INSURANCE.

THE TRUE CUSTODIAN.

When a father of a family, whose labours and earnings have been devoted to the support and education of his children, sits down calmly to reflect that the time is coming, and perhaps very soon, when he can no longer stand between those loved ones and their financial foes; when poverty, like an armed man, and temptation in myriad forms will come into a home which he has thus far protected, it is not surprising that the prospect should be gloomy. And if there was no such beneficent provision as that which life insurance affords for exigencies of this very kind, the situation would, indeed, be hopeless. For benevolent as may be the impulses of a certain portion of every community, it is none the less true that no one desires to put himself in the place of almoner to widows and children whose natural protectors have neglected to provide for them.

It is as the guardians of unprotected families that our life insurance companies appear in their most attractive and honourable aspect. That which the father can no longer do for his loved ones, by his daily toil, these institutions are able to do. The competence which could not be saved during his life the father may easily leave behind him in a policy securing comfort and plenty, and happiness to his family. Life insurance is thus one of the most complete and trustworthy of earthly comforters supplying consolation of that practical sort which sorrow and distress best appreciate. It is the friend indeed, because it becomes a friend in time of need. Its promises relieve the anxieties and solicitudes of the living; its acts assuage the grief and guard the future of those whom death has bereaved of support.

Those who flippantly decry life insurance companies and their industrious agents, little know how they decry the utility and public benefit of a system which, by the disbursement of twenty-five million dollars in a single year, has certainly elevated itself far above the most successful institutions of public or private benevolence that the world has ever known. They forget, too, that, independently of what life insurance is to the families of its patrons, it cultivates in the community sentiments of prudence and the practice of economy. It is the great school for thrift and bank for savings; the bonded custodian of nearly four hundred million dollars of trust funds, which sum, with its gains from compound interest, is a legacy held in store for thousands of families.

All that is needed, then, is that those proposing to insure their lives shall exercise common prudence in the selection of the company to whose guardianship they are about to entrust the future comfort of their families. This duty is as important as any other that belongs to our daily life, for mistake here means disappointment hereafter. The business condition of such companies as the Equitable Life Assurance Society is intelligible to all persons, and there is no reason why, where the path is so plain, the wayfarer should err in selecting such an institution to be the custodian of the future welfare of his family.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

WEEKLY REVIEW — WHOLESALE PRICES.

STAR OFFICE, FRIDAY, May 12, 1876.

FINANCIAL.

The financial market was still quiet and easy, but the pressure to lend was not as great as it had been. Banks were discriminating in making their loans, or rather charging higher rates for those stocks whose books close from the 15th of May to the 1st of June. Call loans were made from 5 to 6 per cent., and time loans from 6 to 7 per cent. on approved collaterals. Sterling Exchange was steady at 109⅝ between banks, and 109⅞ over the counter. Gold drafts on New York were dull at ⅛ per cent. premium. Greenbacks were bought at 11¼, and sold at 10⅞ per cent. discount.

The Stock Market during the past week has generally been steady and inactive. In Bank of Montreal, considerable sales were made from 193¼ down to 191⅞, closing from 191½ to 192. Ex-dividend stock sold from 187 down to 185⅞. Some of the prominent operators in this stock show symptoms of wanting to get out, as the prospect of carrying a load for the summer is not very encouraging. Ontario remains firm without transactions.

The amalgamation between the City and Royal Canadian Banks was consummated this week, and the result is to be called the Consolidated Bank of Canada. The officers of both institutions remain in their respective positions until the annual meeting in June, when a new board will be elected. Molsons was steady but firm at 109 to 109½, with small transactions. Toronto was steady but dull at from 192 to 193. Jacques Cartier was quiet but a shade firmer. Merchants' developed considerable strength and showed an advance of 1½ per cent. In Commerce there were considerable sales during the week at 124⅞ to 125, closing steady at the same rates. Telegraph stocks were one of the principal features of the week. Montreal Telegraph was selling from 171 down to 164½, reacting almost immediately to 167½, at which price it closed. Many wild rumors are afloat as to the cause of this decline, but the most probable theory is that the party in power having disposed of large quantities of stock at the high figure, dropped the market in order to take in again, or, to use an American expression, to "make a scoop." Dominion Telegraph sold from 88½ down to 77½, closing firmer at 78 bid. There are several reasons given for the depression in this stock, the best authenticated being the failure of Mr. Swinyard's mission to London to raise money, and also the consequent trouble with contractors along the proposed new line to Nova Scotia, where, it is said, poles were got out in anticipation of the loan succeeding. City Passenger Railway has run dull for the time being with but few transactions. It is said that an amicable settlement of the difficulties between the Company and Corporation will soon be arrived at. Stocks at New York have fluctuated considerably, opening firm yesterday morning and falling off rapidly, but closing firm again.

COMMERCIAL.

Trade is already assuming a cheerful and healthy aspect, the leading cause of which is apparent to all. The opening of navigation, with all its concomitant advantages and results, has regularly and formally been ushered in by the arrival of many sea-going vessels and two ocean steamships, and these have had life-inspiring effects on several departments directly, and on the others indirectly. Several branches of trade, such as dry goods, hardware, chemicals, and the boot and shoe trade, have commenced to wear their usual appearance of life and activity.

GROCERIES.—Jobbers' prices to the trade: The ordinary amount of business has been moving, but there does not seem to be much improvement at present, although a little more movement is looked for when the spring fleet arrives. As regards prices, there are no changes to report in any of the leading staples in this line.

TEAS.—Sales are still light. There is no alteration to note from last week's review. Japans, medium grades, from 38c to 45c. Fine, quoted at from 50c to 55c. Young Hysons, low grades, from 30c to 35c; medium, from 40c to 45c; finest, 65c to 73c. Black teas range from 30c to 70c.

SUGARS.—Since our last report sugars have remained steady, at previous quotations. Considerable quantities will be landed in a few days from vessels in the harbor. SYRUPS.—The jobbers are doing a small business in this article at unchanged rates. Golden and Extra Golden, at from 43c to 50c; Amber, from 65c to 67c.

TOBACCOS.—The favorite brands are moving off as fast as the manufacturers can turn them out. There have been but very few sales beyond the ordinary trade with the jobbers. Blacks, from 38c to 42c; Bright Solaces, from 37½c to 45c.

FRUITS.—There is only an ordinary amount of business being transacted. Stocks are becoming light, and are held at foreign prices. Currants are about ½c dearer, owing to higher prices in England and New York. Raisins—Valencias at 7½c to 8c; Layers, from $2.00 to $2.25; Sultanas small stock, new, 13½c; Loose Muscatels, $2.60 to $2.75; London Layers, $3.25 to $3.50; Currants, 6½c to 7c; Figs, 11½c to 12½c; Almonds—Languedoc, 13½c to 14c; do. Prov., 11½c to 12½c; do. Tarr., 12c to 13½c; Filberts, 7½c to 8½c; Walnuts, 6c to 6½c.

LEATHER.—There has been more enquiry and more leather selling during the past week, but as stocks are heavy in most lines prices generally favor buyers. Spanish and Slaughter Sole continue in excessive supply, and for large lots concessions would readily be made. Sales have been made in some instances considerably below our quotations. Upper Leather and Splits—Selling in small lots, and as stocks of these are only moderate, prices are fairly steady. Harness—Neglected. Russetts—Inquiry light and prices easier. Measured Leather—Slow of sale at previous quotations.

| Patent Cow do | 19 | to | 19½ |
| Pebbled Cow do | 12 | to | 15 |

BOOTS AND SHOES.—Business has been pretty fair, as there has been a good many small buyers in from the country, and more goods have been sold in the city warehouses lately. On the whole, the past week has been the best of the season as regards the volume of business. Stocks are still light, and leading firms are only manufacturing to order. Remittances are but fair-fairly satisfactory. Altogether the prospect for the future is very assuring.

RAW FURS.—Stagnation is still the order of the day in the fur trade. Rat skins have been bought at high prices, causing large lots to be offered, and leading buyers to "ease off" somewhat; 25c. is now offered, which is their full value, in view of the recent decline in Europe.

HARDWARE.—Business continues fair, and, with the addition of stocks now landing, the prospects are that during the rest of the month the volume of business will be somewhat increased. Country orders are not satisfactory, resulting, doubtless, from the bad country roads. Some leading firms have their stocks pretty well run down, but owing to the recent rise in the river, they are unable to unload their importations. When the river falls, stocks of all kinds will be plentifully supplied. Remittances are satisfactory.

DRY GOODS.—There has been a good many buyers in the market since our review of this department last week, and the apparent sluggishness which has prevailed in this branch for the preceding weeks meantime appears to have vanished. Stocks in most departments are well reduced. The rainy weather of late has seriously interfered with the city retail trade. More hopeful accounts of money receipts are reported, and there is every reason to believe that, as the season advances; less complaining under this head will be heard.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.—With the opening of navigation business begins to assume a more lively aspect, and orders, though not heavy, are coming in pretty freely, but buyers generally are cautious. As there are as yet but few arrivals from sea, prices are not fully established. Although importers are making fair offers, there are not many transactions to note by way of round purchases. Holders of old stocks are now willing to recede a little in prices of goods. The present rates are quoted as follows:—Sal-Soda, $1.35 to $1.60; Soda Ash, $1.90 to $2.25; Bi-Carb, $3.50 to $3.75 per keg of 112 lbs.; Caustic, 3½c to 3¾c, according to brand; Bleaching Powder, 2 to 2½c; Copperas, 1½c; Alum, 2½c to 2¾c; Roll Brimstone, 3c to 3½c; Flour Sulphur, 3½c to 3¾c; Madder, 10c to 12c; Epsom Salts, $2 to $2.50 per 100 lbs.; Sago, scarce at 6½c to 7c; Liquorice, 13½c to 25c, according to brand; Blue Vitriol, 7c to 8c; Borax, 14½c to 17c; Saltpetre, 7½c to 8c; Cream Tartar, ground, 29c to 31c; Crystals, 26c to 27c; Cudbear, 13c to 16c; Senna, 12½c to 17c per lb.

