

Grafftey urges oldsters to push for better treatment

MAGOG (WD) — The need to organize as a pressure group and make oneself heard was the advice given by Conservative MP hopeful Howard Grafftey to Canadian pensioners here yesterday.

Mr. Grafftey was speaking at a meeting of the Magog chapter of the National Pensioners and Senior Citizens Federation, a non-partisan group that acts as spokesmen for senior citizens across Canada.

"Although you represent 10 per cent of the population and 17 per cent of the voting force, pensioners in this country are treated in a disgusting manner," said the former MP.

Mr. Grafftey said figures show that as many as 60 per cent of Canadian pensioners live below the poverty line in Canada.

This situation is intolerable in a country that prides itself on being the second richest country in the world, he said.

Mr. Grafftey blamed the situation on the government's refusal to adjust the present two per cent adjustment rate on fixed incomes.

Under the present system, he explained, if the cost of living goes up, a fixed income can only be adjusted by two per cent. In some cases this amount is as little as .42 cents a month.

The former MP called for the immediate reinstatement of the Winters work program as one of three measures to build up the economy over the winter.

Reinstating this program, Mr. Grafftey said, would allow the municipalities to complete useful projects over the winter months while at the same time putting people to work.

A second measure would be the immediate reduction of taxes for lower income Canadians. This move will put more money in the pockets of the taxpayers, he said.

HOWARD GRAFFTEY

Mr. Grafftey also stressed the need for a massive home building program, along with the abolition of the 12 per cent tax on all building materials.

At the present time the housing situation in Canada is at a dangerous level, Mr. Grafftey stated, adding that many Canadians are badly housed and in need of decent lodgings.

Mr. Grafftey said in conclusion that in our fast-paced society we should not move ahead at such a quick pace that we forget those who are less fortunate.

He called on all Canadians to take time to think about what could be done to help in the area of public welfare.

In a question and answer period that followed his speech, Mr. Grafftey said that he placed much of the blame for ineffective government action on the press and TV.

He felt that the media depended for too much on sensationalism in parliament and did not give enough coverage to constructive debates.

Mr. Grafftey stated that things will only get better when opposition parties become less of an opposition and worked more closely together.

Howard Grafftey was introduced to the Pensioners and Senior Citizens Foundation by Frank de B. Walker, acting meeting chairman for the group.

Mr. Walker pointed to Mr. Grafftey's 10 years of service as a Progressive Conservative in Parliament representing Bromfield, mentioning Mr. Grafftey's impressive record in the areas of consumer affairs and auto safety, and referring to him as the Canadian Ralph Nader.

In 1962 and 1963 Mr. Grafftey was secretary to George Nowlan then minister of finance in the Conservative government.

Radio, TV tobacco ads will stop this year, spending freeze seen

OTTAWA (CP) — Tobacco manufacturers said Tuesday they will stop advertising cigarettes on radio and television Jan. 1 and will freeze spending on print advertising.

Announcing a new advertising code, the Canadian Tobacco Manufacturers Council also said:

—Printed warnings that "excessive smoking" may be a health hazard will be placed on packages and vending machines, starting next April.

—Brands in which tar content exceeds 22 milligrams and nicotine content 1.6 milligrams will be taken off the market.

—Promotion of cigarettes through consumer cash or other prizes would be ended Jan. 1.

KILL FIVE BRANDS

Initial effects would include the loss of more than $7 million in cigarette advertising to the broadcast industry and the withdrawal of at least five brands—Buckingham, Pall Mall and Chesterfield king-size plain ends; Manic king-size filter; and St. Moritz premium filter menthol—from the market.

A government bill introduced June 10 would prohibit all advertising and promotion of cigarettes Jan. 1, require a warning on packages and machines, and enable government to regulate tar and nicotine levels.

Council Chairman Paul Pare, president of Imperial Tobacco Products Ltd., told a news conference the bill—even if deferred—has caused "chaos."

"Because the minister (Health Minister John Munro) has not clarified important proposals, the manufacturers have been importuned by their own marketing people, by advertising agencies, by media and by cultural and sporting organizations to tell them what we would be planning for 1972," a news release said.

Tobacco growers were concerned "about the future of their important segment of the agricultural industry" as a result of tar and nicotine clauses in the bill.

REVISED ITS CODE

These concerns, "especially the urgent need for marketing planning for 1972," has caused the council to revise its code. Mr. Pare said manufacturers had no reason to believe that the government will withdraw or defer the bill.

The new code would allow manufacturers to continue to promote cigarettes through sponsorship of sports and cultural events. Mr. Pare indicated that more money might be spent in this area.

Otherwise, the new code would "appreciably reduce marketing expenditures in measured media"—radio, television, newspapers and so on.

"This step puts the Canadian industry in line with the voluntary action taken in the United Kingdom and the voluntary and legislative action in the U.S. to get out of the broadcast media and include a cautionary label," Mr. Pare said.

The industry's label, in English and French, would say: "Warning: Excessive smoking may be hazardous to your health."

The label proposed in the government bill says: WARNING: DANGER TO HEALTH INCREASES WITH AMOUNT SMOKED, AVOID INHALING. PREDICTS OUTCOME

In Toronto, Pat Hurley, vice president and director of sales for radio station CFRB, predicted that the decision to end broadcast advertising won't lessen spending cigarette advertising.

"The money taken from radio and television will just be redirected by the tobacco manufacturers into press and magazines and sporting events like in the U.S.," Mr. Hurley said.

"We're the only ones who are going to suffer..."

George A. Demeyere, Tillsonburg, Ont., chairman of the Ontario Flue-cured Tobacco Growers Marketing Board, said he couldn't disagree with the tar and nicotine levels proposed by the manufacturers.

Such levels wouldn't harm the domestic or $60 million export market for Canadian-grown tobacco.

FALL'S HERE — Sherbrooke's many parks are full of interesting things, and the fall season is the perfect time to spend a few relaxing hours strolling around. Howardene, where this picture was taken, features the city's permanent industrial exhibition, the municipal greenhouses and the majestic former Howard residence, as well as a pond and acres of real untouched park. Exhibits such as the tank shown above are also scattered through the city's parks.

Sharp pledges conditional support in UN money crisis

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Tuesday he is prepared to recommend that Canada make a voluntary contribution to help the UN out of a serious financial crisis—if the United States, Soviet Union and France do likewise.

The minister made his offer to Secretary-General U Thant as the 26th General Assembly opened with the past and new presidents pleading with the 130 member countries to get on with the job of getting the UN out of debt.

Thant, in a report to the assembly released this week, said the world organization is approaching bankruptcy and that it will have difficulty meeting its payroll and other obligations before the end of the year.

Outgoing President Edvard Hambro of Norway mentioned the "desperate seriousness" of the financial situation. Incoming President Adam Malik of Indonesia told the Assembly that UN has "for all practical purposes reached the state of bankruptcy."

"None of us can run away from this reality," said the Indonesian foreign minister.

At a news conference after his talk with Thant, Sharp did not expand on his offer.

"I said if France and the Soviet Union were to co-operate in a contribution and the United States did something that would be helpful, I would be prepared to recommend that Canada should contribute something."

Much of the UN's financial problem is brought about by member countries, notably France and the Soviet Union, refusing to help pay the costs of past UN peacekeeping efforts. Sharp also discussed with Thant the selection of a new secretary-general to replace the Burmese diplomat, who is retiring at the end of the year.

Canada has no choice for a successor at the moment, Sharp said, and Thant would not comment on a possible candidate.

Companies found guilty, fined for false advertising

OTTAWA (CP) — Fifteen Canadian companies were convicted of false and misleading advertising in the fiscal year ended March 31 and another 32 firms were before the courts awaiting trial on the same charges, says D. H. W. Henry, director of investigation and research under the federal Combines Investigation Act.

In the same year, another 28 firms were found guilty of misleading price advertising while 14 more charges were pending, says Mr. Henry's annual report tabled Tuesday in the Commons by Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford.

The convictions were registered from St. John's, Nfld., to Vancouver and have included a number of the biggest names in the retail trade.

Imperial Tobacco Ltd. is one. Its promotion of Casino cigarettes which included displays promising "$5 in every pack" resulted in a $3,000 fine. The company is appealing.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield interjected that the rule has not been used in recent times because there has never been a government in Canada like the current one.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux finally ruled the attempt out of order after 90 minutes of discussion. He based his ruling on the fact that there has never been an impeachment motion in Canada, that even in Britain it had last been used in 1805 and that modern rules have made impeachment obsolete.

Other familiar names paying fines following conviction were R.A. Beamish Stores Co. Ltd., Hudson's Bay Co., Reliable Toy Co. Ltd., and Parker Brothers Games Ltd.

Mr. Henry's report also included a forecast of amendments to the Combines Act which will toughen laws against misleading the buying public.

One amendment is expected to deal with newspapers and radio and television stations which accept misleading advertising with little or no investigation.

Responsibility for enforcing laws against misleading advertising was given to Mr. Henry in 1969. Until then, they formed part of the Criminal Code and were rarely enforced.

Evidence that the consumer affairs department is having an impact also is reflected in the number of complaints lodged with the combines branch about advertising.

Lortie granted 24-hour delay

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernard Lortie was granted a 24-hour adjournment Tuesday to prepare his address to the Court of Queen's Bench where he is being tried for kidnapping Pierre Laporte, the Quebec labor minister murdered last October.

The 19-year-old trade school dropout, expelled from his trial earlier Tuesday crying and white with anger, returned to the prisoner's dock calm and smiling.

Lortie told the 12-man jury he had no defence to prepare but asked that his trial be adjourned until 2:30 p.m. today to give him time to prepare his address.

Mr. Justice Jean-Paul Bergeron granted the request saying, however, that the Crown would present its final summation to the jury first. Lortie agreed.

He also instructed Crown prosecutor Jean-Guy Boillat to provide the accused with all transcripts of proceedings and copies of the evidence.

Commons wonders whether or not to impeach ministers

OTTAWA (CP) — Half-seriously, the Commons debated Tuesday a Conservative motion to impeach three cabinet ministers for allegedly breaking the law.

The law in question is the Temporary Wheat Reserves Act of 1956. The government has not paid more than $90 million to the Canadian wheat board as required under the act on the ground that the act will be repealed by new legislation now before the Commons.

The accused cabinet ministers are Finance Minister Edgar Benson, Justice Minister John Turner and Manpower Minister Otto Lang, the minister responsible for the wheat board. Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, cited rules of Parliament, dictionaries, a British Columbia Supreme Court case and the memoirs of former British prime minister Harold Macmillan to support his motion for impeachment.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) and Andre Fortin (SC—L'Orbiniere) agreed with Mr. Baldwin that the present government was running roughshod over the rights of Parliament.

Mr. Knowles said he might not agree with every argument by Mr. Baldwin but he backed it because it would end with a vote.

A majority government could do pretty much as it liked but there should be some opportunity for the opposition to force a vote on the admission by the government that it refused to abide by the terms of the temporary Wheat Reserves Act. Then Liberal MPs would have to answer for this when the next election came along.

Mr. Fortin said the current government "played with" Parliament, ignored the law and ran the country "by its own whim."

Mr. Lamoureux said he would not overlook the suggestion for an early debate. But he said Mr. Baldwin's move Tuesday was an attempt to go over and beyond the House standing orders to achieve a special kind of debate.

A "residue" of impeachment proceedings might rest in Britain's Parliament.

Nixon said to be preparing for next $ manoeuvre

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon ended Tuesday his survey of post-freeze proposals aimed at helping the ailing United States economy and was reported planning to unveil his new economic program about mid-October.

This will "give everyone 30 days to prepare themselves" for what comes after Nov. 14, said Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania in disclosing the president's plan.

Scott said he assumes Nixon will go on radio and television to announce the measures that will form Phase 11 of the anti-inflation program he started Aug. 15 with a 90-day freeze on U.S. wages, prices and rents.

Meanwhile, legal experts at the Capitol were concerned by the question of whether Nixon can remove the Supplementary 10-per cent duty on imports without seeking new legislation.

"We think we can do it," Treasury Secretary John B. Connally told reporters.

Sir George, Loyola may merge next fall

MONTREAL (CP) — Sir George Williams University and Loyola College may merge as early as the fall of 1972, spokesmen for both universities said today.

Very Rev. Patrick Malone, president of Loyola, said "there is a strong likelihood of some sort of an association between the two schools by next year."

He said it was well-known that the two schools have been studying the topic but "a final decision will be taken by the board of governors only after thorough review, prolonged discussion and negotiation."

A spokesman for SGWU said principal John O'Brien will meet Yves Martin, Quebec deputy minister of education, and other department officials here Thursday to discuss various matters including the possible merger.

No Loyola representatives had been invited to the meeting. The merger, proposed last spring by Loyola, would produce a university with a total enrolment of 27,500 day and evening students.

Voice of Women appeals

MONTREAL (CP) — The Voice of Women made "a last minute appeal" Tuesday to President Nixon to halt the planned nuclear blast on Amchitka Island in October. Muriel Duckworth of Halifax, national president, said in a statement the organization is "disappointed" that Prime Minister Trudeau is not willing to go to Washington in an attempt to stop the blast.

P. Q. exports go to U.S.A.

QUEBEC (CP) — Two-thirds of Quebec exports go to the United States, the Quebec Bureau of Statistics announced Tuesday. Of $3,759,365,712 worth of exports in 1970, $2.1 billion went to the U.S. The United Kingdom, second largest importer of Quebec products, bought $484,440,474 worth of goods last year.

New factory at Sept-Iles

QUEBEC (CP) — The Iron Ore Co. of Canada has been given the go ahead by the provincial government to construct a concentrator and pelletizing factory worth $195 million at Sept Iles, Que. The Quebec resources department announced Tuesday permission was granted by order-in-council.

The department said Victor Goldbloom, minister without portfolio responsible for the environment, can demand that the company take corrective measures anytime to prevent pollution under the order in council.

The company also has to follow the province's mines law, submit its construction plans to Mr. Goldbloom and take steps to prevent air and water pollution.

Morency trial begins today

MONTREAL (CP) — The trial of Claude Morency, facing numerous charges including conspiracy to kidnap a United States consul, was to begin today after more than a week of scrutinizing jury candidates.

Seventy-two candidates were closely questioned by defence lawyer Robert Lemieux before the selection Tuesday of the final two members of the 12 man panel.

Besides the charge of conspiring to kidnap Harrison Burgess, Morency faces 18 other charges connected with terrorist activity, including armed robbery and possession of illegal weapons.

Is Mao dead or sick?

PARIS (AP) — Many Frenchmen went to bed Tuesday night with the impression that Mao Tse-tung was dying or dead—but there was nothing from Peking to bear this out.

A newscast on the television channel owned by the French government said: "There are reports in Hong Kong that he has suffered a major heart attack, and some people are whispering that he is dead."

The national radio speculated that the 77-year-old leader of China's Communist party might be dead or gravely ill. It theorized that this lay behind puzzling incidents in China.

One newscast said Premier Chou En-lai had told foreign visitors this week that he was too busy to see them because of an important meeting. Chinese officials were quoted as saying:

"Serious things are happening in Peking." This led to speculation about a meeting of the central committee, and was coupled with reports that celebration of China's National Day, Oct. 1, had been called off.

Horses killed

SHERBROOKE — Some 14 horses were destroyed by fire along with barn C on the Sherbrooke Exhibition grounds on Park Street early this morning.

Cause of the fire is unknown. At the present time.

Show business is in his blood

By VICTOR STANTON
TORONTO (CP) — Gino Empry can look up from his paper-strewn desk to any wall of his small, cluttered mid-town basement office and see the faces of many of the foremost Canadian and international entertainers of the last two to three decades.

Most of the dozens of photographs are inscribed with personal messages from stars grateful for the publicity and promotion he has provided for them during appearances in shows in Toronto.

Shows like Spring Thaw, Anne of Green Gables, You Can't Take It With You, Guys and Dolls, Gypsy, stars like Barbara Hamilton, Lorne Greene, Helen Hayes, Ella Fitzgerald, Anne Murray, The Irish Rovers.

The office clutter represents an ever-increasing involvement by Mr. Empry in the business end of showbusiness.

His company, Gino Empry Public Relations, offers a combination of public relations and personal management services exclusively for entertainers.

When starting his own business in 1966 in what was virtually an untried field in Canada, Mr. Empry began by doing publicity for touring American shows visiting the city.

BUSINESS SLOW

The first show he handled all public relations for was the Canadian-originated Spring Thaw '66.

At the start, whenever business was slow, he would work as an advance man for the odd show in the United States.

Then, in 1968, "things started to boom here," and he saw a need for "a personal management service tailored to the individual needs of Canadian entertainers."

The first of these was a leggy Toronto singer-dancer-actress, Sandra O'Neill, who was doing a television special that year and wanted more personal promotion than she felt she was getting in routine publicity for the show.

Mr. Empry now manages, in varying degrees, 20 resident-in-Canada personalities, including actor William Hutt, actress Pat Galloway, Sean Mulcahy, the artistic director of Edmonton's Citadel theatre, and the popular singing group with their own television series, The Irish Rovers.

In addition, he handles all public relations for the Royal York Hotel's Imperial Room supper club which features big names in international showbusiness.

OWN PLAYS

It's been a long, but natural, progress for Mr. Empry who at age 14, having never seen live theatre, produced, directed, made the programs for and starred in a Roman Catholic youth organization's production of A Christmas Carol.

Although his parents—his father has a grocery and butcher's store in the Italian section of the city—thought theatre was a waste of time, young Gino continued to produce plays and tour local churches with them.

Early business ventures included publishing his own local newspaper with a 25-copy circulation and starting his own lending library, charging a cent-a-day rental for books and comics.

After high school and an accounting course, which led him to a job as collection, and later credit, manager for a national transport firm, he kept his theatrical interests alive acting and directing for local little theatre groups and getting involved in the Dominion Drama Festival organization.

For a time, he says, "I found myself a very high-paid executive during the day and spending all my spare time in theatre, and getting no sleep."

So in 1963 he paid $1,000 to a management psychologist and took tests to determine where his greater potential for success and happiness lay—in the world of business, or in the world of theatre.

OUT OF SYSTEM

The psychologist told him to take two years off "and try to get into showbusiness as a full-time profession."

"If at the end of that time you're not successful, go back as an accountant and be happy that you've got it out of your system."

