TALK OF THE TOWNSHIPS

Mucking about in the mists of pre-history

An archeologist is the best husband a woman can have; the older she gets, the more interested he is in her.

Agatha Christie

Gérard Leduc of Mansonville has been turning over rocks in the Townships for more than a decade and finding interesting things.

Who's Who By Tadeusz Letarte

Inspired by Barry Fell's America B.C., which claims Celts crossed the Atlantic and colonized New England as much as a thousand years before Christ, Leduc explored stone piles in Potton and found cairns that appear to mark cremation burial sites of ancient Celts.

The well-known 'Indian Stone' in Potton, he believes, bears an inscription in Irish Ogam. Mansonville would have been at the head of a portage to Memphremagog on the main canoe route between Lake Champlain and the Connecticut Valley.

Leduc's latest find, as announced in Le Devoir on Aug. 15, is a drawing of a sea serpent marked with Norse runes from the 11th Century, about the time Vikings settled at L'Anse aux Meadows.

It is difficult to believe these intrepid explorers did not follow the North Shore inland to see what this great fiord had to offer. Possible Viking traces have been found near Baie Comeau and a Viking silver penny from the 11th Century at an Indian village site on the coast of Maine.

Mucking about in the mists of pre-history is great fun because nothing is certain and your guess is as good as the next guy's.

But before you bury any more stones, look carefully, those marks may not have been made by a plow share but by an ancient European trying to tell you something.

- Oscar Dhu from Donald Morrison, The Canadian Outlaw

By Rita Legault

KNOWLTON - Even before Oscar Dhu romanticized the story of Donald Morrison in his 1892 epic poem entitled "Donald Morrison, The Canadian Outlaw", Townshippers have been fascinated by the tragic tale of this local folk hero.

Hence the popularity of Disputes of One Kind or Another which just completed a short but successful two-week run at Theatre Lac Brome.

Celebrating its 10th anniversary this year, the Knowlton playhouse has always been dedicated to bringing Canadian and Quebec plays to the stage, but it has gone a step further this summer wrapping up this year's season with a taste of Townships' history and culture.

Disputes of One Kind or Another retells the Townships' tale of Donald Morrison, better known as the Megantic Outlaw, bringing to the stage the tragic legend of this champion of the Scottish settlers, and recreating the lives and times of these lamentable but hearty Townships pioneers before the turn of the century.

Adapted by Theatre Lac Brome artistic director Nicholas Pynes and Edward S. Herkes, the dramatists used a variety of sources to tell the dramatic tale of the idealistic outlaw and his people, Scottish Highlanders who fled the Isle of Lewis and its unkindly Laird Matheson only to find themselves less-than-welcome pioneers in the infertile wilderness of Compton County in the mid-1800s.

The musical story of Donald Morrison, the Megantic Outlaw, brings to life both the characters and the songs of the mid-1800s.

The play opens with the prodigal son's return from seeking his fortunes in the West to help his parents who are being swindled by Major MacAulay, an unscrupulous moneylender who is cheating the family out of its land. It tells the story of Morrison's desperate attempts to seek justice, and his eventual shooting of drunken deputy Jack Warden in self-defense.

Disputes also recreates the scene after Morrison's face appeared on wanted posters, of how dozens of needy Scottish settlers ignored a hefty $3000 ransom to help the fugitive evade the hundreds of official and unofficial lawmen who combed the Megantic area like Keystone Kops.

The historical play winds up with Morrison's eventual surrender to end the continuous harassment of his friends and family, his prejudiced trial, and his untimely death from starvation just before his pardon came through after an appeal for clemency by the New Caledonia Society.

A musical, Disputes also captures the music of the times, with lively Celtic jig music and dance, and melancholy Gaelic songs.

Performed by a multi-talented cast of actors/singer/musicians, Disputes brings to life both the characters and the songs.

Kathleen MacAuliffe's performance is a stand out while portraying the inconsolable mother, belting out a Gaelic tune, but particularly when interpreting heart-wrenching songs of woe.

Al Goulem plays a good outlaw and Elizabeth Robertson is good as Morrison's star-crossed lover Marion. Also noteworthy are performances by Glenn Roy who plays Morrison's hapless father, and Eric Goulem as Murdo Beaton his bumbling but wise best buddy.

The rest of the incredibly versatile cast including pianist Pynes effortlessly plays a number of bit parts and doubles as a member of the rollicking bar band in Pope's American House Hotel where much of the action takes place.