LONDON, May 11.

The fleet bearing the Prince of Wales and party arrived at Portsmouth this afternoon. The Prince, accompanied by the Princess and the Royal children, landed at the dockyard, where a vast assemblage was gathered to meet them. There was great cheering as His Royal Highness stepped ashore. The Mayor of Portsmouth read an address, and a chorus of 300 ladies and gentlemen sang "Welcome Home." On conclusion of the ceremonies, the Prince and Princess and suite took a special train for London, and arrived at the Victoria Station at 6:45 this evening. An immense crowd surrounded the building and cheered with great enthusiasm as the Prince passed through the station to the carriages in waiting.

ROME, May 11.

The Pope has written a reply to King Alfonso's last letter, which gave assurances that Spain was Catholic, and that Catholics need fear nothing from the new constitution, and maintained that the religious liberty clause was not inconsistent with the spirit of the Concordat of 1851. The Pope thanks the King for his letter, but avoids discussion of the question at issue.

PARIS, May 11.

Le Temps says no arrests have yet been made in Salonica. Bodies of victims remained unburied yesterday. The assassination is not an isolated occurrence. The Musselmans were previously much agitated over the news from Herzegovina and had assembled several times for the purpose of preparing for a massacre of the Christians. The French Consul at Salonica had been insulted several times. Despatches from Salonica as late as yesterday evening say fresh disturbances are apprehended there. The Christians have closed their shops. The military force was insufficient to restrain the mob.

NEW YORK, May 11.

At a special meeting of the New York Yacht Club, it was announced that in the international race for the Queen's American Challenge Cup, three races will be sailed —on the 10th, 12th and 14th of July respectively. The first race will be sailed over the course of the New York Yacht Club; the second from Sandy Hook, 20 miles to the windward, and the third to be determined hereafter.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.

President Grant and Secretary Fish, who are guests of George W. Childs, received calls during the morning. This evening the President and members of the Cabinet remaining in the city dined with Sir Edward Thornton. The Presidential party will leave to-morrow for Washington. Secretary Bristow and wife and Postmaster-General Jewell left for Washington this morning. Secretary Taft will remain until to-morrow. Lieutenant-General Sheridan left for the west this morning. Secretaries Chandler and Robeson and Attorney-General Pierrepont still remain as guests of Hon. A. E. Borie. One of the principal points of interest about the city is the old Independence Hall; the original Declaration of Independence and the original commission of Washington as Commander-in-Chief of the American armies, which are in a fire-proof safe, fully exposed to view, attract great attention. One of the first visitors at the exhibition grounds this morning was the Emperor of Brazil. His visit was more especially to the machinery hall, where he carefully inspected the Corliss engine, which he had assisted President Grant to set in motion yesterday. The Women's Centennial Music Hall at Forest Mansion opened to-night with the grandest musical performance ever given in Philadelphia.

TORONTO, May 11.

The people are loudly demanding a thorough investigation of the affairs of the Board of Water Commissioners. Nearly all their meetings are closed to the press and public, and no information is given except to members. At those meetings which are nominally open to reporters no business is transacted of any importance.

Smith Wood, an Oval school student, recently met with a painful accident while playing foot-ball on the grounds of that institution. He had the misfortune to have his leg broken by a kick from a fellow-contestant. Mr. Wood resides at Bradford, and will be taken home as soon as he is in a fit condition to be moved.

Hon. Ed. Blake was to-day elected Chancellor of the University by an almost unanimous vote.

LONDON, May 11.

On the 5th of the present month two men, representing themselves as Messrs. James Hayes and James Flood, of the township of West Williams, called at the office of the City Savings and Loan Society here and wished to raise $2,500 upon a mortgage on a farm alleged to be owned by Hayes. A deed and mortgage were presented, but something in the manner of the men caused suspicion, and the officials of the Society asked for time to examine into the title. It was then found that the deed was a forgery, and the parties had arranged to have the money transferred to-day at Granton, but when they called at the Express office they found Detective Murphy, who arrested and brought them here. When arraigned and brought before the magistrate they gave their names as John and Tillotson Babcock. They were remanded for examination eight days hence.

HAMILTON, May 11.

At a meeting of the Burlington and Home Medical Association, it was moved by Dr. Freeman, seconded by Dr. Miller, "That this Association regrets the course pursued by the members of the Medical Council in appointing themselves a Board of Examiners, thus destroying public confidence in the Council as an efficient Court of Appeal." The resolution was carried unanimously.

Fish poaching is carried on in Burlington Bay to a great extent this spring; not only are illegal nets used and set in prohibited places by unlicensed fishermen, but dynamite is also used, contrary to the Order-in-Council. Mr. Kerr, Fishing Inspector, had several parties arrested yesterday and seized several nets. The charges will be investigated on Saturday morning. To-day the first white-fish and salmon trout of the season were sold in the market.

ST. JOHN, N.B., May 11.

Late Fredericton advices say it is still raining, with every prospect of an extraordinary freshet. The river rose about ten inches last night, and continues rising this morning. The water is now in the lower storehouses on the wharves, and the freight is being removed from the Union Line storehouse in anticipation of its inundation. The railway wharf at Gibson is nearly submerged up the river. Advices state that it has rained hard there for the last two days. From all appearances, Fredericton will, this spring, see an almost extraordinary flood.

A number of the friends of King's College, at Windsor, have decided to erect a college chapel, in memory of the late Dr. Hensley, for many years Vice-President of the college and Professor of Divinity. ### THE FEMALE HOME, SEIGNEURS STREET.

The following report of the proceedings of the annual meeting of the above Home, which was held with closed doors, has been sent to us for publication by the President, Mr. T. M. Taylor:

The fifth annual meeting of the Montreal Female Home Society was held at the Seigneurs street Home on Tuesday, the 9th of May, at 3 p.m.

Mr. Taylor was in the chair, and Mr. Alexander acted as Secretary.

Attention was called to the special notice under which the meeting had been convened.

A number of excuses of absence, owing to other meetings at the same hour, were mentioned, with kindly expressions of interest in the Home work.

There were fifteen ladies and gentlemen present.

A very full report was presented, and the heads of the matter of an appendix were also read, with extracts therefrom, and the books of the Home were exhibited.

Mr. Redpath moved, seconded by Mr. Alexander, and it was resolved,

That the report be adopted, and that, with the view of conveying to the public full information concerning the institution, 500 or 1,000 copies, as the President may determine, with all the appendices, be printed and published.

Mr. T. M. Taylor was appointed President, Mr. Norman Trenholme, Secretary, and Messrs. Claxton, John McLonnan and Alexander the Committee; Dr. Reddy, consulting physician (from 1868), Dr. Trenholme (1876) of the Society, and Doctors Reed, Nelson, Alloway and Edwards attending physicians of the Home.

Mr. Claxton moved, seconded by Dr. Reddy, and it was resolved,

That, looking to the reformatory objects of this society, and recognizing the importance in maternity cases (when such are allowed to occur in the Home) of fostering the maternal relation both for the sake of the parent and the child, it be hereby resolved that the funds of the society be applied, with such other subscriptions as may be obtained, to the erection of an additional building for the shelter and care especially of children, if the committee and such other members of the society as they may add to their number for such consideration shall, on further and fuller consideration, deem the same advisable.

Mrs. Gowan, the Matron, was then called in and the following address, very beautifully engrossed, was presented to her by Mr. Claxton for himself and other friends of the Home:—

To Mrs. Jessie R. Gowan, Matron of the Female Home:

Having in view the troubles through which you have recently passed, owing to the unwarranted and unjust attack made upon your character, we desire to express our sympathy with and our continued confidence in you and the important work in which you have been engaged for the past eight years.

We now cheerfully state that, having carefully examined the books, accounts, and general management of the Female Home, and found everything perfectly correct, we desire to record our full confidence in your fitness for the responsible position in which you are placed as Matron.

With assurances for respect and our best wishes for the future success of the Home under your care.

It is also stated, under the signatures of Messrs. Taylor and Alexander, that Mrs. Gowan is still the Matron of the Home, to whom, or to Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, communications connected with it are to be addressed.

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

Mr. J. B. Anderson, of the Church of England Temperance Society, delivered an address last evening before this Society. The Rev. James Carmichael occupied the chair.

Mr. Anderson said it was five years since he had been in Montreal, and he was glad to be once more under the Union Jack. He said he was a member of the Temperance Alliance of England, and began his career in the Temperance Society of York, of which he had been appointed lecturer for his society and had gone through many towns in that and other counties, lecturing on behalf of the great cause. He gave a most interesting account of the magnitude to which the temperance cause had taken hold on the people of England, particularly those connected with the Church, among whom were Earl Grey, Canon Ellison, Wilberforce, the Bishop of Winchester and others. The Queen herself was taking great interest in the work. The speaker graphically portrayed some of the scenes of horror and misery which arise from the use of the human curse—intoxicating liquor—scenes of vice, of suicides and murders, the causes of which results were almost always found to have their sources in the use of intoxicating liquor. He did not believe that anything could be gained by blackguarding people because they did not do as he and other temperance men did, but he believed in winning them through love; he believed that a great deal more could be accomplished by love for those degraded people than could be gained by driving them. Great work had been done in England by Mr. Wilberforce and the Bishop of Winchester; the latter had got no less than 800 persons to sign the pledge himself. The Rev. Newman Hall was doing good work, as was also Cardinal Manning, and Father Nugent, in the United States, had got no less than 12,000 persons to sign the pledge in 12 months. In England the societies were of two kinds; that which was doing the greatest work was the Total Abstainers', who were doing all in their power to abolish the use of liquor altogether; while the other was trying to have the grog-shops closed at an early hour, and otherwise doing good. He was glad to see the clergy of every denomination taking an active part in the abolition of the great curse. On the temperance question, with regard to creed, he was neither one thing nor the other; he could go in with everyone who worked for the cause of temperance; and if the clergy would all join in the work, there was no doubt that the question of temperance would soon flourish all through the land. There were no less than 200,000 people dying annually through intemperance, and it was not only the loss of body that was caused by it, but the loss of the soul. It was an awful thing to think of 200,000 souls giving down annually through drink. He noticed that the Dunkin Act had recently passed in Napanee, and hoped it would soon pass all over the country. He vividly described the suffering of wives and children caused through drink. He had seen it in Durham, his own county, where there had been so many murders that the county had been called the "Calcraft County," Calcraft being the name of the hangman. Sir Henry Thompson, a physician of great eminence in England, had done more good for temperance than any other person; he had shown that liquor was not at all necessary for the human system. The speaker had addressed no less than 200 meetings since the beginning of the year. He also entertained the audience by singing a hymn, in the chorus of which all took part.

