March before we get our first 30 cents stamp on the market.

This week I am showing you what the next issues from the United Nations will look like. They are to be added to their definitive series -- three for the UN New York, two for Switzerland and one for Austria. The release date was January 22, but I have not seen my supplies as yet. If you collect, don't forget to order at the new issue price.

If you get supplements or stamps from me you are going to get postage on your parcels, worth three to five times the face value. Any stock that I have too many of will go for postage. Seems funny sometimes to use 5 cent stamps and it takes six of them to cover an ordinary letter rate.

If you want to contact me phone 849-4958. Or write.

Annual meeting of Pastoral Charge held

BEDFORD — The annual meeting of the Bedford United Church Pastoral Charge was held in the Bedford Church hall on Monday evening, Jan. 25, with a good representation from all four points of the Charge.

Rev. K.H. Eddy presiding, the meeting was opened with prayer. A moment of silence was observed for those whose death had occurred during 1981.

Minutes of the 1981 meeting were read by the Recording secretary, T.P. Bird and accepted. Later Mr. Bird was re-elected to that office which he has held for many years.

Only matters that concerned the charge as a whole were on the agenda. The Manse trustee report was given by the chairman, Fred Gilman. Through legal procedure the Manse is now officially the property of the Charge, completely separated from the Bedford Church property with official markers. Mr. Gilman reported the building of a new chimney and installation of a Franklin stove for auxiliary heating. He also reported that Mr. Gage had rebuilt the oil furnace at his own expense, thus saving a good amount. The old chimney had been removed by a bee organized by Ralph Gilman.

Wesley Gage gave the treasurer's report for funds handled by the Manse Trustees who are Fred Gilman, T. Bird, W. Gage, G. Clow and J. Sutherland.

Mrs. Carole Soule reported some interior decorations done and Jack Soles gave the financial report for the general maintenance fund. Thanks were expressed to these committee members and all were re-elected to carry on for 1982.

Mrs. Frances Oussoren gave the M. & S. report. Over $10,000.00 has been forwarded to headquarters. Mrs. Oussoren agreed to continue in her office for another year.

Prior to the general meeting, a meeting of the joint committee of stewards was held to discuss ministers' salary, their recommendation was accepted at the general meeting. Mr. Eddy was also granted leave of absence to allow him to visit the Holy Land with the company of many United Church ministers and laymen.

It was also decided to have a telephone answering service appliance installed. Mr. Stanley Soule was re-elected Treasurer of the Charge. His services are very much appreciated as he understands fully the complex problems of taxes, pension, etc.

A representation from each church was chosen to form a committee to look into the possibility of forming a Young People's group. This is felt by some parents to be of utmost importance. It is hoped that those who have consented to act on this committee will have the full cooperation of the entire Charge and in particular the parents.

Satisfaction of pastoral relationships were expressed by many including Rev. Eddy.

The meeting closed with the benediction pronounced by Rev. Eddy. Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

St. James Evening Guild meets

FOSTER — The annual meeting of the St. James Evening Guild was held at the home of Mrs. Muriel Whitehead on Thursday evening, January 14. Rev. Davidson opened the meeting with prayer, followed by the Guild prayer in unison. The minutes of the December meeting were read and approved. Ten members responded to the roll call and several visitors were welcomed.

The treasurer gave her report. A donation had been received from Mrs. Marion Anthony. A substantial sum had been turned over to the church corporation. In the absence of the corresponding secretary, her report was given by Mrs. Dot deSolla. A number of thank-you cards and Christmas cards had been received and were passed around for all to read. Mrs. Whitehead reported on the fruit, candy and/or calendars that had been given to shut-ins.

Annual reports were given by the officers and committee heads, all of which confirmed a very good year. Rev. Davidson announced the date for the annual vestry meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Mary George on January 22. Money was voted to the corresponding secretary for her work and the cost for the lucky draw was increased to 25 cents. This month's draw was won by Mrs. Doreen Gibbs. Three new members were welcomed into the Guild.

Following the adjournment, delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Whitehead, which included a birthday cake, this being the 20th anniversary of the Evening Guild.

The February meeting will be hosted by Mrs. Helen Seymour at her home on Friday 11.

St. James Church holds vestry meeting

FOSTER — The annual vestry meeting for St. James Anglican Church was held at the home of Mrs. Mary George in Waterloo, on Friday evening, January 22, with twelve people in attendance, including the rector, Rev. Wilbur Davidson, who opened the meeting with prayer and a Bible reading.

The minutes of the last vestry meeting were read and approved. Mrs. George Allen was elected to continue as vestry clerk. Copies of the financial statement were passed around. These were studied, discussed and approved. Substantial repairs to the parsonage had been undertaken and rent of the parsonage had been increased.