All in all, the workshop production was a success and promises of a revised version of Disputes for next summer is a treat to look forward to.

35 places to ski in the Eastern Townships

Verity publishes cross-country skiers dream book

By Kathy Mercier

LENNOXVILLE - Cross-country skiers now have a new guide to add to their wish-list.

35 Places to Cross Country Ski in the Eastern Townships, by local ski enthusiast Barbara Verity, was launched Monday at Uplands Museum in Lennoxville.

Verity, who has worked as a freelance travel writer for magazines and the Gazette, was also a reporter then editor of the Record and the Townships Sun.

Raised in Montreal then moving to the Townships to go to Bishops, Verity joined the Record right out of school in 1964.

PERFECT START

Doing a wide variety of stories such as features, hard news, theatre, "The Record was a perfect way to start my career," she said.

But feature stories were Verity's main point of interest.

"I got to meet interesting people,"

"I learned to work fast, get the facts." Being a relative newcomer to the Townships, working at the Record also provided a chance for Verity to meet the community.

"Working at the Record set the tone of my career."

Writing "35 Places to Cross Country Ski in the Eastern Townships" allowed Verity to do an in-depth travel story, which can be difficult for an article, and to fill a void in the travel guide industry.

"I've done travel writing," she explained, "but couldn't get into depth. I wanted to do something with more depth."

"I also found there was no existing cross-country skiing guide for the Townships."

According to Verity, there are skiing guides available at locations such as tourism centres. Unfortunately, they are mainly to describe centres across Quebec, therefore may have only nine listing for the Townships.

Verity's 36 years of skiing in the Eastern Townships prepared her for last winter's research.

"I skied at least one trail for all of them," said Verity. "except for two, which I walked, because of rain."

Her research also meant that Verity stayed very fit.

"I would ski at two or three places per week."

Finding places to ski required a bit of research too.

"I'd find places through friends, articles, listings, as well as talking to other skiers."

The guide itself will make discovering new trails a pleasure for beginners and advanced cross-country skiers.

The book lists ski trails alphabetically by town or by mountain. Each listing includes valuable information such as difficulty level, rates, facilities, number of warm-up huts, length and nearby restaurants and lodging.

The listings also include a map, as well as a description of how to get there and how long it will take from Sherbrooke and Montreal. This information is handy for tourists as well as those who might not venture out of their own neck of the woods.

An interesting feature in this book is a brief description of the trails. Verity has taken the time to find out who runs the trail, as well as a brief local history of the trail or community. In the description of the trail in Saint-Denis-de-Brompton, there is an amusing anecdote involving fresh ski tracks, a ski, a boot, and a blind mole.

For those wanted a little more out of a skiing excursion, there is a listing of trails by interesting themes. Here readers will find where to enjoy wine-tasting, visit a copper mine, bird-watch, and skiing by torch or moonlight.

Other listings will allow skiers to discover where to ski for free, for easy or hard trails, when there is little snow, and centres that offer repair and rentals, to name a few.

This is Verity's second book, her first being "A Community with Deep Roots," which was a history of the Townships Association, but will not be her last.

"I have a lot of ideas," she said, but prefers not to be too specific at the moment. "It's better to keep them floating up there."

Being an outdoors enthusiast, Verity said her ideas include writing about outdoors activities, and more guides about the Townships.

"35 Places to Cross Country Ski in the Eastern Townships," whose first publication had 1000 copies, will be available at La Randonnee sports store in Sherbrooke, the Book Nook in Sutton, the Homestead and Tri-Us in Lennoxville, and Le Baron in North Hatley. It will also be found in some book stores in Montreal, Ottawa, and Vermont. A French version, translated by Louise Cousineau, will be available by mid-October.

Barbara Verity's book is a great find for skiers and non-skiers alike. For those who love to ski, the guide will surely help enthusiasts to find new skiing adventures. For those who have yet to pick up a ski pole, "35 Places to Cross Country Ski in the Eastern Townships" is a well thought out and well explained guide that is fun to flip through that just might create an interest in this winter outdoor activity.

Barbara Verity cuts a special cake depicting the cover of her book at its launch at Uplands Museum in Lennoxville on Monday.

Dance musical winning over Stratford audiences

The Music Man: A big show with a big heart

By Sunil Mahtani

STRATFORD, ONT. - The most impressive scene in the Stratford Festival's production of The Music Man takes place at a footbridge.

Harry Hill, a smooth-talking con man who is taking the naive residents of River City, Iowa, for a ride with one of his schemes, is about to rendez-vous with Marian Paroo, the distrustful town librarian who finds herself falling for his charms.