The Chairman thanked Mr. Anderson for his address, and the meeting was dismissed with the benediction.

—The officers employed in the service of the Hudson Bay Company have presented the Hon. D. A. Smith, M.P., with a magnificent service of plate, in recognition of his services as their commissioner in the settlement of the Old Dead Poll. An address on behalf of the donors was presented by Mr. Bissett, to which Mr. Smith made a suitable reply.

AMERICAN PEDLERS.—A Montrealer who recently went through the border districts in the hope of doing some business reports that he might as well have staid at home, owing to the fact that the country folks had been fully supplied by American pedlers with the class of goods in which he dealt. He states that some of these peripatetic merchants have monster waggons tastefully decorated, and carrying as much as would stock a good-sized store. Thus does Brother Jonathan, though "protected to death," do a nice little business just "over the border."

BANKRUPTCY MADE EASY.—Once upon a time when country merchants were dependent upon Montreal importers, and agents of British houses for their stock-in-trade, it is said, going into insolvency was not so lightly thought of as it is at present. Now, it appears, the Americans are actually underselling the British in Canada in many lines, and moreover are willing to risk considerable so that business may be done, consequently traders not overburdened with morality are said to be not at all averse to a compromise with their old creditors, so that they may transfer their custom to American houses.

THE CENTENNIAL.—Without doubt the formal opening of the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia is the great event of the year, and that our neighbors should take great and national pride in it, and seek to enhance its magnificence by all the pomp and circumstance possible to republican institutions is but right and proper. Sprung from a common stock we can afford to join in their gratulations over the wondrous advance made by a nation of typical representatives of the Anglo-Saxon race in the century that has elapsed since the first trumpet tone of independence was sounded and the right of every man to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, asserted as a leading principle. The revolt of the thirteen colonies paved the way for that more complete freedom of opinion in Great Britain that released the press from bondage, gave scope to the views of the progressive and enlightened, and laid the basis of the reforms that have since done so much to intensify the force of the British Empire. The benefit of success was not entirely confined to the people who had emancipated themselves from a rule that the lapse of time had made foreign, it re-acted upon the rule itself, and in time strengthened it to withstand the influences of that wild revolutionary spirit that, before culminating in the Terror, threatened to throw Europe into disorder. Dreaded at first, republicanism, as asserted in the New World, has served more than once to affect lasting good in the perpetuation of principles of the British constitution, while the wonderful expansion of the Union has served to help the spread of Anglo-Saxon influence for good throughout the Universe.

There is, of course, an extraordinary amount of fine writing possible on this interesting occasion. We do not deem it necessary to dive into historical works in order to bring forth erudite articles apropos the inauguration, for all that can be said has been, time and time again. What might be advantageously considered is this, however: Do Republican institutions, as understood in the United States, conduce to purity of Government and wise administration of the revenues of the people? Experience, broadly speaking, would say no, and furnish abundant evidence to prove that the fruit of Democracy is corruption. Not to revert further back than the present year, it has been conclusively shown by official records that, in every department, executive, civil, military, naval, municipal and legal, the administration of the United States is exceedingly corrupt. Under the boasted right of universal suffrage, the right man is seldom in the right place, and the public robber, so long as he keeps peace with friend and enemy alike is enthroned. Witness Belknap, Secretary Robeson, Orvill Grant, not to mention Tweed, Field, Schuyler, Colfax, Carpenter and the whole pack of Indian and contract thieves. Indeed, in view of the facts patent to the world, Bishop Simpson displayed wonderful appositeness when he prayed for the President and his constitutional advisers, and all in authority under him and them. In this Centennial year the question looms up more largely than ever, whether those Republican institutions that the fathers of the country labored to establish are worth preserving at all, and there be those who doubt the possibility of the States cohering for another quarter, much less an entire century.

It is worth while, however, to drop at a time like the present dismal speculations of this nature. It is the past, its deeds and influences, that men are called upon to contemplate; the future is left to take care of itself. It has been a mighty past, full of events great in their bearing upon the destiny of the human race. A new order of things has sprung into existence, the old systems have passed away. Standing in the Exhibition building in Philadelphia, within reach of the sound of that bell that proclaimed "Liberty" to all the land and all the inhabitants thereof," one has ample room for reflection, perhaps for doubt, but mostly for hope for the spread of Anglo-Saxon civilization, progress, enlightenment, and freedom.

CITY NEWS.

BURSTING OF A MAIN.—Yesterday afternoon, about 4.30, the Sherbrooke street main from the high level reservoir burst in front of the residence of Mr. J. H. R. Molson, in Sherbrooke street, flooding the street and rushing down St. Lawrence Main street in perfect torrents, sweeping before it the metalling and everything else that came in its way, and in many instances flooding the cellars and some of the stores in the vicinity. The traffic on the C. P. R. was interrupted for some time and the thoroughfare for pedestrians and vehicles was rendered, if not an impassability, a remarkably difficult operation. About 5.30 o'clock the water was shut off from the reservoir, and the traffic was again resumed. The breakage is supposed to be on account of a flaw in the pipe.

FELLER INSTITUTE, LONGUEUIL.—The examination of the students of this institution was held yesterday, at Longueuil, in the presence of a large assembly of visitors The President of the Grande Ligne Mission Association, Rev. Joshua Denovan, occupied the chair, and opened the proceedings with a few well-chosen remarks. After the usual devotional service, the examination was proceeded with, when diplomas, as teachers, were presented to the following scholars: Model School—First Class—Adele Riendeau. Second Class—Ames Bruneau, Marie Derringer, Sophie Shoppard. Elementary—First Class—Flourida Gosse. Second Class—Emma Vessot, Azilda Lariviere and Alphonsine Hamel. Addresses were then delivered by the Rev. Mr. Lafleur, pastor of the institute, and Mr. Roussy, in French, and after some vocal and instrumental music, the proceedings terminated. A new and commodious structure will be erected by the authorities of the Grand Ligne Mission on their farm.

AMUSEMENTS.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—"London Assurance," which is one of the most popular of the standard comedies of the day, was given at this house last evening, for the purpose, probably, of affording Miss Ida Savory an opportunity of making her debut as Lady Gay Spanker. Miss Savory is young, pleasing in appearance and manner, and is possessed of considerable vivacity on the stage. She lacks, however, a good many elements, at present, for a successful Lady Gay, and we think she made a mistake in assuming the role for her first appearance. The caste, on the whole, was the weakest we have ever seen in the play, and compared even unfavorably with its representation in the Academy on former occasions. Hal Mrs. Wallace taken the part of the dashing Lady Gay, and Miss Savory that of Grace Harkaway, they would both have been better suited, and would have redeemed the comedy from almost absolute failure. It is well, perhaps, that our space will not permit us, to-day, to speak more at length of the performance, and of the feeble efforts of the gentlemen in particular, as we would have nothing but condemnation to pass upon what was almost a miserable burlesque on acting. To-night, "Pygmalion and Galatea" will be presented, with Miss Savory as Galatea.

MECHANICS' HALL.—The celebrated Berger Family, with the no less celebrated Sol Smith Russell, appeared last evening, in one of their almost unique performances. The audience was large and testified the pleasure it felt by most enthusiastic applause. The solo and orchestral performances of the Berger family cannot be surpassed, and it is very seldom indeed that they have been equalled in this city. Miss Anna Teresa Berger's performance on the cornet is most artistic, and deserved the rapturous cheers which it elicited. The bell-ringing and tumbleromicon are great features, and most pleasing to listen to. Mr. Sol Smith Russell, in his inimitable humorous sketches and originality, has no compeer that we have ever seen on the stage. He is a host himself, and could keep an audience in merriment the whole evening. His performance is free from all vulgarity and his comicalities are full to overflowing with fun. Mr. Russell is no ordinary caricaturist, but a master of his art, and those who miss the entertainment will indeed regret it hereafter. There will be a matinee on Saturday and the last performance will be given to-morrow evening.

O'HARA'S SUMMER SUITS.

An Acrostic-Anthem for the Season.

TO OUR FRIENDS AND THE PUBLIC.

O, the May-time comes on with its Spring-wreath
How bright is the earth in its clothing of green—
All nature looks gay with the buds on her bosom,
And breathing the perfume of Roses I ween.
So, too, should man joy that the Winter is over,
So, too, should he deck out in gladsome array,
Upspringing, like earth, with his newest of cover,
Mantling, like flowers, for the bright Summer day.
Many the means for the season's allurement;
Each one will offer you goods cheap and new;
Remember, however, that for clothing procurement,
Suits like O'Hara's are nowhere on view.
Unrivalled in taste are the cloths of all color,
In vain to compete with the work they have done—
Trial, and not words, will give evidence fuller—
So come, in all haste, to O'Hara and Son.

CANADA AT THE CENTENNIAL.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.

Taking the 2.45 train from Bonaventure station, the excursionist reaches New York, via the Vermont Central and Hudson River Railroads, in good time next morning for the half-past seven train to Philadelphia, where he will be due before noon. The run, which is accomplished in a little over 20 hours, is quite enjoyable, the road being free from dust, and in excellent order, and the equipage all that could be desired. Return tickets at reduced rates, affording ample time to see the wonders of the World's Fair, may be had at the office of the Vermont Central in St. James' street, where Mr. Picard, the obliging agent, will give any information that may be required.