Mrs. Marsh presented the report of the Evening Guild, which had a very successful year. Mr. Price reported on the Sunday School, expressing the wish that more children would take advantage of this valuable opportunity. Mrs. Whitehead reported on the Altar Guild and thanked her helpers, especially Mrs. Taylor, who provided flowers for the altar. Rev. Davidson reported on the parish as a whole and Foster in particular. He expressed thanks to Mrs. George, who has served the parish faithfully, as organist, for many years and accepted her resignation with regret. He thanked all organizations for their support, the wardens and Mr. Price as Sunday School superintendent and also as lay reader, conducting services once a month in South Stukely and Foster.

Services this year will commence at Easter and continue to Thanksgiving with two morning and two evening services. A committee, comprised of Mrs. Whitehead, Mrs. McBride and Mr. Price was selected to gather information in view of purchasing a new organ for the church. All of the same officers were re-elected to carry on the work of the parish.

Following the adjournment of the meeting, delicious refreshments were served, followed by a social hour.

Beavers in first place after two big weekend wins

SHERBROOKE (AR)—It has been a long time coming but the Sherbrooke Beavers are in first place in the QMJHL for the first time during coach Andre Boisvert's tenure. "It feels good," said a jubilant Boisvert after his club had thumped Chicoutimi 8-1 at the Palais des Sports and Hull had lost to Trois Rivieres 12-4. "We have worked very hard to get where we are today. It has been a total team effort with hard work, discipline, and guts." Last night, and Friday for that matter, the Beavers played as a team for almost the entire 60 minutes. Their problem earlier in the season was the club was too individual and didn't always play for the entire game. Even when the game is well socked away the players still pass the puck around and don't keep it to try and build up their own individual statistics. "The change from after Christmas has been unbelievable," said Sean McKenna who scored two of Sherbrooke's goals last night. We have really come together as a team in the last few weeks. The Beavers will get a chance to show if they belong at the top of the heap this week because they face Hull in a home and home series Wednesday and Friday evening. The Friday game in Sherbrooke begins at 8 p.m. "We will just take them one at a time," said Boisvert. In other action, Montreal Juniors moved into a second-place tie with Hull by trampling Granby Bisons 9-3 and Quebec Remparts earned a 4-3 overtime triumph against Shawinigan Cataractes. Claude Drouin of the Draveurs was a one-man wrecking crew against Hull, scoring four goals. Eight other players contributed singles, including Sylvain Landry, Claude Gosselin and Jean-Guy Charbonneau in a four-goal second period that gave Trois-Rivieres a 7-3 lead. Patrice Masse, Claude Verret, Mario Paradis, Christian Tanguay and Normand LeFrancois had the others. Jean-Marc Gaulin fired a pair of goals for the Olympiques while Robert Millette and Jacques Berthiaume completed the scoring. The Beavers put their game out of reach by scoring four unanswered goals in the opening period. Sean McKenna was the offensive leader with two goals. Others went to Gerard Gallant, Michel Lanouette, Mario Dore, Paul Boutilier, Alain Menard and Daniel Campeau. The lone Chicoutimi score came in the second period by Alain Heroux. The Juniors also had a quick start in their victory over Granby, taking a 4-2 lead in the first 20 minutes. Kari Kanervo paced the attack with a pair of goals. Billy Campbell, Gaetan Malo, Robert Dore and Michel Doyon were the first-period marksmen. Jean-Paul Lariviere, Tony Fiore and Marc Chamard also found the range for Montreal. Jacques Sylvestre, Pierre Champigny and Alain Robichaud replied for Granby. Robert Lebrun's goal after 3:38 of overtime lifted Quebec to a rare victory. The Remparts had tied the game at 7:39 of the third period on a goal by Daniel Rioux. Earlier Quebec goals came from Richard Linteau and Andre Chartrain. The Cataractes had countered with singles by Pierre Rioux, Steve Woodburn and Guy Fournier. In the only contest tonight Granby visits the Voisins in Laval.

RECORD/PERRY BEATON

Sean McKenna led the Beavers in scoring last night with two goals and scored his first on this play. John Chabot set up the goal with a beautiful pass leaving McKenna with a wide open net.

Poor shooting sinks Gaiters Cougars continue to roll along Trevor Bennett was one of the few bright lights in Bishop's attack yesterday.

LENNOXVILLE (AR) — It went down to the wire but in the end Bishop's Gaiters poor shooting was the difference and Concordia Stingers escaped with a 67-64 victory, in QAAA men's basketball action yesterday.

Bishop's only shot 38 per cent from the field while Concordia managed 59 and although they had a chance to win in the dying seconds it was the opportunities they missed early on which really told the story.