The scene begins with a young boy and girl singing while playing hopscotch, then it flows into starry-eyed teenagers waltzing around the bridge before the adults appear. But Harry is not the fast-talking huckster he usually is. He's fallen in love with Marian and, for the first time in his life, does not have a precalculated move to make.

It is an effective scene, complemented by soft lighting, trees surrounding the footbridge and steam rising from the suggestion of a pond below.

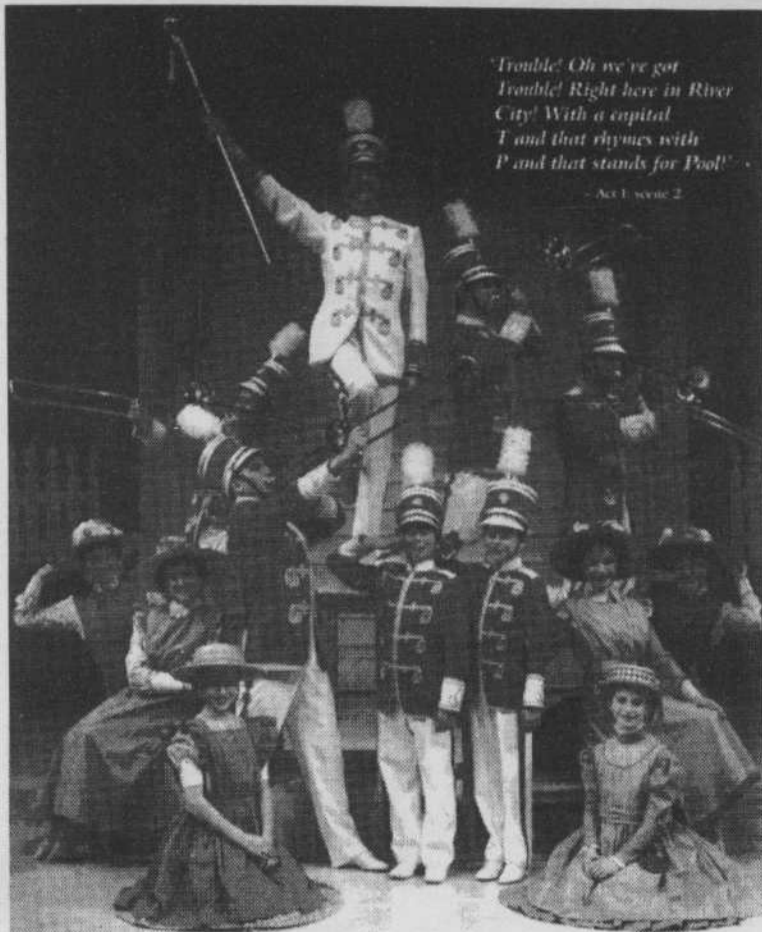

Just as water flows beneath the bridge, this scene depicts the flow of life and relationships. It is pretty and lyrical and, in effect, sums up what this show is all about: How music, faith and, ultimately, love can drastically alter lives.

It certainly did for the writer-composer of The Music Man, Meredith Willson, who based the show on his experiences growing up in Mason City, Iowa. Willson played the flute for most of his life and his belief in the power of music transcends the play.

The Music Man is not the greatest dance musical of all time, but it has as big a heart as you're likely to find. Willson's labor of love features the touching transformations of a shy child who speaks with a lisp, a swindler who lets his guard down, a leery librarian who gives in to her romantic spirit and an entire town of people who want to believe they can change so badly they'll buy into anything to make their dreams come true.

It is 1912 and slippery salesman Harry Hill breezes into another Small Town, America, with his usual con: To galvanize the locals into thinking they desperately need a boy's band to keep their kids off the streets and away from "sins" like pool. Hill will sell them instruments and uniforms and promise to teach their kids music. Of course, he doesn't know one note from the next and plans to take the money and run. That all changes after he meets the good people of River City, who may be gullible but their faith can move mountains.

After a somewhat slow start for such a big musical, The Music Man went into full gear with the dizzying "Ya Got Trouble" and the exuberant "Seventy-Six Trombones", the most enduring number from the show.

Debra Hanson's set and costume design is particularly effective in The Music Man. The set is simple, with suggestions of tree-lined streets, white picket fences and clapboard homes.

The costumes start off pale and conservative, then slowly get more and more colorful as Hill's influence on the townsfolk begins to show. It is a beautiful outer representation of their inner metamorphosis.