Fairmount Park, on which the series of Exhibition buildings have been erected, is probably the finest park on the continent, being three times as large as Central Park of New York, and containing within itself all the diversity of hill and dale, leafy woodlands, meadows and meandering streams. It is at a distance of about five miles from the business part of the city, but the suburban avenues extend to its gates. Ten horse car roads and four steam railroads, which connect with the lateral roads, run to the Exhibition grounds, affording ample means of communication.

The main building is 1,880 feet in length, with a transept of 464 feet in width, and covers twenty acres. It is of temporary construction, and the iron columns and roof trusses composing its frame work are so constructed as to be easily taken down and erected again at another site. The building is painted of a light warm drab, relieved with deeper colors, producing a very pretty effect.

The Art Gallery is a permanent structure, which will be known as Memorial Hall. The style is modern Renaissance, with composite columns, and the materials are granite, glass and iron. The building is fireproof, no wood being used in its construction. Its dimensions are: Length, 365 feet; width, 210; height, 59 feet, exclusive of the dome. The doors are of iron, with bronze panels and State's coat of arms. At the ends of the main cornices are allegorical figures representing Science and Art. The dome, which is 150 feet in height, is surmounted by a figure of Columbia, and at the corners at the base of the dome stand four figures, typifying the four quarters of the globe. A colossal bronze figure of Pegassus, guided by the Muse, stands at each side of the main entrance. The cost of this building is $1,500,000.

The other buildings are the Machinery Hall, Agricultural Hall, Judges' Pavilion, the Commissioners' Pavilion, and several minor buildings in connection with the various departments.

A very fine fountain has been erected in the western section of the grounds, around which a great gathering took place yesterday, when the water was turned on for the first time. It is to be known as the Catholic Temperance Fountain, and many temperance societies, headed by some thirty of the Roman Catholic clergy, assisted at the opening yesterday.

In the Canadian Department affairs are in a somewhat backward condition, but not more so than in many others. The Educational Department of the Province of Ontario makes quite a display of school-books and apparatus, and in this respect will be ahead of all other competitors.

It is too soon yet to notice in detail the display made by Canadian exhibitors, as their specimens are not yet put in order. Nova Scotia sends very remarkable blocks of coal, showing the great thickness of the seams in her valuable mines, and among the other rich mineral specimens is a remarkable piece of plumbago or graphite, weighing over 300 lbs., from the Buckingham mines on the Ottawa. The Messrs. Lyman, among other products of the laboratory, exhibit a lump of nitrate of silver, valued at over $700. Directly in front of the Canadian Department is Spain, on the left is the Mother Country, and on the right the other British Colonies. Next to Great Britain, whose exhibitors make a magnificent display, is France, justly renowned for the artistic beauty and high finish of her manufactures. In the East Indian department may be seen some wonderful muslins, gold and silver embroidered cashmere garments, brocades, &c. China and Japan are well represented, and exhibit valuable procelian and bronze vases. Italy has sent some very fine works of art and articles de vertu. Prussia, Norway, the Netherlands, Dutch Colonies and Austria are all represented. The United States exhibit, as was to be expected, occupies the largest space.

THE CENTENNIAL SHOW.

HOW IT COMPARES WITH PREVIOUS EXHIBITIONS.

AN AMERICAN OPINION.

The New York Herald's Philadelphia correspondent says:—

The question is often asked, "How does this Exhibition compare with the others, and especially with that at Vienna?" It is difficult to answer this question, and then only in a general way. Here are figures which tell you that we have fifty-six and a-half acres under roof, while Vienna had thirty-eight and eight-tenths. They will tell you that it is nearly twice as large as that of Paris, more than twice as large as that of Hyde Park, and eleven times as large as that of our little World's Fair behind the Reservoir which President Pierce and his Cabinet opened with so much state nearly a quarter of a century ago. These figures are deceptive, because many buildings within these grounds are not essential to the Exhibition. Take these State buildings, for instance. They are only so many houses in various forms of architecture, and most of it bad, in this that even as architectural effects, they mean nothing. You might as well take a cluster of houses from Yonkers or New Rochelle, or some of your Westchester suburbs, and call it an Exposition.

If the money spent in these State buildings had been devoted to the collection of the mineral, agricultural or industrial resources of each State in some of the main halls, it would have been more useful. There were none of these at Vienna, and beyond affording a loafing place for the free minded American citizen to discuss the Presidential canvass during the warm summer afternoons I do not see their value. Vienna was remarkable for the variety of outside buildings which had a true interest in a world's fair. There were cottages for showing how the peasants in Hungary and Styria lived. There was a Russian house, famous for its architecture and its beer, and its caviar lunches. There was the Khedive's palace, built before people knew he was a bankrupt, a beautiful building, showing an exact idea of Oriental life, from the farmyard to the harem. There was the exquisite Moorish house, with its open court, almost a doll-house—it was so small. There was our American schoolhouse which all self-respecting Americans used to go out of the way to avoid, and a Swedish schoolhouse, which was a gem. There was the pavilion of the Prince of Monaco, as pretty as a boudoir, and exhibits like those of Prince Schwartzenburg, which were worth going to Vienna to see. With a few exceptions there was scarcely a building outside of the the main halls in Vienna which did not have a positive meaning as a part of the World's Fair.

It is not so here. We miss the Khedive's palace and much of the Oriental outdoor life that made the long evenings in the Prater grounds so attractive. We miss the beautiful approach to the main entrance and that wondrous rotunda dome, under which the visitor never tired of lingering. We have none of these at Fairmount and nothing to compensate for them. The main building bulges upon the sidewalk and you lose all the advantage of perspective. The building is not as fine as it was in Vienna, but is lighter in details and more graceful. Where our Exhibition surpasses Vienna is in its compactness. It was a day's journey from America, at one end, to China, at the other, and when you had taken that trip there was still another to the Art Gallery beyond. We have a Horticultural Hall, which surpasses Vienna, where flowers were shown in the open air. We miss Greece, whose poverty keeps her out of this company of nations. As a recompense for the Khedive's palace we have the English buildings, which are among the gems of the show.

We have a Machinery Hall much finer than at Vienna; an Agricultural Hall which stands alone. The American building, that which shows the history and progress of our nation, is finer than anything of the kind in the Austrian show. If we miss Roumania, Persia, Turkey and Russia, we have a better exhibit from England, and, more than all, we have her colonies in glorious completeness. France is only a shadow of what she was at Vienna. Italy, Switzerland and Belgium, attractive as they are, do not compare with what they did in 1873. But Spain and Brazil are richer and more imposing, and the Netherlands made no impression upon me then as they do now. We have our South American Republics—Chili, Peru and the rest—which were not at Vienna at all, if I remember. We have nothing in the way of art to compare with Vienna. The great Powers, Russia, France, Austria and Germany, only give us portion of what they gave Vienna; but we make up for them in this, that we have many countries which were there absent altogether.

To sum up the comparison, I would say that this is more truly a world's fair than at Vienna—than has been ever seen before in an international exhibition. For the two or three nations we miss we have a dozen who are not in the Prater. If we miss the prodigious show of European civilization, we have enough to show what it is. Above all things, we have our own country in her strength. This is enough to rejoice the heart of the American, who was taken to the dingy collection of sewing-machines, false teeth and California wines, and asked to regard it as an "American Department." This is first of all an American show, and second an Anglo-Saxon show.

We see what we have done in a hundred years. We see wherein consists the greatness of mighty England and the group of colonies which already threaten her supremacy. We see also what our sister American nations of the South have done. And, although the display is rare and crude, before many weeks are over there will be improvement in every department. I sometimes think that this Exhibition will not be in its fulness before September.

CITY NEWS.

— On the first of June the Sisters of the Providence will take possession of the Female Prison, when the matrons will be discharged with a month's extra salary.

— Meat Inspector Montmarquet seized and confiscated 54 lbs. of tainted beef in the stall of Antoine Demers, 16 Bonsecours Market; also 10 lbs. of lean veal in the stall of Benalie Dumais, of the same market.

—Sir John and Lady Rose are in town.

— Seventy-two distitute persons received shelter in the police stations last night.

— The United Board of Out-Door Relief acknowledges with thanks a donation of $10 from O. S. Wood, Esq.

— A horse, with buggy attached, was found wandering on St. Patrick street last night and taken to the Viger Pound.

— A coil of fine Manilla rope was brought to the Central Station by a gentleman to whom it had been offered for sale. It is supposed to have been stolen from the door of some store.

— An action, brought by Miss Marie Valade, against Henry Holden, accountant, for the recovery of $3.34 due her for wages, was decided in her favor at the Recorder's Court this morning.

— Mr. McDowell, lessee of the Academy of Music, has returned after a successful tour in the Lower Provinces. His travelling company will proceed to Ottawa and other places, but he will remain in Montreal, Mr. Warner taking the Manager's place at the head of the company.

— From depositions taken at the Police Court to-day it appear that the clothesline thief, Louis Lafrance, did quite an extensive business. Dealers have sworn to buying wearing apparel from him at low prices, and to his having since told them that they were stolen. Important disclosures as to the receivers are expected at the trial, which comes up in a few days.

— At the Police Court to-day Elizabeth Cummings, wife of Mr. Gavin, charged Patrick Maloney with having assaulted her. It appears that, on complainant going to the house of Maloney, the latter pushed her out of the doorway, striking her on the left side. She was in a delicate condition at the time. As a consequence a miscarriage ensued, and medical evidence was brought to prove that it was the result of a blow. The defendant was fined $40 and costs or two months' imprisonment.