Little things hurt the Gaiters and Concordia was doing a lot of those little things right. At the end of the first half Bishop's relaxed a little and the Stingers hit a shot at the buzzer to give them a 31-31 tie at the midway point. In the middle 10 minutes of the second half Concordia built up a 10-point lead and it was largely due to the Gaiters poor shooting and lack of help on defence. Everyone appeared to be doing their job but it was the little things like helping out on defence which made the difference.

With 1:20 left in the game Bishop's had cut the Concordia lead to 63-58 and looked as if they were ready to take control when Alain Chastenot was called for travelling at the basket. Concordia came back down but Trevor Bennett stole the ball and raced the length of the floor and dunked it to cut the Stingers' lead to three. With time running out Bishop's were forced to foul to get the ball back and Concordia made each one of their foul shots to escape with a three-point win.

Bishop's coach Carth Smith was disappointed with the loss but thought the game could easily have gone his club's way at the end. "That was tough when Al was called for travelling but it was a difficult play," Guard Harley Lawrence said fundamental mistakes on offence played a big part in the loss. "We didn't shoot but we shouldn't be too disappointed. When we shoot that poorly and only lose by three it isn't that bad."

Gary McKeigan led the Stingers with 27 points while Bennett and Lawrence had 19 and 18 points for Bishop's.

The Lady Gaiters continued to roll toward the QAAA title and another berth in the nationals as they dispensed of Laval Friday, 72-36 and continued their league domination by bouncing Concordia 79-34 yesterday. Andrea Blackwell was the top point getter for the girls Friday with 19 followed by Lynn Polson with 18 and Maria Bobyn with 12. Sunday Polson led the scorers with 16 points followed by Karen McCumber and Denise Dignard who scored 11 each.

Both the men and the women play their next home game against McGill. Thursday night The Ladies tipoff at 6:30 followed by the men at 8.

Rod McKell's Champlain Cougars continued to make mincemeat out of their opposition in CEGEP AA hockey. Friday they again destroyed Granby 12-0. "I guess we are playing pretty well right now," said McKell in one of the year's larger understatement.

In high school action Alexander Galt scored an open net goal to defeat MacDonald Cartier 4-1 Friday afternoon.

In swimming Nathalie Deschamps of the Quebec Selects and Philippe Blanchard of Montreal's CAMO swim club won three events each Saturday to highlight the final day of competition at the University of Sherbrooke invitational swimming meet.

Deschamps captured the women's 50-metre freestyle in a time of 28.15 seconds. She was equally masterful in the 100-metre backstroke, posting a time of 1:08.71, and the 200-metre butterfly, clocking it in 2:22.82.

Blanchard's victories came in the men's 50, 100 and 400-metre freestyle events. He swam the first in 25.41 seconds and recorded times of 55.99 and 4:04.31 respectively in the other two events.

Lynne Royer of Sherbrooke was the only other major winner, capturing the women's 100-metre freestyle in 1:01.78.

CAMO topped the men's standings with 282 points while Quebec Selects led the women with 129.

Champlain Cougars continue to lead the CEGEP AA hockey league as they blasted Granby 12-0 Friday. The Cougars play their next home game Wednesday at 8 p.m. against the same Granby squad.

Hess captures gold downhill delayed

SCHLADMING, Austria (CP) — Erika Hess of Switzerland won the first gold medal at the world Alpine skiing championships Sunday but poor weather has caused a one-week delay in the running of the premier event of the championships, the men's downhill. Originally scheduled for Sunday, it will be run next Saturday. The women's downhill at nearby Haus was postponed Saturday and rescheduled for Thursday.

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — Canada's top figure skaters Brian Orser and Kay Thomson will lead a 10-member team described as "probably one of the best teams ever" to the world championships in Copenhagen in March.

Orser, from Penatanguishene, Ont., won the men's Canadian figure skating championship title by outscoring Brian Pockar of Calgary, with a 4½ minute program that included seven triple jumps.

MONTREAL (CP) — Helene Tousignant skipped her Lavolette rink from Trois-Rivieres to a 9-8 victory over Pat Redman's Montreal Glenmore entry to capture the Quebec women's provincial curling championship Sunday.

Tousignant earned the victory the hard way as Lavolette was forced into a three-way playoff after tying with Glenmore and Dorothy Crowe's St. Bruno rink with 7-2 won-lost records after regulation play.

OSLO (AFP) — Tomas Gustavson of Sweden set a world 10,000 metres record of 14 minutes 23.59 seconds at the European speed skating championships Sunday. His time was more than three seconds faster than the old record of 14:26.71 set by Dmitri Oglabin of the Soviet Union.

JAKARTA (AFP) — Police had to fire shots in the air Saturday to release an injured referee from an angry mob at a soccer match.