The following day he told the company president he was quitting.

"I had to forego severance pay and other sort of things, but I was out of there that day."

In the next 12 months he took courses in directing and acting; wrote letters "by the thousands" applying for acting jobs "and getting nowhere"; directed the occasional production, "getting paid for it, but not enough to live on;" and produced his own shows, "ending up broke."

It was back to an office job and "I hated it."

"I was doing DDF business from the office so I quit before they fired me."

Soon Ed Mirvish, owner of the Royal Alexandra Theatre, asked him to take on public relations for the theatre.

"I knew nothing about public relations in theatre, but it was a job in the theatre and I took it."

KNOWS COSTS

After two years at the Royal Alex, working for road shows and "picking the brains" of their advance agents, he took the next step of going into business for himself.

He takes pride in knowing "costs, box-office potential and running costs" prior to a show's start.

"If I'm ever out more than five per cent I'll quit."

As a producer of shows, his maxim is:

"If the show can't gross enough to pay its running costs, close it."

He says his over-all goal is "to see the Canadian entertainment industry grow and feel that I've contributed to it."

Magog Lions tour new offset printing plant

MAGOG (WD) — Operations at the Montreal-Magog Offset plant here were explained to 25 members of the Magog Lions Club during a one-hour tour of the company's plant by the club last night.

The plant employs 65 workers and plans to hire more in the future as soon as new equipment is installed, explained Marcel Gingras, plant supervisor, who conducted the tour.

Mr. Gingras stated figures to the visiting club showing that since its opening in May, 1971, the company has brought over $250,000 to the area.

The Lions were visiting the plant on the invitation of Mr. Gingras, who was a guest speaker at a Lions meeting in the early part of the spring.

Following the tour, the club went to a local motel for dinner where plans were discussed for this weekend's gasorama.

The gasorama is being held to raise funds for welfare projects which are being planned for this winter.

Details were announced by Lions Club president Normand Rouleau, who is also head of the committee that organized the gasorama.

Mr. Rouleau stated that 25 members would be on hand at two local service stations from 6 p.m. Friday until 6 p.m. Saturday to dispense gas.

He said he expected the project to bring in about $500 that is needed for the club's welfare programs this year.

Plans for a winter project were hinted at during the meeting but Mr. Rouleau refused to release any details until plans were completed.

Mr. Rouleau explained that tickets for the gasorama are now on sale at $3 each and can be obtained from any Lions member.

The ticket will be redeemable for the purchase price in gas at Legault's station on Sherbrooke Street and Langlois station on Main Street, Magog.

RED CROSS MODELS — These two little girls, Ita and Jennifer, are modeling dresses which will have to be made this fall for refugees and victims of disaster along with knitted garments and the baby clothing on Jennifer's doll which is needed for layettes. Ladies interested in making clothing for victims of local disasters and fires as well as for the thousands of Pakistani children in India, can obtain material for garments from the local Red Cross branch president of the Women's Work Committee.

U. of M. professor is appointed ECC chairman

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Andre Reynaud, a well-known economist and professor of economics at the University of Montreal, has been appointed chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, Prime Minister Trudeau announced Tuesday.

He succeeds Arthur Smith who resigned in July.

Dr. Reynaud, 43, was a member of the council from 1966 to 1969 and also served on its executive committee.

In replying to Mr. Trudeau's announcement in the Commons, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Dr. Reynaud's extreme competence, brilliant career and exceptional accomplishments indicate that he is the best man for the job. He said the new chairman will not face an easy task in following the distinguished service of Dr. Smith.

Dr. Reynaud, 43, has served with many Canadian organizations, including a term as president of the Institut Canadien des Affaires Publiques. He has been on the executive of the Canadian Political Science Association and the Social Science Research Council of Canada and for a period in 1967-68 he was economic adviser to the deputy minister of finance in Ottawa. He has also been a director of the CBC and was a member of the royal commission on bilingualism and multiculturalism. He has written several books on economics.

The new chairman will assume full-time duties next Jan. 1, but Mr. Trudeau told the Commons he will begin doing work with the council next month.

In a letter to Dr. Reynaud, the prime minister said this is an appropriate time to consider whether there is any way in which the council could make an even greater contribution to the understanding of basic economic issues in Canada. He asked the new chairman to consider suggestions in this respect.

Heavy raid in North Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — United States planes swarmed over North Vietnam Tuesday and delivered one of the heaviest raids in the North in the last three years.

The 250 supersonic jets flew through anti-aircraft fire to bomb surface-to-air missile and gun sites, supply depots and truck parks in a six-hour attack from daybreak to noon.

The U.S. command said fighter-bombers launched 200 bombing strikes in North Vietnam's southern panhandle, concentrating on an area from the so-called demilitarized zone between the two Vietnams to about 35 miles north of it.

The U.S. command said all the planes returned safely. No assessment of damage was available.

Full-scale bombing of North Vietnam was halted Nov. 1, 1968. Ground fighting subsided in the U Minh Forest, 145 miles southwest of Saigon. The South Vietnamese command claimed 588 North Vietnamese troops and Viet Cong guerrillas were killed in the week-long U Minh fighting with help from U.S. helicopter gunships and a U.S. destroyer. South Vietnamese losses for the week were 109 killed and 162 wounded, the Saigon command said.

Rotary district governor talks to weekly meeting

SHERBROOKE — District Rotary governor Richard G. Smith spoke at the weekly meeting of the Sherbrooke Rotary Club last night, emphasizing this year's Rotary theme, "Goodwill begins with you."

He said that even though many of yesterday's problems are now being taken care of by the government there are still many more left untouched that the Rotary Club, among others, must take care of.

Smith explained that on his visits to the 34 clubs in his district he made suggestions where possible and tried to give out information where it was needed.

The district governor was pleased with his district and was overwhelmed when he received a donation for his own club's Indian project.

The Rotary Club was founded 52 years ago. Since then many changes have altered the club but their motto has always remained the same, "service above self."

The functions of the club are divided into four separate areas, Smith said.

Club service is where each member participates in his duty by giving his personal energies to the club and cheerfully assisting in whatever ways possible.

Vocational service is used to help young persons seeking careers learn more about occupations and also by promoting high ethical standards in business.

Communit. service is the most important of the four because this is where the members themselves come in contact with the people. The needs of young people and others are solved with the service that is provided by the club.

International service aids needy communities in developing countries and helps exchange students by inviting them into the homes of club members thus letting them meet the community and its residents.

Domtar speaks on locked gate affair

WINDSOR (WD) — Domtar has denied recent newspaper reports that it is blocking access to public property leased to the woodlands division of that company.

Complaints had been received from sources that the company was denying the public use of a road leading to private homes and cottages on the Watopeka River.

Officials stated that all concerned property in the Windsor area was entirely and legally the property of Domtar. Proof of this could be obtained at the registry office of the municipalities concerned, they explained.

The problem arises out of a conflict between the company and private cottage owners at Fredette Bay.

In the past the company has allowed the cottage owners the use of a road that ran across their property as part of their good neighbor policy.

But lately company officials have said the situation has deteriorated, mainly because of the increase in traffic.

The company says the road was originally built for use by the trucks that are used to ship wood out of the area.

Domtar also denied that it had received a subsidy of $2,800 a mile as was charged by some sources. The sum was said to have been paid to the company for the construction and maintenance of the road.

The company says that the road had been purchased in 1934.

A spokesman for the company said that Domtar regretted the situation and that the woodlands division was opened to any discussion that would lead to a solution.

Goyer clarifies new group's status: research, analysis

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer reiterated Tuesday that the new security planning and research group in his department is of an advisory nature.

In a statement to the Commons, Mr. Goyer said:

"It is absolutely wrong to suggest that this group is 'an anti-rebel police force' or a 'civilian security force'."

The group, under Col. Robert Bourne, was advisory rather than operational in nature.

"The duties of this group are to conduct research, analysis and planning."

"This is a far cry from the beginnings of a police state as has been implied by some critics."

GLAD TO HEAR IT
Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said he was glad to hear the statement from the minister after his "curious reluctance to come clean" during days of opposition questions on the security group.

He held to previous suggestions that the group should be studied by a special Senate-Commons committee or the Commons justice committee.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) agreed the minister had been "hesitant, dilatory and evasive" in explaining the group's operation.

But with the statement he could "find nothing objectionable" in the security group.

Leonel Beaudoin (SC—Richmond) said the "framework seems satisfactory."

Mr. Goyer compared the group's role in security to that of the Crown prosecutor in criminal cases.

It was the prosecutor who assessed evidence, not the police, and decided whether to prosecute.

"Likewise the assessment of the seriousness of a security threat to the state should be made by the civil power in concert with police authorities."

MIXED GROUP
The group would consist of sociologists, criminologists, psychologists, lawyers, police and military officers.

"I am hopeful that a mixture of backgrounds such as this will together be able to advise me, and through me, the cabinet about the aims and intentions of groups that are genuinely revolutionary and prepared to employ violence... as distinct from those who would promote social change through accepted democratic procedures."

Dissent was healthy. Society could absorb dissenting groups that weren't a threat to the physical safety of Canadians. But the government had a responsibility to protect Canadians from violent groups.

"A step in this direction is the creation of a group in the government structure which will study and report on dissenting groups and their intentions as they relate to the safety of Canadians."

Mr. Goyer noted safeguards, including the ability of the RCMP commissioner and the RCMP security-service head to report directly to the prime minister "in exceptional circumstances." Normally they report to the solicitor-general.

The new security group would work closely with the RCMP security service, the armed forces, other government departments and agencies, other police forces and other governments in Canada.

Its functions would be:

—To study the nature, origin and causes of subversive and revolutionary action, its objectives and techniques as well as the measures necessary to protect Canadians from internal threats.

—To compile and analyze information collected on subversive and revolutionary groups and their activities and to estimate the nature and scope of internal threats to Canadians and to plan for measures to counter these threats.

—"To advise me on those matters."

Notes from Stanstead College with Ivy Hatch

STANSTEAD — As the days pass all the year's regular events are being put into full swing by a record number of students attending the school this year.

Fred Horler, Jack Newman and Michael Pierce attended an organizational meeting of debating at AGRHS as representatives of our school. The plans include five area schools for inter-school debating.

The Spectrum, the school year book, has been distributed during the courses of the past few days. If anyone wishes a copy they may be obtained here at the school. Now thoughts are turning to another year.

So far, Pierre Casgrain has been named business manager and Mike Solomon photographer. An editor will be named soon.

September 20 was registration day for students taking the driver education course, under the direction of Captain John Getty.

A couple of young men from Spera, the halfway house near Montreal, will be here Oct. 19-22 residing and talking to the boys about drug abuse.

Fencing teams are being organized under master Peter Howard, and it now looks as if there will be a six-boy Chinese team, in addition to the others.

Mr. Howard also has an archery club with range on campus, in which some 30 boys are already enrolled.

With the withdrawal of cadets last year, the College has now purchased new rifles and some 22 boys are enrolled in the new gun club.

They are being instructed in this by Mr. Howard, who is also teaching a hunter safety course upon completion of which the boys can procure their hunting licences.

In fact, some who completed the course last year already have their hunting licences and were out on opening day, hunting small birds. There is CIL competition in the course.

The school is delighted with the interest in the Sunday soccer instruction of local elementary school age boys who showed up to register and be taught soccer.

This is a community project by the Senior students. Instructors are Greg Brown, Adrien Heaps, Pierre Casgrain and Don Anderson. Instruction is given in both French and English, and lasts an hour each Sunday morning. There are 24 local boys registered.

September 25 will be Old Home day as the old students come for soccer on campus at 1:30 p.m. and football at 2:30 p.m.

At 11 a.m. the junior varsity football team will play on home grounds against Massey-Vanier school.

It is hoped there will be a good turnout of spectators for the afternoon games, and all those interested are cordially invited to the morning soccer game.

Two of Stanstead's teams will be at St. George's school in Montreal for games on Saturday.

The athletic program for the season went to the printers on Sept. 20 and will soon be published. Coaches are same as last season.

The time is short

Though best remembered as a Democratic undersecretary of state who opposed the Vietnam war, George W. Ball is, by experience, one of the leading American authorities on international trade and, by nature, an optimist. Thus his warning against fatal delay in reorganizing the world economy must weigh heavily with his own people and with foreign nations. Writing in Newsweek, Mr. Ball says that action to put the major national currencies on a realistic basis must be taken soon, for "if the present disarray is long protracted, mounting protectionist pressures could lead to a destructive trade war, or competitive devaluations, or both, with implications of catastrophe that cannot be overstressed."

Foreign trade, he adds, is a relatively small component of the United States' Gross National Product, "but by no conceivable means could we immunize ourselves against a world depression that might follow" a failure to act now. If this be true of the huge American economy, it is still truer, and more terrifying, in the case of smaller and more vulnerable nations like Canada. No nation, not even those within the hermetic commercial zone of communism, would be immune from such a catastrophe.

Mr. Ball, often a bitter critic of President Nixon on other grounds, does not quarrel with his immediate economic policies as a desperate first-aid operation. The president's strategy, Mr. Ball agrees, is "to employ the lever of an import surcharge to force nations to realign the parities of their currencies in relation to the dollar so as to reflect real purchasing power. The result should be to restore our balance of payments equilibrium."

This strategy, he thinks, will be exceedingly difficult to execute, however, since it requires the full cooperation of powerful interests in many lands outside the control of the United States. It also requires, as Mr. Ball says, the intelligence of the American people and their Congress which, in the end, makes tariff policy whether the president approves it or not.

Do the people and the Congress have the necessary intelligence and a realistic understanding of their own true interests? Mr. Ball is not sure. All the measures taken by the government so far, he says, "have been excused as temporary expedients to be jettisoned once our balance of payments were restored to equilibrium. But, as is habitual with temporary measures, they have developed a life of their own."

That life will be clearly apparent from now on. Highest American industries and their workers, suddenly shielded from foreign goods by import restrictions, will not willingly abandon them. Protection in any form is a habit-forming drug, conveniently defended in congressional politics at a time of high unemployment with an election already in sight.

Nevertheless, Mr. Ball, who was the chief American architect of the Kennedy Round under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, remains an optimist. The fear of a return to the madness of the 1930s, he believes, is "much too gloomy, particularly since pessimism is a poor working hypothesis if we really wish to put the financial cosmos in order. No doubt a case can be made for a sombre outcome but, I think, on balance, it will not occur."

"Though governments can be irrational," he admits, "they are also capable of learning by experience — at least for short-time spans — and one would hope that the self-defeating nature of economic warfare would, like the destructive power of nuclear weapons, deter reflexes of suicidal egoism. Particularly if we keep in view the bright promises offered by a successful negotiation — a freer and stronger world monetary and trading system of unprecedented good health. That is the goal to which we should unwaveringly hold, since compromise would merely perpetuate the practices of the past at a lower level of confidence."

In Canada there can be no alternative goal. For if the world slides back into autarchy and the old habit of dog-eat-dog (disguised as patriotic nationalism) then nothing that any Canadian government can do by way of state regulation, industrial subsidies or any other protective method will protect a Canadian economy built on abundant trade from its own special catastrophe. But if catastrophe is to be avoided, as Mr. Ball warns, the shattered pattern of world currencies and tariffs must be put together again quickly or it will harden into the mould of general poverty when, with intelligence, it can take the opposite shape of steadily increasing wealth.

OTTAWA COMMENT

It's easy for Nixon's foes to mock him

By LUBOR J. ZINK

OTTAWA — It is fashionable to portray President Richard Nixon as a sleazy opportunist who would do almost anything for the prospect of an extra vote. "Show Tricky Dick a Gallup Poll unfavorable to any of his decisions," a Washington newsman once told me, "and he'll reverse himself on the spot with a flurry of sickly rhetoric."

This implies not just opportunistic craving for popularity — a weakness all politicians suffer from to some degree — but moral corruption. For if a politician bends with every change in the wind of public opinion, it can only mean that he has no principle to uphold, no criteria other than vote-projections to guide him in decision-making, no intellectual honesty, no moral backbone.

Is Richard Nixon, whom Khrushchev called "that S.O.B.," such a despicable empty shell?

Some of his political (and particularly ideological) opponents maintain that he is. What else, they ask, could explain his intervention in the Calley case? Wasn't his decision to personally review the trial and sentence of the "hero" of the My Lai massacre motivated solely by political expediency shaped by the traumatic upsurge of public sympathy for Lieut. Calley?

These are difficult questions to contemplate, for even if one assumes considerations of the effect of the Calley trial on the U.S. armed forces and on the psyche of the American nation as a whole, political opportunism still looms large in the Nixon decision.

On the other hand, can anyone among Nixon's bitterest opponents and detractors suspect political opportunism in his decision to defy the swelling public clamor for swift and complete withdrawal of American forces from Indochina?

The latest Gallup Poll shows that 73 per cent of Americans favor a windup of the U.S. role in the conflict in Southeast Asia by the end of this year.

If it were true that Nixon invariably bows to public pressure, he would surely do so with greatest alacrity in this particular case, for nothing poses a greater danger to his political life than the prospect of continued U.S. military involvement in Vietnam at the time of the 1972 presidential election campaign.

Yet this is the decision the allegedly unprincipled, entirely opportunistic Nixon announced this spring. And the explanation he gave makes nonsense of the charge that his only concern is political popularity. It shows that far from lacking other criteria than vote-projections, Nixon has very strong convictions and principles which he is determined to uphold come what may as long as he has the decisions-making responsibility.

"I know there are those," he said in his television address, "who honestly believe that I should move to end this war without regard to what happens in South Vietnam."

This way, we would abandon our friends, but even more important, we would abandon ourselves. We would plunge from the anguish of war into a nightmare of recriminations. We would lose respect for this nation, respect for one another, respect for ourselves."

Whether one agrees or not with these sentiments, they command respect. They are the sentiments of a man who inherited a difficult commitment and knowing what is at stake, is determined to discharge that commitment honorably, no matter how unpopular and politically risky that task may be.

The commitment is the pledge of Nixon's predecessors to help defend South Vietnam against Communist aggression. As the cornerstone of a whole system of collective defence arrangements around the world, the U.S. cannot renege on the Vietnam commitment without putting the entire security structure in jeopardy. The Communists have repeatedly stated they regard Vietnam as a test case.