The Stratford musical duo of director-choreographer Brian MacDonald and musical director Berthold Carriere once again strike pay dirt with this crowd-pleasing show.

One objection, though, is that the actors weren't always audible in the expansive Festival Theatre. Its thrust stage poses a constant challenge for any production mounted there since the actors' backs are almost always facing a section of the audience.

MacDonald deserves kudos, however, for assembling a terrific cast this time around.

Dirk Lumbard has the unenviable task of living up to a role immortalized by the wonderful late actor Robert Preston. However, the lanky, likable Lumbard is perfect for the role, and brings his own sense of mischief to Harry Hill. Unfortunately, Lumbard rushes his songs a touch and, although his voice is a fine one, at times the music overpowers it.

June Crowley makes her Stratford debut with a solid performance as the librarian who believes Hill has "hood-winked" the townsfolk.

Danny Austin has been stealing scenes away from the principals at Stratford for five seasons, and he does no different in The Music Man. As River City's 'problem child', Austin is pure dynamite. It is rare to find an actor who is equally strong in all three disciplines required to master the musical genre - acting, singing and dancing - but Austin can do it all exceedingly well, with a mix of boyish charm and sex appeal that works every time. Austin can clearly carry a show and it's about time Stratford programmers give him the lead in one.

Austin and Cara Hunter upstaged the leads in last year's The Boy Friend each time they were on stage. The fabulous dancers are paired here once again and the chemistry still sizzles.

Karen K. Edissi and Eric Donkin, who were also paired in The Boy Friend, are teamed again here as the bewildered mayor and his boozing wife.

Although these characters don't generate many sparks between the veteran actors, Edissi is once again hilarious in a gem of a role. Whether she's the drunk Statue of Liberty at the town's Fourth of July celebrations, falling over herself while taking dancing lessons or barreling across the stage in a ballet sequence, Edissi sparkles. The audience loves her and it's easy to see why. She's a natural comic actor who seems to be having as much fun with her role as viewers are watching her.

Jacqueline Blais is a classy addition to the cast as Marian's mother. The veteran actor is making her Stratford debut here, and will be familiar to Townshippers who saw Theatre Lac Brome's Cabaret.

The Music Man continues in repertory through Nov. 3 at the Stratford Festival in Stratford, Ont. For more information or complete program schedule, call 1-800-567-1600.

New conductor plans surprises for Sherbrooke concert series

Symphony treats subscribers to sweet sounds

By Sunil Mahtani

SHERBROOKE - Mary O'Keefe takes a special delight in describing how much support the local symphony orchestra receives as compared to others across the country.

"Many orchestras don't sell as many subscriptions as we do," said O'Keefe, the general manager of Les concerts symphoniques de Sherbrooke, the organization which oversees the Sherbrooke Symphony Orchestra, the Estrie Chamber Orchestra and the Sherbrooke Wind Ensemble.

"The Toronto Symphony has fewer subscriptions than we do," O'Keefe added. "There are three million people in Toronto, and how many in the Sherbrooke area, 150,000."

The percentages are remarkable. Two years ago, the Sherbrooke Symphony had approximately 1200 people at each concert. Last year, that figure dipped to about 1000. To be fair, they raised ticket prices and were "auditioning" conductors with the departure of Marc David, who helped transform the orchestra from an amateur to a professional one. With permanent conductor Gilles Auger in place for its 58th season, O'Keefe hopes to bring the number of subscribers back up.

Les concerts symphoniques de Sherbrooke recently unveiled a diverse, "something for everyone" season designed to gain new listeners and win back those who dropped out of sight last year. She said Auger is planning to create more interest in the series with surprises during the concerts and little anecdotes about the pieces on each program. The Quebec City conductor received a tremendous response from both the musicians in the orchestra and the audience when he guest conducted a concert last year as part of the search for a permanent conductor.

Gilles Auger... the new conductor for the Sherbrooke Symphony and the Estrie Chamber Orchestra is planning a few surprises for the next season.

"The musicians liked him because his cues were clear," said O'Keefe. "It was clear that he understood the music and when it's clear that the conductor understands it in his head and he gives the right cues, then it's easier for the musicians to play."

O'Keefe said she feels Auger tries to bring out the best in the orchestra as a whole and that his musicianship, technique and personality is an irresistible combination. His hectic schedule of teaching and performing makes him hard to get hold of, but Auger will be traveling to the Townships quite frequently beginning with the first concert of the season next weekend.