The spectators stormed the field and attacked the referee with umbrellas and stones moments before the end of a match in Yogyakarta, central Java. He was taken to hospital for treatment.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Scott Hamilton and Rosalynn Summers, judged the best in United States figure skating for 1982, have gone home with a gold medal and hopes of winning another at the world championship next month in Denmark.

"I'm going to add two more triples into my program for the worlds," said Hamilton, who was first in the men's event for the second straight year at the U.S. Figure Skating championships, which ended on the weekend.

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Canadian Peter Norberg, racing at an average speed of more than 30 kilometres an hour, won the unlimited class dog team event Sunday in an International Sled Dog Racing Association competition.

Driving a team of 14 sled dogs, Norberg completed the winding, 23.3-km course in 46 minutes, 38.02 seconds in the final heat, accumulating a total time of two hours, 27 minutes and 30.81 seconds during the three days of heats.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The trio of West German Rolf Stommelen and Americans John Paul and John Paul Jr. rolled to a big victory in the Daytona 24-hour auto race Sunday, continuing the domination of American sports car racing in recent years by powerful Porsche Turbo 935s.

The record-setting winning car took the checkered flag just seconds after 3:30 p.m. completing 719 laps — 4,443.21 kilometres (2,760.96 miles) — at an average speed of 184.738 kilometres an hour (114.794 miles an hour).

Between early Friday and Saturday morning, more than 30 centimetres of snow fell on the courses. A rapid thaw early Saturday worsened conditions.

"The girls would have been water-skiing at the bottom of their track," said Fritz Traflet, secretary general of the organizing committee. Organizers, however, were able to get the women's combined event finished.

Hess, 19, captured the gold followed by Perrine Pelen of France with the silver and Christin Cooper of the United States with the bronze.

The top three are all slalom specialists and had relatively poor times in the downhill, the first phase of the combined event, last Thursday.

LEHODEY TOP CANADIAN

Top Canadian in overall standings was Dianne Lehodey of Calgary, who finished 19th. Laurie Graham of Inglewood, Ont., was 20th.

Canada's best slalom racer, Didi Haight of Fruitvale, B.C., was unable to compete Sunday because of a nagging leg injury.

These world championships marked the first time a combined event comprising separate slalom and downhill races was staged.

Duran ends his career

"I lost but I don't feel bad," said Roberto Duran. "I lost and I lost good."

Duran lost a unanimous decision Saturday night to Wilfredo Benitez in a bid for the World Boxing Council super-welterweight title.

Also Saturday, Arturo Frias retained his World Boxing Association lightweight title against Ernesto Espana when officials stopped the bout in the ninth round after Frias was butted by the challenger.

Duran, 30, of Panama, had hoped to ride the fight to a third bout against Sugar Ray Leonard. He lost the WBC welterweight title to Leonard when he quit in the eighth round Nov. 25, 1980.

He contended he had stomach cramps, Leonard claimed it was frustration. Whatever caused it, the move cast a shadow over an otherwise illustrious career.

It is a career that has ended, said Carlos Eleta, Duran's manager. Another fight with Leonard no longer possible, there is no purpose for Duran to continue.

It ended for Duran with 74 victories, three defeats and undisputed lightweight and WBC welterweight championships.

It goes on for Benitez, 23, one of only six men to hold three titles — he previously was the WBA junior welterweight and WBC welterweight champion.

Before the fight Duran had said it would be his "last fight" in the super-welterweight class which has a 154-pound limit. He wants to fight as a middleweight (160-pound limit) in a bid to become the first man ever to win four championships.

"The world wants that fight," Benitez said of a match between him and Marvin Hagler, the undisputed middleweight champion.

FIRST AID TIP

LOW VOLTAGE ELECTRICAL INJURIES

Usually incurred around the home. Moisture is a conductor of electricity. If the point of contact is wet, even low voltages may cause paralysis of the heart, a sudden stoppage of breathing or both. Local effect is a burn which is deeper and more extensive than it appears. With faulty switches, water may continue to carry the current even when turned off. Avoid contact with the casualty. Break contact by switching the current, removing the plug or wrenching the cable free. If impossible to do, stand on some dry insulating material and by means of dry wood, folded newspaper or rubber, attempt to break contact by pushing the casualty's limbs away from the electricity. Treat by giving artificial respiration if necessary and cover burns with a sterile dressing. Seek medical aid.

Sherbrooke through the eyes of young artists

Photos by Perry Beaton

Following an art contest held late last year, the Sherbrooke Municipal Library is exhibiting 50 of the best works. Using the theme 'the library and books in my life' the art work covers everything from recreation and sports to local churches. The exposition is on display at the Salle Albert Gravel at the library.