"The issue," Nixon says, "is very simply this: Shall we leave Vietnam in a way that by our actions consciously turns the country over to the Communists, or shall we leave in a way that gives the South Vietnamese a reasonable chance to survive as a free people. My plan will end American involvement in a way that will provide the chance..."

The Nixon plan is gradual handing over of the fighting to the armed forces of South Vietnam as their training and equipment improves.

This process has already enabled Nixon to withdraw close to 250,000 U.S. servicemen from Vietnam. Another 100,000 men will be withdrawn by the end of this year. The rate of recall of the remaining 180,000 GIs will then depend on the situation on the battlefield.

"Never in history," says Nixon, "have men fought for less selfish motives. Not for conquest, not for glory, only for the right of a people far away to choose the kind of government they want... We have it in our power to leave Vietnam in a way that offers a brave people a realistic hope of freedom."

"We have it in our power to prove to our friends in the world that America's sense of responsibility means that world's single greatest hope of peace..."

Are these the convictions of a man without principles, without moral backbone, with resolve to do what he believes to be right and necessary?

It's easy for Nixon's foes to mock his often awkward and sometimes bombastic oratory, but when they mock his motives and try to portray him as a sleazy opportunist they are way off base.

MATTER OF FACT
JOSEPH H. ALSOP

As the Israelis see us

JERUSALEM — In the present Middle Eastern lull, an American visitor is bound to be chiefly struck by the way the leading Israelis see the United States. There is deep apprehension about the course America will take — although this apprehension is certainly not shouted from the rooftops.

The root of the matter is the simple fact that no Israeli leaders, whether political or military, are in the least persuaded that the Soviet Union has undergone a miraculous inner change. They do not think the Soviets are any less aggressive, any less power-minded, any less capable of tough and brutal action to serve Soviet interests than they have always been in the past.

In consequence, the Israelis are downright frightened by the American politicians who profess to believe in a miraculous change in Moscow. In the past, our Democratic Party was regarded here with the comfortable possessiveness that might be accorded to a suburb of Tel Aviv. But that is the case no longer.

All the more likely Democratic nominees are instead regarded with something close to ill-concealed horror. Even Sens. Edmund Muskie and Hubert Humphrey are felt to have paid dangerous blackmail to the peace wing of the Democratic Party.

Israel has in truth lived too long in the shadow of a Soviet military threat. The threat will turn from shadow to substance if the United States continues to neglect the world balance of power — or that, at any rate, is the belief of the hard-headed Israelis.

Hence any American politician who seems vowed to continued neglect of the power balance is regarded as a danger here no matter how many Israeli bond rallies he may have addressed.

These lurking feelings, though only privately expressed, are bound to give any American an uncomfortable sense of the burden of responsibility the United States must carry in this weary world.

If the Kremlin has not miraculously changed, it is obvious that Soviet opportunities in the Middle East and elsewhere will be much increased if the United States chooses a soft-minded administration with ingrained delusions about Soviet power and Soviet purposes.

It is equally obvious that this sort of American election result will be far less likely if the Soviets act in the interval in a really frightening manner, particularly in the Middle East.

Normally, such analysis of current Soviet behavior would have to be dismissed as groundless. But there are two reasons against doing so at this time.

The first reason is the exceptional personal position attained in Washington by the Soviet ambassador, Anatoly Dobrynin. With his range of personal contacts, Dobrynin must be vividly aware of the way that overly frightening Soviet actions can affect all the American pre-election equations.

As to the second reason above-mentioned, it is the one really hard fact discernible among the uncertainties of the Middle Eastern lull. For the time being, the Soviets are using all their influence, particularly in Egypt, to prevent the Arabs from reopening the active phase of the war with Israel.

Care for the Israelis cannot be the motive, since the Kremlin has spent billions of rubles on arms for Egypt alone. Yet Egypt's President Anwar El Sadat is under strong Kremlin pressure to prolong the de facto cease-fire.

And this looks very much as though the Kremlin wanted to put off a showdown here in the hope of a more propitious occasion later on in Washington.

Thieu and democracy

The concern of our leaders for the state of South Vietnamese democracy shows that the old Wilsonian virus continues to run in our veins. It is partly the fault of Lyndon Johnson and (less so) Richard Nixon.

Mr. Johnson was forever talking about how it was America's goal to secure the right of the South Vietnamese to have a government of their choice, and there are echoes of the same kind of thing in the presidential rhetoric of his successor.

In fact, Mr. Nixon was telling people long before he became president that the United States had no business in South Vietnam except insofar as our presence there related to American security, and it is of precious little bearing on American security whether President Thieu runs against one or a dozen opponents.

It was a dozen candidates (by the way) that he ran against the last time around, and of course the critics were dissatisfied with that performance. They kept saying that he was a minority president, which is true: so was Abraham Lincoln and so, for that matter, is Richard Nixon.

It is extraordinarily disappointing to admirers of Senator Henry Jackson that he should at this point come forward to say that if he is not satisfied that President Thieu is reelected as the result of an authentic democratic exercise, he will "rethink" his support of our venture in Vietnam.

There may be reasons enough to rethink our venture in Vietnam, but democratic scruple is hardly one of them.

The South Vietnamese electoral tangle is mystifying to men of occidental orientation, but we ought to make an effort to understand.

We are dealing with a country whose total experience with democracy is younger than that of an American 18-year old. We are talking about a country ravaged by disorder, tumult, inflation, terror.

The question that Senator Jackson should be asking himself is: what outcome would least likely result in the undoing of the agonizing effort of the past four years?

Big Minh, a popular figure who withdrew from the race, eight years ago conducted the assassination of the incumbent President, a development we now accept as an overture to the chaos that precipitated American involvement.

Professor Harry Jaffa wrote hauntingly a few years ago, in an essay on the historical meaning of civil liberties, that "No American statesman ever violated the ordinary maxims of civil liberties more than did Abraham Lincoln, and few seem to have been more careful of them than Jefferson Davis."

"Yet the cause for the sake of which the one slighted these maxims was human freedom, while the other, claiming to defend the forms of constitutional government, found in those forms a ground for defending and preserving human slavery."

It is such an analysis as this that we need to meditate. Is the prospect under a re-elected Thieu, running without formal opposition, better than the prospect of a Thieu government undermined by an American government which is overwhelmed by the kind of scrupulosity identified centuries ago by theologians as a moral excess that lapses into sinfulness?

One notes sadly that the U.N. is getting into the act. The commentary in the current issue of a journal of opinion is apt:

"Let's face it. There's something unsatisfactory about an election in which there is only one candidate, and so we hope that U Thant will instantly urge fair and unrigged elections in Albania, Algeria, Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussia, Congo (Brazzaville), Congo (Kinshasa), Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, Greece, Guinea, Haiti, Hungary, Indonesia, Iraq, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Libya, Malawi, Mongolia, Morocco, Nepal, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Rwanda, Saudi Arabia, South Yemen, Spain, Sudan, Syria, Thailand, Tunisia, Ukraine SSR, USSR, United Arab Republic, Tanzania, Yemen, Yugoslavia and Qatar. Don't forget Qatar, U."

We want your 1972 Chevrolet to be the best car you've ever owned.

'72 Chevelle

You like things on the sporty side—but without all the growl. Try Chevelle. Whether you choose the SS, Malibu, Heavy Chevy, 300 Deluxe or the base Chevelle you've got a number of good things going for you. There's a modern flair to its lines and all the power you need (or as much as you want). It's the mid-size mover that's very big on value.

Malibu Sport Coupe

'72 Monte Carlo

You're an individualist. So you want a personal car. But at a Chevrolet kind of price. You've got it. Monte Carlo. Its lines are long and sweeping, pure and classically simple. The luxury is uncompromised. You get power steering, power front disc brakes, V8 power—standard. Monte Carlo. Drive it. It could be your car.

Monte Carlo Coupe

'72 Camaro

You've always had your eye on a Corvette. But the time's not right. Or you have a small family. Take the Super Hugger for a ride. Camaro—it's everything a sports car should be, plus it has four seats. Camaro clings on corners. Handles beautifully. And when you hit the straight-away you'll know Camaro has all the power you need. Camaro. You can tailor it just the way you want. Camaro. Closest thing to a 'Vette yet.

Camaro Rally Sport Coupe

'72 Nova

You like to get around with ease and economy. So it's Nova—the not-too-big, not-too-small, Chevrolet. Easy to own, to handle, to operate. And Nova is famous for its dependability. You can take five more like you, and their luggage, out on the highway or very smartly downtown. Nova. It's for you.

Nova Sedan

Caprice Sedan

Kingswood Estate Wagon

'72 Kingswood Estate

When you look at a wagon, you always look at the tailgate. Take an extra look at ours. It's different. Turn the key and the rear window automatically glides into the roof. Another turn and the counterbalanced gate drops down, and slides under the floor with one easy push. (Or you can even order a power gate). This is the tailgate for people who think a tailgate only gets in the way. It's the same with the rest of the Kingswood Estate wagon—good ideas and good engineering. And the luxury look outside. It's hard to believe this much wagon sells at a Chevrolet kind of price.

Impala Sport Coupe

'72 Impala

The '72 Impala adds a lot to your driving. By taking away the strain of manoeuvring with standard power steering. By putting standard power disc brakes up front. By making the Turbo-Hydra-matic automatic transmission standard with any V8. By putting, at each wheel, a big coil spring that's been computer-matched to your particular Impala's weight. And the beautiful thing about the looks of an Impala—is that it looks like an Impala. Beautiful.

'72 Caprice

The luxury car for those who could never afford one. With a choice of standard interiors, comfortable as your living room. Deep, luxurious foam-cushion seats with supportive "S" springs. Wood-like panelling. And outside? A new grille for '72. The smooth lines of a Big Chevrolet. New colors we know you're going to like.

Caprice has all the engineering features you've been looking for too. Double-panel roof that makes a quiet car quieter. Aluminized exhaust system so rust will have a tougher time of it. Steel inner fenders that protect the outside fenders. And more. Try Caprice. Today.

IT'S SCHOOLTIME

DRIVE WITH CHILDREN IN MIND!

KEEP THEM SMILING... DON'T LET TRAGEDY STRIKE

- DRIVE EXTRA CAREFULLY around schools and playgrounds!
- Be on the lookout for children when they walk to and from school! Your vacation from school children is over now!
- BE ON THE ALERT when you are near a school bus. Of course, they have to obey all the traffic rules. But give buses a break anyway... they carry priceless cargo!
- PARENTS, NEVER STOP TELLING children about the many traffic dangers! Only then can we hope to reduce traffic fatalities. One out of seven fatalities involves a school child. One out of ten fatal accidents is caused by a teen-age driver!
- DRIVERS! DON'T HURRY WHEN YOU DRIVE! We may as well face it — we cannot reduce casualties unless we slow down! Their lives are in the hands holding your steering wheel! The minute you may save isn't worth the life of a school child.
- HAVE YOUR CAR CHECKED by an expert! Any car that is not in perfect mechanical condition is a potential murder weapon! The few dollars you spend may save a life.
- PULL OFF THE ROAD when you're tired, and take a nap!
- DON'T DRIVE at all when you've had a drink. Drowsiness and drinking are responsible for most fatal accidents!

Ontario Opportunities for Youth programs varied

By DON McLEOD
TORONTO (CP) — There were 2,300 of them in Ontario. They spent just under $4 million of taxpayers' money in 580 separate ways of their own choosing.

They took children from pollution-ridden Hamilton out to Margaret Roy's farm for some fresh air and fun, lobbied London businessmen to hire former psychiatric patients, battled at Lakehead University in Thunder Bay to save the Newfoundland pine marten from extinction, and, all over Ontario, fought for clean air and water.

They were the Ontario "kids" in this summer's federal Opportunities for Youth program and, mirrored in the bulky catalogue of projects they initiated and administered, are many of their social values.

Some, like deep concern with the state of the environment, are well known.

Others, especially an overriding feeling for the plight of underprivileged children, may come as something of a surprise to the older generation. They launched innumerable programs to get city kids into the country, build recreational facilities for grade schoolers, take the handicapped on outings and try to help the mentally retarded.

STUDY POLLUTION

"That's it," said Dave Austin, OFY regional co-ordinator, pointing to a three-inch stack of mimeographed sheets on his desk. It was a list, by name, description, cost and number of people involved, of every OFY project in Ontario. Some provoke smiles but defy criticism.

Elora, Ont.: A Study of the Visual Aspects of Elora, a quaint little town.

Dryden, Ont.: Regional Sports Program—to give Indians of Lac Seul something to do.

Financially, the biggest single grant in Canada was $177,000 to the Canadian Association for a Healthy Environment at Windsor. It covers 49 individual environment projects in Ontario, including oil spillage at Kingston, effects of Toronto urban growth and noise, mercury and phosphate pollution in the Windsor area.

Near Wawa, 140 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie, OFY joined the National Museum Board of Canada and members of the Canadian Forces in a $250,000 archeological exploration—Camp Big Dig. In the process, the site provided transient youth accommodation in tents.

Among the smaller grants, 15 young persons were involved in recreational development in Winona, with $7,500 from the fund and eight others, with $7,300, were doing similar work at Red Lake, 180 miles north of Fort Francis, near the Manitoba border.

Besides the children's programs, environment is the other predominant category.

There are dozens of pollution and anti-pollution studies and campaigns, from an Ottawa group's efforts to develop a clean steam engine to a beach cleanup at Scarborough and a Windsor survey of what businessmen think of Pollution Probe.

The problems of the youth subculture rank high. Drop-in centres, crisis intervention clinics, drug counselling services and street workers blossomed under OFY from Kapuskasing to Whitby and London to Nipigon.

The actual cost of the Ontario projects was $3,935,539.20 and, with many finished, or nearing completion, provincial OFY officials are hoping to preserve a perfect record. Not one had to be cut off from funds for failure to fulfill its contract.

There were a few close scrapes.

MP OBJECTED

Included were two Guelph projects, a free store where used articles are dispensed to the needy, and Huckleberries, a recreational and nutritional aid program for children.

Alf Hales, Conservative member of the Commons for Wellington, refused to present cheques for $6,400 to the nutrition program and $4,250 to the store, saying the projects involved U.S. draft-dodgers and were extensions of one another. Project officials, after an investigation, dismissed his contentions and issued the cheques.

In Hamilton, Northword Magazine folded after only two of a planned three issues were published, because of lack of advertising. This did not violate its contract and any left-over funds will be returned to OFY officials.

Here are some of the features you'll find on the 1972 Pontiacs.

Read about them.

Then compare them with others. Stack them up against your own standard of value.

Then come in and see the new cars at your Pontiac dealer's.

We believe you'll find the real value you've been looking for.

You know you can always count on Pontiac to introduce the kind of newness that means something more than just an extra dressing of tinsel.

Like Endura, the too-tough-to-be-ture front end material, introduced on GTO, yours on every Pontiac Firebird and now available on many LeMans models. They always keep function as well as beauty in mind.

This year, on all their full-size models, Pontiac's engineers have turned their attention to the little bumps and bruises of everyday driving life.

They've fitted two steel boxes filled with a resilient material between the front bumper and the frame. On minor impact, this material compresses to absorb energy, then returns to its original shape. And the bumper returns to position.

In addition, they've provided you with the option of ordering a thick strip of rubber-like material that runs the whole width of both front and rear bumpers to help guard against scratches and dings.

So now, when you leave your 1972 full-size Pontiac on its own...it stands a better chance of looking after itself.

Of course, every full-size Pontiac offers many other value features. Like double-panel roof construction with a perforated inner panel that helps cut down inside noise. Draft-free, upper level ventilation. Side guard beams in all the doors. Engines designed to run on no-lead or low-lead gasolines. Power front disc brakes, power steering and, on V8 models, automatic transmission, all standard.

Pontiac's trim-size LeMans also has something new and exciting to offer you in 1972.

A new luxury series, called, not surprisingly, Luxury LeMans.

It has a distinctive new grille, deluxe wheel covers, rear wheel fender skirts, and liberal (but not heavy-handed) additional, bright metal trim. Inside there's an instrument panel with the look of rare Ceylonese teak. A "soft" rimmed steering wheel. And comfort. Real comfort. Inches of soft foam padding. Rich fabrics. Plush carpet. And vinyls so soft you could easily mistake them for leather.

And Luxury LeMans, like the famous GTO, is only one of 8 trim-size Pontiacs that aim to give you all the value you'll be looking for this year.

Ventura II, Pontiac's newest baby, is a pocket-sized, pocket-priced beauty that is proving so popular that just about all we changed for 1972 was the nameplate.

Ventura II is the kind of low-price car that takes a little knowing before you can appreciate all those fine Pontiac touches. So come in and we'll introduce you. Soon.

Firebird for 1972 is Pontiac's great-looking sports car that gives you all the luxury you want and all the sporty performance you want—at a price that will make Firebird most wanted by sports fans. All this is a mere smattering of the features and values you'll be finding on the 1972 Pontiacs.

Hints on stamps

By M. M. Woodman

Good news for you stamp collectors in the Eastern Townships. The Phila-Sherbrooke Stamp Club have a new location. They have worked hard this summer and have obtained use of the large hall in the Ecole Pelletier at 68 Jacques Cartier Boulevard North, Sherbrooke.

Their meetings will be on the 2nd and 4th Wednesdays of each month from September till June, with the first one being held on September 15, at 8 p.m.

Mr. Clovis Roy is the President and may be contacted at his home after 3 p.m., at 864-4703, or at work from 7 a.m. till 3 p.m., Monday to Friday, at 864-4393.

Now, to get to this Ecole Pelletier is very simple; in fact, I think that I may even be able to find it. If you are going up King St. towards Montreal, just turn right on either Chartier St. or Jacques Cartier Boulevard, and you will see a large school with loads of parking space for your car.

If you have no car, there are plenty of city buses that go up King West. Get off at the corner of Jacques Cartier, and just walk a short distance north, and you will be right at the school. There are only three steps up to the hall, so I am informed.

Another feature is that they would very much appreciate the English collectors joining with them; in fact, I believe that the Treasurer is none other than our old friend Frederick Smith. I can assure you that they are a good bunch of ladies and gentlemen, and you won't hear anything said about being either French or English. The talk is simply stamps and more stamps, and of course, it's a good chance to brush up on your French.

If you attend, and I hope you will, you will find other English there, and most of the French members speak both. I cannot make the first meeting but will do my best to be there at the next.