RECORDER'S COURT—THURSDAY.—Fourteen names graced the list this morning. Jean Bte. Hubert, 32, notary, drunk; John Costello, 32, contractor, drunk, were each fined $1 or 8 days. James Kenny, 36, no occupation, lying drunk on the street; John Robinson, 29, laborer, drunk; Ann Owens, 30, no occupation, drunk and disorderly, fined $1.50 or 10 days. John Markem, 35, plumber, drunkenness and assault, was fined $1 and costs. Annie Smith, 42, no occupation, drunk, $2.50 or 15 days. Godfroi Duchaine, 19, and Ovila Bertrand, 24, laborers, for assaulting a watchman, named James Fitzpatrick, were each fined $5 and costs.

THE HARBOR.—The Allan SS. "Polynesian" cleared from this port last night; her place at the wharf is taken by the SS. "Sardinian," which arrived at 6:30 this morning. She reports having encountered heavy snow storms in the Gulf....The Gulf Ports SS. "Venezia" is unloading a large cargo of coal....The steamer "Alexandria" arrived at this port from Picton yesterday. As she was too heavily laden to run the Lachine Rapids she came through the Canal. The "Trois Rivieres" brought in an unusually large cargo of passengers and freight. The Richelieu's Company's steamer "Montreal" did not arrive until 9:15 this morning, having been detained by a fog on Lake St. Peter. The company's wharf presented a curious scene when the "Montreal" was discharging her passengers. As the wharf is entirely submerged, a narrow footpath of planks has been laid down for the accommodation of passengers, and some care is required to avoid a ducking. Added to this, numbers of carters and omnibus drivers drove through the muddy water, splashing all around. The river has risen about 14 inches during the night, and is still rising.

JOURNALISTIC.—The press of this city is about to lose an esteemed member, in the person of Mr. J. Lumsden, who has been lately connected with the Gazette, and for many years previously a most valued collaborateur on the editorial staff of the STAR. During the past session of Parliament he has not only represented the Gazette in the gallery of the House, but has been one of the stenographic reporters for Hansard. As a short-hand writer he has few equals and no superior in the Dominion, whilst for untiring industry, abnegation of self and conscientiousness in discharging his duties, we have never met with any one to surpass him. Mr. Lumsden has many qualities which peculiarly well qualify him for journalism, not the least being his high sense of honor, strict regard for principle and mental attainments. In retiring from journalism, to engage in Western Canada in mercantile pursuits, the press of the city will lose a member universally respected, and whose return to its ranks hereafter—if it ever takes place—will be hailed with unalloyed pleasure. On behalf of his late confreres on this journal in every department, as well as the members of the press generally, we bid him a kindly and affectionate au revoir—not farewell—with the best and warmest wishes of all for his future success in life.

THE STREETS.—The state of the thoroughfares of the city is still a disgrace to the authorities. Our attention was yesterday called to the east end, where many of the streets are almost impassable. Ontario, from St. Lawrence Main to Wolfe street, is cut up into ruts, and is so deep in mud that it is actually dangerous to drive over it. It would be well for the members of the Road Committee to put on "seven leagued" boots and take a walk round the eastern section of the city to see the state it is in. We have again to direct attention to the manner in which Upper St. Urbain street is being filled in with every description of filth that it is possible to collect. The injury done to the health of the inhabitants in the neighborhood from the stench arising from decaying matter must be very serious. Wolfe street was filled up in a similar manner, and the result has been that typhus fever has been prevalent in it ever since. There is work for the sanitary authorities in St. Andre street, where an unfenced field, belonging to an Alderman, has become the receptacle of filth, and under the rays of the sun will soon spread typhus round the locality. Is it, we are requested to ask, because the property belongs to a member of the Council that the by-law in regard to fencing has been set at naught and disregarded in this case? We understand, also, that the Corporation has been paying $1 per day to a watchman in connection with this property, to prevent nuisances being deposited, simply on account of the Aldermanic owner declining to fence it. Perhaps some of the independant members of the Council, like Ald. Stephens, Holland and others, would just enquire into this matter? Is there to be one law for the members of the Council and a different one for the public? It certainly looks very like it.

AMUSEMENTS.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The weather being unpropitious last evening, the attendance was thin; however, those who were present thoroughly enjoyed the excellent acting in the "Octoroon." This evening "London Assurance" will be given, when Miss Ida Savory, a young actress who comes well recommended, will make her first appearance, in the rôle of "Lady Gay Spanker."

MECHANICS' HALL.—The Berger family of musicians, with a talented concert troupe, and accompanied by the great character actor, Mr. Sol Smith Russell, will inaugurate a series of three concerts this evening. The well known ability of the company is sure to make it popular, and there is little doubt large audiences will be present at the entertainments.

SHIPPING NEWS.—The Allan ss. "Sardinian" (Joseph E. Dutton, captain), drawing 21 feet 1 inch of water, arrived in port at 6 o'clock this morning, from Quebec. ——The ss. "Flamborough" (W. J. Fraser, captain), of 455 tons burthen, and drawing 17 feet 6 inches, steamed up the harbor at 11 o'clock this a.m. with a cargo of coal from Picton, N.S.

THE LACROSSE EXPEDITION.

Writing to a contemporary, the Captain of the Lacrosse Expedition, Dr. Beers, says:—

There seems to be every prospect of success for the lacrosse tour in Ireland. So far as is now known, the teams will probably play in Belfast on the 11th and 12th May, and in Dublin on the 13th and 15th. Glasgow is all ablaze over the visit, and the Caledonian Lacrosse Club have fixed the 19th and 20th; tickets, two shillings and sixpence the first day, and one shilling the second day. The Committee has been so alarmed (!) at rumors of a "big crowd," and hints that their ground would be too small to accommodate the people, that they have determined, at an expense of $500, to take in an outlying rough ground, have it levelled, rolled and sown with grass. Gangs of men are now working at it. The efforts of Mr. T. W. Orr, the Honorary Secretary, formerly a Montrealer, have more than anything else contributed to the necessity for these preparations. I cannot say where else in Scotland our tour will extend.

Our first entry in England will be at Newcastle, where many of our old cricket and boating friends promise us a great success. In London, the ground at Hurlinghame has been secured for 3rd June; the Oval ground for the 5th, morning and afternoon; Lord's cricket ground for any Saturday in June; Alexandra Palace and Richmond grounds.

LAUNCH OF TWO REVENUE CUTTERS FOR THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT.

To-day, at 12.30, witnessed the launch of the "La Canadienne" and "Evangeline," two revenue cutters, which have been built by Mr. A. Cantin for the French Government. The launch was a success, the vessels gliding gracefully into the water immediately the wedges were knocked away. The contract was made in December last by Captain Joncla, of "La Minerve" frigate, Mr. Perrault, Vice-Consul of France, and Mr. Cantin, who is deserving of the greatest credit for the manner in which the contract has been carried out. The vessels will be at once taken to St. Pierre, Miquelon, in ballast, when they will be manned with crews of the French navy, and mounted with two 4-pounders each. The supervision of the building has been performed by Mr. Finaz, a young French engineer, and attached to the frigate "Minerve," at present lying at New York, and one of the West Indian Squadron. This gentleman expresses himself highly satisfied with the general workmanship, at the moderate sum of $8,000 each. The vessels will be placed on the West Indian station, doing general service, as tenders to the frigates, and looking after the French fishery interests. The rig will be that of fore-and-aft schooners, and, as their model is after the famous "Peter Mitchell," it is expected they will sail 14 or 16 knots an hour. Among those present at the launch to-day were Mr. C. O. Perrault, Vice-Consul of France, Messrs. Schwob, Hurteau, T. White, Jr., and the members of the city press. After the ceremony, Mr. Perrault invited a number of those present to a cold collation at the City Club, when the health of the builder, Mr. Cantin, and other toasts were proposed.

AMUSING FRACAS.

A GAME OF FISTICUFFS BETWEEN A MUSICAL CRITIC AND AN IRATE HUSBAND OF A LADY PROFESSOR—A DRAWN BATTLE.

There are some people who have the happy knack of always getting into hot water and not knowing how to get out without being scalded. This is especially the characteristic of an aspiring young man of this city, who exercises the profession of a music teacher, and airs his Parisian education in the "art divine" in amateur "flashes" of musical criticism in the columns of a leading French journal. The fracas to which we are about to allude arose out of some severe strictures in the journal referred to upon a concert given by the pupils of an eminent and well-known lady professor of music here, and which were resented by her friends as being unfair and unjust. It appears, however, that nothing occurred in connection with the affront until a few evenings since, when the young critic and the husband of the offended lady met opposite the Anglican Cathedral on Union avenue, where they were depositing letters in the box in that locality. Each eyed the other for a moment in recognition, and then, like a couple of valiant knights, dropped their umbrellas to the ground and went in with their fists in true Sayers and Heenan fashion, determined to damage the physiognomies of each other in avenging an insult on the one side and defending the liberty of the press on the other. A crowd soon collected, and for some time the battle raged furiously. Many "wild exchanges" followed each other in rapid succession, until "time was called" by some peace-makers who intruded upon the scene and ended the strife. It has remained a matter of warm discussion since as to the whom palm of victory is to be awarded, but one thing is certain, that the husband of the lady was the first to strike out from the shoulder, and when time was prematurely called, was ready to "go in" again and renew the conflict. It is only justice, however, to say that his adversary did not flinch. We believe this is the second time these would-be knights have been on the eve of a deadly conflict, the first occasion being the result of a challenge with "pistols and coffee for two," but which, happily, ended with a champagne supper and an apology. On both occasions, therefore, it was a drawn battle.

FINANCIAL.

STAR OFFICE, 4 p.m., May 11, 1876.

The financial market to-day was inactive at unchanged prices. Sterling Exchange was quiet at 109⅝ for round amounts. Loans were easy at 5 per cent. on call, and from 6 to 7 per cent. on time. Discounts were unaltered at from 7 to 9 per cent. Gold drafts on New York were quiet at ⅛ per cent. premium.