Large hydro lines like this one are being used to export Quebec's energy to other provinces in Canada and the United States.

Hydro-Quebec exports begin to flow over the dam, more to come

MONTREAL (CP) — The billion-litre flow of water through Hydro-Quebec power dams is beginning to add up to a million-dollar flow of export revenue for the provincially owned electric utility.

Quebec power currently fuels factories in Ontario, homes and offices in Manhattan, farms in Vermont and New Brunswick. These exports brought in 12.5 per cent of Hydro-Quebec's $2.412 billion revenues in 1980.

Earlier this month, the utility announced two new export pacts with Ontario Hydro and the New England Energy Pool, the latter deal "95-per-cent completed." And, Hydro-Quebec is seeking to more than double its current exports to the Power Authority of the State of New York.

In 1980, the last year for which full figures are available, Hydro-Quebec reported $300 million in revenues from exports of surplus power. Half of that came from sales to the U.S.

The pace of expansion in the U.S. has been brisk, with sales going from $13.82 million in 1978 to $104.01 million in 1979 and $154.35 million in 1980.

All of the exports come from Hydro-Quebec surpluses that became available after the first phase of the mammoth James Bay project in northern Quebec came on-line. Quebec now has 17,000 megawatts of installed capacity and expects to have close to 35,000 megawatts by the mid-1990s.

But the utility forecasts that all that power won't be needed domestically until the end of the 1980s and has aggressively pursued its export campaign. Thy buyers are:

The Power Authority of the State of New York which now gets 800 megawatts of uninterrupted power from April to October and another 400 megawatts of interruptible power year-round, mainly for the New York City area. It accounts for the bulk of Hydro-Quebec's $155 million in U.S. revenues.

Hydro-Quebec chairman Joseph Bourbeau says the Quebec and New York utilities now are negotiating for another 2,000 megawatts, again for New York City, that would bring in an additional $300 million a year once transmission lines are built in 1984 or 1985.

Ontario Hydro paid a total of $165 million between 1977 and 1981 for an average of about 500 megawatts a year, an Ontario official said. Starting this year, the utility will pay $200 million over five years for less energy — an average 435 megawatts a year.

Vermont has two private utilities with contracts accounting for 80 megawatts and 52 megawatts. Both Vermont utilities are members of the New England Energy Pool and Hydro-Quebec says negotiations with the pool now are "95-per-cent completed" for new transmission lines that would go through either Vermont or New Hampshire.

Hydro-Quebec would deliver 600 megawatts on these new lines at start-up in 1986 but would eventually furnish 2,000 megawatts, meeting a tenth of all New England power needs and getting Quebec electricity into the Boston area for the first time.

Upstate New York get 56 megawatts under terms of a contract first signed in 1915 and expiring in 1999.

New Brunswick occasionally purchases small Quebec surpluses.

The Churchill Falls project in Labrador delivers 5,000 megawatts of power to Hydro-Quebec, adding to the 17,000 megawatts already installed or Quebec territory.

Hydro-Quebec paid only $130 million for the Newfoundland power in 1980 and re-sold it for more than five times that amount under a controversial, long-term agreement that Newfoundland wants badly to renegotiate.

Magazine business no piece of cake

WINNIPEG (CP) — Starting one magazine may be risky here but Winnipeg publishers say operating an entire chain is smart business.

"I would not suggest anyone go into one magazine here unless they really know what they're doing," advises Dorothy Dobbie, vice-president of Naylor Communications.

"It would be easier to start a new magazine in another province where there are more dollars and people are open to you."

Dobbie said Naylor, an 11-year-old business publishing 50 titles in the hotel, construction, labor and business fields, prospers because of the province's diversified and stable economy.

"It's easier to predict what's going to happen to your business two or three years down the road."

She said Manitoba also has a number of advantages which make it, at least in the production end, one of the best places to publish in North America.

Those advantages include an ample supply of printing tradespeople as well as creative writers and artists, which Dobbie said are hard to find in Edmonton and Vancouver.

Winnipeg also is only two distribution days away from all major Canadian points.

Richard Murray is president of Canasus Publications. It produces Manitoba Business, Saskatchewan Business and Atlantic Business magazines.

LOCATES IN WINNIPEG

By locating his head office in Winnipeg, he said he can call Halifax at 7 a.m. and at 7 p.m. catch the end of Vancouver's business day.

If Canasus had been based in Vancouver, he said he would have hesitated in making the long jump into the Maritimes with the new Atlantic Business in January.

Murray and Dobbie agreed success is related to the size of the company's holdings.

"Manitoba Business could not survive on its own," said Murray. "It has to be part of a larger organization."

Manitoba Business holds its own but Saskatchewan Business does much better, he explained.