The United Nations are releasing two stamps the 8 cent and 13 cent in U.S. Funds, and the F.s. 0.30 and the F.s. 0.50 stamps in Swiss Francs.

These will be released on September 21, and I believe will be pictured here for you to see what they look like in black and white.

The colors are as follows: the 8 per cent value is green, red, brown and yellow, the 13 cents is blue, red and yellow; the F.s. 0.30 is blue, red, brown and yellow and the F.s. 0.50 is green, red and yellow.

There will be 2,600,000 of the 8 cent and 2,200,000 of the F.s. 0.30. The 13 cent will see 2,100,000 and the F.s. 0.50 will be only 2,000,000.

Cookshire

Mrs. Lettie Harris entertained on Sunday, Sept. 5, 1971, in honor of her stepfather, who was celebrating his 95th birthday.

The living-room and dining-room were decorated with variegated flowers. Mr. Kingsley was the recipient of a number of gifts for which he was most grateful.

Mrs. B.G. Goyette, of Sherbrooke, and Mrs. E.S. Heatherington played a number of piano selections.

Refreshments were served, which included the proverbial birthday cake, which had been made by Mrs. Frank Hurd. Mrs. K. Currier poured, and Mrs. A.W. Standish cut and served the cake, assisted by Mrs. Goyette.

Mr. Thomas Kingsley is in fairly good health, considering his age, and his friends wish him much future happiness.

Quite a large number of town folks attended the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Barter which was held in the Lennoxville Anglican Church Hall Saturday evening, Sept. 4, 1971. The Barter were former residents of Cookshire, and it was very pleasant meeting their children and sharing in the honored couples' festivities of the evening.

Miss Donna Standish will be taking a science course at the University of New Brunswick, and Christopher will continue with his 3rd year in the arts course at the same university.

Miss Evelyn Gaudine will resume her studies at Mount Allison University.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Sutor, of Whitefield, N.H., were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Drennan.

Mr. and Mrs. Garth Dockeray have returned to Bagotville, after having spent part of their holidays with Mr. and Mrs. R.G. Hodge and part of their holidays in the British Isles and on the Continent.

Mr. J. French, Mrs. L. Parry and Mrs. O.C. Farnsworth were Sunday dinner guests of Mrs. J.D. McFadyen who were also entertaining Mr. and Mrs. A.L. Farnsworth, of Cornwall, Ont.

Mr. Douglas Matthews will be taking his final year in the business course at Bishop's University.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Mrs. J.L. Wooten and family in the death of the late Mr. J.L. Wooten.

Danville

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Deschesne of Manchester, N.H. are enjoying a holiday at their summer home at Trout Brook. They were joined on the weekend by their son, Mr. David Deschesne, Mrs. Deschesne and daughter Dawn of Manchester and by Mr. and Mrs. Murrey Barlow and family of this place and their houseguest, Miss Mildred Gilchrist of Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Stevens of Galt, Ont., spent Labor Day weekend as guests of Mr. Stevens' mother, Mrs. Hilda Stevens.

First nomination of officers for the forthcoming year was one of the main items on the agenda on Tuesday evening when Sister Mona Taylor, Vice-Grand presided in the absence of the Noble Grand, Sister Marguerite Morrill. Several other items of business were brought to the attention of the members, including invitations to two District Meetings as well as to Grand Master's Day at the Edith Kathan Home, Brome, on Sunday Sept. 12th. A letter was received from Sis. Irene Sexton, District Deputy President of LaTuque. Installation in this Lodge will be on Oct. 23rd at 9:30 a.m. The Charter was draped in memory of the late Sis. Verona Williams, a past President of the Rebekah Assembly and mother of Sis. Margaret Sanborne, the present one. Members will cater to the District IOOF meeting on Oct. 2.

On 22 October two new U.N. Regular Stamps will be put in service. They are the 8 cent and the 60 cent.

The 8 cent stamp, purple, blue, green, yellow and red, the revised rate for first class, domestic postage, will be printed in photogravure by Heraclio Fournier, S.A., Spain, in an initial quantity of 3,500,000. The stamp was designed by Olav S. Mathieser of Denmark, and will measure 41 mm. horizontally by 26 mm. vertically, perforation to perforation.

The 60 cent stamp, yellow, blue, red and black, the revised postage rate for special delivery, will be printed in photogravure by the Government Printing Bureau, Japan, in an initial quantity of 2,500,000. The stamp was designed by Robert Perrot of France, and will measure 41 mm. horizontally by 26 mm. vertically, perforation to perforation.

Do you remember me telling you about those labels from Kaulbach Islands off the Coast of Nova Scotia? Well, they came in okay, and I had several people who asked for them, so these were put aside.

I showed a sheet to a collector and he took the whole sheet; now I do not have a single set on hand.

If more of you would like a set, just write me, and I will try to obtain a few more sets. Just remember that these are not Postage Stamps as we know them, and a real collector calls them labels. They have to be placed on the back of the letter, with the regular Canadian Postage on the upper front right side of the envelope.

My First Day Covers of the Summer Maple Leaf have arrived, but the stamps and the Official First Days from the Agency have yet to arrive. Wonder what excuse the Post Office Department will give me this time.

I have just had the pleasure of sending to the U.S.A. an order for over $200.00 of Older Canadian Plate Blocks. It shows that there is an interest in almost anything to do with postage stamps, that are not too easily available.

Entertainment editor remembers

WINNIPEG (CP) —

"Things are different nowadays. Jane Fonda smokes pot during an interview, and stars who have borne children out of wedlock discuss it with the press. The barriers are down."

That's the assessment of 65-year-old Frank Morriss, who retired in August from the Winnipeg Tribune after a 43-year stint as an entertainment writer, "recording happenings in that blessed industry known as Show Business."

In his last regular column in the newspaper, Mr. Morriss recaps some of the highlights of his career.

"I met all the stars and because, I suppose, I have an affinity with show people, we got along together beautifully. Luise Rainer, who was going down the ladder rapidly after winning two Oscars in a row, told me all her troubles."

"I saw Judy Garland learn Over The Rainbow at a battered upright piano. Memories come flooding in. CAUGHT ON RUN"

"John Barrymore, who never granted interviews if he could help it, gave me one in 1938, shortly before he died. I was supposed to stay 15 minutes, and I remained for two hours, while Barrymore spoke of his experiences, and I remember his remark about his marriage to Elaine Barrie, who had caught him on the run.

"My wife," said Mr. Barrymore, in his most courtly manner, "will never go anywhere without her mother."

"And then, after one of those wonderful pauses, he added: 'But her mother will go anywhere.'"

"He told me the way Romeo should be played. 'He wasn't a starry-eyed young man. He was a product of the Renaissance. There's only one way to play him. Just like a dog in heat.'"

"Mr. Barrymore was right! 'And after meeting Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor separately and together, I was the first to hear of their plans to marry at the time when every newshawk was curious about Liz's future. It made the front page of most newspapers in the world and Hedda Hopper and the London Times were on the long-distance phone to ask how I'd done it."

BEAUTIFUL WOMAN
"The paper I was working for at the time, the Toronto Globe and Mail, stuck it at the bottom of page 16! For the record, Elizabeth Taylor was, when she was very young, the most beautiful woman in the world. No wonder she had such a storm-tossed marital career—a wonderful chassis that didn't come equipped with four-wheel brakes."

"The first time I met Mario Lanza, he stood on the running board of my car and sang an aria—jumping off, just as he reached a high note, at the MGM studio gates."

"The most consistently cooperative of the stars has been Joan Crawford. When you come to Hollywood or New York, you don't phone Joan; she phones you."

"And the friendship I cherish most was the one with Charles Laughton. When I went to Britain for the first time, he wrote a letter to David Lean that makes my head swim whenever I read it."

SWORE LIKE BLIGH

"He once got out of his bed to rush to a radio studio for me to do an interview, live, after I found the pre-recorded interview tape was no good. He swore at me like Captain Bligh, but he did it."

"The bigger the star, the easier it is to get an interview, or make a friendship. It is only the small ones who will never get anywhere; they don't take time out to be charming, or caustic."

"The hardest interview to write is the one with Bette Davis. She says the most outrageous things, little items that would get you into a lawsuit, and then says: 'Darling, why don't you write that down. Everybody knows he's a dirty, rotten, stinking little pervers. Just put it in the paper. I'll back you up.'"

"I bet she would, but I never had the nerve."

"I knew Marilyn Monroe, and she was very sweet, and not particularly bright, and she had no background or training for stardom. She trusted people too easily, and she was surrounded by jackals."

The 1972 Vega incorporates all the changes you asked for.

It now has a glove compartment.

Adding a glove compartment may seem to be a small thing. The fact is that having one was a big thing for a lot of people, so we are happy to oblige.

The 1972 Vega also boasts an engineering modification. The exhaust system has been improved.

And that's about it as far as the difference between a '72 Vega and a '71 is concerned. And that's the way it's always going to be. We'll only change Vega to make it better. (A policy designed to keep up the value of your Vega, no matter what year it happens to be.)

So the '72 Vega story is not what's changed, but what's stayed the same.

Outside, the '72 is the image of the '71. Pert, eager-looking, with lines a lot of other cars must envy. And the whole neat little package sits very comfortably on an easy-to-handle, 97-inch wheelbase.

Inside, you'll still find front bucket seats and powered flow-thru ventilation. There's a full double-panel steel roof. And a host of GM safety features, including side-guard door beams.

The 1972 Vega also sports that unique aluminum/silicon engine. Overhead cam, 4 cylinders and 2300 cubic centimeters. It's light so it can be big, giving you very snappy acceleration and "no-strain" performance up long steep hills and over 8-lane freeways.

Because Vega is such a going concern, stopping has to be very sure. Big, 10" disc brakes up front for sure.

There's something else you get from Vega: choice. The standard Vega is the 2-door Sedan, but you might prefer the Hatchback Coupe, Kamback Waggon, or if you're after a little business, the Panel Express truck.

But no matter which Vega you buy, and no matter how you buy it—as is (which is plenty), or lavish it with options and special features—you know how we feel about it.

We want your 1972 Chevy Vega to be the best car you've ever owned.

Etcheverry decides: Denson won't be in Stamps game tonight

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Etcheverry had good news Tuesday afternoon for his old foe, Calgary Stampers coach Jim Duncan.

Etcheverry, head coach of Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference, decided that injured running back Moses Denson will not be in his lineup when his club plays host to the Stamps in a CFL interlocking game tonight.

Denson, on the Montreal injured list since Aug. 29 because of a bad ankle, likely will return to action when the Alouettes travel to Edmonton to visit the Eskimos next Wednesday.

"We don't know whether the Alouettes will use Moses Denson or not, but if they do we have to watch for him," Duncan said before the Etcheverry decision. "Montreal has some good half-backs but he's the most dangerous as far as we're concerned."

With or without Denson in it, tonight's game shapes up as a battle between two of the top defensive units in the Canadian Football League this season.

STAMPS STINGY

The Stamps, currently leading the Western Football Conference with an 8-1 record, have scored 212 points in their nine games and allowed their opponents only a meagre 77, 100 fewer than their nearest competitors in the West Saskatchewan Roughriders.

The Alouettes have given up 130 points as they established a 4-3 record going into tonight's game. That's just 12 more points than the Eastern Football Conference's defensive leaders, Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

But in contrast to the Stamps balance, the Alouettes, defending Grey Cup champions, have boasted only a sputtering offence all season and have counted only three more points than have been scored against them.

Tonight's interlocking game will be televised nationally by the CTV network, with the kickoff at 8:05 pm EDT.

"They do have a good defence," Montreal head coach Sam Etcheverry allowed, but he wasn't impressed by the fact the Stamps lead the CFL in interceptions with 26.

"Calgary has some fine defensive backs, but the key to that whole defence is the front four," he said. "They put on such a rush that they often rush the quarterback into throwing a bad pass."

REVENGE TITLE LOSS

After defeating the Stampers in last year's Grey Cup contest, the Alouettes met the Calgary club twice this season in pre-season exhibitions. They lost on both occasions and in the second game in Calgary appeared to have an extra man in their backfield as lineman John Helton of Calgary continually harassed the Montreal quarterbacks.

"I hope we won't have that problem this time," Etcheverry said.

"Calgary's rush overpowers you. They don't use any tricks, they just use their strength and

Als-Stamps game tonight will be defensive struggle

MONTREAL (CP) — Tonight's Canadian Football League encounter between Calgary Stampers and Montreal Alouettes shapes up to be a defensive struggle—the kind which will bring John Helton's name to mind by the time the smoke clears.

It used to be that mere mention of a game with the Stampers would bring up the name of middle linebacker Wayne Harris, the outstanding defensive star.

Harris is still around but the name which instills respect in the minds of opposing linemen is Helton, a giant defensive tackle.

"The best in the country," says Montreal centre Gene Cepetelli, "and that's saying a lot."

"People are always referring to someone as the best in the country and they forget it covers a lot of ground."

"But, with the possible exception of Regina's Ed McQuarters, there isn't anybody who comes at you like Helton," he said.

The object of Cepetelli's respect sat at the end of the Calgary bench after Tuesday's practice, busily unwinding yards of tape around his knee.

The tape protects an extended knee ligament that some people thought might keep him out of tonight's contest and Saturday's confrontation with the Toronto Argonauts.

SAYS KNEE OK

"It'll be all right, just one of those silly injuries that come from getting kicked by a lineman falling away from the play," the big tackle said.

The Montreal camp was quiet Tuesday after running through a brisk final workout for the game to be televised nationally by the CTV network.

Kickoff time is 8:05 p.m. EDT.

come right at you. That's something we'll have to try to stop."

One member of the Als who may find his activities increased in an effort to blunt the effectiveness of Calgary's front four is wide receiver John Carlos.

Carlos, who has seen only spot action in the two games he has played since coming here, could be the counter action needed to open up the Stamps defence.

In Hamilton Saturday as the Als dropped a 10-9 decision to the Ticats, Montreal quarterback Sonny Wade threw only one long bomb to the former Olympic sprinter. It fell just out of his reach.

PLANS CARLOS THREAT

Etcheverry has decided that Wade will have to go to Carlos more often, "especially when they cover him one-on-one."

"If the other team can see that you aren't throwing him the ball when he's open, it doesn't make much sense."

The Stamps arrived here and scheduled a workout late Tuesday afternoon.

Coach Jim Duncan reported five injuries, none of which he felt would keep the players out of action. Helton has a bruised knee, middle linebacker Wayne Harris and safety Howard Starks sore ankles, halfback Jesse Mims a bruised hip, and quarterback Jerry Keeling has not completely recovered from pulled tendons and jammed fingers in his left hand picked up Sept. 12 in a game against British Columbia Lions.

"They'll suit and play, but we've had to restrict the running they've done in practices," Duncan said of his injured players.

"Hopefully, we'll be all right because I know Sam and his boys will be looking for us, particularly after losing in the last minute to Hamilton on Saturday night."

Jonas, Heron share honors

TORONTO (CP) — Although quarterback Don Jonas of Winnipeg Blue Bombers is commanding considerable attention as scoring leader of the Western Football Conference, he may soon have to share some of the glory with a team-mate.

While Jonas maintained a comfortable 30-point edge on his nearest rival in total points, one of his running backs, Mack Heron, is closing in on the records for kickoff returns.

Western Football Conference statistics, released this week, show that Heron has returned 28 kickoffs for 791 yards. The single season CFL record is 32, set by Calgary Stampers' Pete Thodos in 1952. Dave Rainey, now with Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference, holds the yardage record of 930, set with Winnipeg Blue Bombers in 1968.

AWAITING THEIR TURN — Young major league hopefuls watch as fellow teammates practise shooting at the net. This is a regular part of pre-game warmup exercises at the Junior A Beavers' hockey training camp currently underway. The Beavers start regular season games in a little more than a week's time.

McNally blanks Yankees 5-0, Orioles victorious

Dave McNally, veteran left hander of Baltimore Orioles, tamed the New York Yankees 5-0 on five hits Tuesday night for his 20th victory of the season.

McNally, the winningest pitcher in Oriole history with 134 victories, is the first American Leaguer to win at least 20 games in four consecutive seasons since the Yanks' Red Ruffing did it from 1936-39.

And the Orioles' southpaw did it this year despite missing 38 days of the season because of an inflamed muscle in his pitching arm.

The Orioles' victory, coupled with Detroit Tigers' 3-2 10-inning loss to Boston Red Sox, reduced Baltimore's title-clinching number to three over the second-place Tigers. The Orioles lead Detroit by 7½ games. They have eight games remaining to the Tigers' seven.

Meanwhile, Oakland Athletics, having already wrapped up the West title, lost a fight-marred two-night doubleheader with Chicago White Sox, the White Sox winning the opener 5-1 and the second game 6-2.

Washington Senators trounced Cleveland Indians 9-1 before the league's owners approved the moving of their franchise to the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Kansas City Royals defeated California Angels 6-2 and Milwaukee Brewers downed Minnesota Twins 4-2.

WALKED ONLY ONE

McNally, 20-5, moved the Orioles closer toward clinching the East championship by shacking the Yankees on seven strikeouts and only one walk. Paul Blair's fourth-inning homer gave the Orioles an early lead.

They added three runs in the eighth on Andy Etcheverry's bases-loaded single and Dave Johnson's steal of home.

Boston dimmed Detroit's slim title hopes, edging the Tigers on Luis Aparicio's run-scoring single in the 10th. The hit scored rookie Cecil Cooper, who had led off the inning with a pinch single and was sacrificed to second.

The fight in the Oakland-Chicago doubleheader erupted with one out in the White Sox' ninth. It was triggered when Chicago pitcher Bart Johnson hit the Oakland's Mike Epstein with a pitch in the eighth. Epstein tossed his bat towards the mound and exchanged angry words with Johnson as he went to first base.

Then, in the ninth, Oakland reliever Rollie Fingers threw a pitch at Johnson. The White Sox pitcher bunted the ball towards Epstein at first. Epstein chased Johnson back toward the plate and knocked him down by slamming the ball against his jaw. Both benches emptied and a wild melee ensued.

Johnson suffered a wrenched neck and a sprained wrist, while Epstein received a bruised eye.

HITS 23RD HOMER

In the second game, Carlos May knocked in two runs and Pat Kelly had three RBI with a pair of singles. Sal Bando cracked his 23rd homer for Oakland.