The Stock Market this morning was dull. Bank stocks were generally weak, but Merchants' was firm at 99⅝. Montreal Telegraph Company was firmer, 885 shares changing hands at 166. Dominion Telegraph Company was weak, showing a decline of about 6 per cent. since yesterday morning, and closing with sellers at 80, and buyers at 77. This decline was probably due to the advices received today from Pictou, N.S., stating that "the contractors for the Dominion Telegraph Company in Nova Scotia have abandoned their contracts and discharged their workmen."

The sales at the morning board of the Montreal Stock Exchange were as follows: 9 Bank of Montreal at 193; 9 do. at 192½; 20 Jacques Cartier at 36½; 40 Merchants' at 99⅝; 885 Montreal Telegraph Co. at 166; 75 Dominion Telegraph Co. at 77; 50 City Passenger Railway at 201½.

The following were the sales at the Open Stock Exchange this morning: 100 Montreal Telegraph Company at 166.

The Customs receipts to-day amounted to $13,605.46.

At New York, gold opened at 112¼ and advanced to 112⅜, but closed at the opening rate. Sterling Exchange opened and closed at $4.88½.

FRY'S COCOA.
THE CENTENNIAL.
We notice in an English paper that the eminent firm of J. S. FRY & SONS, Cocoa and Chocolate manufacturers, of Bristol, will hold a prominent place at the Philadelphia International Exhibition. The following is a brief description of their "Exhibition Cabinet":—It is of stately and imposing proportions, octagonal in form, eight feet in diameter and thirty feet in height. The material employed is polished ebonite, relieved with gilt incised decoration. The lower part of the cabinet has eight panels, upon which are engraved in gilt letters the designation of the firm. From the angles formed by the octagon rise eight columns enriched with gilt incised carving, fitted with patent plate, and supporting a decorated frieze and cornice, relieved with semi-arches and finials. From the same angles rise four arched brackets, springing towards the centre, each fitted with small projecting brackets. Upon this centre rests a small octagonal temple-like cabinet, with gilt columns and silver plate reflectors. The dome surmounting the whole is finished with a coronet of ebonite and gold, festooned with flags. The internal fittings are of an original and costly character, having rich, dark blue velvet, with silk fringe in two shades. The vase rests are in pink satin, upon which are placed sycamore baskets, white ware and other vases containing specimens of Messrs. Fry's productions.

CHAPTER XXXV.

STRANGE EVIDENCE.

There were five magistrates present, besides Sir John Desborough, and all were his intimate friends. They all cordially sympathized with him, knowing how keenly sensitive he was with regard to his family honor. Still, all admired the manner in which Philip acted. He never looked to the right or left, he raised not his eye to his father; but in a calm and unimpassioned tone told what appeared to be the truth.

"How do you connect Captain Montague with what seems to have occurred last night?" continued the chairman.

"What I have to say is very painful and very disagreeable," said Philip; "but it must be said."

"Don't think of me, Philip," remarked Sir John, coldly. "If any one connected with me has disgraced himself, let him bear the burden. Were it my own son, I would with these hands give him up to justice."

All exchanged glances of compassion and deep regret.

"Last night, during the ball, Joe Martin and Cook, who had obtained leave of absence for good conduct, and also because his officers knew that the former could buy himself off, came to me and made a most startling revelation."

"Hearsay evidence."

"You will see, sir. These men declare having seen Captain Montague in London, in several strange disguises, amongst others in a very shabby one. Two or three days ago, they fell in with him in a public-house near the Tower, accompanied by a man of very low appearance and manners. These two, taking no notice of a couple of soldiers, were speaking freely."

"What was the topic of conversation?"

"Cicely Grey, 'She must be brought off next Wednesday,' said Captain Montague; 'I shall not wait any longer. If she will come of her own accord, well and good—if not, you and I can manage her. I will stand no more of her affectation and nonsense.'"

"I suppose these men can be found?" asked Heathcote.

"They left Graham's ale-house this morning; but I have the name of their regiment, and the number of their company."

"On hearing this, what did you do?"

"I changed my dress, saddled a pony, and rode down to Mrs. Grey," replied Philip; "but she was not there. At all events the lights were all out. But I heard where Captain Montague had made an appointment to meet her."

"How so?"

"The soldiers heard many details, which they can give in evidence. I hasten to results. Hurrying as fast as I could, the ford of the hollow way was soon reached, and there on the stile was Cicely Grey, evidently waiting the arrival of her suitor.

"She was alone?"

"Quite alone: I at once spoke to her freely, and without restraint, explaining that Captain Montague did not intend to marry her; but was sporting with her feelings."

"How could you know that?"

"Such was my impression. I should be sorry to misjudge any one; but I never did like the captain," said Philip, frankly.

"Candid," observed Heathcote, while a shade of displeasure passed over the countenance of Sir John.

"But Cicely was in no mood to be talked to. In an angry and petulant manner she blamed me for my impertinent interference, and breaking from me, rushed into the thicket. I rushed after her, and probably should have caught her, but at that instant a pistol shot was fired, and this arm," raising it up, "severely wounded.

A general cry of astonishment proclaimed the feeling aroused by this announcement. It was wholly unexpected by any one present.

"And who fired the shot?" questioned the chairman.

"That I cannot say. My own opinion is strong on the subject; but, though I have not evidence, I shall leave that part of the subject for the present. I ran on, despite my wound, when my ears were assailed by sudden shrieks—the shrieks of a woman—which, after a moment, seemed to take the direction of the river. I followed as well as I could; but only to find the signs of a struggle on the grass and leaves, and the trail of a heavy body down the river bank. Of Cicely, of her assailants, all trace had departed."

"And on this evidence you suspect Captain Montague?"

"I should like that gentleman to account for his time last night. He came to the ale-house kept by Graham, for I recognized him by the landlord's description. An hour after the murder, he and his servant returned to the inn, paid their bill and started to catch the coach to London."

"We must have Graham up," said Mr. Heathcote.

"He his outside," replied Philip. "I saw him as I came in among the crowd."

Graham was summoned at once, and requested to give information. The man gave his evidence in a clear, straightforward manner. He described the person suspected by Philip to be the captain very accurately, and then volunteered the statement that he had a great many strangers in his house the previous night, all of whom were, strangely enough, out at the time of the supposed murder.

"Do you know any of them?" asked Heathcote.

"Well," said Graham, scratching his head, not exactly. They were pretty nigh all strangers to me, except Bob Jones and Phil Thomas."

"Oh," exclaimed Mr. Heathcote, drily, for the inn-keeper had named two noted poachers. "Bob Jones and Phil Thomas were there. Could you find the gentlemen?"

"I could," said Graham, sturdily; "and they say they could give evidence, but don't want to criminate themselves."

"How so?"

"Well they were in the copse last night, and I dare say they don't want to be asked any questions as to why, if they give evidence," observed Graham, with an odd kind of humor, which was natural to him, when away from the influence of his wife.

"The poaching scamps," said Heathcote. "But they need not fear; no evidence they give to-day shall be used against them. Bring them in."

With a downcast, lowering look, the poachers came into the room, and stood, twirling their hats, near the magistrate's table.

"Now, my men, if you know anything about the matter, let us know all about it. We shan't enquire too particular how you came to be in the wood, so that you help us to clear the mystery."

The men made some inaudible reply.

"Now, Bob Jones, speak up, and let us hear what you have to say," began Heathcote.

"Well, sir, me and Phil was in the cospe last night, a looking after a little matter of business. We might have been there about twenty minutes, when we seed Miss Gray—Cicely Gray—come down the road, and, after looking round, seat herself on the stile."

"Was she alone?"

"Quite. Then we heard one or two steps in the wood, which made us uneasy and anxious to be off, it sounded so like the keepers, when we saw Mr. Philip there join Miss Gray, and talk for some minutes very friendly like. Then they began to have high words, and the girl cried out angrily, and ran away, Mr. Philip after her."

"Well," said Heathcote.

The man hesitated, and looked at Philip. A pin might have been heard to drop.

"Go on," commanded the chairman.

"Then, sir, we heard a pistol shot, and loud shrieking," continued the men.

"Who fired the pistol?"

"Well, we thought as how it was Mr. Philip," the men observed, in a deprecating sort of way.

"I?"

"Hush," interrupted Mr. Heathcote; "not a word at present, Mr. Philip. These men are evidently accusing you, therefore I am bound to caution you."

"Accusing me," gasped Philip while his father wiped the cold sweat off his brow; "I would have died rather than have harmed Cicely Gray."

"So we thought," said Bill Jones, eagerly; "because we knowed as there were few days you were not at the cottage."

The chairman bit his lip, the magistrates looked grave, while Sir John, fearing he knew not what, was pale, agitated, and distressed.

"Did you see anybody else?" asked Mr. Heathcote.

"No, sir, not then. As we had no business in the wood, we thought it best to get out as fast as we could—and so others thought, for we seed others a moving away; but not from where the girl was."

"Did you see any more of the girl?"

"No, sir; soon after, 'most directly, the shot was fired, she gave up shrieking, and we saw no more."

"Phil Thomas is all this true?"

"Yes; only I can't say I saw the young squire fire the shot. Still it seemed to come from him."

"All this is very strange," said Mr. Heathcote. "Have you any reason to believe that you had two soldiers in your house last night, Graham?"

"Well, I did think so, sir; but if they was so'diers, they wasn't gentlemen, for they went out at ten without paying; and never came back," was the inn-keeper's characteristic reply.

TRAVEL, ADVENTURE AND NATIONAL CUSTOMS.

THE ALPS.—At first sight the Alps disappoint travellers. They expect something up in the skies, and are surprised to find that they can look at the highest summits without sticking their chins up into the air. But they approach, and the great features grow; they lose sight of the summits; they mount; at last they begin to make a descent; but still the hills shut them in, and at last, when they issue in the plains of Italy, and look back at the jagged ridge, which shows itself against the sky, and remember the hours of wind and snow they spent in passing them, though by the simplest, easiest road, they pay a last tribute of complimentary respect to the loftiest mountain range in Europe.