One company for which the formula did not work was Pennex Ltd., which declared bankruptcy in late 1980 after eight years, despite a list of 30 titles and a printing plant.

Company founder Craig Kelman blames the failure on poor financial management but says magazine publishing is pretty tough going in the Winnipeg area.

Pennex's Winnipeg Woman folded in 1980 after nine months because of the company's financial position but he said he doubts the venture could have succeeded even in other circumstances.

"Until some attitudes change and Manitoba has a few prosperous years under its belt, I would stay away from the magazine business here," Kelman said.

Still alive, but not necessarily well, is Winnipeg Magazine. It has changed hands three times in the last four years.

Managing editor Richard Garlick said it is seeking a broader cross-section of readers and advertisers. Circulation and advertising levels have been upped with free distribution to Winnipeg Sun newspaper subscribers.

But Garlick said it is hard to attract national advertisers and the local advertising dollar is scarce.

"We're doing about as well as can be expected under the conditions," said Garlick. "But whether in the long run it's really viable, whether the magazine can really exist, I don't know."

Publisher Tom Denton, who also publishes The Sun in Winnipeg, says although the magazine's advertising revenue still does not cover its expenses, he is optimistic about its future.

"I don't think the economics of Winnipeg are so dreadful," he says. "I think the magazine is ultimately going to be able to stand on its own two feet."

Denton, whose newspaper is not part of the Toronto-based Sun chain, says although Winnipeg has been ignored or disparaged on the national scene, it is growing slowly and steadily.

Cyberphobiacs terrified of computers nasty

VANCOUVER (CP) — In almost any computing centre, long after normal operating hours are over, they are fiddling with programs.

Psychologists call them cyberphiliacs, more commonly known as "hackers" or compulsive computer programmers.

Then there are the cyberphobiacs — people who fear computers, and would rather switch jobs than face computerization of their workplace.

One Atlanta

policeman developed such a complex about the small computer console in his police cruiser that he shot it. Another cyberphobic dumped pencil shavings and coffee into his computer console.

Computers are having profound psychological effects on people who work with them, says Sanford Weinberg, a professor and administrator at St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia.

At least 30 per cent of business people who deal with computers on a daily basis experience some degree of cyberphobia, Weinberg said in a recent telephone interview. At the other end of the scale, about five per cent of computer programmers are "almost addicted" to computer use.

Cyberphobiacs experience the same symptoms that plague sufferers of other phobias: nausea, sweaty palms and high blood pressure, Weinberg said.

"The major cause of that cyberphobia is a bad experience," he explained. "As long as computer companies insist on putting goods on the market before they're perfect, people will always have some bad experiences."

TRUST MACHINES

Weinberg conducts workshops for people with serious cyberphobia. Through behavior modification or gradual work with computers, cyberphobiacs are taught to trust the machines, he said.

Although companies try to help their cyberphobiacs, there is little effort made to cure the hackers, Weinberg said.

Programming requires skill and ingenuity, but the true hacker attacks his problems randomly with little regard for the final outcome.

The hacker's compulsion leaves him isolated from the rest of the world, apart from friends and family.

Many advances in computer programming have been made by hackers employed by software companies, but hackers burn out quickly, Weinberg said.

The compulsive programmer is attracted by one of the computer's most insidious qualities, the feeling of power it gives the user, said Joseph Weizenbaum, a professor of computer science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology who recently spent a week as a guest lecturer at Simon Fraser University.

"The computer is a particularly seductive instrument because it offers immediate feedback," Weizenbaum said. "But the thing that binds you to it is that whatever the computer is doing is under your control."

Quitting is tough, but it's worth the effort.

Women are more honest than men in locker rooms

TORONTO (CP) — One man who read the book told sex therapist Linda Levine that "it's a female version of what men talk about in locker rooms — but the women who share their intimacies are more honest."

That, to Levine, may be one of the most important spinoffs to come from the 120 interviews she and her colleague, Dr. Lonnie Barbach, conducted to find out about women's sexual experiences.

Shared Intimacies: Women's Sexual

Experiences, published by Bantam Books, is the culmination of several years' research and interviews of a cross-section of American women by Levine, who has a private practice in Washington, D.C., and Barbach, a clinical psychologist at University of California in San Francisco.

During a visit to Toronto, Levine said in an interview that the man who made the comment about locker rooms and women's honesty "probably meant that men's talk was mostly bravado and ego-boosting, whereas the women interviewed for the book really seemed eager to share their unspoken feelings about their approach to sex."

"This book has evolved from our accumulated experience in running educational and therapy workshops for women," Levine said. "Many women participated in the workshops out of curiosity, out of an interest in improving and enriching their sexual relationships."