Only 1,311 fans showed up at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington to watch the lameduck Senators beat Cleveland behind the seven-hit pitching of Dick Bosman. Dave Nelson collected three hits, including a homer, drove in two runs and stole two bases for the Senators.

Dick Drago posted his 17th victory, most by a Kansas City pitcher in one season, checking the Angels on seven hits.

Johnny Briggs' two homers powered Milwaukee past Minnesota. The Twins' Harmon Killebrew hit his 26th homer of the season and 513th lifetime, putting him into sole possession of seventh place on the all-time list, one ahead of Ernie Banks and Eddie Mathews.

At Oshawa, Ont., Bob Leiter paced Penguins with two goals. Rene Robert and Bob Birdsell scored one each. Bob Sheehan and Gary Creteau tallied for the Seals.

Dies from heat prostration

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Bill Arnold, offensive guard on the University of North Carolina football team, died Tuesday, 15 days after suffering heat prostration during the squad's Labor Day workout.

Dr. Arthur L. Finn, one of several physicians who attended the 20-year-old from Staten Island, N.Y., said death was due to a heat stroke and complicating liver and kidney failures. Arnold, a six-foot-two, 224-pounder, collapsed while running windsprints at the end of the drill.

Seals option players away

BALTIMORE (AP) — California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League optioned three players to Baltimore Clippers of the American League for the 1971-72 season, it was announced Tuesday.

Terry Reardon, Clippers coach-general manager, said the three are Randy Rota, 21, left winger and second leading scorer for Providence Reds of the AHL last year, centre Peter Laframboise and right winger Neil Nicholson.

Appointed director

QUEBEC (CP) — Camille Henry, a former forward with New York Rangers and St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League, has been appointed recreation director of the nearby town of Villeneuve.

Henry, 38, retired as a player two seasons ago and coached Kansas City Blues of the Central Hockey League for part of last season.

His appointment was announced Tuesday by Mayor Gerard Grenier of Villeneuve.

Thomas to be reinstated

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys announced Tuesday that Duane Thomas' request for reinstatement from the retired list has been approved by Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League.

However, the Cowboys said he has not yet been accepted by the team because of plebeitis in his left leg.

The Cowboys said Thomas will join the team Wednesday morning and work "until such time he is well."

Riders have a new QB

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders may dress a new quarterback Sunday for their Eastern Football Conference game against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

He is Paul Brothers, a castoff from British Columbia Lions who now is on a five-day trial with Riders.

"I haven't reached any decision yet," coach Jack Gotta said Tuesday. "It's not something you rush into. We still want to have a further look at Brothers."

Riders are in the league cellar, two points back of Montreal Alouettes and Hamilton Tiger-Cats, although they have played two more games than the other two clubs.

Speculation here is that Gotta may release either Gary Wood or Rick Cassata to make room for Brothers.

Neither of Ottawa's present quarterbacks was impressive last Sunday when Riders dropped a 26-17 decision to Toronto Argos.

May investigate trade

MONTREAL (CP) — President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League said Tuesday he had been asked by California Golden Seals to investigate a trade made recently with Chicago Black Hawks.

Campbell said the California management were asking that the trade which saw goalie Garry Smith go to Chicago in return for goalie Gerry Desjardins, winger Gerry Pinder and minor league forward Kerry Bond be declared void because Desjardins was injured.

"I'll have to get the facts from both teams as to what the deal was," the NHL president said.

"Then I'll have to find out if I have any jurisdiction in a matter of this sort."

Announces incentives

OTTAWA — The Honorable Jean Marchand, minister of regional economic expansion, announced last week that 21 firms would receive incentives under the Regional Development Incentives Act for projects which will create an estimated 809 new jobs in the province of Quebec.

Locally, Barmish Brothers Inc. of Montreal will receive an incentive of approximately $10,000 to expand its dress and slack plant in Magog. The expansion will create an estimated 42 new jobs.

The incentive is based on a rate of 15 per cent of the approved capital costs, estimated at $68,000.

Penn-Hafner Elastic Fabrics Ltd. will receive an incentive of approximately $44,000 to expand its powernet fabric plant in Granby. The project will create an estimated four new jobs.

The incentive is based on a rate of 10 per cent of the approved capital costs, estimated at $442,000.

NHL schedule not unlike last year's calendar

MONTREAL—The National Hockey League's 55th season officially opens with two games on the West Coast Friday, Oct. 8. To open the 546-game schedule, Toronto Maple Leafs visit the Canucks at Vancouver while Los Angeles Kings are at Oakland against the Seals.

As in 1970-71, this season's schedule is spread over a 25-week period with 26 weekends. It finishes Sunday, April 2, with six games.

The Stanley Cup Playoffs this season will have a different look. The first-place team in each division plays the fourth-place team of that division while the second and third-place teams meet in the other quarter-final.

Previously, the first and third-place teams met and second and fourth-place teams faced each other in the quarter-finals.

Games will be played each night of the week, although there is only one Monday game. Ironically, it will be in Montreal—the first time a regular-season game has been scheduled for a Monday at the Forum—March 13 with the defending Stanley Cup champion Canadiens facing Philadelphia Flyers.

As usual, more than half the schedule comprises weekend games. There are 143 games scheduled for Saturday and the same for Sundays. Next most popular night is Wednesday when 117 games are scheduled. There are 67 Thursday games, 44 Tuesday and 31 Friday games.

All 14 teams will have played at least one game by Sunday Oct. 10. In addition to the four teams involved in the opening-night games, New York begins its schedule at Montreal, Oct. 9.

That same night, Minnesota is at Detroit, Chicago at St. Louis and Philadelphia at Pittsburgh. Oct. 10 has five games scheduled, including the first matinee—Los Angeles at Vancouver.

That night, Toronto is at Oakland against California Golden Seals. New York is at Boston, Detroit at Chicago and Pittsburgh at Buffalo.

During the final week of the schedule, the pre-1967 teams face each other while the post-1967 teams are scheduled against each other.

The 25th Annual NHL All-Star Game, in which the West Division All-Stars oppose those of the East Division, will be played Tuesday, Jan. 25, at the Metropolitan Sports Center, Bloomington, Minn.

Money, not lack of rides is said to be hitchhiker's problem

Ann Laughlin of Montreal staff of The Canadian Press spent two weeks this summer travelling through five European countries to see first-hand how young Canadian hitchhiking travellers were getting along. In this story she tells of some of the problems they encountered.

By ANN LAUGHLIN

LONDON (CP)—How young Canadians managed to reach most parts of Europe on a shoestring this summer was as varied as the places they stitched maple leaf flags.

"Money, not rides was the biggest problem," said Nick Soper an 18-year-old pre-med student from Corner Brook, Nfld., who financed three months hitchhiking from Spain to Scandinavia on $330.

He and partner Ken Campbell, also from Corner Brook, generally steered clear of cities with budget-breaking restaurants and bus fares. They rolled up in sleeping bags by the roads, cleaned up in lakes or public baths and learned to make sandwiches from "anything-like cheese and oranges in Spain."

"This way we're meeting more of people of countries we're travelling through," said Nick. "We've been invited to people's homes several times."

He said the Canadian flags on their packs have attracted people willing to chat and good rides.

Others have not been so lucky.

Highways outside such cities as Amsterdam and Munich bristle with as many as 40 outstretch thumbs each staking a hitching spot only a few paces from a neighbor.

Driven off the high-speed autobahns of Germany, hitchhikers tell of spending hours and sometimes days in highway ramp vigils or swarming around motorists in service stations seeking rides.

LONG HAIR HINDRENCE

France and Spain were notoriously meagre hitchhiking grounds this summer.

It took me six days to cover 400 miles from Nice to the Spanish border," said Denis Rouillard from Trois-Riviers, Que., who sported a blue and white fleur-de-lis on his pack.

"My flag helped in northern France but south people were very indifferent," he said. "The only people who talked to me were tourists."

Les Williams, 22 of Regina, decided to avoid hit-or miss hitchhiking by pooling resources with three friends to buy a $400 used van in Amsterdam.

But they found long hair sometimes repels repairmen.

"We blew the engine in Germany and the only repairman in town told us he had no time to fix it," said Les, whose soft brown hair sweeps just below ear level.

They were bailed out by a comparably hirsute German student who told them about the town's hairdressing preferences, found them another engine and installed it for $50.

"We also found out the van was worth half what we paid for it," said Les.

Van travelling kept basic expenses to a $1 a day but meant more through checks at border crossings, particularly when they ended up in East Germany—by mistake.

Rod Laver plays to win, no false modesty either

QUEBEC (CP)—Rod Laver is a heck of a guy, unless you happen to be facing him on a tennis court. That's because he's a heck of a great tennis player.

The five-foot-eight red-headed Australian is just as happy to drive a ball down your throat for a winning point, rather than take it easy and give you the remotest chance for a return shot.

"I'm here to win," Laver said at the Quebec international open tennis tournament this summer. "I wouldn't bother going out on the court if there was any doubt in my mind about me being able to do that."

"It would be self-defeating. There wouldn't be any sense in it would there?"

Laver, left-handed and one of the strongest players in the game, now makes his home in Newport Beach, Calif., where he is known as the Rocket by fellow competitors.

He has already won more than $200,000 on this season's tennis tour, one of the highest money-winners in any sport anywhere.

A refreshing thing about Laver is that he carries success well. There is no false modesty in his words after a winning match.

"It would be rubbing it in a little, I think, if I were to tell a player 'Well tough luck old chap, you had a few bad breaks.'"

"It would be hypocritical on my part because I think I'm the best."

Laver dominated the sport in the late 1960s and continues to do so now, at age 33.

He is the first player in tennis history to win, on two different occasions, the Grand Slam—Wimbledon, French National, U.S. National and Australian opens.

Opponents' serves often are returned at twice the speed they are sent. Well-placed shots often become routine returns in a match against Laver.

Players asked about Rod have a stock answer.

"He doesn't have any weaknesses. You go out there and pray that your game is right on and you don't make too many mistakes."

Says Argos purchase could be fatal for CFL

OTTAWA (CP)—The purchase of Toronto Argonauts by Toronto Telegram publisher John Bassett could lead to the downfall of the Canadian Football League. Ottawa Rough Rider owner David Loeb said last week.

Speaking to a B'nai B'rith dinner he said he is "not too worried about the fact that the Riders looked so poor in their loss at Montreal last Saturday night."

"But I'm deeply concerned with the possibility that Canada may lose pro football. John Bassett recently bought 99.5 per cent of Toronto Argonauts and I believe he wants to bring an NFL franchise to Toronto."

"He probably feels Toronto can support two pro clubs but I strongly disagree. Once an NFL team moves into Toronto, the CFL will be through there."

Bassett said in a Toronto interview last week he is not interested in moving into the NFL. But he said that Montreal would be interested in the United States league once it got a new stadium.

"When that time comes, we'll be ready to move too."

SEES GOOD SIGNS

Loeb said he sees some encouraging signs for the CFL in recent Canadian government actions.

"First of all, the government supported the Canadian Football League in banning cable television of home games and I believe this was done to guarantee the continuity of Canadian football."

"Secondly the Hamilton turf people were turned down in their request for an elimination of the tax for their artificial turf. I can't believe that the government would reject a $40,000 request of this kind and then subsidize a dome stadium in Toronto to the extent of $20 to $40 million."

Cliff Drysdale of South Africa, beaten by Laver in the semi-final action at the Quebec international open in July, said:

"He has the uncanny ability to make strong returns even when he seems to be completely off balance."

Laver has won the All-England singles title at Wimbledon four times, another first.

"I love playing there," he says. "Everything is so right."

They really know how to run a tournament."

Retirement to Laver might mean a return to Australia to teach the sport, but nothing is certain.

"I can't think about it too much; I have to concentrate on now," he adds.

"We'll see what the future is when it comes."

Meanwhile, Rod Laver continues to be the funny little red-headed guy who racks up the money.

Pair missed in Canadian motor racing circles

TORONTO (CP)—When the search was abandoned Aug. 25 for Eve and Ron White, many in Canadian motor racing began to wonder what they would do without them.

"There never was a team that contributed more to motorsport," said Jim Muzzin, president of the Canadian Racing Drivers Association.

"And it will be six months from now before people start realizing how much they were doing."

Ron White, 51, and his wife Eve, 52, were returning from an auto race at Mansfield, Ohio, Aug. 22 when their Cessna 182 aircraft disappeared in a storm in the Niagara area.

The Whites attended most major auto and motorcycle races together and Ron's reports appeared in The Globe and Mail while Eve wrote for the Toronto Star and The Canadian Press.

But writing about the sport was only a small part of their involvement.

Mike Duff, retired motorcycle rider, knew the Whites better than most.

They controlled the sport of motorcycling in Canada, really," said Duff.

"Eve was the editor of Canadian Motorcycling. Ron is past-president of the Canadian Motorcycling Association, and they've both been involved in many positions."

"Eve and Ron were primarily motivated by their own enthusiasm for motorsports. Only secondarily, they're business people who make their living from the sport."

Last spring, Eve received the media award from the drivers association, the first time in Canada a woman had been so honored for "outstanding service to the sport of motor racing."

The motorcycle association Award of Merit has gone to only four people: Duff, rider Yvon Duhamel, Ron White in 1966 and Eve White in 1968.

Ron, as JRW Associates, operated the Canadian office for the Watkins Glen, N.Y., race track, one of the most successful road racing circuits in North America.

Eve took over Canadian Motorcycling as a club organ and built it into a slick magazine sold on news-stands.

Together, the Whites organized the Canadian motorcycle team's annual trip to the six-day trials in Europe.

"Eve was the Canadian member of the international jury," said veteran rider Bill Sharples of Toronto, "and they arranged the trips."

Both also served terms of duty with the British Empire Motor Club. Ron as president and Eve as secretary and treasurer and Ron's work in auto sport included development of the Canadian Winter Rally.

"But," said Duff, "cars were really something they became interested in. Emotionally, they were more involved with motorcycles, because like any other oppressed group, motorcyclists seem to stick together."

"I'm sitting at my typewriter, trying to write my column about them for Cycle Canada."

Try a camping vacation When your money starts to dwindle

By ANN LAUGHLIN
AMSTERDAM (CP)—What do you do when the only beds left are in high-priced hotels and all you have is $10 and a few French francs in a fraying jeans pocket?

Peter Jansen 23 of Hamilton headed for Vondelpark where this summer up to 2,000 young people a night have camped free beside ponds and pathways, long the preserve of Sunday strollers and the occasional love-in.

Tents were banned as grass began to wither towards the summer's end but inhabitants improvised with plastic garbage bags, tarpaulins stretched between trees and brightly striped deck chair lean-tos.

Others sought shelter under an overpass straddling the pathways where radios blaring beside the rows of sleeping bags harmonized with traffic overhead.

The park project was one of several emergency accommodations plans provided by European cities bracing for the summer flood of young travellers that quickly swamped existing youth hostels, university residences, student-run hotels and cheap pensions.

It also gave Peter a job.

Working for $1.12 an hour in the baggage lock-up he was one of 30 young people from various countries paid by the city to maintain the park, clean the 12 toilets and cold water showers, staff the low-priced canteen and direct campers with problems to city health department medical and drug team workers located in an old school building near the park.

Most, like Peter were former park residents needing cash.

Peter hitch-hiked to Amsterdam from the beaches of Morocco where he had been supporting 10 people on his few hundred dollars, arriving here with barely enough to keep himself and his girlfriend for more than a day or two.

He retrieved empty bottles from bins and "whole unopened lunches that people just toss away," then worked as a cigarette machine operator for a "god-awful four weeks two days and 2½ hours."

He now lives in a houseboat commune on a canal and plans to find a new job in Amsterdam when the park project ends.

"Most park people are students with enough money just passing through," he said.

"This place draws them because it's cheap, a good place to meet people and open 24 hours a day."

He says the chief problems were thieves rifling sleepers' packs and drug-pushers, the target of constantly patrolling police and plainclothesmen.

Another Amsterdam project bedding down 1,500 people a night on foam rubber strips in three converted factories for 70 cents a head served as a model for Copenhagen's sleep-ins.

The Danes varied the basic mattress and cold water formula with a tent city, threw in a rib-sticking breakfast of bread, cheese and milk and said the plan kept an estimated 100,000 young visitors out of the parks and Danish disfavor.

Parks in London were officially out of bounds for weary travellers this summer but British hobbies frequently waited until dawn before waking those huddled under bushes and bandstands and asking them to move on.

Police handed the sleepers cards telling them about the 12,000 beds and mattresses into which the London Tourist Board's efficient multi-lingual youth division could book them for a 10-cent service charge.

John H. Williams board general manager said about 1,000 spaces priced from 80 cents to $3 were available every night.

Those left out of the city program were scouted by private organizations like Christian Action which operated a cheap, clean, bunk-filled tent camp with hot-water showers in a football field house.

Bailey and Britton help Expos edge Phillies 4-3

MONTREAL (CP) — Bob Bailey drove in four runs with a homer and a single and Jim Britton won his first game as a starter since 1969 as Montreal Expos trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 for a split of their National League doubleheader Tuesday. The Phils won the first game 5-4.

Bailey's homer, his 14th of the season, was his first at Jarry Park since July 1.

It came after Ron Hunt was hit by a pitch for the 48th time this season and a single by Rusty Staub.

Montreal added another run in the third inning off losing pitcher Ken Reynolds, 4-9, on a single by Woods, an error by Reynolds on a pick-off attempt and Bailey's run-scoring single.

Britton, who sat out the 1970 season after being acquired by Montreal from Atlanta Braves, was making his sixth start with the Expos this season.

The right-hander, now 2-3, pitched 7 1/3 innings before he was relieved by Mike Marshall. Britton gave up five hits, two walks and struck out two batters.

The win was his first as a starter since he beat Chicago Cubs on Aug. 21, 1969.

The Phillies chased him from the mound in the top of the eighth when Larry Bowa walked and Oscar Gamble singled with one out.

GIVE UP SINGLE

Marshall came in and gave up a single to Willie Montanez to score on run and then Deron Johnson singled to load the bases.

Greg Luzinski doubled to score two runs and then Marshall loaded the bases again by walking Don Money intentionally.

But he struck out pinch-hitter Tim McCarver and got Pete Koegel to ground into a fielder's choice to end the threat.