CAPTURING HYENAS.—The following mode of lying hyenas in their dens, as practised in Afghanistan, is given by Arthur Connolly in his Overland Journal, in the words of an Afghan chief, the Shirkaree Synd Daoud:—When you have tracked the beast to his den you take a rope with two slip-knots upon it in your right hand, and with your left holding a felt cloak before you, you go boldly but quietly in. The animal does not know the nature of his danger, and therefore retires to the back of his den, but you may always tell where his head is by the glare of his eyes. You keep moving on gradually towards him on your knees, and when you are within distance, throw the cloak over his head, close with him, and take care he does not free himself. The beast is so frightened that he cowers back, and though he may bite the felt, he cannot turn his neck round to hurt you, so you quietly feel for his forelegs, slip the knots over them, and then, with one strong pull, draw them tight up to the back of his neck, and tie them there. The beast is now your own, and you can do what you like with him. We generally take those we catch home to the krall, and hunt them on the plain with bridles in their mouths, that our dogs may be taught not to fear the brutes when they meet them wild." Hyenas are also taken alive by the Arabs by a similar method, except that a wooden gag is used instead of a felt cloak. The similarity in the mode of capture in two such distant countries as Algeria and Afghanistan, and by two races so different, is remarkable. From the fact that the Afghans consider that the feat requires great presence of mind, and an instance being given of a man having died of a bite received in a clumsy attempt, we may infer that the Afghan hyena is more powerful or more ferocious than his African congener.

A LOVE TEST.—A bride-elect, in some parts of Africa, gives her intended husband a curious proof of her love. She brings a little water in a calabash, and, kneeling down before her lover, desires him to wash his hands. When he has done this the girl, with a tear of joy sparkling in her eye, drinks the water. This is considered the greatest proof she can give him of her fidelity and attachment. In saluting each other, African negro kings snap the middle finger three times. Some foreign methods of salutation are very curious. In Egypt it is common to ask, "How do you sweat?" a dry, hot skin being a sure indication of a destructive ephemeral fever. Islanders, near the Philippines, take a person's hand or foot and rub it over their faces. Laplanders apply their noses against the person they salute very strongly. In the straits of the Sound they raise the left foot of the person addressed, pass it gently over the right leg, and thence to the face. The inhabitants of the Philippines bend very low, placing their hands on their cheeks, and raise one foot in the air, with the knee bent. The Dutch, who are considered polite, have a morning salutation, common among all classes, signifying, "May you eat a hearty dinner." Another is, "How do you sail?" adopted, no doubt, when they were navigators and fishermen. Some author has observed, in contrasting the haughty Spaniard with the frivolous Frenchman, that the proud, steady gait and inflexible solemnity of the former were expressed in his mode of salutation, "How do you stand?" while "How do you carry yourself?" was equally expressive of the gay motion and incessant action of the latter. The Japanese take off a slipper, and the people of Arracan their sandals in the street, and their stockings in the house where they salute. The inhabitants of Carmine, when they show particular attachment, open a vein and present their blood to the friend as a beverage. In Otaheite they rub their noses together, as in Lapland.

FUNNY CREMATION.—A Rangoon (Burmah) correspondent of the Chicago Tribune writes: The mass of the people are disposed of in the ordinary ways—unmarried persons being commonly, though not always, buried, and married ones burned. In one case, however, a striking variation is introduced. The more exalted of the priests are known as phoon gyee (great priest), and it is in their cases that the new method is resorted to. The body, immediately after death, is preserved in honey, and allowed to remain for a year. Without mentioning what becomes of the honey afterwards, I will observe that it imparts an extra degree of unctuousness to the rotund ecclesiastics, and renders the body more fit for the funeral pyre, on which it is placed, after having been taken out of pickle at the expiration of the appointed period. Then assemble the people of all the villages with which the deceased had been connected, and take up positions at a distance of perhaps a thousand yards from the pyre. Each village separates itself from its neighbors, and each is provided with a contrivance unlike anything known to our western civilization. It is by way of a cannon, a large tube of bamboo, filled with damp powder, plugged at the muzzle and open at the breech. This precious affair, mounted on wheels, is pointed at the pyre, touched off, and by a rapid expulsion of air from behind is propelled forward in a line more or less accurate, according to circumstances. Theoretically, all the cannon should reach the pyre at one and the same moment, and ignite it from all sides simultaneously. More frequently, however, no one of the shots strikes the mark, in which case the village which has made the best shooting is privileged to light the pyre by less sensational means. Scarcely a cremation of this sort occurs without more or less loss of life, for the cannon, it appears, have a playful fashion of suddenly wheeling directly about and making straight for the crowd which set them off, in which case an accident of some seriousness is unavoidable.

UNINHABITED.—A surveying ship, traversing the ocean for scientific purposes, approached a wild rock which rises from the Indian Ocean, and on the summit of which is situated Danger Island. The least touch of an earthquake, or an unusual stroke of hurricane, may some day topple it over into the bottomless gulf. From this persuasion, possibly, man has never attempted to erect his dwellings upon it; there it stands, in the midst of the surge, overcanopied by the bluest of blue skies, surrounded by a boundless expanse of waves, generally shining and beautiful, but as little specked by sails as if they girded an uninhabited planet. Yet, though no gale is astir, the billows incessantly fret and foam against the cliffs of Danger Island, which on all sides descend sheer into the deep, so as to appear from a distance perfectly inaccessible. A boat was sent from the ship, however, and after rowing to a considerable distance along the foot of the precipices, one gentleman discovered a small fissure, through which he felt confident they could climb to the summit; and the boat being pushed quite close to the rocks, two or three of the most daring landed, and, after no slight toil and peril, reached the top. The prospect which then presented itself was truly extraordinary. Rendered green as an emerald by the agency of hidden springs, the whole surface of the island was thickly strewn with eggs of innumerable oceanic birds, which, rising from the task of incubation, formed a canopy of fluttering wings overhead. The eggs were of all colors—white, light chocolate, and cerulean blue, dotted with brown or crimson, or turquoise or black. Here and there little bills protruded from the shells; and the mothers, though scared away for a moment by the unusual apparition of men, soon alighted near the young, being, in spite of the name of their home, thoroughly unacquainted with danger. It might also be said that the whole surface of the isle formed but one nest, divided into several compartments, where the naturalist, if he could live on eggs, might study the appearance, habits and character of half the winged dwellers on the deep.

HISTORICAL ITEMS.

The oldest version of the Old and New Testament belonging to the Christians is that in the Vatican, which was written in the fourth or fifth century, and published in the year 1597.

Connected with the discovery of Danish vessels in the mud of the river at Bursledon, near Southampton, Eng., is an ancient tradition. A family of small landowners, who have been seated in the neighborhood since the reign of Henry III., narrated the story, from which it seems that three Danish vessels were stranded in the reign of King Alfred, that the men came ashore plundering, and that two men and a boy, who were left in charge, were attacked by the country people, the ships being burnt. The boy only escaped, but a cat leaped ashore and took refuge in a little road still known as "Catland Copse."

A French journal thus relates the romance connected with the marriage of Lamartine: "The lady was of an English family named Birch, and very wealthy. She first fell in love with the poet from reading his 'Meditations Poetiques.' She was slightly past the bloom of youth, but still young and fair. At length she saw Lamartine in Geneva, and her love became a part of her life. Not long after this she was made acquainted with the fact that the poet was suffering from the embarrassed state of his pecuniary affairs. Miss Birch wrote to him a frank and womanly letter, acknowledging her deep interest and profound respect, and offering him the bulk of her fortune if he was willing to accept it. Of course Lamartine could not but suspect the truth. Deeply touched by her generosity, he called upon her, and found her to be not only fair to look upon, but a woman of a brilliant literary and artistic education. He made an offer of his hand and heart, which was promptly and gladly accepted; and in the after years Alphonse de Lamartine owed not more to his wife's fortune than to her sustaining love and inspiring enthusiasm."

In the days of Peter the Great, duelling in Russia went very much out of fashion, by reason of that monarch's passing an edict that any man who challenged another should be hanged, whether the meeting took place or not. General Zass and Prince Dolgoroucki, nevertheless, discovered a means of repairing their wounded honor. "We may not fight, Prince," said the general; "but let us both stand in yonder embrasure against which the enemy are directing their fire, and remain there till one of us is struck." The sagacious proposal being accepted, both accordingly repaired to the spot indicated, and, in the presence of their own army, as well as that of Sweden, stood erect with one hand on the hip, and looking fiercely at each other, until the prince was cut in two by a cannon ball. If this proceeding was not very sensible, it was at least a fair one; and the same may be said of that professional proposal of the physician who suggested that himself and his rival should select at random from a couple of pills, the one poisonous, and the other innocuous. A duel between a barber and a grocer with razors resulted, on the contrary (as might have been expected), in the victory of the former, who had, of course, precisely the same advantages as is enjoyed with pistols by the better shot.

A century ago the natives of India were strong believers in their own creed, and especially in the doctrine of the metempsychosis. An amusing instance is told of this. The captain of a brigantine having gone on shore and shot a large bird, was seized by the natives and ordered for execution. Nothing could have saved him but the ingenious advice of a Moor. When the time came, and the captain was on the point of being executed, they asked him if it was true that he had shot the bird? He answered, as the Moor had instructed him, —"Yes; and I had the highest reason for having done so. Some time ago my father died, and I cast him into the sea, when his soul entered a fish; and when I was walking on the strand yesterday, my father in the fish saw me, and sprang out of the water close to the shore. Then came the boor's father, who is now a bird, and swallowed my father; upon which I could do no other than be angry, and take revenge on account of my father. I took aim at the boor's father, and shot him dead because he had swallowed my father." No sooner had the chief at Mergim, with his council, heard this than they acquitted the captain, as he could not have done otherwise; for it was plain that he could not endure that the boor's father should swallow his father. And so the captain was immediately declared innocent; his chains were taken off, his people released, and his ship and lading delivered up to him.