She said others came with questions or problems they were unable to resolve.

COULD TALK EXPLICITLY

"We found the group provided them, for the first time in their lives, the opportunity to talk to other women explicitly about sexuality and sexual problems."

Levine said "we realized that if this much information could be shared in a two-hour program with a small group of women, a plethora of ideas could result from interviewing a large number of women from different backgrounds, different ages and with different relationship experiences."

The one thread that ran through the project was the fact society has placed men in the role of sexual teachers, she said.

"Most women learn about sexuality from their first male partners. And yet, armed only with information gleaned from books and peers, a man is burdened with the role of orchestrating the sexual act, initiating the various sexual activities and satisfying both his partner and himself."

Levine said that by giving women the opportunity to exchange information with each other, pressure on men to be the teachers and initiators would be eased.

She said that "in general, we interviewed women who felt good about their sexuality, since we did not want the book to be one of dysfunction."

Ann Landers

Women made for men, not for pants

Dear Ann Landers: This is for the man who was mad because he was criticized for dressing up in his wife's clothes. Doesn't he know women have been wearing trousers, oxfords, vests and fedoras for at least 50 years?

Tucked inside my grandfather's Bible was something dated July 1919. It was in Grandpa's handwriting and sounds like something he would have made up. I think it might amuse your readers to see what people laughed at 63 years ago.

"Pants were made for men. Not for women."

"Women were made for men, not pants."

"When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man — that makes a pair of pants."

"There have been a lot of arguments as to whether the word pants is singular or plural."

"When a man wears pants, they are plural. When he doesn't, he'd better stay out of sight or he might get arrested."

"If you want to make the pants last, make the coat first." — West Coaster

Dear Coaster: I am printing Grandpa's essay for its historical value. Hilarious it is not. Thanks for letting us know what they laughed at in 1919.

Dear Ann Landers: Ten years ago I nursed my husband through a long, terminal illness. I was faced with huge financial problems and family trouble. After two years of stress I caved in and had to be hospitalized.

In the eight years since my husband's death I have made a success of my career. I have received promotions and an award for superior performance. I've made good business decisions, taken on the sole responsibility of my elderly mother and gone through my child's divorce without collapsing. Yet there are still many people who consider me odd when they learn I had a nervous breakdown.

Why is it that even well-educated people don't seem to understand that a person can recover from mental illness? Please print this, Ann — they need the lesson. — I'm OK. What's Wrong With You?

Dear OK: Here's the lesson — and I hope the ignoramuses learn. (Love your signature!)

Dear Ann Landers: Next summer our church is helping to sponsor a trip to Florida. It is open to anyone. Several families have signed up already. I am a young man in the 11th grade. My sister is a sophomore in college. We are thinking of signing ourselves and our parents up for this trip. It would be a nice vacation for us all.

The question: Would it be proper for my parents, myself and my sister to share the same room? If four stay in one room, the saving is $120 off each person's cost. This would mean $480 to us. Otherwise, it would be two to a room.

We don't do anything weird or abnormal like some of the people I read about in your column. But if we go on this trip, I don't want people to think we are oddballs or possibly immoral if we all stay in one room. (Dad and I would share a bed. Mother and my sister would share one.) What do you think? — Perplexed In Utah

Dear Perplexed: Any motel manager will tell you it is not unusual for families to double up to save money. Think nothing of it — no one else will.

Engagements

Mrs. Agatha Boschat and the late Robert Evans are pleased to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter Helen Marie Evans to Richard Fontaine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Real Fontaine of Sherbrooke.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Buzzell of Lennoxville would like to announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Donna Brenda to Steven Rodgers, son of Mrs. Rose Rodgers and the late Donald Rodgers. Wedding will take place on Saturday, Feb. 6.

Maggie T finds herself, plans no more books

OTTAWA (CP) — Margaret Trudeau says she has finally found the real Margaret Trudeau and she is living a "boringly happy" life that will not provide the material for another sensational volume of autobiography.

"Maybe when I'm 70 I'll write Volume 3," she said in an interview Thursday marking publication of Consequences, the latest account of her jet-set life of wine, men, drugs and dancing in the international limelight.

"You have to have a lot of pain and struggle and hurt to make a good book," she said. "And I can't live that life anymore — I've finished with that world."

"Happily, I won't have the material for another book."

But she said she might turn to fiction — "and write really scandalous stuff."

And so, she insists, her life today is far from that detailed in Consequences — of love-making with actor Jack Nicholson in the back seat of his Daimler, a week spent with Ryan O'Neal, mainly in his canopy bed, and a terrible fight with Pierre Trudeau.

She says the prime minister was always stingy with money and the fight was over money.