In the first game, the Phils exploded for five runs in the seventh inning and held on as the Expos rallied for three runs in the bottom of the eighth.

Montreal took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the fifth when Ron Fairly came home on a fielding error by Money.

But Oscar Gamble's sixth homer of the year, and two-run doubles by Roger Freed and winning pitcher Bill Champion, erased the deficit.

A two-run homer by Hunt and a run-producing fielder's choice by Jim Gosger accounted for Montreal's three runs in the eighth.

Champion evened his won-lost record at 3-3 while Carl Morton, 10-17, was charged with the loss.

San Francisco Giants and Los Angeles Dodgers continue to play like broken records, spinning around in circles and going nowhere fast.

It is possible Atlanta Braves can still walk away with the National League's Western Title, considering the way the Giants and Dodgers have been playing lately.

The Giants held on to a 1 1/2-game lead over the Dodgers in the West despite themselves as they lost their 13th game in the last 16, a 3-1 decision to Houston Astros Tuesday night.

The Dodgers also continued their inept play as they dropped a 9-3 contest to Cincinnati Reds for their fifth loss in seven games.

The third-place Braves, meanwhile, kept their dim title hopes alive with a 5-2 victory over San Diego Padres. The Braves moved within six games of San Francisco and in order to win the West, must take all their remaining six contests while hoping the Giants lose their last eight and the Dodgers slump badly.

CARDS STOP PIRATES

In another top National League game, St. Louis Cardinals beat Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4 as the Pirates failed for the second time to nail the East Division pennant. The Pirates still need just one victory to clinch the title.

Elsewhere, Chicago Cubs downed New York Mets 3-0.

Rookie catcher Larry Howard was the difference for Houston, lashing a two-run, tie-breaking homer in the seventh inning off San Francisco starter John Candelario.

The ball cleared the 406-foot marker in center field.

Cincinnati's Lee May murdered Los Angeles with a home run and double, good for five runs batted in.

May's three-run homer, his 38th clout of the season, capped a four-run fifth inning and then the brawny first baseman knocked in two more with a double in a three-run sixth.

HITS CAREER HIGH

Hank Aaron's 46th home run, a career high, plus a two-run shot by Darrell Evans and a solo blast by Ralph Garr led Atlanta over San Diego.

Aaron's first-inning homer, which put the Braves in front 10, erased a previous high of 45 with the old Milwaukee Braves in 1962. Evans unloaded a two-run shot in the second and Garr hit a homer in the third.

Jose Cruz broke a tie with a two-run homer in the seventh as St. Louis downed Pittsburgh.

Rookie Burt Hooton pitched a two-hitter and Ron Santo ripped his 300th career homer as Chicago beat New York.

PRE-GAME WARM-UP — Junior A hockey team warms up right till the last minute. This is the same training that goes into their everyday training period. Coach Racette sees to it that the team is in top shape at all times.

Junior As practise for start of the new season

SHERBROOKE (WD) — For some it is just the beginning and for others the season is already over as 20 players get ready to officially start the 1971 junior hockey season. Just over a month ago more than 58 hopefuls turned out for the start of the 1971 training camp for the Junior A team.

Since that time 38 have been cut, including some of last year's players. "It's a tough decision to make, but some of these new kids are better than some of last year's players," said Coach Ron Racette.

Racette, who joined the team last November, predicts a good year for the Junior A team. He stressed that the team is strong and could possibly finish better than last year's fourth place.

"We have what it takes," said Racette. "We have spirit, a desire to win, and most important of all, great skaters."

The team trains every afternoon from 5:30 to 7:00 p.m. at the Sports Palace in Sherbrooke. They use the same exercises as the professionals and train with the same vigor as when playing a game.

The Junior A team has started using scouts and this year began using a draft system in an effort to find new talent for the team.

"As a team we are becoming stronger and in a few years should catch up to the Ontario Junior Hockey League," said Coach Racette.

This year's lineup shows strength in all sections of the lineup. Coach Racette specifically pointed out team captain Claude St. Sauveur, Babe Cloutier and Gaston Boulanger as being strong offensively.

On the defensive lineup Jean Lemieux and four goalies should make their presence felt to any opposing team.

Questioned about the player's education, Coach Racette said it is the policy of the hockey association to see that the players stay in school.

He added that about three-quarters of the players are still in school. This is good, considering that the players are hoping to make the big league, he added.

Troubled Senators will move to Texas

BOSTON (AP) — Owner Bob Short of the financially troubled Washington Senators was given American League approval Wednesday night to move his franchise to the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The announcement came at the end of a 12 1/2-hour meeting of American League club owners.

League President Joe Cronin said the transfer was conditional that the league "must be satisfied with proper facilities."

The stadium, located in Arlington, Tex., between Dallas and Fort Worth, now seats approximately 22,000. Under terms of the transfer approval, the stadium must seat 35,000 by 1972 and 45,000 by 1973, both promised by Texas officials.

The approval also calls for a satisfactory lease to be worked out and indemnities for the Texas League club now in the stadium.

The owners approved the move after a marathon session in which a Washington group led by that city's president of the Board of Trade, Joseph Danzansky, offered to purchase the Senators for $9.4 million, the same amount Short paid for the club in 1968.

Then, after a 1 1/2-hour break for lunch, the owners heard a nine-man Texas group headed by Mayors Tom Vandergriff of Arlington, Wes Wise of Dallas and R.M. Stovall of Fort Worth. They spent about two hours presenting their case.

Danzansky is believed to have offered $9.4 million, the same amount Short paid in outbidding Bob Hope and the comedian's colleagues for the franchise in 1968.

Injured in 9th-inning ball brawl

OAKLAND (AP) — Chicago White Sox pitcher Bart Johnson suffered a wrenched neck and a sprained left wrist, and Mike Epstein, Oakland Athletics' first baseman, received a bruised eye, in a ninth-inning brawl in the first game of a doubleheader Tuesday night.

The fight was triggered when Johnson hit Epstein with a pitch in the top of the eighth inning.

Epstein tossed his bat toward the mound and exchanged angry words with Johnson as he went to first base.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Wins lap of bicycle race

DRUMMONDVILLE, Que. (CP) — Roger de Vlaeminck of Eeklo, Belgium, won the 98.1 mile first lap of North America's first all-professional bicycle race Tuesday with a time of 3 hours 22 seconds.

The 24-year-old member of the Belgian Mars-Flandria team covered the Montreal-Drummondville lap of the Tour de la Nouvelle France race in 3:04.22 but was awarded 20 bonus seconds for a final sprint victory.

During the Tour, the 48 European riders vie for bonus times and money in sprints during each lap. Each sprint winner receives five bonus seconds and a cash prize.

Winners of the final sprints to the finish wire of that lap receive 20 bonus seconds while the second-place finisher is awarded 10 seconds and third place finisher receives six.

Another Belgian, Guido Reybroeck, 29, a member of Italy's Salvarini team, finished second with a time of 3:03.35 while Jan Janssens of the Netherlands was third with 3:03.37.

The 48 cyclists got under way with a ceremonial start at Place Ville Marie in downtown Montreal.

Appoints three coaches

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Swimming Association Tuesday announced appointment of three coaches for the Canadian team at the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich, West Germany.

Named are Derek Snelling of Vancouver, Ted Thomas of Edmonton and Doug Crair of Calgary.

The three coached the Canadian team at the Pan-American Games in Cali, Colombia, this summer.

Bears trade Caffey to Dallas

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bears traded veteran linebacker Lee Roy Caffey to Dallas Cowboys for an undisclosed draft choice in a National Football League transaction Tuesday.

Caffey, 30, was acquired by the Bears from Green Bay Packers in a trade after the 1969 season and played in all 14 games last season.

He lost the starting right linebacker spot to Ross Brubacher this season and was demoted to the Bears' taxi squad.

Caffey had been a starting Packer linebacker for five seasons before being traded to the Bears.

Bruin Green injured

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Defenceman Ted Green has a high groin pull and will miss the Boston Bruins' next two exhibition games, the National Hockey League club reported Tuesday. Green suffered the injury in the second period of Monday night's 2-1 exhibition loss to the Montreal Canadiens at Halifax.

Coach Tom Johnson said centre Phil Esposito is also a doubtful participant for tonight's game against New York Rangers at Kitchener, Ont. He has soreness in the rib cage, and has been sent to the hospital for x-rays.

On the plus side, veterans Johnny Bucyk and John McKenzie both are scheduled to play tonight. Bucyk will be making his first pre-season start, while McKenzie has been out of game action due to a slight muscle pull.

Speaks at grand jury hearing

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jack Christiansen, a pro football Hall of Fame member, said Tuesday some players who couldn't accept the fact their careers were finished are responsible for a federal grand jury investigation of alleged player blacklisting in the National Football League.

Christiansen, former head coach of the San Francisco 49ers, testified before the anti-trust grand jury for nearly two hours in the morning, then returned for more questions in the afternoon.

Speaking to reporters during a recess at the Federal Court Building, Christiansen confirmed that he was questioned about the Bernie Parrish case and said he thought Parrish was "one of the people who caused this investigation."

Parrish has charged that he was blacklisted after leaving Cleveland Browns in 1966. Christiansen said that some of Parrish's friends on the '49er squad told him the veteran defensive back was looking for a job.

Christiansen said he talked it over with his coaches and they decided Parrish couldn't help them.

"When you come to the end of your career," said Christiansen, "some people can't believe it."

And when another team won't pick them up, "they look for other reasons," he said. "To my knowledge, there is no blacklisting."

Tuna now comes in practical sizes

TUNA CASSEROLES FOR THE FAMILY

The larger 9½ oz. size of chunk light tuna packed at St. Andrews, New Brunswick, is now generally available. You homemakers have asked for it as a more practical family size and because it is more economical. This size pack contains the same high quality, light colored tuna as does the smaller 6 to 7 oz. size and of course has the plus of providing even more vitamin B, and essential health building minerals such as calcium, iron and iodine.

One 9½ oz. can of chunk light tuna when combined with vegetables and fruit as in our Tuna Family Casserole or with rice and vegetables as in our Tomato Topped Tuna Casserole becomes a hearty, appetizing supper dish. It's kind to the pocket book too.

TOMATO TOPPED TUNA CASSEROLE (6 servings)

A substantial tuna-vegetable dish using the large family size can of tuna.

9½ oz. can chunk light tuna
2 cups cooked rice
19 oz. can peas
½ cup chopped onion
10 oz. can cheese soup
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon seasoned salt
One-eighth teaspoon lemon-pepper
1 large tomato, thinly sliced
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese

Arrange rice on bottom of a greased 2-quart casserole. Drain peas and add liquid to soup along with seasonings. Spread tuna with its broth, peas and onion over rice. Pour soup mixture over tuna mixture. Top with tomato slices. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake in a moderate, 350 degree oven until bubbling hot — 25 to 30 minutes.

TUNA FAMILY CASSEROLE (4 servings)

This casserole uses the larger 9½ oz. can of chunk light tuna, now available in most areas. The recipe is easily doubled.

9½ oz. can chunk light tuna
10 oz. can mandarin oranges
10 oz. can chicken soup
1 cup sliced celery
¼ cup minced onion
One-sixteenth teaspoon seasoned pepper
½ cup salted cashews
4 oz. can Chow Mein noodles

Drain liquid from oranges into soup. In a greased 4-cup casserole, combine tuna with its tasty broth, half the drained oranges, celery, onion, pepper, cashews and half the noodles. Pour soup over all and mix lightly. Top with remaining noodles. Bake in a moderately hot oven of 375 degrees until bubbling hot — 20 to 25 minutes. Garnish with remainder of orange sections.

Tuna Special — Use the family size (9½ oz.) chunk light tuna for mixing with canned or packaged Spanish Rice. It makes a great Saturday supper dish.

Superstition is emotional

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I had a date with a neat chick on Friday the 13th and she nearly drove me nuts. To begin with she wore her dress backwards to "ward off the evil spirits." Then she tied a red handkerchief over her head so "the swallows of sorrow would not nest in her hair." As we left her apartment she spit on her palm and stamped it before locking the door. Then she warned me not to step on a crack or it would break my mother's back.

Before we walked into the cafe she stopped, put her left shoe on the right foot, her right shoe on the left foot, and kissed the hem of her dress. When I told her to cut the nonsense she replied, "This is Friday the 13th and I am not taking any chances. Please tell me if this girl has all her marbles. She's highly intelligent and I can't understand why she is so hung-up. P.S. I am NOT interested in marriage. I just want to go with her. Thanks for your help."

-Austin Reader
Dear Austin: Superstition is based on emotion and has nothing to do with logic or intellect. She might make a wonderful "bit your tongue."

Dear Ann Landers: I got a kick out of your column a few days ago when Miss York, Pa. asked if she should marry a guy whose grammar was atrocious. He made such mistakes as "I seen" and "have went." You put her nose back in joint by telling her she might not be as far above the guy as she thought, since she misspelled the word grammar throughout her letter. YOU, Ann, misspelled the word misspelled. It's got two s's dearie.

-Just call me Miss Pell from Kansas City

Dear Pell: Not guilty. I checked the mimeographed copy which was mailed to all my client papers and I spelled misspelled correctly. The mistake occurred at your paper. But before the typesetters climb my frame again, let me make it perfectly clear that in this day of automation it may well have been a computer error.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son and daughter-in-law just left. Mad. My husband and I are in our late 60's and not very well.

They were here for Sunday supper, telling us in detail about the trip they are planning to South America. (They sail November 7th). Very casually our son said, "We'll leave Prince Cornwall with you. Of course we'll have all instructions written down—the name of the vet in case he gets sick, a list of things he likes to eat as well as the things he doesn't like."

Before he went further I told him I wasn't up to taking Prince Cornwall, that Dad and I might want to go to Mexico City for a week, and I wish he'd make other arrangements. His wife cut in with, "You'll have to take him. He hates being in a kennel." When we left him there last year he nearly had a nervous breakdown. He wouldn't eat and looked ghastly when we came home. Well, Ann, one thing led to another and my husband lost his temper. The last thing my son said was, "You have really let us down. After all, what are parents for if you can't count on them when you need them?"

I was so upset I didn't sleep last night. Please, Ann, tell me what you think about this. Have we failed our son?

-Lansing Mother

Dear Lansing: No, you have not failed your son and don't get to feeling guilty and collapse to his demands.

If his idea of what parents are for is someone to leave his dog with when he goes on vacation, someone should set him straight. It sounds as if your husband did. Now forget it.

Europeans receive the Canadian hitchhikers well

Ann Laughlin of the Montreal staff of The Canadian Press spent two weeks this summer travelling through five European countries to see first-hand how young Canadian hitchhiking travellers were getting along. In this story she tells of some of the problems they encountered.

By ANN LAUGHLIN

LONDON (CP) — How young Canadians managed to reach most parts of Europe on a shoestring this summer was as varied as the places they touched maple leaf flags.

"Money, not rides, was the biggest problem," said Mick Soper, an 18-year-old pre-med student from Corner Brook, Nfld., who financed three months hitchhiking from Spain to Scandinavia on $330.

He and partner Ken Campbell, also from Corner Brook, generally steered clear of cities with budget-breaking restaurants and bus fares. They rolled up in sleeping bags by the roads, cleaned up in lakes or public baths and learned to make sandwiches from "anything — like cheese and oranges in Spain."

"This way we're meeting more of the people of the countries we're travelling through," said Nick. "We've been invited to people's homes several times."

He said the Canadian flags on their packs have attracted people willing to chat and good rides.

Others have not been so lucky. Highways outside such cities as Amsterdam and Munich bristle with as many as 40 outstretched thumbs each staking a hitching spot only a few paces from a neighbor.

Driven off the high-speed autobahns of Germany, hitchhikers tell of spending hours and sometimes days in highway ramp vigils or swarming around motorists in service stations seeking rides.

LONG HAIR HINDRANCE

France and Spain were notoriously meagre hitchhiking grounds this summer.

"It took me six days to cover the 400 miles from Nice to the Spanish border," said Denis Rouillard from Trois-Rivieres, Que., who sported a blue and white Quebec fleur-de-lis on his pack.

"My flag helped in northern France but in the south people were very indifferent," he said. "The only people who talked to me were tourists."

Les Williams, 22, of Regina, decided to avoid hit-or-miss hitchhiking by pooling resources with three friends to buy a $400 used van in Amsterdam.

But they found long hair sometimes repels repairmen.

"We blew the engine in Germany and the only repair man in town told us he had no time to fix it," said Les, whose soft brown hair sweeps just below ear level.

They were bailed out by a comparably hirsute German student who told them about the town's hairdressing preferences, found them another engine and installed it for $50.

"We also found out the van was worth half what we paid for it," said Les.

Van travelling kept basic expenses to $1 a day but meant more thorough checks at border crossings, particularly when they ended up in East Germany—by mistakes.

TOOK WRONG FERRY

"We took the wrong ferry from Denmark and just had to keep on going," said Les.

"We had a 45 minute wait to get into Berlin while they took the van apart," he said. "They went through everything — even pored over my address book."

Other travellers resorted to motorcycles, scooters, bicycles, Rhine river barges and foot.

Those with international student identity cards hopped about the Continent on cheap flights offered by youth organizations like the British Student Travel Centre. Sample one-way fares: London to Paris $13.20; London to Leningrad $48.

Many girls favored Eurailpasses allowing students age 14 to 25 two months unlimited travel and sleeping on trains for $127.

"You can just get on a train if there's nowhere to stay and get rid of your travelling time while you sleep," said Colleen Markle, a bangle-bedecked high school student from Toronto who has toured 14 countries in two months.

Other girls mentioned opportunities to meet other young travellers and security they would not feel hitchhiking.

"But you go to sleep in one country and wake up in another," said Marilyn Frost of Rochester, N.Y. "You miss a lot of the changes you're passing through."

Nostalgia reigns in fall fashions

Anyone over thirty will find the new Fall fashions anything but new. Those who would just as soon forget the 1940s will be disappointed this year because fashion is definitely retrospective. The Forties influence pervades the whole fashion scene: fabrics, silhouettes, hairstyles, accessories and make-up.

Young Canadian designer Michel Robichaud says, "The elegant woman is coming into her own again, everything will be classic or civilized." Leo Chevalier likes blazers with broad shoulders. John Warden says there is no looking back: lots of wraps, hoods and lengths below the calf. Elvia loves padded shoulders and high-waisted jackets. Pat McDonagh talks about classic tailoring and soft, fluid dresses. Margaret Godfrey says fabrics are most important — jerseys and double knits in dark shades.