On the lineup for this season are five symphony concerts, four chamber orchestra concerts and three by the wind ensemble. Auger conducts the two orchestras, while Sherbrooke conductor René Joly holds the baton for the wind ensemble.

Each concert is divided into attractive themes to entice the widest possible audience.

All Sherbrooke Symphony concerts take place at Salle Maurice O'Bready at the University of Sherbrooke. First up is Promenade Symphonique on Oct. 5.

"The title comes from the highlight piece of the program, (Russian composer Modest) Moussorgsky's Pictures At An Exhibition," said O'Keefe. "The way the piece is set up, there are promenades between the pictures, so the composer's walking around and every time he's walking around it's called a promenade."

Taking listeners on this musical meandering will be the largest configuration of the orchestra of the year - 70 musicians, as opposed to the usual 60. Two Quebec musicians will also be in the spotlight at the inaugural concert of the season. Mont Joly native Stéphane Lemelin will play the first Piano Concerto by Johannes Brahms.

"It's very romantic and turbulent and very stormy, a great piece to listen to," explained O'Keefe.

The tumultuous composition ends with harps, bells and crashing cymbals. Rounding out the program is Pavane by Georges-Emile Tanguay.

"He's a Quebec composer that's not very well known, but the Pavane is supposed to be fairly similar to the Pavane of Ravel, a kind of very, very atmospheric music," said O'Keefe.

Two of the five concerts also celebrate the anniversaries of two of the most important composers in music history - Franz Peter Schubert and Johannes Brahms.

Next year will be the 200th anniversary of the birth of Schubert and, in November of this year, the symphony will pay tribute by playing his Unfinished Symphony.

Although the Austrian composer died at age 31, O'Keefe said that is not why this symphony is incomplete.

"He just wrote two movements and left it like that," she said with a laugh.

Symphonies usually have four movements. Also on this program is Mozart's Concerto for violin No. 5, featuring Canadian soloist Martin Martin Beaver... the Canadian violinist will play Mozart with the Sherbrooke Symphony.

Beaver in a melodic piece which ends with Turkish rhythms; and Italian composer Ottorino Respighi's The Birds.

"It has all kinds of birdlike sounds in it. It's very entertaining and charming," said O'Keefe.

"It's a beautiful program, less flashy than the other programs but very, very beautiful music, among the best."

The orchestra also marks the 100th anniversary of the death of Johannes Brahms in April with a performance of his German Requiem.

"It's called the German Requiem because it doesn't follow the Latin requiem order," explained O'Keefe.

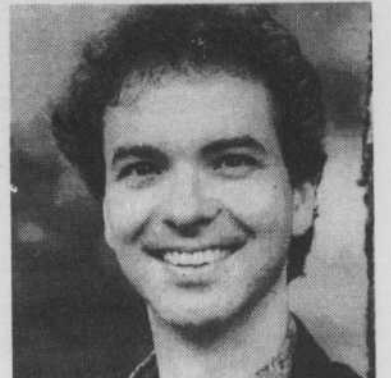

"Most requiems are done following the Catholic tradition, but he wrote it in German form, based on Protestant church services. It's all in German as well." It is a work of consolation, optimism and pays tribute to God. The lovely soprano solo will be sung by Sherbrooke's Michèle Gagné. A special concert in February will pay tribute to musicians that are closer to home.

La Chanson Quebecoise will feature the orchestra and pop singer Marie-Claire Seguin in an evening of music by Félix Leclerc, Richard Desjardins, Gilles Vigneault, La Bolduc and Seguin herself. Presiding over this marriage of classical and pop-folk music is guest conductor Marc Belanger, who also happens to be the symphony's concertmaster.

"He's also doing all the arrangements," said O'Keefe. "I think it's fantastic because he knows the orchestra very well, and the musicians are very happy about this because they love doing this kind of music for a change."

O'Keefe said a Soirée Romantique has been set for March. It will give people a chance to discover lesser-known music, such as Russian composer Aleksandr Konstantinovich Glazounov's Stéphane Lemelin... Quebec pianist part of the symphony's first concert of the season.

The Seasons and Armenian composer Aram Khatchaturian's Concerto for Violin. Although originally written for violin, the piece will be played on the flute by Sherbrooke musician Robert Langevin, currently a soloist with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

The Piece de Resistance, literally, of local composer Jacques Desjardins, a professor at the University of Sherbrooke, will also be performed.