WENT FOR HIS EYES

"I went for his eyes with my nails and had every intention of blinding him first and killing him afterwards," she writes. He pinned her down, she says, but her screams brought son Sacha who pleaded "Daddy don't hurt Mommy."

But throughout the book she generally gives Trudeau high marks as a parent. And in the interview she said "I guess I love him very much and respect him and certainly as the father of my children I have nothing but praise for him and love."

As for family reaction to the book, and the earlier Beyond Reason, she said she is not worried about her three sons — Justin, now 10, Sacha, 8, and Michel, 6.

"They are strong little boys and they are very realistic and honest and we talk a lot. They know what I've gone through and they know who I am."

When they're older, and read the books, "they may help them understand the kind of problems I went through trying to find myself."

As for her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Sinclair, "they are an entirely different generation — I can't be anything but what I am and if they can't accept that, I can't change."

They had heard a lot about her exploits anyway, mostly inaccurate, she said, and now the book gives the truth — "perhaps more than they would ever want to know." But maybe "the book will help them understand me a little."

Consequences, a Seal book published in Canada by McClelland and Stewart at $14.95, covers mainly the period from 1977 when she and the prime minister announced their separation up to 1979 when they made a "clean break" in their relationship.

LIVES WITH LAWYER

She now lives in a red brick house with Jimmy Johnson, a lawyer and businessman, near the prime minister's official residence.

She and Trudeau have a co-parenting arrangement and she is co-host of a local television show. It's a life of routine and discipline that has "made me a lot more consistent."

Surrogate mom has a customer, but she's not pregnant yet

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A young woman who advertised her services as a surrogate mother has a customer, but has yet to become pregnant.

A southern California couple has agreed to pay $17,000 for Jacquelyn Burkart to bear a child for them, but after three months of artificial insemination the Vancouver, Wash., mother of two is "frustrated."

"I feel real good," she said. "I'm just feeling frustrated about not conceiving yet."

The 27-year-old woman has been inseminated with sperm supplied by the father-to-be. It is frozen, then flown to Burkart's physician in Portland, Ore.

She believes her chances of conceiving will improve once the would-be father flies to Portland to provide a specimen.

"I think we need to do it locally," she said, explaining that freezing reduces the sperm count.

Burkart placed an ad in a Seattle newspaper last September offering her services as a surrogate mother. Word of her unusual proposal spread.

"I got phone calls for two weeks, 24 hours a day," she said.

She narrowed the prospects to five couples, all of whom were agreeable to her asking price of $15,000 plus medical and legal fees. She selected the southern California couple because they were the "people I got along best with," she said.

LIKES COUPLE

"They're fairly liberal," she said. "They're very outgoing, friendly, athletic. We talk three or four times a month."

The husband, 41, is a businessman and the wife, in her mid-30s, works as a bookkeeper. The wife has two children by a previous marriage, but a tubal ligation makes it impossible for her to become pregnant again. The man has never fathered a child.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Be wary of the topics you choose in discussions with friends today. Politics or religion are among the sensitive issues which might lead to heated debate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Be sure you have the best counsel available if you have to make important legal or financial decisions today. Wrong advice could prove costly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
One-to-one relationships could be filled with more stress than usual today. Keep this in mind so that you don't get off on the wrong foot, either with your mate or coworkers.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Be helpful to others today, but by the same token, don't get too deeply involved in their complicated affairs. It may be difficult to extricate yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
If two friends have a disagreement today, be careful you're not caught in the middle or put in a position where you have to choose a side.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Normally, when you promise others you're going to do something your word can be relied upon. Today, you might make commitments which you could fail to fulfill.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Your sales resistance could be rather low today. There's a possibility you might be talked into something which won't serve your best interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Beware of a tendency today to see things as you would like them to be rather than as they really are. This outlook could cause you to make costly mistakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Important decisions should not be based upon hunches or intuition today. Weigh every aspect before rendering a judgment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Uncharacteristically, today you may look to reap a harvest from areas in which you have not sown. This is not a day for getting something for nothing.

under the general name of coup. The Vienna coup is a specialized form of the squeeze. Some coups take place at the end of the play — others are made early.

Alan: "In today's hand South ruffs the third heart and plays two rounds of trump. He has lost two tricks and has a trump loser and a club loser still to come. There is some obscure chance for a squeeze in case West holds five clubs in addition to his five hearts. But there is a 'coup en passant' at his beck and call provided that East will have to follow to three diamonds and two clubs."

Oswald: "South cashes his last good trump, the three top diamonds and the ace and king of clubs. Now he leads dummy's last heart."

Alan: "Poor East has been couped. If he ruffs, South just discards his last club. If he discards, South ruffs with his small trump."

Oswald: "The defense had two winners. South had made them use both winners on the same trick."