There is nothing to do but square our shoulders and face up to the new mood. Skirt lengths are no longer an issue. The emphasis has shifted to the shoulder line and if you think that coats and skirts that open on short shorts are new, you don't remember Rita Hayworth and Ruby Keeler. They wore the long glamor hairdos and the platform-soled, ankle-strapped shoes, too.

Wrap coats, polo coats "a la Garbo" or fitted reefer coats with wide lapels have shoulders further widened by padding, yokes, capes and big collars. Classic fabrics are very much a part of this picture with Melton cloth, worsted, Donegal tweeds and geometrics the big favorites in black, brown, camel and rust tones.

In suits and ensembles, it is the blazer jacket that prevails, with wide revers and padded shoulders. It is shown with everything from short shorts to ankle length skirts and made in every type of fabric from velveteen to double knits. Suit skirts are straight, wrapped or pleated and sometimes suits have companion blouses.

The third dress and the coat-dress, those most classic styles, are straight out of the Forties. This Fall with gathered shoulders, puff sleeves, sweetheart necklines, pleated, gored or bias-cut skirts hanging at least below the knee. The waistline is always defined and usually belted and the classic fabrics like crepes, matte jerseys, shiny satins or velveteens are an important part of the revival look. Knits fit in perfectly, particularly the new single, body clinging knits for the young and the comfortable double knits for the not-so-young.

Canadian textile producers say that another Forties fabric coming on strong for Fall is flannel, looking newest in pant styles straight from the late, late movies. The legs are straight, wide, cuffed and the pants are worn with a shirt, a tucked-in sweater or a short vest with blazer jacket. The man-tailored shirt, in either knitted or woven fabric, is part of the classic revival and is worn with a mannish tie or blazer collar.

We will hear a lot again about the little black dress and favorite Fall colors are dark toned, purples, browns and such. A truly civilized fashion revival is the elegant dinner suit, at its best in black. The sweater and skirt look stages a comeback but not in the old college classic style. Skirts are knit and clingy while the sweaters are short, waist defining and skimpily otherwise known as "shrinks". New, old, classic, elegant whatever you wish to name it the Forties look is at least new again.

SAFETY FIRST — A versatile new Infant Safety Carrier for the smallest of automobile passengers is now being produced by General Motors Corporation. Secured to the automobile seat by the standard lap belt, the carrier protects the child in the event of a collision or sudden stop. At home it serves as a portable feeding, play, or sleeping chair.

The baby can go too — and safely

OSHAWA — The increasing use of safety seats for infant automobile passengers is really a Space Age reflection of the instinctive reaction to protect their offspring that Mother Nature has instilled in all mothers, according to Pat Ellison of General Motors information service.

In the animal kingdom, there are many examples of special care for the travelling young with probably the best known being the protection and comfort enjoyed by the baby kangaroo in fast-moving Momma Kangaroo's pouch.

Since the dawn of time, human mothers have developed ingenious ways of ensuring that baby would be protected while travelling. Just think of Canada's native people, the Indians and Eskimos, and their ways of keeping baby safe either in a cradle board or a special parka fold.

Today, mobility is a way of life, for almost every family relies on at least one automobile for transportation. No matter what kind of car Mommy and Daddy drive, the fact is that Baby is now a passenger more often than he was in the past. In view of this and all of the features for grownups that are built into today's automobiles, General Motors engineers felt that Baby, too, had a right to be considered.

And these engineers went to work and designed a multi-purpose Infant Safety Carrier that is an all-new concept in child safety for Baby who rides in the Carrier's protective contours, backward, like a little astronaut.

The Carrier is equipped with a simple adjustable harness that fits over the child's shoulders helping to keep him in the Carrier in a semi-upright position but permitting him full freedom of leg and arm movement. Because he faces rearward, the child can watch his mother and she can give him reassuring glances as they ride along. Secured to the automobile seat by the standard lap belt, the Carrier protects the child in the event of a sudden stop or collision.

Apart from the protection, Mother will like the Carrier because its durable, double walls of polypropylene can be easily washed and kept as clean as Baby's other things. She'll also be happy that the Carrier can double as a high chair for feeding Baby at home or away and that, sitting on any flat surface, it becomes a comfortable play chair or nap chair that she can use for Baby until he weighs about 20 pounds. The Carrier, itself, is light; Mother can quite conveniently manage its 6-pound weight.

When you consider the protection, comfort, convenience — and economy, in the bargain — why should Mother leave Baby at home?

She can let the Infant Safety Carrier do her baby sitting for her!

William Lackie weds Shirley Taylor

Saturday August 21, at 7 p.m., the St. George's Anglican Church, Lennoxville, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Shirley Ann, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Taylor, became the bride of William George, (Billy), second son of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Lackie of Birchton.

Rev. John McIlmurray officiated at the double ring ceremony. The church was decorated with gaily coloured summer flowers. The wedding music was played by Mr. Glenn Coates and he accompanied Mrs. Robert Burns who rendered two solos during the ceremony.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a floor-length gown of peau de soie, with a train coming from the breast line. Her elbow-length veil was held in place by a white rose. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white mums with baby white mums on descending streamers. Her only jewelry was pearl and red diamond stud earrings, a gift of the groom.

Mrs. Wayne Wilson, sister of the bride, acted as matron of honor, wearing a mauve floor-length fitted gown of tulle, and carrying a bouquet of yellow mums and streamers.

Mrs. Adelbert Luce, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Stenier Taylor, sister-in-law of the bride, acted as bridesmaids, wearing identical yellow floor-length gowns of tulle, and carrying bouquets of mauve mums with streamers. Their only jewelry were pearl drop or stud earrings, a gift of the bride.

St. Margaret's meet

The first meeting of St. Margaret's Guild after the summer recess was held at the home of Mrs. A. Carrier, on Sept. 14.

The meeting was opened with Prayer by the President Mrs. R.M. Loughheed.

The treasurer, Mrs. J. Wark, gave the Financial Report, showing a very successful card party held last May.

Tentative plans were made to hold a Food Sale in connection with St. Agnes Guild's Chicken Patty supper on Oct. 23.

Refreshments were served by the hostess. The next meeting is to be held on Oct. 12, place to be announced later.

Sarah Wilson, niece of the bride, acted as flowergirl. She wore a short mauve dress identical to her mother's, the matron of honor. She carried a basket of mauve and yellow mums and streamers. She wore her birthstone necklace, a gift of the bride.

Attending the groom was a close friend, Mr. David Buck, acting as best man, with Mr. Clayton Lackie, brother of the groom, and Mr. Stenier Taylor, brother of the bride, as ushers. The men wore cuff link sets, gifts of the groom.

Mrs. Taylor, mother of the bride, chose a deep-mauve street length dress, with white accessories and a corsage of deep red roses.

Mrs. Lackie, mother of the groom, wore a black dress with silver accessories, and a corsage of deep red roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Sawyerville High School Auditorium which was decorated with yellow and white.

The bride's table was centered by a three tier wedding cake made by Mrs. Adelbert Luce, sister of the bride, and decorated by Miss Elena French, friend of the bride. Seated at the head-table was the bridal party, parents, and a dear friend of the bride, Mr. John Jones.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Lackie left for a wedding trip through Ontario and down through the States, the bride travelling in a brown and mauve pant dress with white accessories.

Upon their return, the young couple have taken up residence in Sawyerville.

Forecast for fall fashion

By JEAN SHARP

CP Women's Editor

Dark bright colors, an absence of frills, a muddling together of the looks of the 1930s and 1940s set the general tone of fashions for the fall.

The blazer may be the single biggest item.

Mini lengths are still around, but the fashionable length is the classic one, not far below the knee.

Pant-suits are gone, though. Pants and hot pants are still fashionable. Pants have wider bells, a la John Held.

For a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press a fashion expert in Edmonton summed it up.

"If I could choose only one outfit this fall, I'd choose a blazer and skirt with a really fitting sweater underneath, varied with a womanly blouse. The skirt would have movement, pleats, maybe, and come just to the knee.

"I'd have the jacket in a velvety fabric or in a plush corduroy in dark tones."

In Toronto the blazer is in every kind of fabric, with or without lapels, with or without braid trim. You wear it with pants, pleated skirts, or evening clothes.

Long evening and at-home skirts and dresses are available in everything from inexpensive tent-like caftan styles to elegant slink. Hot pants as part of the evening dress scene are mentioned by buyers in Saint John, N.B., and Winnipeg.

Hot pants will also be around in leather, in wools and occasionally in slightly longer lengths than were worn in the summer. When they aren't covered by long skirts, they are worn with textured stockings or knee socks.

Spokesmen everywhere say dresses and skirts will come back into their own now that the burning issue of length has been more or less resolved.

Montreal buyers say every dress has a waistline, from empire to natural. Fabrics are soft, clinging. Womanly and feminine are used to describe them. They are knits and woven versions of polyester, wools, man-made mixtures, chiffon and crepe.

Black is back and favorite colors are expected to be reds down to a burgundy, plus browns and beiges.

With skirts that have pleats, you wear turtle-necks, blouses and sweaters. A new layered look is expected to be a winner. A Winnipeg expert describes it as "sweater over sweater over sweater." A Vancouver fashion co-ordinator says the short sweaters go over the long ones.

Another Vancouver expert says veiled hats are being worn by women who remember the last time they were worn. Younger women are wearing newsboy caps and big hats with floppy brims.

Boots are still to be worn with almost any outfit, especially laced-up "granny" boots.

Shoes are not quite as clunky as they have been for a season or two. They and the boots show most clearly the nostalgic look of much of the fall's fashion. They have slender straps, elastic inserts, buttons down the side.

St. John's, Nfld., fashion buyers are among those predicting that tweed coats will be big sellers for fall and winter. Tweeds and fur-trimmed coats with hoods are mentioned most often. The midi style may linger among them, especially on girls and young women. Most coats will just be longer than the skirts, though, which should make them slightly shorter than the midi length.

No one likes to talk about the midi, and it is the theory of several fashion commentators that fiasco has had much to do with the freeing up of fashion. It now is permissible for a woman to wear what suits her and her age, whatever that may be.

Youth to host local banjo contest

Craftsbury Common will be the scene of much Banjo picking and strumming on Saturday afternoon, September 25, at 2 p.m. While this is the Fourth Contest, it will be the first one held in the early fall. Past contests, held in late winter, have all been successful but for many reasons, one of which was eight foot snow drifts, the fall date was chosen.

Another change this year will be the divisions within the contest. The three divisions will be: 4-string, 5-string (Scruggs), and 5-string (Old-time). Cash prizes of over $250, plus trophies, will be presented.

The local postmaster, Allen Sweatt, is advisor to the youth group of the United Church which sponsors this contest. Mr. Sweatt reports that the youth are making plans for hospitality so that all, contestants and spectators, will feel at home.

Mother Nature will be well into her decorating plans with fall colors around the Common by September 25. The local firemen will have a lunch tent for the convenience of the public. The audience should provide their own seating since the whole affair will take place outside on the Common.

For an early fall day of musical enjoyment, remember the Banjo Contest at Craftsbury Common on September 25.

HOLIDAY SPECIAL — Festive-looking Cranberry Bonbons are fun dessert treats. The shells are made with semi-sweet chocolate morsels and they hold a creamy, zingy cranberry filling.

Cranberries have festive flavor

The rich, mellow colors of fall are swirling outside your window. How marvelous to bring them indoors with festive cranberry dessert treats that add warmth to any dinner table.

Fresh cranberries have played a prominent role in America's past. Indians used them to make pemmican, a mixture of dried deer meat and berries pounded into a pulp, shaped into cakes and dried in the sun. They also made succotash by mixing cranberries with beans and corn.

The early American settlers learned much from the Indians about the land and its produce which helped them to survive. To celebrate, Governor Bradford proclaimed that a day be set aside for giving thanks. The Pilgrims joined with the Indians in a joyous celebration which lasted several days. In 1863, President Lincoln proclaimed Thanksgiving a national holiday, and this year we are celebrating the 350th anniversary of the first thanksgiving.

The Indians got much use out of the versatile cranberry, but here are some cranberry dishes they never dreamed of - elegant fresh Cranberry Bonbons and Cranberry-Apple Pie.

The Cranberry Bonbons are extra special little tarts. The shells, made from semi-sweet chocolate morsels, are formed in paper baking cups. They are filled with the creamy, scarlet cranberry mixture of the berries, orange juice and rind, and whipped cream and then simply chilled until firm. What could be easier? The flavor is rich, creamy, yet mildly tart and especially delicious with the semi-sweet chocolate shells. Cranberry Bonbons are so festive looking; they perk up any holiday table setting.

And for a great variation of everyone's favorite, set your sights on Cranberry-Apple Pie. Fresh cranberries add an exciting new dimension of flavor to apple pie with crumb topping. The two fresh fruit flavors blend into a tart and zingy combination as natural and healthful as the great outdoors and give you a dessert you can really sink your teeth into. Cranberry-Apple Pie fits in with any cuisine from a family meal to an elegant dinner. Its complementary fruit flavors are a natural.

FRESH CRANBERRY-APPLE PIE

1 cup granulated sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup water
2 cups fresh cranberries

6 tablespoons butter, divided
1 1/2 teaspoons grated fresh orange rind
1 1/2 cups coarsely diced pared apple

1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell
1-3 cup all-purpose flour
1-3 cup packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Mix together granulated sugar, cornstarch and salt in saucepan. Add water and cranberries. Cook, stirring occasionally, over low heat until sugar dissolves and mixture comes to a boil. Boil gently 5 to 10 minutes, until cranberry skins pop. Remove from heat; stir in 2 tablespoons butter and orange rind. Cool slightly. Stir in apple. Turn into pastry shell. Mix together flour, brown sugar and cinnamon. Cut in remaining 4 tablespoons butter until crumbly. Sprinkle over cranberry filling to completely cover. Bake in 425°F oven 40 minutes, until pastry and topping are browned. The pie may boil over during baking so place a piece of aluminum foil under the pie in the oven. Cool before serving.

Makes: 6 to 8 servings.

CRANBERRY BONBONS

Bonbon shells:

1 jumbo package or 2 regular packages
(2 cups) semi-sweet chocolate morsels

1/4 cup butter or margarine
6 dozen tea size paper baking cups
(2 inches in diameter at top and 1 3/4 inches across bottom)

Melt chocolate and butter in saucepan over very low heat. Have ready 24 double baking cups, made double by placing one inside another. Using back of spoon, spread melted chocolate over inside of baking cup to cover completely. Place in refrigerator 30 minutes, until firm. Carefully peel baking cups from chocolate and slip chocolate shells into clean baking cups. Return to refrigerator.

Cranberry filling:
1 envelope unflavored gelatine
3/4 cup fresh orange juice, divided

1 pound (1 quart) fresh cranberries
1 1/2 cups sugar
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
1 cup heavy cream

Sprinkle gelatine over 1/2 cup orange juice in small saucepan. Place over low heat; stir constantly until gelatine dissolves, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat. Place cranberries in medium saucepan with remaining 1/4 cup orange juice, sugar and orange rind. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until cranberry skins pop, about 10 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in gelatine mixture. Chill until mixture is completely cooled and slightly thickened. Whip cream; fold into cooled cranberry mixture. Spoon into chilled chocolate shells and refrigerate until set.

YIELD: 24 bonbons.

Today's young are dope-saturated

OTTAWA (CP) — Drug abuse patterns of tomorrow will span the use of multiple drugs, a renewed interest in cocaine, an upsurge in heroin and growing numbers of women drug users.

These trends shape themselves in centres of drug taking on both sides of the border — Haight-Ashbury in San Francisco, East Village in New York, the Old Town of Chicago, St. Louis and, in Canada, Vancouver.

"Like ripples in a pond, they radiate outwards," Dr. George R. Gay of the Haight-Ashbury free clinic told the World Medical Association Thursday.

"This is the year of multiple drug abuse, partly because of the unavailability of high grade heroin."

"Next year may well be the year of the G.I. junkie."

"We are seeing a trend to cocaine and highly-concentrated heroin abuse among returned Vietnam veterans."

Where 10 years ago only one in seven drug takers was a woman, Haight-Ashbury is seeing one in every three.

The clinic serves an area where the flower children of a decade ago have been replaced by ragged youngsters who panhandle to support an addiction.

"We are dealing with a dope-saturated young population who have come to the ultimate in any escape—heroin," Dr. Gay said.

Dr. J. J. Huot of Montreal's St. Jean de Dieu mental hospital said abuse patterns in this country "start from the west coast and come east."

"We can predict a lot more heroin in Montreal in a year or two."

Dr. Gay and Dr. Huot both appealed for more clinic settings with detached workers in the 21-25 age group able to live in the "counter culture" and guide drug takers to medical help when it is needed by them.

In a study of socio-economic factors in drug use among youth, Toronto sociologist Dr. Merrijoy Kelner suggested that the end result may be a shift in power structure in the next generation.

Weatherman may be woman

In these days of "women's lib" it probably wouldn't surprise you if you found out your weatherman was actually a woman.

If you lived in Halifax and rang up the weatherman to get the latest forecast, you would probably find a cheerful, dulcete voice at the other end of the line giving you the outlook.

The voice would belong to Geraldine Melville, and she wouldn't be just reading it out of the newspaper. She would be interpreting the isobars, cyclones and anticyclones for you as professionally as a palmist reads a palm.

Attractive, 22-year-old "Gerry" has been a forecaster at the Halifax International Airport for 1 1/2 years and it's obvious she enjoys her work as one of Canada's 11 women meteorologists.

Born in Winnipeg and a science graduate from the University of Winnipeg, Gerry found her academic background in physics and mathematics made her a suitable candidate for the Department of Transport's meteorology school in Toronto (recently renamed Atmospheric Environment Services under a Department of the Environment).

EQUAL CHANCE

She's now convinced that her training has taken her into a field where women seldom experience any form of discrimination. Weather forecasting is only one phase of a career in meteorology, but she believes a woman who passes qualifying examinations will find equal opportunities awaiting her in the advanced research branches of the department.

"Here at the airport, we issue forecasts for all of the Maritimes as far north as Anticosti. A forecaster's job is to interpret information received from our many sources. From this information we issue regular forecasts although we're free to revise a forecast any time we feel it's necessary."