After the battle of Brandywine, and before Washington had made his winter quarters at Valley Forge, the Americans had quite a large quantity of flour for the use of the army, at a flouring mill, the ruins of which can now be seen near the old headquarters at Valley Forge. Finding that the British would be almost certain to capture the place and seize the flour, General Washington sent Colonel Hamilton and Captain Harry Lee with a small troop of horse to destroy the stores. They had just crossed the mill-race, and were about to commence the work of destruction, when two videttes, sent off to the south-east to look for the enemy, came tearing in, pursued by a whole regiment of British Dragoons. Hamilton, with four of his men, sprang into a boat and crossed the Schuylkill under a furious fire from the enemy, while Light-Horse Harry Lee, with the mounted videttes and four more of his men on horseback, dashed over the bridge close at hand, amid a shower of bullets. The British followed them, firing volley after volley as they rode, until they saw that Lee could not be overtaken, and then they returned to make the capture of the stores. When Lee reached the camp he expressed his fears that Colonel Hamilton had either been killed or captured, but while he was making his report Hamilton rode up, equally excited, with a belief that Lee had been cut off and killed or taken. It was indeed a remarkable escape, since not an American was killed or captured, though in pistol shot of such a vastly superior force. Had Hamilton been killed then, Aaron Burr would not have had the sad notoriety of killing him in a duel.

SCIENCE.

A new feature of practical meteorology in Europe is the attempt to forecast the number of rainy days which will probably occur in each month.

Professor Dewar, of Cambridge, England, has demonstrated that an electrical current is produced in the living eye by the action of light upon the retina. The experiments were made, under his direction, upon his own eyes.

A new nickel-plating solution, said to yield beautiful results, is prepared by mixing the liquid obtained by evaporating a solution of ½ oz. nickel in aqua regia to a pasty mass, and dissolving it in 1 lb. aqua ammonia, with that obtained by treating the same quantity of nickel with a solution of 2 oz. cyanide of potassium in 1 lb. of water. More cyanide renders the deposit whiter, and more ammonia renders it grayer.

Paper may be prepared for bank cheques and other documents so that any writing in ink, once made thereon, cannot be altered, without leaving plainly visible marks, by passing the sheets through a solution composed of 0,015 grain gallic acid to 1 gill distilled water.

Only eighteen specimens of fossil North American plants were described by Brongniart in his work on fossil vegetation, published in the French language, in the year 1850. The number of such species belonging to this continent, now known to botanists, exceeds one thousand.

M. Cerpaux proposes a battery made of a certain number of plates of copper and of zinc, separated by a wooden lath. The plates are plunged in sand or damp earth, and an electric current is at once produced. If on the earth chloride of sodium be poured, a very intense current is generated.

The Journal de Pharmacie states that if to a strong solution of gum arabic, measuring 8½ fluid oz., a solution of 30 grains sulphate of aluminum, dissolved in ⅔ oz. of water, be added, a very strong mucilage is formed, capable of fastening wood together, or of mending porcelain or glass.

A notable diminution in the depth of the annual snowfall in Switzerland has occurred within the last fifteen years. The average is now one-half less than it was in the twenty years prior to 1861. The decrease in the size of some of the Alpine glaciers is ascribed to this lessened snowfall.

The Chinese have a method of waterproofing pasteboard, by mixing four parts of slacked lime into three parts of fresh blood, with a little alum added. As soon as mixed, the pasteboard is brushed over with two successive coatings of this preparation, and thus becomes impervious to water.—Amer Stationer.

A scientific publication concerning the insects of Michigan, published by the Board of Agriculture of that State, contains the following suggestion as to the destruction of moth in carpets:—"Take a wet sheet or other cloth, lay it upon the carpet, and then run a hot flat-iron over it, so as to convert the hot water into steam, which permeates the carpet beneath, and destroys the life of the inchoate moth." The iron must be very hot.

To silver cast iron, 15 grains of nitrate of silver are dissolved in 250 grains of water, and 30 grains cyanide of potassium are added; when the solution is complete the liquid is poured into 700 grains of water, wherein 15 grains of compound salt have been dissolved. The cast iron intended to be silvered by this solution should, after having been well cleansed, be placed for a few minutes in a bath of nitric acid of 1.2 specific gravity just before being placed in the silvering fluid.

A new plan for overcoming steep gradients on railroads has been brought to the attention of the Iron and Steel Institute of Great Britain by one of its members. It really transforms an ordinary locomotive into a stationary hauling engine. When the train arrives at the foot of a steep grade the locomotive leaves it, and runs up alone, unwinding a wire rope attached to the first car. At the summit of the incline the locomotive is fastened firmly to the track by what are called gripping struts, and the train is hauled up by means of the wire rope and a winding apparatus.

An excellent method of testing the safety-lamps of miners has been adopted at the petroleum mines of Alsace, and the principle involved is simple and capable of application in other sorts of mining. An open jar, containing a small quantity of petroleum, is placed where the miners can have access to it on their way down into the pits. An explosive mixture is formed in this jar, by the vapor which rises from the oil into the air above it. Every miner is obliged to dip his lighted lamp into this mixture, which is of precisely the same nature as that to be feared in the mine; and unless the introduction of the lamp causes an explosion in the jar, the workman can be certain that the flame is suitably protected.

The manner in which seeds force themselves into the ground, after falling from the parent plant, was explained by Mr. Darwin in a paper lately read to the Linnean Society, in which the conclusions of former observers were pronounced inadequate in some respects. According to Mr. Darwin, a torsion, or twisting movement, on its own axis, takes place in each cell of the seed, the whole resulting in a like motion on the part of the seed itself. This torsion is caused by the moisture which is imbibed. As the seed gradually dries, after it is partly in the ground, a process of untwisting begins; but strangely enough, instead of withdrawing the seed, this apparently reverse movement forces it still farther down into the soil.

The question whether the gratification of putting others to pain grows out of the pleasurable sense of power involved is considered in the second number of Mind, the new philosophical quarterly. The form of enjoyment derived from the infliction of pain upon others is manifested in the lower animals, and notably by the cat, whose pleasure, however, in prolonging the life of its captive mouse, seems attributable to the delight in exercising power, and a desire to continue its exercise as long as possible. The article concludes with the statement that the boys who find the keenest delight in impaling moths and tormenting cats are always those who hector most loudly, if they are strong enough, and love most to bully others into submission. The modern scientific doctrine of evolution certainly appears to favor the theory of Dugald Stewart, that the sentiment of cruelty is derived from an abuse of power.

WIT AND HUMOR.

"'Tis false!" as the girl said when her lover told her she had beautiful hair.

"Be content with what you have," as the rat said to the trap when he left his tail in it.

The most infallible way of preventing a kitchen door from creaking is said to be to engage a servant girl whose sweetheart comes to the house to see her.

"Are those bells ringing for fire?" inquired Simon, of Tiberius. "No, indeed," answered Tibe; "dey ab got plenty of fire, and the bells are now ringing for water."

"Pompey," said a gentleman to his servant, "I did not know until to-day that you got whipped last week." Didn't you, massa?" replied Pompey, "I—I knowed it just the time it occurred."

"No man was better inoculated to prejudge pork than my husband," says Mrs. Partington; "he knew what good hogs were, he did, for he had been brought up with 'em from his childhood."

"My brains are on fire!" exclaimed an excited lady to her husband, "Well, my dear," said the unfeeling man, taking a revolver from a drawer, "just hold still a moment, and I will blow them out."

The other day a town-crier took in charge a lost child, and proceeded to hunt up its parents. On being asked by a lady what the matter was, he replied, "Here's an orphan child, ma'am, and I'm trying to find its parents."

"Mrs. Sage, I should like to know whose ferry-boats these are that I tumbled over in the hall?" "Ferry-boats, indeed, sir! Those are my shoes! Very polite of you to call 'em ferry-boats!" "Didn't say ferry-boats, Mrs. Sage, you misunderstood me—fairy-boots, I said, my dear friend."

The second night after her husband died she sat by the open window five hours waiting for the cats to begin fighting in the back yard. Said she—"This thing of going to sleep without a quarrel of some kind is so new that I can't stand it! Let me alone till they begin; then I can dose off gently."

Bob Longley (with modest fervor)—"O, Jack! O, for a woman's love! O, for a true hearted woman once, once in one's life, to throw her arms around one's neck, and tell one she loves one!" Little Jack Horner—"Ah! If you had as much of that kind a thing as I have, old man, you'd be precious tired of the whole concern."

A gentleman one evening was seated near a lovely woman, when the company around him were proposing conundrums to each other. Turning to his companion, he said, "Why is a lady unlike a mirror?" She "gave it up." "Because," said the rude fellow, "a mirror reflects without speaking, but a lady speaks without reflecting."

"Women," an imaginative writer says, "is compounded of three articles—sugar, tincture of arnica and soap—sugar, because of the sweetness apparent in all women, though it has become acidulated to domestic vinegar; arnica, because of the healing and soothing women yield to men after the trials of life; and soft soap, for reasons too obvious to need specification."

An ingenious person has discovered that the three most forcible letters in our alphabet are N R G; that the two which contain nothing are M T; that four express great corpulence, O B C T; that two are in a decline, D K; that four indicate exalted station, X L N C; and three excite our tears, yet, when pronounced together, are necessary to a good understanding—L E G.

After giving Sandy certain directions about kirk matters, the minister sniffed once or twice, and remarked: "Saunders, I fear you have been 'tasting' this morning." "Deed sir," he replied, with the coolest effrontery, set off with a droll glance of his brown eyes, "deed, sir, I was just ga'in to observe I thocht there was a smell o' speerits amang us this mornin'!"

AT no period in life is watchful care over the functions of the brain more requisite than during the acquisition of knowledge by the youth. Plodding persevering study, requires a store of vigorous nervous force, or the child may sink under the mental toil. Stern necessity may compel the student to strain his powers beyond what is prudent, and early promise of excellence be blighted thereby. To such we can recommend Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites. It will not only restore the sinking patient, but its use will enable the toiling subject to preserve his mental and nervous standard without detriment.