"It's supposed to be quite funny, using all the orchestra and it's very amusing and entertaining, not at all scary," O'Keefe said the different themes chosen should make it more comfortable for those intimidated by classical music.

"It's accessible. Wear your jeans if you want," O'Keefe said is her message to the wary. The five concerts presented by the Sherbrooke Symphony Orchestra are available as a subscription for $100. And anyone who purchases a subscription will get a ticket to a concert by the Wind Ensemble for free.

O'Keefe said for those who've already subscribed, if they get a friend to do the same before Oct. 5, both are eligible for a draw for a weekend at Hovey Manor in North Hatley. All the second subscriber has to do is tell the box office clerk who referred them to the concert series.

And to top it off, the cost for all concerts for students is only $9.50, taxes included, about one-third off the regular ticket price.

"We're hoping to get more students," O'Keefe said.

"Eventually they will be our audience."

For more information about the concert series, to subscribe or to purchase tickets for any of the concerts call 820-1000 or go to the box office at the Centre Culturel at University of Sherbrooke.

Mary O'Keefe... the harpsichordist is also general manager of Les concerts symphoniques de Sherbrooke.

Parc Safari: Lions and tigers and bears, oh my!

You don't need to go to India for the exotic experience of riding an elephant.

The merry-go-round never loses its novelty.

Take a spin at the water park after a day of touring the site in a hot car.

By Linda Galeazzi

HEMMINGFORD

Question: How long does it take for a mother to recuperate from a trip to Parc Safari when the trip is made with two small children in a car with no air conditioning on an unseasonably warm early September day?

The answer should be obvious: Parc Safari officially closed Sept. 12 and only now am I able to report on my journey. I first made the trip in the early 70s as a six-year-old. Back then, you couldn't roll down your windows because all of the wild animals roamed free, including those considered dangerous.

We had no air conditioning (some things never change), it was scorching hot outside, even hotter inside and every time we tried to let the slightest bit of precious air into the car, a voice from above would order us to roll up our windows — now!

I was properly fascinated by the wild animals, but went into panic mode when hundreds of flying monkeys right out of The Wizard of Oz descended upon our car, shrieking and pulling at the windshield wipers. Okay, so maybe they weren't really flying monkeys and maybe there weren't exactly hundreds of them, but I was six years old, after all.

I'm happy to report that Parc Safari has improved considerably. Today, the more dangerous animals — lions, bears, the dreaded monkeys and so on — are in a separate paddock and can be viewed from a pedestrian walkway. Only the car-friendly animals roam free.

Because of these changes, visitors can not only roll down their windows, they can now hang right out of an open van waving carrot sticks and video cameras.

This pleased the kids, but I got impatient as we waited behind a stream of cars full of people who just couldn't get enough shots of little Jimmy feeding the bulls.

"How many bison do you have to see before you get blasé about it?" I wondered, as we inched forward in the car.

Luckily, there is plenty to do besides cruising through the animal reserve. The rapids at the water park were great fun. We went down twice and I would have gone a third time, except no one wanted to go with me. I would've felt a little silly paddling and shrieking excitedly without the company of a three-year-old.

All of the kids enjoyed the simulated monkey habitat, where they were able to climb, swing, jump, roll and crawl in safety, away from their parents' grasp. The amusement park was also a big hit. You'd be amazed at how many times a kid can ride the merry-go-round before it loses its novelty.

If you make the trip to Hemmingford next summer, you'll find it's a little costly to get in, but the majority of the attractions are free once you're inside. There is a huge picnic area so you can bring your own food.

The prices on fast food and souvenirs are reasonable (if anyone was there on Sept. 5 found a cute little Parc Safari baseball cap near the monkey area, it belongs to my son) and the staff is friendly, helpful and bilingual.

There is also a variety of interesting educational programs, displays and shows on animals and their habitats as well as endangered species. Elephant and pony rides are also available. There's no doubt about it: Parc Safari is the best spot north of Kansas to see lions and tigers and bears — oh my!

TALK OF THE TOWNSHIPS

Sherbrooke Wind Ensemble to play Lord of the Rings concert

Estrie Chamber Orchestra to begin eighth season Oct. 19

By Sunil Mahtani

SHERBROOKE - After seven seasons of playing at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Sherbrooke, the Estrie Chamber Orchestra is as closely associated with that place of worship as its pews and stained glass windows.

"The size is perfect. The acoustics are perfect," enthused Mary O'Keeffe, general manager of Les concerts symphoniques, which governs the orchestra along with the Sherbrooke Symphony and the Sherbrooke Wind Ensemble.