Gerry's duties bring her into contact with the communicators who send out weather information and briefers who provide detailed forecasts for pilots using the airport, but she's totally unaware of any male resentment at having a female in the weatherman's chair.

FEW GRIPES

Problems? Well, she had to think hard before coming up with any significant gripe. Her one reservation was the shift work that goes along with making forecasts available on a 24-hour, 365-day basis.

Gerry believes good forecasters have to have a sense of conviction about their work. She thinks it would be ridiculous developing ulcers worrying about the accuracy of a weather prediction although she admitted, "I do feel pleased when the rain starts about the time I said it would."

Daily contacts with pilots and the public have shown a wrong forecast usually results in some cheerful ribbing. But men who fly regularly to lonely Sable Island will often drop in to praise an especially accurate forecast or to offer some inside information on weather conditions over the Atlantic.

Perhaps Gerry's greatest reward comes from the knowledge that weather is a great common denominator. She recalled the night she had the chance to give several Russian pilots a detailed forecast for their relief flight to Peru.

OFTEN OVERLOOKED

"I can really appreciate how weather affects everyone — in many cases it is more than just wanting sunny days for a vacation. We often get calls from businesses like paving companies to whom good weather is vitally important."

LEAVING — Rev. Allison Haley, and his wife and seven children, have lived in Waterloo for seven years. Before moving on to Invaray, Ontario, they were honored by the parishioners of St. Paul's United Church and friends.

Minister, family honored

WATERLOO — Rev. Allison Haley, minister of St. Paul's United Church in Waterloo, came to Waterloo during the summer months of 1964 as their minister, and for the next seven years he and his family made a host of friends within the boundaries of all faiths and religions.

Mr. Haley's energy and zeal has reflected itself on many people who are shut in, sick or in need of assistance or advice. He was always available and always willing to help.

Mr. and Mrs. Haley and their fine family of two daughters and five sons accepted a call from the congregation of the United Church in Invaray, Ontario, where he is to take up his duties on October 1 of this year. His family is already settled in the manse there, and he will join them during the final week of September.

The congregation held a going away party in the church parlors on Thursday evening, September 9, when about 200 parishioners from both Waterloo and Fulford, friends from St. Luke's Anglican Church and St. Bernardin Catholic Church, including Monsignor Frigon, were present. A most enjoyable evening was spent with Mr. Tom Wilkinson as chairman.

Mr. Roger McKergow was asked to make a presentation to the departing family on behalf of the congregation and in so doing, he stated that a community could ill afford to lose a fine family such as the Haley family and a minister of a church like Rev. Haley. He presented them with several pieces of Roxton furniture for their living room.

Mrs. Cochrane was asked to make a presentation from the Women's Auxiliary to Mrs. Haley, when she pointed out that Ann Haley was a much valued member of this organization, and one that would be sadly missed for her work with the ladies.

Mr. Keith Durrell, superintendent of the Sunday School made a presentation to Mr. Haley on behalf of the Sunday School, and Mr. Henry Bird was asked to also make a presentation to the departing minister. Two CGIT girls presented Cathy and Barbara Haley with gifts from this organization and Mr. Hugh Wright of Fulford presented Mr. Haley with an envelope from this congregation.

Mr. Cliff Cochrane then presented the Haley family with a money tree which had blossomed out in beautiful flowers greatly resembling one, two and five dollar bills.

Mr. Gordon Cousens led in a lively sing-song with Mr. Roger McKergow accompanying on the piano, and then both Mr. and Mrs. Haley thanked their friends very warmly and sincerely for the happy evening spent with them.

"Waterloo has certainly become home to the Haley family," Mr. Haley said, "and one cannot erase these memories ever from their minds. God bless you all, and thank you," he concluded.

The ladies of the church provided refreshments which were greatly enjoyed.

Radio Church of God is untraditional

By LESLIE K. TARR
TORONTO (CP) — Thousands of Canadians each day listen to an unusual half-hour radio program, The World Tomorrow. The broadcast, heard daily on 40 stations across the country, features Herbert W. Armstrong and his son, Garner Ted Armstrong, the two leading lights in their own Radio Church of God.

The Radio Church of God is not named in any Canadian or American yearbook of denominations nor is it listed in city or telephone directories.

In the 37 years since Herbert W. Armstrong made his first half-hour broadcast over a 100-watt radio station in Eugene, Ore., he has watched a religious empire develop.

Today the Armstrongs broadcast daily over nearly 300 Canadian and American radio stations and in several languages around the world. A weekly telecast is beamed over 20 Canadian channels and more American channels.

Countless thousands of Canadians receive the monthly 48-page slick, multi-color magazine, Plain Truth, which has a world circulation of more than two million. And the movement operates three liberal arts colleges in California, Texas and England.

TRUE CHURCH

The Armstrongs contend that the movement is the only genuine church and that others are "satanic counterfeits."

In fact, states founder Herbert W. Armstrong, the preaching of God's real message ceased in the year AD 69, 38 years after the death of Christ. The gospel was not heard again until 1934 when Herbert W. Armstrong, then an advertising and public relations man, began to preach over that radio station in Eugene.

What is the true Christian message which has been missing so long and only recently brought to light again?

The Armstrong gospel, to an outsider, appears to be a selective combination of a few beliefs of Seventh Day Adventists, British Israelites, Jehovah's Witnesses, and Mormons. The founder of the Radio Church of God seems to have welded them together to form a distinctive and marketable product.

From the Seventh Day Adventists, he picked up the emphasis on observing Saturday rather than Sunday. Anyone who observes Sunday, contends Armstrong, is disobedient to God and is not a true Christian. Such a person has "the mark of the beast."

One Armstrong view (borrowed from British Israelism) is that America and Britain are actually the "10 lost tribes of Israel." The throne of England, he adds, is actually the literal throne of David.

NO LOCAL CHURCHES

He seems to have acquired from the Jehovah's Witnesses and their predecessors the rejection of the traditional Christian view of the Trinity, denial of the physical resurrection of Christ, and rejection of the existence of hell.

He appears to be indebted to the Mormons for the teaching that an obedient disciple of the movement will become God.

Unlike most churches, the Radio Church of God has no local church buildings. How then does it operate?

Listeners to the broadcast who write the Canadian office in Vancouver or those who respond to ads in Reader's Digest receive free subscriptions to Plain Truth. As they read the magazine, they will notice mention of another magazine, Tomorrow's World, a series of Bible correspondence courses.

If they write about the second magazine or enroll in one of the mail courses, they will read "co-workers" whose support makes possible the vast broadcasting and literature ministry. Should they write for information about "co-worker" status or about identification with the group, a pastor and an elder will call and tell about the closest local meeting whose location to this point is a closely-guarded secret.

Those weekly area meetings are held on Saturdays in rented premises. Since devoted followers are expected to give at least one-tenth of their gross incomes to the Radio Church of God large offerings are received in the weekly area gatherings.

Those offerings are forwarded directly to headquarters in Pasadena, Calif. Thus, with no overhead for church buildings, programs, and usual congregational expenses, the Radio Church of God can pour millions into the publishing, radio, and television outreach to disseminate Mr. Armstrong's unique views.

The success of the Radio Church of God, according to Charles DeLoach, an American reporter who broke with the group, is due to a widespread disillusionment with modern churches and a longing for definite moorings.

The dogmatic, articulate Armstrongs thus appeal to people who witness an erosion of belief in traditional churches.

The 1972 Buicks: cars for people with something better in mind.

The 1972 Buicks have a great deal in common with every Buick built in the past 69 years. You might call it engineering integrity, a preoccupation with excellence. And over the years it's made Buick a car to admire. Now, with our model lineup ranging from the modestly-priced Skylark to the incredibly luxurious Electra 225, just about every new car buyer can own a Buick.

Take our most popular full-size Buick, the LeSabre. Three-speed Turbo Hydra-Matic transmission, power front disc brakes and variable ratio power steering are all standard. And Buick-pioneered exclusives like nickel-plated exhaust valves, a semi-closed cooling system, and more.

If you have something better in mind this year, see the 1972 Buicks. They're something to believe in.

Centurion The 1972 Buick Centurion. A clean, personal car with spirited styling. It has our biggest engine, the 455-cubic-inch V8 that runs on low-lead, no-lead or regular gasoline. It has Buick's traditional comfortable ride, but its stability comes from AccuDrive, Buick's suspension system that helps take bumpy roads, tight curves, even heavy crosswinds with ease. Centurion. For people who like the personal car idea. But also have families who need room.

Skylark The Buick that makes it possible for younger families to move up to a Buick much sooner than they could ever have imagined. And because Skylark is a Buick, it doesn't shortchange you on the things you expect to find. Like a 350-cubic-inch V8 as standard equipment. Buick's exclusive semi-closed cooling system that should never overheat. And, of course, traditional Buick interior luxury. Skylark. Happily priced to turn Buick lovers into Buick owners. And for growing families, very happy news.

Electra 225 Once you've owned one, there just isn't anything else that measures up. No wonder. Take Electra's ride. You have to experience it to believe it. But until you do, try to imagine a living room in motion... quiet, controlled, effortless motion. Electra 225. For the family with something better in mind.

Non-returning students explain unemployment rise

By DAN TURNER
OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau acknowledged Thursday that the Canadian unemployment situation is "very serious," but said his government isn't sure what's causing it.

The prime minister faced a barrage of opposition attacks in the Commons following the release of Statistics Canada figures earlier in the day that showed the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate climbed in August to 6.5 per cent of the labor force.

For months, Finance Minister Benson has been predicting a decline in the unemployment rate.

But although the rate gradually declined last winter from its 6.8 per cent peak last September, it jumped to 6.7 per cent in April, dropped to 6.3 per cent in May, climbed again to 6.4 per cent in June and fell again to 6.3 per cent in July before rising again.

Mr. Trudeau said the August figures are "significantly impressive." He wasn't in a position to say why they were so high—that would take "a considerable study" by the government.

The prime minister said the reason the unemployment figure rose was because fewer young people had withdrawn from the labor force than they usually do in August.

WE'RE TRYING
"We are trying to understand the significance of it. Does it mean that our young people are less interested in furthering their education than in previous times, or is it just a temporary situation?"

"Does it have to do with rejection of the work ethic or study ethic or acceptance of the work ethic?"

Unemployment actually declined in August by 59,000 to 455,000, but that drop was smaller than usual for the month. It subsequently left the seasonally-adjusted rate, which is used to determine the trend, at a higher figure.

The rise was due entirely to persons under 25, among whom the jobless rate rose to 11.8 per cent in August from 10.8 per cent in July. The seasonally-adjusted rate for persons over 25 declined to 4.4 per cent from 4.8 per cent.

Unemployment dominated the Commons' day, even though the opposition had other issues to jump on.

The morning figures from Statistics Canada also showed the consumer price index for August up dramatically to 135 points, a jump from 134.1 in July and carrying within it the largest July-to-August increase in food prices in more than a decade.

MOTION ACCEPTED

And Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), after several attempts this week, finally came up with a motion acceptable to Speaker Lucien Lamoureux attacking the government for discontinuing payments to Western farmers under the Temporary Wheat Reserves Act while the act is still law.

The debate permitted by the motion took up the evening. In between question period and the wheat debate, members continued second-reading consideration of the government's tax change bill—and used it to assail economic policies again.

Four opposition members had attempted to have the House adjourned for emergency debate on the unemployment question, but none were successful.

Mr. Trudeau was twice asked to outline government projections on the employment scene in forthcoming months. He declined.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield called for "realistic tax cuts" to spur employment, saying that the government's June 18 budget had been based on false premises that the economy was improving.

The prime minister said he would be delighted to cut taxes—especially the year before there might be an election—but the government was looking for "the most responsible answer" to the economic situation.

Asked whether he would call provincial premiers together to discuss the problem, Mr. Trudeau said he has already tried to set up such a meeting for as early in the fall as possible, but has been unable to get agreement from the provinces on a date.

QUESTIONS PLANS

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander Twillingate) asked whether the prime minister has directed departments such as public works, economic expansion, manpower or finance to concentrate their energies on massive employment-creating programs.

Mr. Trudeau said he had directed "such ministers and a few others besides to find the answers."

In debate on the tax bill, Patrick Mahoney (L—Calgary South) was jeered mightily when he said the economy had been "doing very well" until the 10-per-cent U.S. surtax on imports came along.

"This is the start of it," Conservative Whip Thomas M. Bell yelled out, suggesting that the Liberals would call an election and blame the U.S. for Canada's economic woes.

The unemployment figures were assembled in the week that President Nixon announced the trade restrictions—too early to have affected jobs in Canada.

Mr. Stanfield got up and walked out with his head shaking when Mr. Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister E. J. Benson, said the Canadian economy had actually expanded too quickly, causing a resurgence of inflation.

The Conservatives have been maintaining that the government's measures to expand the economy have been inadequate to curb unemployment.

Mr. Mahoney said the cost-of-living rise was due mainly to food costs rebounding after a supermarket price war, which was last winter.

The increase in unemployment was among the young and was a result of the post-war baby boom.

Turning to the tax bill, Mr. Mahoney said the New Democrats are dealing in half-truths in criticizing the bill and the Conservatives were rehearsing budget-debate speeches.

Marijuana a social liability

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — A Dutch physician suggested Thursday that marijuana will prove to be as great a social liability as alcohol and tobacco.

"There can be no doubt but the misery caused by alcohol and the damage to the health of heavy smokers will, in the western world, prove greater than the harm done by drugs like morphine and heroin," said Dr. Theodor Vossenaar, president of the Royal Dutch Medical Association.

"And there is no reason to suppose that marijuana will be an exception."

Dr. Vossenaar spoke as part of an international panel on abuse of mind-altering drugs at the general assembly of the World Medical Association.

He attacked the classification of marijuana as a "soft" drug and called it "deplorable and deceptive to identify the notion of 'soft' with 'harmless'."

The so-called hard drugs like heroin and opium had so obviously a disastrous effect on the individual that this deterred users. Such drugs were less dangerous to society because of their addicting properties.

SHOULD CURB USE

However, he said, he hesitates to support interference with a person's freedom to use drugs although, for public health reasons, efforts should be made to curb use through diagnosis and treatment of the causes, education of the entire community and research.

Dr. Richard G. MacKenzie, a Canadian now teaching at the division of adolescent medicine, Children's Hospital, Los Angeles, reported that the California drug scene has switched from the hallucinogens like LSD or mescaline.

This was mainly happening among the older adolescents "with serious consequences." Twenty-four per cent of admissions to Los Angeles county hospital were related to intentional or accidental drug overdose.

Eighty per cent of the overdose cases involved the barbiturate-type drugs.

Dr. Frank J. Ayd, Baltimore, said California's experience differed from that in other states with respect to the rise in barbiturate use.

Dr. George Ling, chief of the pharmacology department, University of Ottawa, said such switches usually depend on the availability of supplies rather than on deliberate choice.

Canadian barbiturate use had declined substantially in the last six years.

Can Violence Be Justified? Mostly Not, Youth Believes

Distributed by NEA

Violence has long been associated with social change.

Do the youth of today feel violence is an acceptable way to bring about changes they want in society? To answer that question, the National Gilbert Youth Poll conducted a survey of several thousand young people across the nation in the age group from 14-25.

Abortion part of medical history

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Dear Dr. Lamb—A few years ago I had a self-induced septic abortion followed by a D and C (dilatation and curettage of the womb) I am preparing for surgery now and have not mentioned this to my gynecologist. Is this an important part of my past medical history and should I tell him?

Dear Reader—Of course it is important. A doctor is handicapped enough dealing with the complexities of illness and the human body without the problem of not getting a complete story of the patient's past illnesses. You want your doctor to be prepared to do the best possible for you. Let him decide if something is important.

I am always a little sad about women and abortions, particularly the real dangers that some women expose themselves to. The trip to some seamy apartment house or the trips across the border are all real dangers to a woman's health. So are most self-induced efforts.

Obviously there is no good answer to the problem. I do think however for those who insist on having an abortion that it would be much better to have it done in a reputable professional setting with modern medical facilities than under conditions that may cause permanent injury or even death. For those who need facts I would recommend David Hendin's little fact book entitled "Everything You Need to Know About Abortion," published by Pinnacle Books.

I consider this little book a solid blow against the sordid practices of the criminal element which sometimes flourishes around voluntary abortion.

The Day Under Your Sign

ARIES (Born March 21 to April 19)—Public relations under difficult configurations today. People and things seem to be at cross purposes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)—Marital or business partner may be on the opposite side of the fence from you. Try to bypass argument.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21)—Something special possible in your financial situation. Do nothing too drastic at this time.

CANCER (June 22 to July 21)—When two people agree to disagree, it may be futile to try to change either, so don't bother.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21)—Rely more on instinct than on any other factor. Leo judgment is under very fine planetary influences.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—Since there is nothing pressing today, dig into that new book you've been wanting to read.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—An atmosphere of "make believe" takes your mind off everyday routine and livens up an otherwise dull day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—Don't envy a talented friend when you have so many untapped resources of your own. Develop aptitudes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)—A legacy is within the realm of possibility today. Account in on communications from far-off places.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)—A slowdown indicated, but just what you need as tension seems to be building up again. Get extra rest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)—Bypass you to make extravagant purchases, but so right ahead on buying essentials for the home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20)—Good time for family conclave, but don't press your luck by adamant statements. Listen to others.

When your suit is either spades or hearts, a five-club or five-diamond barricade bid, after your four no-trump, does not bother you at all if you are using DOPI.

Take today's hand as an example. West puts in a five-club bid in order to interfere with Blackwood. North and South are doubling with no aces; passing with one ace and bidding with more than one ace. Thus West's five-club bid actually makes things easier for North. He can actually show two aces by a bid of five diamonds. Would a five-heart bid show three aces?

Not if North and South are advanced bidders. North would bid five diamonds to show two aces and five hearts to show two aces plus additional values.

Thus when he bids five spades he is showing three aces. He knows that he can afford this because without interference by West he would still have bid five spades with his hand.

The five spade call is all South needs to get him to a grand slam. South knows that his partner has opened the bidding and then given a jump raise in hearts with not more than one of the three top honors and without the king of his first bid suit. It is apparent to South what North's holding is so South leaps to seven hearts without any shilly-shallying.