The eighth season of the chamber orchestra gets underway with the first of four concerts on Oct. 19 at the church on Frontenac Street.

Titled Les Violons d'Abord, it will feature music for strings only, with soloists François Goudreau on violin and O'Keeffe herself on harpsichord.

"François is extremely good at playing Bach, so we're doing a Concerto for Violin by Bach for him," said O'Keeffe. "We're looking forward to that."

The rest of the program is rather eclectic.

"We have two baroque composers, Haendel (Concerto grosso op. 6 no. 5) and Bach, and then we have contemporary American composers John Becker (Soundpiece) and then Samuel Barber (Adagio for Strings), and we finish off with a Canadian composer Jacques Hetu with Adagio & Rondo, which is supposed to be very light, pleasant music."

A seasonal concert at the end of November will spotlight the top four Christmas classical pieces, said O'Keeffe.

These are Arcangelo Corelli's Concerto Grosso op. 6, known as the Christmas Concerto since the Italian composer wrote it to celebrate Christmas Eve; Fantasy on Greensleeves by British composer Ralph Vaughan Williams; Noël pour les instruments by Charpentier; and excerpts from Haendel's Messiah.

Another thematic concert will take place the day after Valentine's Day. Amore! Amore! will feature pieces relating to the kinder, gentler four-letter word.

"We have Aaron Copland's Appalachian Spring, which has to do with love. It's a couple who meet and get married in the Appalachians," said O'Keeffe. "We're doing something from Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, which has to do with love, Rodrigo's The Four Mandrivals of Love, and we finish off with the Czech composer Dvorak's Serenade For Strings."

O'Keeffe admits the latter has nothing to do with Valentine's Day.

"It's absolute music. It's not associated with love or anything." "But it's very, very beautiful and people will love it," she said with a laugh.

Singing the Four Mandrivals of Love by Spanish composer Joaquin Rodrigo will be internationally known soprano Lyne Comtois.

For the chamber orchestra's last concert of the season, Our Artists In Concert, local musicians will be the featured soloists.

O'Keeffe said the April concert will be an unusual one.

"The first half is baroque and classical, and the second half is kind of jazzy," she said. Opening the concert will be Bach's Brandenburg Concerto no. 4 for flute and orchestra, featuring flautists Marie Bergeron and Annick Lessard, both members of the orchestra.

For Mozart's Symphonie Concertante for violin and viola, husband and wife Céline Arcand on violin and Jean René on viola will share the spotlight.

The second half will comprise two French composers - Darius Milhaud's La création du monde and Jacques François Antoine Ibert's Divertissement.

"These are kind of jazzy, light, interestingly orchestrated pieces for a small orchestra," said O'Keeffe. "So we finish off on a light

All four concerts will be conducted by Gilles Auger.

They are available in a subscription series for $80, which includes a free ticket to any concert by the Sherbrooke Wind Ensemble.

Three concerts will be presented by the Wind Ensemble at Centennial Theatre in Lennoxville this season, beginning with a Christmas concert and ending with an ode to the ocean.

The middle show, however, will be the centrepiece of the season: Symphony No. 1 by Johann De Meij is based on The Lord of the Rings, the trilogy by J.R.R. Tolkien charting the conflict between good and evil in a place called the Middle Earth.

The trio of Wind Ensemble shows, conducted by René Joly, are not available as a subscription, and must be purchased individually.

For more information, or to purchase tickets, call 820-1000 or visit the box office at the Centre Culturel.

MUSIC

Surprises in store for 30th anniversary of awards

The historic 30th presentation of the Country Music Association Awards will be a big night for both performers and fans.

It will be broadcast on CBS-TV at 8 p.m. on October 2 from The Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Tennessee.

Vince Gill will host the ceremony which will include performances by a star-studded lineup.

Gill himself has a record-setting seven nominations out of the 12 major awards.

One surprise of the evening is that the newest face in Music City, 14-year-old LeAnn Rimes, will be making her CMA Awards debut performing her huge hit "Blue."

Rimes is the youngest artist ever nominated for a CMA award and she's up both for Single of the Year and the Horizon Award.

This year, it is very hard to pinpoint who the winners will be, since in every category the nominees are the top of the crop. Just for the fun of it, here are my predictions:

I must admit it is very hard to dissociate personal preferences from the facts, so I'll start with Entertainer of the Year. Nominated are Brooks & Dunn, Garth Brooks, Vince Gill, Alan Jackson and George Strait.

My heart is 100 per cent for George Strait, but Brooks & Dunn will most likely take this one home and become

Country Connection

By Jessie Aulis

the first duo to ever win this award.

Male Vocalist of the Year nominees are Vince Gill, Alan Jackson, Collin Raye, George Strait and Bryan White.

I don't think that either Raye or White are due for this award yet. Strait should get it but Jackson will most likely get it for keeping country true to its roots while sounding very contemporary.

Female Vocalist of the Year nominees are Faith Hill, Patty Loveless, Martina McBride, Pam Tillis and Shania Twain.

I'd say it's a little early for Hill and Loveless' impact wasn't big enough this year. My vote goes to McBride, who had a terrific past year, joining the Grand Ole Opry, starring in her own TNN special and success on the road.

Nominees for the Horizon Award are Terri Clark, Wade Hayes, LeAnn Rimes, Shania Twain and Bryan White. Rimes only has one hit under her belt, while Twain is way too successful for this category. Clark, on the other hand, made a huge leap with her career this year so she will probably be the lucky winner. Clark is also Canadian.

Vocal Group of the Year nominees are Alabama, BlackHawk, Diamond Rio, The Mavericks and Sawyer Brown.

Fairly simple. They all deserve it, but everyone is a little sick of seeing Alabama win, so I will pick The Mavericks because of their originality and the freshness they bring to country music.

Vocal Duo of the Year nominees are Baker & Myers, Bellamy Brothers, Brooks & Dunn, Sweethearts of the Rodeo and John & Audrey Wiggins.

Brooks & Dunn are the sure winners of this one because as duos go, no other comes close.

Album of the Year nominees are Blue Clear Sky, George Strait (MCA), Borderline, Brooks & Dunn (Arista Nashville), High Lonesome Sound, Vince Gill (MCA), The Trouble With The Truth, Patty Loveless (Epic), Wild Angels, Martina McBride (RCA).

Any of these five albums would deserve to win. They're all great. I find this is one of the most competitive categories, but I'll cast my vote for Blue Clear Sky by George Strait, one of the most successful releases in the field.

Single of the Year nominees are "Blue", LeAnn Rimes, "Check Yes or No", George Strait, "Go Rest High On That Mountain", Vince Gill, "My Maria", Brooks & Dunn and "Time Marches On", Tracy Lawrence.

"Blue" is surely the biggest country single since "Achy Breaky Heart", very popular with both fans and radio programmers. So "Blue" it is.

Vocal Event of the Year nominees are Dolly Parton and Vince Gill, "I Will Always Love You", George Jones and Tammy Wynette,

"One", Jeff Foxworthy and Alan Jackson, "Redneck Games", Marty Stuart and Travis Tritt, "Honky Tonkin's What I Do Best", and Reba McEntire with guests Trisha Yearwood, Martina McBride, Linda Davis, "On My Own".

Here it's a toss-up between the reunion of four golden voices or the humor of Foxworthy backed-up by Jackson's huge talent.

Since we all need and want to laugh so much, I say the victory will go to Foxworthy and Jackson.

Song of the Year nominees are "Any Man of Mine", Shania Twain, "Check Yes or No", George Strait, "Go Rest High On That Mountain", Vince Gill, "Keeper of the Stars" Bryan White and "Time Marches On" Tracy Lawrence.

Vince Gill should get this one. The song is very emotional, paying a tribute to his late brother and to the late, great Keith Whitley.

Music Video of the Year nominees are "Check Yes or No", George Strait, "Go Rest High On That Mountain", Vince Gill, "My Maria", Brooks & Dunn, "My Wife Thinks You're Dead", Junior Brown and "Redneck Games", Jeff Foxworthy and Alan Jackson.

No questions asked. George Strait should get it. Strait's videos are fresh and rare, making this very valuable.

Out of 12 guesses, I sure hope I have at least 10 good answers. Anyway, I had fun doing it and you should check your own predictions and see if we agree.

Highlights of this ceremony should be a special presentation inducting three new members to the Country Music Hall of Fame: Patsy Montana, Buck Owens and Ray Price.

As a special treat, Buck Owens and Dwight Yoakam will perform together and so will Ray Price and Kris Kristofferson. I'm positive producers have kept many more surprises in store for us on this edge-of-your-seat night.

Have a nice week and stay country.

Pam Tillis... will she lose out to Martina McBride?

Alan Jackson... will his "Redneck Games" duo with Jeff Foxworthy win?
